Winter Sports Teams Heat Up The Action

Quincy Youngster Brightened People's Days Throughout 2013

By EMILY ARMSTRONG

Every day for the past year nine-year-old Quincy resident Shane McLaughlin has been conducting acts of random kindness (ARK) throughout the city giving back and brightening people's days during 2013.

It all began when the devastation of Hurricane Sandy hit and McLaughlin was inspired to collect food to send to those affected in New York and New Jersey.

"Approximately one year ago Shane saw the devastation of Hurricane Sandy on the 6 o'clock news. I was cooking dinner while the TV was on in the family room, the news was showing images of pure devastation, homes ripped apart, flood waters waist high and people pleading for any sort of help," said mom Charlotte McLaughlin. "This was when Shane came into the kitchen and started taking food from the cabinets. I asked, 'honey, what are you doing? I'm trying to make dinner,' and he replied, 'there are people that need our help.'

"From that moment on he orchestrated an "Operation Give Back" Food Drive, which he held on Veterans Day 2012. Shane collected for over eight hours and through the power of social media, community members dropped off donations of all sorts for Shane to send along."

But it wasn't until the Sandy Hook tragedy that McLaughlin decided he wanted to do more.

"When Sandy Hook happened he really started thinking about doing more," said Charlotte.

"We talk about our resolutions around the holidays and we decided we wanted to make the world a better place. He said there should be more kindness. So we talked about it and he asked if we could do an act of kindness as his New Years resolution. I told him it would cost some money and his response was, 'kindness doesn't cost anything, kindness is free,' and that's when I was like 'alright we've got to do this'."

This past July McLaughlin became firefighter for a day at the Wollaston Fire Station after he used his allowance money to buy two roses, one for fallen Quincy firefighter John Austin and one for his son John William Austin, placing them, in memory of Austin, at the corner of Piermont Street and Elmwood Avenue in front of the Quincy Firefighters Local 792 sign.

"An act of kindness can be as simple as making a new friend and smiling at someone, to raising funds for larger causes such as Sandy Hook or Relay for Life," said McLaughlin. "My favorite ones have been the firefighter one and the Hurricane Sandy food collection that we did. I decided to do the firefighter thing after driving by the funeral home and seeing firefighters and cops and my mom told me a firefighter had died. So we went to the store, bought some flowers and put them on the island near our house."

McLaughlin tries to get other kids his age involved in the ARK's such as having his class decorate paper bags to promote recycling, or getting his Cub Scout troop involved in donating stuffed animals to local police and fire stations.

"When he does them he tries to get other people involved. He tries to get his school involved and the cub scouts," said Charlotte.

A lot of McLaughlin's larger ARK's are inspired by events happening in the news, such as Sandy Hook, which he lit 26 candles in remembrance of all the victims, the Puppy Doe case where he raised money and donated to the local animal shelter, or the Boston Marathon bombings where he raised money for the One Fund and also went to Boston and handed out bracelets and American Flags to passers by at Faneuil Hall.

Each day McLaughlin updates his ARK Facebook page with the random act he has completed that day. One ARK that happened recently while McLaughlin and his mom were driving in Quincy they saw a man under a bridge laying in the cold, so McLaughlin asked his mom to stop, got out of the car, grabbed a blanket from the trunk and gave it to the man.

"We don't really plan all of them," said Charlotte. "Sometimes if they are really big events we plan them out but otherwise we just do them as they come."

Most recently McLaughlin has raised money for Relay for Life, and helped to build the Relay for Life float in Quincy's annual Christmas Parade.

McLaughlin said he isn't sure what he will do next, but that he hopes to continue to do random acts of kindness even after the New Year.

"I have no big plans for what's next. Whatever comes up in the news or whatever comes up in school or I pass in the street," said McLaughlin. "I am going to keep doing this. I hope to continue to complete one each day next year."

EVERY DAY for the past year nine-year old Quincy resident Shane has been conducting random acts of kindness throughout the city as a part of his 2013 New Year's resolution.

Ceremony At Central School; Councillors, Three School Committee Members Will Also Be Sworn In

Koch Inauguration Monday

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch will be sworn in for a fourth term Monday at the new Central Middle School's auditorium.

The inaugural ceremony will begin at 6:30 p.m. on Monday, Jan. 6 at the middle school located at 875 Hancock St. Central is the fourth different venue for Koch's inaugural. His previous inaugurals were at the Boston Marriott Hotel in Crown Colony, North Quincy High School, and most recently the new Quincy High School in 2012. The mayor decided to hold his fourth inaugural at the new, $50 million middle school to give the public a chance to see the facility up close.

"Obviously we have a beautiful new building with a beautiful new auditorium," said mayoral spokesman Chris Walker. "It's appropriate to have an event like this there."

"We're doing something a little bit different this year," Walker added. "That's all I can say."

Koch, in an interview with The Sun shortly after November's election in which he ran unopposed, identified flood control and sea wall projects, as well as planning a new Sterling Middle School and window replacement projects in other school buildings as priorities for his fourth term. The mayor also said the city would continue with improvements to infrastructure, public safety, parks, and open space.

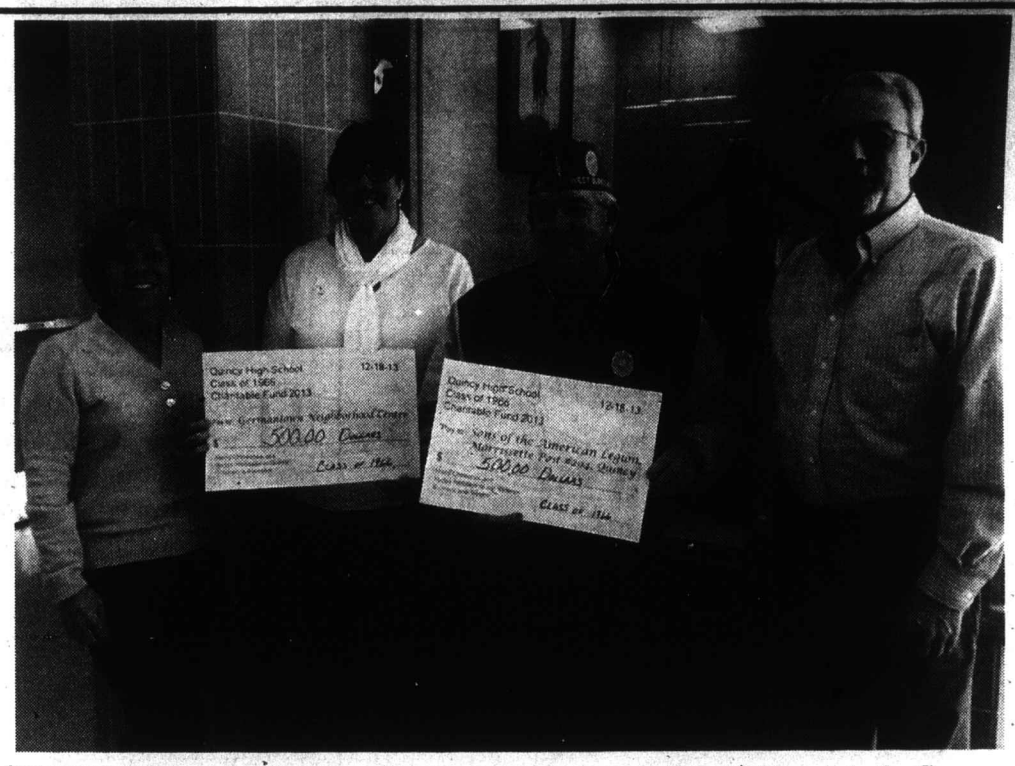

"We're making good progress on our infrastructure but there is still much that remains to be done and we'll continue to chip away at it. We've made improvements to our public safety areas with additional manpower in the Police Department in the last couple of budgets. We'll look to continue to beef that up. I think we've made great strides in our parks and open spaces," Koch said during that interview.

"We're making good progress. We're going to complete those things that we've talked about and those things that are on the agenda and continue to move the downtown forward, as complicated as it is."

In addition to the mayor, all nine incumbent members of the City Council will be sworn in for new terms. Three members of the School Committee – incumbents Barbara Isola and Anne Mahoney and newcomer Noel DiBona, who topped the field in November's municipal election – will be sworn in as well.

Members of the City Council will elect a new president at Monday's ceremony, and the School Committee members will elect a new vice chair. Councillor Joseph Finn, who was re-elected to his seventh term as an at-large councillor in November, and School Committeewoman Kathryn Hubley, who is midway through her first four-year term on the committee, will likely be elected to those positions respectively. (Koch, as mayor, serves as the chairman of the School Committee.)

City Clerk Joseph Shea will swear in Koch and members of the City Council and School Committee. A reception in the school will follow the ceremony.

"Those who were able to contribute to this new (reunion) fund of ours realize how fortunate we were to grow up in the Quincy community, to be educated by the Quincy School System, and to be protected by our military both then and now," Walsh Matterazzo said in presenting the gifts. "We simply wish to say, 'thank you,' and to be of support to others who may be struggling at the moment – to add a bit of cheer to the lives and holidays of people who are part of a community we hold dear," she added.

'Mystery Of Captain Wollaston' Talk, Walk

The Park Department, Quincy Historical Society and DCR are co-sponsoring a free lecture and tour entitled "The Mystery of Captain Wollaston" this month.

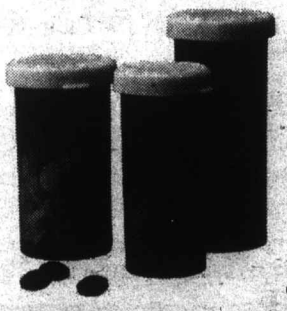

In the talk at the Historical Society Thursday, Jan. 9 at 7:30 p.m., Ed Fitzgerald will explore what is known about the Captain and his adventures in Quincy.

The talk will take place at the Historical Society, 8 Adams St.

The walk on Saturday, Jan. 11 will tour early American sites in Quincy, including Native Americans in Caddy Park, the monument to Capt. Wollaston, Maypole Park and the remains of colonist Edmund Quincy's tide mill. The walk will begin at 10 a.m. at Caddy Park across from Wollaston Beach (first parking lot on left after Furnace Brook Parkway).

For more information and inclement weather rescheduling, call 617-472-0799.

Injured in an accident?
Should you talk to a lawyer?
Absolutely yes!

After an accident, you may be in shock. You've been hurt. Chances are you've never had anything like this happen before. You aren't sure what to do next, or who you can trust. That's exactly why you should talk to us. At Bates & Riordan, we are experienced attorneys representing individuals and families on the South Shore. We specialize in putting the pieces together – protecting your interests and making sure you're treated fairly – after an accident. If you've been injured, call Deborah Bates Riordan or Theodore Riordan at 617-328-8080 to see how we can help you. (That conversation and your first meeting with us are absolutely free.)

Moments in time

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Jan. 17, 1865, Union Gen. William T. Sherman's army is delayed in Savannah, Ga., by 10 days of rain as it waits to begin marching into the Carolinas. Just as Sherman and his army had destroyed nearly everything in its path in Georgia, Sherman planned to subject the Carolinas to the same brutal treatment.

• On Jan. 16, 1919, the 18th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, prohibiting the "manufacture, sale, or transportation of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes," is ratified and becomes law. In 1933, the 21st Amendment to the Constitution repealed prohibition.

• On Jan. 15, 1936, Edsel Ford, son of auto pioneer Henry Ford, forms a philanthropic organization called the Ford Foundation with a donation of $25,000. The foundation was established in part as a legal way for the Ford family to avoid inheritance taxes.

• On Jan. 14, 1954, Hollywood star Marilyn Monroe marries New York Yankees slugger Joe DiMaggio. The marriage barely got past the honeymoon, and they were divorced 274 days later. In her filing, Monroe accused her husband of "mental cruelty."

• On Jan. 13, 1962, comedian Ernie Kovacs, who hosted his own television shows during the 1950s, dies after crashing his Chevrolet Corvair into a telephone pole in Los Angeles while driving in a rainstorm. The Corvair was later made infamous by Ralph Nader's groundbreaking 1965 book, "Unsafe at Any Speed."

• On Jan. 18, 1985, for the first time since joining the World Court in 1946, the United States walks out of a case, this one concerning U.S. paramilitary activities against the Nicaraguan government. The Court decided against the United States; it charged that the U.S. violated international law with its actions against the Sandinistas.

• On Jan. 19, 1977, President Gerald Ford pardons "Tokyo Rose," a Japanese-American woman named Iva Toguri. Toguri and other women had broadcast sentimental American music and phony announcements in a vain attempt to destroy the morale of Allied soldiers during World War II.

Should Be An Interesting Year

Happy New Year, readers.

Obviously it's much too early to tell what 2014 will be like locally.

But you can bet it will be at the very least interesting.

One of the big topics that will continue to generate headlines will be the redevelopment of Quincy Center, specifically Merchants Row near 1400 Hancock St. The $120 million project is the first phase of new construction of the $1.6 billion redevelopment.

Ground was broken last June for Merchants Row but by year's end the project had been suspended due to surging construction costs, according to the developer Street-Works.

Mayor Thomas Koch told 200 business leaders in December that he is confident the project will be built but it appears now that changes are needed to the Land Disposition Agreement – the blueprint for the downtown project that binds the city and the developer – or the project will not move forward.

Those changes would have to be approved by the City Council. It's still too early to say exactly what changes will be spelled out.

Will the changes sail through the council or will the project hit turbulence?

If it's the latter, political speculation will start to swirl about potential mayoral challengers in 2015. After all, there's a pretty big carrot dangling at the ballot box in two years: the winner of the mayor's race will receive the first four-year mayoral term in the city's history. There could also be a much bigger payday awaiting that winner: the mayor's salary may be as high as $160,000 as proposed by a mayoral salary commission pending city council approval.

This year will be active politically in Quincy because it's a state election year. But don't expect any of the city's legislative delegation to give up their seats. Sen. John Keenan, and Reps. Ron Mariano, Bruce Ayers and Tackey Chan should all seek re-election this fall. But we do wonder if they will face any Republican opponents.

The year 2014 will have plenty of action politically because of the governor's race. Quincy has been and will continue to be a popular campaign trail destination for those candidates seeking to succeed Gov. Deval Patrick.

One Democratic contender – state Treasurer Steve Grossman – has already made a few visits to Quincy including an appearance at the mayor's City Hall Christmas Party last month.

Another Democrat seeking the gubernatorial nomination is state Atty. General Martha Coakley. It will be interesting to see how much time Coakley devotes to campaigning here in the aftermath of the public corruption case against former state treasurer and city councillor Tim Cahill. The jury failed to reach a verdict on two counts of conspiracy against Cahill – a former Democrat who ran for governor as an independent in 2010. Cahill remains a very popular citizen in Quincy and his supporters haven't forgotten the trial he and two of his aides had to go through.

On the Republican side, Charlie Baker has already made some rounds in Quincy. And you can expect he'll be back here again. The chairman of the state Republican Committee is Kirsten Hughes, who also serves as the city councillor for Ward 5. A victory by Baker in the fall could result in a job for Hughes in a Baker Administration and that would begin speculation that the Ward 5 seat could open in 2015.

Other stories that will continue to evolve include the building of a new Central Middle School and the proposed $12 million in upgrades to the North Quincy High School Campus.

Mayor Koch will also be unveiling his agenda and goals for his fourth term in office at his inauguration next Monday night at Central Middle School. So we'll have to wait and see if the mayor has any new major initiatives in 2014 and 2015.

Before we officially welcome 2014, I'd like to recall two news stories from 2013 that we apparently didn't give enough coverage in our Year in Review issue last week.

One item was brought to our attention by a subscriber in an email. The other a phone call to our office.

The emailer noted that the athletic feats of North Quincy track stars Emily and Julia Bryson along with Mike Mullaney deserved more recognition in our standout sport athletes write-up. The trio went all the way to All-State and Emily was a Globe, Herald and Ledger All-Scholastic – the only Quincy athlete to do so. The track team also won the Fisher Division of the Patriot League, something no other team did this fall.

"I watched the athletes you did mention and true, they are game changers and totally fun to watch," the emailer said. "Many do track in other seasons so don't forget the track kids. They don't carry a ball or hit people, but they train every day and are stellar in the classroom as well."

We certainly agree with that assessment. Quincy is certainly blessed with many standout athletes and that makes covering both high schools so enjoyable – and at times daunting – for our writers and photographers.

It also makes it challenging to compile a list of standout athletes at the end of the year. Certainly we didn't intend to slight any athletic accomplishment this year.

The phone call was from a reader who advocated that the North Quincy High School Quiz Show Team deserved more recognition than they got in the Year in Review coverage. The team's accomplishments – winning the state and New England regional competition – was mentioned but we did not run a photo of the team as the caller pointed out to us.

The six students, Yi Fung, Celeste Dang, Cindy Nelson, Tim Bill, Nathan Donohue, and Kasey Shen, were honored by Mayor Thomas Koch for their accomplishments.

Certainly this group of incredible kids is worthy of another look. A photo of the team with the mayor appears below.

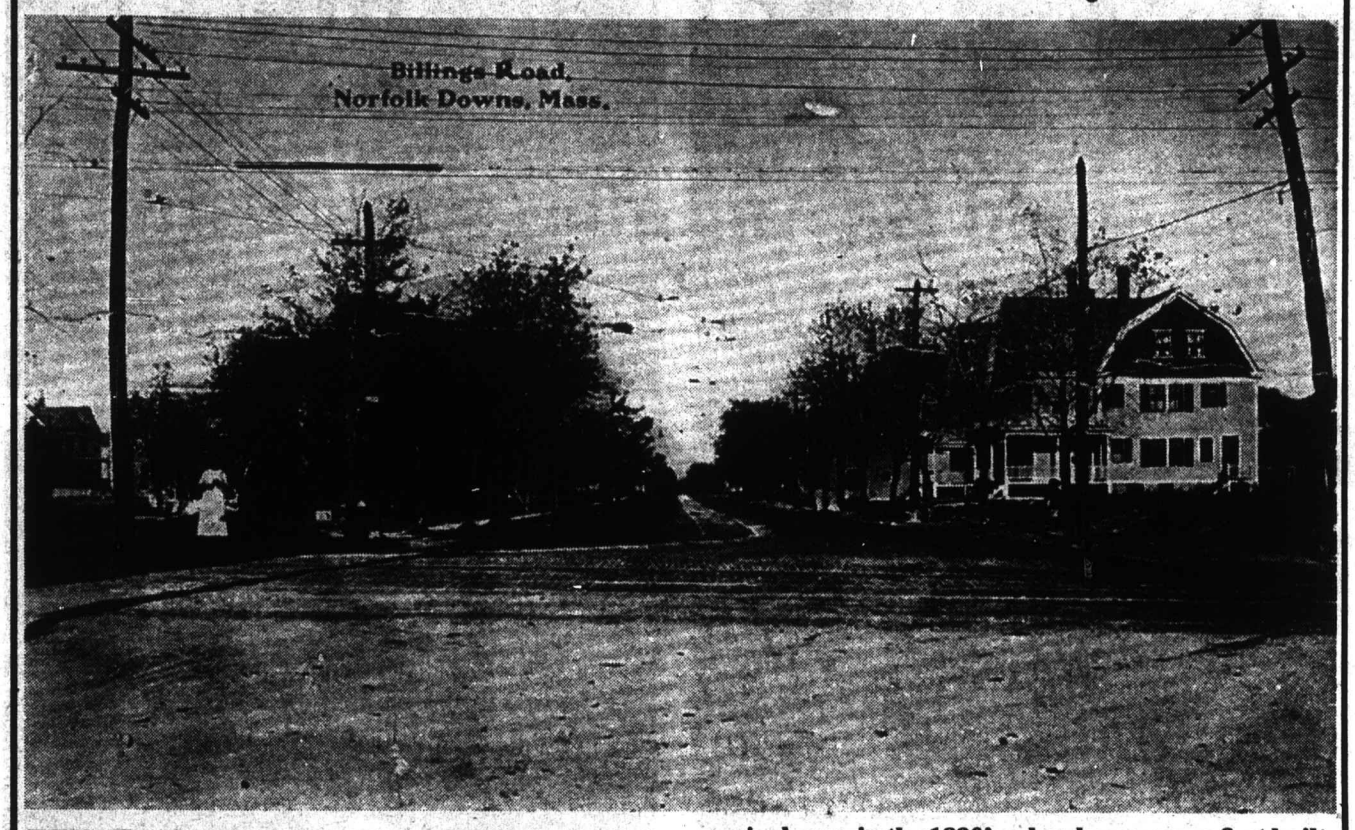

Best wishes to all for a Happy, Healthy, and Prosperous New Year.

We look forward to covering the news in 2014.

THIS IS A 1910 postcard view of Billings Road in Norfolk Downs looking east from the intersection with Hancock Street that crosses in the foreground. This scene precedes the building of the commercial blocks that now line both sides of the street. The single trolley track in the center of Billings Road continued on to West Elm Avenue and then on to Elm Avenue, rejoining the Hancock Street mainline at Wollaston. The trolley service began in the 1890's when houses were first built here. The service was discontinued in 1920 and replaced with busses four years later. ## Plan A Returns As Della Chiesa Takes Oath As Mayor

The Plan A form of government returned to Quincy after an eight-year absence as Amelio Della Chiesa was sworn into office.

Della Chiesa, who served as the ceremonial mayor under the Plan E-City Manager Charter for four years, delivered his inaugural address in the City Council Chamber.

The mayor called for, "a more equitable distribution of tax assessments throughout the city." He recommended that, "our Board of Assessors approach the New Year with a determined effort to bring about an equitable tax distribution of all properties in our city."

Mayor Della Chiesa's other recommendations included:

More off-street parking, retention of Old Colony passenger service and encouragement of further industrial development in areas zoned for industry.

McINTYRE ELECTED COUNCIL PRESIDENT

Councillor James R. McIntyre was unanimously elected president of the City Council at the organizational meeting of the new city council.

The election was made unanimous after Councillor Thomas S. Burgin, a former mayor, requested that votes cast for him by Councillors Edna B. Austin and David S. McIntosh be withdrawn.

McIntyre was nominated by Councillor Carl Anderson and the nomination was seconded by Councillor William C. Ellis.

The new council president was starting his second two-year term on the council. McIntyre is a graduate of Holy Cross College and a combat veteran of the Korean War.

A Season Of Appreciation

During this season of appreciation, we gather together to express our gratitude, share in our accomplishments, and make resolutions for a bright new year.

In this spirit, Quincy-based social service agencies who recently received $1.6M in donor-restricted funds from the Quincy Medical Center (QMC) Estate and Foundation came together on the morning of Dec. 19 at an Appreciation Breakfast to honor and thank the individuals who gave their time and energy to see the hospital's charitable arm through to its conclusion.

Members of the former QMC board of directors—Grace Murphy-McAuliffe, Phyllis Godwin, and Richard Barry—were joined by local businessman Sean Curry, co-founder of the Marie A. Curry Fund. Together, these four unpaid volunteers generously devoted many hours to determine the best use of the QMC Estate and Foundation funds.

We wish to acknowledge Grace, Phyllis, Richard, and Sean for their hard work and untiring commitment to ensuring that an important legacy continues. These dedicated people turned a thankless job into a thankful one.

The original donations to QMC came from the community for the community. These are the pennies and nickels raised by school children, the $5 gifts from seniors on fixed incomes, the dollars raised by families who held bake sales or friends and colleagues who participated in the Quincy Medical Center Cancer Walk, the Golf Classic, and other events. Over the years, the fund grew as concerned and responsible neighbors reached out to others less fortunate.

Its primary purpose: to provide health care services, education, outreach, and screening programs to those most in need and least advantaged.

The QMC Estate and Foundation funded mammograms for women who might not otherwise be able to afford them. It funded an expanding HIV/AIDS program, imaging studies, and programs that support patients during critical transitions of care. Most of all, it funded a commitment—that we are here to help each other live the healthiest lives possible.

We at Manet Community Health want to extend our gratitude to all the people of the South Shore who entrusted QMC with their generous donations.

We are joined in our appreciation by the other agencies who received funding: Rotary Club Quincy Scholarship Program, South Shore YMCA, Friends of the Kennedy Center, Quincy Community Action programs, DOVE, Inc., and Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. Together and individually, we have pledged to carry on this critical work.

Now is the perfect moment for you to join us. Because, as grateful as we are for this wonderful source of funding, and excited about the programs it will support, most of these $1.6 million are restricted funds.

We cannot lose sight of the ever present need for unrestricted operating income to fund our vital social services.

The need is still here. Our neighbors deserve a helping hand, a path to a better life. At this giving time of year, consider making your own personal expression of support. Donate to the year-end campaign of your favorite nonprofit, go to their events, volunteer your time. We must nurture healthy nonprofit organizations as well as healthy people—so that backbone, that safety net is always in place.

Thank you.

Joseph M. Reardon,

The purchase and presentation of an engagement ring ranks among the most romantic and hallowed traditions. It may come as a surprise to some, however, that the custom has been subject to some change recently that correlates to changes in women's social and economic status. According to one recent survey, increasing numbers of couples are choosing to select and purchase engagement rings together. Those in favor of this new arrangement of sharing the decision and splitting the cost say that it reflects modern times, in which women are increasingly seen as equals. Others point out that today's couples often live together and share finances already, and that sharing the responsibility helps solidify their relationship.

Although the tradition of giving a ring to the woman who has promised to become your bride goes back centuries, diamond engagement rings are a relatively recent innovation. Diamond engagement rings first became popular in the 1930s. By 1965, 80 percent of all new brides in the United States sported one. As a couple, select the perfect diamond engagement ring, earrings, or pendants at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center or contact us at 617-773-3636.

Sheriff Bellotti Presented Rotary Paul Harris Award

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti was recently honored by the Rotary Club of Quincy, which presented him with its Paul Harris Award.

MICHAEL BELLOTTI

Quincy Rotary President Dolly DiPesa said, "The motto of Rotary is 'service above self," and that's the reason we gave the award to Sheriff Bellotti. That's the way he thinks, whether it's service to government or to non-profits."

Bellotti said he felt humbled to receive the Paul Harris Award, named for one of the men who founded Rotary in 1905.

"Rotary International and all of its local chapters do so much good for the communities they service. They are a prime example of a grass-roots organization that gets blue-chip results," Bellotti said.

Bellotti is in his third term as Sheriff of Norfolk County. Prior to his becoming Sheriff, he served three terms in the Massachusetts House of Representatives.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Val's Gnocchi & Spinach

When my son visits the wine country, his friend Val cooks some favorite entrees.

He recently sent me a couple of great recipes. Today's recipe is for gnocchi.

Although I have printed my recipe for gnocchi's, Val's are made with spinach.

He writes: "Through the years the issue with making gnocchi is finding the proper balance between the potato moisture and the flour which is added to make the dough workable, but still tender."

He said he has tried boiling, and baking the potatoes in an attempt to remove moisture and thus requiring less flour.

So instead, he has used potato buds and added water to control the dough mixture.

GNOCCHI WITH SPINACH

14 ounces potato buds (Betty Crocker is a good brand)
3 cups milk
½ cup salted butter
1 teaspoon salt

Mix all of the above to make a very dry mashed potato. Make a pocket and then add 1- cup of flour to start, 2 eggs and 4 cups cooked chopped spinach (optional if you want green gnocchi's.)

Mix until the dough can be handled easily. Val has a gnocchi board made to form the gnocchi's easily, but the usual way is to roll out a rope- like string and cut in to 1 inch or so pieces, using the thumb to form a small piece of pasta.

When cooking them, bring water to a boil, and cook until gnocchi's float on the top. Serve with tomato sauce or a favorite.

Breakfast Sausage - Potato & Egg

Recently I was asked to bring a breakfast entree to a brunch. I've brought a French toast casserole several times, but this time I found an easy and wonderful dish which everyone seemed to enjoy.

POTATO - SAUSAGE TREAT

3 potatoes
4 sausages (any favorite)
6-8 eggs (scrambled)
6 slices of bacon
½ cup shredded favorite cheese

Cook the potatoes by slicing them and sautéing them in a skillet. Set aside. Home fries or shredded potatoes can also be used.

Cook the bacon, drain and set aside.

Remove casing from the sausages and sauté them until done. Set aside.

Scramble the eggs and add salt and pepper to taste. Set aside.

Butter a casserole dish. Place the potatoes on the bottom, the sausages next, and then the scrambled eggs. On top place bacon pieces and the shredded cheese. Heat uncovered in a warming oven until ready to serve.

Michael Coffee Attends National Social Justice Conference

Michael Coffey of Quincy, a senior at Boston College High School, together with eight other BC High students and accompanied by Margaret Scanlon of the BC High Religious Education department and Father Ron Perry, SJ., Rector of BC High, joined more than 1,000 other attendees at the 16th annual Ignatian Family Teach-In for Justice held recently in Washington, D.C.

MICHAEL COFFEY

The Teach-In, a three day learning and prayer experience, is designed to connect students and faculty from Jesuit institutions around the U.S. to fight for and advocate on behalf of important social justice issues.

This year, the conference focused on immigration reform. They met with Senators Markey and Warren and Congressmen Kennedy and McGovern, protesting immigration policies that often split up families. The students also advocated for fair wages, and access to food for low-income families through the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP).

Started in 1997, the Teach-in takes place in mid-November to commemorate the Jesuit martyrs of El Salvador. The six Jesuit priests and two companions were murdered on November 16, 1989, in El Salvador for their work advocating on behalf of the economically poor in that country.

Coffey and the group gathered this year in the spirit of these Jesuit martyrs using their lives and ministry as inspiration for discovering the injustices of today and how to engage in them.

The Teach-In is a place where people are empowered, re-energized, inspired, challenged, and supported by a community that sees faith and justice integrally linked.

After Interviewing 19 Stakeholders:

Report Cites Housing Authority Improvements

By SCOTT JACKSON

A new report on the Quincy Housing Authority said the agency has been making improvements under new Executive Director Jim Lydon.

The report, authored by Organizational Leadership Edge (OLE), looked at 21 different aspects of the housing authority's leadership. The report was compiled based on the company's interviews with 19 stakeholders – including QHA board members, management staff, union representatives, and resident council representatives.

The report found that the housing authority has made improvements in 11 of the 21 aspects analyzed, and stayed the same in the other 10 aspects since Lydon became executive director of the housing authority in May. Overall, OLE found that the stakeholders interviewed have positive opinions of Lydon.

"All respondents believe that the overall leadership of the agency has improved under Jim Lydon," the report stated. "Most respondents believe that under his direction the leadership has improved very significantly and that the agency is headed in the right direction. His ability to inspire and influence all stakeholders has brought a sense of excitement and enthusiasm about what the agency can be."

Respondents also lauded Lydon for improving communications within the housing authority since he took over in the spring.

"Mr. Lydon has an open door policy for all employees," the report noted. "He genuinely wants to understand the needs and issues of the agency and to hear staff input on solutions. This also carries over to his interaction with residents and the community. Much of his time is devoted to interacting with stakeholders on development sites or in the community."

"He has also brought together on a regular basis the management team to better communicate on issues such as occupancy rates and vacant unit turnaround times," the report added. "Such issues can only be dealt with effectively by bringing such a cross-cutting team to look for holistic solutions to such problems."

In a phone interview with The Sun, Lydon said improving communications by beginning an open door policy had been a major focus of his since he started as executive director.

"One of the biggest things I started was I opened up access for residents and employees," Lydon said. "I have an open door policy."

Other areas of progress identified in the report included customer satisfaction, an area that was highly rated during OLE's previous report released prior to Lyndon's tenure; expanded opportunities for professional development; staff empowerment, the ability of staff to do their jobs without feeling micromanaged; marketing, which was listed as one of QHA's biggest weaknesses in the last OLE report; and teamwork and teambuilding. The report also noted that Lydon, a former planning director for the city, had scheduled a strategic planning process to identify strategic goals for the housing authority.

While the report praised the open door policy initiated by Lydon, it also noted that non-management employees found communications an area of need.

"At the non-management level, communications are perceived by most of the interviewees to be a major problem that needs to be addressed," the report stated. "Many non-management staff believe that there could be much better communications both from their management team as well as across programs and business units. Some of these employees believe that they could be more productive if these communication lines could be improved."

Lydon said he planned to focus on that criticism in the report, and would work to improve his communication with housing authority employees.

"I'm going to widen my staff meetings and pay more

Local Teens 'Blanket' Young Cancer Patients With Love

By EMILY ARMSTRONG

Thirteen-year-old Julia Geary of Quincy found that she had so much to be thankful for this holiday season that she decided to help others who may not be so lucky.

"The week before Thanksgiving, my daughter Julia was thinking of what she was thankful for this year and wanted to do something for someone in need," said mom Maureen Geary.

"She is always thankful for her health and for my health. She tries to do something every year but this one was pretty special as I am a survivor of breast cancer it hits close to home. When she told me she wanted to make blankets for kids with cancer I kind of got teary eyed. It's a very heartwarming thought and I'm so proud of her. I suggested that she go online and research children with cancer and she came across the Dana Farber Center for Children with Cancer, an outpatient clinic."

Geary, an 8th grader at the Woodward School for Girls, gathered her sister Maria and four friends and spent the weekend making knotted blankets.

"This is a good time of year to do it, to give back," said Geary. "My mom survived breast cancer so the idea to do it for cancer patients came from that. My friends and I were talking about what we should do and we thought blankets would be fun to make."

The girls made eight blankets, all of different patterns that Geary said were chosen because of their comforting prints. They then hand delivered the blankets the day after Thanksgiving to the hospital where they received a tour and were able to speak with the director of the Center for Children.

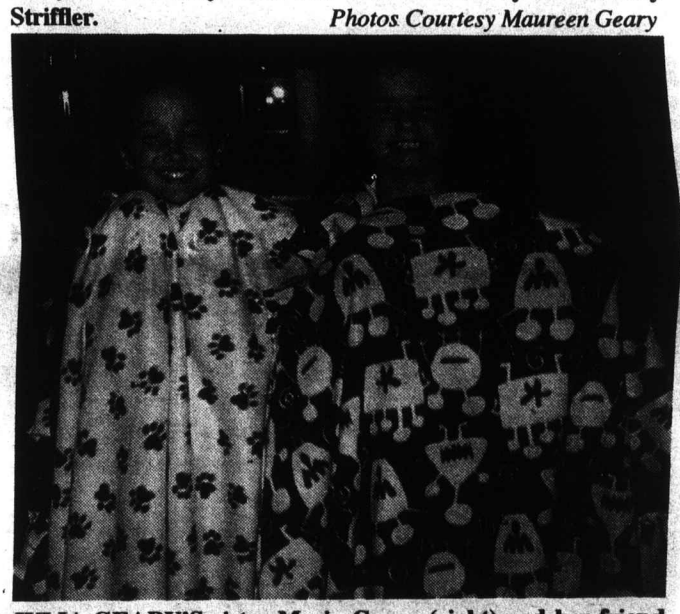

"They were thrilled to have the blankets. The girls were able to hand deliver the blankets and talk with the Director about the program," said Maureen. "While they were not able to meet any of the children, they were excited to know the blankets were going to keep provide a bit of love and security during a very difficult time in their lives."

Geary said that it felt good to be able to drop off the blankets and know they were going to be put to good use.

"It was cool to see how it was all run and see the things you don't see when you're in the hospital," said Geary. "It was a good feeling to be a part of it, especially the day after Thanksgiving."

attention to the middle-level people," he said.

Other areas that showed no change between the previous OLE report and the December report included performance evaluations for employees; staff relationships; and coordination of programs and services.

Overall, Lydon said he was satisfied with the report because it shows the respondents are responding positively to his efforts.

"I was pretty pleased," Lydon said. "It shows we have put a positive spin on things."

The respondents were also asked for their opinion on members of the Board of Commissioners, but a majority of those interviewed said they did not know the board members. In response, OLE recommended that the board rotate their meetings around so they can meet with more residents.

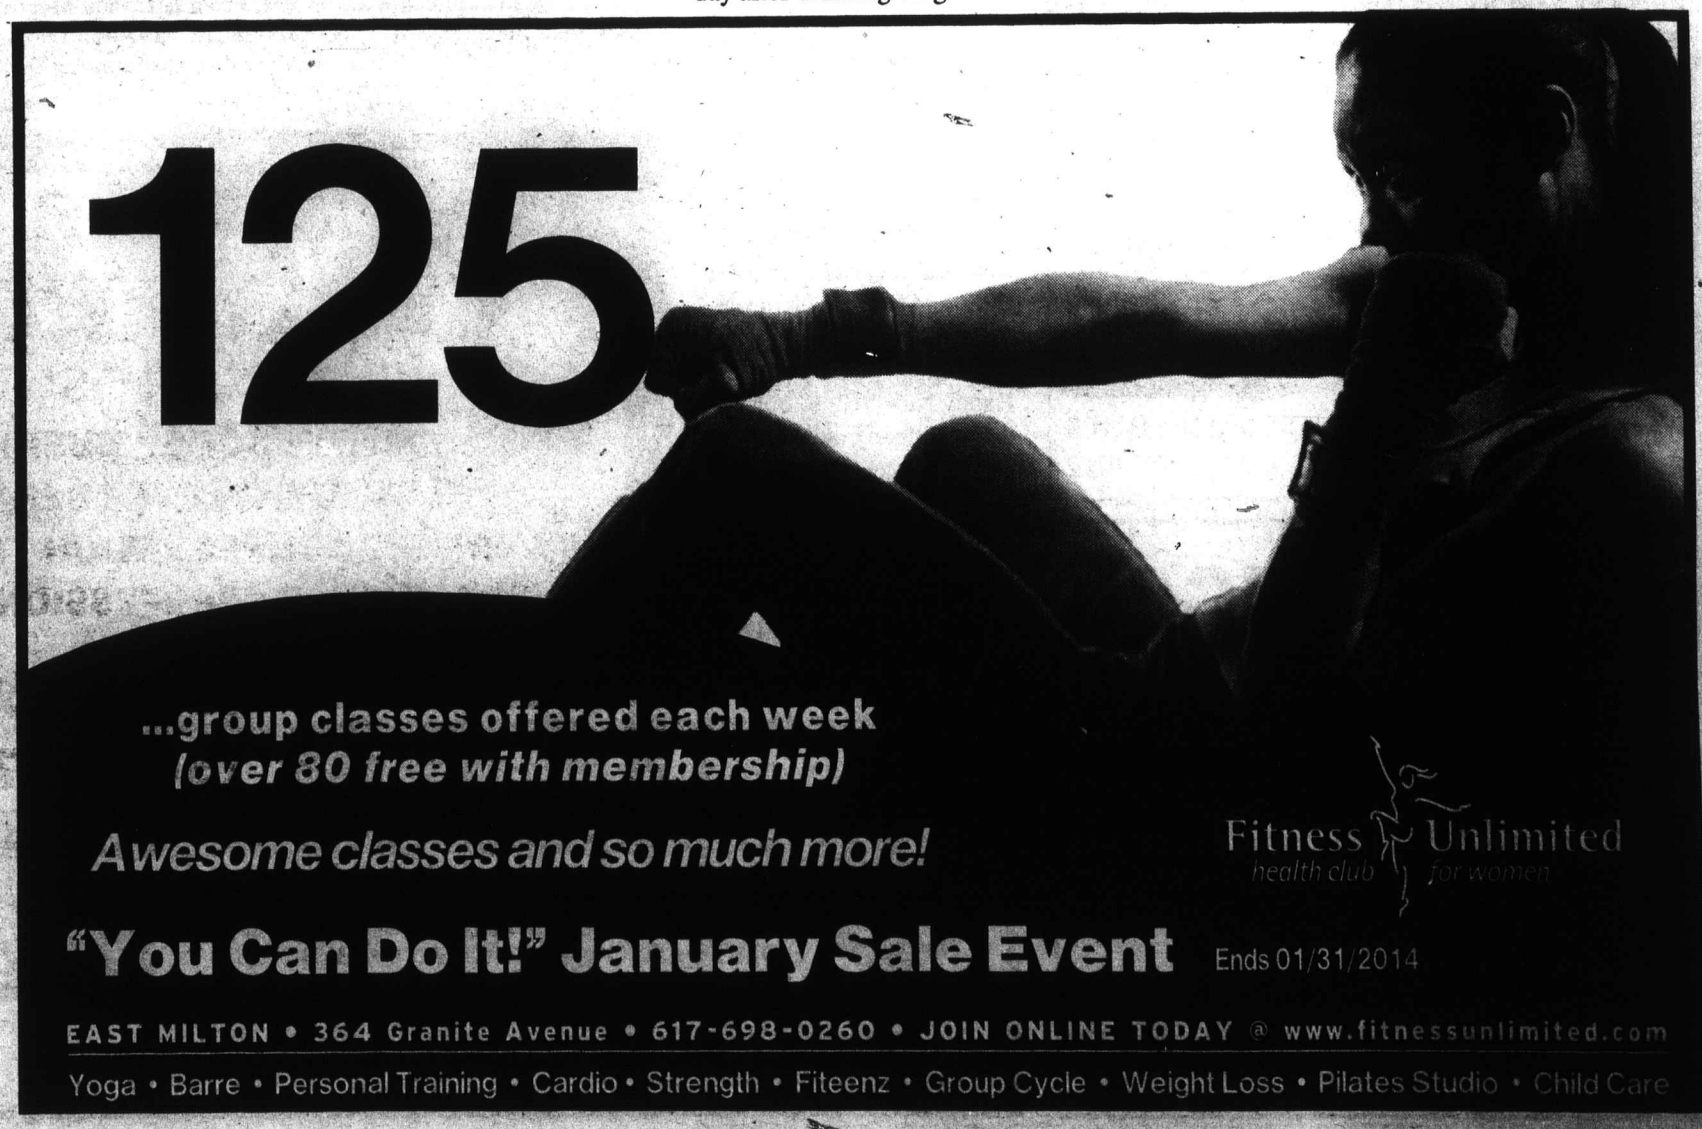

"Most interviewees did not know the board members and therefore were hesitant to comment on their leadership contributions. It is recommended that the board rotate some of its meetings to alternative development sites, thus allowing them to see the properties and become acquainted with residents," the report said.

"It is also recommended that the board and staff consider a volunteerism day during the year where all stakeholders can interact in providing a community service, such as cleaning up a nearby park."

Santa Visits Hancock Park's Christmas Celebration

Sleigh bells rang over Quincy as Santa arrived for a special Christmas visit to Hancock Park Rehabilitation & Nursing Center.

Santa's appearance added to the holiday cheer, as residents and family members recently gathered to enjoy an evening of holiday treats and Christmas carols at the center's annual Christmas Celebration.

Hancock Park provides a unique continuum of care that includes short-term rehabilitation and long-term care, specialized memory care, and a 42-apartment assisted living residence.

The staff at Hancock Park wishes everyone a happy and healthy holiday season.

Hallisey's Two Goals Lift Quincy Past North Quincy

By JOE REARDON

It was the quintessential Quincy vs. North Quincy showdown for two periods of the opening round of the Quincy Youth Christmas Tournament. It was the Presidents, though, who decided to tighten the screws over the final 15 minutes Thursday night at the Quincy Youth Arena.

Leading 1-0 entering the third period, Pat Donovan and Jake Hallisey garnered tallies to pace the Presidents to a 3-1 win and the chance to take on Milton in Friday night's final. Hallisey finished with a pair of goals and Ryan Higgins registered 23 saves as Quincy improved to 4-1 on the season.

Mike Finn redirected a James Doherty slap shot past Higgins with 1:16 left in the third for the Red Raiders' lone tally.

The showdown with Quincy was a frustrating one for the Red Raiders, who dropped to 0-2-1 with the loss, despite outplaying the Presidents over the first two periods. North Quincy head coach Matt Gibbons admitted he was frustrated with the loss, but extremley satisfied with the effort the Red Raiders gave. Gibbons is confident it's just a matter of time before North Quincy finds its scoring touch.

"Honestly, I thought we completely outplayed them the first two periods," said Gibbons. "We had some great scoring chances in front of the net. I think there were ten legit scoring chances. They capitalized on their chances and we didn't. That's kind of the story of the game. The kid (Ryan Higgins) played good in the net, but I think if we bore down a little more there could have been a different outcome."

Hallisey put Quincy on the board 1-0 with 6:27 left in the opening period, flipping a Pat Freeman pass over goaltender Nolan Green, who was playing in his first game since being sidelined with an injury.

Green robbed Hallisey with a right pad save with 5:03 left and stoned Aidain Pugsley's slap shot as he broke down the left wing. Green was equally sharp in the second period, making a save on a Matt Davis blast from the top of the left faceoff circle.

"I thought he played really well," Gibbons said of Green's play in his debut game. "I don't think he was tested as much either. We played ok in front of him. He didn't see a lot of shots. There was a breakaway and a tip-in right in front of him. The third goal was a really nice goal. You can't hold that against him. It's great to have him back here too."

Quincy switched gears in the third period and was able to keep the Red Raiders away from the net for most of the final 15 minutes. Pat Donovan rifled a wrist shot to the high far corner 1:24 into the third to make it 2-0. Quincy took a three-goal lead on Hallisey's tally with 6:32 left. The Red Raiders finally got on the board with Finn's redirection with 1:16 left to make it 3-1.

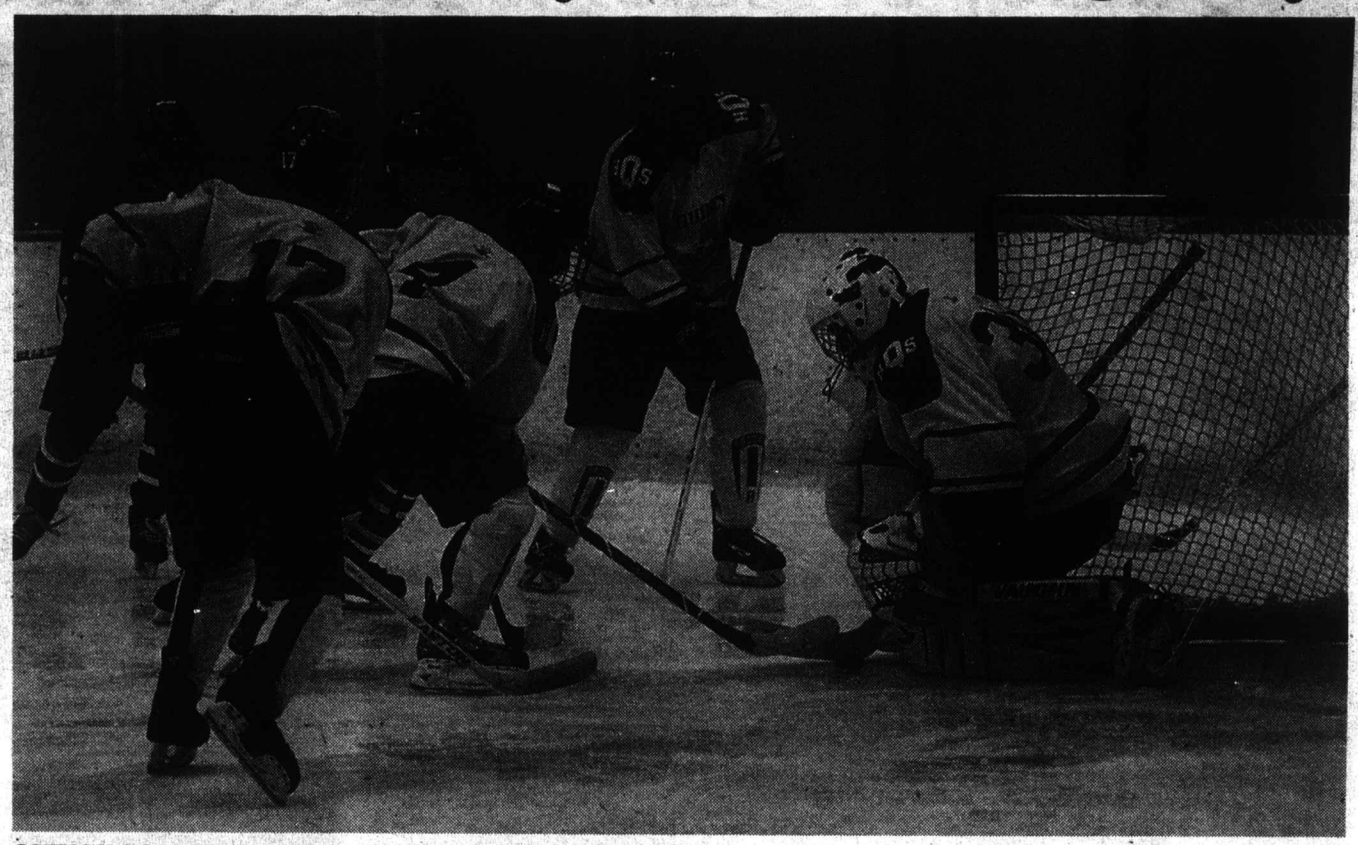

"I'm proud of the way they played," said Gibbons. "That's the best game they've played. We struggled the last couple of games. Even practices haven't been good. That's the best two periods we played. With eight minutes left we were kind of scrambling and they scored the second one and the third one was kind of a backbreaker."

"It's overblown because it's Quincy versus North. Substitute anyone else and it's a good game and we weren't able to capitalize. It's blown up tenfold because it's Quincy against North. We come right back at it tomorrow (Friday). I told them to play the same game. If they play the first period and second period we played tonight we should have a better outcome. We're a little snakebitten right now with the goal scoring."

Quincy head coach Ted Walsh said his team was doing a little too much "puck watching" in the first two periods instead of attacking the goal and backchecking.

"We were concerned the first two periods that we weren't executing the game plan the way we wanted to," said Walsh. "It seemed like the third period that they made the decision they were going to be proactive. I think that's what won the game, the third period. I thought it was completely even for two periods. Things went back and forth.

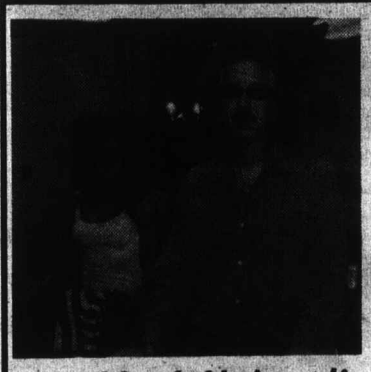

"We harp on that (backchecking). It's one of the things that we don't let anybody off the hook as far as that goes. We have to play all three zones. Just because the forwards are in the zone, their job's not over. They have to get back."

Quincy-North Go Down To The Wire, Raiders Prevail

BY BILL GRIFFIN

It is a story of two seniors who made their rivalry game more proud with the passion of their play.

North Quincy's Jane Minton played every possession as if it were her last, dragged her team out of a 10-point hole in the middle of the third period, and in the final 0:46 with the Red Raiders down by three, she hit a drive, made two throws, stole the ball and yanked down a rebound in the midst of a wild crowd of bouncing bodies.

Quincy's Kayla McArdle played relentless defense, protected her team's lead with a 12-point second half, and in the final 10 seconds with the Presidents down by one, she rebounded the ball, flew and twisted through a fullcourt slalom, barreled to the hoop and forced a blocking foul as the clock ticked to 0:00.

She was awarded two free throws, but never took them because she injured her elbow in the collision. The Red Raiders preserved a 40-39 victory last week in a dramatic ending before an overflow crowd at the North Quincy High gym.

"Jane played so hard that she wore herself out. She was so tired I had to take her out for a couple of minutes in the fourth quarter," said North coach Jessica Worden. "She gave everything she had. She made the plays that got us going and the plays at the end of the game."

"I felt bad for Kayla. These are moments she lives for," said Quincy coach Jeff Bretsch. "She's the best defensive player I've seen or coached. That's the way she played tonight. There is no other player I would rather have in a big situation."

When McArdle could not continue, her replacement missed both foul shots. It was an unfair situation. If a player is warmed up and into the flow of the game, it is most difficult to shoot free throws to tie or win a game when there is no time left, when there is no one else on the floor, when the gym is rocking with sound. It is nearly impossible to make them in that situation for anyone who comes off the bench cold in a moment of surprise.

"As I was watching, I felt for her. I tried to put myself in her place, and it's just an awful situation," said Minton. "It took courage just to take those shots."

Most of the night belonged to Quincy. Sophomore center Nicole Jorgensen ruled the middle with 15 points and 22 rebounds. Jorgensen guarded the basket, played excellent one-on-one defense, and showed a soft touch on open looks close to the hoop. Sophomore Gabby Jerhaian (11 points) tossed in three three-point jumpers (two more spun halfway down and came out) as Quincy opened up leads of 11-5 after one, 17-11 at the half, 25-15 midway through the third, and 26-25 entering the fourth.

"Nicole was awesome. She played a dominating game," said Bretsch. "Gabby has a lot of confidence to take shots as a sophomore in a game like this. I thought she had at least two more that were going in that might have put the game away for us."

Quincy's halfcourt man-to-man was a fine partner for all of this. McArdle was the leader of the pack, and with Jorgensen protecting the basket, the Presidents were quick and daring guarding the perimeter.

"Our halfcourt defense was very good. When they scored, they scored in transition. We didn't give up much in the halfcourt," said Bretsch.

Over the last two years, the games between these two have taken on an identity. They play tough, hard basketball. There are collisions. Bodies tumble to the floor. It is seldom pretty. Think of the Ravens and Steelers playing basketball, and the picture should be clear. It is not artistic basketball, but the intensity of the play shows how much the players care.

"We wanted it. Every shot we took, every play in the game, every practice getting ready, we wanted this game so badly," said Minton.

Minton (12 points) and senior guard Grace Geary brought back the Red Raiders. Trailing by 10 with 3:56 left in third, Minton drove to the bucket, forced two fouls and hit three free throws to narrow it to 25-18.

Geary (13 points) was great down the stretch. She simply took over the game just as she took over the Plymouth North game. She swished a three with the quickest of releases, drove and got to the line for two free throws and made a breathtaking drive and scoop to bring North within 26-25 after three.

"I've only played two games with her, but I loved every second of it," said Minton. "I can't wait to play out the rest of the season as we get to know each other better."

"Our defense was great as well," said Worden. "We only shot 28 percent and won. We had to look to our defense to get back in the game."

The fourth period was a battle. The largest lead was three points. Geary buried a three, made two steals, cashed an offensive rebound and forced a Quincy timeout with her defense. Camille Mullaney added a big hoop. McArdle hit a drive, a putback, and a layup off a brilliant feed from Jerahian for a 39-36 Quincy lead with 0:45 left.

North was not finished. Haley McKay (two big jumpers, stifling defense, seven points) sent Minton in on a drive with a great pass to bring North within 39-38.

Geary then made the play of the game. She stole the ball close to her own basket, turned and, in one motion, slung a fullcourt pass which caught Minton in full stride flying to the hoop. This was basketball instinct, instinct that cannot be taught, in action when the game was there to be decided. Minton was fouled and with the whole gym crashing around her in a wall of noise, she had the poise and touch to sink both for the 40-39 lead with 36 seconds left which held up until the dramatic conclusion.

"I try not think too much," said Minton. "The only thing I thought about was what they meant to my team. I trusted myself and just shot them."

And the ending? Typical Quincy vs. North Quincy?

"For sure," said Jane Minton with a wide, happy smile.

Chiropractor

TAKING PREVENTIVE STEPS

With four out of five people expected to suffer low back pain at some point in their lives, it largely becomes a matter of "when." With this in mind, we all should consider getting out of our chairs and exercising regularly as a means of preventing and treating acute low back pain when it occurs. While low back pain due to muscle strain or muscle spasm lends itself to treatment with exercise, pain that can be traced to problems in the spine should prompt caution. For instance, pain that radiates down the back and into the leg and is accompanied by a tingling "pins and needles" sensation is likely caused by "sciatica." The chiropractor can make a diagnosis.

You deserve to live without pain. You have the right to have a healthy, balanced body. You deserve the time, effort and dedication required to figuring out what your body needs. Our concern is always your health. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, our goal is to provide the best chiropractic care in a cost-effective manner. We stress preventive health care for all members of the family. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we supply comprehensive chiropractic services, as well as nutritional counseling to cover all aspects of your specific care. We're here to help! Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! # Butka (27 Points) Powers Red Raiders Past Presidents

By BILL GRIFFIN

Efthim Butka is a shooter. There are nights when a shooter feels it. He knows the ball is going in the basket. He simply knows it to be true. He has shot thousands of jump shots and on some nights, on some rare, special nights, everything is going in. He just knows it.

The ball rolls off his fingertips with just the right spin, the arc of the shot is perfect, the release clean and pure as it grabs for the rim. He doesn't worry about form or mechanics. He doesn't worry about anything. He just shoots the ball. He changes spots on the floor. He goes from the corner to the wing to the top of the key. He moves farther from the basket. He tests the limits of his comfort zone. It doesn't matter where he goes. He will shoot the ball and it will go in the basket. He feels it.

Butka found one of those nights on the best of all nights. He scored a career-high 27 points, including six three-pointers, as North Quincy raced out to a 19-point lead in the first half and then barely survived a furious Quincy rally for a 72-64 win in a hoop classic between the two rivals before an overflow crowd last week at the Red Raiders' gym.

It was North's 13th straight win over Quincy.

"It was one of those nights. Tonight, I just felt it. It felt like I was throwing the ball in the ocean," said Butka who was 6-8 from three-point range.

Nights like this come only to those who shoot many jump shots. This summer, Butka would wake up and go to the YMCA. He would shoot jump shots by himself for three hours. He would then play pickup games. When the games were over, he would shoot some more. He would shoot hundreds of jump shots every day.

"It felt like a thousand some days," smiled Butka. "I wanted to be able to shoot off the dribble. I didn't just want to be a catch-and-shoot player."

Butka, like everyone on the North team, was inspired by the Red Raiders' historical run to the sectional finals last year. He is 6'5" and last year he had a reliable elbow jumper and clever inside moves to the bucket. The three-point shot is a brave, new world for him. He is shooting them because he saw what outside shooting did for North last March.

"I saw what Dan (Gould) meant for us with his threes last year, so I wanted to add it to my game. It's something brand new," said Butka who also had eight rebounds and three assists.

"We were concerned about him inside. The threes were something we didn't expect," said Quincy coach Dave Parry.

It was a tale of two halves. In the first, North played pluperfect basketball. Point guard Kyle Richardson (12 points, six rebounds, five assists) directed North through Quincy's fullcourt trap with crispness and confidence. He got to the basket, buried a three from NBA Land, and found open cutters and jump shooters in transition and out of the set offense.

Butka fired away from the outside. Center Anthony Green (11 points, eight rebounds, four blocks) ruled the inside and added a pair of baseline jumpers. The underrated Matt Gerakis (15 points, five rebounds) finished at the basket, ran his lanes on the break, and nailed the perimeter jumper when Quincy did not get out on him. The halfcourt man-to-man defense, anchored by the presence of Green, limited the high-scoring Presidents to 25 in the half.

The lead was 41-22 at one point and 41-25 at intermission.

"It was the kind of half where you almost had to pinch yourself to make sure it was real," said Kevin Barrett. "It was the best half in a rivalry game we've played since I've been coaching. But I knew Quincy would come back. That's the kind of team they are. I knew a 16-point lead was not safe."

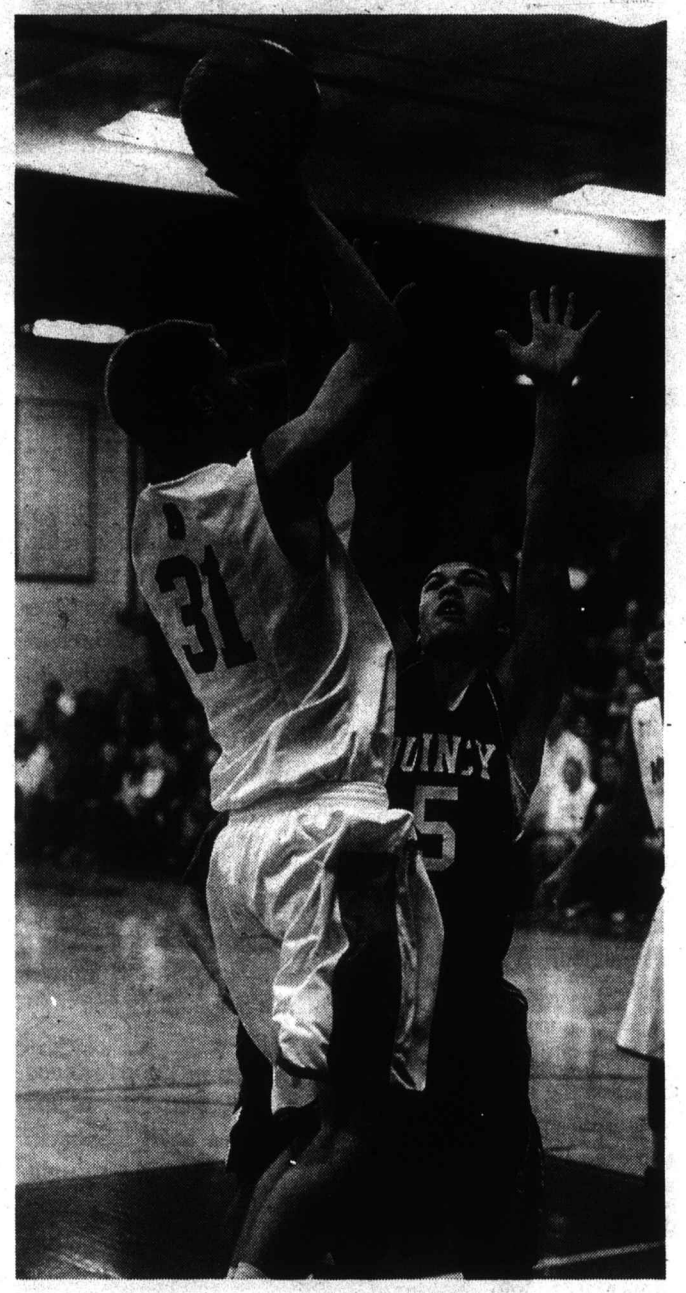

It was not nearly safe. The first thing Quincy had to do was get the ball out of Richardson's hands. Chris Callahan came off the bench and played excellent defense on North's point guard. This allowed the fullcourt trap to work better and open up the lanes for Quincy's gifted offense. The Presidents rattled off a stunning 22-7 run in the third and drew within 48-47 entering the fourth.

"We had to get the ball out of Kyle's hands. He is the key for them," said Parry.

Quincy spread around the offense with characteristic balance. Brendan Cunningham (10) started it with a three from the corner. Callahan finished two drives. Center J.T. Bain (18) swished a three from the top of the key. James Lam (13) had a steal, a bucket, and an assist. Drew Myers and Colin Evans got to the hoop with drives. Evans set up a hoop with a diving save. Cunningham found Myers moving at full speed for a fast-break basket for a beautiful assist.

It was no one man-show. Everyone was invited to the party. For eight minutes, it was all Quincy and it was

Red Raiders Improve To 5-0; Defeat Weymouth, E. Boston

BOYS BASKETBALL

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was somewhat like Mike Napoli dropping down a bunt instead of swinging for a home run. It was somewhat out of character.

North Quincy loves to play man-to-man defense. The Red Raiders play a zone about as often as the stars fall from the skies. However, with three starters in foul trouble and Weymouth getting to the basket consistently with drives, the Red Raiders not only played a zone, they played an effective, aggressive zone which broke open a close basketball game.

Jackie Chen and Kyle Richardson ruled the backcourt once again and North's zone held Weymouth to 20 second-half points en route to a 61-44 non-league win over the Wildcats Friday night at the North Quincy gym.

"We don't go zone very often," said coach Kevin Barrett. "We wanted to protect a couple of guys who were in foul trouble. We had worked on it in practice, so we decided to roll it out."

North upped its record to 5-0 with a 47-38 win on the road over East Boston Saturday afternoon behind an outstanding team defense and 19 points from senior center Anthony Green. The defensive effort was even more impressive because North was playing back-to-back games with less than 24 hours rest between the Weymouth and East Boston contests.

"I was a little worried about the fatigue," said Barrett. "It was a good win over a good inner-city team. We didn't necessarily play our best basketball, but I think we learned if we get the effort on the defensive end, we'll be all right."

Against Weymouth, North was up, 33-24 at the half, but early in the third period, Richardson, Green, and Efthim Butka each had three fouls. Weymouth's Ryan Jones was burning North with his drives to the hoop. Exit man-to-man. Enter an aggressive 1-3-1 zone which shut down the Wildcats and fueled an 8-2 run which opened up the game at the beginning of the third period.

The zone worked because North played it with energy. It was not a sit-back-and-give-up-open-shots zone. Richardson and Chen were aggressive on the point of the zone, forcing hurried passes and making steals. When Weymouth had open looks, they didn't last long. North closed quickly on the shooter. When Weymouth drove, North ushered all drivers to Mr. Green (10 points, six rebounds, four blocks) who shut down anything close to the basket.

The foul trouble went away. The penetration which caused the foul trouble went away. The zone worked! What's next? Napoli bunts for a hit?

"We saw their entire game with Quincy and all we saw was man-to-man, so I guess we were surprised," said Weymouth coach Jim Dolan.

"We executed it well. I liked our energy. We slowed down their penetration," said Barrett. "We got to the open shooter and funneled everything into Anthony."

There is also a knack, taught only by experience, of how to play with foul trouble. A player needs to be careful, but he can't stop playing. Richardson is the best illustration. He had 10 points, two threes from NBA land, seven assists, two rebounds and a block despite giving away seven inches to the shooter. He is the one player who cannot come out of the game. He had three fouls before intermission. He was foul-free in the second half. He stayed aggressive, but kept away from the silly stuff and stayed on the floor.

"It's a case of picking your spots, knowing what the officials are calling," said Barrett. "I rolled the dice leaving him in, but we have complete trust in him."

For the third time in four games, Chen loosened up a zone with his outside shooting. With Weymouth clogging the middle in the first period, he hit two threes, a layup and three free throws before halftime. He finished with 15, his third game in double figures, and he showed well that he is more than just a shooter.

"He gave us the shooting when we needed it and I thought he played a good all-around game," said Barrett.

He had six rebounds and and two assists. He is quick and has strong, sure hands. He is not a gunner who fires away from 20 feet and just watches the action. He drives, runs his lane on the break, and is willing to battle underneath for rebounds.

"He's not afraid of doing the dirty work. He's a good rebounder," said Barrett.

Green cashed an offensive rebound, Matt Gerakis (seven points) hit off the break, and Butka (11 points, six rebounds) hit a jumper in third-period run which opened up the lead to 41-26. In the fourth, Richardson hit two free throws off a steal, buried a three, and made two beautiful passes to Green and Chen for a 57-37 lead with 3:30 left that clinched the win.

Barrett substituted freely and used 12 players. Joijuan Phoneix had two strong drives for a pair of hoops late in the game. Tyshawn Moore (2) and Solomon Umoren (2) also scored. Vinny Tran played tough defense on Jones late in the first half. Greg Clarke played well on the boards and Pat Janeiro had a rejection in the final minutes.

In the East Boston win, Butka added 11 and Gerakis had eight. Green had 13 of his 19 in the second half for North who was in control from start to finish.

"Anthony does so much with his presence that doesn't show up in the box score," said Barrett. "It was good to see him establish himself on the offensive end as well."

Barrett scheduled difficult non-leaguers against Brockton, Weymouth and East Boston to start the season. He is happy with the way his team has responded to the challenge.

"The thing I would point to is our defensive effort," said Barrett. "With the exception of the Quincy game, it has been solid. Everything starts with our defense."

North is at Silver Lake Friday at 6:30 p.m.

Presidents Edged At Buzzer

By BILL GRIFFIN

The only thing missing was a well-deserved victory.

The quality of the basketball was high. Quincy had grabbed a third-quarter lead and controlled most of the second half. The lead had flipped back-and-forth in a tense, well-played fourth quarter, and the Presidents were in good position with the ball and a one-point lead with six seconds left.

However, Luke Murray stole an inbounds pass in the backcourt, fired a strike to Chris Reddington who hit a desperation three-pointer as the final buzzer sounded to give Braintree a heartbreaking 63-61 win over Quincy in a non-league game Friday night.

"It was a tough way to lose," said coach Quincy coach Dave Parry. "We had played very well and we had the ball late, but Braintree made a play and the kid hit a tough shot."

If Quincy's good fortunes ever even out, the Presidents are due for a big payback. For the second straight game, Quincy held a slim lead late in the fourth period against a quality opponent. Against North, the Presidents came from 19 down to lead with two minutes left. Against Braintree, they were up six after three and by one in the final seconds. The Presidents are due for a blessing from lady luck.

"We've played consistently well which pleases me, but that's a tough thing to tell a 17-year old kid after a couple of losses like we've had," said Parry.

Quincy led 51-45 after three. The Wamps used a tough 3-2 zone to get back into the game. Each team shared the lead in the final period. Junior guard Drew Myers drained one of his five three-point jumpers with less than a minute left to give Quincy a 61-60 lead.

After each team gave a series of fouls, the clock wound down to six seconds left. Quincy took the ball out near its own bench. Murray made his interception, Reddington made his shot, and Braintree had its improbable win.

Myers led Quincy (2-2) with a game-high 19 while Brendan Cunningham added 16. For the second straight game, Chris Callahan came off the bench and gave Quincy a quality two-way effort.

The Presidents only shot two free throws in the clean, well-played contest.

"They're weren't many fouls called because each team was playing so well. There was a flow to the game from start to finish," said Parry.

After Braintree raced to an early eight-point lead, Cunningham poured in eight points to bring Quincy within 16-15 after one. It was tied 30-30 at the half. The Presidents played an excellent third period, scoring 21 points behind 8 from Cunningham to lead by six entering the fourth. Myers had three three-pointers in the third for Quincy.

"Drew is playing really well for us," said Parry.

After four games, Parry had seen a good deal he likes about his club. Unselfishness tops the list.

"I think what I've liked best is the way we distribute the ball. This is a team that does not worry about who scores the points," said Parry.

Quincy was achingly close to being 4-0 after two games. They had solid wins over Bridgewater-Raynham and Whitman-Hanson. They were right there at the end against North and Braintree. The best is yet to come for this club.

"We're gaining a lot of valuable experience which will make us a better team," said Parry. "We have to come together, regroup and look ahead."

"Quincy is good, very good. They will win a lot of games this year," said North coach Kevin Barrett after his club's game against the Presidents.

Quincy will face another test at home against Scituate, who had the best record in the Patriot League last year, Friday at 6:30 p.m.

North Girls Down Marshfield, Bow To Duxbury In Finals

By BILL GRIFFIN

For the second straight game last week, senior guard Jane Minton delivered when her team needed her the most.

After leading the Red Raiders to a come-from-behind win over archrival Quincy, Minton scored eight of her 17 points in the final quarter and led North to a 62-50 victory over Marshfield in the first round of the Duxbury Holiday Championship.

In the championship game, Duxbury defeated North, 48-26. Again, Minton played well, scoring eight points and pulling down out six rebounds against the Dragons. Minton also played a strong defensive game.

Minton stepped up with the score tied 41-41 against Marshfield entering the final period. She scored the first five points on the quarter to give North a 46-41 lead. Marshfield pulled within three, but buckets from Minton and senior center Maya Umoren protected the lead the rest of thre way.

Senior guard Grace Geary, who was another standout against Quincy, had her best game as a Red Raider in the win over Marshfield. She scored a game-high 21 points and also had 10 steals. Geary and Minton combined to give North 38 points from the backcourt.

Geary ignited the the Red Raiders in the first period, scoring eight points as North led by five after one. North led by three at the half and the score was tied entering the fourth when Minton and Umoren (six points in the fourth period) took over for the Red Raiders.

Umoren had 13 points and eight rebounds for the winners. North received a big effort off the bench from senior forward Tristine Thong had 10 rebounds and played excellent defense when Umoren was saddled with foul trouble in the first half.

North finished the week at 3-2 and will host Silver Lake Friday.

Butka Powers Red Raiders Past Presidents

a snapshot of how good the Presidents can be.

"What I liked was our poise, the way we didn't panic and stayed in the game even though they had a big lead," said Parry. "Once the fullcourt trap started working we got turnovers and baskets in transition. That's the way we like to play. For that whole period, we were going to the hoop."

The quality of play in the fourth period was remarkable. The lead never was larger than three for the first six minutes of the period. Quincy nosed ahead at 54-52 and was up 61-60 with 2:28 left. Bain hit another deep three and found backdoor cutters for two layups. Butka had 11 in the period, including two threes, and Richardson shook free to take over the game in the final two minutes.

Butka hit a drive and foul shot for a traditional three with the shot clock winding down towards zero to put North up for good at 63-61. He was in his own zone at this point. He swished another deep three. Richardson stole the ball for a hoop and spun home a reverse layup between two players at least a half-foot taller to finish it.

"Efthim just wouldn't allow us to lose, and there is nobody I would rather see with the ball at the end of the game than Kyle," said Barrett.

"For us, it was a matter of just making a few more plays at the end of the game," said Parry.

And Butka?

"He had a career night. Great players make great plays," said Parry.

City To Receive National Community Development Award

The City of Quincy's Department of Planning and Community Development has again won the Audrey Nelson Community Development Achievement Award from the National Community Development Association (NCDA). This is the third time the City of Quincy has won this award over the past six years.

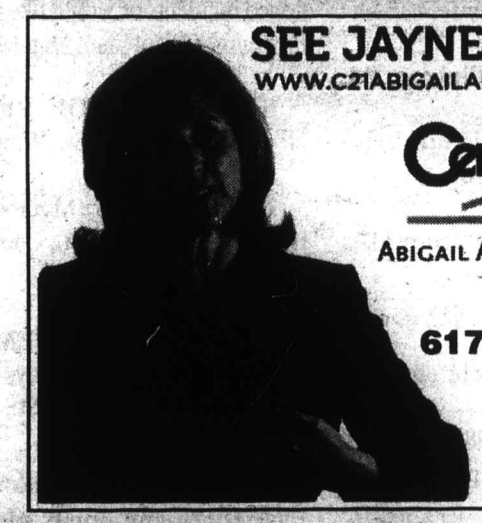

The Audrey Nelson award recognizes exemplary uses of Community Development Block Grant and "HOME Investment Partnership" funds in meeting the needs of families and neighborhoods.

The award is being presented to the City of Quincy for the "Winter Gardens" project, in collaboration with NeighborWorks Southern Mass. Winter Gardens is a 24 unit energy-efficient affordable family rental housing development in the city's Quincy Point neighborhood, which opened in October 2012.

The award will be presented at the annual Winter Legislative Meeting of NCDA next month in Washington, D.C.

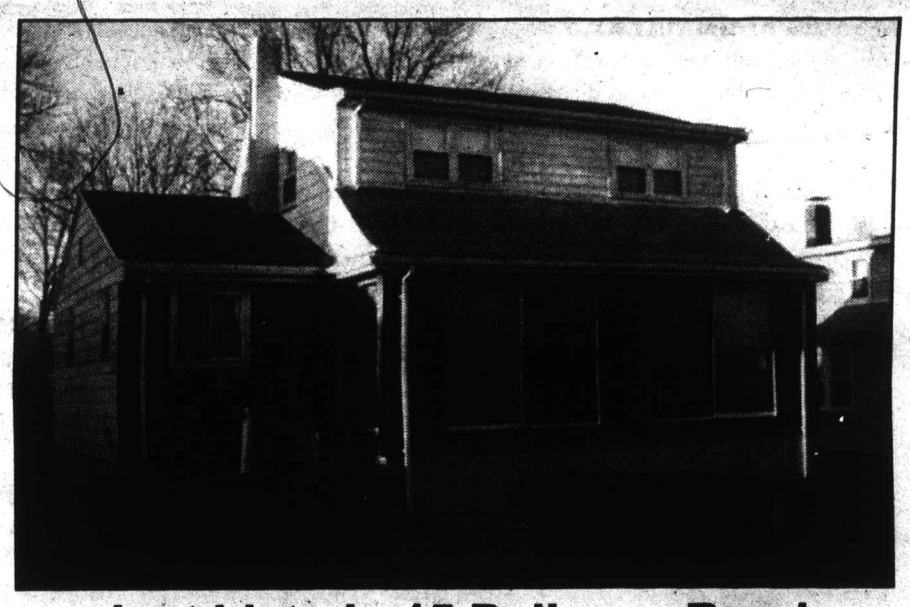

The award is called the Audrey Nelson Award, in memory of the first Deputy Executive Secretary of NCDA. Audrey Nelson's intense commitment to her neighborhood, her local program efforts, and her drive to serve low income people was cut short by death from cancer at the age of 29. NCDA created this award in her honor in 1987.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Friday, December 20, 2013, at approximately 11:45 p.m., Officer Daniel Parisi was dispatched to a high rise building on Quarry Street for a report of fire alarms sounding in the building. The Officer was familiar with the address because he was dispatched there earlier in his shift for the same type of incident. This incident turned out to be a false alarm. Upon arrival, the Officer entered the building and met the Manager for the second time this evening. Due to the extreme volume of the fire alarms sounding, the Officer and the Manager were forced to go outside to speak. In addition to the alarm, flashing strobe lights were also activated. The Manager, who lives on the 5th floor, said he was inside his residence when the fire alarms started going off for the 4th time that night. When the alarms sounded this time, the Manager immediately left his apartment and began to look down each hallway as he descended the stairs in an attempt to locate the individual(s) who had activated the alarm system. In seconds, the Manager reached the floor below him and observed a female just feet from the fire alarm that was now open and had been activated. When the Manager confronted the female, she told him, "Go ahead and call the cops." With this information, Officer Parisi entered the building, climbed the steps and quickly found the female as described by the Manager, in the stairwell of the 2nd floor. The female was highly intoxicated and she did not appear to be surprised to see an Officer. Officer Parisi asked the female why she pulled the fire alarm and she responded, "I am a Nurse and was checking on a patient." This led to follow-up questions in which it was determined that the female suspect was not a practicing Nurse. The Manager arrived on scene and told the Officer that the "patient" the suspect referred to was her friend and resided in the building. He added that the friend would normally be asleep at this hour. While speaking with the suspect in the stairway, several residents were forced to alter their egress route in order to evacuate. Based on available information, Officer Parisi placed the female suspect, a 54 year old Quincy resident, with "Initiating a False Fire Alarm and Disorderly Conduct." The suspect actually resided in the same building! Nice Work..

TARGET STORE CREDIT CARDS: Target officials report that stolen data from credit cards used at Target came from about 40 million credit and debit cards used between November 27th and December 15th. Be sure to review your credit card account often to look for purchases that you did not make. Report any suspicious activity to your credit card company by calling the number on the back of the card. Do not respond to any emails or engage in conversation pertaining to telephone calls from companies claiming to be from Target or your credit card company. Instead, call the telephone number on the back of your credit card and tell them about the email or telephone call.

Traveling Outside The U.S.

By KRISTEN ALBERINO
Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

Americans today are visiting places around the globe–often for vacations, and sometimes to relocate in another country. If you are one of these people and receive Social Security benefits, we offer a special website: "Social Security Payments Outside the United States."

Here you can find answers to such questions as "will my Social Security payments be affected? Do I have to let Social Security know I'm out of the country? When should I do it? What happens if I need to contact Social Security while I am out of the country?"

Social Security Online Services ★ Convenient ★ Secure ★
www.socialsecurity.gov

You can find answers to all of these questions and others at www.socialsecurity.gov/international/payments.html. The website features a "Payments Abroad Screening Tool", which asks you a few short questions to determine if your payments can continue.

The page also offers links to publications, such as Your Payments While You Are Outside The United States, which explains how your benefits may be affected and other important information you need to know about receiving Social Security benefits while outside the country.

And one more important point to note. If you receive Social Security benefits as a dependent or survivor there are additional United States residency requirements that may affect your benefit payments while you are outside the United States.

It also is important to note that there are different provisions for anyone receiving Supplemental Security Income (SSI) benefits. Once you have been outside the United States for 30 or more days in a row, your SSI cannot start again until you have been back in the country for at least 30 consecutive days. There are special rules for dependent children of military personnel who leave the United States and exceptions for students studying abroad.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Romantic aspects are high at this time for single Lambs looking for love. Warm and fuzzy feelings also are at enhanced levels for Rams and Ewes in paired relationships.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) This week favors what Taureans dote on -- namely, love and money. Look for more meaningful relationships for both singles and pairs, as well as an improved financial outlook.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) All lingering shreds of that recent bout with boredom are dissipated as you eagerly accept a challenging offer. Your positive mood persuades others to join you in this venture.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) You might need validation for a possible solution to a situation involving someone close to you. Consider asking a trusted friend or relative to help you with this problem.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Investigate carefully before agreeing to assist a friend or colleague with a personal problem. There might be hidden factors that could emerge later that will create problems for you.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your decision to work with an associate rather than go it alone, as you first proposed, brings an unexpected bonus. Be careful not to be judgmental. Allow for free and open discussion.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A loved one's health problem could, once again, make demands on your time and attention. But this time, make some demands of your own, and insist that others pitch in and help.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good time for the traditionally staid Scorpion to plan adjustments in your day-to-day schedules. Be more flexible and allow for more impromptu, off-the-cuff actions.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Avoid creating unnecessary fuss over a situation you don't approve of. If it's going to work, it will do so despite your objections. If it fails, it will do so without a push from you.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Working with a trusted colleague could open your mind to exploring some considerations you previously dismissed out of hand. The weekend brings news from a loved one.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Resolving a recent problem leaves you in a good position to strengthen your influence on how things get done. But continue to encourage ideas and suggestions from others.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A new friend suggests an interesting opportunity. But check it out before you snap at it. It might be a good deal for some people, but it might not work in helping you reach your goals.
BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of helping people solve their problems, making you a most-respected counselor and trusted friend.

'Polish Prince' From Quincy Wins North American Super Featherweight Title

Boxer Ryan Kielczewski Honored By City Council

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council recently presented a commendation to Ryan Kielczewski, a professional boxer from Quincy known as the 'Polish Prince' who won the North American super featherweight title in Portland, Maine, on Nov. 16.

Kielczewski has been boxing since the age of 6, and went 118-26 while winning two New England Golden Glove championships as an amateur. Since he turned professional in 2008, Kielczewski has gone 18-0, winning four of those matches by knockout. Before the Nov. 16 title match, Kielczewski's previous bout was in July, when he knocked out Miguel Soto on ESPN2's Friday Night Fights. Coming into that fighter Soto was 11-0 with 11 knockouts as a professional.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, who has attended several of Kielczewski's matches, said he wanted to honor the boxer not only for his accomplishments in the ring, but because of how involved Kielczewski's father, Rick, and brother have been in Ryan's career.

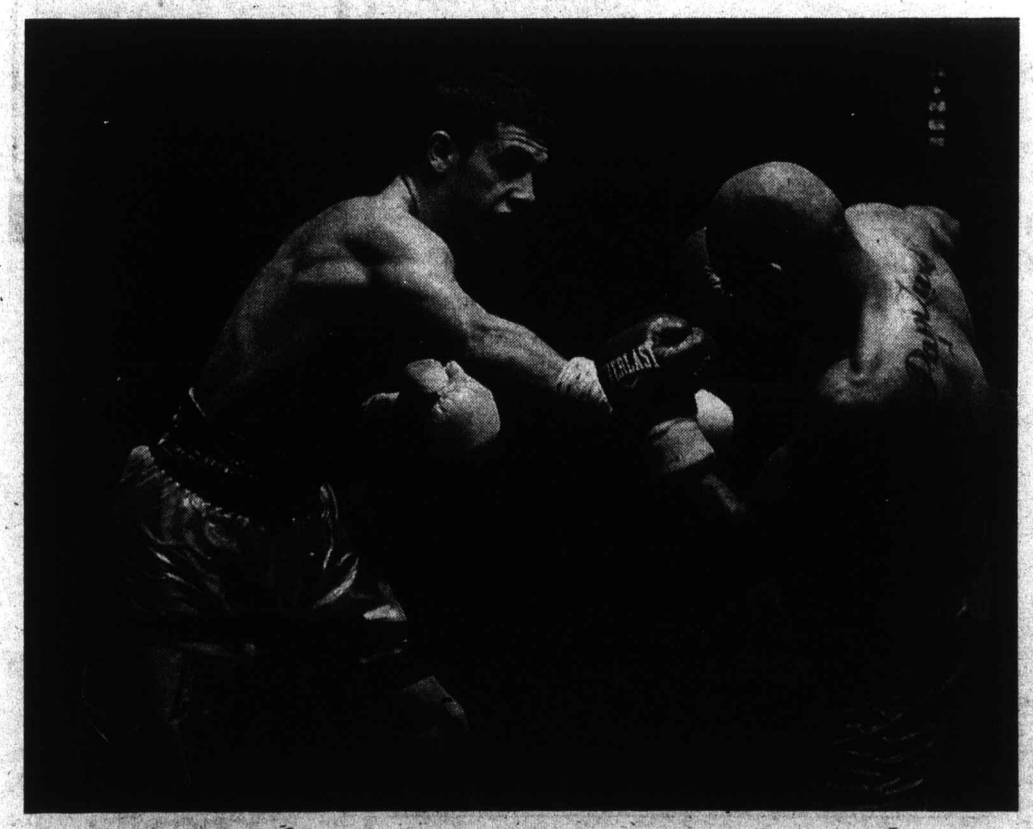

"What's inspiring to me about this story is not only the record but the family environment that's enveloped around Ryan," Croall said. "His dad and also his brother are very involved in the process and it's really neat to watch – I've had the opportunity to travel around and see this kid fight in different venues."

"We congratulate you on your amazing success in this national showcase," Croall added, reading from the commendation. "You rose to the challenge to beat Miguel Soto and we wish you the best of luck with the title fight on Nov. 16. The citizens of Quincy and your many other fans are justifiably proud."

Kielczewski thanked the council for honoring him.

"Thanks a lot – I'm not much of a talker but this is awesome. I'm known in Quincy by all of you now and I'm starting to be known around the U.S. for all my accomplishments," he said.

"Ryan is definitely going to be the next champ known in Quincy," Rick Kielczewski added. "Hopefully we will go to the top and have all you people behind us."

Quincy Falls To Milton, NQ Wins Consolation Game

By JOE REARDON

Quincy's strength as a hockey team proved to be its downfall in the Quincy Youth Christmas Tournament championship game.

Playing against a tough Milton team on Friday, the Presidents took a 4-2 lead into the third period but saw it disappear as the Wildcats scored three times to take a 5-4 win at the Quincy Youth Arena.

North Quincy captured its first win of the season in the consolation game, defeating King Philip 3-2 to improve to 1-2-1. The Red Raiders will be looking for their second win of the season Saturday against Duxbury at the Bog Ice Arena beginning at 5:15 p.m.

Quincy has been working on wearing teams out in the third period and the final fifteen minutes looked to be the exception and not the norm against the Bay State Conference squad.

"We haven't learned how to finish teams off yet," said Quincy Hockey Head Coach Ted Walsh. "They didn't outplay us. We really let up in the third period and had a couple of mental breakdowns. That was a good team we played. They're a couple of years removed from the Div. 1 state championship. They know how to win."

The Presidents continued to put up plenty of offense with four tallies and 32 shots on net. Jake Hallisey continued his scoring binge with a pair of goals while Brian O'Callaghan and Matt Freeman added single tallies. Mike Puglesy and Pat Donovan each had a pair of assists and goaltender Ryan Higgins turned away 32 shots.

Quincy has done a good job at staying out of the penalty box after reaching double digits in a 6-4 loss to Hanover on Dec. 21. The Presidents get another shot at the Indians Wednesday at 6 p.m. at Hobomock Arena in Pembroke.

"It'll be good to see them again," said Walsh. "They may feel like they stole one or we gave one to them. They played hard, I'm going to give them credit for that. We have to stay out of the (penalty) box, play hockey and prove that we can beat them."

High School Hoop Notebook

By BILL GRIFFIN

Admit it. There will be nights this winter when you are watching two college teams you've never heard of from two states you'd have trouble finding on a map. On another channel, there are two NBA teams sleepwalking through the regular season waiting for the first meaningful game to be played in April.

Do yourself a favor. Get off the couch and go watch Quincy or North Quincy play basketball. It doesn't matter if you choose a boys or a girls game. The caliber and intensity of the basketball will be good. The players care, hustle, and can play the game. All four teams are not only good bets to make the tourney, but have a shot at a divisional title.

Last week's doubleheader between the girls and boys teams from North and Quincy was terrific. The gym was packed. There were big second-half comebacks in each game. There was a one-point decision in the girls' game, and the margin in the boys' game was one point with less than two minutes left in the game.

The girls played with rare effort and produced a dramatic ending. The caliber of play in the boys game was remarkable because it was only the third game of the season. It will be a great city for basketball this winter. The price is right. Go out and enjoy it.

Here are few leftover notes and thoughts:

Efthim Butka at 6'5" hit six three pointers against Quincy. If an NBA player who is 6'5" nails six threes, it's worthy of note. When a 6'5" high-school player does it, it's an event...No player early in the season has impacted games in as many ways as Kyle Richardson...Matt Gerakis is a solid, steady player who will only improve with more game experience...Chris Callahan could be a lockdown defender for Quincy when the Presidents face the big-time scorers on their schedule...Center J.T. Bain can move out, hit threes, and make great entry passes to cutters moving along the baseline.

"J.T. has always been a good passer," said coach Quincy coach Dave Parry. "What's happening now is his teammates are getting used to him. He waits until the opening is right there and he never forces anything."

North's center Maya Umoren was hampered by an injury to her thumb against Quincy...Given her shooting and all-around skills, it was only a matter of time before Grace Geary had a breakout offensive game for the Red Raiders as she did with 21 points in the win over Marshfield in the first round of the Duxbury Holiday Tourney. She will be fun to watch all season... Camille Mullaney played a solid game for North and stuck in a big basket in the fourth-quarter rally against Quincy.

Kayla McArdle has had no luck in her senior year. She missed most of the soccer season with a dislocated knee and injured her elbow at the end of the North game... It is impressive to watch Nicole Jorgensen mature into a complete, poised center as a sophomore for the Presidents...Sophomore Gabby Jerahian has a beautiful touch on her three-point jumper from the corner.

Foul shooting was an issue in the early games for North's and Quincy's girls team. In the Red Raiders' overtime loss to Plymouth North, North went 5-16 from the line. In Quincy's OT loss to Whitman-Hanson, the Presidents were 4-21 from the line. In the one-point loss to North, Quincy was 3-16.

Weymouth coach Jim Dolan was impressed with North Quincy after the Red Raiders beat his club, 61-44.

"They're very good," he said. "Richardson controls the game. Butka is good inside and out and (Anthony) Green protects the middle. They also have a lot of pieces that fit in well. Kevin (Barrett) does a good job of moving his role players in and out to the right spots."

Quincy College Health, Fitness Center Open House

The Health and Fitness Center at Quincy College will host an open house for their new Weight Loss Program on Thursday, Jan. 9th from 5 to 7 p.m. in the Fitness Center, Lower Level, Presidents Place, 1250 Hancock St., Quincy.

The program is open to all interested participants who want to lose weight this winter under the instruction of Dr. Caroline Apovian's nutrition plan - featured in her book, The Overnight Diet - along with Dr. Wayne Westcott's exercise plan highlighted in his book Get Stronger, Feel Younger. The program will follow a small class format that was used in their highly successful weight loss study - recently published in the major medical research journal, The Physician and Sports Medicine.

The open house is free and open to the public, with refreshments to follow. Advance reservations are suggested by contacting Dr. Wayne Westcott at wwestcott@quincycollege.edu.

Inspired by the obesity epidemic that has become more prevalent and pervasive in the United States, Drs. Westcott and Apovian have conducted many weight loss research studies over the past several years. The expert duo have written and contributed chapters to numerous weight loss books, and have been featured in popular magazines such as Prevention, Shape, Self, Good Housekeeping, Consumer Reports on Health, and American Fitness.

Dr. Westcott says the future goals of the program "are to learn more about the relationship of resistance training and protein intake to rebuilding muscle, recharging metabolism and reducing fat."

The new Weight Loss Program will help participants to reduce body weight, tone muscle, raise their metabolic rate, increase muscular strength and improve cardiovascular endurance. Each class consists of 6-10 participants with expert instruction/supervision by 2 nationally certified fitness professionals.

The cost for the program is $210 and it is a non-credit course.

The Health and Fitness Winter 2014 Weight Loss Program will offer classes which meet twice per week for one hour intervals throughout the spring semester, Jan. 15th through June 14th. For more information on the program, or to register for open house attendance contact Dr. Wayne Westcott at wwestcott@quincycollege.edu or call 617-984-1716.

Council Honors Principal Planner Nancy Callanan

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council recently passed a resolution honoring Nancy Callanan, Quincy's housing principal planner, for her years of service in housing and community development.

NANCY CALLANAN

Callanan has worked in housing and community development for 26 years. She worked as a landlord counselor and housing program director for Quincy Community Action Programs (QCAP) and as the HOME program manager and director of community development for the city before taking her current assignment.

Councillor Joseph Finn introduced the resolution honoring Callanan. Finn noted Callanan had recently been awarded the Paul Poulos Lifetime Achievement Award at the National Community Development Association's (NCDA's) New England Regional Fall Conference, in Bridgeport, Conn.

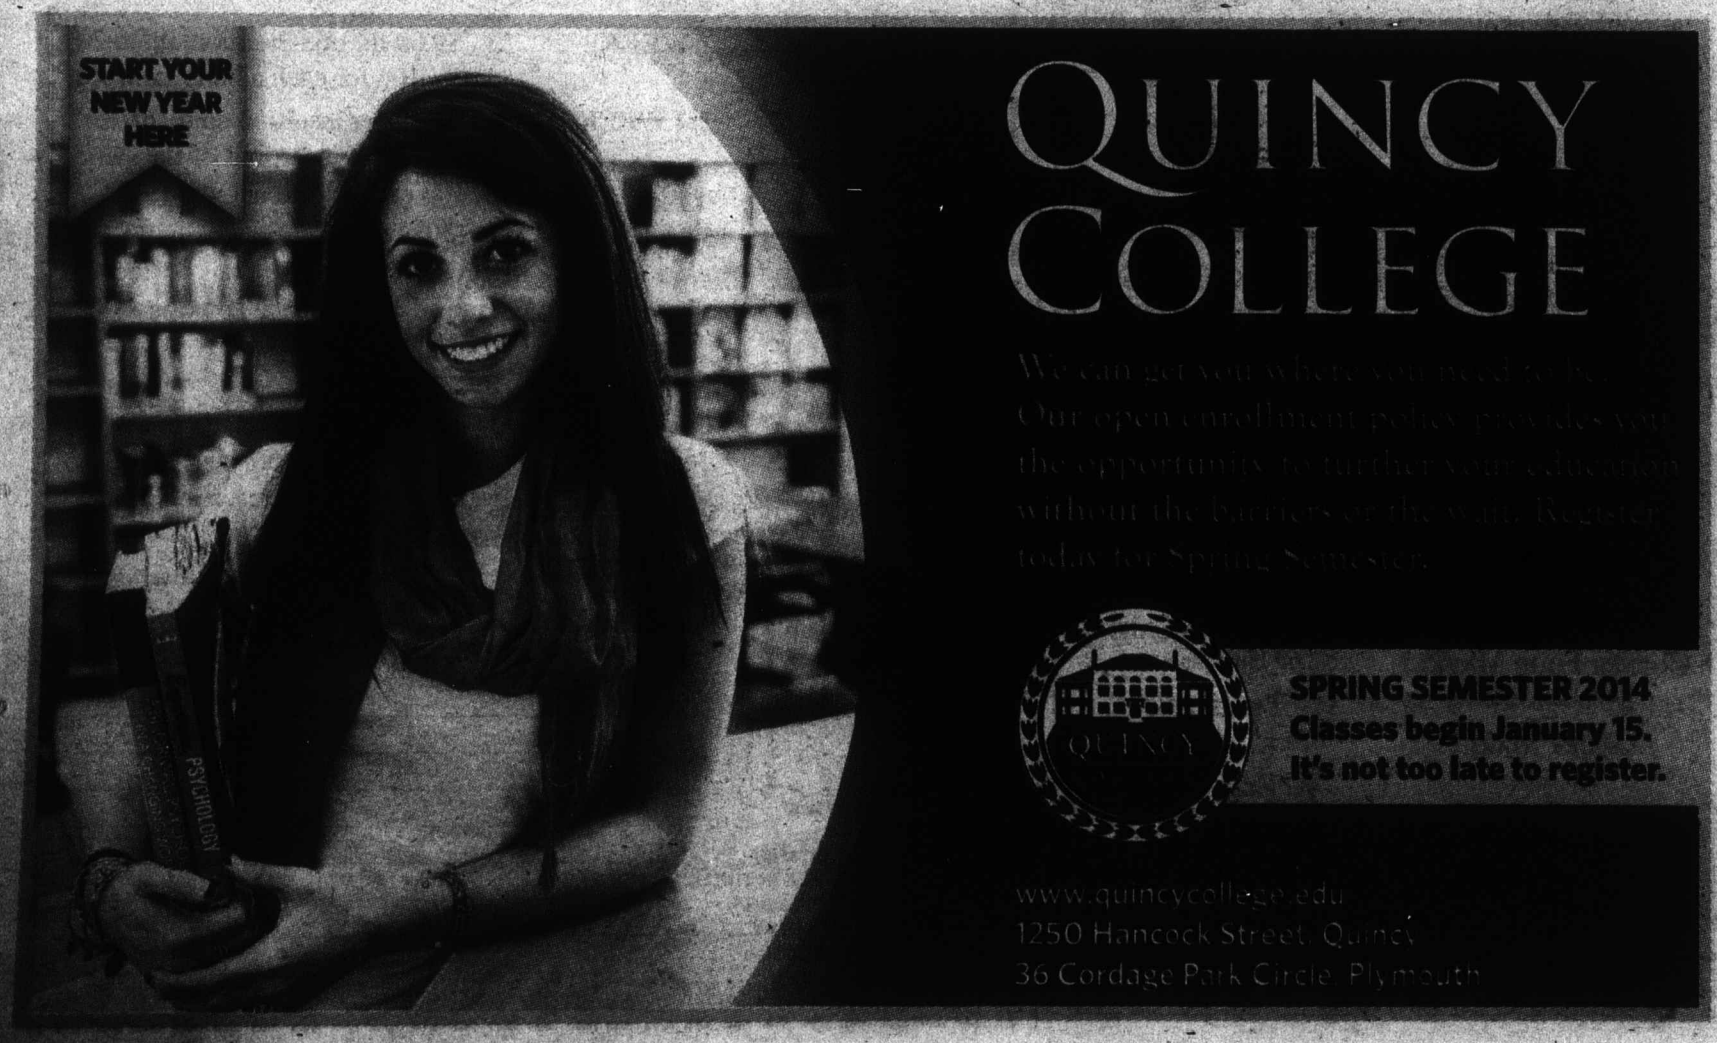

"We're all used to now this department receiving multiple awards and recognition for the great work they do, but this is a particularly unique one given Nancy's long career because it truly is a lifetime achievement award," Finn said. "This award is given annually to an individual in recognition of their long-term achievements and contributions in housing and community development.

"Nancy has been in the field of housing and community development for over 26 years.

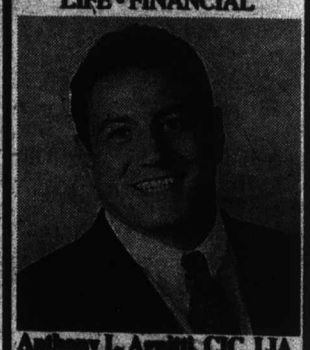

"I had the honor of knowing Nancy back when she worked for QCAP and I remember exploring different properties and looking at creating opportunities for affordable housing.

"For 10 years she was HOME program manager in the City of Quincy. And the achievements the city has made with the HOME program are absolutely incredible.

"Think about this – during her tenure as community development director from 2006 to 2012, over 61,000 persons were assisted through community development programs, dozens of private sector jobs were created or retained, over 100 units of affordable housing were created, over 70 income-eligible households received assistance in purchasing their first home, 129 rental units were created or rehabilitated, over 400 homeowners received rehabilitation assistance and during the same time period of Nancy's career Quincy received over $40 million in funding for the programs she managed," Finn said.

Koch Praises People At 4th Term Inauguration

Mayor Says 'Human Capital' Proves City's Best Days Lie Ahead

By SCOTT JACKSON

In his fourth inaugural address, Mayor Thomas Koch focused on Quincy's 'human capital' – the city's people, organizations, and businesses that he said prove the community's best days as a city lie ahead.

Koch gave his inaugural address Monday night in front of a standing-room-only crowd at the 484-seat auditorium inside the new Central Middle School shortly after being sworn in for his fourth two-year term by City Clerk Joseph Shea. He spoke for 18 minutes during his address and was interrupted nearly two dozen times as the audience broke into applause. The mayor noted that he and former mayors used previous inaugural addresses to unveil policy initiatives for their upcoming terms, but said he wanted to begin his fourth term by praising those who have helped make Quincy the city it is.

"At inaugural events we often speak of capital projects and programs, agendas and vision. We have made tremendous progress over the last six years. A new senior center, a new high school, a new track and field facility, a new middle school here at Central – look around, this building is a credit to our city's commitment to our children and our future – planning for a new Sterling Middle School, seawall repairs, flood control projects, new financial systems, our downtown, the historic renovations of the Coddington School and old City Hall – I could go on.

We are truly a city on the move," Koch said.

"Tonight though I want to talk about our human capital – great people and organizations who serve this community with amazing passion and whose contributions truly form the foundation and the future of our city. A city is more than bricks and mortar, more than infrastructure. A city is made a community by its people, people that care deeply about their neighbors. We come together as a people of different faiths, cultures, economic and social backgrounds, but we come together under God as Americans and all part of the same human family.

"I'm going to speak about a number of individuals and organizations that represent the very best of our community and stand as a great testament to that human capital, which gives me such great faith that our best days as a city lie ahead of us."

Included among those whom the mayor praised were the city's service organization and volunteers. Koch recognized Tom Shepherd, a World War II U.S. Navy Veteran who has served the community by visiting hospitalized veterans for more than half a century.

"Tom has been a member of the Quincy Elks for 62 years. For over 50 years as a member and chairman of the Veterans Visiting Veterans Committee, Tom has visited veterans in the hospital every week," Koch said. "Every week for 50 years – quite remarkable. Thank you Tom for your commitment. Thank you to the Elks, the Masons, the Knights of Columbus, The Sons of Italy, Rotary, Lions, Kiwanis, Quincy City Club and to all of our service organizations for what you do."

The mayor also thanked Quincy's many youth sports leagues and their coaches and volunteers. Koch singled out Joe Brill, a longtime baseball and softball coach known by many as Quincy's "Mr. Baseball." Brill suffered a heart attack at Fenway Park in September but was able to return to the stadium to watch the Red Sox clinch their first World Series at home since 1918 in October.

"For nearly 30 years Joe has coached youngsters in baseball and softball. He taught them the fundamentals about, and a love for, the game. He has mentored hundreds of kids, helping to shape them into good citizens," Koch said. "Joe has fought some tough medical challenges in recent months, but he must be feeling better because his jokes are as bad as ever. Thank you Joe for your commitment to our kids and thank you to all coaches and volunteers."

Koch went on to thank the city's volunteers, including John Dunner, and Quincy's many nonprofit organizations. Dunner has volunteered for Interfaith Social Services for 20 years.

"John gives 30 hours a week helping Interfaith serve the residents of Quincy in their time of need. John can be seen at the regular annual food drives collecting boxes, helping to organize the donations and delivering food to those who need it most. He loves to volunteer and serve," Koch said. "Any non-profit organization's success is dependent on its volunteers, and they would be lost without the John Dunners of this world."

The mayor thanked members of Quincy's business community for their dedication to the city. In particular, Koch mentioned small business owners Phyllis Godwin of Granite City Electric, Wendy Simmons of Prism Energy Services, Scott and Sean Galvin of Galvin Construction, and Ed Keohane, Bob Curry, Richard Barry, and Mark Bertman for their work with the Quincy Partnership. He also thanked Doug Briggs, president of Quincy Mutual, for the company's investment in the downtown project, as well as other major corporations headquartered in Quincy.

Finn Elected New City Council President

By SCOTT JACKSON

New City Council President Joseph Finn vowed Monday night to be a persistent advocate for the resources and information his colleagues need to make their decisions.

Finn, who had been re-elected to his seventh term as an at-large councillor in November, was unanimously chosen to serve as council president during the council's organizational meeting at Central Middle School Monday night. After being sworn-in as council president, Finn praised his colleagues for their willingness to serve the community instead of standing by on the sidelines.

"Let me say this about my colleagues. Despite the occasional impression we may give otherwise on QATV, they are all good people. They are the men and women who have chosen not to live life on the sidelines. They have taken a second job to serve the City of Quincy. They have the courage and will to stand for election, to take the risk of often being criticized, misunderstood, and unfortunately even at times slandered by the rumor and gossip that is unfortunately part of our political life today," Finn said.

"These are the men and women from the community that surrendered the luxury of having an opinion for the responsibility of making decisions. Anyone who has ever done this knows it is not easy. Opinions are always easier than decisions. But because they do accept this responsibility and duty the citizens and the residents of Quincy have a voice in the matters that affect their community."

ONE OF THE first goals of new City Council President Joseph Finn (above) is to create a new council committee focused on municipal technology and information management.

Because of the important role each councillor has in representing the community, Finn said he would advocate for the information and resources needed as the council deliberates any matter that comes before it.

"I take the honor they bestow upon me today quite seriously. I view it as an obligation, not only to ensure the council conduct its business in a civil and orderly fashion, but also to advocate and work as well for the resources and the information my colleagues need to fulfill their important role," Finn said.

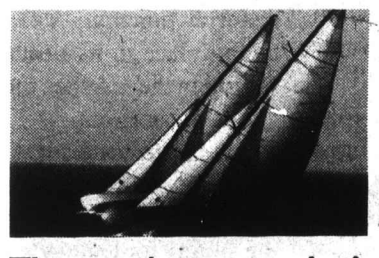

"It matters not whether we are dealing with the challenges and complexity of the decisions we will face with the development of the downtown, whether it is the fiscal challenges presented by the annual budget, or whether it's the simple location of a stop sign, the best deliberations require timely access to data that should underlie our choices and decisions. For this, I will be a persistent advocate."

Finally ... you get to do what you want to do

The question now – what's the best way to pay for it?

Maybe you're simplifying your life. Maybe you're complicating it. Either way, you're at the point where some new doors are opening. You have resources. You have options. What you want is a lender you can talk to – someone you like, whose judgment you trust and respect – to help make the financing happen intelligently. At Colonial Federal, we specialize in working with people like you. Here you deal directly with lenders who actually like coming up with good ways to make things happen. Including sometimes being able to make customized loans. Sound interesting? Like to talk? Call Angela Blanchard, Vice-President/Retail Lending, at 617-471-0750 or apply online at colonialfed.com.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Jan. 26, 1788, the first of 50,000 convicts banished from England to Australia land in Botany Bay. These were not hardened criminals; only a small minority were transported for violent offenses. Among the first group was a 70-year-old woman who had stolen cheese to eat.

• On Jan. 20, 1841, China cedes the island of Hong Kong to the British. In 1898, Britain was granted an additional 99 years of rule. In September 1984, the British and the Chinese signed a formal agreement approving a 1997 turnover of the island.

• On Jan. 25, 1924, the first Winter Olympics begin at Chamonix in the French Alps. Spectators were thrilled by the ski jump and bobsled, as well as 12 other events involving a total of six sports.

• On Jan. 23, 1957, the Wham-O toy company rolls out the first batch of aerodynamic plastic discs, now known as Frisbees. The story of the Frisbee began in Bridgeport, Conn., where students from nearby universities would throw empty Frisbie Pie Company tins to each other, yelling "Frisbie!" as they let go.

• On Jan. 21, 1976, from London's Heathrow Airport and Orly Airport outside Paris, the first Concordes with commercial passengers simultaneously take flight to Bahrain in the Persian Gulf and Rio de Janeiro, respectively. The Concordes flew well past the sound barrier at 1,350 mph.

• On Jan. 24, 1980, U.S. officials announce that America is ready to sell military equipment (excluding weapons) to communist China as a reaction to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. An additional agreement was signed for the construction of a station in China that would be able to receive information from an American satellite.

• On Jan. 22, 1998, in a Sacramento, Calif., courtroom, Theodore J. Kaczynski pleads guilty to all federal charges against him, acknowledging his responsibility for a 17-year campaign of package bombings attributed to the "Unabomber." The "Unabomber" was named after the UNABOM Task Force. The name came from the words "university and airline bombing."

This Old Building - And This New Sign

By DOUGLAS MORRILL
President
Friends of
Souther Tide Mill

You've probably noticed the building more these last few months now, because of the new sign in front of it. Situated on the busy Southern Artery, Route 3A, is one of Quincy's historic buildings known as the Souther Tide Mill. Here on the Town River sits a post-and-beam building that is one of only five tide mills left in the United States.

Souther Tide Mill was once the only mill in the country to have retained both a grist mill and saw mill.

In 1991 the Commonwealth of Massachusetts declared the mill to be an endangered historic building and placed it on the Historic Properties list. This attention from the State made it clear that the mill was worth the time and money to restore the building, and the City formed a partnership with Friends of Souther Tide Mill to preserve and restore the property for future generations. With City, State and preservation funds; corporate donations; and the raising of funds through Friends of Souther Tide Mill, we have been able to continue preserving the mill and restoring it to its former historic function, this all taking place in its beautiful setting in the marshes on the Quincy waterfront.

As for the waterfront, the original town landing settlement of 1634 was to become the setting for Quincy's new mill. In the early 1800s the area was largely salt marsh and meadows. In 1802 Ebenezer Thayer, a merchant of Boston and Charlestown, bought 39 acres of land that extended from the Town River to Washington Street, which was then known as the Hingham-Quincy Turnpike. In June 1806, Mr. Thayer built the mill and put in a dam to power the grist mill. By 1814 he sold the property to Daniel Stetson of Charlestown, who in 1815 sold it to John Souther. In Hingham, Souther was established in his family's business, which was shipbuilding.

John Souther moved to Quincy Town and built his home at 356 Washington Street, which is still standing. He carried out several operations on the site: not only a grist mill but also a saw mill and a shipyard. In addition, he built a wharf. He and his son John Lincoln Souther operated an active shipbuilding yard on this site for nearly 60 years, building many schooners, sloops and brigs. Some were designed to haul Quincy granite before the Granite Railway was established in 1826. In addition, farmers from the Midwest would send their corn overland to be milled at the grist mill, and John would load the product on his ships and transport it to Europe. His saw mill operation was likewise extensive, from the Canadian Maritimes to Down East Maine.

The original mill burned down in 1847, and John and his son, using some of the old timbers from the original 1806 building, reconstructed the present mill in 1854. John Lincoln Souther's son Francis, who used to work at the mill, was killed at the Battle of Big Bethel, Virginia, in June 1861. Francis was the first casualty from Quincy and one of the first Union soldiers to die in battle. In 1873, 58 years after purchasing the business, the Southers sold the property to Wilber F. Larkin, who converted the site into a lumber yard. Larkin sold the property to Benjamin Johnson in 1888, and it was then called the Johnson Lumber Co. In turn, it was sold to the Quincy Lumber Co. in 1912. They closed their doors in 1983, and the property was left abandoned.

Most of the machinery has long since been removed, but the rugged post-and-beam construction remains. Still intact is part of the original shaft that was connected to the tub that turned the wheel stone, which was powered from the canal. The remains of the tide gate structure and abutments can still be seen today near this historic building. We do have part of the original stone in our collection, along with some other artifacts.

We are very proud and thankful that the mill has received the attention that it deserves. We are looking forward to helping to further the work and restoration. This will include appropriate artifacts and exhibits. Our mission as Friends of Souther Tide Mill is to establish educational programs at the mill, with interpretation of the grist mill and saw mill, as well as of the lumber, granite and shipbuilding industries.

Coming up soon is the annual meeting for members on Monday, Jan. 27 at Quincy Point Congregational Church. A second fundraiser is being planned, so watch for details later on.

This is Quincy history, this is your history. We are always seeking more artifacts, pictures and stories from this site. Your donations are always appreciated, and new members are always welcome.

Friends of Souther Tide Mill can be contacted by mail at P.O. Box 692706, Quincy, MA 02269-2706, or call Doug Morrill at 617-471-3628.

'Quincy's Industrial and Commercial Past' Topic

Historian Tom Galvin Speaker At Quincy College Program Friday

Quincy College Life-Long Learning Program will host its second event of "You've Got the Floor" Speaker Series on Friday, Jan. 10th at 1 p.m. on its Quincy campus, 1250 Hancock St.

The featured topic - "Quincy's Industrial and Commercial Past" - will be presented by Quincy Historian Tom Galvin, a lifelong Quincy resident with vast knowledge of the city's historic background. Galvin is a member of the Quincy Historical Society, Quincy Rotary Club and Quincy Partnership.

This event is free and open to the public.

The slideshow presentation will primarily focus on Quincy's historical past and the incredible progress it has made. With ongoing changes in development, residents of the city and surrounding south shore areas can learn more about some of Quincy's vital industrial and commercial businesses that have since left the area; along with historic highlights of Shopperstown. A question and answer forum will follow.

The Life-Long Learning Program at Quincy College seeks to enrich the cultural and intellectual lives of the communities in which it serves through stimulating and accessible programs and courses (non-credit), lectures and presentations. "You've Got the Floor" Speaker Series will be a program offered throughout the year to students, faculty, and the greater Quincy and South Shore communities.

For more information on this program or those interested in participating as a guest speaker can contact Fred Doyle at fdoyle@quincycollege.edu.

QCAP Career Pathways Classes Begin In February

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. announces it will be offering Career Pathways classes beginning in Feburary.

The spring session will also have a strong focus on enhancing computer skills to help students pass the new high school equivalency test.

For more information, call Margaret Doherty, Education and Career Counselor - ABE - at 617-479-8181 ext. 387 or visit QCAP, 1509 Hancock St., Quincy Center.

Special Ed Parents Meeting

The Quincy Parents Advisory Council to Special Education (QPAC) will meet tonight (Thursday) at 7 pm. at Quincy High School, 100 Coddington St.

This is an open, public meeting. A QPAC volunteer will be available to parents and guardians at 6:30 pm to offer individualized assistance and support.

For more information, contact Linda Perry, QPAC President, atlperry0181@comcast.net, or visit www.quincypac.org.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1907 postcard reproduction showing Brewer's Corner in South Quincy looking south on Granite Street. Copeland Street begins on the right and Water Street on the left. On the immediate right was the L.G. Murray Pharmacy. Across the street behind the man on the left was Frank Brewer's store for whom the corner was named. Brewer sold groceries and provisions from this store for 30 years. At the time electric trolleys ran through here providing an important street railway connection between Quincy Square and East Milton Square. The steeple on the center was on the Swedish Baptist Church now converted into affordable housing. The Granite Street Café is on the left corner across the street. ## 3 Storms Deplete City's Snow Budget

Three snowstorms that slammed the city during the past two weeks have completely depleted the city's budget for snow removal, according to Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia.

LaRaia could not estimate the cost of snow removal for the three storms but said that the $118,588 budgeted for such costs for the year, covered only, "most of the first storm."

The city will have to borrow or transfer funds to fight future storms this year.

The city plowing crews could not keep up with the most recent snowfall and slicks of packed, glazed snow lined most of the city's side streets and few main roads.

$28.8 MILLION SCHOOL BUDGET PROPOSED

School Supt. Lawrence P. Creedon planned to present a $28.8 million school budget for 1977-78 to the School Committee, up a comparatively tiny 1.4- percent over that of 1976-77. In the past, increases ranged from 9.8 percent to 16 percent.

Dr. Creedon listed items in the proposed budget that were beyond the control of the budget makers, including staff salaries, heating and lighting costs and state mandated programs, all of which make up more than 90% of the budget.

QUINCY-ISMS

Louis Quintiliani, mayor of Santo Donato, Italy, was presented with a certificate making him an honorary citizen of Quincy. Mayor LaRaia made the presentation, along with Councillor James A. ## What's Next For The Downtown?

• Beale Company, a very well-known and reputable company, drops out as part of the developing team.

• Work is stopped; there's a "Filene's-like" gaping hole on Hancock St. in Quincy Center.

• StreetWorks says construction costs is getting too high ( is that really a surprise?? Duh.). So, it doesn't want to pay for city's infrastructure improvements, as part of the contractural agreement.

So, what's next? A smaller scale development? A restructured contract, again, to lower StreetWorks' costs? Changed financial terms that aren't in the City of Quincy's favor? Quincy lost substantial property taxes when it took over / paid for properties for this development. Is StreetWorks working with the city or just looking out for itself and its own profit margin?

It seems that StreetWorks is sweeping away its responsibilities. And is a very unreliable business partner.

Maybe the city should drop StreetWorks, and look for a much more reliable and financially stable partner.

Questions Cost Projections For Adams Green

The Quincy Sun has graciously allowed me to comment on its Dec. 19, 2013 story, "Koch: Downtown Project Will Move Forward."

Specially, I wish to add to the Sun's reporting of a question that I asked Mayor Koch at his recent presentation at the Quincy Chamber of Commerce which was the basis for the Sun's article. My question: why did his long-standing proposed $15 million budget figure to develop the less than acre and a half Adams Green in front of City Hall recently as well as inexplicably increased to a projected $25 million?

In point of fact, the mayor did not answer the question - at least not directly.

Instead, he first went on about how grand are his plans for the Adams Green and what the green would feature. He then generally went on about infrastructure costs and who might be paying for what – for example, the City of Quincy or Verizon on potential underground telecommunication infrastructure changes at the site.

Most telling, however, was that the mayor said that he didn't know if the project was going to run $20 million, $25 million or perhaps $28 million.

In other words, not only did he fail to answer the question – why did the projected cost suddenly go up by 60%, he still does not know just how much – exactly – the proposed project is likely to cost.

I cannot speak for others; however, it would appear to be awfully late in the going for City Hall to not have better cost projections, not to mention that it is further worrisome that the mayor's current high end cost estimate is 87% higher than the original one.

Throw in the fact that Koch Administration has long failed to complete any of its major initiatives on time and/or on budget and, well, one can only properly worry about how much this proposed project might end up costing if - that is, the mayor can secure the needed $40 million in state funding to pay for his grand little plaza.

Koch Accents Community At 4th Term Inauguration

In addition to members of the business community, Koch lauded the contributions of the city's union workers, including those who helped build the new Central.

"Our human capital is in labor and the hundreds of hands, so many of them from Quincy, who built this school with pride and expertise. The electricians, the plumbers, the bricklayers, the carpenters, the laborers, the ironworkers, all of our tradesmen whose contributions to our community don't end with raising steel and laying brick," Koch said. "Be it financial or volunteering their time our labor community contributes to countless community endeavors, and we are grateful for all you do."

The mayor thanked the city's spiritual leaders for their work as well. Koch noted that the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Boston plans to make the parishes of Sacred Heart, St. Ann, and St. Mary part of a collaborative. The pastors of those parishes – the Rev. John O'Brien of Sacred Heart, the Rev. John Ronaghan of St. Ann, and the Rev. David Callahan of St. Mary – have tendered their resignations, effective in June, and a new pastor will be named for the collaborative.

"I wish to thank these three devoted priests for leading their parishes and being there for so many people in their time of need," Koch said. "I thank all of our priests, ministers, pastors, imams, rabbis, sisters and monks for providing for the spiritual needs of our human family."

Koch recognized four high school seniors Monday night for their achievements in and out of the classroom. From Quincy High, the mayor recognized Martha Pham, president of the QHS national honor society and the school's 2013 homecoming queen, and Matthew Kozlowski, a football captain and varsity hockey player who participated in discussions on school grants with state and local officials. From North Quincy High, Koch lauded the accomplishments of Carolyn Schwartz, a captain of the school's volleyball and sailing teams who will attend Cornell next fall and likely study either chemical or mechanical engineering, and Vincent Tran, a football captain and volleyball and basketball player who received a full academic scholarship to Hamilton College in New York.

"Four students from our two high schools are with us tonight. These students are members of the class of 2014 and are leaders and role models having a positive impact on the culture of their schools," Koch said. "Thank you Martha, Matthew, Carolyn, and Vincent for being an example for your peers to follow, and we wish you all the best in whatever path you choose. I know you will be successful."

Koch also recognized those who work for the city, in particular Lynn Fox and William Wright. Fox, currently working in the assessor's office, has spent 40 years as a city employee and also is a Blue Star mother. Wright is a U.S. Army veteran and a 36-year employee of the Department of Public Works.

"Lynn and Bill have served this community proudly for a total of more than 75 years, and are just two of our many dedicated employees who work for our city in jobs too often not afforded the recognition they deserve," Koch said. "These are our teachers, our firefighters, our police officers and like Lynn, our clerks, and Bill, our laborers. I'm tremendously proud and grateful to all of our city workers."

The mayor also paid tribute to four city employees who died in 2013 – Firefighter John Austin, who died while responding to a call in July; Michael Curtin, an Atlantic Middle School teacher who died in April; Kathleen Minukas, a traffic supervisor who died in September; and Stephen McGrath, the city's director of human resources and a former city solicitor and city councillor who died in August.

Koch concluded his inaugural address by evoking the words of John Adams, who called what is now Quincy "a remarkable spot" in a letter to his wife Abigail in 1782.

"My friends, as I look among this gathering this evening to formalize and inaugurate our government, I am reminded that we are a city of workers – a city that has risen and set to a shipyard whistle, a city that has sought revitalization and renewal, a city that embraces new faces, a city of history whose forefathers created our republic and a city that reaffirms its commitment to our fellow citizens through acts of volunteerism, faith, and kindness," Koch said.

"John Adams described our city as that 'remarkable spot.' This evening we recognized a few of our community members, but countless acts of fellowship define our human capital. These people, these groups, these organizations – this human capital – is the granite foundation of our great city. It is what makes it that 'remarkable spot.' And it is what makes our future, together as a community, one with such limitless potential. I am truly grateful and proud to serve as mayor of the greatest city in the Commonwealth – Quincy."

Dozens of current and former federal, state, county, and city officials were on hand for the ceremony, which also included the organizational meetings for the City Council and School Committee.

Among those attending were Cong. Stephen F. Lynch; former Cong. William Delahunt; state Atty. Gen. Martha Coakley, former state Treasurer Timothy Cahill; former Mayors Walter Hannon and James Sheets; state Sen. John Keenan, House Majority Leader Ron Mariano and Reps. Bruce Ayers and Tackey Chan, all from Quincy, and Rep. Walter Timilty of Milton; Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti, Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey, Commissioner John Gillis, Register of Deeds William O'Donnell, Register of Probate Patrick McDermott, Treasurer Joseph Connolly; and Mark S. Coven, presiding justice of the Quincy District Court, as well as a more than a dozen former city councillors and school committee members.

Following Monday's ceremony, Lynch, a South Boston Democrat, said Koch's address highlighted the type of city Quincy is.

"I thought that was nice way to showcase the city by picking examples of people who are quietly working behind the scenes on behalf of Quincy. I think that speaks volumes about the type of city that Quincy really is. You have all these people who are either volunteering or they're running a business, but they do so much more than that without getting any credit," Lynch said.

"I thought it was very generous of [the mayor] to turn the limelight onto those individuals rather than taking the credit himself. It's a wonderful way of showcasing the people of Quincy."

FLAWLESS THINKING

Some may argue that the pursuit of perfection is a futile exercise because it does not exist, but tell that to the person who recently paid $30.6 million (including commission) for a "flawless" white diamond the size of a small egg. The new owner of the 118-carat white diamond could convincingly contend that, if perfection is to be found, it would probably be found in the form of a large, magnificently transparent, beautifully cut, flawless mineral with the reputation of being the hardest naturally occurring material on the planet. The diamond weighed 299 carats in the rough when discovered in Africa in 2011. It is the largest and most significant such diamond graded by the Gemological Institute of America.

Clarity is one of the four Cs of diamond grading which is determined by inclusions. Most inclusions that affect the clarity and are present in gem-quality diamonds do not affect the diamonds' performance or structural integrity. However, large clouds may affect a diamond's ability to transmit and scatter light. Large cracks close to or breaking the surface may also reduce a diamond's resistance to fracture. ## Seven Local Organizations To Share $4,500 In Grants

Seven local organizations have been awarded grants from the Harvard Pilgrim Foundation's Community Spirit 9/11 Mini-Grant program totaling $4,500.

They are:

Clifford Marshall Elementary School, which will use funds to expand technology in the classroom and repaint the school; Germantown Neighborhood Center Food Pantry, which will purchase food for those in need; Greater Quincy Child Care Center, to support its healthy eating program; Merrymount Elementary School, for technology investments; Quincy Animal Shelter, to support shelter animal needs; Quincy Catholic Academy, to expand technology; and Transplant Foundation of New England, to support the needs of transplant patients. Nine employees of Harvard Pilgrim Health Care and its affiliate, Dell Services, nominated the organizations for the awards.

In 2012, more than 80% of Harvard Pilgrim employees directed a Mini-Grant to an organization they care about. "We are so fortunate to have generous and dedicated employees who enrich our company and the communities in which we all live and work," said Karen Voci, Executive Director of the Harvard Pilgrim Foundation. "The Mini-Grant program is a wonderful way to support our employees as philanthropists and to help them make an impact in their own cities and towns."

To commemorate those Harvard Pilgrim members who lost their lives on September 11, 2001, Harvard Pilgrim and the Foundation created the Community Spirit 9/11 Mini-Grant program.

The program allows each Harvard Pilgrim employee to award a $500 grant, completely funded by the Foundation, to the local charity of his or her choice each calendar year. Since the program began in 2002, Harvard Pilgrim employees have directed contributions to hundreds of organizations throughout Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine with grants totaling $3,166,650.

Cheesy Cauliflower Patties With Potatoes Au Gratin

So many of us are always looking for an alternative to making a burger. And I have tried quite a few.

Today's recipe is for a cauliflower patty with cheese, which cooked up quite easily and everyone seemed to enjoy.

CHEESY CAULIFLOWER PATTIES

1 head of cauliflower (or florets)
2 large eggs
½ cup grated cheddar cheese
½ cup Panko breadcrumbs
½ teaspoon cayenne pepper (more or less to taste)
Salt to taste
About 3 tablespoons vegetable oil for sautéing

If using cauliflower, cut into florets. Cook in boiling water until tender (about 10 -15 minutes). Drain and mash cauliflower while still warm.

Stir in the beaten eggs, cheese, Panko crumbs, cayenne and salt. Form into a patty.

In the hot oil, sauté the patties until golden brown and drain. Place in a warming oven until ready to serve.

Here is a simple recipe that can be used when serving the patty. It's an easy way to make potatoes au gratin,

POTATOES AU GRATIN

6-7 medium potatoes unskinned, washed and dried-diced
2 cups milk
2 cups cream (or half and half)
¼ cup flour
Salt and pepper to taste

Mix the milk, flour and cream together and season with salt and pepper.

Butter a casserole dish. Season the diced potatoes and place in the dish. Pour the cream and milk mixture over the potatoes. Bake covered in a 400-degree oven for 30 minutes. Remove the cover and bake for another 15 minutes.

Meatloaf & Potatoes

After making meatloaf in so many different ways, I was already to make this favorite dish and remembered a recipe that I had found in a magazine.

It can be made ahead of time and cooked when ready.

MEATLOAF & POTATO

1 pound ground meat (I used turkey)
½ cup seasoned breadcrumbs
¼ cup stuffing mix (any favorite)
1 egg
3 tablespoons ketchup
Salt and pepper to taste
1 teaspoon garlic powder
3 medium sized potatoes

In a bowl, mix the egg, breadcrumbs and stuffing mix until well blended. Add the ketchup, garlic powder and mix well.

Cut the potatoes in very thin slices. In a slightly greased baking dish, place the potatoes on the bottom. Add the meatloaf mixture on top and bake in a 350 degree oven until done. The potatoes will crisp up and is a great addition to the meatloaf.

Any favorite recipe for meatloaf can be used.

1988 Winter Olympics Topic Jan. 15

Quincy Historical Society will mark the upcoming Winter Olympics with an afternoon program Wednesday, Jan. 15 at 2 p.m. at the Adams Academy, with a look at one of the most recent American Winter Olympics.

David Hodgdon, director of Blue Hill Adventure and Quarry Museum and founder of the Blue Hills' Nordic Ski Patrol program, will present a slide show on the 1988 Lake Placid Olympics. Hodgdon attended the Lake Placid Games and established a National Ski Patrol Nordic patrol there. His images provide a detailed sense of both the competition and the pageantry of the games. The public is welcome. Admission is free.

A companion program on Wednesday Feb. 5 at 2 p.m., will look at the 2002 Salt Lake Olympics.

Recital For Solo Cello Sunday

The Winter/Spring 2014 Concert at the Crane series at the Thomas Crane Public Library (40 Washington Street, Quincy) Sunday, Jan. 12 at 3 p.m. opens with a recital for solo cello by world renowned musician Luis Leguia. He will perform works composed for unaccompanied cello by Johann Sebastian Bach and Zoltán Kodály.

Leguia grew up in Los Angeles and trained at the Ecole Normale in Paris, and the Juilliard School. His teachers included Arthur Van den Bogaerde, Kurt Reher, Andre Navarra, Leonard Rose, and Pablo Casals. At 19 he turned down offers from the Longine Symphonette and the Houston Symphony to study at Juilliard. He joined the Boston Symphony in 1963.

Leguia has played concertos and solo recitals on several continents, making tours through Europe, South Africa, Lebanon, Ethiopia and Syria. He has made 15 solo tours of South America, including one in which he performed all the Beethoven works, and has performed widely in the United States and in Canada, most recently playing the Cello Concerto No. 2 in D major by Haydn with the Edmonton Symphony.

In May of 2002, Leguia, along with two of his colleagues, performed the Popper "Requiem for Three Cellos and Orchestra" with the Boston Pops, using three Luis and Clark carbon fiber cellos and he has performed numerous times in concerts with all carbon fiber instruments, most notably the "Nine Cellos Concert" in Stockbridge during the summer of 2005.

Concerts at the Crane are made possible by the generous support of the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Interactive Series On Classical Music

The Thomas Crane Public Library in Quincy is hosting a three-part interactive lecture series that will increase understanding and appreciation of classical music through guided listening and discussion.

The first part of the series was held Tuesday, Jan. 7 on the topic "How to Listen to Classical Music."

The other two programs in the series and dates are:

- From Gregorian Chant to Symphony, Tuesday, Jan. 14)
- The Symphonies of Beethoven, Tuesday, Jan. 28.

Each session will begin at 7:00 p.m.

The public is welcome to attend any individual program or all of them.

Professor Delvyn Case is Boston-based musician who is active as a composer, orchestral and choral conductor, and college educator. He also maintains an active career as a writer and lecturer on a variety of musical topics, from sacred music to hip-hop, and pursues numerous musical outreach projects in his home city of Quincy, and beyond.

He is currently Assistant Professor of Music at Wheaton College in Norton, where he serves as Music Director of the Great Woods Chamber Orchestra. This program is made possible with the the generous support of the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Hubley New School Committee Vice Chairwoman

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Kathryn Hubley was sworn in as the School Committee's new vice chairwoman at Monday's mayoral inauguration succeeding Barbara Isola who had served in the post for the past two years.

Following Mayor Thomas Koch's ceremonial swearing in ceremony, which took place in front of hundreds of audience members, including U.S. Rep. Stephen Lynch, state Attorney General Martha Coakley, and former Quincy Mayors Walter Hannon and James Sheets in the new Central Middle School auditorium, Hubley spoke to the crowd, outlining where improvements had taken place in Quincy's public schools, and noting where improvements were needed.

After thanking Koch, School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, and fellow school committee members, Hubley thanked her husband Wally, her parents Dorothy and John Inferrera, and her two children Vicky and Nathan, both who attend Quincy schools.

She emphasized the challenges ahead for Quincy, its schools, and its teachers.

"Our teachers and administrators have a challenging job rolling in the Common Core Standards, balancing the need for accountability and a standards based curriculum without compromising instructional time," she said.

She reflected on the importance of supporting teachers by providing them with much needed resources and training to keep the school system "achieving."

She applauded the restoration of Quincy's literary resources to their impressive state prior to budget cuts. An improvement to these resources, said Hubley, enables students to be more competent readers, allowing them to thrive in their studies.

The concept of teamwork ran throughout her speech.

"Today, I am honored... as my colleagues have placed their confidence in me to be vice chair. It is such a great privilege to serve on the School Committee with such a devoted team," she said. Her "team" of School Committee colleagues is doing its part in ensuring a high level of education for every Quincy child to "help our students be prepared for whatever direction they choose for their future." Administrators and support staff were also praised and heralded for their dedication.

"I am so impressed by the level of concern and passion that is expressed for the well-being and future of our students. It inspires me every day."

ASPEN—an online tool which allows for communication between teachers and parents—has been "exciting and challenging" and has proven to be a valuable tool for tracking and monitoring student progress according to Hubley who stated that keeping technology in schools advanced and up-to-date was "very important in helping our students achieve in the world today."

After highlighting recent upgrades, she discussed areas that students needed assistance in. "Math literacy continues to be something that needs to be assessed," she said. "Our Teaching and Learning Subcommittee looks at data, school improvement plans, and curriculum goals to help us know how to better assist our students and professional staff with this goal."

The topic of school security was addressed and thanks were given to Director of Safety and Security Michael Draicchio, who, in conjunction with the mayor, were able to improve the safety of Quincy's schools greatly. "We now have state of the art equipment with new doors and locks, teacher lanyards with door swipe cards," she said. "We can't be too careful with our schools. We will always continue to evolve and improve security as we go forward."

Her work with Quincy Public Schools hasn't been restricted to the School Committee. Prior to becoming a member, she volunteered by helping children in media centers as well being a sponsor for the North Quincy High School Senior Stay Out in 2013.

"I spent nine years... working alongside parents, grandparents, and families at the Harvest Festivals, Field Days, and many other school events," she said.

Before leaving the podium she expressed her gratitude to the crowd. "I bring this experience, our experience, with me in my job of School Committee to help us focus on issues that matter most to you. I am so very thankful for this opportunity and most of all your confidence as vice chair. I look forward to the coming years."

Hubley was nominated for vice chairwoman by Isola. The nomination was seconded by Paul Bregoli. Her selection was unanimous with votes by committee colleagues David McCarthy, Anne Mahoney and Noel DiBona along with Koch who serves as chairman of the school committee.

"Kathy attends every event that affects Quincy Public Schools because she wants to be there and because she wants to know what's going on in our city and how it affects the City of Quincy's children," said Isola. "She's dependable, she's thoughtful, and she's most of all open-minded... it's indeed been an honor and a pleasure to serve with Kathy. I know that she will lead us forward."

"I am proud to not only call Kathy my colleague but also my good friend," said Bregoli.

Hubley is currently chair of the Health, Transportation, and Safety Subcommittee, along with being a member of the Budget and Finance, School Facilities and Security, Teaching and Learning, and Rules Post Audit and Oversight subcommittees.

School Committee members sworn in to new four-year terms were Barbara Isola, Anne Mahoney and newcomer Noel DiBona. Nine incumbent city councillors were also sworn in.

Flu Season In Full Swing

Flu Shot Single Best Way To Prevent Illness

By SCOTT JACKSON

After getting off to a late start, the flu season is in full swing and residents who haven't gotten flu shots are being advised to do so.

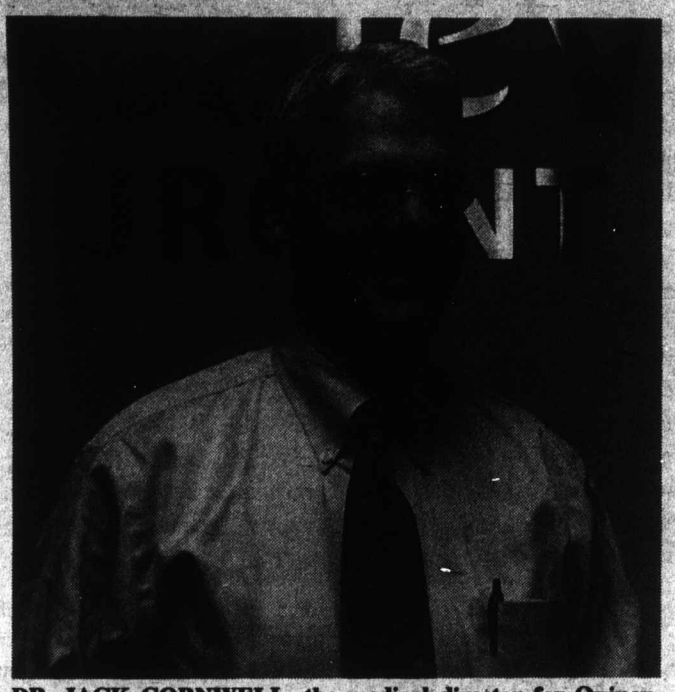

The flu season usually starts earlier in fall, but Dr. Jack Cornwell, the medical director for Quincy-based CareWell Urgent Care, said this year's flu season didn't begin until the middle of December.

"We had not really seen much cases until a week or ten days ago – we're just coming into it," Cornwell said in recent phone interview. "It's a little later this year than usual. A lot of people are reluctant to get a flu shot but it's the single best way to prevent the flu from spreading. More and more people find flu shots polarizing. But the evidence says it protects you. You might still get the flu, but it will be less intense."

Once someone is infected with the flu virus, the antiviral drug Tamiflu can be taken. While the drug can help reduce the length of the infection, it's only effective if taken shortly after symptoms begin, Cornwell explained, and most people aren't able to tell if they have the flu until that initial period has passed.

"Tamiflu is effective within the first 24 to 48 hours," Cornwell said. "Most people don't connect what's going on that early."

Part of the reason people might not realize they have the flu is because they may mistake their symptoms with that of a bad cold. Symptoms of the flu can include a dry chest cough, fever, fatigue, and body aches, while cold symptoms are generally milder and include a runny and congested nose.

DR. JACK CORNWELL, the medical director for Quincy-based CareWell Urgent Care, says getting a flu shot is the single best way to prevent the flu.

"A bad cold is more of an infection of the upper sinuses. The flu settles into the respiratory system," Cornwell said.

Cornwell added that other symptoms associated with the flu, or the so-called "24-hour flu," such as nausea, vomiting, and diarrhea, are actually caused by a different virus other than the flu virus.

Those who do have the flu, Cornwell said, should make sure to stay properly hydrated, can take anti-inflammatories (such as ibuprofen or naproxen) or acetaminophen, and should make sure to practice good hygiene, especially hand washing. Medical attention may also be required.

Hand washing should be practiced by those trying to avoid the flu, Cornwell added, because it can often be spread through contacted with objects such as phones, office supplies, and shopping carts.

At risk individuals, including children, the elderly, those with weakened immune systems, and pregnant women, and those planning on traveling abroad, are among those most in need of flu shots, as are people who are in close contact with any of those groups. Those looking to find the vaccine can contact their primary care physician or visit flu.gov for a list of providers, such as pharmacies and grocery stores.

Antiquated Space Heater Sparks 2-Alarm House Fire

By KRIS KALABOKAS

A two-alarm house fire which broke out early Saturday morning at 139 West Squantum St. has left five people homeless and has caused an estimated $200,000 in damages to a single-family home according to Quincy Fire Chief Joseph Barron.

Following an investigation by the Massachusetts State Fire Marshal's office, an antiquated space heater is being blamed for the blaze which began at 4:23 a.m. on an enclosed porch. The heater was left on—unattended—while the room was not in use.

Quincy firefighters responded to the call by 4:26 a.m. and requested additional coverage from the Boston Fire Department to battle the blaze due to chilling temperatures at 4:35 a.m.

It took 27 firefighters roughly one hour to contain the fire.

According to Barron, the house was not completely destroyed, however it was left in unlivable condition. Surrounding properties were not damaged.

One of the occupants, John Horrigan, was woken up in the early morning by the sound of smoke detectors and made his way to the porch, however it was too late. The fire had spread to the neighboring living room and quickly engulfed more of the home. The family escaped outside only to be blasted with frigid winds.

Of the five people in the residence, three were sent to Quincy Medical Center as a precautionary measure. John and Kim Horrigan, along with their 14-month-old son, were later released to the care of their two in-laws.

A recent fire caused by a candle left on a radiator which subsequently fell into a laundry basket at 33 Payne St. caused $50,000 in damages to a four-family home and displaced five adults. There were no injuries, however Barron is urging Quincy residents to be "vigilant" during the winter months, and to be cautious when using space heaters, candles, and other heating devices during cold snaps, making sure to never leave them running unsupervised.

North Quincy Girls Basketball Resumes Play This Week

More Sports Pages 15-18

By BILL GRIFFIN

After more than a full week's layoff, North Quincy's girls basketball team will rely on the inside-outside combination of senior guard Jane Minton and senior forward Maya Umoren when it resumes its Patriot League schedule this week.

The Red Raiders had 10 days without a game after their appearance in the Duxbury Holiday Tournament on Dec. 28. Last week's game against Silver Lake was postponed due to the snowstorm and rescheduled for Jan. 13 at North at 6:30 p.m.

Minton has been outstanding through five games for North. She was averaging nearly 11 points, four rebounds, six assists and three steals per game. She led her team to come-from-behind wins in the fourth quarter against Marshfield and Quincy.

She was named to the all-tourney team in The Duxbury Holiday Tourney after scoring 25 points and playing strong defense in tournament games against Marshfield and Duxbury.

Posting a double-double in one game is an accomplishment for most players. Umoren was averaging a double-double of 13 points and 10 rebounds through the first five games.

Junior forward Camille Mullaney has been a force on the boards, averaging five rebounds per game. Senior guard Haley McKay returned from a one-game absence in the opener against Plymouth North and has played excellent defense, averaging five steals per game.

Senior guard Grace Geary averaged 17 points, five, rebounds and six steals while shooting 57 percent in two games of action.

The Red Raiders were 3-2 after last week's play and could have easily been 4-1. They led from start to finish against Plymouth North before losing in OT. The Eagles forced the overtime with a long three-pointer at the final buzzer.

North is 1-0 in Patriot League Fisher Division play and will travel to Pembroke Friday night (6:30 p.m. start).

Quincy Mutual Upbeat On Downtown Project

By SCOTT JACKSON

Top officials at Quincy Mutual remain optimistic about the $1.6 billion Quincy Center redevelopment project, despite the ongoing delay in construction at the Merchants Row site.

Quincy Mutual, whose Washington Street headquarters are located just steps away from the 1400 block of Hancock Street where Merchants Row will be constructed, was one of the earliest backers of the downtown project. The insurance company has nearly $20 million invested in the project. Jim Moran, the firm's executive vice president, secretary and general counsel, said Quincy Mutual is optimistic that Merchants Row, known as Block 4 in the development plans, will be constructed.

"We're very optimistic and hopeful that the project, specifically Block 4 – Merchants Row, can be reconstructed and resurrected so that a good mixed-use building can be constructed. But it's got to be reformulated and that's the process that's underway now. Having a good apartment, retail, and parking facility would be excellent for the City of Quincy and the citizens and we're hopeful that in due course we can all see something to be proud of," Moran told The Sun in a recent interview.

"We have been very involved in talking with Mayor [Thomas] Koch and the city administration and we're so impressed with the leadership they are showing – that the mayor is showing – in terms of moving this forward. But, like in any major development, there are fits and starts. There are ups and downs. That's the point of the project we're now at. Things have come to a stop. We're hopeful we can see it restarted and the mayor is doing everything he can to move it forward in that direction."

Downtown developer Street-Works stopped work on Merchants Row in the fall, citing a spike in construction costs throughout greater Boston. In December, Koch told the Quincy Chamber of Commerce he would request the City Council alter Quincy's land disposition agreement (LDA) with the developer to reduce the amount of money Street-Works would be obligated to pay the city.

Doug Briggs, Quincy Mutual's president and CEO, said changes are needed to the LDA to make the project feasible financially. Construction, he added, could begin by the end of this year.

"The mayor's message at the recent chamber breakfast was exactly right and that is that in order for this project to move forward in 2014 everyone with a stake in it is going to have to take less and work together as a community," Briggs said.

"If everyone does that, Merchants Row should be a financially viable project that a restructured development partnership can actually build despite these setbacks. A realistic timetable to restart construction, we believe, is by year-end. If this happens, we will realize a transformation of Quincy Center that will make us all proud."

Quincy Mutual's investment in the downtown was a first for the company, which had invested in real estate before but not in any development projects. Both Briggs and Moran said the project's success is important to the company.

"We've been here since 1851 and the city is very important to us. It has a lot of culture and an awful lot to offer and that's why we made the equity investment. It's not the type of investment we would normally make as an insurance company but we've done it because this is where we live and work," Briggs said. "It's really important for us that the project is successful."

"This is our home community and a quarter of employees in this building are residents of the City of Quincy and another quarter of our employees live in the adjacent cities and towns," Moran added. "What happens in this area is so critical to the welfare of this company and our employees and policyholders."

Street-Works' project, Briggs said, is needed to revitalize Quincy Center. The downtown had been an attraction for shoppers from throughout the South Shore until the South Shore Plaza in Braintree opened in 1961.

"When I was a little kid before the South Shore Plaza came into existence downtown Quincy, as everyone knows, was very vibrant and a really nice place to shop for people all over the South Shore. It wasn't just Quincy residents. If you lived in Hingham or Cohasset or Scituate or Marshfield you'd come to Quincy to shop," Briggs said.

"When the plaza came in in the '60s, the downtown sort of deteriorated over many, many years so that at this point it really needs more than just a Band-Aid because the people in the city have tried to improve the city many times. But now the mayor is right – it has to be something big. It has to be more than a Band-Aid. It has to be a big project to revitalize the whole downtown."

Moran said Quincy Mutual believes Street-Works' plan to create a mixed-use development with space for residential, office, and retail use, is the correct way to move forward.

"We believe in the vision that Street-Works Development has outlined, which is to have a vibrant community of residents, with a retail shopping and office mixture, with the type of retail present that people need to live their everyday lives. The dry cleaner and the fruit store, as well as the restaurants and entertainment facilities," Moran said.

"We think that's the way forward and Street-Works and the city administration have certainly embraced that idea and we've been supportive of that idea. We think that's the right idea. It's all about the execution though at this point and that's very hard to do. The larger the project the harder it is and we've got here in Quincy Center a huge project."

Police Nab Bank Robber 'Red Handed'

A 35-year-old Roxbury man was arraigned Monday for the Sunday afternoon robbery of the Citizens Bank in the Stop & Shop supermarket on Newport Avenue.

Walter Cobbs, who was captured only 45 minutes after making off with the cash, was caught literally red handed after a red dye pack contained in the money bag burst, covering him in ink.

He was held on $25,000 cash bail and has been charged with unarmed robbery. His case has been continued to Feb. 3 according to Quincy District Court Assistant Clerk Robert Bloom.

Quincy Police Captain John Dougan said Cobbs was apprehended at 1:25 p.m. at the intersection of Beale and Chapman Street after officers spotted the heavyset white male wearing a white hoodie with red dye covering his hands and shoes.

According to police, Cobbs, who took a taxi to Stop & Shop, approached the teller and whispered "this is a robbery" at roughly 12:45 p.m. After getting the loot he escaped in the cab waiting outside the market. While in the back seat, the dye pack exploded dousing the suspect in highly visible red ink. Cobbs then fled on foot—without the money—across Newport Avenue but didn't make it far before patrolling officers spotted him.

"It was kind of hard not to notice him," said Dougan.

O'Donnell Rotary Club Speaker Jan. 28

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell will be the guest speaker at the Quincy Rotary Club Meeting Tuesday, Jan. 28 at 12:15 p.m. at the Quincy Neighborhood Club located at 27 Glendale Rd.

Salvation Army Kettle Drive Down $10,000

Donations Can Still Be Made At www.onlineredkettle.org/Quincy

By EMILY ARMSTRONG

With a late start to the Red Kettle Fundraiser and cold weather adding to the Quincy Salvation Army's list of fundraising challenges this past holiday season, the organization will be looking to hold another fundraiser come spring to make up the eight percent decrease in donations.

"We started the season off 33% down from last years numbers but made up some ground ending the Red Kettle season down only eight percent from last year," said Quincy Salvation Army Captain Timothy Ross. "The majority of it is because of the late start this year along with the few weeks of really cold weather we had. We are looking to do a fundraiser sometime in the spring so we don't have to cut funding in areas."

This year, the Salvation Army was a part of the annual Christmas Parade. For the first time the organization had their canteen truck riding along the parade route in hopes to raise money and make up for the week they lost due to the late start.

Last year they raised a little over $134,000, which is approximately $10,000 more than they collected this year. At the beginning of the season Ross said they had a goal to raise $150,000, the seasons final total is $123,374.77, which goes towards toys for children, clothes for children and adults, food, and other necessities throughout the year.

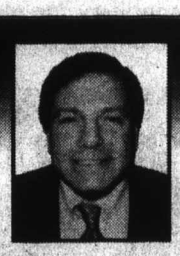

According to Ross this year has been a big year for mail in donations, with the organization receiving more donations via mail then in past years.

"We've seen an increase in mail in donations this year, they definitely have gone up," said Ross. "People can still donate, they can donate throughout the year, and we can always use food pantry donations as well."

"Overall I think the season went well. The shortage in time hindered our fundraising along with the couple of weeks with cold weather but we are very thankful to the Quincy community for all of their support and help, and we look forward to continuing to work with the City of Quincy and the Quincy communities," Ross added.

For more information visit the Quincy Headquarters at 6 Baxter St. from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday or call (617) 472-2345. Online Red Kettle donations can still be made at www.onlineredkettle.org/Quincy

QUICK AND EASY REPAIR

The quick, relatively inexpensive, and painless form of tooth repair known as "bonding" enables the dentist to repair surface irregularities in teeth in a single visit. Patients with chipped, cracked, discolored, and gapped teeth are encouraged to take advantage of this opportunity. The bonding process begins by etching the tooth surface with a very mild acid solution to enable the bonding material to better adhere to the treated area. Then, the bonding material, which consists of composite resins carefully matched to the natural color of the treated tooth, is applied as needed. After the resin hardens, it can be shaped, contoured, and polished to provide a seamless repair that has the appearance of a natural tooth.

Do you have a chipped, broken, or stained tooth? Dental bonding could make it look like new again. We are a dental practice devoted to restoring and enhancing the natural beauty of your smile using conservative, state-of-the-art procedures that will result in a beautiful, long-lasting smile! We want to serve you in the most caring, conscientious way possible. Our staff is committed to providing you and your loved ones with excellent dentistry. We are located at 44 Greenleaf Street. For more information, or to schedule an appointment, please call 617 479-6220. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com

P.S. Bonding allows for spot repair in cases in which patients do not require more comprehensive treatment such as veneers.

Richardson Rallies Red Raiders Past Braintree

North Quincy (6-0) Hosts Pembroke Friday

By BILL GRIFFIN

There are teams that race off to a 6-0 start by scheduling non-league cupcakes. On the other hand, there are teams like North Quincy that schedule the most difficult opponents possible and still rattle off six consecutive wins to start the season.

North made it six straight behind a tremendous performance by Kyle Richardson who fought off a hamstring injury and rallied the Red Raiders from a five-point deficit by scoring 12 straight points in the fourth quarter for a thrilling 66-64 non-league road win last week against Braintree.

It was a fitting rematch of the second-round contest between the two in the state tournament last March which had fans standing on Hunt Street waiting to get into the game.

"It was a great effort by Kyle," said coach Kevin Barrett. "I also think the poise and experience we gained from playing in big games last year helped us at the end."

Barrett, whose club is now 41-9 over the past three seasons, is right when he points to balance being the key ingredient to his team's fast start which has included quality wins over Brockton, Quincy, Weymouth, East Boston and Braintree.

"Every night it's been someone different," he said.

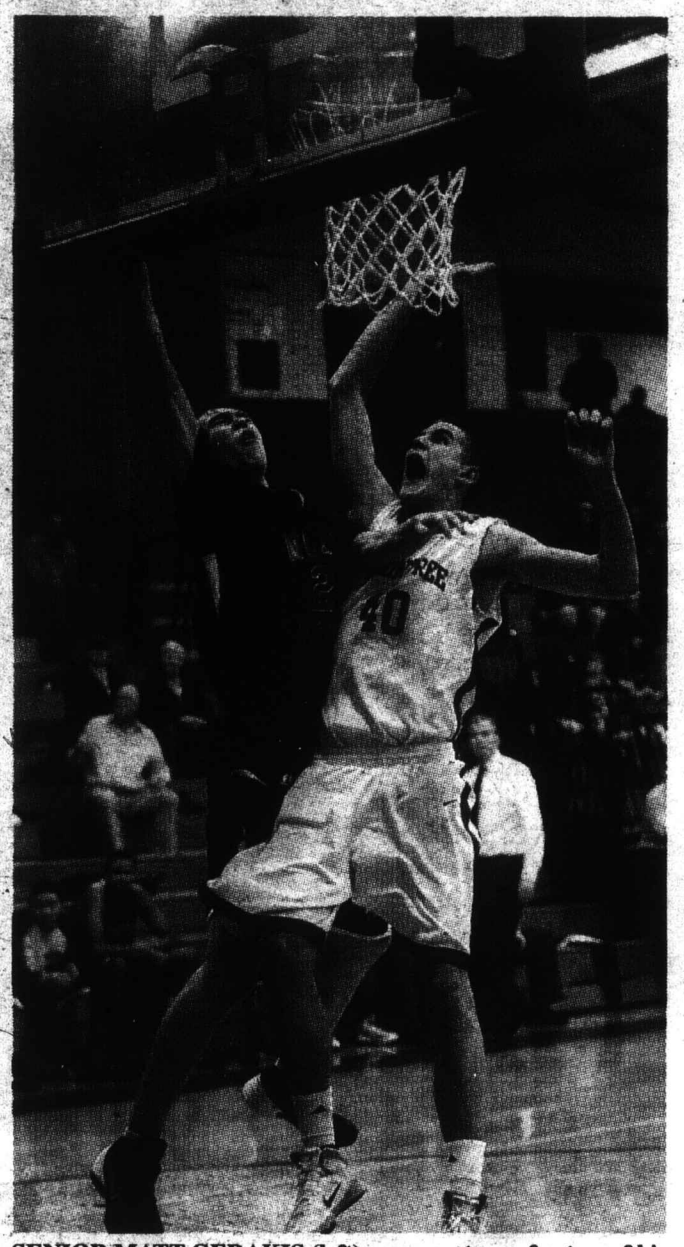

That is true, but Richardson is indispensable. North cannot go at full speed without him. The senior point guard is a lockdown defender and a dead-sure ball handler. He can get to the basket, find the open man, hit a three and control a game.

And he is tough. Against Braintree, he went out with a hamstring problem in the third period. A four- point lead turned into a five-point deficit. Barrett thought Richardson was probably done for the game. Then the two had a conversation.

"He tapped me on the shoulder and told me he wanted to give it a shot," said Barrett.

Just as he did last year against Scituate in the final period when he brought North back from a 14-point hole, he delivered down the stretch against Braintree. He had 13 in the fourth period, 12 points in succession. All the points came on drives and foul shots. He simply got to the basket. He finished at the hoop or he was fouled. There were no jump shots, no pretty stuff from the outside. The smallest player on the floor won the game at the rim.

"He just attacked. Everything came off penetration. He really willed us to the win," said Barrett.

Efthim Butka led North in scoring with 19 while senior Matt Gerakis had 16 points and nine rebounds in an invaluable performance. Richardson finished with 16.

North's road game against Silver Lake last Friday was postponed due to the snowstorm. A makeup date was not announced. The week-long layoff came at just the right time. It gave Richardson time to rest his hamstring, and he should be ready when league play resumes this week.

"It has improved every day and I think he should be set to go when we start up again," said Barrett.

During the six-game run, it has been a different star each night. Against Brockton and Braintree, it was Richardson. Against Quincy, it was Butka going off for 27. Against East Boston, it was senior center Anthony Green who anchored the defense and scored 19 points. Against Weymouth, it was sharpshooter Jackie Chen with 15 points and active all-around game. There are a lot of weapons here.

The balance was especially helpful in a stretch when North played three times in four days, including two with less than 24 hours rest between the games.

"We knew this would be a crucial stretch, not only because of the quality of the opponents, but because the schedule was crowded at one point," said Barrett. "I like the balance that we've shown. I like the fact that we can go to different people. It's great to see it this early in the season."

Gerakis has been a steady shooter, rebounder, and defender. Solomon Umoren has started and played well. Chen has been a zone-buster off the bench. Vinny Tran and Greg Clarke have done the hard work on defense and off the boards. Tyshawn Moore and Dhaaky Drake have played well in stretches.

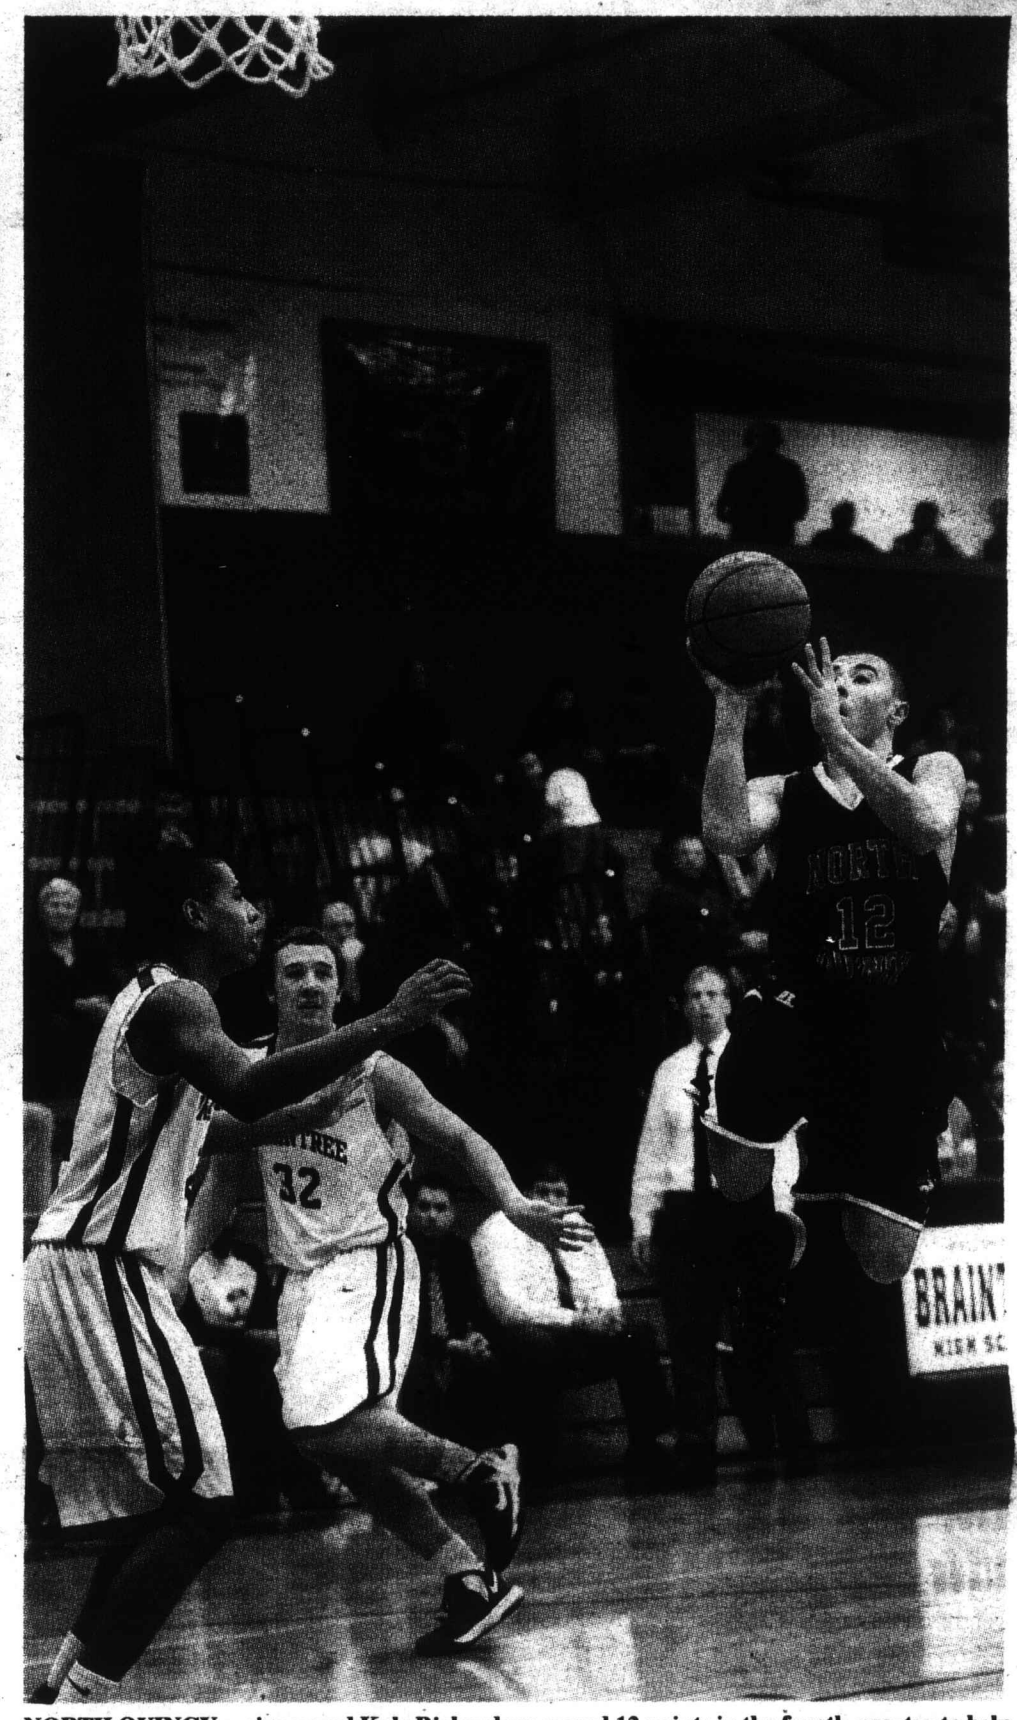

"We've been able to develop depth as the season has gone along," said Barrett. "Matt Gerakis has been excellent. He has a good all-around game, and he's been able to give us whatever we need in any given game."

The difficult non-league schedule, which also includes a game with Dorchester and two against perennial power Wareham, was charted with the tournament in mind.

"There are no soft touches, no nights off in the tournament. Everybody is good. I want to get us ready for that. The league gives us tough test and I wanted that in the non-leaguers as well," said Barrett.

The Red Raiders' Jan. 3rd road game against Silver Lake that was postponed due to the snow storm will be played Thursday, Jan. 30 at 6:30 p.m.

Quincy Girls Bow To Brockton, 51-30

Presidents Visit Hanover Friday

By BILL GRIFFIN

It has been an interesting start for Quincy's girls basketball team. There has been a convincing victory, two-razor-thin losses, an injury scare to its standout post player, and continued development of a young, fast squad which is giving ample playing time to four sophomores.

Last week's non-league game against Brockton was a good example. The Boxers shook free of a tenacious Quincy defense in the fourth period to open up a close contest and stop the Presidents, 51-30 at the Quincy High Gym.

"I liked our effort and our defense," said coach Jeff Bretsch. "I thought at the beginning of the game that we were maybe hurrying a little, trying to do things too fast. We're working in some young players who I think are going to be really good, and we have to learn to slow things down and make the right decisions."

It was not a good night, but it could have been a lot worse. Sophomore center Nicole Jorgensen, Quincy's single-game record holder in rebounds and blocks, went down with an ankle injury early in the second period with the Presidents trailing, 16-11. She could not put any weight on the injured ankle. It turned out to be a sprain, and she should miss 10 days to two weeks of action.

"Thankfully, it didn't turn out to be a major injury. She's played well early in the season and she's growing as a player every day," said Bretsch.

However, it did force Quincy into an unwanted adjustment in the middle of the game. Jorgensen is at the center of everything Quincy does on both ends of the floor. Quincy's edge on Brockton was its size. That advantage left the court when Jorgensen left the court.

"Early on, I thought our size advantage helped," said Bretsch. "I thought we continued to play good defense, but we lost that height advantage close to the basket."

Seniors Leann McColgan and Caroline McBride stepped up and did a fine job at center for the Presidents. Sophomores Gabby Jerahian, Jill Mulvaney and Alyssa Camara played good games on the wing. Sophomore Kailen Chapple handled the ball well and added strong defense. A three-pointer by Alyssa Lydon, an offensive rebound by Mulvaney and a drive by Kayla McArdle had Quincy within 25-18 at the half.

"We stayed aggressive and our defense created good shots for us," said Bretsch.

The Presidents' best defensive effort came in the third when they held Brockton scoreless over the final 6:42 of the period. Quincy pressed a little, but mostly the Presidents worked hard within their halfcorurt man-to-man, contested every shot and pass, and led by McBride and McColgan, went to the boards as a team against the the quick Boxers.

"The kids really care and you can see that in our defense," said Bretsch. "We struggled at times putting the ball in the hoop, but we had good looks. If we keep getting them, our shots will start to fall."

A Jerahian drive narrowed it to 32-24 after three, but Brockton's offense took over in the final period. The Boxers hit six three-point jump shots for the game, three in the fourth period, and their outside marksmanship put away the game.

"Any time a high-school hits six threes in a game, they are shooting well, and Brockton is a very good shooting team," said Bretsch.

McArdle led Quincy with seven. Lydon, Mulvaney, Jerahian, Jorgensen, McBride, Kerry Phelan, Taylor Parry, Camara, and Chapple also cracked the scoring column for Quincy.

Quincy (1-3) began its season with a solid win over Bridgewater-Raynham, and then lost in overtime to Whitman-Hanson and by one to North Quincy. Against the Panthers, Quincy missed 16 free throws. Against North, Quincy missed 11. If the Presidents make two of those foul shots, they are 3-1.

Jorgensen's absence certainly contributed to the Brockton loss. Bretsch has the kind of team he talked about before the season began. They are fast, they have a lot of guards who can run and handle the ball, and they have terrific senior leadership in Lydon and McArdle. It is still a season of great promise.

"It has been a frustrating start. We lost two games we could easily have won, but I like the way our sophomores have developed and improved," said Brestch. "Our record could easily be better. I think our strength has been our defense. We've contained the opposition well. We've struggled to score, but we have some talented players and I think that will come."

Quincy's game against Scituate, which was postponed last Friday due to the snow storm, will be made up Feb. 20 at Scituate.

Quincy Boys Fall To Weymouth, 64-51

By BILL GRIFFIN

It is more important to be playing well at the end of the season than at the beginning.

Quincy was 2-3 after playing Division 1 powers Bridgewater-Raynham, North Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth in four of its first five games. Quincy won by 19 on the road against B-R, lost to North after holding the lead with just over 2:00 left in the game, and fell to Braintree on a desperation three-pointer as the final buzzer sounded.

Last week, the Presidents saw a second-half comeback fall short in a 64-51 loss on the road to Weymouth.

It has been a challenging beginning, but coach Dave Parry has found out some things about his club, and the early-season baptism against strong non-league opponents should serve the Presidents well when the league schedule resumes this week.

"We knew the non-league schedule would test us," said Parry. "I think it will make us a better team and help us down the road. It's shown us what we need to do to win, and the big thing is we have to bring complete focus to every game. If we don't, we're in trouble."

The key to Quincy's defense is its fullcourt trap. Weymouth handled it well. At the other end, the Wildcats played a patient 3-2 zone designed to force the outside shot and limit Quincy's slashers who love to go to the basket.

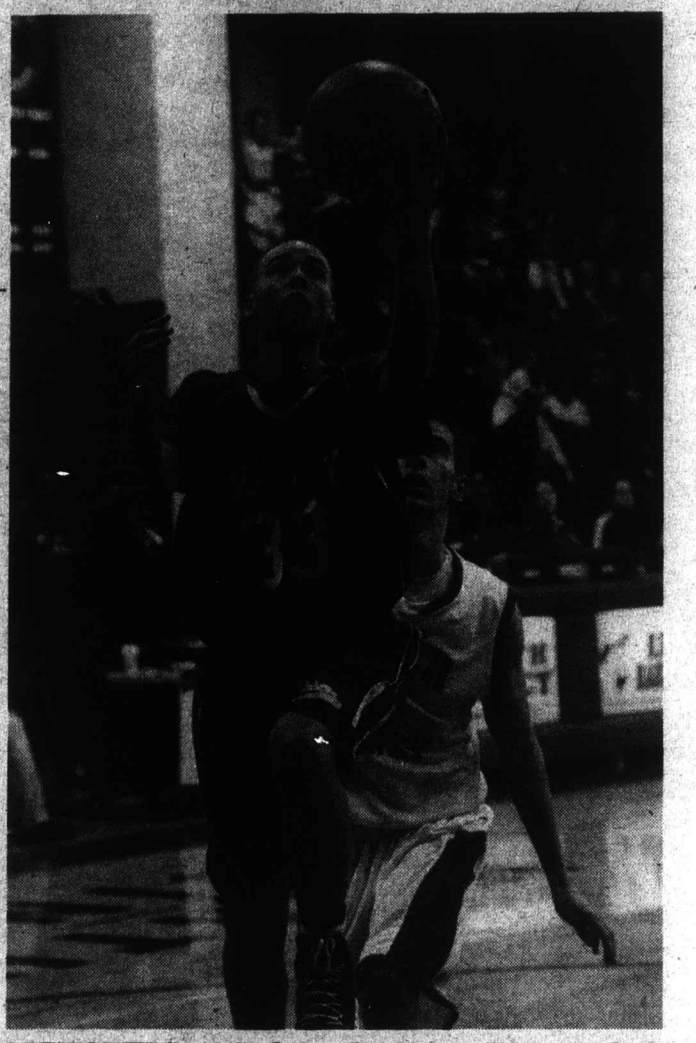

"We have to make better decisions with our press," said Parry. "If we get the steal, that's fine. If we don't, we've made them work to bring the ball up. We don't have to take unnecessary chances.

"On offense against a zone like Weymouth's, we need to be more patient and move the ball for a good shot. They limited us to one shot and I'd like to see us get to the boards a little better."

Weymouth built the lead to 20 in the third period before Quincy roared back into the game. The fullcourt trap produced turnovers, Quincy turned up the game into the fast tempo it likes, and the Presidents converted chances into points.

"I challenged them," said Parry. "I told them we could be embarrassed, or we could make it a game. The kids dug in, didn't give up and fought back into it."

Chris Callahan, who played another strong game off the bench, buried a three and hit a layup in the run which saw the Presidents trim the lead to seven before Weymouth halted the surge.

DREW MYERS and the Quincy Presidents will try to get back on the winning track when they host Hanover Friday night at 6:30 p.m. Quincy Sun File Photo/Robert Bosworth

"We got our energy back. That's the way we have to play," said Parry.

James Lam and Drew Myers each had 12 for the Presidents while Brendan Cunningham added nine.

The biggest bright spots in the early going has been the work of Quincy's bench. Myers, Lam, Cunningham, J.T. Bain and Colin Evans have played as well as expected as starters. Callahan brings energy and defense off the bench. Kevin Williams has also played well in reserve, but the real find of the first five games has been the work of junior point guard Tyler Beach.

"Tyler has really come into his own. I'm very pleased with him," said Parry. "He's smart, he sets up the offense, and he makes sure everybody is in the right spot. He's a good quarterback for the team off the bench. Tyler, Kevin, and Chris have allowed us to expand our depth to at least eight players."

The areas where Parry would like to see improvement are with the basics: rebounding and defense. Without them, a team is going nowhere.

"I want us to buckle down on the defensive end and make better decisions with our press," said Parry. "We can rebound better. I'd like to see us get some second chances off the offensive boards. Against a zone like Weymouth's, we also have to convert our outside shooting."

Last Friday's home game against Scituate was postponed due to the snow storm and was rescheduled for January 16. It would have been an early-season treat against the Sailors who had the best record in the Patriot League a year ago, but Parry was not terribly disappointed with the postponement or with the week-long layoff his team faced.

"I want to get them back in the gym and practice," said Parry. "I want to get them in that routine of games on Tuesdays and Fridays and practices in between. I think we play much better with that pattern. The layoff doesn't concern me. We'll get the work in practice."

It would be a good idea to remember a couple of things about Quincy's start. The Presidents are a Division 2 team that has tested itself against four good Division 1 clubs. That will help in the league and in the tourney. They also could well be 4-1 with a couple of late-game stops. They can shoot, run and pass. The season has just begun.

"It's still a young season," said Parry. "I'd like to see a little more patience, but that will come from the experience we've had playing good teams."

Quincy Sails Past Scituate

HOCKEY

By JOE REARDON

Quincy entered the season with the mantra that it wanted to improve every time the players took to the ice. The Presidents are at the top of their game and looking to get even better after dismantling Patriot League opponent Scituate, 6-2, Saturday night at Hobomock Arena

The Presidents' offense came from an array of players with Pat Donovan and Pat Freeman scoring twice apiece and single tallies added by Mike Pugsley and Brandon Beal. Jake Hallisey continued his torrid offense with four assists for Ted Walsh's squad.

"We're learning how to do that right now," Walsh said of putting teams away. "They executed it perfectly. We made it difficult for them in the neutral zone. They have some big defensemen so we wanted to keep it in low, have the big defensemen chase the puck and see if we could pressure the goalie and put shots on net. I never had the feeling we were in danger of losing the game the way we were playing. They have some really good players so you really don't know what's going to happen."

The victory was a confidence builder over a strong Scituate team that dropped to 3-2-1. Quincy also kept pace with first-place Hanover, which has a two-game lead in the standings.

"That's a really big win for us," said Walsh. "They're a good team and very well coached. They're never really down. They just reload."

Quincy took a 2-1 lead and quickly extended it to 4-1. Walsh believed the Presidents were in complete control as they followed their game plan to the letter. The confidence is flowing in the Quincy locker room.

"We feel as though if we can execute our game plan we can beat anyone," said Walsh.

Quincy/North Quincy Showing Improvement

By BILL GRIFFIN

The signs of improvement are there.

The Quincy/North Quincy girls hockey team hosted its first Holiday Tournament at the Quincy Youth Hockey Arena last week and despite dropping a pair of decisions to Hanover/Cohasset and Weymouth, the hosts showed good progress in the quality of their play.

"The previous week we lost to Medfield and we made some mistakes," said coach Steve Burgio. "We worked hard in practice on positioning and transitions and the girls played much better in the tournament."

Quincy/North, Archbishop Williams, Weymouth and Hanover/Cohasset participated in the tourney.

Quincy/North fell to Hanover/Cohasset, 7-4, but showed good offensive improvement especially on breakouts which they had worked on in practice.

Freshman left wing Riley McLaughlin, who leads the team in scoring with four goals, had a goal and an assist. Sophomore Savannah Flynn also had a goal and an assist while freshman defenseman Kate McGahey added a goal and two assists.

McLaughlin skates with Flynn and Julia Donovan on a line and has showed a good scoring touch through the first six games.

"She has come along quickly. She has a knack for putting the puck in the net," said Burgio.

Burgio has also been happy with the work of McGahey on defense.

"She played forward and defense at the beginning of the year, but I moved her back to defense and she has played well," said Burgio. "She has excellent speed. When she does make a mistake, she has the speed to cover up for it."

Quincy/North played its best game of the season in the second contest of the tournament falling to a strong Weymouth club, 4-1. The hosts were within 2-1 late in the game thanks to a goal from sophomore Maura Crump with an assist to Flynn.

"Maura is another girl who has moved to defense and she has helped us. She will just get better as the season goes on," said Burgio. "I thought the Weymouth game was our best effort of the year. Weymouth has a good team. The girls are starting to put in the system we work on in practice, and their play showed improvement in just a week."

Burgio likes the chemistry of his team. Quincy/North is introducing several young players to varsity hockey, and will likely be a much stronger team over the second half of the season just as they were a year ago.

"The girls have done a lot of off-ice activities together and I think they've bonded as a unit," said Burgio. "As they pick up what we teach about positioning and the varsity game, I think we'll improve. We were strong at the end of last season, and I see the same thing happening this year."

Quincy/North (0-6) is at Whitman-Hanson Wednesday and will host Scituate Saturday night at 7:50 p.m.

Greene Shines But NQ Blanked By Duxbury

By JOE REARDON

Maybe it's just as well that North Quincy had a lackluster 4-0 loss at the hands of Duxbury early in the season rather than further down the schedule with the tournament on horizon.

That's all you can really call Saturday night's Patriot League matchup at The Bog in Kingston where the Red Raiders managed to put just seven shots on Green Dragon goaltender Tucker Kelly while failing to generate anything that resembled a consistent attack on offense. And if not for the slick play of goaltender Nolan Greene, who turned away 37 shots on the night, the score could very even uglier.

The result was a step backwards for the 2-3-1 Red Raiders, but the good news is they don't have to be there long if head coach Matt Gibbons has his way.

"We have to get back to the drawing board a little bit, back to the simple stuff; breaking pucks out, making good passes and understanding where we're supposed to be," said Gibbons. "We were ready for it, we just couldn't handle it. They're better than us. That's what it comes down to. I thought our effort would be a little better than what we showed tonight."

Duxbury took just 31 seconds to get on the board when Nick Marrocco got his stick on an errant pass in front of Greene fired a wrist shot, top shelf for the 1-0 lead. Greene went on to rob Drew Hadley coming down the left wing in the middle of the period and turning aside a wicked slap shot by Matt Saia with 1:12 left in the opening period.

Duxbury continued to beat North Quincy to the puck in the second period, but was unable to put make a dent with Greene holding tough. He smothered a Scott Whear shot on a break down the right wing and had a glove save on Matt Murphy's wrist shot to keep the Red Raiders in the game.

"It would have been 7-0 if it wasn't for Nolan," said Gibbons. "Nolan was the only bright spot. Other than that we played horrible. We were standing around, rimming pucks around and running around."

North Quincy did have its first legitimate scoring opportunity of the game, but Kelly stopped James Doherty's slap shot in the opening minute of the period. Robbie Cameron very nearly tied it with 1:11 left in the second with a shot that Kelly was able to get a pad in front of.

Duxbury finally blew the game open in the third period with a pair of goals on Greene and an empty-net tally.

Max Goldner stuffed a backhand underneath Greene to make it 2-0, 21 seconds into the third and the Green Dragons went up 3-0, 15 seconds later when Saia let loose a slap shot on the fly off a pass from Cam Christenson to beat Greene. Gibbons pulled his goaltender with two minutes remaining in favor of an extra skater and Duxbury was able to add a goal from Conor Rooney with five seconds left in the game.

"They completely outplayed us," said Gibbons. "They were fast. We knew they were going to be fast before we got on the ice with them. When we got on the ice we got nervous or what-not. We didn't play well tonight at all.

"We knew it was going to be a really tough test. I just thought our effort wasn't there tonight. Being 1-0 after two (periods), Nolan was stealing us a game. Duxbury's good but we should have generated more than five shots in two periods."

5 Presidents Medal At Auerbach Meet, Emily Bryson 2nd In Holiday Challenge

TRACK

Time Takes Toll On Brick Walkway

Q: Years ago I laid down a brick walkway in my backyard using old building bricks. Lately I noticed that the bricks have become uneven. Some are crooked, but in other areas the bricks are sinking slightly, creating dips in the walkway. What's going on? Can I fix this problem? -- Chet B., Ocala, Fla.

A: Walkways built with bricks (also known as pavers) can become uneven over time due to normal ground movement or a shift in the sand base on which such walkways are typically built. This leads to the problems you've described, with bricks that are out of alignment and a few depressed areas in the walkway.

If the uneven bricks don't present a safety problem, consider delaying a repair on these sections. You can try to move the bricks back into alignment, but that might not work without undertaking more time-consuming or costly repairs.

The depressed bricks can be lifted back into place by repairing the base underneath them. Use a pry bar or other lever to carefully lift up a sunken brick. Then, using one end of a sturdy piece of wood such as a two by four, tamp the existing sand down into place.

Put the brick back into the tamped-down section, tapping with a mallet if it doesn't go in. Measure the different in height between the sunken brick and the surrounding bricks. Remove the sunken brink and fill the section with sand (that has rocks and larger particles screened out of it) up to the height of the measurement you took. Tamp down the new sand and remeasure the height, adding sand if necessary to bring the brick level.

Once the brick is in place and flush with the surrounding bricks, pour sand over and around the repaired brick so that it fills the crevices. Use a broom to sweep sand from the top of the bricks and into the crevices.

HOME TIP: Pull or treat weeds that spring up between paving bricks as soon as possible, before their roots have time to spread. This helps keep a brick walkway even over time.

Conway, Bank Of Canton New Mortgage Affiliation

Jack Conway & Company announces a new mortgage affiliation with The Bank of Canton.

"Entering into a marketing relationship with this strong community lender will expand the home financing options for our Conway buyers and sellers," said Conway CEO/ President Carol Bulman. "We will be able to offer The Bank of Canton's competitive rates, its wide range of conventional and government loans, and the 175-year reputation of one of the premier mortgage providers in the Commonwealth."

"The combined efforts of Jack Conway, Realtor and The Bank of Canton will be a great fit," said Bank of Canton President and CEO Stephen Costello. "Both companies place the customer first, and we've been deeply rooted in our communities for many years."

Bank of Canton Senior VP George DeMello said he is excited about the opportunities the affiliation with Conway will bring to his organization.

"We are thrilled to team up with the sales agents, managers and staff of Jack Conway & Company," said DeMello. "Our mortgage products will be offered to the customers of the 713 agents in Conway sales offices from Boston to Cape Cod. We are proud to enter into this marketing relationship with a longstanding leader in the real estate industry."

Established in Canton, Mass. in 1835, the Bank of Canton was the 23rd financial institution in America. Since then the firm expanded its residential lending capability by opening full-service branches, mortgage centers and stand-alone ATMs in Canton, Brookline, Quincy, Randolph, Auburn, Marshfield and Norwood. It was named the No. 1 Mass-Housing Lender in Massachusetts in 2011.

"The Bank of Canton and Jack Conway, Realtor have a lot in common" said Bulman. "We are both locally owned and operated companies with reputations for personalized customer service and fair dealings. Working together, we will make the home ownership dreams and refinancing goals of our borrowers a reality now and in the future."

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Tuesday, December 31, 2013, at approximately 9:11 A.M., a resident called Quincy Police Communications to report that a male and a female, parked in a gray Jeep Cherokee in the lot of the Franklin Street Eastern Bank, were acting strangely. The caller said that the suspects were covering the license plates of the Jeep with paper. The caller added that the suspects drove away when she confronted them and asked why they were covering the plates. A description of the male and female suspect was provided by the caller. Numerous Police units were dispatched to the area to look for the suspect vehicle.

Within minutes, Officer Gregg Hartnett observed a male matching the description in the parking lot of Bridgewater Credit Union at 213 Independence Avenue, which was just up the street from where the suspects were originally spotted. The male suspect avoided eye contact as he walked past the bank entrance, walking down Lurton Street. Officer Hartnett requested an additional unit prior to stopping the male suspect. Officer Paul Matthews quickly arrived on scene and the Officers then approached the male, using the loud speaker from the cruiser to instruct the suspect to stop and remove his hands from his pockets.

Once the suspect complied, the Officers approached him and noticed that the suspect had make-up on his neck and chin, partially covering a tattoo on his neck and chin. When asked where he was coming from, the suspect said that he was in the area for a job interview, had an argument with his girlfriend and went for a walk to "cool off." When asked about the make-up, the suspect said it was for his job interview. The suspect confirmed that he was parked in the area of the Eastern Bank, stating, "I had an appointment for drug rehab in Boston."

Based on the suspect's discrepancies in his responses, the make-up and lack of explanation, his matching the description given by the original caller, Officer Matthews read the suspect his Miranda rights. The Officers asked the suspect to recount where he was prior to being stopped. He said that he and his girlfriend were coming from Stoughton and got off the highway to buy cigarettes, but realized he didn't have any money. He said he pulled into the parking lot to fix a brake light bulb on his car.

The Officers found this to be suspect since it would be difficult for a driver to know he had a bulb out unless someone told him. When asked if he had the packaging for the new bulb or had the old bulb, the suspect said it was just a loose wire. He said this led to an argument with his girlfriend, so he pulled over in the Credit Union lot to cool off.

LT. DAN MINTON

Sergeant Dan Flaherty responded to the area and spotted a female operating a Jeep matching the description exiting the parking lot adjacent to the Credit Union. The Sergeant then pulled over the vehicle and the female suspect immediately said, "What's wrong Officer, I know I have a suspended license." She appeared to be extremely nervous. She too was given her Miranda warnings and she stated she would talk. When asked who she was with and where they were coming from, the female suspect said she was with her boyfriend (providing his name which matched the name Officers' Hartnett and Matthews had stopped) and that they pulled into the parking lot because he was "sick." She said he went for a walk. When asked about the license plate being covered, the female suspect denied concealing her registration plate.

Sergeant Flaherty examined the front license plate and observed a torn piece of white paper still attached to the plate. When told of the Sergeant's belief that they were about to rob a bank, the female suspect became quiet and then said she no longer wished to talk. Sergeant Flaherty placed the female suspect, a 25 year old Stoughton resident, under arrest for "Operating a Motor Vehicle with a Suspended License and Impeding/Misleading a Police Investigation."

A search inside the Jeep uncovered a torn sheet of white paper that matched the corner piece that was found on the license plate. There was also one black latex glove on the front passenger seat. Sergeant Flaherty proceeded to Officer Hartnett's location and compared information given by the suspects. When confronted with the issue of covering up the license plate, the male suspect denied doing this, then demanded to see the paper that was used.

Officer Matthews then told him that a witness saw him concealing the plate with tape and the suspect retorted, "She didn't see me putting tape on, she saw me taking it off." Sergeant Flaherty then told the suspect he just admitted that the plate was concealed at some point. The suspect looked confused and changed his story, stating that he was taking garbage off the plate that somehow got stuck on it.

The male suspect, a 38 year old Stoughton resident (they live together) was placed under arrest for, "Misleading/Impeding a Police Investigation, Conspiracy and Attempt to Commit a Crime (Unarmed Robbery). During a search of the suspect, Officer Matthews found one black latex glove (of the same type found in the Jeep Cherokee) in the suspect's sock. Later during booking, Officer Terry Hack found a second black latex glove in the pant leg of the suspect.

Sergeant Flaherty then met with the caller, who said she was in the parking lot walking her dog when she first observed the gray Jeep Cherokee illegally parked in the lot. She stated that the Jeep was backed up against a dumpster. She could not observe the rear of the vehicle but noticed that the front license plate was completely concealed with a white piece of paper. She stated that a female was in the passenger seat and a male was pacing back and forth around the outside of vehicle. She stated that male was skinny, pale faced and looked "very suspicious." She stated the male appeared to be "tinkering" around the rear of the vehicle. She became concerned that they were "up to something." She approached the male and told him that he was in a private lot and he immediately became nervous and stated he was fixing his car. The male yelled for the female to get in the driver's seat which she did. The male entered the passenger seat of the Jeep and they left the lot. Based on their suspicious actions near the bank, the caller notified the police of her observations. Based on the inconsistent and false statements, the overt act of concealing the license plate, the cover-up makeup worn to conceal his tattoos, and the suspicious activity in the area of both the Eastern Bank and the Bridgewater Credit Union, all Officers involved believed that the suspects were planning to rob either the bank or the Credit Union. Nice Work!

"A Midwife's Tale" will be the second film in this season's Winter Movie Series of Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills, co-sponsored by Milton's First Congregational Church.

The film, part of the series theme: "Strong and Funny Women," will be screened Saturday, Jan. 25th at 7 p.m. (doors open at 6:45 p.m.) in Huntington Hall of the First Congregational Church, 495 Canton Ave., Milton, with entry at the rear door.

The film series is open to the public.

"A Midwife's Tale" is a docudrama that tells the story of two remarkable women: an 18th century midwife and healer who kept an unusual and thorough journal of her experiences, and the 20th century historian who brought her words to life. The original book by Martha Ballard is a treasure chest of what life was like in the chaotic young nation and the 'northern frontier' of Maine in the late 1700s, as seen through a woman's eyes. The film is the result of eight years of painstaking study of Ballard's diary and research by historian Laurel Thatcher Ulrich.

The donation for admission is $3 per person, or two for $5. Advance reservations get a free popcorn or bottle of water.

The next film, "The Jewish Mother in Cinema," will be on Feb. 15th.

To order tickets in advance or for more information, call 617-698-3394.

A Better Financial Plan

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

According to a 2013 survey by the Employee Benefit Research Institute, "the percentage of workers confident about having enough money for a comfortable retirement is essentially unchanged from the record lows observed in 2011." Only 13 percent are very confident of being able to afford a comfortable retirement, while 28 percent are not at all confident.

If you are among those with lower financial confidence and you haven't started to save for retirement already, now is the time to begin — no matter what your age. If retirement is near, you'll want to jump into the fast lane right away. If you're younger and retirement seems a lifetime away, it's still in your best interest to begin saving now, as compound interest will work to your advantage. Experts agree that saving when you're young will make a world of difference when the time comes to draw on your retirement savings.

A great place to start figuring out how much you will need for retirement is to learn how much you could expect from Social Security. You can do that in minutes with Social Security's online Retirement Estimator.

The Retirement Estimator offers an instant and personalized estimate of your future Social Security retirement benefits based on your earnings record. Try it out at www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator.

We encourage saving for retirement, but there are reasons to save for every stage of life. A great place to go for help is www.mymoney.gov. Whether you are planning to buy a home, balancing your checkbook, or investing in your 401(k) plan, the resources on www.mymoney.gov can help you.

Another excellent resource is the Ballpark E$timator at www.choosetosave.org/ballpark. This online tool takes complicated issues, like projected Social Security benefits and earnings assumptions on savings, and turns them into language and numbers that are easy to understand.

OBITUARIES

Winifred T. Tikkanen, 85

WINIFRED T. TIKKANEN

A funeral Mass for Winifred T. (Hernon) Tikkanen, 85, of Cambridge and formerly West Quincy was celebrated Monday at St. Mary's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Tikkanen died peacefully Dec. 30 at home, surrounded by her loving family.

She was born and raised in Jamaica Plain and was educated in Boston schools. She earned her B.S. in education from Salem State Teachers College in 1950. Mrs. Tikkanen lived in Quincy for 50 years and moved to Cambridge four years ago to be closer to her family.

She was a business education teacher in Boston area schools, most notably for 28 years at North Quincy High School, retiring in 1993. Throughout her life, her vocation was always the teaching of young people and encouraging their advancement in education.

Mrs. Tikkanen was a member of the Quincy Retired Teachers Association, the Quincy Catholic Club, St. Mary's Parish in Quincy and St. Paul Parish in Cambridge. She was a committed supporter of mothers' and women's rights and economic and social justice for all.

Beloved wife of the late Werner A. Tikkanen. Devoted mother of Mary T. Hall and her husband Gerard of Chelmsford, Ellen C. Tikkanen and her husband Joseph Barry of Brookline, and Ann C. Tikkanen and her husband Mark L. Sullivan of Cambridge. Loving grandmother of Thomas Hall, Joseph Hall, 1st Lt., U.S. Marine Corps, Andrew Hall, Delia Sanders, and Catherine and Theresa Sullivan.

Dear sister of Catherine (Hernon) Devine of Hingham, and cousin of Joseph O'Donoghue and his wife Maryann (Nancy). She was predeceased by her sisters Mary (Hernon) Clarke and Ann Hernon. Affectionate aunt of many nieces and nephews who loved to spend time with her, and dear friend to so many in Greater Boston and Maine.

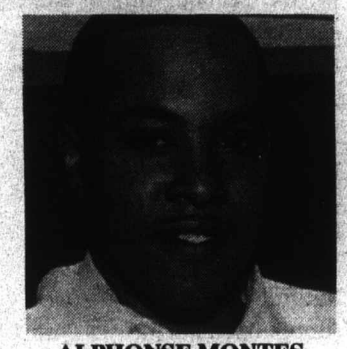

Mrs. Tikkanen's family would like to thank hospice and MGH Senior Health for their excellent, compassionate care.

Funeral arrangements were made by Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Interment was at St. Mary's Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the YMCA of Greater Boston, 316 Huntington Ave., Boston, MA 02115, for elder exercise programs, in which she participated for many years or to Hospice of the Good Shepherd, 90 Wells Ave., Newton, MA 02459.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although you're getting kudos and other positive reactions to your suggestions, don't let the cheers drown out some valid criticisms. Better to deal with them now than later.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Following your keen Bovine intuition pays off, as you not only reassess the suggestions some people are putting in front of you, but also their agendas for doing so.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You continue on a high-enthusiasm cycle as that new project you've assumed takes shape. You're also buoyed by the anticipation of receiving some good news about a personal matter.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Your eagerness to immerse yourself in your new assignment is understandable. But be careful that you don't forget to take care of that pressing personal situation as well.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) This is a good time to learn a new skill that could give a clever Cat an edge in the upcoming competition for workplace opportunities. Enjoy the arts this weekend with someone special.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) You could risk creating an impasse if you insist on expecting more from others than they're prepared to give. Showing flexibility in what you'll accept could prevent a stalemate.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Although you can weigh all factors of a dispute to find an agreeable solution for others, you might need the skilled input of someone you trust to help you deal with an ongoing situation of your own.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) The good news is that your brief period of self-doubt turns into a positive "I can do anything" attitude. The better news is that you'll soon be able to prove it.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good time for Sagittarians to start making travel plans while you still can select from a wide menu of choices and deals, and not be forced to settle for leftovers.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Like your zodiacal sign, the sure-footed Goat, you won't allow obstacles in your path to keep you from reaching your goal. Don't be surprised by who asks to go along with you.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Let your head dominate your heart as you consider the risks that might be involved in agreeing to be a friend's co-signer or otherwise act as his or her backup in a financial matter.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Prioritize: Resolve to close the door and let your voicemail take your phone calls while you finish up a task before the end-of-week deadline. Then go out and enjoy a fun-filled weekend.
BORN THIS WEEK: Your capacity for care and compassion helps to bring comfort to others.

Nor'Easter Ushers In New Year

FRESHLY FALLEN SNOW and clear blue skies make a pretty postcard scene at Wollaston Beach last Friday afternoon. The Jan. 2-3 nor'easter dropped about 12 inches of snow in Quincy and some coastal flooding prompted temporary road closures primarily in Houghs Neck. Part of Newport Avenue was also shut down during high tide. Quincy officials said the storm will cost the city an estimated $300,000 in cleanup costs.

Finn Elected New City Council President

To help ensure the council receives the necessary information, Finn said he will seek to create a new council committee for municipal technology and information management.

"Towards this end, I will also ask my colleagues to create a new committee for the City Council," Finn said. "A committee for municipal technology and information management to outline the necessary technical and human resources to best serve the needs of the City Council and the citizens of Quincy."

Finn added that he would not avoid controversy as president, but said he would avoid causing controversy for its own sake. He also said the council should focus on the matters before it, and not any one member's ambitions.

"I promise to always make the ultimate aim of my office the common good of the people and the City of Quincy. Although I will never avoid controversy in pursuing this good, I will never seek nor engender controversy simply for its own sake," Finn said. "The challenges ahead are too great to waste time with our own petty ambitions or illusions. We should focus on nothing other than the serious matters before us."

Finn began his speech by holding a moment of silence for the late Norma Gutro, the mother of Councillor Doug Gutro, who died Dec. 29.

"Norma Gutro really truly represented the best of this city," Finn said. "That her values focused on her family, on her neighborhood, on her faith, and on her civic duty certainly represents the best and calls us this evening to be the same."

Councillor Michael McFarland, the previous council president, and Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes nominated Finn, who serves as president and executive director of the Massachusetts Housing Shelter Alliance and is the former director of Father Bill's, for the position of council president.

"I have known Joe for over 25 years in both his roles as a housing advocate and a dedicated public servant," McFarland said. "I have found Joe to be compassionate, understanding, cooperative, and dependable. Joe is a terrific husband, a great father and coach. I hope he can coach the Quincy City Council."

"As the chairman of the veterans committee, it is an honor to second the nomination of someone who has championed the cause of homeless veterans, not only here in our city but in our Commonwealth," Hughes added.

'Mystery Of Captain Wollaston' Talk, Walk

The Park Department, Quincy Historical Society and DCR are co-sponsoring a free lecture and tour entitled "The Mystery of Captain Wollaston" this month.

In the talk at the Historical Society Thursday, Jan. 9 at 7:30 p.m., Ed Fitzgerald will explore what is known about the Captain and his adventures in Quincy.

The talk will take place at the Historical Society, 8 Adams St.

The walk on Saturday, Jan. 11 will tour early American sites in Quincy, including Native Americans in Caddy Park, the monument to Capt. Wollaston, Maypole Park and the remains of colonist Edmund Quincy's tide mill.

The walk will begin at 10 a.m. at Caddy Park across from Wollaston Beach (first parking lot on left after Furnace Brook Parkway).

For more information and inclement weather rescheduling, call 617-472-0799.

The Quincy Historical Society will also offer two afternoon programs on Jan. 15 and Feb. 5, to mark the upcoming Winter Olympics. David Hodgdon, director of Blue Hill Adventure and Quarry Museum and founder of the Blue Hills' Nordic Ski Patrol program, will present slide shows on two American Winter Olympics.

On Jan. 15 at 2 p.m. at the Adams Academy, the program will focus on the 1988 Lake Placid Olympics. On Feb. 5 at 2 p.m., the topic will be the 2002 Salt Lake Olympics.

Both programs are free and everyone is welcome.

For Outstanding Community Service

Maralin Manning Selected Recipient Henry Bosworth Memorial Citizen Award

Maralin Ann Manning of Quincy, a longtime advocate of the city's business community and selfless, dedicated volunteer for many local non-profit and human services organizations, is the recipient of the Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Memorial Citizenship Award for 2013.

Manning was selected for the award by a judging panel from among 19 nominees submitted by Quincy Sun readers. The award that recognizes outstanding community service will be presented by The Quincy Sun at a reception in March.

"I am overwhelmed and terribly flattered by this selection," Manning said after being informed of her selection.

The award, formerly The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year, was renamed several years ago in memory of newspaper founder Henry Bosworth.

MARALIN MANNING

Manning called Mr. Bosworth a very special friend and mentor.

"Henry was a very special friend. I don't think in business you have those sorts of relationships very often. Most often in business the relationship is purely business – dollars and cents – and there was nothing like that with Henry. He mentored me the way I've tried to mentor other people.

"Henry was very proper and he was always a gentleman. He was a gentle man in every sense of the word. He was a gentleman and a gentle man and he would never hurt a soul."

Quincy Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth congratulated Manning and the other nominees who were also deserving of the award.

"Maralin Manning came to Quincy in 1992 as the director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and quickly became an ubiquitous thread in the fabric of the community. She has championed small business while also being an active and integral part of innumerable local volunteer organizations.

Old City Hall Project On Pace

Inside Demolition Nearly Complete; Excavation For New Fountains To Begin

By SCOTT JACKSON

Demolition inside the old City Hall building is nearly complete and the building remains on pace to be completed early next year.

Work on the old City Hall building, formally known as the James R. McIntyre Government Center, began in September. The first phase of the project involved gutting the building, a process that is nearly complete according to Jim Edwards, president of architectural firm Holmes and Edwards and president of the Quincy Historical Society. Edwards said he is happy with the progress being made on the renovation project, which is being undertaken by contractor Nauset Construction.

"It's going well – we're making good progress," Edwards said Monday. "We've got good cooperation with the general contractor, and we have a real outstanding job superintendent, Scott Southwick. He's very much enthused about the project and the team that's been put together."

Currently, workers are underpinning, or strengthening, the foundation of the building. Doing so will ensure that the building meets modern building codes and will also allow the floor of the basement to be lowered approximately 15 inches to accommodate space for overhead ducts and pipes.

"We're in the process of underpinning the foundations, which need reinforcement because of the way they were built, because of new seismic and structural considerations we have to take into account and because we want to lower the floor a little bit," Edwards said. "The old floor was in poor condition. In removing it, we also afford ourselves

Cleanup, Repair After Two School Pipes Burst

North Quincy High School, Marshall School

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Clean up and repair efforts are well under way after water pipes burst at two local schools during the recent cold snap, according to Mayor Thomas Koch.

The damage occurred at the North Quincy High School and the Clifford Marshall Elementary School.

"In the case of North, there was extensive damage with that one," said Koch. "Maintenance crews did a great job cleaning it up, working with the principal and all."

At the Clifford Marshall Elementary School a type of anti-freeze called glycol, which is used in HVAC systems located in areas where temperatures regularly drop to or below 32 degrees during the winter months, leaked from the burst pipe.

"Clifford Marshall had a pipe break and the glycol that was in there got out. It's not toxic but it has a terrible odor so we moved the kids that day to get them away from that and that's been squared away," he said. "The glycol at the school was evidently just too old. That's why I've asked for a report from my experts. How long is it good for? When should we be changing it and updating it or recharging it?"

Koch estimated the cost for filling North's HVAC

City Census Forms In Mail This Week

The city is mailing out nearly 50,000 census forms this week.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said 49,565 census forms are being mailed out at a cost of $25,000. The census information is used to generate a street-by-street listing of residents and to compile jury and voting lists.

The census information is also used for fiscal planning, to help predict school enrollments and to get federal aid and reimbursements.

According to state law, each city and town in Massachusetts must conduct an annual census separate from the federal census.

the opportunity to gain headroom so we can get ductwork, piping, all kinds of mechanical and electrical additions to the buildings. It allows us to gain space for those kinds of things, otherwise we wouldn't be able to get it all in."

The old City Hall building opened in 1844 and is one of the oldest municipal government buildings still in use in the country. Edwards said the building is in good shape, though the demolition revealed cracks in the granite walls that will need to be fixed.

"In the demolition process, when we removed the finishes, we found that some of the stonework has a little bit of damage here and there. The corners of the building are kind of coming apart a bit. We're reinforcing that. Our company, together with our structural engineer, is devising methods to re-secure those corners," Edwards said. "But for a building that is now 170 years old, we found it to be in pretty good condition."

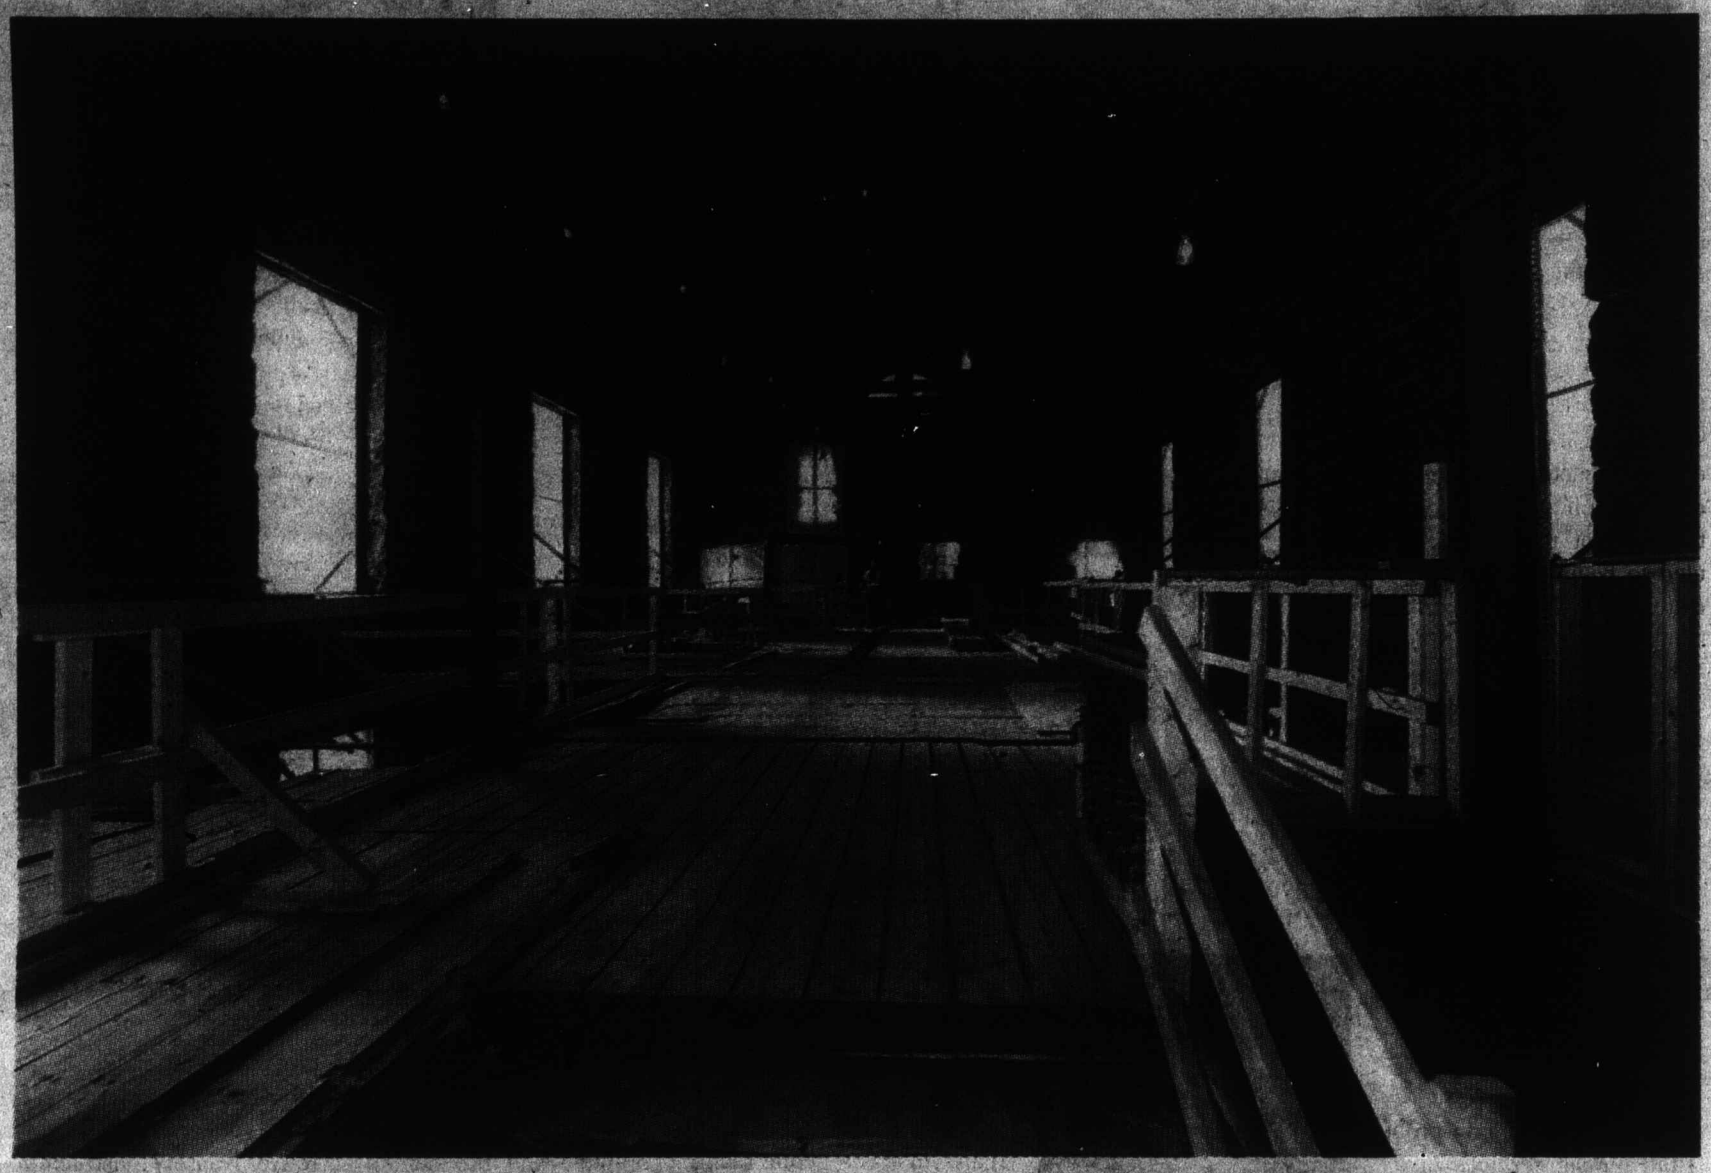

The demolition also uncovered a number of wood beams and other components of the floors that had been charred by fires inside the building in the past.

"There are any number of wood flooring members that are charred," Edwards said. "There have been a number of fires in the history of this building that have occurred."

Edwards added that some of the charred beams may need to be replaced, but others might not need to be.

Outside the building, work is expected to begin soon on a below ground water vault located between old City Hall and the Hancock Cemetery. The water vault will hold 25,000 gallons of water for new fountains that will be installed in the new Adams Green park.

"Between the cemetery and the building we're going to start excavating shortly for an underground water storage vault, which is part of the park. Because we're going to have fountains – two different fountains, one quite a good size and one smaller – they're going to need a lot of water for that and that water needs to be stored someplace," Edwards said.

DEMOLITION INSIDE the second floor of old City Hall, a space previously used by the City Council and for council offices, is nearly complete. The space will be converted into the 180-person Great Hall, which will encompass the entire second floor and be used as the council chamber. The council will be seated at the far end of the Great Hall (background). Visible in the foreground at right is a portion of the old ornate railing that was part of the staircase that led from the first floor up to the council chamber.

"That's part of the original contract – there's no change to it. But it's something our office is working on with Halvorson Design, who are the landscape architects for the park. We've got plans now showing how they want it to be built with all the particulars. That's going well too. You'll see some changes to that side of the building shortly."

Excavation for the water vault could start as soon as the end of this week, Edwards added.

Additional excavation will also take place in the area between old City Hall and the new facility that sits diagonally behind it. The stucco-clad addition to the rear of old City Hall, constructed in 1902, was torn down in the fall, as was the connection between the old and new buildings. A new addition will be added to old City Hall as part of the ongoing renovation project, and excavation for that addition's foundation is expected to start in about a month.

"They're going to start excavating for that, I think, momentarily," Edwards said. "That outside work and the inside of bracing the walls and underpinning the existing foundation goes hand-in-hand with that. We're going to be excavating the whole back of the wall, which only has dirt up

18th Century Grave Stones Found In Academy Basement

By JOE REARDON

A grave stone conservator company will be studying the 12 pieces of 18th century stones that were discovered last Tuesday in the basement of the Quincy Historical Society to determine if they can be restored and returned to historic Hancock Cemetery.

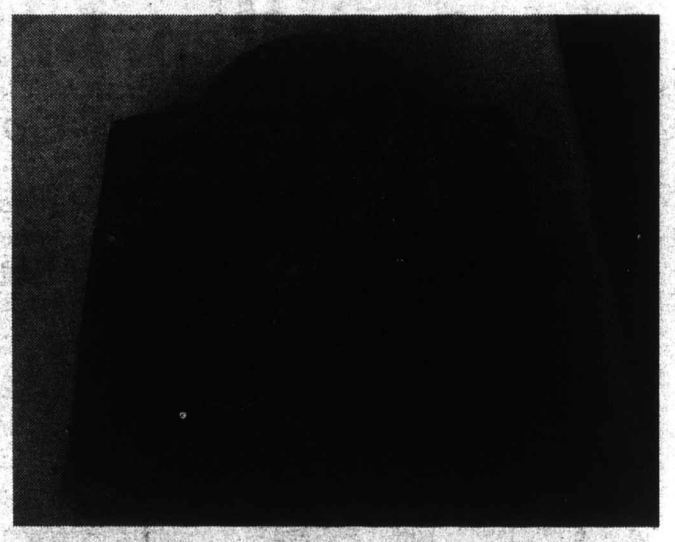

Historic Gravestones Services of Salem were selected by the city design selection committee as part of the Hancock Cemetery conservation and restoration project that is scheduled to begin in April. The restoration of just over 200 stones was made possible by a $33,000 grant award from the Massachusetts Historical Commission and the Quincy Community Preservation Committee's $80,000 allocation.

Mayor Thomas Koch said the preservation of the stones is an important undertaking. "We are very pleased that the City will be soon be undertaking this important preservation effort. The Hancock Cemetery is a fantastic historic resource, a fine example of early New England burial grounds."

The 300-year-old slate pieces have been in the basement for more than 30 years and were most likely removed from the cemetery during the last archaeological survey of the area in the early 1980s, according to Quincy Historical Executive Director Ed Fitzgerald.

"They were in safe keeping here," said Quincy Historical Society Executive Director Dr. Ed Fitzgerald. "There was no immediate need to take them out."

Kristina Johnson, the director of transportation planning, said that age, weather and other deteriorating factors led to the slate breaking. Historical Gravestones Services use a chemistry-oriented process in the restoration. Johnson believes it shouldn't be difficult to match the twelve pieces found in the basement to their original locations. "It should be pretty easy to match them with the headstones that are in the cemetery," she said.

ONE OF 12 18th century grave stones recently discovered in the basement of the Adams Academy. Inscribed on the stone is the name Sarah Ruggles and date 1786. A grave stone conservator company will determine if the pieces can be restored and returned to historic Hancock Cemetery.

The etchings on the pieces include:

*A partial piece with no name dated 1764.

*The name Benjamin Curtis with a design that became popular in the early 1800s.

*The initials C.F.B. dated 1839.

*The name Benjamin Webb.

*The initials A.M.H.

*The name Mr. S.B.B. dated 1840.

Fitzgerald said that people living during the time period the stones were in the cemetery might not have given them the attention and care equal to that of a historical society.

"It's easy for these type of things to get lost over a long period of time when there are people who aren't necessarily interested in them," said Fitzgerald.

MLK Birthday Celebration At Germantown Center Monday

The South Shore YMCA's Germantown Neighborhood Center will host Quincy's 18th annual Martin Luther King, Jr. Breakfast Monday, Jan. 20.

The celebration will take place from 9 to 11 a.m. at the Germantown Neighborhood Center, 366 Palmer St. Over 300 people are expected to share in this special celebration to honor the Rev. Dr. King.

The keynote speaker will be Harold Sparrow. He is the chief of development for the YMCA Greater Boston.

Sparrow began his career as the athletic director at the Jackson/Mann Community School in Allston in 1987, and worked for the Medical League and Urban League of Eastern Massachusetts before joining the YMCA. He is a vice president of Save the Harbor, Save the Bay and a vice president of the Board of Trustees for the Children's Museum; and former co-chair of the Municipal Harbor Planning Committee.

The event's program will also feature community leaders including Mayor Thomas Koch, Norfolk County Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey, and South Shore YMCA Vice President John Ireland.

Christopher David James will perform a saxophone recital. Germantown after-school students will sign and recite a poem.

All are welcome to attend the community celebration. Tickets are $10 per person and tables of 10 are available for $100. Tickets for seniors and children are $5.

For more information, contact the Germantown Neighborhood Center at 617-376-1384.

A DISPLAY OF PASSION

Among the oldest types of jewelry, charm bracelets were worn by prehistoric men and women to ward off enemies and evil. The first recognizable charm bracelets appeared in ancient Egypt and were worn as protective shields, to ascribe status, and to help the gods guide the wearer and his or her possessions to their proper place in the afterlife. By the 1950s, charm bracelets became more whimsical in nature, evolving into a must-have accessory for girls and women to mark major rites of passage. Sixteenth birthdays, graduations, weddings, travel, and the arrival of children were all recorded on the links of their bracelets. Today, women and girls wear charm bracelets to celebrate their hobbies and passions, from golf to pets.

When a woman gets married, she might be given a charm bracelet to celebrate her future. The initial charm bracelet that has wedding bells or a marriage certificate can later be filled with charms that represent the honeymoon, anniversaries, and children. This bracelet is frequently referred to as her "Lifetime" bracelet, that grows over the years and may one day be passed on to her daughter or granddaughter, continuing the tradition of charm collecting from generation to generation. # One Quincy Precinct To Help Elect New State Rep. In 13th Suffolk District

Voters In Ward 3 Precinct 3 Go To The Polls March 4, April 1

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Voters in only one precinct in the city will help elect a successor to the state representative seat vacated by Marty Walsh who was inaugurated as Boston's new mayor last week.

Walsh served 16 years in the Massachusetts House of Representatives and represented the 13th Suffolk District before he succeeded former Boston Mayor Thomas Menino Jan. 6. Menino – who served as Boston mayor for 20 years – did not seek re-election last fall.

The 13th Suffolk District seat is mostly comprised of neighborhoods in Dorchester. However, there is one Quincy precinct in the 13th Suffolk – that's Ward 3 Precinct 3 in the city's Montclair section.

Ward 3 Precinct 3 was redistricted into the 13th Suffolk District after the federal census in 2010.

A primary for the special state representative election will be held Tuesday, March 4. The final election is Tuesday, April 1.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said about 1,676 voters are registered in Ward 3 Precinct 3.

The special election will cost Quincy about $24,000 - $12,000 for the primary and $12,000 for the final, Shea said. Costs include advertising the elections, hiring election workers and programming the ballot machines.

Although considered a "Boston" seat, Quincy residents who live in Ward 3 Precinct 3 are eligible to seek Walsh's vacated state representative seat.

The seat has already drawn a host of potential contenders from Boston. They include attorney Daniel Hunt, attorney Liam Curran, Boston neighborhood activist Gene Gorman, and William Lynch, longtime member of the Columbia Savin Hill Civic Association. All four are registered Democrats and have pulled nominations papers.

One Boston political observer considers Hunt the main contender; he's raised $50,000 for the race already.

Potential candidates must collect at least 150 signatures and submit nomination papers by Tuesday, Jan. 21 at 5 p.m.

The last day to register to vote in the special primary election for Ward 3 Precinct 3 residents is Wednesday, Feb. 12 at 8 p.m. at the Quincy City Clerk annex building, 1259 Hancock St.

Last day to register to vote in the final election is Wednesday, March 12 at 8 p.m.

Quincy Democrats To Caucus Feb. 8

The Quincy Democratic City Committee (QDCC) will hold the Quincy Democratic caucuses to determine delegates and alternate delegates to the 2014 Massachusetts Democratic State Convention.

The date of the caucus is Saturday, Feb. 8th. Doors will open at 9 a.m. and the caucuses will begin at 10 a.m. at the Quincy Elder Services – Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum Street, North Quincy.

All Wards; 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 will be holding there caucuses at this location.

Should caucuses be cancelled due to inclement weather, the caucuses will take place the following Saturday, Feb. 15th, same time and place.

The caucuses are open to all registered Democrats as of Jan. 31, 2014. Candidates for delegate or alternate delegate must be present at the caucus to be elected. The only exception to the rule is active Armed Service members; they do not have to be in attendance to be elected a delegate or alternate delegate, but they must notify the Ward Chair of their intentions by Feb. 8th.

Any registered Democrat that is not elected as a delegate or an alternate delegate and who meets the qualifications may apply to be an add-on delegate in the following categories: youth (between 18 & 35 years of age), minority and disabled.

Elected delegates, alternate delegates must pay a convention fee of $75. This fee is due no later than April 11th. After that date the delegate/alternate will be required to pay $100.

This year's Massachusetts Democratic State Convention will be held on Friday, June 13th and Saturday, June 14th at the DCU Center, 50 Foster St., Worcester.

For more information regarding the Quincy Democratic caucuses contact QDCC City-Wide Chair Alicia Gardner by email at alicia.gardner6@gmail.com

Sheriff Launches Video For Safety Program For Drivers

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael G. Bellotti announces that a newly published informational video on his Yellow Dot program can be viewed on YouTube and Facebook.

The short video features testimonials from a Norfolk County fire chief and a senior citizen Yellow Dot enrollee. Their brief testimonials highlight the numerous benefits of Sheriff Bellotti's free-of-charge safety program aimed at protecting individuals who may be prone to medical emergencies and/or have been involved in an automobile accident.

The Yellow Dot program is available to all Norfolk County residents and is simple to sign up for. Upon registration, participants will be required to fill out a medical information card and have their photograph taken by a Norfolk County Sheriff's Office employee for identification purposes.

Participants are given a yellow decal to affix to their rear windshield, which immediately notifies public safety first responders of the pertinent medical information contained in the vehicle's glove compartment.

"Not only does Yellow Dot ensure the protection for operators and passengers of a motor vehicle, but it allows public safety officials to do their job quickly and effectively," Sheriff Bellotti said. "There are truly no downsides to registering with this life-saving program."

To watch the Yellow Dot informational video, internet users may visit the official Norfolk County Sheriff's Office YouTube channel or Sheriff Bellotti's TRIAD Facebook page.

Anyone wishing to sign up for Yellow Dot or learn more about the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office programs may call (781)751-3516.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

• On Jan. 29, 1845, Edgar Allan Poe's poem "The Raven," which begins "Once upon a midnight dreary," is published in the New York Evening Mirror. Poe's macabre work often portrayed motiveless crimes and intolerable guilt in his characters.

• On Feb. 2, 1887, Groundhog Day, featuring a rodent meteorologist, is celebrated for the first time at Gobbler's Knob in Punxsutawney, Pa. According to tradition, if a groundhog comes out of its hole on this day and sees its shadow, there will be six more weeks of winter weather; no shadow means an early spring.

• On Jan. 30, 1943, the British Royal Air Force begins a bombing campaign in Berlin that coincides with the 10th anniversary of Hitler's accession to power. To make matters worse for the Germans, the following day a massive surrender of German troops occurred at Stalingrad.

• On Jan. 27, 1967, a launch-pad fire during Apollo program tests at Cape Canaveral, Fla., kills astronauts Virgil "Gus" Grissom, Edward H. White II and Roger B. Chafee. An investigation indicated that a faulty electrical wire inside the Apollo 1 command module was the probable cause of the fire.

• On Feb. 1, 1974, University of Washington student Lynda Ann Healy disappears from her apartment and is murdered by serial killer Ted Bundy. In the summer of 1974, Bundy attacked at least seven young women in Washington. By the time he was captured in 1979, Bundy had become America's most infamous serial killer.

• On Jan. 28, 1985, 45 American music artists gather to record "We Are the World," a record that would eventually sell more than 7 million copies and raise some $60 million for African famine relief. The instruction producer Quincy Jones sent to pop stars doing the recording: "Check your egos at the door."

• On Jan. 31, 1990, the Soviet Union's first McDonald's fast-food restaurant opens in Moscow. Throngs of people line up to pay the equivalent of several days' wages for Big Macs, shakes and french fries. Customers were most amazed at the politeness of the workers.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1947 postcard reproduction shows the Hassan Brothers Garage when it first opened as a Nash automobile dealership at 290 Washington St. in Quincy Point. The 12,000 square-foot garage was built in 1920 as a dealership for Dodge cars and trucks and then became home to the Granite Chevrolet company for a dozen years before the Hassans moved their Nash dealership here in 1947. Soon after, in 1954, the Nash Motors Company bought the Hudson Motor Car Company and became the American Motors Corporation (AMC). In 1970, AMC bought the Kaiser-Jeep Company and was itself eventually purchased by Chrysler Corporation. The Hassan Brothers had taken on the Jeep line and sold and serviced Jeeps at this location for many years until Chrysler cut back on the number of Jeep dealerships a few years ago. Then after selling used cars here for a few years Hassan Brothers sold the property for almost $2 million in 2012. The site is now home to a $30 million three-story, 141-room elderly care facility owned by the South Cove Manor Nursing Home and Rehabilitation Center who is moving here from Chinatown in Boston. ## Thief Stole Money Donated To Save Lives

Quincy Community United Methodist Church is happy to be part of the Wollaston community. It is our joy to share with you, our neighbors, such events, as our annual Harry Potter Celebration, our Church and Craft Fairs, and the Blessing of the Animals.

We are glad to provide a place where health and wholeness can be reached through recovery programs such as A.A., N.A., C.A., G.A., Al-Anon, and AWOL, and where people can learn English through our free ESL program. As your neighbors, we feel obligated to warn you that there is a thief among us – and is it to that thief that this letter is specifically addressed.

To whom it may concern:

On Dec. 25 or Dec. 26, you chose to break into the Church Offices of Quincy Community United Methodist Church. You then chose to steal the church's lap top. But that's not all you stole. You also stole human lives.

You chose to steal money donated to help fight malaria – despite the fact that the money was in a container clearly labeled "Imagine No Malaria: Imagine Saving Millions of Lives."

Do you know that, in Africa, malaria kills one person each minute? Do you realize that malaria is a preventable disease? The money you stole was designated to purchase mosquito nets and medicines, and to provide education about malaria: all for some of the world's poorest people. That money would have prevented needless deaths.

The question we at Quincy Community United Methodist Church keep asking ourselves is, "If the thief knew that's what the money was for, would the thief then have stolen it anyway?" Of course, only you can answer that.

The lap top you stole is, ultimately, a machine. Although it will place an unexpected financial burden on Quincy Community, it will – and can be – replaced. Unfortunately, the human lives you also stole cannot.

On behalf of the Quincy Community United Methodist Church Congregation,

Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, Pastor

Applauds Snow Plowing Effort

Regarding this last snow storm that we "enjoyed." There were a few streets in Ward 4, that needed "help."

My wife and I had to run some errands the day after the big storm and found about five streets in Ward 4 almost impassable for a normal family car (no SUV in this house). I had to drive to Quincy Point and other places. To get to these locations, I had to navigate several streets in West Quincy alone. Miller, Copeland, Water, Center and West Streets were very badly plowed.

There is one part of Common, Center and West Streets that are always bad, in that there is an incline at the house in the island on West and Center Streets that never gets sanded or plowed right.

I contacted DPW Commissioner Dan Raymondi regarding the plowing problem. Within four hours, all said streets were done to the pavement. Any other leader of the DPW would have you wait until his crew got to the problem.

My thanks to Commissioner Dan Raymondi for a fast and complete job well done.

Hedges Possible State Corrections Chief

By FRANK McCAULEY

Norfolk County Sheriff Charles W. Hedges (R-Quincy) was being mentioned as a possible successor to Corrections Commissioner George F. McGrath, if Governor John A. Volpe decides against reappointing the commissioner whose term expires in late January.

The reappointment for Hedges has been frequently discussed among county officials and on Beacon Hill, but was publicly discussed last night on WBZ's Newsmakers program by John Moran, executive secretary of the United Prisons Association.

Moran said the new governor was under heavy political pressure to "dump" Commissioner McGrath, a Democrat who was appointed by Governor Foster Furcolo in 1957, and reappointed by Volpe in 1962. (Editor's note: It didn't happen.)

DECISION ON EXECUTIVE HOUSE FATE NEAR

Quincy officials are faced with a "turning point" decision, which will spell the difference between failure and success of high-rise apartment construction on the South Shore.

The developers proposed a 14-story, $3,190,000 apartment house at 1025 Hancock St. be built under terms of Chapter 121A of the State's General Laws. The chapter provides that the developer can enter into a 40-year contract for payment of taxes to the city.

Executive House developers propose to pay an annual tax of 15% of the gross income from the apartments. They say this will amount to a minimum of $50,000 per year or about 17 times what the site is now yielding in property taxes. (Editor's note: The project known as "The Executive House" was built.)

'Quincy Through Time' A Pictorial History Of City

New Illustrated Book By John Galluzzo, Donald Cann

By EMILY ARMSTRONG

A new book about Quincy, Quincy Through Time, takes readers from one end of the city to the other with photographs of places then and now.

The book, by John Galluzzo and Donald Cann, features old snap shots of places in Quincy along with updated photographs of what those buildings, landmarks, neighborhoods, and streets look like today.

"We wanted to be as current as possible so we were checking on all of the up-to-the-minute news on these buildings because when you think about it there are so many buildings being redone right now so we tried to be as current as possible. You can actually time it (the publishing of the book) by the fire at the Masonic Hall. We didn't mention it because it hadn't happened, we sent the book to press and days later it caught fire," said Galluzzo.

"A lot of these pictorial histories can simply be photo albums, we wanted to kind of tell a narrative tale as if you're driving around through town and you end up heading back towards the bridge getting back out of town again. With Quincy you could do churches, schools and hit all the big buildings and not really get down into the flavor of the town. We wanted to do a little bit of that.

"The way Don says it is that every page is more or less a research project in itself and that's with every book that we do, whether it's in our own home towns or in another local town."

Galluzzo and Cann, who have composed around 10 books together, were approached by a start up publishing company to write Quincy Through Time.

"The publisher approached us looking for us to produce a book on local history," said Galluzzo. "We said, 'sure we could do that,' and he gave us the framework. We knew we needed instant access to a good treasure trove of historic photography so we would then be able to jump out and do the modern photography very quickly."

They took around 90 photographs of places throughout Quincy during the summer and into the fall months of this year and after composing the book they donated the photos they took to the Quincy Historical Society.

"We're talking about us taking 90-91 digital photographs, we took a lot more obviously to get to where we narrowed down to, and giving them to the Historical Society," said Galluzzo.

"We're not turning in old shoe boxes of 4X6 prints anymore to the Historical Societies, we're not going to suddenly find them under the bed, so these digital photographs are going to be the kind of the dusty old photo albums of the future. So for Quincy Historical Society to be able to do their job, we wanted to be able to hand them over this collection of photographs we took in 2013."

Galluzzo, who is a member of the Manet Community Health Center Board of Directors, said that they compose the books more for fun than for profit.

"For Don and I, we both love to teach, we're both historians, we're never going to be rich off these books, so for us it's just about the people that get it into their hands, we hope they enjoy it, we hope they learn something, we hope they call us with any stories they may have about the places we captured. Whoever picks it up we hope they're happy with it and we hope they get something out of it," said Galluzzo.

"Quincy with the whole Adams' story is going to become more and more a tourist magnet with time. Within the next few years we should be up to a two billion dollar tourism industry in Massachusetts and Quincy and Plymouth for our region are the two biggest attractions. The Adams' story is going to be huge here in five years so I do envision there will be a lot of tourists picking up this book as one of the touristy books to have in hand."

Galluzzo said that 10 to 15 years down the line he hopes someone will take updated pictures of Quincy.

"I think if not us somebody should. It definitely should be done especially the way that Quincy changes," said Galluzzo.

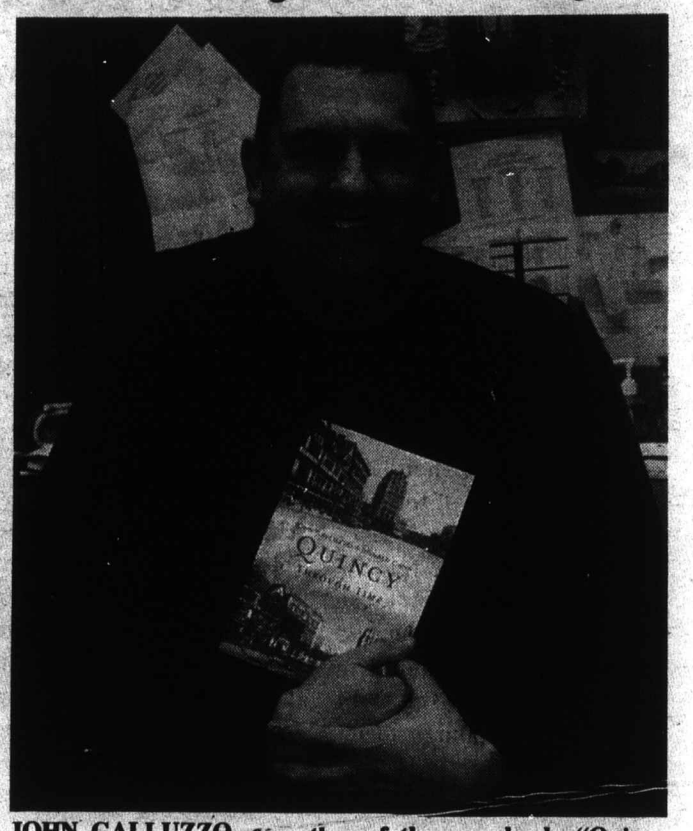

"There is so much that is changing right before our eyes. The whole downtown revitalization probably could be a book in itself. I would be more than happy to do it down the road, if people are interested. It was definitely a fun project."

"The process is really fun. Don and I had to dig a little bit deeper in Quincy. We had a blast doing it; we had so much fun doing it, we are so glad we did it. When we got started bright-eyed and bushy-tailed we realized 'wow, there is a lot of history here.' We're lucky to live in this part of the country where there is such a quantity of history. Quality of history you can find anywhere," Galluzzo added.

The book can be purchased on Amazon.com.

Friends Of Blue Hills 'Strive For 35' Challenge

Friends of the Blue Hills was founded in 1979 with a mission to preserve and protect the Blue Hills Reservation. Thirty-five years later, the organization is still working to ensure current and future generations can enjoy all the Blue Hills has to offer.

To celebrate their 35th year, the Friends of the Blue Hills is sponsoring a challenge called "Strive for 35." Participants will explore the Reservation by seeing and doing 35 specific things in the Blue Hills during 2014 and photographing themselves at each one. Participants will post the photos on the FBH Facebook page or on Twitter with the hashtag #BlueHills35. Both individuals and teams are encouraged to visit www.FriendsoftheBlueHills.org/challenge to learn more about the challenge and to register.

The Blue Hills Reservation has 22 hilltops and spans more than 7,000 acres in six towns: Braintree, Canton, Dedham, Milton, Quincy, and Randolph. It is located just 20 minutes from Boston and is free and open to the public. Thanks to the generosity and efforts of members and volunteers, the Friends of the Blue Hills maintains over 100 miles of trails for tens of thousands of visitors each year, protects the forests by removing invasive weeds, works with legislators and local officials to prevent unwise development in the Blue Hills, and sponsors free opportunities to explore the Blue Hills in all four seasons. More information about the organization can be found on the website: www.FriendsoftheBlueHills.org.

'Nicky's Family' Film Screening Jan. 26

The Quincy South Shore Jewish Committee in cooperation with The Fenno House, will screen a film "Nicky's Family" on Sunday, Jan. 26 at 2p.m.at Fenno House, 540 Hancock St., Quincy.

The public is invited. Admission is free.

"Nicky's Family" is the story of Sir Nicholas Winton, an Englishman who rescued 669 Czech and Slovak children, who were mainly Jewish, just before World War II broke out with the Nazi invasion. Sir Nicholas has been knighted by Queen Elizabeth and several citations were introduced in the U.S. Congress, noting his noble deeds. He is now 104 years old, never speaking of these events and they would have been forgotten if his wife hadn't found a suitcase full of documents. Over 200 of his now-adult children who were in the Kindertransport have been located and his "family" has grown in excess of 6,000 people many achieving great things themselves.

The film has played in the greater Boston area, earning rave reviews and has won over 30 awards.

Quincy's Molly McGlynn Sings In White House Grand Foyer

Molly McGlynn of Quincy recently performed with The Trinity College Quirks, an all-female a cappella group, in the White House Grand Foyer on Saturday, as part of a holiday tradition in the nation's capital.

Singing groups are invited annually to the White House to welcome visitors from around the world, touring one of the world's most well-known buildings during the holiday season.

McGlynn is a member of the Class of 2017 at Trinity.

A lifelong Quincy resident, Molly attended Sacred Heart School in Quincy and graduated from Thayer Academy in June 2013.

She has been active in theater and music - played violin since 1st grade (studied with South Shore Conservatory teachers who came to Sacred Heart), sang in choir and jazz ensemble at Thayer, theater at Thayer. Also played softball for Thayer, Community Council member for 4 years and received the Thayer Headmasters Award at graduation.

Molly is the daughter of Kathleen Porter and James McGlynn.

The White House performance is the latest high-profile appearance for the Trinity Quirks. They sang at the opening of a Boston Red Sox game at Fenway Park in 2012; joined the Whiffenpoofs of Yale University for shows at Infinity Hall in Norfolk, Conn., in 2012 and 2013; and competed in the Silver Chord Bowl, a showcase of top a cappella groups in the nation, in 2012.

The group has established itself as a Connecticut favorite, having been featured on WNPR, NBC Connecticut, and in Connecticut Magazine, and having performed at several events in Hartford, including this year's Hartford Hodge Podge and the 40th Annual Festival of Trees & Traditions at the Wadsworth Athenaeum.

Marie's Kitchen

Ann Marie's Carrot-Zucchini Bread

I think a lot of us have baked either a carrot cake or zucchini bread. But recently my daughter Ann Marie made this great combination of a carrot-zucchini bread and it is so moist and delicious you will probably want to bake it frequently.

CARROT-ZUCCHINI BREAD

2 cups flour
¾ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
2 eggs
½ cup canola oil
¾ cup light brown sugar
½ cup granulated sugar
1 cup grated carrots
1 cup grated zucchini
¾ cup shredded sweetened coconut

In a bowl, mix together the flour, salt, baking powder, baking soda.

In another bowl, whisk together the eggs, oil, brown sugar, granulated sugar. Now stir in the carrots, zucchini and the coconut. Fold in the dry ingredients and mix well.

Place in a greased loaf pan, and bake in a 375-degree oven for 90 minutes or until a tester comes out clean. Let cool before slicing.

Garden Club Scholarships Available For Horticulture-Related Studies

Applications are available for the Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, Inc (GCFM) annual college scholarship program.

There are eleven (11) $1000 scholarships being awarded again this year. This program is for high school seniors, undergraduates and graduates students who plan to major in botany, biology, horticulture, floriculture, landscape design, conservation, forestry, city planning, environmental studies, landscape management, and allied subjects.

Eligible students must be residents of Massachusetts, have a minimum of "B" average (3.0 on a 4.0 scale), be of good character and demonstrate financial need. Students must be attending or planning to attend an accredited college or university. Applications are due by March 1. Applications may be found on the GCFM web site at http://www.gcfm.org/Education/Scholarships/GCFMScholarships.aspx.

In 2013 the GCFM awarded 11 scholarships; each student received $1000. Two applications were selected as Massachusetts representatives and sent along to national headquarters and both students were awarded additional National Garden Club Scholarships of $3500 each.

"The best applicants will be those who have demonstrated serious academic success in biology, horticulture or environmental subjects; done significant scientific/environmental research through a school science project; and/or organized and led an important well-documented environmental, conservation, or landscaping project," said Wollaston Garden Club President Jan Clifford.

"Solid academic achievement, a prize winning science fair project, an Eagle Scout or Community Service project that relates to the goals of the state garden club would put an applicant in real contention. It's time for a Quincy student to be awarded one of these scholarships." added Diane Hill, Wollaston Garden Club Youth Gardening Committee Chair. The Wollaston Garden Club is a long-time member of both The Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, Inc and The National Garden Club, Inc.

McFarland Finance Chairman

By SCOTT JACKSON

Councillor Michael McFarland has been selected as the new chairman of the City Council's finance committee.

Council President Joseph Finn finalized his committee selections Tuesday, just over a week after being elected council president by his peers on Jan. 6. Finn said he made his choices for the council's 14 committees based on what he felt his colleague's interests were and where they could best contribute.

"I was trying to connect councillors to what they're interests are and where I felt they had a contribution to make," Finn told The Sun Tuesday.

Finn, who was the finance committee chairman in 2012 and 2013, said he chose McFarland because of his background as a former city auditor.

"Michael has served in a number of capacities within city administrations and also served as city auditor," Finn said.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee will continue to serve as vice chairman of the finance committee. The finance committee, which reviews appropriations and holds hearings on the city budget, is one of three committees composed of all nine councillors, along with the oversight and ordinance committees.

The oversight committee will also have a new chairman. Finn named Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci the new oversight chairman, a position that had been held by McNamee. Finn also named Councillor Doug Gutro that committee's vice chairman, replacing Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest.

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, the ordinance committee chairman for the past two years, will continue to chair the committee. Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall was named vice chairman, replacing Gutro.

McNamee will now serve as the chairman of the public safety committee, a position previously held by Palmucci. Coughlin is that committee's new vice chairman, replacing Finn. Laforest, McFarland, and Palmucci will also serve on it.

Gutro will remain as chairman of the downtown and economic growth committee, the committee charged with oversight of the Quincy Center redevelopment project. Laforest will also continue her role as the committee's vice chairwoman. Croall, Hughes, and Palmucci are the other three members of that committee.

Gutro also keeps his chairmanship of the education committee. Hughes will now serve as the vice chairwoman, replacing Coughlin. Joining Gutro and Hughes on the committee are Croall, Laforest, and Palmucci.

The leadership of the public works committee will remain the same, with Laforest as chairwoman and McNamee as vice chairman. Croall, Hughes, and McFarland will also serve on the committee.

Laforest will also continue as chairwoman of the environmental and public health committee, with Croall staying on as vice chairman. They will be joined by Coughlin, McNamee, and Palmucci.

McFarland will also replace Finn as chairman of the housing committee, and Croall will replace Hughes as the committee's vice chairman. Coughlin, Gutro, and Laforest will also serve on the committee.

Coughlin was named the new chairman of the library and historic place committee, replacing McNamee. Hughes will continue as vice chairwoman of that committee. The other three councillors named to that committee are Croall, Gutro, and Palmucci.

Croall will replace Coughlin as chairman of the parks and recreation committee. McNamee will serve as the committee's vice chairman, a position that Croall held previously. Gutro, Hughes, and McFarland will also serve on the committee.

Hughes will stay as chairwoman of the veterans services committee. Coughlin will serve as the new vice chairman, replacing Gutro. Gutro will remain on the committee, along with McNamee and Palmucci.

The makeup of the council's rules and senior citizens committees will both stay the same.

Palmucci will remain chair of the rules committee, with Gutro as vice chairman and Coughlin, Hughes, and Laforest also on the committee.

Croall will continue as chair of the senior citizens committee, with Coughlin continuing as vice chairman. Hughes, Laforest, and Palmucci will retain their positions on that committee.

In addition to the 14 existing committee, Finn called for the creation of a new committee on municipal technology and information management following his election as council president. Finn said he would name Laforest chairwoman of that five-member committee, if the council approves its creation.

"She brings a knowledge base that would be very helpful," Finn said of Laforest.

Rev. Louis Palmier New Collaborative Pastor

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Rev. Louis R. Palmieri, currently the pastor at Star of the Sea Parish in Salisbury, will become the new pastor of Sacred Heart, St. Ann's, and St. Mary's Parishes beginning in June.

In October, the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Boston announced plans to group Sacred Heart and St. Ann's, located on Hancock Street in North Quincy and Wollaston, respectively, and St. Mary's, located on Crescent Street in West Quincy, together as part of a collaborative.

Each church will maintain its status as a parish, keeping its identity, buildings, canonical rights, and financial assets and obligations. Palmieri will serve as pastor at all three parishes in the collaborative, and will be assisted by a team of priests.

Burst Pipes Cause Flooding At Pagnano Towers

By SCOTT JACKSON

Two times in the last week water pipes burst inside Pagano Towers, causing flooding on the building's first six floors both times.

The first break occurred on Tuesday, Jan. 7. A two-inch sprinkler pipe on the sixth floor burst that night, according to Quincy Housing Authority Executive Director Jim Lydon. The pipe burst after a window was left open in the west staircase of the 14-story, 156-unit elderly/disabled housing building on Curtis Avenue in Quincy Point. Single-digit temperatures, with a subzero wind chill caused by a strong west wind, meant the water inside the pipe froze and burst open.

"There couldn't have been a worse window open in the building," Lydon said.

Once the pipes thawed, floors 1-6 of the building quickly flooded. Lydon said the building's residents were safe, but the water damage did stop elevator service until the next afternoon. It also knocked out the building's fire alarm system and a fire watch was posted to the building until the fire alarm system was brought back on line.

The second leak was reported around 10:30 a.m. on Saturday, Jan. 11. Lydon said that leak was likely a result of the pipes being re-pressurized after the first leak was stopped.

"We think it was the result of the first leak," Lydon said.

After the second incident, one of the building's two elevators remained closed through the weekend and into Tuesday afternoon when The Sun went to print.

Housing authority personnel and outside contractors responded to both incidents immediately to help with the cleanup. There was no monetary estimate on how much damage was caused by the two burst pipes. Lydon said the biggest expense would be repairing the elevators. The leaks also caused water damage to tiles, carpets, and wallboards.

"The rest was typical water damage you'd expect to see after floods," Lydon said. "It will be a very labor intensive cleanup."

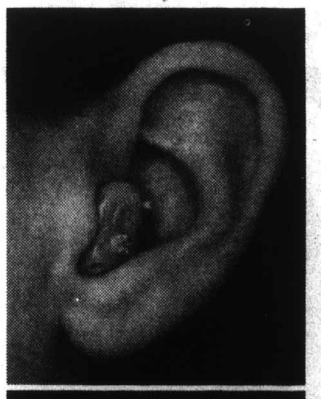

In response to the first leak, Lydon said the housing authority is looking into whether or not stairway windows could be permanently locked to avoid a similar situation in the future.

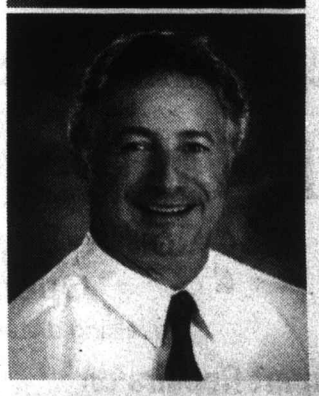

"We're investigating with fire safety people if we can lock those windows permanently," Lydon said. "We don't want to do that unilaterally because we could be breaking fire code."

Henry Rittal President Of Manet Community Health

Manet Community Health announces new officers and two new members for its community-based Board of Directors, now headed by President Henry (Hank) Rittal, a Houghs Neck resident and Manet patient.

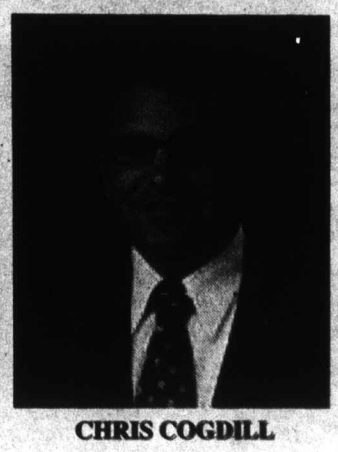

Rittal, Business Analyst for Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts, joined the Manet Board in 2011.

Other Board officers for 2014 are:

Vice President Chris Cogdill of Quincy, District Manager of the Boston South district for Walgreens; Secretary John Galluzzo of Hanover, a South Shore naturalist and Executive Director of the U.S. Life-Saving Service Heritage Association; and, continuing as Treasurer, Robert J. Griffin of Quincy, an attorney with Krokidas & Bluestein.

HENRY RITTAL

CHRIS COGDILL

JOHN GALLUZZO

ROBERT GRIFFIN

ÉVA GREENWOOD

Joining the Manet Board are two veteran health care professionals: Eva Greenwood, MBA, of Milton and Carol V. Garner, MD, of West Roxbury.

Greenwood is a senior health care executive with 20 years' experience in hospital and managed care/health plan business operations, process improvement, and technology deployment, among other key management issues. She currently serves as Vice Chair of Finance and Administration at Boston University and Boston Medical Center.

Dr. Garner is Co-Director of the Addiction Recovery Program at Faulkner Hospital in Boston and an Assistant Professor of Medicine at Tufts University School of Medicine in Boston, where she also earned her Medical Degree. She is Board Certified in both Internal Medicine and Addiction Medicine.

Leaving the Board are Stephen Gore of Hull, a member since 2007, and Kenneth Dyer of Medford, former CEO of Liberty Bay, who joined in 2008.

"We thank Stephen and Kenneth for their dedicated service during an active period of growth for Manet," said Joseph Reardon, who until December served as Board President for the past three years. "I'm excited to see how our two new members and new officers take Manet into the future," said Reardon.

Reardon will remain on the Board and will chair the new Manet Community Health Foundation Board, which will fund expanded programs and services for Manet patients.

Rittal, a patient at Manet's Houghs Neck practice site, most recently served as Vice President of the Board and chaired its Performance Improvement Committee.

"One of our top priorities for 2014 is maintaining Manet's high level of quality as we expand our services to meet our patients' needs," he said. "I know first hand the kind of personalized, comprehensive care you experience at Manet."

Top on the Board's agenda is re-examining Manet's strategic plan, which was adopted three years ago, and predicted Manet's affiliation with Steward Health Care System and the expansion of its facilities in North Quincy and Hull, due for completion in 2014. Manet also anticipates opening a new practice site in Taunton in 2014, to serve the surrounding area, for which planning is underway.

Rittal said he is excited about the challenges ahead. "All of our board members, whether Manet patients or not, are patient-focused," he said. "In the end, what's important is the people we do this work for—our neighbors on the South Shore."

College President Peter Tsaffaras, J.D., said Quincy College has made tremendous improvements to provide all the resources needed for students to have a successful college experience. With their focus on teaching and learning, Quincy College faculty and staff take pride in seeing students accomplish their goals.

"Commencement is always a special day here at Quincy College, as it focuses on our students' achievements and aspirations and is especially meaningful for their families and loved ones," Tsaffaras said.

Cheryl Bartlett was the keynote speaker at the commencement. She was recognized with the Distinguished Speaker award for her career in public health and health care.

Dr. Wayne Westcott, acclaimed for his contributions to the field of exercise science and his lifelong dedication to education, was honored as mace bearer for the ceremony for his outstanding service to the Quincy College community and its students.

Bartlett, RN was named Commissioner of the Massachusetts Department of Public Health in June 2013. She has been a voice for promoting positive change in health outcomes for Massachusetts residents. As Commissioner Ms. Bartlett chairs the newly appointed Prevention and Wellness Advisory Board, which oversees a $60 million Prevention Trust Fund – the first of its kind in the nation.

As former Deputy Commissioner, Bartlett led the Department's creation and implementation of regulations to support the use of marijuana for medicinal purposes. Prior to being named Deputy Commissioner, Ms. Bartlett was the Director of the Bureau of Community Health and Prevention where she provided strategic direction and oversight for Mass in Motion – the groundbreaking Patrick administration obesity prevention initiative to help Massachusetts residents to eat better and move more in the places they live, learn, work and play.

Bartlett has extensive experience as a registered nurse and hospital administrator implementing health system changes through quality assessment and improvement practices. She received national certification in four nursing specialties; cardiovascular, epidemiology, surveillance and infection control, dialysis and HIV/AIDS.

Bartlett has held elected and appointed positions at the local level in several municipalities, including serving on the Nantucket Board of Selectmen. She received her nursing training at Yale New Haven Hospital and Quinnipiac University and graduated summa cum laude from Stonehill College with a degree in health care administration. Recently, Ms. Bartlett was recognized by Health Leaders magazine as one of twenty individuals making a difference in healthcare in the U.S.

Wayne L. Westcott, Ph.D., directed fitness research programs at the South Shore YMCA in Quincy, MA for more than 25 years. In 2006, he developed an Exercise Science Major at Quincy College, where he now teaches and conducts strength training research studies.

system with glycol would amount to roughly $40,000. "It's not cheap," he said.

Damage at North affected ceiling tiles and possibly some carpeting, however no structural issues were reported.

HVAC specialist with the city David Scott will make recommendations going forward in case of similar emergencies. In the meantime, Koch is requesting he be updated on the current condition of HVAC systems throughout the city.

"What I've asked the maintenance department to do is, I want to know every building, every municipal building and especially the schools, what buildings have [glycol] and what buildings don't, the last time it was updated and how often does it have to be updated."

"They'll be issuing me a report on that and then we'll deal with the financial side."

A permanent fix for North Quincy High School has yet to be determined, however everything is "up and running and things are back in place."

"We've never had this trouble before," he said. "That one was clearly a case of something new."

Mold won't be a potential problem according to Koch, who said that the water was cleaned up quickly. "It's not something that's sitting."

Maralin Manning To Receive Henry Bosworth Award

"So many good deeds have been accomplished throughout Quincy because Maralin Manning has given 1,000 percent to every cause she's involved in," Bosworth said.

"I also want to congratulate the other nominees for this award. They underscore the fact that Quincy is comprised of many volunteers and public servants who make the city a better place to live, work and raise a family while ensuring that our less fortunate citizens are not forgotten."

Serving on this year's selection panel were:

Bette Campbell, executive director, Quincy Access Television; City Clerk Joseph Shea, Paul Moody, immediate past recipient of the Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Memorial Award; and former Mayor Francis McCauley, a past recipient of the Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year Award (now known as the Henry Bosworth Award).

Manning was nominated for the Henry Bosworth Award by Donna Mavromates, vice president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, and Don Uvanitte, senior vice president of Eastern Insurance.

In her nomination, Mavromates stated:

"Maralin Manning has been a stalwart in the business community for close to 25 years. During this time, she has proven to be a true advocate for the City of Quincy, and her passion for the city is immeasurable.

"In addition to being the director of the Quincy Business Association and business development director of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, Maralin continues to volunteer her time with a number of community organizations. She generously and selflessly gives her time, expertise, and heart to all of these organizations, without ever seeking recognition or accolades for doing so."

Manning's community service has virtually touched every corner of the city.

Groups she has actively served on include the Board of Directors for Maria Droste Services, Quincy After School Program, Kiwanis Club of Quincy, Quincy Salvation Army and Impact Quincy as well as the Advisory Board of the Quincy High School Career and Technical Training.

JUDGING PANEL that selected Maralin Manning as the 2013 recipient of the Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Memorial Citizenship Award (from left) Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth, past award recipient and former Mayor Frank McCauley, City Clerk Joseph Shea, Quincy Access TV Executive Director Bette Campbell and Paul Moody, commander of the Morrisette Post Sons of the American Legion and immediate past award recipient. Jonathan Caliri Photo

She also has served with the American Red Cross, Quincy Historic Commission, Quincy Downtown Development Citizens Advisory, Quincy Medical Center Curry Cancer Walk and the Mayor's Boy Scout Breakfast. She is a past trustee of the Quincy Historical Society and former board member of the Souther Tide Mill and USS Salem.

Why be involved with so many groups?

"First of all, I can't say no," Manning replied. "And I just love working with people.

"We have a very short time here on earth and I just want to accomplish as much as I can while I am here."

A very spry 80 years young, she adds:

"I have been blessed with good health and a high energy level and I'd rather be moving than sitting. I can always give my time and energy."

In his nomination, Uvanitte stated: "Maralin Manning has represented the voice and advocacy for small businesses for many years. She has also been instrumental in helping Quincy businesses in all phases of business planning."

Manning became the executive director of the old Quincy Center Business and Professional Association in 1992. She was 59 years old at the time and had retired as the president of Burdette School.

But as many colleagues and friends can attest, Manning is not the retiring type.

"I was totally bored after the first 30 days of retirement," she recalls. "I happened to see the (QCPBA position) advertised in the paper and I decided to give it a whirl."

Manning guided the QCBPA – later renamed the Quincy Business Association – for 22 years until the organization merged with the Quincy Chamber of Commerce about four years ago. She served as the Chamber's director of business development until her resignation last month to pursue other opportunities, including her own fashion consulting business.

Commenting on her advocacy for small businesses, Manning said, "I felt like I was a partner on a team of a lot of small businesses that when they had something missing on their management team whether it be promotion or marketing or retail sales . . . some little piece that they didn't need because of my background in retailing I could step in and offer some sort of help to them. I was part of a team of a lot of small businesses."

Besides her positions at the QBA and Chamber, she has worked as an adjunct instructor at Mount Ida College, director of the Chamberlain School of Retailing and fashion director for Jordan Marsh Co. She is also an independent lecturer in fashion, color, color and advertising and corporate branding.

Daughter of the late Gertrude (Noonan) Mandros and the late Theodore Mandros, Manning is the mother of six children: Patrice Manning Flavin, Moira Manning Shigo, Robert Manning, Gregory Manning, Theodore Manning and Michael Manning. She also has 17 grandchildren.

Born in Lawrence, she attended St. Mary's, Notre Dame High School and received a Bachelor of Fine Arts from the Massachusetts College of Art. She also graduated from the Executive Training Program at Jordan Marsh, Co.

She lived in Milton for many years and was active in a host of town organizations including school PTOs and the high school rebuilding committees. Today, she hails from Quincy.

She is a former Camp Fire leader, past secretary of the Milton Republican Town Committee, convention delegate for the Quincy Republican City Committee and secretary of the Norfolk County Republican Committee.

"If you're not involved, you're not a part of life," she says.

"And I've met some wonderful people along the way."

18 Other Nominees For Henry Bosworth Memorial Award

There were 18 other nominees submitted for 2013 Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Memorial Citizenship Award.

Those nominees, and who nominated them, in alphabetical order, are:

State Rep. Bruce Ayers who works tirelessly 24-7 on behalf of the disabled and his constituency. His lifetime has been devoted to education, public safety, environment, health and human services and affordable housing. Nominated by Jeanne Reardon, Chickatabot Road.

Sister Lorraine Bernier (posthumously) - late executive director of Maria Droste Good Shepherd Services, for her dedication to the poor. "A compassionate, dedicated and caring individual; her work at Maria Droste Counseling Services touched many lives. She brightened the days of all of those who knew her and worked tirelessly to help others." Nominated by Michelle Stenberg, Caledonia Avenue; Josephine Vidal, Rhude Street; Barbara Niles, Edinboro Road; Stephen DesRoche, Milton and Richard Welch.

Geoff Hennessy for his years of dedicated service to the youth of Quincy as director of the Quincy Track Club, coach and teacher in the Quincy Public Schools, his work with city government in the creation of the new track at Faxon Field. Nominated by Fred and Jane Cashman, Furnace Brook Parkway. (Editor's Note: Mrs. Cashman passed away Jan. 9.)

Ron Ivil who has worked tirelessly as president of the Quincy/North Quincy Football Hall of Fame for 17 years and also serves as president of the 1950's Alumni Club. His accomplishments include establishing a permanent Hall of Fame brick structure containing plaques of all those enshrined in the Hall of Fame, renovating the interior of the concession stand and coordinating all dinners, parties and reunion functions. Nominated by George Burke and Matt Ivil.

Kevin Glennon for his work on fundraising for "Little Hearts" and his work on Quincy Community Action Planning and city Drug Task Force and Nickerson Post SAL. Nominated by John McHugh, Vane Street.

Janet Little, devoted, lifelong citizen of Quincy who taught in local schools as a special needs teacher for over 30 years. She has spent her summers as volunteer manager of the Quincy Farmers' Market and plays cello in the symphony orchestra and also coaches and tutors youth. Nominated by Janet Colclugh Barger, Manet Avenue.

Margaret 'Peg' O'Brien, tireless volunteer at the Quincy Animal Shelter "who is the glue that holds the place together. She has brought so many people to the shelter and persuaded them to volunteer, donate or sit on the board of directors. She makes everyone feel special." Nominated by Sandra Sines, Pembroke.

Margaret O'Connor, volunteer director of the South Shore Center for the Blind and former employee of the Quincy Council on Aging who always went above and beyond in her love and care of senior members of our community. "She is most deserving for this honor not only for her work with the blind since she retired, but for her many, many hers working in the entire city, in her church and local community of Houghs Neck." Nominated by Lois Murphy, Sea Avenue.

Brian Palmucci, Ward 4 councillor, who "constantly gives people in his ward updates on what is happening. When I call him, he always calls me back the same day, usually within two hours." Nominated by Marilyn Kearney, Independence Avenue.

Seaside Gardeners of Squantum, a group of dedicated individuals that volunteer their time for the betterment of the Squantum community and are engaged in several environmental, conservation, beautification, and civic projects. Since 1952, they have sponsored events such as secret garden tours, plant sales, and scholarship awards. Nominated by state Rep. Bruce Ayers.

Quincy Chamber of Commerce Annual Meeting, Business Showcase

At Boston Marriott Quincy Hotel Jan. 30

The Quincy Chamber of Commerce Annual Meeting and Business Showcase will be held Thursday, Jan. 30 from 4 to 7:30 p.m. at the Boston Marriott Quincy.

The doors to the Business Showcase open at 4 p.m. and the event is open to the public.

Over 70 Quincy Chamber businesses are scheduled to have a presence for the business showcase, which traditionally attracts over 300 attendees.

"The Annual Meeting and Business Showcase is the perfect mix of networking, socializing, and business promotion conducted in a fun and relaxed setting," said Donna Mavromates, Vice President of the Quincy Chamber. "It's a great way to start off the New Year and make new business connections. And this year both the Business Showcase and keynote presentation are open to the public, which is a great opportunity for residents and others to connect with Quincy's business community."

A new element that has been added to the Annual Meeting is a presentation by a successful local entrepreneur. This year's meeting features Johnny Earle, President & CEO of the wildly successful Johnny Cupcakes as the keynote speaker.

Over the past decade Johnny Cupcakes has grown from a "joke" to a multi-million dollar, highly exclusive t-shirt brand driven by a community of world-wide collectors. Earle shares his story of how he took his t-shirt brand from the trunk of his rusty car at age 19, with a learning disability, to some of the world's most sought after retail locations.

Through his inspiring, and certainly unpredictable journey, Earle exudes the fundamental connection between the person and the brand. His presentation provides comprehensive blueprints for getting any small business, passion or idea off the ground, while also expanding the way existing creators think.

Earle has been recognized for his innovative business strategies where he has been named America's #1 Young Entrepreneur by BusinessWeek as well as placed #237/500 in Inc. Magazine's top 500 fastest growing independent businesses.

The Boston Globe recently named Earle as one of the 30 most innovative businessmen in Massachusetts. Johnny Cupcakes has also been featured on NPR, MTV, CNN, Wall Street Journal, Entrepreneur Magazine, New York Times, Wired Magazine, WWD, NYLON, Computer Arts, Los Angeles Times, FORBES, & as a case study in numerous text books.

Tickets are $15 and include admission to the Business Showcase and Keynote Presentation, appetizers and and light buffet dinner. Purchase tickets online at www.thequincychamber.com or call (617) 471-1700.

Trees Offer Surprising Year-Round Insulation

By Samantha Mazzotta

Q: An acquaintance told me recently that I could plant a tree on the west side of my house to keep my summer cooling bills down. Well, I live in a colder northern state, and it just doesn't make sense to plant a tree that would block the sun in the winter. My friend disagreed. What's your recommendation? -- Susie in Madison, Wis.

A: The great thing about trees is that they have the ability to both keep your house cool in summer and warmer in winter. In Minnesota, a state study found that strategically placed shade trees can reduce air-conditioning bills by nearly 25 percent, and a windbreak can reduce annual fuel bills by up to 20 percent.

How does it work? It all depends on where you place the trees.

In the northern hemisphere, winter winds generally blow in from the north or northwest. (In the Northeast, we also tend to get those wonderful winter nor'easters, but that's another story.) Those cold winds can make it harder to heat your home as they drive in through vents or leaky window- and door frames.

Plant a couple of trees on the side of your house from which these prevailing winter winds blow (the northwest side or corner, most likely), and they'll act as a windbreak. Even deciduous trees that lose their leaves in the winter can provide adequate protection.

To get the best protection from winds while allowing more winter sunlight to reach your home, choose trees that will grow higher than your home's roof eaves, with sturdy trunks and good branching. Deciduous trees will lose their leaves in winter so that the sunlight can filter in, while perennials (like pines or firs) offer a green view year-round. You might even want to mix these two types of trees.

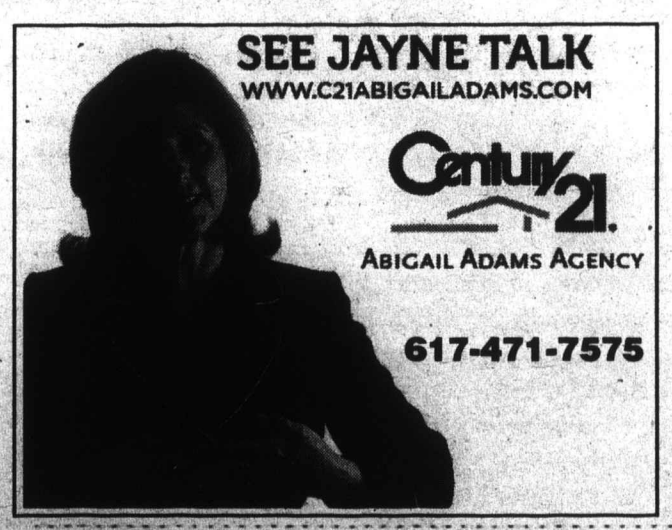

HOME TIP: Plant protective trees one to two tree lengths (based on the average height to which the saplings eventually will grow) from the house, but no farther.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On January 2, 2014, at approximately 10:45 p.m., Officers' Dan Francis and Matt Tobin were dispatched to Hancock Street in North Quincy on a report of a domestic disturbance. The victim was a female caller.

Officer Matt Tobin, who was nearby, arrived in less than a minute and was joined by Officers' Mark Smith and Chris Bulger, who were in the area on a snow removal detail during the snowstorm.

Responding units were advised by Communications that the caller was waiting outside of the residence and that the suspect was likely unaware of her call to the Police. Although the Officers were at the location, due to the poor visibility and the fact that the apartment was in the basement in back of a business, it took time to locate the victim.

The caller was crying and so upset that she was initially unable to tell the Officers what occurred. The Officers were able to calm her to the point that they could determine that her boyfriend had punched her in the face multiple times and that her jaw was almost swollen shut, which also affected her ability to talk. She also said that her boyfriend slammed her head off the wall and strangled her with his hands after she fell to the floor. She added that she briefly "blacked out" but was able to recall all aspects of the incident.

The victim said that her boyfriend lives in New York but was visiting since New Year's Eve. She said they have been dating for three years and "see each other every so often." She said that the problems started when his cell phone died and he asked to use her phone to access the internet. When he returned her phone to her, she saw his Facebook page still open and a number of comments indicating he was "cheating on me." She said she confronted him which led to an argument, followed by statements that their relationship was over and for him to leave the apartment.

She said he refused to leave, then demanded money to return to New York. She refused to give him money, then began putting his belongings outside the apartment. This enraged the boyfriend, who came up behind, punched her in the head, knocking her to the ground. As she attempted to get up, he continued punching and then slammed her head against the wall. She said, "He grabbed my neck and started choking me," causing her to "black out." The victim said that she passed out briefly and when she awakened she was very dizzy. She saw that her boyfriend/suspect had her phone and when she asked for it back, he initially denied her but eventually gave it back.

She said she tried to call her mother and brother for help but he kept hanging up the phone. She said she was able to call the Police when he went to watch television. The Officers went into the apartment where they found the suspect gathering some clothes. When asked what happened, the suspect said, "Nothing happened." When asked how the victim suffered her injuries, the suspect said, "I have no idea." The suspect was then placed under arrest.

As he was led to an awaiting cruiser, the suspect blurted out, "She pulled a knife on me, it's in the cutlery drawer." The Officers recognized this as a poor attempt to suggest self-defense, since he was uninjured and the cutlery drawer is where knives are commonly located. The victim was transported by ambulance to Quincy Medical Center for treatment. Photographs for evidence purposes were taken of the victim's injuries; a cut to her left ear, swollen jaw, red marks on her neck that appear to be from a hand and or fingers, gouge marks on her neck consistent with fingernails and red bloodshot eyes.

The victim said that her head and jaw hurt the most and she had some neck pain where he squeezed it hard. She said she was barely able to open her jaw.

After being advised of her rights and protections under the domestic violence laws, the victim refused all available resources. She said the suspect is not familiar with Quincy and since she picked him up at South Station in Boston, it was unlikely he would know how to find her apartment again. The Officers again strongly advised her to get a restraining order and she said she would call the Police if she changed her mind or to have Officers stand by while he collected his belongings. The medical staff at QMC ordered a number of tests for the victim, including a CT scan of her head. The suspect, a 23 year old New York resident, was charged with "Assault and Battery, Assault and Battery with a Dangerous Weapon to wit a wall and Assault with Intent to Murder to wit manual strangulation. Due to the severity of the incident and the fact that the suspect had no ties to the area, high bail was requested. Nice Work!

NICE WORK! Goes out to Officer Greg Hartnett, who was off-duty, coming out of a local restaurant when a female motorist pulled over and frantically told him that her passenger was dead. Officer Hartnett called for immediate assistance via "911", then started checking the well being of the passenger as he spoke with the female, who said that the passenger took drugs. Officer Cassidy arrived on scene moments later and applied Narcan, which revived the passenger. Fallon Ambulance transported the passenger to Quincy Medical Center.

ANOTHER BANK ROBBER CAUGHT! On Sunday, January 5th, at approximately 12:40 p.m., Officers responded to a bank robbery at the Citizen's Bank inside the Stop N Shop store on Newport Avenue. Officers caught the suspect in Wollaston Center minutes later. The suspect was caught with the money on him as well as the red dye that exploded from one of the money packs. This arrest is another example of how effective the Quincy Police Department is in apprehending bank robbers as well as other criminal offenders. Nice Work!

QUINCY POLICE DEPARTMENT OPEN HOUSE/ TOURS/BLOOD DRIVE!

On Saturday, February 15th, the Quincy Police Department will have an open house and tours of the station from 10:00 A.M. to 2:00 P.M. Tours will include the communications area and the cell block. There will also be a cruiser available to check out all the equipment used by Officers. Be sure to bring a camera!

BLOOD DRIVE INFO:

From 8:00 A.M. to 2:00 P.M., there will also be the Quincy Police Department/Glennon Family blood drive in the parking lot of the Quincy Police Station. For more information on either the open house/tours or the blood drive, contact Lieutenant Daniel J. Minton at 617 745 5719.

Old City Hall Project On Pace

against it. There's a sequence of operations on that. Probably within the next month they'll be excavating for that rear foundation for the new addition."

The new addition will be made of glass as well as granite repurposed from the old Quincy High School building that was razed last August. The addition will include space for elevators, a stairway, bathrooms, and a QATV production room. A new, one-story link between the old and new buildings will also be constructed.

Other exterior work will take place later this year. A new slate roof will be installed to replace the old, leaky one. That work should start in the spring. New windows are currently being designed and should be ready for installation over the summer.

"They're starting to prepare what they call shop drawings for the windows. The roofing work, there's really no need for us to hasten that right now because there are no finishes inside for us to protect," Edwards said. "We'll probably wait for a little bit milder weather before we start the roof, so I would say in the spring the roofing work starts and probably in the summer the windows will be ready to put in."

Inside the building, workers have begun installing temporary reinforcement towers. Those towers will be used to brace the building's walls while floors are removed and replaced.

"We've got some holes in the wall to allow reinforcement towers to be built inside, structural components that allow the exterior components to be braced. What we have to do during this process is reframe the existing floors, which are old, cut up pretty badly and don't meet today's code. We knew they didn't, so part of the contract is to build these framing towers in there and brace the outside walls," Edwards said.

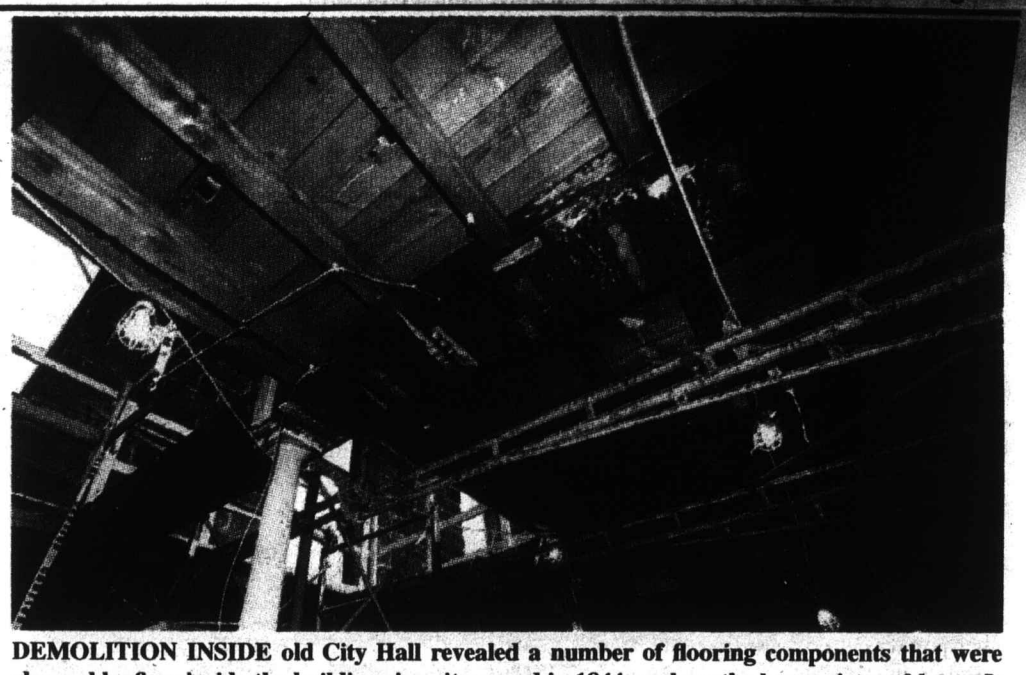

"Once the outside walls are braced, we'll start to remove and reinstall the first floor and second floor framing systems. At that point the bracing towers can be taken out – the new floor framing will be bracing the outside walls."

Once completed, the interior space on the second floor will house the 50-foot by 80-foot Great Hall. The Great Hall, with space for 180 people, will be reserved for use by the City Council and other major events, such as mayoral inaugurations. A balcony overlooking the Great Hall will be built on the building's third floor. It will extend out 30 feet over the Great Hall, and will have seating for 40 people.

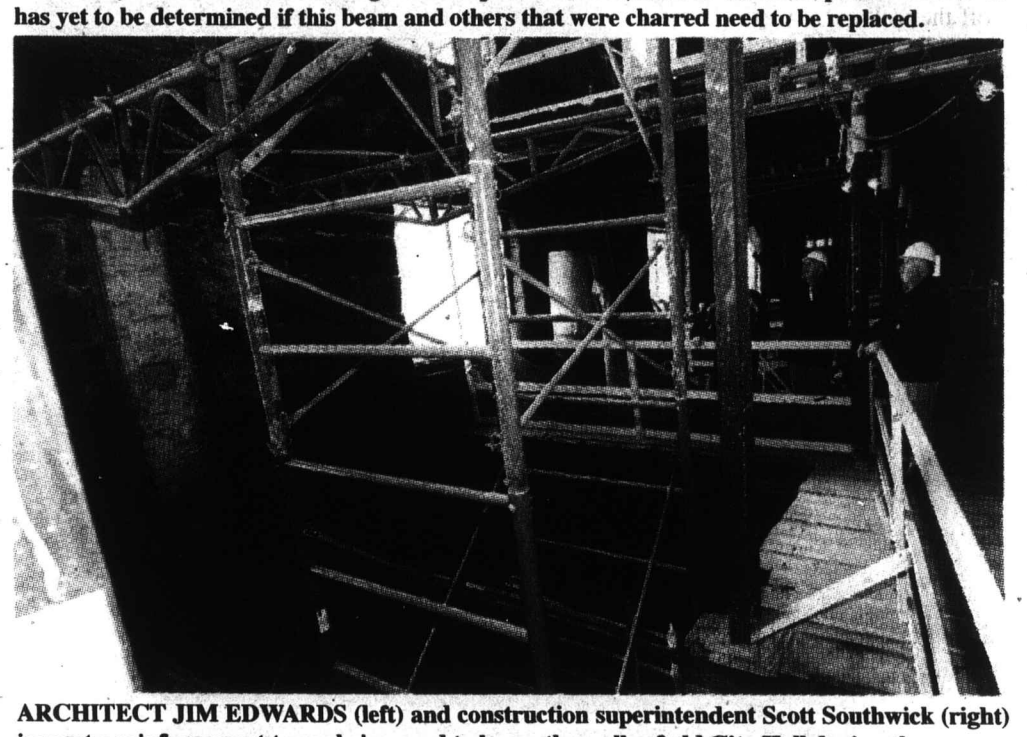

The first floor will be divided into exhibit space that will most likely feature information on Quincy's political history, and meeting space for other city boards including the License Board, Planning Board, and Zoning Board of Appeals.

The City Hall renovation project is being done in concert with the renovation of nearby Coddington Hall. Coddington Hall, once renovated, will house the School, Planning, and IT Departments and will also have space for the School Committee to meet. The two projects have a combined price tag of $18 million.

The Coddington Hall project is expected to be completed this summer. Edwards said the renovations to old City Hall should be completed by January 2015. After that, renovations will take place inside the new City Hall building as offices in there will be shuffled – space currently used by the Finance Department and the temporary council chamber on the second floor, for example, will house the City Clerk's Office.

DEMOLITION INSIDE old City Hall revealed a number of flooring components that were charred by fires inside the building since it opened in 1844, such as the beam pictured here. It has yet to be determined if this beam and others that were charred need to be replaced.

Presidents Rally Past Hingham, Bounce Hanover

By BILL GRIFFIN

It is still early, and the long march through January and February lies ahead. However, if Quincy makes a run at a league title and a long trip in the tourney, the Presidents will look back at the Hingham game as the one which turned around their season.

Quincy entered the match at 2-3. The Presidents fell behind by 17 late in the third period on the road. It was a moment when the season could have slipped away quietly. Instead Quincy, inspired by a lockdown defensive effort from seldom-used senior Johnny Marsinelli, stormed back with a remarkable rally for a memorable 66-57 win last week which should have been saved on a DVD.

"Absolutely, it was a turnaround game," said coach Dave Parry. "We were down 13 at the half and I told the kids if they had any thoughts of the league title, they had to win this game. Champions win tough games on the road. This was one we needed to win."

In other action. Drew Myers scored 23 while Brendan Cunningham and Colin Evans had 14 apiece as Quincy raced past Hanover, 70-47 Friday night. Quincy finished the week at 4-3 overall and 3-1 in the league.

To appreciate the comeback against Hinglfam, just think of the numbers. Quincy was down late in the third period by 17. The Presidents won by nine. That means in just over 10 minutes of play, Quincy outscored a quality team on the road by 26 points. Many suns will rise and fall before that happens again.

"We made some adjustments to our press and it opened up everything for us," said Parry. "We got open looks at threes, we got layups, we got to the line. In the first half, we scored 18 points. In the second half,

Starters Setting Tone For Red Raiders

By BILL GRIFFIN

Defense never takes a vacation. Jump shots may come and jump shots may go. Fancy passing may appear and fancy passing may vanish. However, defense, if a team is willing to play hard, is there every night.

Everybody on the roster played and everybody on the roster played defense. North Quincy held Pembroke to five points in each of the second and third periods – that's 10 points in half the game – and rode impressive depth to its eighth straight win, 49-33, in a Patriot League Fisher Division game Friday night at the Red Raiders' gym.

North finished the week at 8-0 (4-0 in the league). The last time a North Quincy team started the season at 8-0 was the 1971-72 club which advanced to the sectional finals in the Garden.

"I think what we've realized from the first day at practice is there are nights when you are not going to shoot 50 or 60 percent. If you play defense, those are the games you can win," said coach Kevin Barrett whose team has gone 43-9 over the past three years.

It was North's second defensive gem of the week. The Red Raiders held Hanover to two points in the third period and rolled to a 53-35 win. Efthim Butka had 21 points while Solomon Umoren had eight and played a strong all-around game. Anthony Green added eight while Kyle Richardson had seven.

"The goal is 45 every night. That's what we shoot for," said Barrett whose team has held its opposition under 45 in five of eight games "There have been a few bumps in the road, but overall I've been satisfied with it."

What is striking is North's intensity. The starters play shirt-to-shirt defense. They hustle, they talk, they switch, they help each other. Green erases any mistakes inside. Then the second unit – Jackie Chen, Vinny Tran, Greg Clarke, Tyshawn Moore, Dhaaky Drake – enters and plays their man-to-man just as hard. Then Antoine Allen, Andy He, Pat Janeiro and Joijuan Phoenix come into a 20-game in the fourth period and play as tough as the starters did when the score was 0-0. There is something contagious here.

"I think the starters set the tone," said Barrett. "Energy is what makes defense work. We want to contest shots, play defense on our toes, shut down drives."

It was not only good defense, it was clean defense. North committed seven team fouls in the game. There are teams that commit seven team fouls in seven minutes. The Red Raiders forced four 35-second clock violations and missed a fifth by a fraction of an instant in the first half. Green had four rejections before the game was 12 minutes old.

"Having Anthony back there to cover up mistakes allows us to be a lot more aggressive," said Barrett.

Matt Gerakis had 10 to lead the offense which saw 11 players score. North has been able to develop enviable depth in its eight-game run. The Red Raiders have been able to go 10-deep with players who can give them meaningful minutes. None of the starters played in the fourth period against Pembroke.

Sophomore point guard Dhaaky Drake and senior forward Greg Clarke had fine games.

Drake was aggressive on defense and steady and sure with the ball. Kyle Richardson sat for the final three minutes of the second period and didn't play after the midway point of the third period. Drake handled the point well in his absence, consistently moving the ball well and getting North into its offense.

"He is an energizer for us," said Barrett. "He has come along. He ran the offense and did a great job on defense."

Clarke had six points and six rebounds. He hits the boards, does the hard work underneath and also has the ability to finish with a soft touch at the rim. He is a solid player behind Green and Butka.

"Greg is a lunch-pail player. He does the dirty work, the defense and the rebounding. Any offense you get is a pleasant surprise," said Barrett.

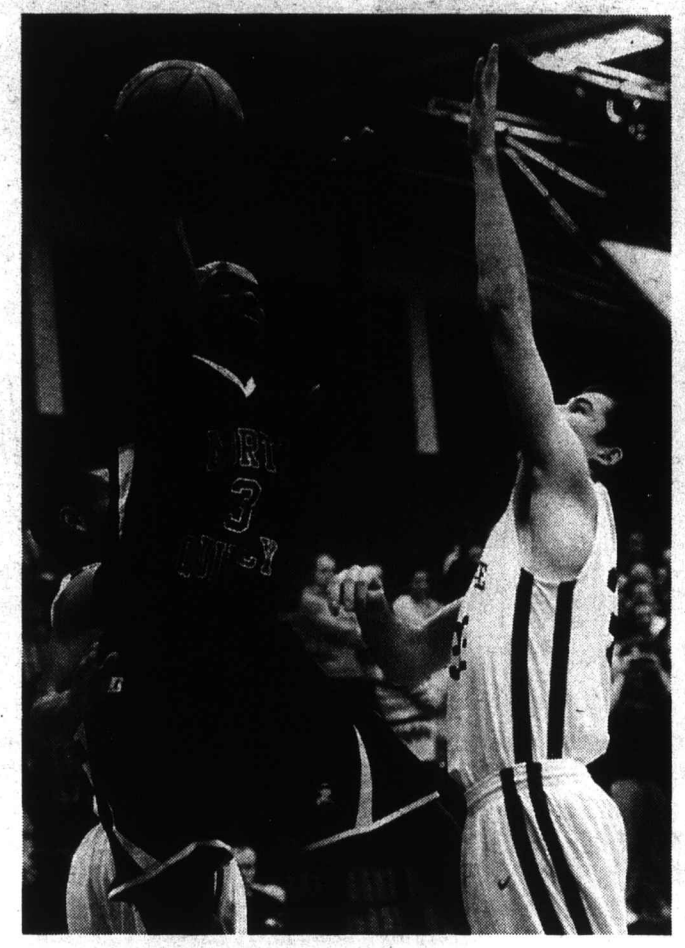

Butka had seven which is not a big scoring night for him, but he showcased what a complete player he has become. He had nine rebounds, blocked a couple of shots and passed up open looks with clever, unselfish passes to teammates who were clear for better shots.

"That's one thing that could make us better as the season goes along," said Barrett. "Efthim is a more complete player. In big games or in the tourney when teams run two men at him, he has the ability to hit the open shooter."

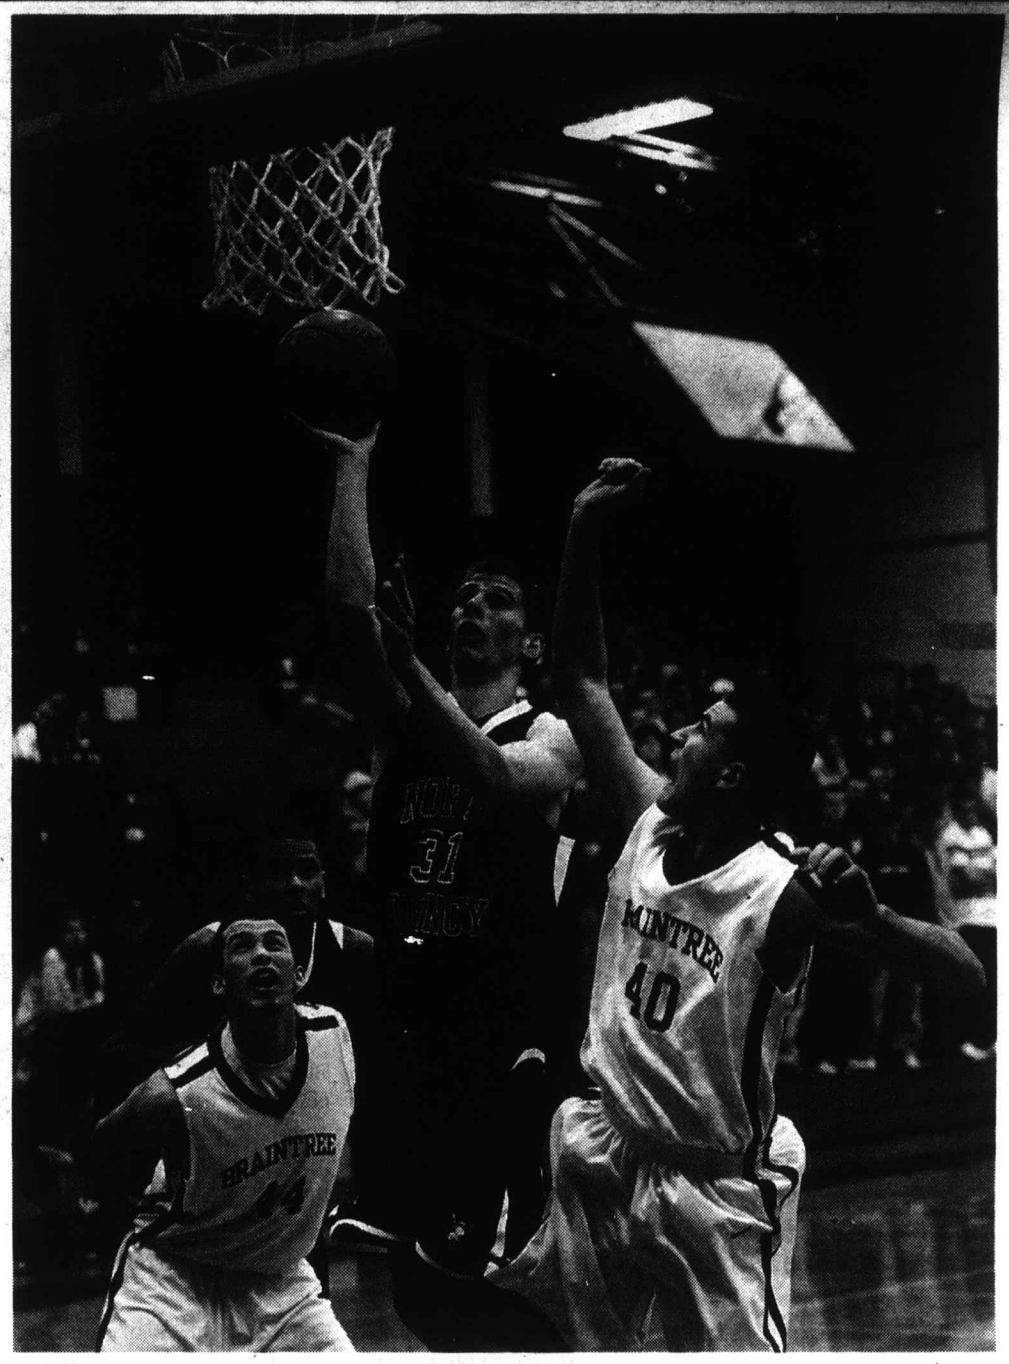

Green had eight for North while Umoren (4), Richardson (4), Chen (3), Phoenix (2), Moore (2), Tran (2), and Janeiro (1) also cracked the scoring column.

North led 17-8 after one, 25-13 at the half, 24-18 after three, and had it to 44-23 early in the fourth.

North is at Scituate, the defending division champs who were 5-0 at the end of last week, Friday at 6:30.

we scored 48. It was a complete turnaround."

It was not a one-man show, but Marsinelli was at the heart of it. He had played little in the first five games. He hadn't played at all in the first half against Hingham. Parry brought him into the game and put him on Hingham's top scorer Tom Staley who had hurt Quincy with 16 points in the first half. Marsinelli turned around the game with his defense.

"We made a change in our press which forced them to move Staley into the backcourt to bring up the ball. That helped, but the big thing was Johnny played lockdown defense," said Parry. "The other kids saw what he was doing and it excited them. I tell all of them it's a long season and to be ready. Johnny was ready."

Marsinelli did one of the toughest things an athlete can do in sports. He came in cold off the bench into a game, in which everyone else was warmed up and playing at full speed, and made a huge contribution immediately.

"It's incredibly difficult to do what he did," said Parry. "I always say it takes two or three minutes just to feel comfortable, but Johnny came in and did his job right away."

Myers and Cunningham led the offense against the Harbormen with 17 apiece. Junior James Lam who was playing on an injured ankle, very nearly had a triple-double with 12 points, 10 rebounds and eight assists.

"There was one rebound towards the end of the game when James just tore it away from one of his teammates and a Hingham player. It was just brute strength. He is a great competitor," said Parry.

In the Hanover game, Quincy trailed by three early, but with the press cooking, the Presidents upped the lead to 41-20 at the half. Marsinelli saw a lot of action in the first half, played solid defense once again, and scored six points.

The Indians never quit, but whenever they narrowed the lead, Myers delivered a three-point jumper to make things comfortable for the Presidents. Quincy's reserves, led by Abraham Hoti, Ken Sorensen, Carl Zapata, and Reda Laftih, played solid basketball in protecting the lead.

"It ended up as a good week," said Parry. "We have a tough stretch ahead. We have six games in two weeks."

Quincy travels to Duxbury for a 3:30 p.m. game Friday.

CLEARING YOUR HEAD

Chiropractors work to correct misalignments in the spine that squeeze nerves and disrupt the flow of nerve energy that regulates body function. As interference is removed from the nervous system, the body's master control system, the body's self-healing ability is restored. Because the brain lies at the center of the nervous system, its function is of primary interest to chiropractors and other medical professionals. Therefore, it comes as important news that researchers have recently discovered the system by which the brain cleanses itself. The newly named "glymphatic" system, which piggybacks on the brain's existing blood vessels, acts as a plumbing system that rids the brain of waste material. This finding paves the way for new understanding of brain function.

The brain only has limited energy at its disposal and it appears that it must choose between two different functional states – awake and aware or asleep and cleaning up. With good health, this can be the most productive and enjoyable time of your life. We have been restoring people to optimum health and are well qualified to guide you in a program of optimum health. # Minton, McKay Carry Red Raiders Over Indians

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was an early-season match between two divisional powers, and North Quincy won it because the Red Raiders did things which show up in the box score and things that do not.

Grace Geary, Maya Umoren, and Marissa McGue piled up impressive and important points, rebounds, assists and steals, but basketball games are not solely won by what is measured by numbers.

The shade of difference came from Jane Minton and Haley McKay who played shutdown defense which carried the Red Raiders to a 52-49 decision over previously unbeaten Hanover in what was likely a battle between the top two teams in the Fisher Division of the Patriot League at the North Quincy Gym last week.

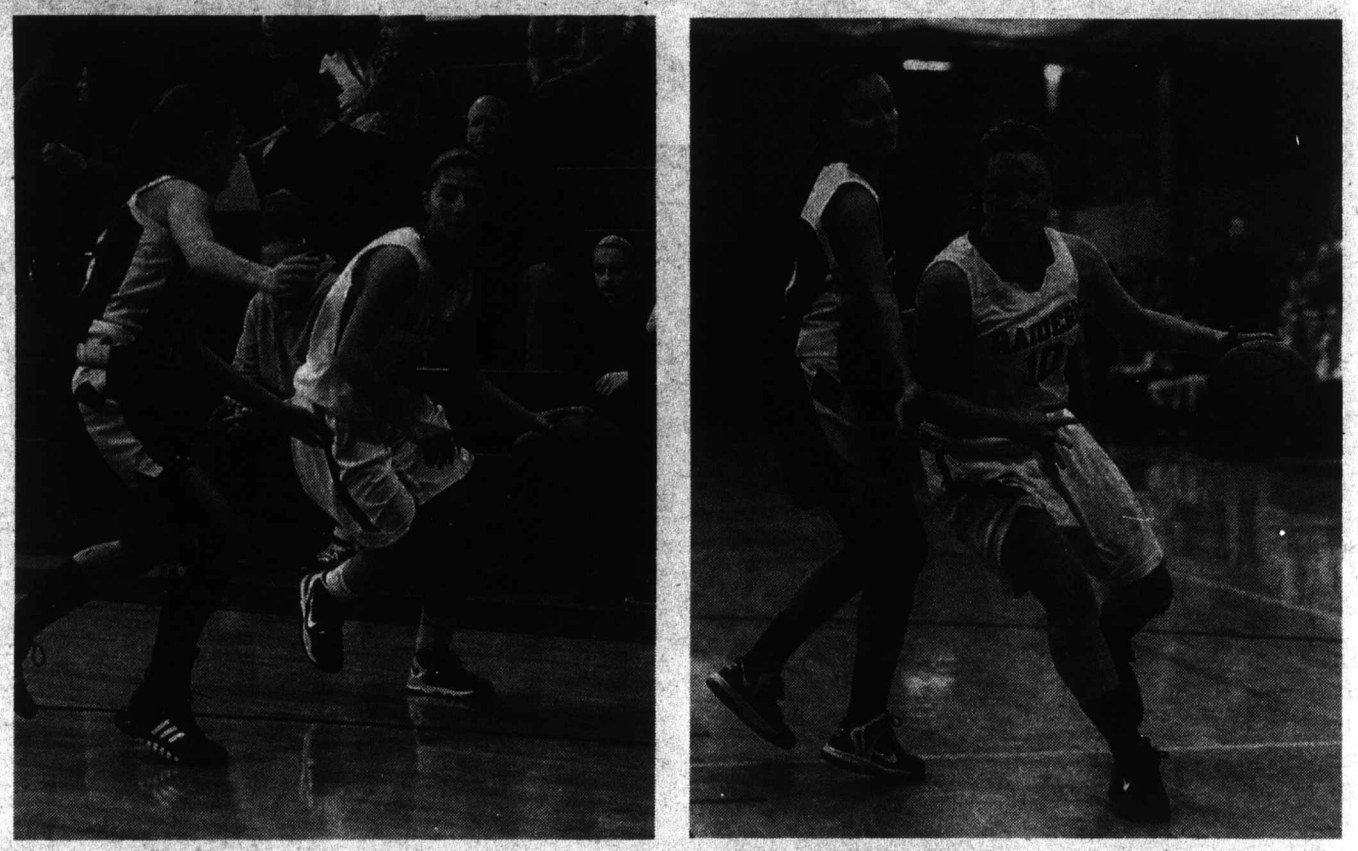

"Our defensive intensity was excellent," said coach Jessica Worden. "We had good balance on offense, and Jane and Haley played great defense, especially in the second half. Hanover, Scituate figure to be the strong teams in our division."

North made it a clean sweep and finished last week at 5-2 overall and 4-0 in the league by defeating Middleboro, 55-26 and Pembroke, 51-45.

Geary had 12 points and six steals while Umoren added 11 points in the romp over Middleboro. Umoren had 13 points and 12 rebounds while Geary had 13 points, nine rebounds and eight steals for the Red Raiders against Pembroke. Minton had 10 points and 15 rebounds while McKay added five points, eight rebounds and another excellent defensive effort.

The Hanover game was remarkably well-played especially considering both clubs entered with a layoff of more than a week. There were few fouls called, the game had a flow to it, and there was crisp passing, accurate shooting from deep and fast-break drives to the bucket. It was tense and close from start to finish. The largest lead was six points. There were seven ties and 13 lead changes. It was high-quality basketball.

"We knew it was a big game, but we had only two practices to get ready for it," said Worden whose team played its previous game on Dec. 28. "Hanover was in the same situation, but both teams played good basketball. The referees let us play and the quality of play was very good."

Geary did everything a guard should do. She had 19 points and six assists. She had 44 points in three games last week. She hit three threes against Hanover, finished softly and cleanly on drives, and found the open player both out of the set offense and on the break. She also had eight steals. Against Marshfield, she had 10 steals She had 23 steals in three games last week. She is more than a scorer. She plays the whole game.

"What makes Grace tough to defend is she has a complete game," said Worden. "She can shoot, drive, and pass. She also plays good defense."

Umoren had yet another double-double with 12 points and 12 rebounds despite missing most of the second and third quarters with foul trouble. She also yanked down three rebounds and buried a clutch foul shot with 12 seconds

Presidents Defeat Hingham, Bow To Hanover

By BILL GRIFFIN

There were two pieces of good news for Quincy's girls basketball team last week..

The first came against Hingham. Senior Alyssa Lydon hit three three-point shots and Quincy's press sparked a second-half rally which carried the Presidents to a 42-36 Patriot League win.

The second was the return of sophomore center Nicole Jorgensen from an ankle injury which she suffered against Brockton on December 30.

Jorgensen played limited minutes in Friday's 53-23 loss to Hanover.

In other action last week, Brockton edged Quincy, 52-43 in a their second non-league meeting of the young season.

"We had a slow start against Hingham, but our press worked well and we hit some three-pointers which got us going," said coach Jeff Bretsch. "It was good to have Nicole back. When we lost her, I think it threw us off our stride. She is maturing into an excellent center and I think the kids were just getting used to her in the middle. I think she's ready to go now."

Quincy trailed by seven early in the game, but the Presidents outscored Hingham, 22-13 in the second half to earn the victory. Lydon had 12 points in the win. She is rebounding from ACL surgery and had her most promising effort in the win over the Harbormen.

"It was her best game of the season. She was a lot more aggressive with her play," said Bretsch.

Sophomore Gabby Jerahian was a factor again from the three-point line, adding 11 points in the winning cause.

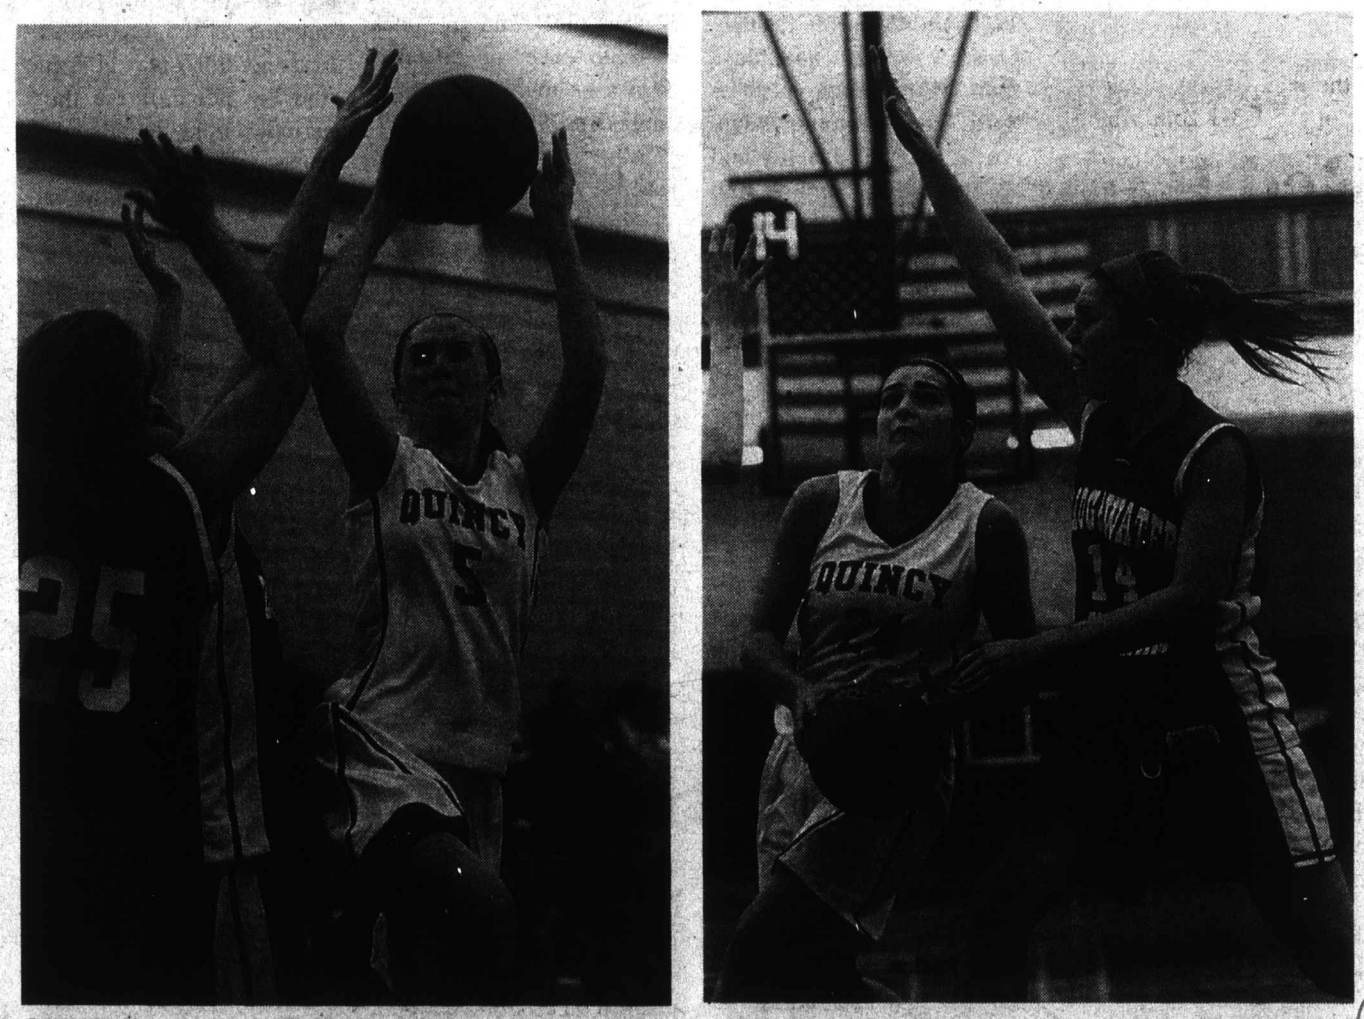

Quincy went 11-15 from the foul line which was important in the victory. Early in the season, the Presidents had trouble from the line, and it proved costly in at least two games.

"We normally shoot 65 or 70 percent in practice," said Bretsch. "It was more of a psychological thing. It was something the girls had to overcome. I think we were a little more deliberate and we did a good job against Hingham.

Senior center Leann McColgan played a big role in the win in the second half. Caroline McBride had fouled out and Quincy did not have Jorgensen for the game. McColgan stepped in and did a good job in the pivot.

"We really needed a good performance from her without Caroline and Nicole. She played well," said Bretsch.

QUINCY'S ALYSSA LYDON (left) hit three three-point shots to help spark the Presidents to a 42-36 victory over Hingham last week. In another game against Brockton, Kayla McArdle scored a team-high 13 points but the Presidents bowed to the Boxers, 52-43.

was effective on the press and sophomore Jill Mulvaney played a solid game off the bench.

In the Brockton game, McArdle was the leading scorer with 13 points while Jerahian added 12. Caroline McBride played a fine game in Jorgensen's absence with 10 rebounds and four blocks. Alyssa Camara added six for the Presidents.

"Caroline played well on both ends of the floor," said Bretsch. "She did a great job setting screens and helped pick up our offense."

The Presidents stayed close for the entire game and drew within six in the third period on baskets by Courtney Ryan and McBride.

After Brockton upped the lead to 11, the Presidents' fullcourt press produced turnovers, and Quincy fought back into the game in the fourth quarter. A pair of three-pointers by Jerahian cut the Brockton lead to 48-43, but Quincy could get no closer.

Hanover, who had only lost once by three to North Quincy entering the contest against the Presidents, played a strong game in the win over Quincy. Much like the first Brockton game, Quincy had open looks at the basket, but had trouble converting them.

"We had some good shots, we just couldn't hit them," said Brestch. "I'd say we had 10 layups, not all uncontested, that we didn't make. Our reserves did a good job playing hard when they came into the game in the second half.

Presidents, Red Raiders Basketball Notebook

By BILL GRIFFIN

One of the reason for North Quincy's success in the early part of the season has been the play of its supporting players. The core of Efthim Butka, Kyle Richardson and Anthony Green, which returned from last year's team, has been just fine, and the trio has received plenty of help as the Red Raiders have developed useful depth.

Last week in a 53-35 win over Hanover, it was junior Solomon Umoren's turn to step up with an excellent effort. Umoren, who started in all of North's first eight games, scored eight points and played terrific defense.

"It was his best game of the year," said coach Kevin Barrett. "He doesn't have to score 15 or 20 points to be effective. It's his defensive effort that can give us a lift and that's what will keep him on the floor."

Umoren is an excellent athlete, strong and fast, and as he develops varsity experience, he should be a big factor for the Red Raiders as the season progresses.

"He's such a good athlete and he can bring energy which is infectious for the the whole team," said Barrett.

Another noteworthy part of the victory was Barrett's use of the 1-3-1 zone which limited Hanover to two points in the third period and 15 in the second half. North is usually a man-to-man team, but the Red Raiders used the zone to shut down Weymouth in the second half. It worked well again against Hanover.

"It's still a work in progress," said Barrett. "We've spent some time on it in practice and it's been pretty good up until this point."

One of the reasons it has worked is that it is active zone. It's not a lazy, sit-back zone which concedes the outside shot. The Red Raiders play it with energy, particularly on the point of the zone with Richardson and Jackie Chen. They also hustle to cover the soft spots, especially in the corners, which will pop up in any zone.

"We know we have to play the zone with five players in unison. If four players are doing their job and one isn't, the zone won't work," said Barrett.

It can take some time for a football player to get his basketball legs, and James Lam is in full basketball mode at the moment. He almost had a triple double against Hingham, and leads his team in rebounding... It was a good week for the Presidents, but coach Dave Parry still sees room for improvement. "We're giving too much penetration in the paint. We're working at limiting that."

Last year, Quincy's girls team rallied down the stretch to make the tourney. Don't be surprised if the Presidents follow a similar path this year. Nicole Jorgensen has returned from her ankle injury. Sophomores Jill Mulvaney, Alyssa Camara and Gabby Jerahian have gained experience. Alyssa Lydon has shown progress returning from her ACL surgery, and Kayla McArdle is a great senior leader.

It was about this time last year that North Quincy's girls team went on a great run which resulted in a 14-7 season and a second-place finish by one game behind Scituate in the division.. It could happen again. Grace Geary (44 points, 23 steals in three games last week) is clicking with her new teammates. Maya Umoren is cranking out double-doubles in the pivot with remarkable regularity, Sophomore Marissa McGue gives North a big lift off the bench...North meets Scituate in a key division game Friday...The Red Raiders' rematch on the road with Hanover Feb. 11 should be a treat.

left with North protecting a two-point lead in the final minutes.

McGue had an athletic, and at times acrobatic, 11 points. She is aggressive on the boards and on defense, she goes for every possession and she can outrun everyone on the break. Geary found her with two long, looping passes for beautiful fast-break finishes.

"I liked having Maya shoot big that free throw" said Worden. "Marissa is so athletic. She runs her lanes on the break and she is so fast, she get herself open up the floor."

McKay has been playing terrific defense for two years, and her effort against Hanover was one of her best. She was matched against Hanover's senior captain Becca Ritchie. Ritchie is Hanover's best offensive player. McKay shut her out. No points. Not a one. McKay denied the ball and any penetration to the hoop with her either a pass or a drive.. She contested the outside shot and took Hanover out of what it wanted to do. She changed the game with her defense.

"Haley's defense was huge. That girl from Hanover is an excellent player," said Worden whose team did a great job closing out on Hanover's three-point shooters in the second half.

Post-player Stephanie Flynn had 13 in the first half for Hanover. Worden put Minton, a guard, on her for the second half. Flynn had six in the final two periods. Despite giving away six inches, Minton battled in the post for position, stopped Flynn's quick, smooth drives to the hoop, and forced Hanover to go the perimeter for its offense. Minton had six points and five assists, but those numbers tell very little about the game she played.

"When I told her about the move, she was excited. She loves a challenge," said Worden.

North led 18-15 after one, Hanover was up, 25-24 at the half, and 39-37 after three. North opened it up with a six-point run for a 51-45 lead with just over 3:00 left in the game. Geary was in the middle of it. She hit a drive, Umoren snatched an offensive rebound, and Geary hit McGue flying for a fast-break bucket and the six-point lead.

Hanover drew within two in the final minute, but McKay made a great play drawing a foul on an inbounds play which gave North possession with 23 seconds left. Umoren hit her free throw to make the final, 52-49.

"Haley's play drawing the foul made the big difference in the game," said Worden.

Duxbury Outskates Quincy

By JOE REARDON

Quincy continued to stay out of the penalty box against a tough Duxbury team on Saturday afternoon. Unfortunately, the Green Dragons didn't need odd man power plays for opportunities to win as they had their way with the Presidents 6-1 at the The Bog in Kingston. The loss against the physical, hard-skating Dragons dropped Quincy to .500 on the season (5-5) after being on the short end of a 2-1 contest against Wellesley.

The Presidents were ready for the quick Duxbury transition game, but still weren't able to slow the Green Dragons down in the first two periods. Duxbury outshot Quincy 40-14 and had the game well in hand after running out to a 3-0 lead in the first period. President goaltender Ryan Higgins was spot on between the posts and came up with several brilliant saves on the swarming Duxbury offensive attack.

"They're the fastest team we've seen," said Quincy head coach Ted Walsh. "They really outskated us and we weren't hitting in the first two periods. We put a game plan together where we finished our hits and got the puck in down low, but we weren't able to do that."

Quincy's lone tally came with 2:42 left in the second period and it was a beauty. Pat Donovan fed Brian O'Callaghan with a perfect pass on a break down the left wing and O'Callaghan wristed home a shot past Tucker Kelly to the far corner to cut the lead to 3-1. The tally came on the heels of a nifty break by Mike Pugsley, who deked out the lone defender only to have Kelly smother his wrist shot. Kelly robbed Pugsley again in the final minute of the period when he stopped his quick shot in close.

O'Callaghan and Pugsley continued to put scoring chances on Kelly in the final period, but it was Duxbury which came away with three more goals over the final 15 minutes.

Walsh was extremely pleased with Higgins' play in net and the defense of freshman Owen Lynch, who got his first varsity start. Florida transplant Brandon Nunnick was also solid on defense in his first varsity game.

Walsh said the best way to break out of the mini slump is to continue grinding. "I know we're going to overcome this," said Walsh. "The coaching staff believes in them. We're going to try to skate our way out of it."

A Breakout Winter For Quincy Wrestler Peter Orseno

Sophomore Wins Taunton Tournament

By JOE REARDON

Peter Orseno prides himself on winning matches when he takes to the mats, but more importantly he wants his opponents to remember him as someone who puts forth an all-out attack for three periods.

The bottom line for Orseno is if you want to beat him, you'd better be willing to pay a price because he's not going to let up.

"I'm not the type of wrestler who is going to overpower someone," said Orseno. "I try to out cardio him. I get stronger as the match goes on. If I'm going against a good kid and he's going to beat me, he's going to have to work for it."

The Quincy High sophomore is in the middle of a breakout winter after a promising freshman year where he felt his way through a 17-14 record. The majority of his wins, though, came during the second half of the season as Orseno became more consistent and confident in his matches. "I lost a lot of my varsity matches, but then I started coming back and getting more points," he said. "I wasn't falling behind as much."

So far, Orseno's opponents haven't been able to figure him out on the mats. He entered January with a sterling 11-2 record and a win at the Taunton Tournament. He considers his rookie season wrestling at 120 pounds as an important learning experience and knew he had to change his approach and dedication to the sport to make the move up to the elite level.

Orseno spent much of the offseason working out at The Dungeon in Hanover, a wrestling facility that attracts many of the best wrestlers on the South Shore. He also upped his roadwork and lifting regiment and came into the 2013-14 season in the best shape of his life.

Head coach Paul Reggiannini has seen the improvement from Orseno and knows he's a special wrestler. "He's going to go down as one of the best, easy. Absolutely," said Reggiannini. "He grows a lot in our practices. He takes in everything we teach him and is always striving to learn more. He'll always take us aside at the end of practice and asks can you help me with X, Y, Z. He recognizes where he has to improve and he hits the weight room hard. Peter really balances strength and his technique together. He's not afraid to go out there and mix it up, not matter who they are.

"He's a kid who anyone around the state at 120 pounds, doesn't want to face. He hasn't necessarily got his name out there yet, but it's happening now. Peter's very hard-nosed. If you want to beat him you really have to beat him down and there's not that many kids who can do that."

Orseno's daily regiment under Reggiannini is intense and helps simulate match conditions. After stretching, the team puts in 20-30 minutes of stair running followed by drills where new moves are introduced and worked on. Live wrestling caps off the nearly three-hour practices.

Orseno also began taping his matches this year and has found them to be an invaluable tool in improving and giving him that extra edge all quality wrestlers look for. He watches other wrestlers on YouTube for the same reason. "Even when you do win, there are things you pick up that you can do better next time out," Orseno explained. "I always find something I can improve on."

The approach he took in winning Taunton could be made into a blueprint for all high school wrestlers to follow. As the top seed, Orseno drew a bye in the first round, leaving him having to wait nearly three hours before his first match. Rather than replaying his strategy over and over in his head, Orseno decided instead to relax and not think about that task at hand. "I just kept my mind off it because you don't want to think about a match too long," he said. "You just want to get in there and wrestle. I felt very confident going into the last match and was really ready for it. I always want to win the first match at big meets. It sets a good tone moving forward. I'm taking it more seriously now. I used to go against a kid who wrestled varsity and think automatically that he was going to be nasty. Someone's not going to win just because they're strong if they have no technique."

Orseno wound up tearing through his three matches to pick up the win and a huge jolt of confidence in the process. He'll be looking to defend his Weymouth Tournament title from a year ago at 120 pounds.

Orseno's inexperience last year was evident shortly after his Weymouth win. His victory earned him the No. 3 seed at the Div. 2 Metro Sectionals. Orseno became overconfident and lost his focus at the sectionals. He wound up losing in the first round. With that experience behind him, Orseno vows not to let the same thing happen this season.

"I was thinking about whom I'd be facing in the finals even before I got through my first match," he said. "I kind of screwed myself."

Reggiannini believes that Orseno's ability to adapt on the mat is a huge benefit, along with his intensity and deceptive strength.

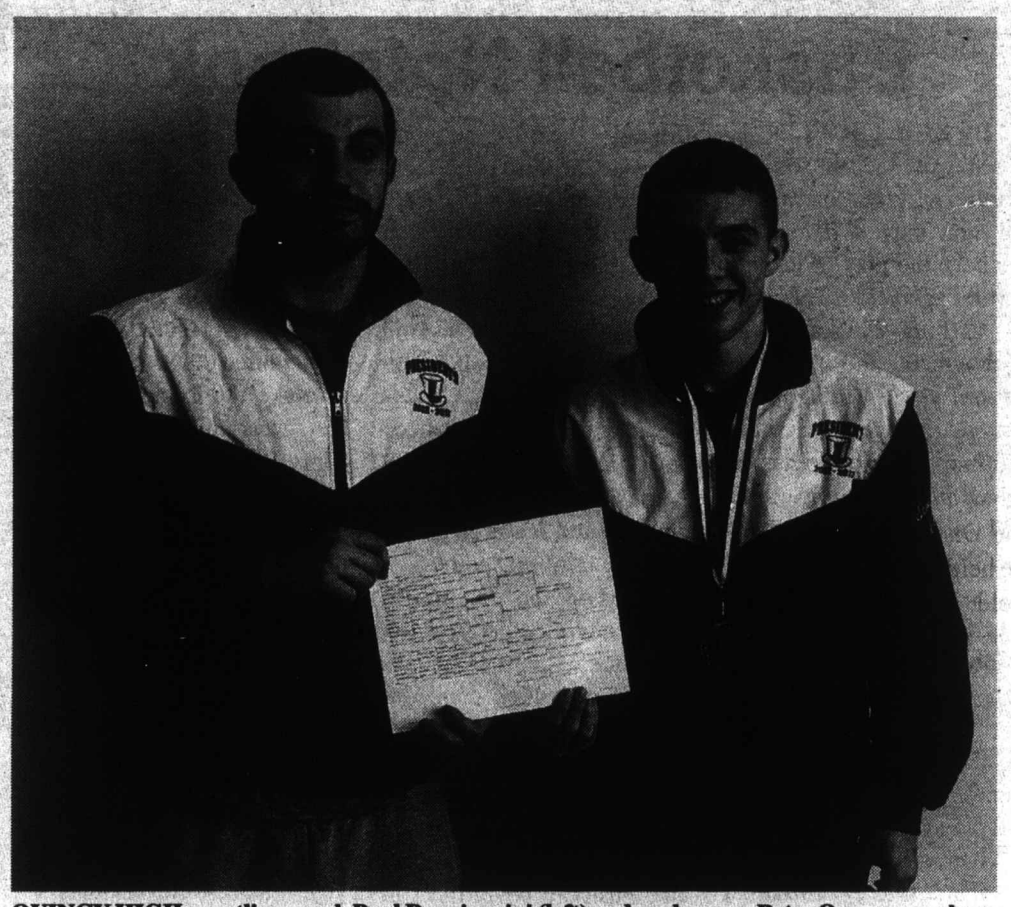

"Peter's very solid on the mat. He has a smothering style," said Reggiannini. "He doesn't move too quickly, but he throws a lot of pressure into everything he does. The pressure he uses isn't so much an explosive pressure it's a crunching (Olympian) Cael (Sanderson) strength. He's very methodical. He'll rework his grip and maybe get an extra inch tighter with the cradle. It's a very unforeseen strength from such a happy-go-lucky-looking kid. He's got a very grueling strength."

One huge reason for Orseno's love for the sport is that he controls the outcomes of his matches and he doesn't have to rely on teammates. "When you lose, it's on you," he said. "You can't say it's anybody else's fault."

Orseno got an up-close look at collegiate wrestling and just how good the athletes are at their craft earlier in the season when he attended a meet between Boston University and Penn State at Tsongas Arena. Orseno also met legendary the legendary Sanderson at the meet. The four-time NCAA champion at Iowa State, who was undefeated in college and captured a gold medal at the 2004 Athens Olympics, is now the head coach at Penn State.

"I would have really liked to talk to him, but I only met him for a second," said Orseno. "He autographed my ticket."

Orseno came away with a huge amount of respect for the collegiate wrestlers. "It's like day and night between college and high school," he said. "They have so many moves and do them so fast. They just hit their moves."

Quincy-North Quincy Swimming, Diving Results

The Quincy/North Quincy boys swimming and diving team (4-0, 2-0 Patriot League) defeated Hanover for the second consecutive year and won its fourth meet this season with an 82-73 victory over visiting Hanover at the Lincoln-Hancock Pool in Quincy.

Hanover handed the Quincy girls squad (1-3, 0-2 Patriot League) a 40-56 loss and the North Quincy team (1-3, 0-2 Patriot League) came out on the losing end of a 39-59 decision.

The QNQ boys freshmen contingent of Thomas Tran (Q) and Tommy Zhong (NQ) amassed three race victories. Tran won the 100-yard butterfly (1:06.36), and Zhong touched the pads first in the 100 breaststroke (1:11.68); and the pair finished one-two with Tran (2:20.49) over Zhong (2:21.82) in the 200 individual medley. In back-to-back events, three-year captain Elio Daci (Q) prevailed in both the 100 (56.8) and 500 (5:51.66) freestyle races. Junior Randall Kwong (NQ) topped the 200 freestyle (2:02.65) field, and second-year captain Mike Mullaney (NQ) was victorious in the 50 free (26.60).

Junior Rachel O'Driscoll paced the North Quincy squad with a pair of victories. She won the 200 freestyle (2:06.88) and 100 butterfly (1:04.44). Her sister, freshman Danielle O'Driscoll bested the field in the 100 free (1:06.22) and was second in the 200 individual medley (3:04.34).

The QNQ teams hosted Hingham on Tuesday.

In other results:

In a tri-meet on Jan. 7, Quincy/North Quincy boys swimming and diving team won its third consecutive meet, this time downing Scituate at the Lincoln-Hancock Pool. Scituate bettered both girls squads from North Quincy(1-2), 57-43 and Quincy (1-2) 61-41.

Freshman Tommy Zhong (NQ) led a one-two QNQ punch in the 200-yard individual medley with his time of 2:21.87 followed by captain Elio Daci's (Q) time of 2:27.10. Daci won the meet's 100 backstroke swimming 1:07.09. Randall Kwong (NQ) swept both the 50 freestyle (23.66) and 100 butterfly (1:01.82) races. Captain Mike Mullaney (NQ) won twice the distance in freestyle (1:02.35).

In the girls meets, junior Sabrina Rauch of Quincy won the 100 butterfly (1.08.15) and placed second in the 100 backstroke (1:15.41). Her teammate and captain Marlena Forrester was first in the 100 breaststroke (1:24.20) and second in the 50 free (29.78). Junior Rachel O'Driscoll earned a pair of victories for North Quincy swimming 2:06.88 and 1:04.44 in the 200 freestyle and 100 butterfly events, respectively. Teammate junior Evlyn Scuzzarella was second in the 50 free (29.37) and 500 free (6:29.74).

For the third time in five years, the Quincy/North Quincy boys swimming and diving team (2-0) downed Cohasset this time with a 91-60 decision Jan. 5 at the Lincoln-Hancock Pool. The North Quincy girls (1-1) fell 53-41 and the Quincy girls (1-1) lost 63-34.

The QNQ boys swept the first four events to take the 36-23 advantage and then compiled four more victories in the seven remaining events. Junior Randall Kwong (NQ) placed first in the 50-yard (23.0) and 100 (54.0) freestyle events. Freshman Tommy Zhong (NQ) won the 200 free (2:10.0), and senior and three-year captain Elio Daci (Q) prevailed in the 200 individual medley (2:29) and 100 backstroke (1:06). Freshman Thomas Tran (Q) won the 100 breaststroke (1:15). The quartet of Daci, Tran, Zhong and Kwong earned first in the 200-yard freestyle relay (1:42).

The North Quincy girls closed to within two points (26-24) after junior Rachel O'Driscoll won the 100-yard freestyle (58.78) then Cohasset rung up three of the remaining five events for the close 12-point differential. In the two events NQ won down the stretch, junior Evlyn Scuzzarella earned first in the 100 backstroke (1:16.13). The 400 free relay contingent of freshman Danielle O'Driscoll, sophomore Grace Anderson, Scuzzarella and Rachel O'Driscoll also touched the pads first with a time of 4:33.03.

Freshman Bailee Carey compiled 179.70 points to win the one-meter diving event. Junior Sabrina Rauch won the 200 individual medley (2:36.28) and 100 free (1:00.16).

Quincy Youngsters Win Local Elks Hoop Shoot Contest

Dylan Green, Adriana Moosick, Will Cook, Juliana Tracey, A.J. Nelson & Olivia Herman Advance

The Quincy Lodge of Elks 943 and the Quincy Recreation Department announce six boys and girls have won the City of Quincy Championship of the Elks National Hoop Shoot free throw shooting contest.

Dylan Green, Adriana Moosick, Will Cook, Juliana Tracey, A.J. Nelson, and Olivia Herman will now be eligible to advance and represent Quincy at the District level competition to be held later this month in Marshfield. This is Dylan Green's second year advancing to the district level while Juliana Tracey is making her third straight trip for the regional finals.

The Elks National Hoop Shoot is a contest for youth age 8 to 13. The program is free to all participants and has over a million youngsters compete nationwide each year. In Quincy the event starts with a preliminary round in local neighborhood recreation programs under the supervision of the recreation department. The neighborhood winners then advance to the city championship. The city champions were crowned at the competition held on December 27th at Atlantic Middle School. The District champions advance through to state and regional contests that result in the National Finals at the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame. At all levels of the event contestants shoot 25 shots for score. Age categories for boys and girls are 8/9, 10/11, 12/13.

In second place at the City Championship were Kate Downey, Brett Mulligan, Caroline Tracey, Andrew Sullivan, Allison McMorrow, and Daniel Scolaro. The third place finishers were Miguel Gonzales, Kiera Murphy, Sean Burns, Paige Maze, Abigail Hanly, and Michael Levine.

Gym championship trophies and medals were awarded to Devin Desmond, Kaam Yavuz, Dan Pick, Joseph Osgood, Thomas Roche, Drew Boretti, Tommy Le, Rami Chebbo, Derek Nguyen, Kayla Tucker, Mollie Nelson, Maggie Lynch, Caitlin Fenelly, Cara McDonald, Cheyanne Harris, Lillian Hanly, Mia Scott, Kerry Wong, Aurora Kilrain, Tia DiBona, Leslie Kahugu, Declan Geary, Amari Casey, Kathryn Moriarty, and Kelly Ye, Justice Burnett, Shawn Kozlowski, Brendan Glynn, Adyelzer Dorosario, and Colm Geary.

Ed Miller, former Director of Athletics for the City of Quincy, is the Quincy Lodge Hoop Shoot Director and he presented trophies and medals to all participants involved in the city final.

At the trophy presentation Recreation Director Barry Welch thanked Elks Exalted ruler Jim Quigg and the members of the Quincy Elks for their continued generosity.

"The members of the Quincy lodge have supported this event for more than thirty years; this program provides our youth an opportunity to compete, connect, and succeed through hard work and demonstrate great sportsmanship. The investment that the Elks Lodge 943 provides to the youth of Quincy year after year makes Quincy a better community. The generosity of the Elks has enriched each child in the program."

Welch also commended the members of the recreation staff who officiated at the local gym level and the City Championship event for their competence and enthusiasm while encouraging the youth to have fun at each level of the program.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Taking some time out of your usually busy social life could be just what you need to help you focus on putting those finishing touches on your plans for a possible career change.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A misunderstanding about a colleague's suggestions could create a delay in moving on with your proposal. But by week's end, all the confusing points should finally be cleared up.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You might feel overwhelmed by all the tasks you suddenly have to take care of. But just say the magic word -- help! -- and you'll soon find others rushing to offer much-needed assistance.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Finishing a current project ahead of schedule leaves you free to deal with other upcoming situations, including a possible workplace change, as well as a demanding personal matter.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Turn that fine-tuned feline sensitivity radar up to high to help uncover any facts that could influence a decision you might be preparing to make. Devote the weekend to family activities.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A state of confusion is soon cleared up with explanations from the responsible parties. Don't waste time chastising anyone. Instead, move forward with your plans.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might feel obligated to help work out a dispute between family members. But this is one of those times when you should step aside and let them work out their problems on their own.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your ability to resolve an on-the-job problem without leaving too many ruffled feathers earns you kudos from co-workers. You also impress major decision-makers at your workplace.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Newly made and long-held friendships merge well, with possibly one exception. Take time to listen to the dissenter's explanations. You could learn something important.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Be prepared to be flexible about your current travel plans. Although you don't have to take them, at least consider suggestions from the experts in the travel business.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A problem with a recent financial transaction could lead to more problems later on unless you resolve it immediately. Get all the proof you need to support your position.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Daydreaming makes it difficult to stay focused on what you need to do. But reality sets in by midweek, and you manage to get everything done in time for a relaxing weekend.
BORN THIS WEEK: Your ability to reach out to those in need of spiritual comfort makes you a much-revered, much-loved person in your community.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

'A Midwife's Tale' Film At Beth Shalom Jan. 25

"A Midwife's Tale" will be the second film in this season's Winter Movie Series of Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills, co-sponsored by Milton's First Congregational Church.

The film, part of the series theme: "Strong and Funny Women," will be screened Saturday, Jan. 25th at 7 p.m. (doors open at 6:45 p.m.) in Huntington Hall of the First Congregational Church, 495 Canton Ave., Milton, with entry at the rear door.

The film series is open to the public.

"A Midwife's Tale" is a docudrama that tells the story of two remarkable women: an 18th century midwife and healer who kept an unusual and thorough journal of her experiences, and the 20th century historian who brought her words to life. The original book by Martha Ballard is a treasure chest of what life was like in the chaotic young nation and the 'northern frontier' of Maine in the late 1700s, as seen through a woman's eyes. The film is the result of eight years of painstaking study of Ballard's diary and research by historian Laurel Thatcher Ulrich.

The donation for admission is $3 per person, or two for $5. Advance reservations get a free popcorn or bottle of water.

The next film, "The Jewish Mother in Cinema," will be on Feb. 15th.

To order tickets in advance or for more information, call 617-698-3394.

OBITUARIES

Ramona Shea

A funeral Mass for Ramona "Mona" Shea of Squantum was celebrated Tuesday at Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Shea died Jan. 8 at home surrounded by her family.

She was a strong, caring and independent woman. Her family gave her the most fulfillment in life and she in turn spent quality time with them making cherished memories. Her passions were cooking, entertaining, gardening and traveling. An avid Red Sox fan, she was thrilled to see them win three World Championships.

Mrs. Shea was a co-founder of Bill Shea's Formica with her husband William F. in 1952, where she was the company bookkeeper. She was civic-minded as she was a member of the Squantum PTO, Squantum Parade Committee, The Lions Club of Quincy and a member of The Quincy Neighborhood Club.

Beloved wife of the late William F. Shea. Loving mother of Susan Mason and her husband Forest of

She outlived all her friends... What should we do?

Maybe we should first ask these questions: What about you? What about your friends? We help lots of families balance what they'd like to do... with the people who will be there, and the money that's available. What's the right thing to do? You decide... At Keohane Funeral and Cremation Service we can help you find it.

Octavio J. Tocchio, Ph.D., 91

Funeral services for Octavio Joseph "Otto" "Doc Toch" "OJ" Tocchio, Ph.D., 91, of Fresno, CA and formerly Quincy were held Jan. 10 St. Anthony of Padua, Fresno.

Dr. Tocchio died Dec. 11.

He was born April 25, 1922, in Quincy to Italian emigrants Elario and Theresa Tocchio and, as their eighth child, was appropriately named "Octavio." He spent his childhood sledding behind Daniel Webster Elementary School with his friends, growing tomatoes, and swinging with his sisters in his backyard. After graduating in 1940 from Sacred Heart High School in Weymouth, he spent the next 13 years working in shipyards, for the railroad, and as a police officer.

While working full-time with the Quincy Police Dept., he put himself through Suffolk Univ. and in three short years, graduated cum laude, completing a major and two minors and was recognized as a Who's Who among Students in Colleges and Universities. Between 1953-55, he was awarded a fellowship and two graduate assistantships to American Univ. in Washington, D.C., where he earned his M.A. degree, helped develop the police science program and became its first full-time instructor. At American, he received the Pi Sigma Alpha's Political Science Award and the Chi Psi Omega's Outstanding Graduate Award, and later, in 1965, earned his Ph.D.

Dr. Tocchio married the love of his life, Marion Cipriano, another Quincy native, on July 4, 1956, in their hometown. With infant daughter Tama, the Tocchio family moved to Pullman, WA so he could teach at Washington State. When he took a teaching position at Fresno State in 1959, the family, now with second daughter Maria, relocated in Fresno where they made lifelong friends and created family memories.

For more than 32 years, Dr. Tocchio was a fixture in the Criminology Department at California State University, Fresno. He received full professorship in 1967, served as department chair for three years, became an assistant dean under Dr. Arthur Margosian, and finally retired in 1991. During his career in criminology, Dr. Tocchio developed and validated Fresno State's polygraph program, and established a program for students to study the British justice system, conducting tours to England and Scotland for this purpose. He had countless scholarly articles published on family violence, served 12 years on Fresno County's Battered Child Committee, and served on the Juvenile Justice Commission for two years. He was a member of the American Polygraph Association and the International Chiefs of Police Association. He was recognized as a Who's Who in the West, and Who's Who in Education.

OCTAVIO J. TOCCHIO

In dedication to his community, Dr. Tocchio was involved with many organizations and programs. He served on the board of directors that built the Cecil C. Hinton Community Center and the board that built St. Paul Newman Center, he mentored students in the HOSTS program at Tioga Middle School, was a lector and Eucharistic minister for St. Anthony of Padua Catholic Church, and for more than 30 years, he was a holiday bell ringer for the Salvation Army with his bell ringing buddy Frank Cristando. For more than 40 years, Dr. Tocchio was committed to the work of the Fresno Exchange Club, served as club president, was instrumental in establishing the Exchange Club of Clovis, and helped to develop the club's "Top Cops" program, which annually honors three law enforcement officers.

Dr. Tocchio is preceded in death by his parents and his seven older siblings. He is survived by his wife Marion; his two daughters, Tama Gilbert and husband John Baker and Maria Tocchio; grandchildren Nathan and his wife Arynne, Spencer, and Morgan; and great-grandchild Sullivan, with two more great-grandchildren on the way.

Memorial donations may be made to Exchange Club of Fresno-Charitable Fund, 7177 N. Hazel Ave., Fresno, CA 93711.

Rev. Louis Palmier Named New Collaborative Pastor

The creation of the new collaborative is part of an ongoing process being undertaken by the archdiocese to group all 288 of its parishes into 135 collaboratives. Each collaborative will contain between one and four parishes.

The collaborative of Sacred Heart, St. Ann's, and St. Mary's was part of phase two of the archdiocese plans. Phase two includes 45 parishes being joined into 21 new collaboratives.

Phase one was implemented last July. That phase included 12 collaboratives consisting of 28 parishes. Phase three of the implementation, which will involve additional parishes to be announced, is planned for 2016, with the fourth and final phase coming one or two years after that.

Palmieri, who turned 50 in December, graduated from Boston College in 1987 with a bachelor's degree in philosophy and theology. He then graduated from St. John's Seminary in Brighton with a master of divinity degree in 1993, and was ordained on May 22 of that year at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross in Boston.

Following his ordainment, Palmieri served as a parochial vicar at St. Ann Parish in Peabody from 1993 to 1994, then at St. Bridget Parish in Abington from 1994 to 1999, and at St. Joseph Parish in Holbrook from 1999 to 2003.

In 2003, he was named pastor at St. Michael Parish in Avon, a position he held until 2010. In 2010, he was named pastor at Holy Family Parish in Amesbury before being assigned to his current position at Star of the Sea Parish in Salisbury in 2011.

Palmieri is replacing the Rev. John O'Brien of Sacred Heart, the Rev. John Ronaghan of St. Ann, and the Rev. David Callahan of St. Mary, all of who were asked to submit their resignations as part of the collaborative process.

In addition to the collaborative between Sacred Heart, St. Ann's, and St. Mary's, phase two also includes St. Agatha Parish in Milton, which will be part of a one-parish collaborative. The archdiocese announced Monday that the Rev. Brian R. Kiely, currently the pastor at St. Patrick Parish in Natick, will serve as the new pastor at St. Agatha, replacing the Rev. Peter Casey beginning in June.

PERSONAL

Holy Spirit, you solve all problems, light all roads, so that I can attain my goal. You who give the divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances of my life you are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank you for all things, confirming once again that I never meant to be separated from you even in spite of all material illusions. I wish to be with you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine. The person must say this prayer for three consecutive days. After 3 days the favor will be granted even if it is difficult. This prayer must be published after the favor is granted. N.L. 1/16

Montclair PTO Announces Evan Dwyer Book Scholarship

The Montclair School PTO announces applications are available for a $300 book scholarship named in memory of former student Evan Dwyer.

Evan attended Montclair in kindergarten and first grade then lost his battle with leukemia on Feb. 13, 2004.

He adored butterflies and was able to catch them in his hands. He enjoyed spending time at Ellis Haven Campground in Plymouth. His favorite adventure story was "Peter Pan."

He was born in Quincy, where he lived all his life. He is survived by his parents, Michael J. Dwyer of the Quincy Fire Department and Gina (Zero) Dwyer; a brother, Joseph and a sister Kelsie.

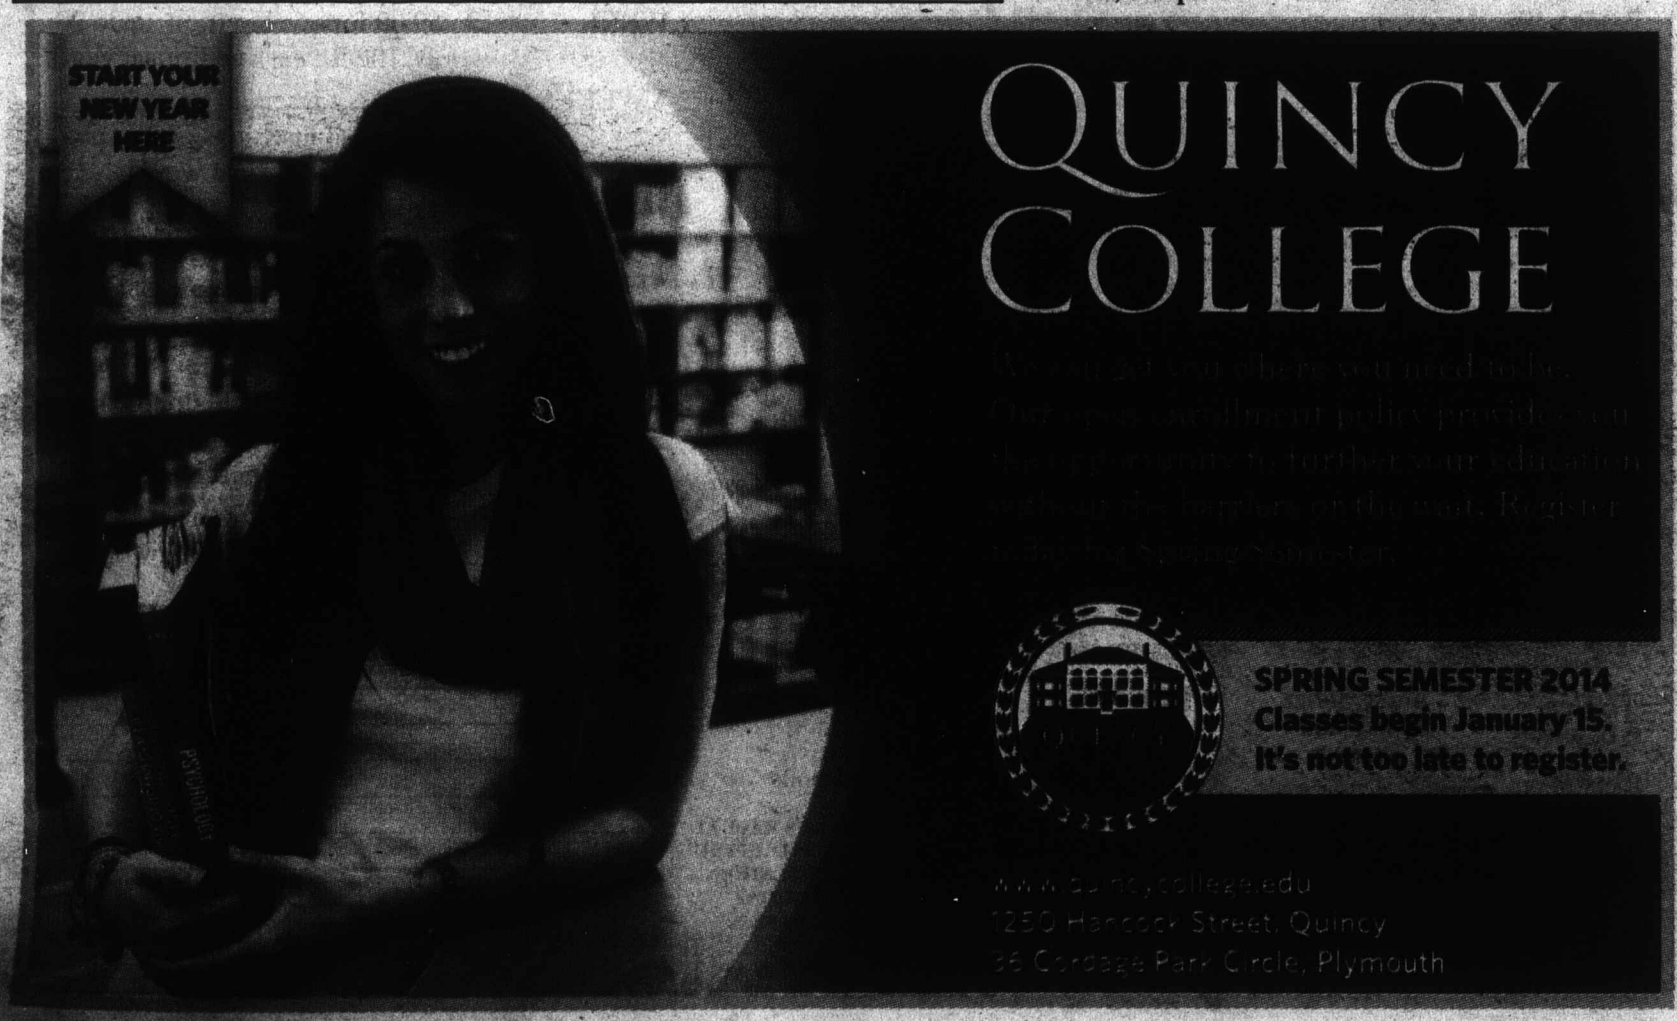

The Montclair School PTO provides one (1) $300 scholarship to help defray the high cost of books for Montclair School graduates as they continue their education after high school. As a community, the PTO values the importance of the high quality education Quincy children receive throughout their years in the Quincy Public School system and hope to encourage them to continue their education.

To qualify for the $300 Book Scholarship, the student must have attended a minimum of 3rd through 5th grade at Montclair School and be attending an accredited post-secondary university, college, or trade school.

Applicants must fill out the form found at www.montclairpto.com or www.quincypublicschools.com/montclair completely and submit it to the office staff at Montclair School no later than Feb. 3 (or mail it to Montclair School PTO, Attn: Evan Dwyer Book Scholarship, 8 Belmont St., Quincy MA 02171.

Applications must be received prior to the February PTO meeting. The recipient will be selected at random from a drawing of all applicants. Once selected the recipient can submit up to $300 in book receipts for reimbursement.

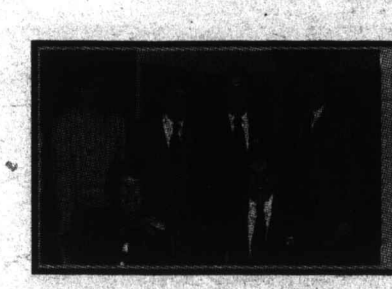

Those who wish to donate to the scholarship can send donations to the Montclair School attention Evan Dwyer Scholarship Fund. Funds received will be granted to another qualifying applicant.

'To Be Successful, You Have To Have A Dream'

By SCOTT JACKSON

The keynote speaker at Monday's Martin Luther King, Jr. Breakfast said he used the Rev. Dr. King's words to help shape his life.

Harold Sparrow, the senior vice president for the Greater Boston YMCA, was the keynote speaker at the breakfast, held Monday at the Germantown Neighborhood Center. Sparrow told the crowd of nearly 300 elected officials, community leaders, and residents on hand that he draws inspiration from the words of the late civil rights leader. King's "I Have A Dream" speech, for example, highlighted the importance of having a dream or goal.

"Martin Luther King said 'I have a dream.' In order to be successful in life, you have to have a dream. You've really got to sit down and have a dream for your life. There's nothing in this room that wasn't an idea or dream in someone else's mind before it got here. It could be you – it might be your parents that were dreaming about you. It could be these lights, this building, this chair," Sparrow said.

"You have to have a dream. So when I talk about Dr. King and the importance he had on my life, early on I knew I had to have a dream. I really found the power and the strength in having a vision and I put that as one of the principles in my life."

Sparrow also cited a King quote about the importance of forgiveness.

"'Forgiveness is not an occasional act, it's a permanent attitude,'" Sparrow said, quoting King. "One of the toughest things in life is forgiving somebody, particularly someone who really hurt you. The thing about Dr. King's walk that was so powerful was people were mean to him, they put him in jail, they were violent, but he forgave them nonetheless. He prayed for his enemies.

"Now think about it. Is there anyone who ever did you wrong? Is there anybody who ever lied to you, cheated on you, betrayed you? Ever had a girlfriend break up with you or a boyfriend kick you to the curb? I don't know about you, but I don't want to forgive them. It's hard to forgive people – it's one of the toughest things you have to do."

Sparrow closed with a quote highlighted on the event's program that explained the significance of pressing forward no matter what life throws at you.

"Dr. King said 'if you can't fly, then run. If you can't run, then walk. If you can't walk, then crawl. But whatever you do you have to keep moving forward,'" Sparrow explained. "I would say to all of you, no matter what happens in life just keep moving forward."

Mayor Thomas Koch was among the other community leaders who spoke at the breakfast. Reflecting on King's faith, the mayor identified a number of causes – such as equality, human trafficking, and addiction – that King would take up if he were alive today, and said many present for Monday's breakfast were making strides in those areas.

"I wonder sometimes if Dr. King were here today what would he be talking about – what would his issues be today. We know, although some are reluctant about faith being talked about in the public square, that was truly the root of Dr. King. Being a reverend, being a minister, was based on his faith and his beliefs," Koch said.

"If you had Dr. King here today on some of those issues I wonder what they would be. And I think all of us would cheer continue the battle on equality because we're not there yet. We have a problem with human trafficking in our world. Perhaps it's the unborn. Perhaps it's those who are facing addiction – we need to do more – we need more beds for those who are battling addiction. The homeless, the poor, the disenfranchised. I think when we all look at it and ask the question to ourselves we know the answer and I know a number of people in this room fight everyday on behalf of those causes."

Other photos: thequincysun.com (galleries)

U.S. Rep. Stephen F. Lynch spoke after the mayor during Monday's ceremony. He remembered King for continuing to lead the civil rights movement despite being attacked, beaten, imprisoned, and receiving death threats.

"Dr. King really embodied the idea of tolerance in our society and he was such a champion for the oppressed, for those who had no voice, for those who were disenfranchised. He had tremendous courage," Lynch said.

"People forget that Dr. King was attacked during a speech in New York City. He was actually signing autographs when a woman actually stabbed and attacked him. And he was not intimidated. Even though it came close to killing him he kept working. He was imprisoned. He was beaten. There were multiple threats on his life but he believed in what he was doing."

Lynch also took a moment to pay tribute to late South African President Nelson Mandela, who died in December at the age of 95. The congressman noted King spoke about apartheid in South Africa during his speech on April 3, 1968, the day before he was assassinated.

"We also lost another champion in that sense this year in President Nelson Mandela. When you look at the work that each of those men did it overlaps very closely. If you read some of the speeches of Dr. King – his speech at the Mason temple in Memphis, Tenn., on April 3, 1968 – he talks about in his remarks the fight in South Africa against apartheid," Lynch said.

"Both of those men, Dr. King and Nelson Mandela, worked side-by-side in a way and both of them spoke truth to power. Both of them had their liberty taken away. President Mandela spent 25 years in prison and yet

Gutro Seeks Quarterly Downtown Updates

By SCOTT JACKSON

Councillor Doug Gutro submitted a resolution at Tuesday night's City Council meeting calling for quarterly updates on the $1.6 billion Quincy Center project.

The resolution filed by Gutro, the chairman of the council's downtown and economic growth committee, is similar to one filed at the start of the last council term in 2012 calling on the city and developer Street-Works to provide updates on the project every three months. Tuesday's meeting was held after The Sun went to press, but Gutro said prior to the meeting that the project, halted because of rising construction costs, is at a key moment.

"This is a defining time for the downtown," he said.

Gutro, who formerly represented most of Quincy Center as Ward 5 councillor for five terms prior to being elected at-large in 2011, was re-appointed as chairman of the downtown by new Council President Joseph Finn last week. Gutro said he was grateful that he would continue on in that post.

"I am grateful the council president gave me the chance to keep continuity," Gutro said. "I feel like I have a strong handle on all the activity down there."

In 2013, updates on the downtown project were provided to the council twice – in June before the start of the Merchants Row project and then in November after construction there had stopped. Street-Works officials also attended a pre-construction meeting hosted by the downtown committee in January 2013 to update local residents and business owners on potential impacts caused by the construction.

Not on Tuesday's agenda were possible changes to Quincy's land disposition agreement (LDA) with the developer. During a speech at the Quincy Chamber of Commerce last month, Mayor Thomas Koch said he would seek to amend the agreement to reduce the amount of money the developer would owe the city.

Among the items that could be altered or removed are $30 million to be paid to the city by Street-Works for district improvements; a payment of $10 million to be spent on public improvements throughout the city; the $10,000 Street-Works would pay per residential unit into the city's affordable housing trust fund; and altering the structure of payments made in lieu of property taxes to the city.

Amending the agreement with Street-Works would likely require a simple majority vote, according to City Clerk Joseph Shea.

The agreement with Street-Works was approved by the council in December 2010 following a three-month long review period. The council voted 8-0 in favor of the LDA at the time, with then-Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi recused. The current council has two members – Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall and Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes – who were first elected in 2011 and did not vote on the LDA.

Gutro said he would like to have the first update on the downtown project take place before the council is asked to vote on any LDA amendments.

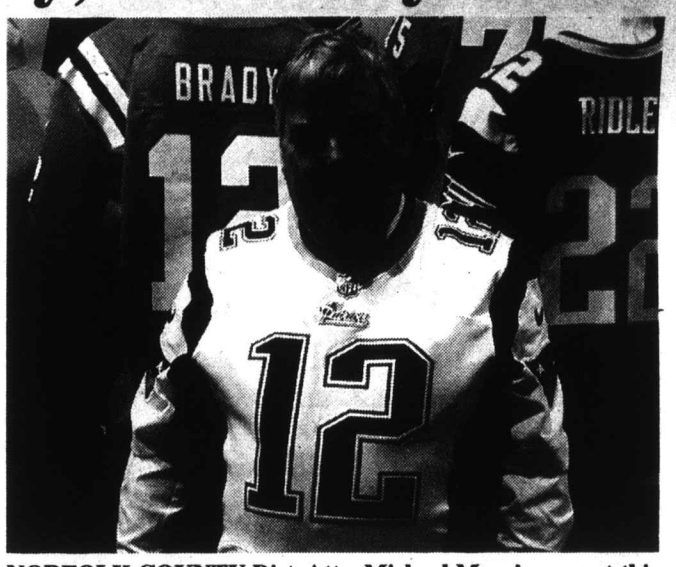

In addition to the downtown resolution, Gutro re-submitted two others at Tuesday's meeting.

One resolution – co-sponsored by Croall and Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin – seeks an update from cable providers on any plans they may have to enter the Quincy market. Currently, only Comcast has an agreement with the city to provide service to residents.

The other resolution seeks information regarding Quincy's Tax Increment Financing (TIF) Agreements with various companies. The TIF agreements provide property tax incentives to companies, in exchange for certain conditions such as hiring new employees.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci submitted two resolutions at the meeting. The first calls for an update from the Inspectional Services Department on the implementation of new technology. The second resolution calls for a representative from the Inspectional Services Department to provide a report on the Burgin Parkway Lowe's store's compliance with its special permit.

Either Way, Morrissey Wins

NORFOLK COUNTY Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey sent this Tom Brady Patriots' jersey to another D.A. named Morrissey: Denver's Dist. Atty. Mitchell Morrissey.

The sitting District Attorney for both Denver and Foxborough is named District Attorney M. Morrissey.

Norfolk DA Michael W. Morrissey reached out to Denver DA Mitchell R. Morrissey over the weekend with a proposition that the DA whose team lost over the weekend would send along a game jersey to the DA whose team won as "the spoils of victory." The two prosecutors met last February at an American Prosecutors conference.

Sunday's outcome meant a Monday morning trip to the Pro Shop at Gillette for the hometown DA.

"The Denver DA has asked me to donate the Brady shirt to the Denver Justice Council, which is a non-profit that supports law enforcement and the work of his office," Norfolk District Attorney Morrissey said. "That sounds about right. If there were a Manning or Welker Bronco's shirt coming my way, after having a little fun with it I would have eventually donated it to a fund-raising auction for Norfolk Advocates for Children or DOVE. Hopefully the story would help the bidding."

Orange, the color of the Broncos, happens to be Norfolk DA Morrissey's signature campaign color. "We would have had some fun with it, at least for a while."

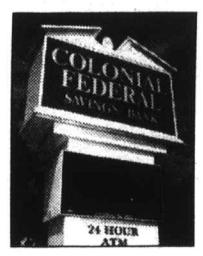

The name Mitchell Morrissey was well known in Michael's Squantum home long before the two met. In the age of cell phones that announce who is calling, for reasons unclear calls originating from the cell phones on the family account are announced as "MI-CHEL MORR-ISSEY" when his kids call home. "They have teasingly called me 'Mitch' more than once." After the prosecutors conference, he brought home a photo of the two men together to finally introduce his kids to the "real Mitch."

"The Denver DA is a very approachable and collegial. He got the joke."

And now, he gets the jersey.

A better way to get money from your house

A good idea ... from Colonial Federal Savings Bank

You have a house with lots of equity. Good cash flow. Investments you don't want to touch right now. And you have something you want money for. What's the best way to get it? How about a 15-Year refinance from Colonial Federal? With fixed monthly payments, it's more predictable than an adjustable-rate home equity line. Way less expensive than credit cards. And you'll have it all paid off in 15 short years ... quicker if you make extra payments along the way. Would a 15-Year refinance be good for you? Call Angela Blanchard, Vice-President/Retail Lending, at 617-471-0750 or apply online at colonialfed.com.

SIBERIAN AMETHYST

Usually when a geographical location precedes a gemstone's name (such as Colombian emerald or Burmese ruby), it suggests that the gemstone is the best of its kind and that the designation is accurate. In the case of the Siberian amethyst, it is true that this is the best quality amethyst to be found, but it does not necessarily come from Siberia. This should be of some interest to those born in February, the month for which amethyst is the birthstone. Siberian amethyst, regardless of its origin, has a very deep purple color, which can range from a reddish purple to a dark purple. Because Siberian amethysts are the highest grade available and are exceedingly rare, they command the highest prices.

Amethysts can appear to change color dependent on the lighting conditions. Amethysts will appear to be a more bluish to purple color when viewed under daylight and may appear to have more flashes of red when seen under bright lighting. As the birthstone for February, there are many ways to set this beautiful stone. # A Few Anniversaries This Year

Well, 2104 is here and already I'm starting to feel a little older.

Maybe it's because I'll mark a major birthday milestone later this year (the big 5-O.)

But more so because there are some major news anniversaries during 2014. Some that may cause you to scratch your head and think, 'wow, it's been that long since that happened?'

Here's some of the important events that happened 10 years ago. That's right – the following occurred a decade ago during 2004:

• Ronald Reagan, the 40th president of the U.S., died in Bel Air, Calif. at the age of 93 on June 5. A funeral for the two-term President and 33rd governor of California was held in Washington, D.C. (June 11th.)

• Then Sen. John Kerry is nominated for President at the Democratic National Convention in Boston in July. Kerry loses to President George Bush who is re-elected in November but the convention casts a bright spotlight on future President Barack Obama who gives the keynote address before the assembled delegates at the FleetCenter (now T.D. Garden.)

• The Boston Red Sox roar back from a 0-3 deficit in the American League Championship Series to defeat the New York Yankees in 7 games (Oct. 20) and go on to win their first World Series title in 86 years by sweeping the St. Louis Cardinals, four games to none (Oct. 27).

How about some events that happened in 1994:

Can you believe it's been 20 year since:

• Quincy's Karen Cashman won a bronze medal in short-track speedskating at the 1994 Winter Olympics in Lillehammer, Norway. Karen, a 1989 graduate of North Quincy High School, is hailed a hero upon her triumphant return to the City of Presidents.

Cashman – a member of the U.S. 3,000-meter short-track relay team – competed against some of the finest athletes in the world. In the spring that year, she was honored at an assembly at her alma mater attended by 1,600 students, friends, family and community and municipal leaders. She received a number of gifts and commendations, including a piece of the track at Veterans Stadium where she began her stellar athletic career.

Later, at a luncheon in her honor at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy, Karen said she was overwhelmed by the tribute.

"I am truly awed, overwhelmed and flattered by all of this," she tells the capacity crowd in the main dining room. Admittedly not a fan of public speaking, she then mused: "Had I known I would've had to speak in front of all these people, I would have skated a little slower."

Locally, Cashman's bronze-medal winning feat was the top feel good story of the year in Quincy. A gold-medal moment if you will for Cashman, her family and the city.

But nationally, 1994 had some very tragic news.

No doubt – come this June – major news organizations will recount the deaths of Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend, Ron Goldman who are found murdered in June. Former football great O.J. Simpson is charged in the deaths and becomes a fugitive of justice. He's finally arrested after a low-speed chase in a white Ford Bronco driven by his friend, Al Cowlings.

The following October, Simpson is acquitted on murder charges in the "trial of the century." Those who watched the trial on TV know exactly where they were when that verdict was read.

Here are a few other major events that will mark milestone anniversaries this year:

Thirty years ago this summer (July 19, 1984), Geraldine Ferraro is nominated as vice president on the Democratic ticket with Presidential nominee Walter Mondale (July 19). In November, Republicans Ronald Reagan and George Bush are re-elected in a landslide, capturing 49 states (Mondale-Ferraro capture only Mondale's home state of Minnesota and the District of Columbia.)

The Reagan-Bush ticket wins Quincy – polling 20,118 votes to Mondale-Ferraro's 18,962 votes. Nearly 80 percent of the city's 49,735 registered voters cast ballots.

If you follow the Royal Family, you may be surprised to learn Prince Harry will turn 30 this year – on Sept. 15.

This August (Aug. 9) will mark 40 years since President Richard Nixon resigned following the Watergate scandal. If you go on a White House tour, ask where the Presidential portrait of President Nixon hangs. You probably won't get an answer. It is not visible anywhere in the East Wing.

And a side note: am I the only one who has grown tired of every political scandal ending with the word "gate?" The most recent dubbed "Bridgegate" involving the staff of Gov. Chris Christie of New Jersey and lane closures leading to the George Washington Bridge that tied up traffic for four days.

Watergate is called Watergate because that was the name of the office complex where the Democratic National Committee's office was broken into. The incident and cover-up led to the downfall of President Nixon.

Seems the media wants to add the suffix "gate" to everything involving any sort of political-public controversy. Enough already.

For Beatles fans, next month will undoubtedly stir up fond memories for those old enough to remember George, Paul, John and Ringo's debut on American television. The momentous event occurred on Feb. 9, 1964 when the Fab Four took to the stage on the Ed Sullivan Show. Some 73 million viewers tuned in to hear the lads from Liverpool perform five songs: "All My Loving," "Till There Was You," "She Loves You," "I Saw Her Standing There" and "I Want to Hold Your Hand."

One last anniversary to mention and that occurs this June. And in my humble opinion, it should receive as much attention as possible.

June 6 marks the 70th anniversary of D-Day – the invasion of France when 150,000 Allied troops landed on the shores of Normandy. By nightfall on that fateful day, 9,000 Allied troops were dead or wounded but more than 100,000 had made it ashore.

It was a decisive victory for the Allied troops over Nazi Germany. Two months later in August, Paris had been liberated and then Germany surrendered.

Among those brave U.S. veterans who participated in D-Day were local servicemen. Many, unfortunately, are not with us today but their sacrifice that day should long be remembered this June and every June.

Those are just a few events that come to mind as the days unfold in 2014.

REALLY ENJOYED Monday's Martin Luther King, Jr. breakfast at the Germantown Neighborhood Center. It's wonderful to see young kids dance, sing and recite poems with such talent and confidence.

Kudos to Neighborhood Center Director Kathy Quigley and her staff for putting on another fine program this year.

And credit should also go to Mayor Thomas Koch for suggesting that the event – which has reach capacity at the Center – be moved to an auditorium at one of the city's schools next year. The larger venue will enhance the significance of the day even more.

Scenes From Yesterday

WASHINGTON STREET FROM QUINCY SQUARE, QUINCY, MASS.

THIS 1923 POSTCARD was the first that we published in this Scenes from Yesterday column 20 years ago this week. This view was from the then opened Foy's Market at 1259 Hancock St. in Quincy Square looking down Washington Street. Today, 91 years later, this view would be from City Clerk Joe Shea's temporary office in the Munroe Building. On the left the W.G. Shaw's furniture store later became the home of the Bargain Center for 50 years. It is now the home of the President's Place complex which includes Quincy College. The trolleys in the right center went straight down Washington Street to the shipyard or left to Houghs Neck. Saville Street (now a walkway) in the immediate foreground will be the northern edge of the new Adams Green that will encompass the church and city hall. ## Tobin Favors Upgrading Downtown

City Council President Arthur Tobin said he would be in favor of upgrading the downtown business and proposed building new stores on top air rights over municipal parking areas.

Tobin, commenting on Mayor Walter Hannon's proposed Downtown Redevelopment Authority, said urban renewal efforts should be kept out of residential areas and focus on Quincy Center and possibly the Wollaston and Norfolk Downs business districts. He noted that large amount of municipal property between the Adams Academy and School Street was used for parking lots and could be better utilized.

"We should better utilize this land – it is being wasted. We should put the parking lots underground or ramp them and build stores over them," Tobin said. "Some of the existing buildings in the downtown area should be upgraded and some of them should be torn down to make way for new structures."

Tobin added that the city could not afford to let the downtown deteriorate further.

"If the assessed valuation in the downtown area is allowed to depreciate, this loss would have to be borne by the already over-burdened taxpaying homeowner," he said. "We must plan to increase the potential revenue of the downtown area. We must bring in more business and more good businesses."

BRETT SUGGESTS THIRD HIGH SCHOOL

In a letter to Mayor Hannon, Rep. Joseph E. Brett suggested the establishment of a third public high school in the city to alleviate overcrowded conditions at Quincy and North. Brett suggested siting the new school in the southwest portion of the city, to better accommodate students living nearby.

"I believe a third high school could be established in the southwest section of Quincy at no greater cost than expanding the two present schools and would afford much greater convenience for students from both West Quincy and South Quincy," Brett wrote.

HOWARD JOHNSON'S SITE DEDICATED

A granite marker noting the site of the first Howard Johnson's store was dedicated at the Wollaston MBTA station, near the corner of Newport Avenue and Beale Street.

Howard D. Johnson opened the store in 1925 and it remained open until 1964 when it became one of the company's offices. The building, which burned down in 1969, lacked the chain's distinctive orange roof but was still a Wollaston landmark.

Speaking at the dedication, Johnson said Wollaston still held a special place in his heart.

"I love Wollaston," he said. "I was a member of one of the first classes to graduate from the Wollaston grammar school."

Johnson was joined by his son, Howard B. Johnson, at the ceremony. After the speeches and unveiling of the marker, the two Johnsons scooped ice cream and served it to dignitaries. The spoon used for the occasion was given to the Quincy Historic Society.

Join The Effort To Reduce City Energy Use

The Quincy Climate Action Network would like to thank Mayor Koch for hiring Shelly Dein as the city's new Energy Manager. QCAN members serving on the mayor's Climate Change Committee helped select Ms. Dein, a volunteer with Sustainable Arlington who formerly served as Energy Manager for Marlborough; before that she managed large energy-use-reduction projects in the nonprofit housing sector.

Both Ms. Dein and energy technician David Scott, another recent city hire, are wonderfully qualified to lead the city toward a healthier, more sustainable, less wasteful future. However they face substantial challenges in getting us there.

First and most important, they will have to help the city meet its commitment, under the state's Green Communities Program, to cut the city's energy use 20 percent by summer 2016.

Only minor progress toward that goal appears to have been made in Quincy's first two and a half years as a Green Community, so we have much catching up to do. Yet we already know how to get most of the way to 20 percent, thanks to a city-commissioned study by the Boston-based Peregrine Energy Group. The 2011 study recommends measures like adjustments and upgrades to HVAC systems in city buildings, occupancy sensors to turn off lights in empty rooms, converting streetlights to energy efficient LEDs, retrofitting building equipment motors for pumps and other equipment with variable frequency drives, and so on.

Other reductions may come from ongoing efforts to replace old city vehicles with more efficient ones and to retrofit schools with new, tighter windows--and from changes in old habits like idling parked vehicles and running electronics when they're not in use.

QCAN hopes to work with Ms. Dein and Mr. Scott to implement all these changes, which deserve the support of every Quincy resident. Reducing city energy use by 20 percent will require financial investment by the city and lots of hard work by city officials, but in the end these improvements will more than pay for themselves in a smaller carbon footprint, more breathable air, and, lower energy bills for the city.

Join our campaign to tackle this global challenge on a local level! QCAN is on Facebook, Meetup, and www.qcan.org and we are recruiting new members.

Crime Stats

Some time ago I plotted on a map of Quincy the incidents of petty crimes taken from The Quincy Sun's police log.

I found that the majority of such crimes occurred in the south half of Quincy. Further, I found clusters of these crimes. I took a limited sample of only two months. A larger data base could have predictive value.

The application of Bayes statistics might pinpoint the time and location of a given crime before it happened. The police would patrol accordingly. This could apply to fire and ambulance incidents.

In a close election, the application of statistical analysis would determine where to put effort and could make the difference between winning and losing. Those interested in learning about Bayes statistics can find popular and technical literature in the public library system.

The Gil Aharon Trio Concert Sunday

The 2014 Winter/Spring Concerts at the Crane season continues at 3 p.m., Sunday, Jan. 26 with the modern jazz group, The Gil Aharon Trio.

These rocking musicians rarely perform as a traditional trio and this concert will be no exception. Gill Aharon (the primary composer and keyboard player) will be joined by Andrew Stern on guitar, Jef Charland on upright bass, and Randy Wooten on drums.

THE GIL AHARON TRIO, a modern jazz group, will perform Sunday, Jan. 23 at 3 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Their influences include the cartoon music of the 50s and 60s, the drive of Led Zeppelin, the genius and humor of Frank Zappa, the perfection of Bach, the relentlessness of Ligeti, the courage of Medeski, Martin and Wood, the jam of live Phish, the beauty of the Beatles and the immersive nature of music.

The concert series is made possible by the generous support of the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

For more information, visit thomascranelibrary.org or call 617-376-1316.

Adventures in Classical Music: 'The Symphonies of Beethoven' Jan. 28

The public is welcome to attend an in-depth look at Beethoven's symphonies with professor Delvyn Case Tuesday, Jan. 28 at 7 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

These masterpieces, which stand for many as the pinnacle of the symphonic tradition, have inspired countless musicians and non-musicians alike.

Case is Boston-based musician who is active as a composer, orchestral and choral conductor, and college educator. He also maintains an active career as a writer and lecturer on a variety of musical topics, from sacred music to hip-hop, and pursues numerous musical outreach projects in his home city of Quincy, and beyond.

LUDWIG VAN BEETHOVEN

He is currently Assistant Professor of Music at Wheaton College in Norton, where he serves as Music Director of the Great Woods Chamber Orchestra. Formerly he served as Visiting Professor of Theory/Composition at the Longy School of Music and as an adjunct faculty member at Boston College and Northeastern University. He currently serves as Music Director of the Eastern Nazarene College Choral Union, the Quincy Bay Chamber Orchestra (a professional orchestra he founded in order to provide outreach and educational concerts), the Quincy Summer Singers (a community choir he founded in 2009), as pianist in the avant-garde improvisation ensemble the meltdown incentive, and as composer-in-residence for Cambridge's Dance Currents, Inc.

This program is made possible with the the support of the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

ENC Theatre Department To Present 'James And The Giant Peach'

The Eastern Nazarene College Theatre Department will present its production of James and the Giant Peach at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 13-15 at the Cove Fine Arts Center on the college's main Quincy campus.

A special children's matinee performance will be held during school vacation week at 10 a.m. Feb. 18.

Based on the popular children's book by Roald Dahl, James and the Giant Peach tells the fanciful story of a young boy, a gigantic peach and the colorful insects that help him escape from his neglectful aunts. Sponsored by the South Shore School of Theatre, the ENC cast features several local children in key roles.

"We're excited to do a show for children because it challenges our theatre students to think about what is exciting to watch through a child's eyes," Director Tara Brooke Watkins said. "We approached this play as if we were all children again and were asked to design and direct the show."

To that end, Watkins said, ENC's production will feature costumes and a set design made from items children would find around their home. The costume for the character of the glow worm, for example, is made from a soda bottle and cups, while the spider features legs made from pipe cleaners and buttons for eyes. A "junkyard band" will perform on instruments made from ordinary household objects.

Eastern Nazarene College's Cove Fine Arts Center is located on Wendell Ave. in Quincy.

Technology Instruction At Library Friday

The Thomas Crane Library (40 Washington Street, Quincy) will host a technology instruction "App-y Hour" Friday, Jan. 24 at 2:30 p.m.

The program is geared for people who have new cell phones, e-readers, tablets, and other mobile devices. This is an opportunity to bring these new devices to the Library and learn from technology experts about the latest and greatest applications.

Attendees will learn tips and tricks on how to get the most out of their device and have time to share personal favorites.

For more information, visit thomascranelibrary.org or call 617-376-1316.

'Feed The Hungry Gala' Raises $130,000 For Interfaith Social Services

Interfaith Social Services' 16th annual Feed the Hungry Gala was held recently at Granite Links in Quincy. Organizers report that the event raised over $130,000 to support South Shore families and individuals in need.

"The generosity exhibited by Gala attendees was breathtaking," said Interfaith's executive director Rick Doane. "This event was Interfaith's most successful fundraiser ever. We couldn't be happier with the outcome."

The Gala was co-chaired by NECN's Ally Donnelly and Greg Wallingford of New England Schooner.

"As a reporter for NECN, I see the best and worst of our society. My good friend Greg and I are trying to be a part of the best of it – trying to make a difference in the community where we live and work," Donnelly said. "We are so grateful that the funds from this year's event will significantly help feed hungry local residents who live right here in our towns and neighborhoods."

Interfaith Social Services, founded in 1947, relies heavily on community volunteers and donors to deliver compassionate, client-centered programs focused on hunger, mental health and emergency assistance. Operating one of the largest food pantries in Greater Boston, Interfaith distributes almost 600,000 pounds of food to hungry South Shore residents every year. "We are extremely fortunate to have such a strong pool of volunteers and corporate partners supporting us," added Doane. "This Gala exemplifies the amazing support Interfaith receives from the community."

Gala attendees enjoyed carnival-themed games, auctions, an illusionist and appearances by The Patriots Cheerleaders as well as the newly crowned Miss Massachusetts, Caroline Lunny. Celebrity chefs provided delicious food during the dine-around reception featuring Boston's Davio's Northern Italian Steakhouse and restaurants from the South Shore including: Alma Nove, Burtons Grill, Michael Aprea Catering, Steel & Rye and Union Fish Seafood and Raw Bar. Guests also enjoyed a vodka tasting by KEEL Vodka and a whiskey tasting by 2Gingers.

The live auction had some unique items up for bid including: a dinner prepared in the winner's home by Celebrity Chef Paul Wahlberg of Alma Nove and Wahlburgers, JetBlue Vacation get-a-ways, an autographed hoodie by Patriots coach Bill Belichick, a time share in Cabo San Lucas and a tailgate party with radio host Glenn Ordway.

One of the more touching moments of the evening was when Chef Wahlberg stepped onto the stage and talked about his formative years and the challenges his family faced. A bidding war ensued amongst donors to secure a meal prepared by Wahlberg. The gracious chef exhibited his generosity once again by doubling his auction item and offering to visit two bidders' homes to cook meals for them and 10 of their friends.

The evening's program also highlighted Interfaith's Community Heroes of the Year: Cindy Lee and Ed Kelley of Braintree, long time volunteers of Interfaith Social Services. Interfaith presents this annual award to individuals who inspire others through selfless service. Each week Lee and Kelley provide over 40 hours of volunteer service through Interfaith's programs.

This year's Gala included various attendees such as news anchors, reporters from NECN, WEEI, and WTKK along with social and business leaders. Greg Wallingford, one of the event's co-chairs, recognized the gala as a "chance to get together as a community in support of families in some very difficult situations."

Granite Telecommunications Expands Fitness Center

Granite Telecommunications, LLC, a provider of communications products and services for businesses, recently celebrated the opening of its newly renovated and expanded fitness center at company headquarters in Quincy.

Granite recently finished renovations to triple the size of its 24/7 fitness center. The expanded gym includes dozens of new, state-of-the art cardio and strength training equipment, flat panel televisions and large locker rooms and showering facilities. The new facilities include over 1,000 square feet dedicated to Boot Camp style training, which Granite offers to all employees, free of charge, including individualized training programs tailored for employees who range from elite athletes to those seeking introductions to healthier lifestyles.

Granite's Chief Operating Officer Rand Currier led the ceremonies for the grand opening, and was joined by Granite staff and dedicated gym-goers.The timing of the gym's opening is ideal as Granite continues to experience record-setting growth in revenue (now over $900 million annually), has launched several new products and seeks to hire over 100 new employees. Granite recently expanded several office locations, adding over 125,000 of office space at its Quincy MA headquarters, as well as expanding its offices in Rhode Island and Atlanta, Georgia.

Rose's Pizzelle Recipe

I opened my e-mail recently and found a recipe for pizzelles (Italian waffle cookies) from my nephew Peter. The recipe was from his mother, Rose, who used to make them for all of the family get togethers.

A pizzelle is a thin delicious cookie that is pressed in between a pizzelle iron. No one could make them as crispy or as light as "Aunt Rose" did.

Peter recalled that when he was a paperboy in the fourth grade, he saved enough money to buy the pizzelle iron for his mother that was sold in a small market in Quincy years ago;

Years later when he wanted to replace the old iron for a new one, she said she didn't think the new one would be as "effective as the old one."

ROSE'S RECIPE FOR PIZZELLES

6 eggs
3 ½ cups flour
1 ½ cups sugar
½ pound of butter or margarine (softened)
4 teaspoons baking powder
2 tablespoons of either anise or vanilla extract

Beat the eggs, and add the sugar gradually with the butter. Beat until smooth. Add the flour and the baking powder. Dough will be sticky enough to be dropped by spoonfuls onto the pizzelle iron. Cook until golden brown. Store in a tightly closed container.

We used to make ice cream sandwiches especially in the vanilla ones.

Fundraiser April 11 To Benefit Special Education

The Quincy Public School Special Education fundraiser will be held Friday, April 11 from 7 p.m. to midnight at the Quincy Sons of Italy, Quarry St., Quincy.

In 2010 and 2011 two local parents ran a fundraiser for the Quincy Public Schools special education department. All funds raised went to teachers grants for such items as sensory materials, reading programs, floor mats, iPads and other materials that benefitted all students within the Quincy Public Schools.

The April 11th fundraiser will include raffle items, music, and light refreshments.

Anyone who would like to help out and/or donate a raffle item can contact Kelli and Vinny Guarino at kelliguarino@outlook.com.

Alumni Café Closing End Of An Era In Wollaston

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Alumni Café, which served some of the South Shore's most popular bar pizza for over 60 years and cemented itself as a Wollaston staple, won't reopen following its abrupt closure in August.

Despite acquiring a liquor license for 2014 and informing the City Clerk's office that the establishment would be closed simply for renovations, The Alumni Cafe was never reopened by owner Thomas Bellotti.

Originally opened in 1960 at 706-708 Hancock St., the establishment was bought in 1996 by Bellotti from long-time owners the Player brothers and served as a meeting place for local politicians, high school students, and families alike looking to socialize, watch the game, or enjoy some Keno, all for a reasonable price.

It was lauded for one of its only food offerings; South Shore-style bar pies which are typically 8-12 inches in diameter, have a crispy, thin crust, and are traditionally served as tavern fare. They may be popular in Massachusetts but are little known outside the area.

"It's the end of an era," said City Clerk Joseph Shea, who recounted heading to the bar and eatery every Wednesday night for the relaxed, no frills, pub atmosphere.

Sold in principal for $400,000 to Michael Ly in December, the building will undergo interior renovations and reopen as the Crystal Jade in three to four months.

All of the Alumni's licenses including an alcohol license, common victualler license, pinball license, jukebox license, and cabaret license, were transferred to Ly at last Tuesday's meeting of the Board of License Commissioners.

"I think it's a sign of the times," said Shea when asked about the recent shift in the Quincy dining scene. He was "not surprised" and likened it to the closing of longtime Wollaston eatery Barry's Deli which shut its doors in March and has since been replaced by the sushi restaurant Koi Sushi Quincy.

Former Ward 5 City Councillor Charles Phelan said he was sad to see the Alumni go although he admitted that he had noticed business falling off. "The healthier the business district, the healthier the city," he said. " These other businesses come in and seem to be doing very well."

Phelan, who worked 16 years for The Burke Distributing Corporation—a company which distributes beer to Greater Boston businesses—said he was accustomed to seeing bars and taverns open and close in short time due to the nature of owning such a business, but that didn't make seeing one of Quincy's most notable meeting spots close any easier.

He attended every Wednesday night, when former Ward 6 Councillor Joe Newton would bartend. Newton worked on the Alumni's last night in business. He called the usual crowd diverse, and said you could spot a regular by how quickly they made their way toward the popcorn machine.

Newton worked there for 10 years, and said he was sad to see such a special place close.

Councillor Douglas Gutro said the restaurant had become an institution for Quincy's past generations and recounted the Friday and Saturday evening scramble to get "Ni-Pies" as they were affectionately called and said it was best to "plan ahead" when placing your order, lest you get caught up in the rush.

He referred to the closing of the Alumni as a "changing of the guards, so to speak."

"Any time a long time establishment closes its doors there's a sense of sadness and nostalgia," he said, but admitted that he was excited by the prospect of a new and thriving business replacing the Alumni, "not just an empty lot."

License Board News

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The transfer of all business licenses held by Bel-Pro Inc., doing business as Alumni Café at 706-708 Hancock St. to Michael N. Ly, of H and L Restaurant Inc., doing business as Crystal Jade took place at last Tuesday's meeting of the Board of License Commissioners.

The H and L Restaurant Inc. corporation was formed last November specifically for the acquisition of the Alumni Cafe by Ly who resides in Burlington.

"He'll be the manager of the liquor license and he'll manage the bar and alcohol serving aspect of the business," said representing attorney Christopher Harrington, who noted Ly was ServSafe certified with food handling as well as alcohol.

There will be no alterations made to the size or shape of the building, which is currently a 96-seat restaurant. No expansion of the bar, which will have eight seats and serve as an alcohol and beverage service station, is planned. The floor area will also not be expanded.

"The proposed bar in this restaurant is substantially smaller than the bar that was at the Alumni," said Harrington.

The size and usage of the basement will also remain unchanged.

"The present owner, Bel-Pro Corporation Thomas Bellotti, is in good standing with the city. They paid all of their taxes and all of their water bills," said Chairman Joseph Shea. "I talked to the city treasurer today and the tax compliant paperwork is done."

All restaurant licenses including an alcohol license, common victualler license, pinball license, jukebox license, and cabaret license were transferred under the name of Crystal Jade.

Owners of Johnson's Filling Station, which lies immediately adjacent to the Alumni Café at 700 Hancock St., Kristen Johnson and Kimberly Beers shared concerns over parking between the two businesses.

Established in1924, Johnson's Filling Station is the oldest in Quincy and was acquired by Harris "Harry" Johnson in the 1970s and owned by him until his death in December of 2011.

"We are very concerned about the parking situation," said Johnson. "We are immediately adjacent to the Alumni and we would like to know exactly what they have in mind for parking." She explained that the station's underground storage tanks (USTs) are usually filled overnight and are in an area which some people used as parking while going to the Alumni Café. "What concerns us most is the deliveries at night. If there are people parking anywhere in that area, they can't deliver the gasoline."

Johnson said her brother "had more or less an understanding with the owner of the Alumni" and that "he was a believer of the old school handshake." She was unsure if they had any kind of written agreement. "We really have to decide or nail down some kind of understanding with the parking situation," she said.

Ly agreed and suggested he post signs to dissuade parking in the area. He also agreed to restrict the usage of the building's backdoor strictly for fire emergencies, not for takeout deliveries as the Alumni had used it.

"That door is not actually their second egress. They have a second egress," said Beers. "This was not supposed to be a takeout door. We pretty much want to make sure it doesn't happen again."

Ly wanted to begin their relationship on the right foot. "Eventually we're going to be neighbors so we have to be on a good side with each other," he said.

Harrington clarified that Ly understood the situation and reiterated that all parking for the Crystal Jade would be public and on-street.

Due to past complaints of smells originating from an alley dumpster, Ly agreed to have the dumpster changed on a regular basis and to clean it with disinfecting products between changes.

Shea shared memories of the Alumni Café.

"I've been getting pizzas out of there probably since the mid to late 60s when me and my dad would go and pick it up," he said. "Hopefully someone will pick up the recipe for their pizza and continue to produce it because it was really great pizza."

He thanked former Alumni owner Thomas Bellotti for doing a "great job" of managing the restaurant which became a city institution.

The Crystal Jade restaurant is anticipated to open in three to four months.

In other board action:

A hearing regarding the application of Table for Three, Inc. doing business as Zona Sul, 1506 Hancock St., for a change of manager form Cesar A. Cruz to Antonio M. Gonsalves went before the commission.

Harrington represented Gonsalves who has extensive experience in the restaurant management field.

Gonsalves, who is currently a sales representative for Reinhart AGAR Foodservice in Taunton, was previously Vice President of UFood Grill, a regional manager for the Baja Fresh Mexican Grill, and one of the original owners of Pacini's Italian Eatery in Quincy. "He would like to move onto other endeavors in his own working life," said Harrington. "He has been granted written authority by the licensing corporation to manage all aspects of the alcohol service on this property."

He is TIPS (Training for Intervention Procedures by Servers of Alcohol) certified and plans on renewing his certification prior to taking on the new management position. He will also be present and working at the Brazilian style buffet which contains 64 seats.

The motion was passed unanimously.

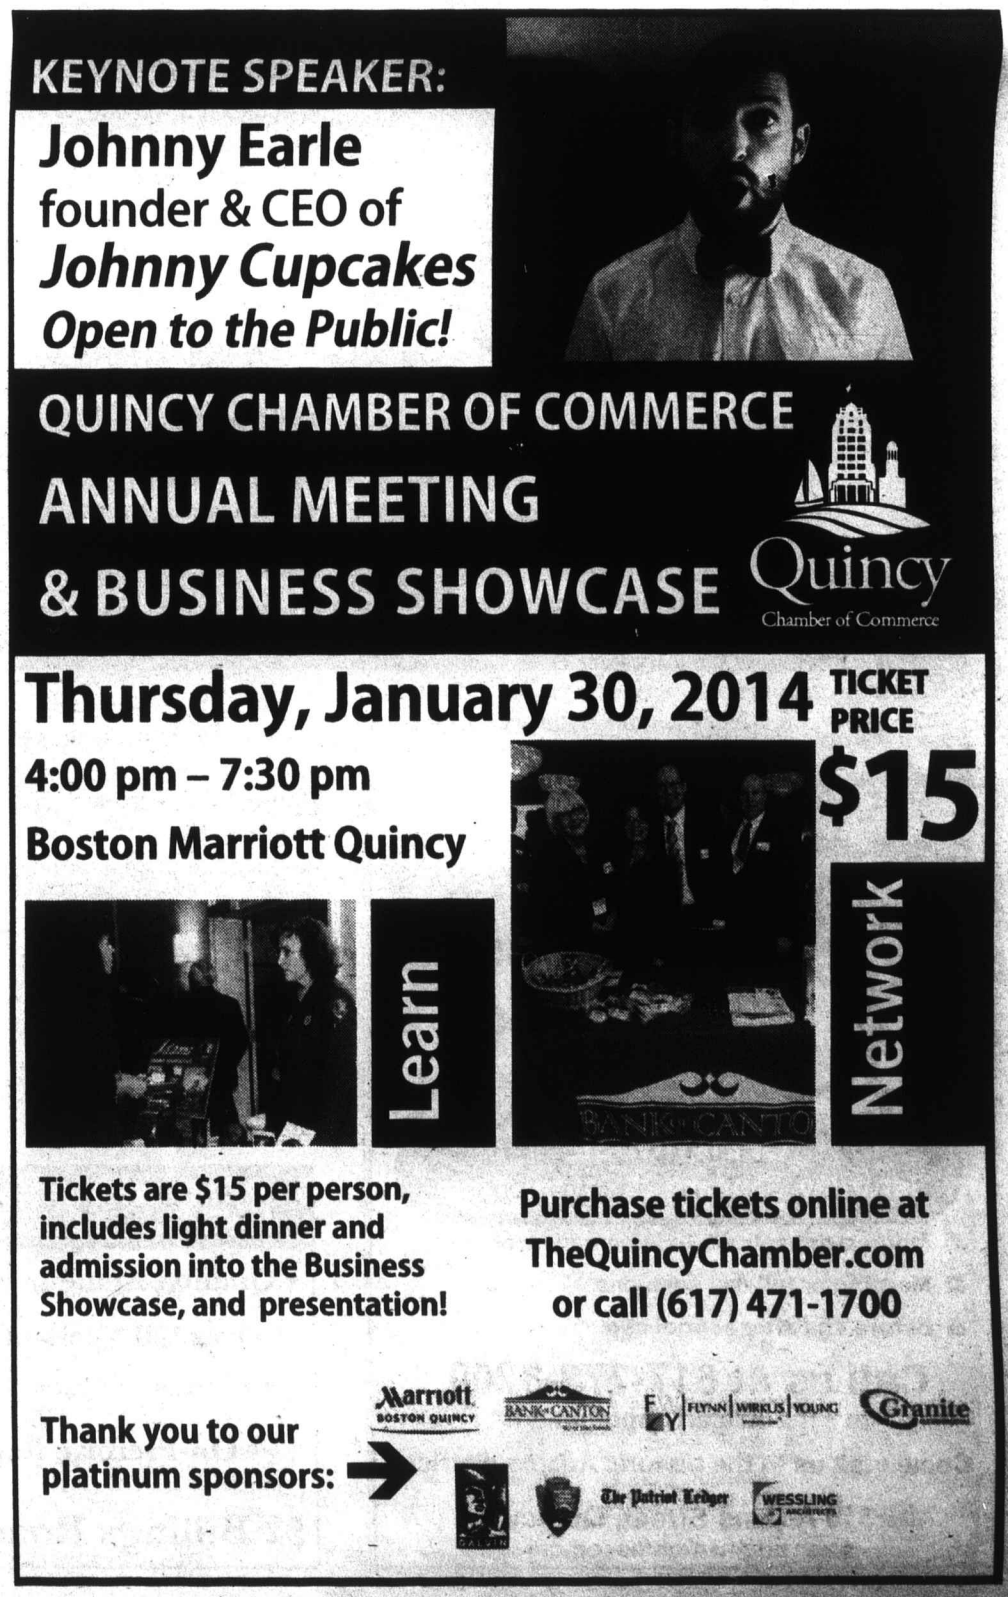

Elections for the positions of Chair and Vice Chair were the final items on the agenda. Commissioner Andrew Scheele nominated Shea to return to his seat which was seconded by Commissioner Joseph Barron.

"We deal with what comes before us. It's a changing city," said Shea. "We don't want to see vacant buildings. We're doing the very best we can."

"I appreciate it and I'll be happy to be the chairman for 2014."

Vice Chairman Andrew Scheele retained his position and was nominated by Commissioner Jay Duca with a second by Commissioner Paul Keenan.

"Drew knows the city. Drew has the heart for this job," said Shea.

"I think it's a sign of the times," said Shea when asked about the recent shift in the Quincy dining scene. He was "not surprised" and likened it to the closing of longtime Wollaston eatery Barry's Deli which shut its doors in March and has since been replaced by the sushi restaurant Koi Sushi Quincy.

Former Ward 5 City Councillor Charles Phelan said he was sad to see the Alumni go although he admitted that he had noticed business falling off. "The healthier the business district, the healthier the city," he said. " These other businesses come in and seem to be doing very well."

Phelan, who worked 16 years for The Burke Distributing Corporation—a company which distributes beer to Greater Boston businesses—said he was accustomed to seeing bars and taverns open and close in short time due to the nature of owning such a business, but that didn't make seeing one of Quincy's most notable meeting spots close any easier.

He attended every Wednesday night, when former Ward 6 Councillor Joe Newton would bartend. Newton worked on the Alumni's last night in business. He called the usual crowd diverse, and said you could spot a regular by how quickly they made their way toward the popcorn machine.

Newton worked there for 10 years, and said he was sad to see such a special place close.

Councillor Douglas Gutro said the restaurant had become an institution for Quincy's past generations and recounted the Friday and Saturday evening scramble to get "Ni-Pies" as they were affectionately called and said it was best to "plan ahead" when placing your order, lest you get caught up in the rush.

He referred to the closing of the Alumni as a "changing of the guards, so to speak."

"Any time a long time establishment closes its doors there's a sense of sadness and nostalgia," he said, but admitted that he was excited by the prospect of a new and thriving business replacing the Alumni, "not just an empty lot."

License Board News

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The transfer of all business licenses held by Bel-Pro Inc., doing business as Alumni Café at 706-708 Hancock St. to Michael N. Ly, of H and L Restaurant Inc., doing business as Crystal Jade took place at last Tuesday's meeting of the Board of License Commissioners.

The H and L Restaurant Inc. corporation was formed last November specifically for the acquisition of the Alumni Cafe by Ly who resides in Burlington.

"He'll be the manager of the liquor license and he'll manage the bar and alcohol serving aspect of the business," said representing attorney Christopher Harrington, who noted Ly was ServSafe certified with food handling as well as alcohol.

There will be no alterations made to the size or shape of the building, which is currently a 96-seat restaurant. No expansion of the bar, which will have eight seats and serve as an alcohol and beverage service station, is planned. The floor area will also not be expanded.

"The proposed bar in this restaurant is substantially smaller than the bar that was at the Alumni," said Harrington.

The size and usage of the basement will also remain unchanged.

"The present owner, Bel-Pro Corporation Thomas Bellotti, is in good standing with the city. They paid all of their taxes and all of their water bills," said Chairman Joseph Shea. "I talked to the city treasurer today and the tax compliant paperwork is done."

All restaurant licenses including an alcohol license, common victualler license, pinball license, jukebox license, and cabaret license were transferred under the name of Crystal Jade.

Owners of Johnson's Filling Station, which lies immediately adjacent to the Alumni Café at 700 Hancock St., Kristen Johnson and Kimberly Beers shared concerns over parking between the two businesses.

Established in1924, Johnson's Filling Station is the oldest in Quincy and was acquired by Harris "Harry" Johnson in the 1970s and owned by him until his death in December of 2011.

"We are very concerned about the parking situation," said Johnson. "We are immediately adjacent to the Alumni and we would like to know exactly what they have in mind for parking." She explained that the station's underground storage tanks (USTs) are usually filled overnight and are in an area which some people used as parking while going to the Alumni Café. "What concerns us most is the deliveries at night. If there are people parking anywhere in that area, they can't deliver the gasoline."

Johnson said her brother "had more or less an understanding with the owner of the Alumni" and that "he was a believer of the old school handshake." She was unsure if they had any kind of written agreement. "We really have to decide or nail down some kind of understanding with the parking situation," she said.

Ly agreed and suggested he post signs to dissuade parking in the area. He also agreed to restrict the usage of the building's backdoor strictly for fire emergencies, not for takeout deliveries as the Alumni had used it.

"That door is not actually their second egress. They have a second egress," said Beers. "This was not supposed to be a takeout door. We pretty much want to make sure it doesn't happen again."

Ly wanted to begin their relationship on the right foot. "Eventually we're going to be neighbors so we have to be on a good side with each other," he said.

Harrington clarified that Ly understood the situation and reiterated that all parking for the Crystal Jade would be public and on-street.

Due to past complaints of smells originating from an alley dumpster, Ly agreed to have the dumpster changed on a regular basis and to clean it with disinfecting products between changes.

Shea shared memories of the Alumni Café.

"I've been getting pizzas out of there probably since the mid to late 60s when me and my dad would go and pick it up," he said. "Hopefully someone will pick up the recipe for their pizza and continue to produce it because it was really great pizza."

He thanked former Alumni owner Thomas Bellotti for doing a "great job" of managing the restaurant which became a city institution.

The Crystal Jade restaurant is anticipated to open in three to four months.

In other board action:

A hearing regarding the application of Table for Three, Inc. doing business as Zona Sul, 1506 Hancock St., for a change of manager form Cesar A. Cruz to Antonio M. Gonsalves went before the commission.

Harrington represented Gonsalves who has extensive experience in the restaurant management field.

Gonsalves, who is currently a sales representative for Reinhart AGAR Foodservice in Taunton, was previously Vice President of UFood Grill, a regional manager for the Baja Fresh Mexican Grill, and one of the original owners of Pacini's Italian Eatery in Quincy. "He would like to move onto other endeavors in his own working life," said Harrington. "He has been granted written authority by the licensing corporation to manage all aspects of the alcohol service on this property."

He is TIPS (Training for Intervention Procedures by Servers of Alcohol) certified and plans on renewing his certification prior to taking on the new management position. He will also be present and working at the Brazilian style buffet which contains 64 seats.

The motion was passed unanimously.

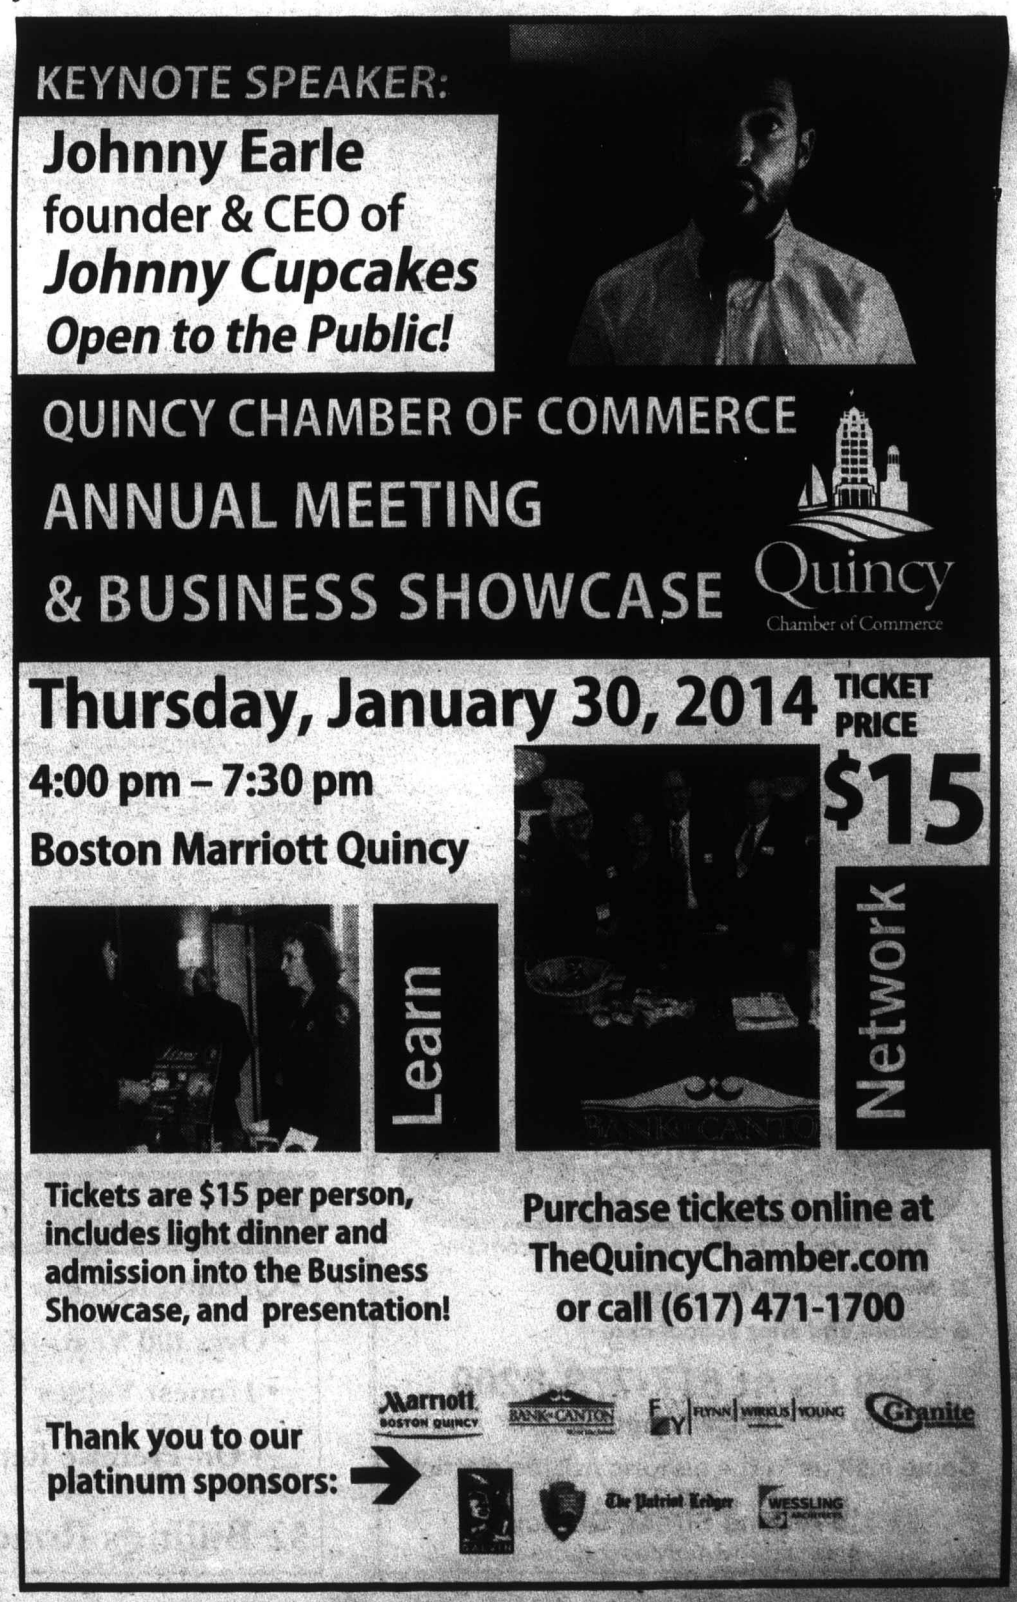

Elections for the positions of Chair and Vice Chair were the final items on the agenda. Commissioner Andrew Scheele nominated Shea to return to his seat which was seconded by Commissioner Joseph Barron.

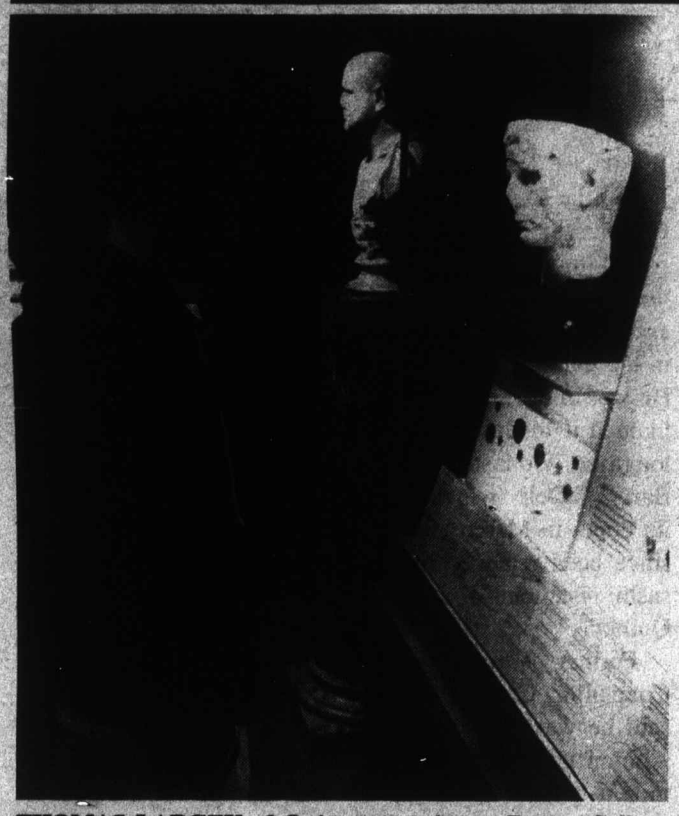

"We deal with what comes before us. It's a changing city," said Shea. "We don't want to see vacant buildings. We're doing the very best we can."

"I appreciate it and I'll be happy to be the chairman for 2014."

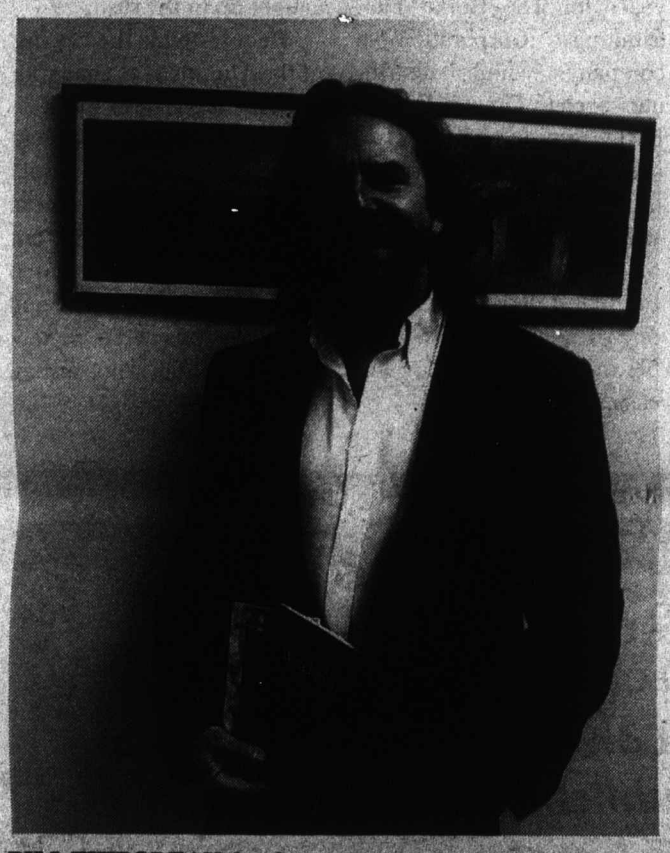

Vice Chairman Andrew Scheele retained his position and was nominated by Commissioner Jay Duca with a second by Commissioner Paul Keenan.

"Drew knows the city. Drew has the heart for this job," said Shea.

Quincy Public Schools' Kindergarten Registration March 4

Quincy Public Schools' Kindergarten Registration for the 2014 – 2015 school year will be held Tuesday, March 4 between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Children who will be 5 years of age on or before Aug. 31, 2014 should register at their home schools. For a listing of home schools, visit the QPS website, www.quincypublicschools.com.

Parents seeking open enrollment need to first register at their home school on March 4th. Children do not need to come to registration.

Children presently attending the Pre-K programs at either the Snug Harbor School or the Amelio Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center do not need to register March 4.

The following documents must be produced in order for a student to be registered:

- Child's birth certificate (with a raised seal)
- Proof that the child resides in the home school district (any two: tax bill, utility bill, copy of lease)
- Photo I.D. of the adult seeking to enroll the student
- Copy of a recent (within one year) physical examination by a physician
- Written records of immunizations

Parents may access the required registration forms on the QPS website. Follow parent links to Kindergarten Registration. Scroll down to access the link to the packet.

Questions regarding the Kindergarten program may be directed to your home school principal.

Valentine Princess Tea At Houghs Neck Church Feb. 8

A Valentine Princess Tea will be held Saturday, Feb. 8 at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave., Quincy.

There are two sessions available to choose either 10 a.m. to noon or 2 to 4 p.m.

There will be crafts, music, activities, goodies and perhaps even a visit by a special princess.

The cost is $10 per child and $5 per adult. Princess dress and accessories are optional.

This is always a sell-out event. Reservations are required. For reservations e-mail hncc@comcast.net or call Sue at 617-479-2311. Be sure to indicate how many adults and how many princesses will be attending and which session is preferred. Those leaving a message on the answering machine should include a phone number.

The event is intended for princesses from pre-school through elementary age. All princesses must be accompanied by an adult.

'Nicky's Family' Film Screening At Fenno House Sunday

The Quincy South Shore Jewish Committee in cooperation with The Fenno House, will screen a film "Nicky's Family" on Sunday, Jan. 26 at 2p.m.at Fenno House, 540 Hancock St., Quincy.

The public is invited. Admission is free.

"Nicky's Family" is the story of Sir Nicholas Winton, an Englishman who rescued 669 Czech and Slovak children, who were mainly Jewish, just before World War II broke out with the Nazi invasion. Sir Nicholas has been knighted by Queen Elizabeth and several citations were introduced in the U.S. Congress, noting his noble deeds. He is now 104 years old, never speaking of these events and they would have been forgotten if his wife hadn't found a suitcase full of documents. Over 200 of his now-adult children who were in the Kindertransport have been located and his "family" has grown in excess of 6,000 people many achieving great things themselves.

The film has played in the greater Boston area, earning rave reviews and has won over 30 awards.

never backed down. It never changed him. It never changed his message."

Paul Gorman, the president of the South Shore YMCA, was the first speaker at the breakfast. He said that while Martin Luther King, Jr. Day is seen as an annual date to see how the battle against prejudice, injustice, and inequality is going, people should be doing that everyday.

"We celebrate the accomplishments of Dr. King's peaceful fight against prejudice, injustice, and inequality. This day usually serves as a yearly check to see how we're doing on this fight on these things," Gorman said. "We need to do that daily for all of us, and we can do it in many different ways. We can all make an impact, whether as leaders, parents, friends, or neighbors. We can do it through the complexity of laws or we can do it in simple tasks just by telling a friend that an inappropriate joke is inappropriate and to stop it."

Norfolk County Dist. Atty. Michael Morrissey served as the master of ceremonies Monday. He said Quincy is a more diverse city now than it was when he was growing up, noting there was just one Chinese-American student who graduated from North Quincy High School with him in 1972.

"Today the city is a far different city than when I was many of the students' age," Morrissey said. "We have obviously grown in our diversity and we recognize that with events like today."

Monday's event was the city's 18th annual ceremony to commemorate Martin Luther King, Jr. Day, and Morrissey said next year's event could be moved to a larger venue such as the new Quincy High School or Central Middle School.

Students from the Germantown Neighborhood Center ended Monday's event with poems, songs and dance. Included among those was a recital of a poem entitled "Stand Up" about standing up to bullying; a performance of the Robert Palmer song "Every Kind of People"; a hand bell version of "Amazing Grace"; and a group dance to the song "Light Up the World" from the "Glee" soundtrack. Christopher David James, the musical director for the Germantown afterschool program, organized the performances and also played a saxophone solo of "We Shall Overcome."

Free Children's Concert With Brass, Percussion Feb. 15

"Fire in the Big-Top!", a musical tale for narrator, brass, and percussion, will be performed by the Fenway Brass Quintet on Saturday, Feb. 15 at 11 a.m. at St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church in Quincy.

The church is located at 1 Linden St (corner of Hancock St.), and is fully accessible. More information is available at www.stcquincy.org or 617-472-0737.

"Fire in the Big-Top!" tells the story of Tom and Maggie, two kids growing up in the 1890's, who save their town when a fire breaks out at the circus. In this interactive performance, children sing along with the musicians, make "fire sounds", and learn about the brass and percussion instruments while they hear the story set to music. The piece is suitable for elementary school children and younger, and lasts about 40 minutes. After the concert, attendees will have the chance to see the brass and percussion instruments up-close and meet the musicians.

"Fire in the Big-Top!" was composed by Quincy resident and Wheaton College music professor Delvyn Case, who has been involved in numerous community music events in Quincy over the past decade. It was originally commissioned by the Portland Symphony Orchestra, which performed it at schools and libraries across the state of Maine during the 2012-13 concert season.

Evan Dwyer Memorial Book Scholarship Applications Available

Applications are available for a Montclair School PTO $300 book scholarship named in memory of former student Evan Dwyer.

Evan attended Montclair in kindergarten and first grade then lost his battle with leukemia on Feb. 13, 2004.

He was born in Quincy, where he lived all his life. He is survived by his parents, Michael J. Dwyer of the Quincy Fire Department and Gina (Zero) Dwyer; a brother, Joseph and a sister Kelsie.

The Montclair School PTO provides one (1) $300 scholarship to help defray the high cost of books for Montclair School graduates as they continue their education after high school. As a community, the PTO values the importance of the high quality education Quincy children receive throughout their years in the Quincy Public School system and hope to encourage them to continue their education.

To qualify for the $300 Book Scholarship, the student must have attended a minimum of 3rd through 5th grade at Montclair School and be attending an accredited post-secondary university, college, or trade school.

Applicants must fill out the form found at www.montclairpto.com or www.quincypublicschools.com/montclair completely and submit it to the office staff at Montclair School no later than Feb. 3 (or mail it to Montclair School PTO, Attn: Evan Dwyer Book Scholarship, 8 Belmont St., Quincy MA 02171.

Applications must be received prior to the February PTO meeting. The recipient will be selected at random from a drawing of all applicants. Once selected the recipient can submit up to $300 in book receipts for reimbursement.

Those who wish to donate to the scholarship can send donations to the Montclair School attention Evan Dwyer Scholarship Fund. Funds received will be granted to another qualifying applicant.

Governor, Keenan, Hold School Safety Roundtable

State Senator John Keenan of Quincy recently joined Gov. Deval Patrick for a roundtable discussion with parents, educators, and state public safety and public health officials about school safety.

At the roundtable, held in Revere, state legislators and officials heard concerns from parents about traffic safety, the need for quality after school programming, and physical security to protect against violent intruders.

The roundtable discussion came days after a 12-year old boy walked into a gym in Roswell, New Mexico and wounded two students with a sawed-off shotgun, and the question of responding to gun violence was a focus of conversation. Keenan focused his comments on the need for adequate mental health services both in a school-based setting, and throughout communities.

"We need to recognize the importance of mental health services," said Keenan, "and the intersection between gun violence and mental health. We have to assist parents, so that they know where to turn when they first see signs of depression or behavioral challenges. We have to provide proper resources and training to all school personnel, and engage the medical community to help respond to concerns before they become severe."

Parents spoke about the importance of feeling safe and secure in the school environment, and had mixed responses to the idea of physical security systems such as metal detectors and identification requirements, saying that they cause stress on children, but might be necessary for safety reasons.

"Providing better access to mental health services, and encouraging gun owners to safeguard household weapons if they see warning signs, can help address the issue before a threat arrives at a school door," Keenan said.

After the discussion, Governor Patrick signed Executive Order No. 548, establishing a Cross Secretariat Task Force on School Safety and Security. The Task Force will prepare by this summer recommendations that will include best practices, which will be made available to school systems across the Commonwealth.

"While the school systems in my legislative district have introduced comprehensive school security and safety plans and policies, it is my hope that this Task Force and the recommendations it makes will prove helpful to them, and prompt continuous review of their plans and processes," said Keenan.

Tank or Tankless Hot Water Heater?

THIS IS A HAMMER

By Samantha Mazzotta

Question: I'm thinking of switching from a traditional hot water heater to a tankless water heater. With three teenagers in the house, the current tank heater is just not adequate to keep hot water available. Will a tankless heater solve the problem? And which is better, an electric or gas heater? -- Sal in Southern California

Answer: While I like the concept of tankless water heaters -- they provide hot water on demand, rather than storing water in a tank and keeping it warm -- it's really important for homeowners to do their research before deciding to jump to this system.

Electric tankless heaters, for example, look like a good deal up front. They cost about a third to one-half as much as gas tankless heaters. However, installation can be expensive: most electric heaters require a dedicated 30-amp circuit, meaning an electrician will have to come in to properly wire the house. In older homes, the installation can be pretty painful on the wallet.

Gas tankless heaters cost more up front, but installation may not be as expensive. A qualified installer will need to set up the gas connection, and your gas system may need some modification.

With either type, you still will have to deal with the problem of adequate hot-water supply. Placing high demand on the heater -- such as running a shower, the dishwasher and the hot water tap in a sink at the same time -- will make it more difficult for the unit to heat water to the correct temperature, meaning everybody starts getting tepid water.

Homeowners I've spoken with who have tankless heaters are generally pretty happy with them. But they have experienced a few issues, such as not knowing they need to flush the heating system once per year (and more often in a hard-water environment). None complained about having inadequate hot water -- either they selected the right-size system for their house, or they adjusted their water use to the rate at which the water gets heated.

Because of the expense involved, find out how much water your family uses and track how much hot water is used during each day. Talk with the tankless heater dealer about the right system based on your needs, compare average annual costs (in electricity or gas) of the system compared to a traditional tank heater, and make sure you know up front what installation will entail and how much it will cost.

HOME TIP: Tankless heaters can suffer from mineral scale buildup in the heat exchanger. Talk to the manufacturer about installing a flush valve so that you can flush out buildup annually and extend the life of the unit.

Donation Drive To Benefit Victims Of New Year's Eve Fire

By SCOTT JACKSON

Friends of a Filbert Street mother and daughter who lost everything in a fire on New Year's Eve are raising funds to help support them.

Around 10 p.m. on Dec. 31, Elizabeth McGunagle left her Filbert Street apartment to drop her daughter Jennifer, a recent college graduate with a teaching degree, off at a New Year's party. She came back 10 minutes later, and her house was engulfed in flames.

"She was gone for about 10 minutes only to come home with her apartment and everything she and her daughter owned up in flames," said Kerry DeSimone, a neighbor of the McGunagles who, along with Susan Murphy, is helping raise funds for them. "A horrible fire that forced her and her daughter to lose everything."

After the fire, DeSimone and her family took in Elizabeth McGunagle, who she knows as BJ, and her cats Big Guy and Layla until the Red Cross was able to find her a hotel to stay in temporarily. Murphy also helped out by purchasing essential items such as clothes.

"My husband, son and I were the first to help our neighbor – giving her a warm house to come into that night while she figured out what the next step was going to be for her and her family," DeSimone said. "I got a chance to be a foster mommy for her kitty Big Guy until she could get him settled somewhere. Layla was another kitty they had and was found the next day safe and unharmed.

"Another close friend of BJ, Susan Murphy from Houghs Neck, went and bought them some clothing, personal care items along with cooking them a warm meal and brought it to the hotel that the Red Cross set them up in for a couple of days."

DeSimone is now hoping to raise money for McGunagle and her daughter. She said McGunagle is known to her friends as an angel because she cared for a friend in need and was a good a neighbor.

"I just feel that it is something that needs to be done – sort of a pay it forward thing that would make us feel good as people," DeSimone said. "She (McGunagle) is known as sort of an angel to some folks. She moved in and took care of a friend in need for a year before her passing."

"Her and her daughter are always very neighborly. Very nice people to my two boys and the rest of the neighborhood kids on our quiet street," DeSimone added. "We, her friends and neighbors, are asking for any donation to help a mother and her daughter who did not have a great chance going into the new year."

DeSimone said donations can be made payable to Elizabeth McGunagle, care of her daughter Kayla Hurdle, 77 Bardin St., Hanover, MA 02339.

Keenan Named To Special Senate Committee On Addiction Treatment

Senate President Therese Murray has appointed Sen. John Keenan, who represents Quincy, to serve on a special committee to specifically analyze a law, known as Section 35, which allows courts to commit a person for up to ninety days for detox and treatment of alcohol and drug addiction.

In forming the Committee, Senate President Murray said that since 1999 the state has seen a 47 percent increase in overdose deaths. "It's not anecdotal," Murray said, "I've sat in the drug courts in my own district and it just tears your heart out to see families coming and pleading with judges to put their children away - adult children, not just small children."

Under Section 35, a spouse, blood relative, guardian, police officer, physician or court official can petition the local court to commit a person. The commitment order is issued if there is a medical diagnosis of alcoholism or substance abuse, and there is a likelihood of serious harm to the person or others as a result of the substance abuse.

Keenan said that in 2012 the Quincy District Court, which covers the towns of Braintree, Holbrook and Braintree, as well as the City of Quincy, issued 464 civil commitment orders, more than any other court in the Commonwealth. The Brockton District Court, which covers the town of Abington, issued 186 commitment orders, the second highest number in the State.

"Given the need and the number of civil commitments ordered," said Keenan, "we have an obligation to analyze the law, review the detox and treatment programs, and survey the facilities where the programs are offered."

"People come to the courts and Section 35 for help for a loved one when there is nowhere else to go," said Keenan. "We will question whether the Section 35 process is the best way to get them the help they need, and if so, will work to make sure the programs and facilities efficiently and effectively put people on the path to recovery."

The committee will consist of Keenan, Senator William Brownsberger of Belmont, Senator Linda Dorcena Forry of Boston, Senator Joan Lovely of Salem, and Senator Richard Ross of Wrentham, and will be chaired by Senator Jennifer Flanagan of Leominster. The committee plans on reporting to the Senate by May of this year.

Dan Hunt Candidate Seeks 13th Suffolk State Rep. Seat

Dan Hunt kicked off his campaign for State Representative in the 13th Suffolk District Saturday attended by supporters from across the district at Dorchester's Phillips Old Colony House.

The 13th Suffolk District includes one Quincy precinct: Ward 3 Precinct 3 which is the Montclair area of the city.

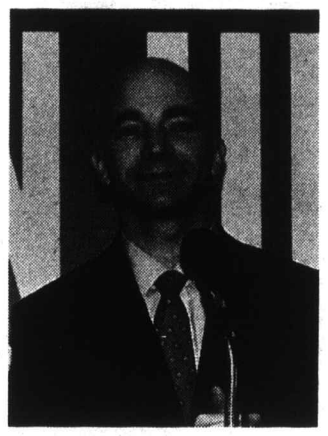

Hunt, a Democrat, is seeking the state representative seat in the 13th Suffolk District that was vacated by Martin Walsh who was elected mayor of Boston last fall.

The Special Election Primary will be held on Tuesday, March 4 and final election is Tuesday, April 1.

Hunt told supporters:

"I am your candidate for State Representative and look forward to working with all of you over the next 45 days to share our collective vision for our neighborhoods – safer streets, better schools, access to health care, and revitalization to our neighborhoods where we walk, shop, and send our kids out to play. I look forward to being your voice at the State House."

Noting Hunt's experience in state government as Legislative Director at the Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR), and his overall dedication and passion as a public servant to help people, State Sen. Linda Dorcena Forry introduced Hunt.

DAN HUNT

"It's clear – Dan is the best candidate for the job. His tireless commitment whether in his former role at DCR pushing legislation for projects to improve our quality of life, or mentoring teens right here in our neighborhoods, Dan has the drive, commitment, and experience to seamlessly transition into the State Representative seat representing the 13th Suffolk District."

Phil Carver, president of the Pope's Hill Neighborhood Association, announced his support for Hunt.

"Dan Hunt is exactly the partner we need at the State House to ensure our voices are heard on community issues that affect all of us. With Dan's experience and knowledge of the inner-workings of the legislature, he can hit the ground running post election day."

Quincy City Councillor Doug Gutro attended the event and offered his support for Dan's candidacy. "I have worked with Dan Hunt through his work in state government. Dan knows how to bring people together to build the support and momentum needed to get things done. He will be an effective partner at the State House."

Umoren's Double-Doubles Lead NQ Over S-L, Scituate

By BILL GRIFFIN

She is so good, so consistently, relentlessly good that what she does in every game on every night may not be fully appreciated by those who are not her coach or her teammates.

Senior center Maya Umoren, who cranks out double-doubles the way assembly lines crank out automobiles, dominated the inside once again with 23 points and 13 rebounds, and North Quincy tore open a close game with a third-period blitz for a 57-35 victory over Scituate in a Patriot League Fisher Division contest Friday night.

North finished the week at 8-2 overall and 6-0 in the league, good for first place and a one-game lead over Hanover in the division.

"Maya is so good that you just come to expect a double-double every night," said North coach Jessica Worden. "And remember, she plays at 5'10", not 6'4". She's doing this despite giving away inches most nights. She is so tough and has those great hands. She just rips away anything that comes close to her."

In other action last week, Umoren produced another double-double with 20 points and 10 rebounds to carry North past Silver Lake, 61-45.

Grace Geary added 19 points while Jane Minton played a strong overall game with nine points and 10 assists. Haley McKay chipped in with seven points, five steals and another strong defensive outing.

For most players a double-double means a memory to hold dear for a season. For Umoren, it means a night's work. She cashed rebounds, hit short jumpers, drove to the hoop, started the break with defensive rebounds and plugged the middle against penetration. She also found open lanes for entry feeds from North's guards who had a great night passing the ball.

"Maya also has good court awareness," Worden said. "She knows who is around her and how to get open. She and Jane have been playing together so long, they know where each other is without even looking."

Minton (13 points, nine assists), Geary (seven points, seven assists), and McKay (nine points) consistently got Umroen the ball where she likes it. They also put on a terrific passing show which fueled a 17-3 run to close the third period and give North a non-refundable 44-29 lead. If you like passing, this was your night.

"We had trouble with their press in the first half," said Worden. "We broke it better in the third period because we threw long passes over it, and this opened up fast-break chances for us."

Not only did they throw long passes over the press, Geary, Minton, and and McKay threw strikes. Not only did they throw long strikes, they didn't settle for merely breaking the press, they took the ball to the basket for layups.

"And when the layup wasn't there, we pulled it back out. We did a better job running all the way through our offensive plays," said Worden.

Geary, in particular, showed that great players don't have to score 20 points to play great games. In North's big run, she had a beautiful assist on a McKay drive, an over-the-head feed on the dead run for a Umoren layup, a rebound and full-court strike to Minton for a fast-break bucket, a drive which set up a Umoren offensive rebound, a flying scoop, and a steal which got Marissa McGue to the foul line.

"Grace can influence a game in so many ways," said Worden. "She has great anticipation on defense and on offense, she sees the whole floor. She drives and looks to dish to the open player."

A constant in the win was North's defense. McKay, Minton, Geary, and McGue simply hounded Scituate's guards denying any penetration and taking a good run at any outside shot. Umoren limited the Scituate offense to once chance. North only gave up nine points over the final 14 minutes of the game and just 70 in two wins last week. The Red Raiders had 17 team steals. North has given up more than 50 points once in 10 games, and that was in overtime to Plymouth North. The identity of this team is its defense.

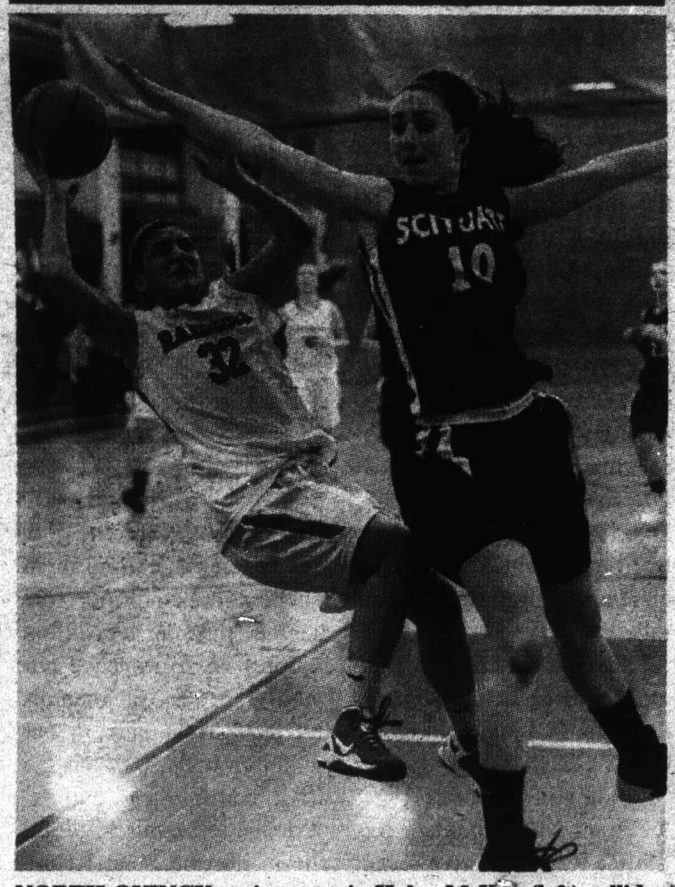

"The key is the intensity," said Worden. "It begins with the starters, and everyone who comes in the game keeps it up."

Umoren had eight in the first quarter to help the Red Raiders to a 15-7 lead, but Scituate's press and two threes from Kelsey Powers kept the Sailors within 23-19 at the half. The Sailors cut it to one early in the third at 27-26 before Geary, Minton and McKay performed their passing light show to put away the victory.

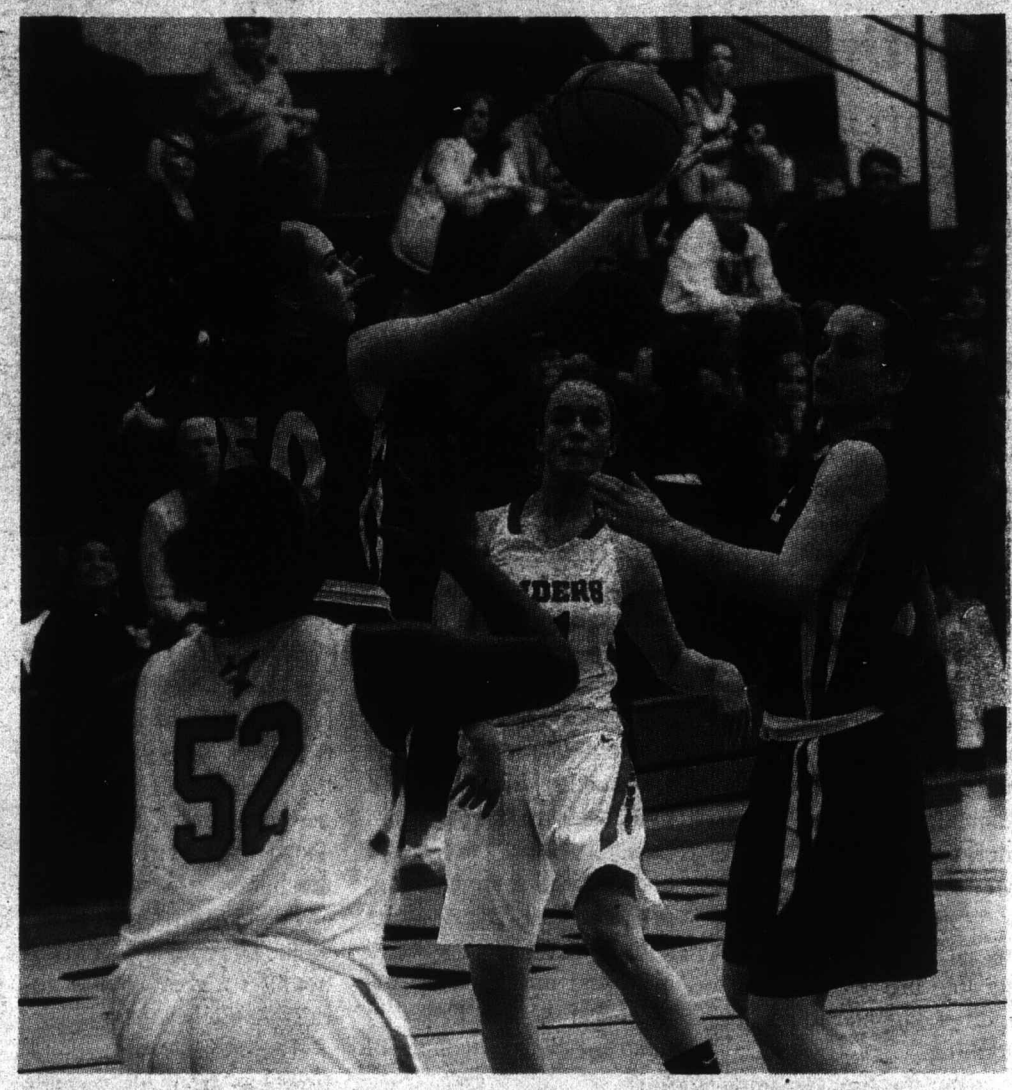

North suffered two injuries in the fourth quarter. McKay hurt her knee after a collision when she drove in for a layup. Minton injured her neck when her head hit the floor in a battle for possession in a collision.

Umoren scored her second double-double of the week with 23 points and 13 rebounds. Geary scored seven points in the win and needs 30 to reach the 1,000-point plateau. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

Quincy Plays Tough 'D' But Bows To Hanover, Duxbury

By BILL GRIFFIN

The schedule has been brutal from the beginning, and last week it grew more difficult for the Quincy's girls basketball team.

The Presidents faced unbeaten Duxbury, once-beaten Hanover and a strong non-league opponent in Bridgewater-Raynham.

On Friday afternoon, Quincy played tough, scrappy defense and were within two points of powerful Duxbury late in the third period, before the Dragons used their depth and inside strength to take control for a 43-26 Patriot League Keenan Division at the Quincy High gym.

"We haven't lost to a team that has more than two losses. We're playing the best teams around," said Quincy coach Jeff Bretsch. "We're playing hard with a lot of effort and I think things are beginning to fall into place for us. The final score was not an accurate

Post Three More Impressive Wins

Red Raiders Red Hot

By BILL GRIFFIN

How good are they?

Here are the facts. North Quincy went on the road to play three games against a perennial non-league power, an undefeated defending divisional champion and a high-scoring team from the city who carried a 7-2 record in the contest. North won the three games by a cumulative total of 172-118. On the road.

The Red Raiders are 11-0, 6-0 in the league. It is necessary to go back more than 40 years to the 1971-1972 team which won their first 20 to find a North team that started 11-0.

If you like basketball and you do not see this team, you are a fool.

Matt Gerakis scored 13 points and North's defense limited Dorchester to two field goals in the second half en route to a 47-30 non-league win Monday at the Reggie Lewis Center in Boston.

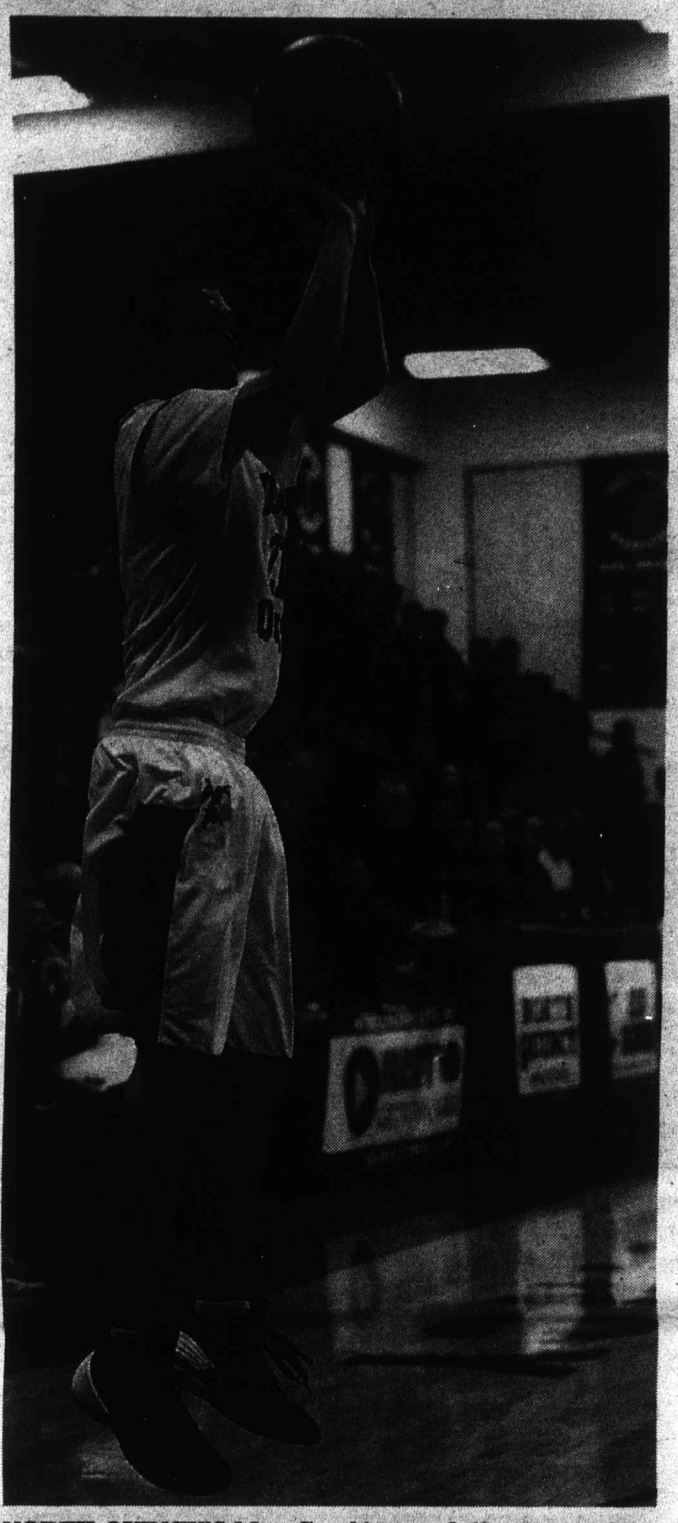

There was more tough, intelligent defense and Gerakis had a breakout game with 32 points as the Red Raiders drilled Scituate, 61-35 in a showdown of unbeaten Patriot League Fisher Division powers Friday night.

That's a 26-point win. The result may not have been surprising, but the margin of victory was stunning. Scituate is the defending league champ and the Sailors were playing at home.

"It was our best game of the season," said Barrett. "On defense we did a good job recognizing their big threats. Offensively, Matt had 32, and the way he got them was so impressive. He didn't force any shots. He was efficient and got everything out of the flow of our offense. He played an almost flawless game."

In other action last week, North led wire-to-wire in rolling to a quality 64-53 victory on the road over Wareham who is an annual tournament threat.

Gerakis, who had 60 points in the three games, started North against Dorchester with a three-point jump shot and a drive, and North's man-to-man defense took it from there for another wire-to-wire win. Dorchester can score. They put up 86 in a recent game against Fenway.

NORTH QUINCY'S Matt Gerakis scored 60 points in three Red Raider victories: 32 against Scituate, 15 against Wareham and 13 against Dorchester.

Along with intensity and teamwork, there is a familiar outside-inside theme to North's defense. Kyle Richardson shuts down any penetration from the point. He held Dorchester's point guard to two points and gave nothing going to the hoop. There were no drives-and dishes because there were no drives.

If something does get through, there is senior center Anthony Green who had 12 points, 10 rebounds and five blocks against Dorchester. He had 33 points, 29 rebounds and 18 blocks in the three games. He alters at least twice as many shots as he blocks. He is a presence at the rim.

Efthim Butka added 10 points in the win for North.

Gerakis has improved markedly and become a consistent offensive threat through the first 11 games. Nobody expected 32, but he has steadily shown more confidence in his offensive game, especially in key moments against top teams. A big game was coming. When Scituate focused on Butka, Richardson and Green, Gerakis was ready for his moment in a showdown when his team needed his offense.

He ended the night with more than half of North's points. His total was three

Presidents Slay Dragons

Quincy Also Bounces B-R

By BILL GRIFFFIN

Quincy will score.

The Presidents have a fistful of shooters, players who work well close to the basket, and an unselfish passing game which zips the ball around to the open man.

Defense was the area where coach Dave Parry wanted to see improvement. The Presidents showed it to their coach, clamping down a halfcourt defense which controlled the game from start to finish for a 66-48 victory over Duxbury in a Patriot League Keenan Division contest on the road Friday afternoon.

Drew Myers had 20 points while James Lam and J.T. Bain added 15 apiece as Quincy, who was 6-4 overall and 4-1 in the league at the end of last week, kept hold of first place in the division with the victory. Lam again approached a triple-double with 12 rebounds and eight assists.

"It was our best defensive effort of the year, especially considering that it was a road game," said Parry. "Our halfcourt man-to-man was the key. Going into the game we were giving up almost 60 points per game and you can't keep doing that if you want to go far in the league or the tournament."

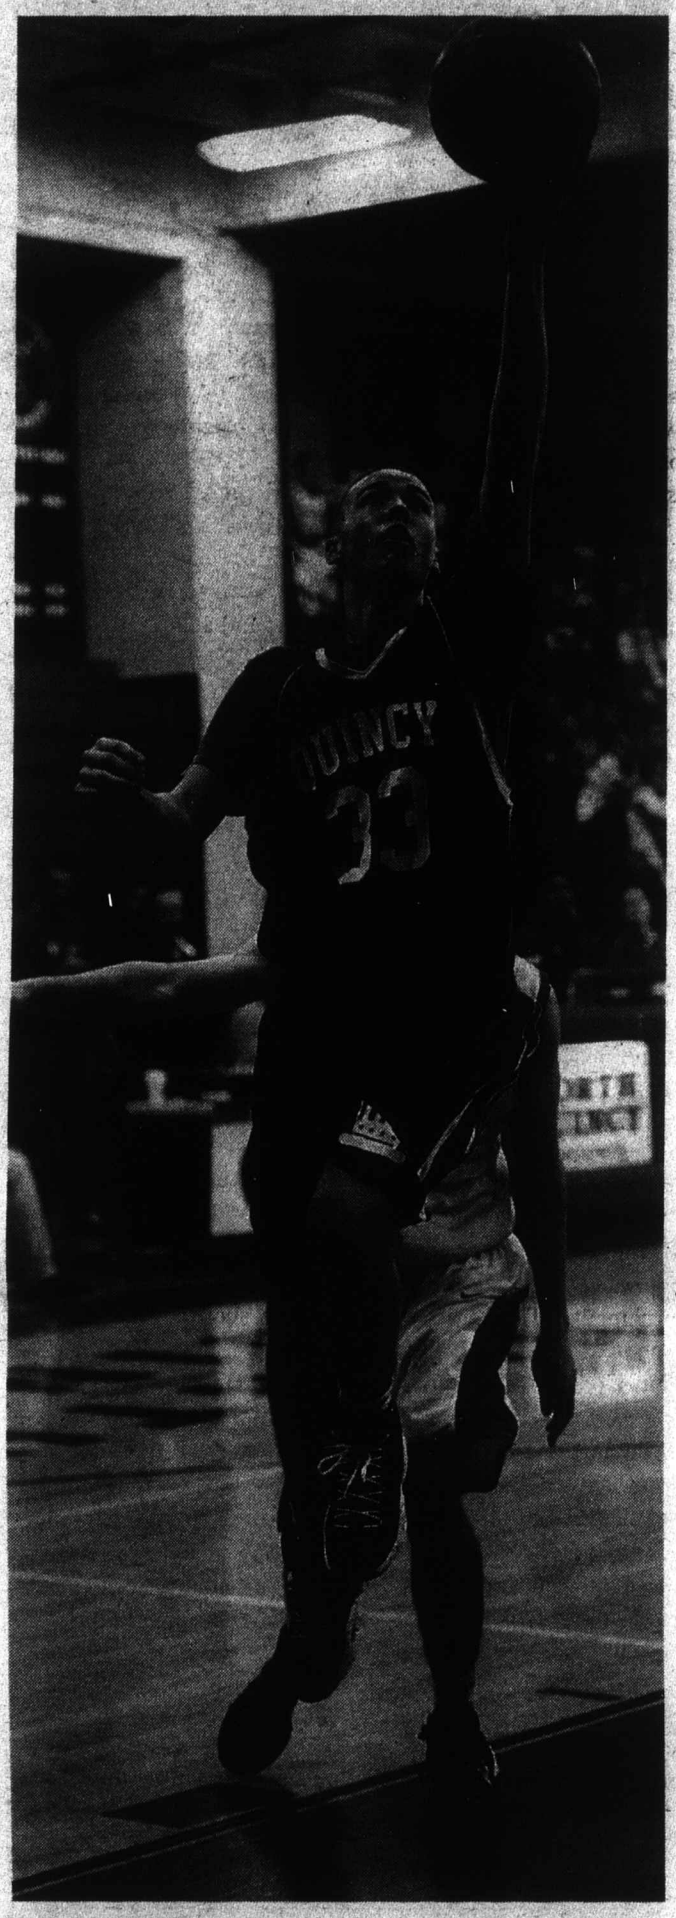

In other action last week, Bain scored on a drive with 16 seconds left to protect a one-point lead and give Quincy a 69-66 decision and a sweep of the two-game season series with Bridgewater-Raynham.

In another non-leaguer, Cambridge topped Quincy, 80-67 on the road. Bain led the Presidents with 20 points while senior guard Johnny Marsinelli played another strong defensive game.

"Playing Cambridge was a great experience for us," said Parry. "Their gym was packed and I think they're rated 10th or 11th in the state. We got a fantastic effort and made a good run at them in the second half. They knew they were in a game."

Quincy established its defense from the beginning against Duxbury. The Presidents came close to forcing 30-second violations on the Dragons' first five possessions. The fullcourt trap forced Duxbury to take time off the clock advancing the ball and then the halfcourt defense, led by senior Brendan Cunningham, settled in and set the tone for the game.

"The first five times up the floor, they got a shot off, but it was a hurried shot," said Parry. "We put Brendan on Duxbury's leading scorer and he did a great job. I believe Brendan held him to seven points."

QUINCY'S DREW MYERS scored a team-high 20 points as the Presidents defeated Duxbury, 66-48.

The area where Quincy improved most was in transition from the fullcourt to the halfcourt defense. When the trap didn't produce a steal, Quincy did not take any unnecessary chances and relied on their halfcourt which is really quite good when the Presidents set it up.

"We had been taking too many chances on the press and it was leading to 3-on-1 and 3-on-2 chances," said Parry. "We want to make sure if we go for the steal, we get it. If we don't, we want to get back and set up our defense."

Quincy led at every checkpoint. The Presidents were up 14-10 after one, by 14 at the half and by 20 after three when Parry made liberal use of his bench. Junior point guard Tyler Beach played another strong game running the offense and Kevin Williams played a solid game off the bench.

Quincy completely controlled the game against Bridgewater-Raynham. The Presidents never trailed and the score was never tied after 0-0. Quincy had the lead up to 15 midway through the third period. The lead was in double digits for most of the night, and the Presidents were still up, 66-56 with 3:43 left.

The Trojans then went on a 10-1 run to cut it to 67-66 with 0:16 left when Quincy

Red Raiders (2 Wins) Skating Closer To Postseason

By JOE REARDON

The road to the postseason was hazy for the North Quincy hockey team in the early going, but all of a sudden it's staring the Red Raiders straight in the eyes and clear as a bell.

Matt Gibbons' squad came two games closer to a postseason berth by putting together big back-to-back wins to move to 5-3-1 heading into this week and now it's a numbers game heading towards the tournament with North Quincy playing its best hockey of the season.

The Red Raiders skated to consecutive Patriot League wins beginning with last Wednesday's 3-0 decision over Scituate and Saturday night's huge 4-3 victory against Pembroke at the Quincy Youth Arena. The momentum is in North Quincy's court and Gibbons only wants to keep it going. He's seen improvement from the Red Raiders in all three zones and the players are growing confident in their play. When they step on the ice, North Quincy is expecting good things to happen.

"We hopefully can build off these last two wins," said Gibbons. "The goal is the tournament now. We're down to nine points for the tournament. That's pretty much it. We want to get two points every time we go on the ice.

"Pembroke's a good team. That's a good win for us. The kids are getting better and you can see it. At the beginning of the season we struggled a little bit, but now you can see the things we've been working on and they can see it too. A lot of guys are contributing. We have three lines and a couple of extra guys jumping in."

Mike Finn, Robert Cameron, Brendan Cox and Timmy Glynn had goals and goaltender Nolan Greene was tremendous in the crease with 26 saves in the home win against the Titans.

Gibbons wanted the Red Raiders to pick up from where they left off in the final two periods against the Sailors by peppering Pembroke goaltender Jackson Wainwright with shots throughout. North Quincy succeeded by putting 22 shots on Wainwright with several quality scoring chances, most stemming from fast breaks out of the Red Raiders' end.

"We want to be good in our own end and the neutral zone," said Gibbons. "We played really well in our own end against Scituate and our transition through the neutral zone gave us chances. We hoped we could do the same thing against Pembroke - just get chances, just get shots. We got a lot of shots and that's what we did during the second half of the Scituate game."

Finn's second timer past Wainwright just 2:01 in gave the Red Raiders a 1-0 lead before falling behind on two tallies from the Titans in the final 90 seconds of the period. North Quincy went into the locker room with the score knotted at 2 after Cameron redirected a slapshot from the blue line with 3.8 seconds left on a North Quincy power play.

The Titans weren't able to get a puck past Greene on a power play to start the second period, but went up 3-2 a minute after it ended on a Steve Camerlengo tally in a scrum in front of the North Quincy net.

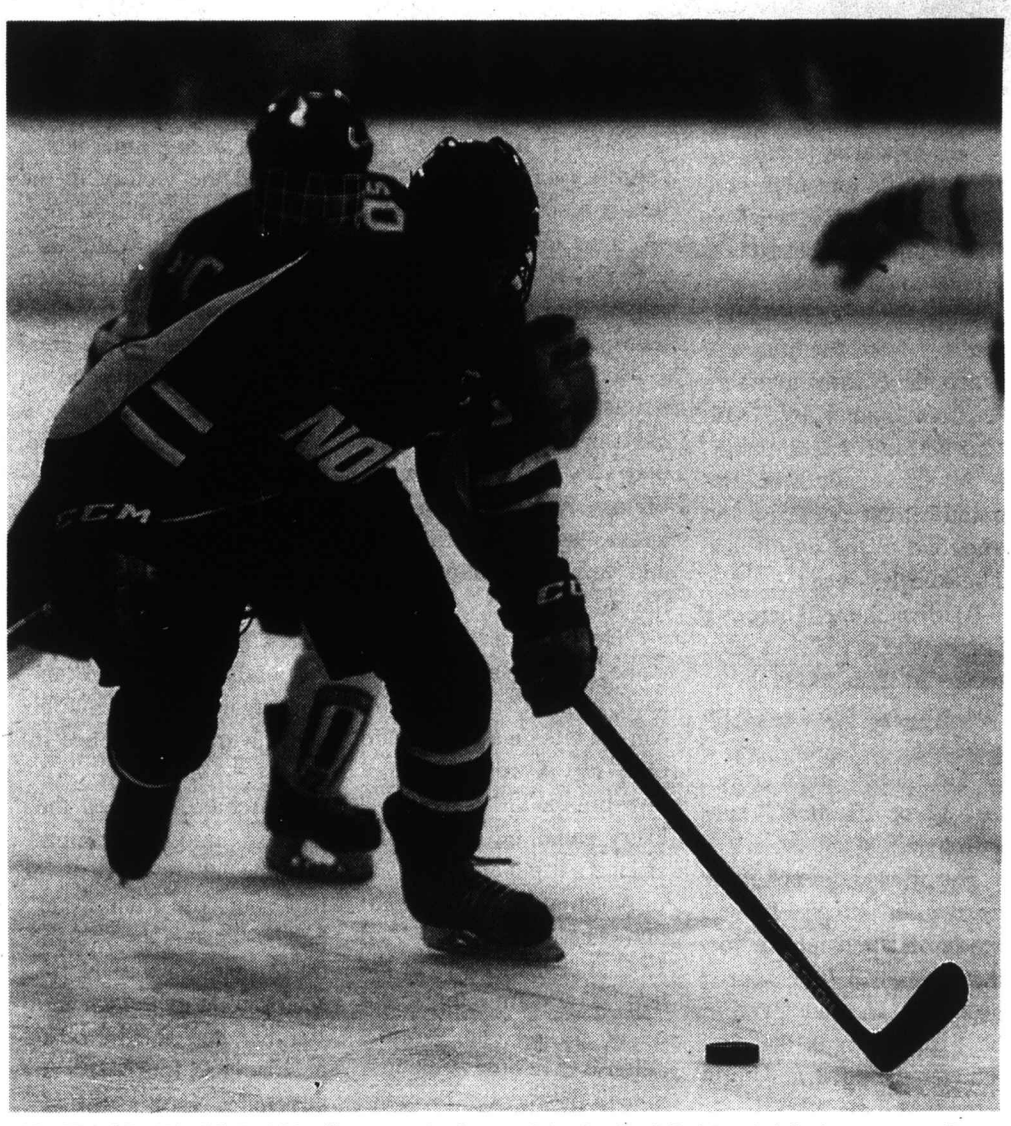

That lead lasted only three minutes before the Red Raiders beat Wainwright again, this time on a Cox wrist shot on a feed from Kevin Mock to make it a 3-3 contest with 7:36 remaining in the second period.

Pembroke did have opportunities in the middle stanza. The Titans had one shot clang off the post and were denied another time on a Zach Simpson break on the wing that Greene handled cleanly. Once the Red Raiders went up 4-3 on Glynn's quick shot directly in front of Wainwright, North Quincy clamped down even harder in its own zone and gave nothing to the Titans.

The Red Raiders were able to control much of the play on the boards in the Titans' zone against a big, Pembroke unit on defense. "We knew they had big D (defensemen)," said Gibbons. "Usually if you're a big defenseman, you may not be the best skater, but you can outwork those guys in the corner. Length-wise it's kind of tough to go right at them. In the corner you can kind of jam them up. We wanted to really be able to cycle the puck low and we did a good job with that; lot of possessions in their end. We had some pretty good quality chances."

Gibbons was fully expecting a tough game on Monday against a Stoneham team that plays in the tough Middlesex League before visiting Whitman-Hanson on Wednesday.

"Stoneham's a tough team that plays in a division one league," Gibbons said. "They play the Burlingtons of the world, the Readings of the world. They're always in the Super 8 conversation and they play them hard."

BACK PAIN GUIDELINES BEING IGNORED

A recent analysis of back pain treatments over a 12-year period shows that current guidelines for back pain management are being ignored. While well-established guidelines for routine back pain emphasize conservative treatment over more aggressive approaches, the use of narcotics has risen from 19.3% to 29.1%. Over the same dozen years, imaging with CT or MRI rose from 7.2% to 11.3%. These costly treatments are not supported by clinical guidelines and their overuse can lead to drug dependency and wasted dollars. Instead, patients suffering from common back pain are strongly urged to first seek conservative treatments, such as chiropractic care. If necessary, back-pain sufferers can then turn to expensive diagnostic testing and more aggressive treatments if needed.

Are you experiencing back pain? Chiropractic care is a safe, effective and natural approach to managing pain and other health related issues. Enjoying a long and healthy life is important to everyone. Chiropractic care unlocks your body's true potential and natural healing process to ensure your life is a healthy life. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are a family - and wellness - focused practice. It is our philosophy to provide our patients quality care in a friendly atmosphere. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Let us help you! There is no need to suffer needlessly - chiropractic works! Call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. In most cases, garden-variety back pain resolves by itself or with chiropractic treatment in a matter of days. More complicated cases may need further treatment that gets at root causes.

shy of Scituate's team total. He was that good.

"He's such an intelligent kid. He understands the game and knows what is open to him," said Barrett.

He scored in every was possible. He sank four threes, went 6-7 from the line, and earned three three pointers the traditional way with a bucket and a free throw. He hit his outside shot, and scored off the drive, on the break, out of the set offense and through contact.

Another thing. There are scorers who get 32, but need to take 20 shots to get them. That was not the case with Gerakis.

"He didn't take more than 12 or 13 shots," said Barrett.

His offense did not come in runs or streak. It was steady and dependable just like the player who scored the points. He had seven in the first, seven in the second, ten the third, and eight in the fourth.

"It was almost a quiet 32," smiled Barrett. "I don't think he turned the ball over either."

North's team defense was the perfect partner for Gerakis' offense. Once again Richardson spearheaded it by pressuring the ball and Green (eight points, 12 rebounds, eight blocks) anchored it by protecting the rim. Green is another player whose confidence has grown greatly during the 11-game streak.

"He sets the tone in the paint," said Barrett. "His timing is so good. He knows when to leave his feet for a block. He resembles that player who was so good in the sectionals last year."

Richardson had nine points, seven rebounds, and as usual his numbers tell you very little. He ran the offense, found the open man and took away both shots and any penetration from the outside.

"He played a tremendous game," said Barrett. "He's such a good defender, we can put him on a point guard or a top scorer no matter how big the kid is. It seems every game, he is hovering around a triple double."

North controlled throughout. The Red Raiders led 13-9 after one, 27-18 at the half, 43-29 after three and by 26 at the end. North's defense gave nine in the first nine in the second, 11 in the third and six in the fourth. They were as consistent in the division showdown, just as they have been consistent all season.

The Wareham win was a satisfying one.

"I liked the way we played," said Barrett. "Wareham is a tough team and it was a long road trip for us. We played good defense and we got contributions from a lot of people."

Gerakis earned the first star with 15 points, six rebounds, and four assists. He buried a three-pointer which clinched the victory in the final period and played shutdown defense on Wareham's top scorer when Richardson had to sit with foul trouble.

"Matt just played a great floor game. We depend on him to handle the ball, to play defense, and to score. He gave us a lot," said Barrett.

Butka led North in scoring with 20 points and added 11 rebounds while Green had 13 points, seven rebounds, five blocks, and, once again, altered multiple shots with his presence inside.

Wareham designed their defense into a diamond-and-one solely to keep the ball out of Richardson's hands. That is how highly other teams value North's senior point guard. Richardson handled the Wareham defense, had four steals and directed North's offense crisply as he has all season.

"He figured out a way to shake free and get the ball. His passing got us layups," said Barrett.

Jackie Chen shot the ball well off the bench and Greg Clarke gave the Red Raiders another solid game with his solid rebounding and inside play.

North is at Hingham Friday at 6:30 p.m.

Presidents, Red Raiders Basketball Notebook

By BILL GRIFFIN

Quincy is always the city of Presidents. This winter, it has also been the city of basketball.

As this week's action began, three of the four high-school basketball teams in the city were in first place. North Quincy boys led the Fisher Division of the Patriot League thanks to a big-time win over previously unbeaten Scituate in a showdown last Friday.

North Quincy's girls led Hanover by a game in the race for first and Quincy's boys team was on top of the Keenan Division of the Patriot League. Quincy's girls team has played well, but has been slowed by injuries to key players like Nicole Jorgensen and Alyssa Lydon.

"I think it is a tribute to the youth programs in the city," said Quincy boys coach Dave Parry. "Parents and coaches give a lot of their time to make sure the kids learn the right way at a young age. The freshman and JV coaches do a great job. It all pays off when the players get to varsity."

The last two years have seen an impressive depth of talent in the city. North lost three All Scholastics in Marquis McLendon, Dan Gould and Pat Gould from last year's team which went to the finals of the South Sectionals.

Quincy lost All Scholastics Jaquan Harris and Tino Goncalves from last year's club which went to the second round of the tourney. Yet North and Quincy had combined record of 9-1 in league play as of the end of last week.

"Every team wants a winning culture and hopefully, that's what you're seeing in the city," said Parry.

Not only is there winning basketball, there is good basketball. There are no selfish players who look for their shots and points, but don't care about anything else. The best players to watch are complete players like North's Grace Geary and Kyle Richardson and Quincy's Brendan Cunningham and Kayla McArdle.

"On any night, a different player can lead the scoring for all the teams. There's no one superstar that everybody looks to shut down," said Parry.

The best illustration of that fact was North's junior Matt Gerakis who exploded for 32 Friday night against an unbeaten team on the road. He nearly doubled his previous career high.

"We played in the afternoon, so I had a chance to see it," said Parry. "Matt is a good, solid player, but you don't expect 32 from him. He was just tremendous."

The players share the ball. The ball moves. The passing is crisp and sharp. North's guards (Geary, Jane Minton and Haley McKay) put on a passing clinic in the girls game against Scituate Friday night. Scorers like Efthim Butka, who could easily score 15-20 every night, pass up shots to find open teammates. Quincy has a center in J.T. Bain who looks to pass. Quincy's girls team moves the ball well. It is terrific basketball to watch.

executed perfectly on the offensive and defensive ends to seal the victory.

"We made the plays at the end of the game," said Parry. "All credit to Bridgewater for the way they played. They never quit. They always make it a 32-minute game and they have excellent athletes. We may have been a little fatigued, but they played great to make it close."

Cunningham, who led Quincy with 20 points, initiated the clinching play with a perfect entry feed, a bounce pass that came up just right, waist-high for Bain in the pivot. Bain faked and slipped clear along the baseline for a layup and a 69-66 edge.

There were still 16 seconds left, and Quincy had to make a defensive play. Alex Rose and Jamie Carey fired up three-pointers trying to tie the game for B-R, but Lam and Cunningham closed fast on the shooters and forced hurried, wayward shots. It was good offense and good defense when the game was decided. The Presidents have learned well from close losses earlier in the season.

"The play to Bain was a called play. We just wanted to get him the ball and let him go to the basket," said Parry. "We closed on their shooters well at the end. I thought about the Braintree game when we lost by one at the end. You learn from those things. We showed that tonight."

Cunningham and Quincy was at its best in the third quarter. Cunningham scored six straight points and threw a beautiful fast-break pass to Bain (15 points) for a layup and an 8-0 run to start the period. Cunningham had 12 points and three assists in the period.

Cunningham showed well the completeness of his game. He buried two threes, cashed an offensive rebound, feathered home a fast-break layup and nailed a turn-around jumper. He passed, he shot, he rebounded, he played defense. That's the work of a basketball player. Quincy was up 53-38 midway through the third and 57-49 after three.

"Brendan expanded his game because he worked so hard on it in the off-season," said Parry. "That was a great entry pass to J.T. at the end. We needed a senior to step up and Brendan did."

Myers added 12 and Lam had nine for Quincy. Once again, points in no way communicate Lam's value. He started Quincy with a drive, a steal, an assist on a Bain bucket, and a rebound in traffic which led to a bast-break hoop and an early 9-4 lead. Once again, he scored, rebounded, ran the point and stole the ball on several occasions.

"His first step is so quick and it's hard to handle whether he's playing offense or defense," said Parry.

Quincy hosts Scituate Wednesday and Silver Lake, who finished last week in second place in the division, on Friday. Both games start at 6:30.

reflection of the way the game was played."

The best news of the week was the return to full-time action of sophomore center Nicole Jorgensen who had nine points and 11 rebounds against Duxbury. In the three games last week, she had 61 points and 39 rebounds.

"I was very happy with Nicole. She asserted herself underneath and played excellent, confident basketball," said Brestch.

Jorgensen, who had been sidelined with an ankle injury for nearly two weeks, played a powerful game with 27 points and 14 rebounds in a 58-50 league loss to once-beaten Hanover.

Jorgensen has played her best against the best teams. She had 15 points and 22 rebounds in a one-point loss to North Quincy who finished the week at 8-2.

In non-league action last week, sophomore Gabby Jerahian buried three straight three-pointers to give Quincy an early lead and the Presidents went on to a 50-42 non-league decision over Bridgewater-Raynham.

Jerahian and Jorgensen each had 18 points for the Presidents who led from start to finish in the win.

Jorgensen added 14 rebounds. Quincy was up, 13-6 in the first quarter, 22-20 at the half and 41-32 after the three. The Presidents used their fullcourt press to open up the lead in the second half.

Against Duxbury, senior captain Kayla McArdle (nine points) spearheaded an aggressive defense which limited Duxbury to seven points in the first quarter and 18 at the half. McArdle defended the Dragons' top offensive player Maddie Foote who finished with 15, but very few came when she was matched directly with McArdle.

Foote scored off transition and steals. She shot from behind double picks. Once again, McArdle did a fine job on the opposition's big gun.

"I don't think she got away from Kayla at all," said Bretsch. "They have good size, and they set double picks for her. There's nothing much any defender can do against that."

Jorgensen (6'4") and Caroline McBride (5'9") were matched against Duxbury's twin towers Molly Quilty (6'4") and Catherine Harrison (6'1") who have been dominant for most of the season. For three periods, it was an even battle. McBride played hard despite giving seven inches away to Quilty and Jorgensen continued her development as a poised, effective inside player in her second year on varsity.

"Caroline played well, and Nicole was good at both ends," said Brestch. "On offense, Nicole looked for her shot and on defense, she was patient. She wasn't over-anxious. She waited for the right moment to make the play."

Quincy was missing starting point guard Alyssa Lydon who was out with a broken finger. Lydon can shoot. The Presidents missed her accuracy. They were down 7-4 after one, 18-11 at the half and 20-18 with 3:00 left in the third. There was nothing wrong with the defense. Quincy could well have been ahead were it not for several good looks from close range which rolled in and off the rim, especially in the first half.

The three-point shooting which could have opened up Duxbury's defense was inconsistent. Quilty and Harrison sealed off the inside in the final period and led Duxbury's closing rally which produced the 43-26 final.

"We created good chances in the first half, but we struggled with converting the shots," said Bretsch. "The schedule has been tough, but the girls have been improving. I can see it and it will pay off. I still think we have a good shot at the tournament."

Quincy (3-7) is at Silver Lake Friday at 6:30.

Q/NQ Girls' Hockey Blanks Nauset, 5-0

By JOE REARDON

Don't look now, but the Quincy/North Quincy girls' hockey team just may have found the momentum they've been working to reach all season.

Q/NQ had its first win of the winter on Sunday with an enormously satisfying 5-0 drubbing of Nauset. Throw out the third period in Monday's holiday matinee showdown at the Quincy Youth Arena against Wareham and the girls have been consistent and physical heading to the net. Q/NQ stopped attacking the net and laid off the back checking, resulting in a 2-1 loss after being up 1-0 after two periods.

Head coach Steve Burgio fully believes his young squad has turned the corner and its best hockey has yet to be played. "We had a couple of mistakes in the third period," said Burgio. "Things happen. The girls are doing well. They're listening to us. They're being more competitive than they were earlier in the season."

The team has plenty of young talent with just one senior in co-captain Natalie O'Donovan. The squad does have experience in juniors Rebecca Mahan, co-captain Kelly Donahue, Madison Hally and sophomores Maura Crump, Maeve Riordan and Caitlin Dooley. Freshman Riley McLaughlin leads a rookie lineup that includes goaltender Karrissa Beal, Emilia Guarente, Kate McGahey and Kay O'Connor. McLaughlin is having an all-star season and is Q/NQ's most dangerous offensive threat with 14 goals. McLaughlin and sophomore Savannah Flynn both scored twice in the Nauset win while junior Alyx Patey added a lone tally. McLaughlin broke in and flipped a goal home with 5:38 left in the second period for Q/NQ's lone tally on Monday.

McLaughlin can absolutely see the improvement in the team's overall game. "We're really starting to play as a team," she said after the Wareham loss. "Today was kind of a tough lost. We really weren't trying hard in the third period. We motivate each other a lot. We want to keep working as a team more.

"I lost nine players from last year so I have a young group coming in. We're trying to teach them hockey instead of just skating. And they're getting it. Is it frustrating being 1-10 now? A little bit. But you know what, they're competitive. It was nice getting the first win and we thought we had another one today. They're competitive and that's all we can ask for. They're not giving up."

There were even bright spots in the 2-1 loss to King Philip, a team that beat Q/NQ 7-3 the first time around. Burgio's club was faster to the puck and made it difficult for the Warriors to get any speed going towards the Q/NQ end. Beal has been especially solid in net over the last three games and garnering confidence with each outing.

Burgio said the win over Nauset was actually closer than a 5-0 would show.

"They worked hard," he said. "They had a slow start in the game, but then they really picked it up and scored four of the goals in the second period and continued playing hard. Nauset didn't give up. They made us work hard. It wasn't an easy 5-0 win. They really had to keep the pace up."

There will still be setbacks. There always are with a young team. But, Burgio pointed out, teams can fight through the struggles by continuing to work hard.

"I told them to keep their heads up," he said after the loss to Wareham. "They're working hard in practice and things are starting to get better. We went 1-2 this weekend, but they've been competitive in each game. They need to realize that they are getting better and they are coming together as a team. Things will fall into place eventually. We have a lot of girls coming back so hopefully they can figure out the system this year and hop into next year ready to go."

Presidents Roll Over O-A

By JOE REARDON

There's no such thing as playing a perfect game, but the Quincy High hockey team was as good as it's been all season in Monday's nonleague game against Oliver Ames. The Presidents weren't perfect, only close to it.

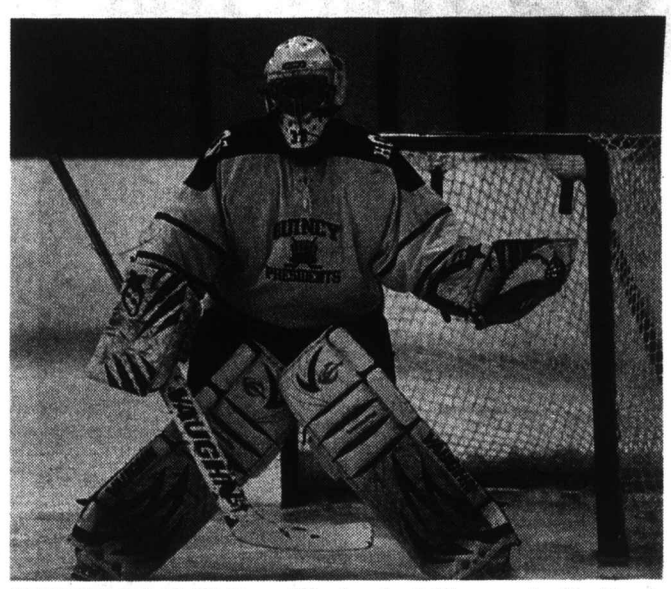

Quincy is pretty much at full strength after the flu bug hit the team and it showed as it rolled to a 5-1 win over the Tigers at the Quincy Youth Arena in a game where offense came early and often for Quincy. The victory improved the Presidents to .500 (6-6-1) on the season.

Pat Donovan led the scoring binge with a pair of tallies and an assist. Brian O'Callaghan had a goal and an assist and Pat Freeman and Jake Hallisey each had single tallies. Matt Davis, Matt Kozlowski, Steve Ross and Brian Hardy all got in on the fun with assists as the Presidents put up 38 shots to Oliver Ames' 18 in the rout.

The Presidents never swayed from their game plan, pressing hard down low and winning the battles in the corners. And when Quincy sticks to its game plan, Ted Walsh believes his crew is as tough as anyone on the ice.

"The goal is to get better every time we get on the ice," said Walsh. "We want to get into the tourney and make a run. If we play our game, I'm not worried about what the other team does. We can beat anyone on any given night.

"We want to get pucks in deep and crash the rebounds. Today was one of those days where it was almost flawless. For the most part, we've outshot every team except Hanover and Duxbury. If we execute our game plan it will work. Today they stayed with the game plan. It's a great team to coach."

QUINCY GOALIE Ryan Higgins had 18 saves in the Presidents' 5-1 win over Oliver Ames Monday.

Ryan Higgins had another stellar game in net for the Presidents. Despite putting just 18 shots on net, Oliver Ames had several solid scoring chances. Higgins lost his shutout bid with three minutes remaining when one of the Tigers managed to shovel a shot underneath him in a scrum in front of the net.

Quincy was scheduled to take on Patriot League opponent Pembroke on Wednesday night at home. Walsh is confident the Presidents will be more than prepared for the postseason if they continue to play well because of their tough league schedule. "You don't see any weak teams in this league," he said. "If you do make the tourney, you're tourney-ready."

Q/NQ Swimming, Diving Results

Three-year captain Elio Daci (Quincy) bettered his own school record as the Quincy/North Quincy boys swimming and diving team (5-1, 3-1 Patriot League) defeated visiting Silver Lake Regional, 91-67 Jan. 16 at the Lincoln-Hancock Pool.

The Quincy girls squad (2-4, 1-3 Patriot League) won 56-46 and the North Quincy girls team (2-4, 1-3 Patriot League) earned the 52-40 victory.

Elio Daci undercut his own school record by nearly a second set two days earlier with his effort of 1:04.87 in the 100-yard backstroke and also brought home the 200 individual medley win (2:19.97). Junior Randall Kwong (NQ) won both the 50 free (23.72) and 100 butterfly (1:01.00) events, and freshman Tommy Tran (Q) set a new school record in the 100 breaststroke swimming 1:11.33. Sophomore Brian Rooney (Q) touched the wall first in the 200 freestyle swimming 2:30.00.

Quincy freshman Bailee Carey amassed a season-best 202.20 points to win the one-meter dive. Junior Sabrina Rauch's efforts of 2:34.30 and 1:04.22 in the 200 individual medley and 100 butterfly, placed her second and first, respectively.

Junior Rachel O'Driscoll won the 100 butterfly (1:05.84) then two events later prevailed in the 500 freestyle (6:04.75).

In other action, Elio Daci (Quincy) set a new school standard as the Quincy/North Quincy boys swimming and diving team (4-1, 2-1 Patriot League) was handed its first loss of the season falling 92-66 to Hingham Jan. 14 at the Lincoln-Hancock Pool.

The Quincy girls squad (1-4, 0-3 Patriot League) dropped the 71-31 decision to visiting Hingham and the North Quincy girls team (1-3, 0-3 Patriot League) found itself on the losing end of a 67-31 count.

Elio Daci swam 1:05.12 to establish a new school record in the 100-yard backstroke. The senior captain also won the meet's 200 individual medley with a time of 2:22.71. Junior Randall Kwong (NQ) qualified for states in the meet-winning 100 freestyle (52.19) and in the 50 free (23.75) where he placed second. Freshman Tommy Zhong (NQ) won the 100 breaststroke swimming 1:11.44.

Junior Rachel O'Driscoll's performances in the 200 freestyle (2:03.78) and 100 butterfly (1:05.68) earned her not only first place in each event for North Quincy but also spots in the States competition.

Presidents, Red Raiders Hoop Notebook

"Everyone is going to get touches and the teams also recognize when someone has the hot hand. If a player is shooting well, he or she gets the ball," said Parry. "I think it helps on the defensive end as well. If you play as a unit on offense, you'll have five players digging in on defense as well."

Even before he poured in 32 Friday night, Matt Gerakis has been the type of player coaches love. The 32 points never hurt, but it his consistency which has been impressive all season.

The best evaluation of Gerakis' game is there are no weakness. He plays the whole game. He is an excellent open shooter, he can make the three, handle the ball, and play defense. He shoots well in big games (Quincy, Braintree, Wareham, Scituate), and he makes few mistakes.

He is dependable and consistent. Coaches love dependable and consistent.

"He is our second ballhandler behind Kyle (Richardson) and he is excellent," said North Quincy coach Kevin Barrett. "He distributes well and he takes care of the ball. He plays hard, he's good on the 50-50 balls and he has made big shots for us. That's a lot when you consider that he is a junior with very little varsity experience before this season..."

North has established itself as a team that can win in tough gyms on the road. They have won at Braintree, at East Boston, at Wareham, at Scituate. Road wins against top teams. That is usually a pretty good definition what makes a blue-chip basketball team. At home, the living can be easy. The rims are friendly, the crowd cheers, the court is as familiar as your driveway. It is on the road where it gets tough.

"I think playing on road brings a team closer," said Barrett. "The crowd is against you and there's more adversity. It builds an us against them mentality and it makes us a tougher team. You have to learn how to forget a bad play, move on and concentrate on the next play . That's important on the road."

North's balance and unselfishness has been remarkable. At the end of last week, North's top scorers were Butka with 13 per game, Green (12), Gerakis (12), Richardson (9) and Jackie Chen (8). That's five players within five points of each other. That's beyond unselfish. You will watch a lot of teams for a lot of years and not see numbers like that.

"It really is a team where nobody cares who scores," said Barrett...

Watching Quincy's James Lam operate in the open floor is a lot like watching him operate in the open field in football. He shows a rare combination of speed and instinct in both sports...J.T. Bain is not only a center who can go out and hit an 18-foot jumper, he also consistently finds open cutters along the baseline...Brendan Cunningham had a big week offensively and defensively. He shows the presence and confidence a team needs from a senior leader. He is the leading foul shooter on the team...

Alyssa Camara hit a three and played a good game for Quincy against Duxbury... Sophomore Marissa McGue will be an impact player in more than one sport for North. She is an athlete...Injuries can play a large role in a two-month season. Hopefully North Quincy's Haley McKay and Jane Minton who were injured in the fourth period Friday night will be OK...Former North star Danny Gould had 18 points to lead Framingham State past Vaughn College, 86-72 this week. Gould hit four threes and was 6-8 from the field.

NQ's Vinny Tran Awarded Hamilton College Scholarship

By BILL GRIFFIN

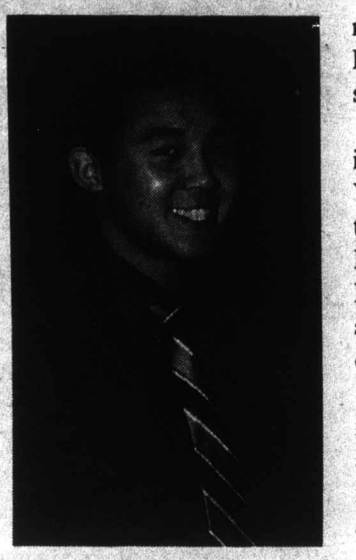

For four years at North Quincy High, Vinny Tran has established a golden reputation as an athlete, student and citizen.

His accomplishments have clearly gained wider notice. The Posse Foundation of Boston awarded Tran a full four-year scholarship worth $140,000 to Hamilton College.

Tran was one of ten candidates selected for the scholarship to Hamilton out of a field of 1,300 applicants.

In awarding the scholarship to Tran, the Posse foundation cited "his positive team skills, thirst for learning and a commitment to making a difference in his own life and his community."

"It's exciting. Mostly, I'm happy for my parents because they won't have to worry about the cost of tuition," said Tran. "I chose Hamilton because it has a good football program and because it's so highly rated, the 14th-best liberal arts college in the country."

VINNY TRAN

Tran has been a four-year starter and Patriot League All Star as a lineman for North's football team. He is a dominant player on both sides of the ball, that rare lineman who is capable of controlling a game, much as he did when he personally wrecked Norwood's offense in a North victory this past season.

"The first thing you have to do when you play North is account for where Vinny is," said Quincy coach Bill Reardon.

Tran is also a solid contributor to the basketball team and supplied valuable rebounding and defense in North's eight-game winning streak to start the season.

Tran has a 3.7 GPA. He is active in the Vietnamese Youth Eucharistic group and teaches CCD at his church. He coaches in the Sacred Heart Basketball League and volunteers for the Quincy Recreation Department.

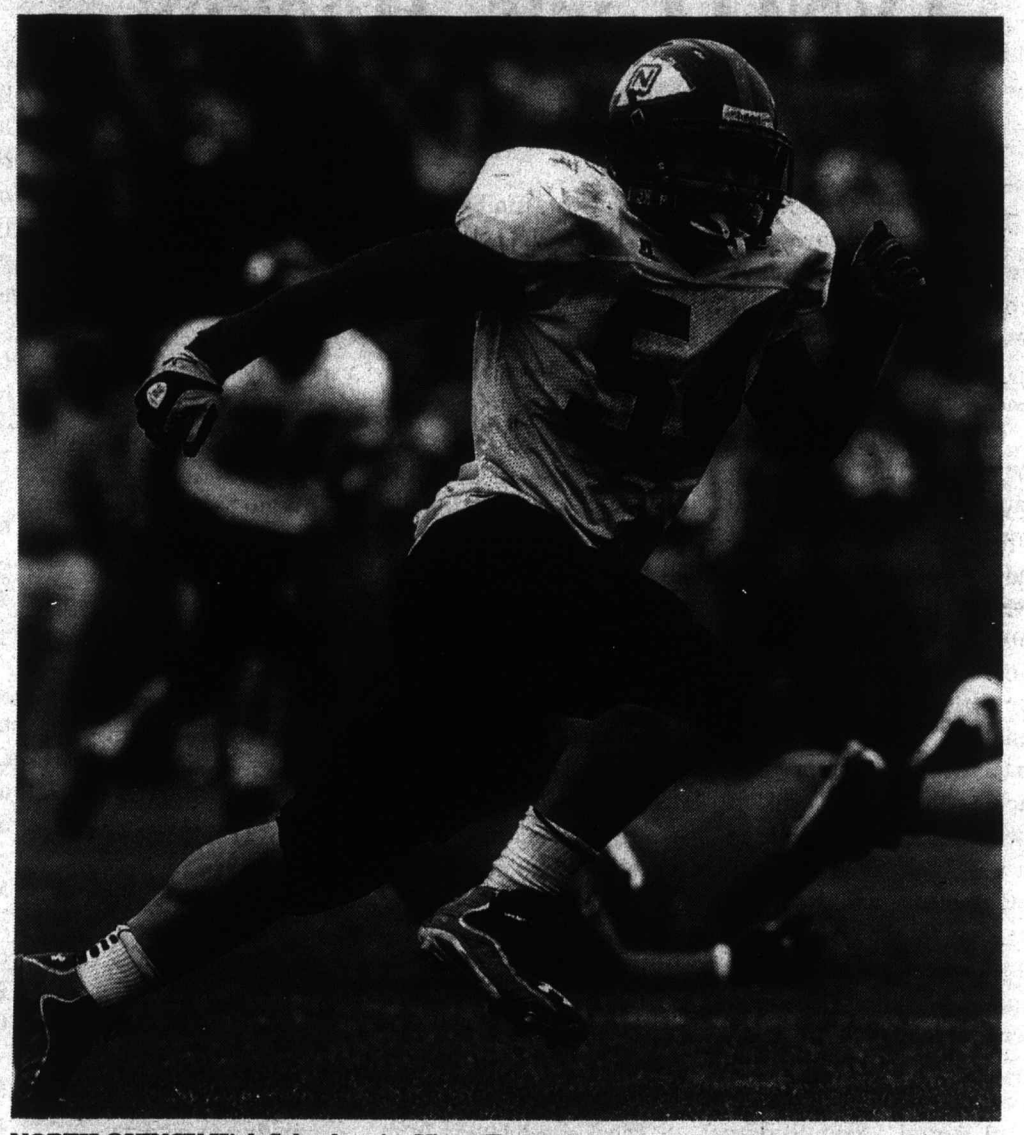

Tran plans to major in jurisprudence. "I don't know about being a lawyer. Right now, I'm thinking of maybe a police officer," he said.

The Posse Foundation honored Tran and his fellow scholarship recipients at a celebration at the Copley Plaza Hotel in Boston January 9.

"I love that kid. I love him as player and a person," said North football coach Mark Nutley during the season.

"You cannot ask for a nicer kid than Vinny. Ask anybody who has ever met and talked to him," said basketball coach Kevin Barrett.

That is what the people at North think of Tran. Evidently, their opinion is shared by many others as well.

NORTH QUINCY High School senior Vinny Tran will take his academic and athletic talents to Hamilton College this fall. He was one of 10 candidates from a field of 1,300 who were selected for a four-year scholarship to the liberal arts college in central New York.

Plan For 23 More Miles Of Bike Lanes Endorsed

By JOE REARDON

Looking to make the streets more biker-friendly, the Quincy Planning Board endorsed the Metropolitan Area Planning Council's (MAPC) recommendation for adding more than 23 miles of bike lanes to the city's roadways and nearly nine miles of shared lanes.

The 5-foot lanes would link Quincy's four transit stations, parks, residential areas, schools, business districts and retail centers. The lanes were also proposed for the Wollaston Beach shoreline and the city's historical resources.

The low cost, short-term improvement recommendations are part of a larger bicycle planning effort by the MAPC that includes 13 area communities including Chelsea, Dedham, Everett, Hudson, Lynn, Malden, Marlboro, Maynard, Revere, Saugus, Stow and Westwood with Quincy having the potential of having the most miles of lanes added. Marlboro has the next most with 15 miles.

"This is a planning document with recommendations," said Quincy Director of Transportation Planning Kristina Johnson. "There's no specific time frame and there's no deadline."

The planning department has partnered with MAPC's transportation planning staff for the past six months to analyze the existing pedestrian and cycling environment within the city. The recommendations form a network of bicycle and pedestrian facilities based upon existing right-of-ways with no changes to the curb locations.

One huge plus for the proposal is its excellent sidewalk coverage, which eliminates the need for curb construction. Seventy-nine percent of the main roads in Quincy have sidewalks on at least one side of the roads while 82 percent of the local roads have sidewalks as well.

Rev. Nathan Pipho of the Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, one of the founders of the Quincy cycling group the Quincycles, believes there is great potential for improved cycling with the MAPC's recommendations.

"They looked at what would be easy to implement now and what would be low cost now," said Rev. Pipho. "They studied the city extensively. It allows a designated pace for bicyclists. It's a partnership between motorists and bicyclists. We're encouraged by the report. It gives us a good direction to aim for."

Members of Quincycles attended the Mayor's Bicycle Commission meetings in May and looked at areas where it would be easy to implement bike lanes. "I think there's great potential on roads that are already wide enough," Rev. Pipho said.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

GOOD TEETH LINKED WITH EMPLOYMENT

Nearly everyone, including prospective employers, makes appearance-based judgments that include instant assessments about a person's smile and teeth. With this in mind, it may be difficult for an unemployed person to get a job if he or she has missing teeth, large gaps between teeth, tooth discoloration, chips, infected gums, and/or other tooth and gum irregularities. Having poor oral health also compromises the energy and initiative it takes for a person to land a job. Fortunately, proper dental treatment can help. According to one study involving welfare recipients with severe dental problems, those offered treatment were twice as likely to find jobs as those who did not finish treatment. When needed, dental care is a great investment in oneself. From subtle changes to major repairs, we can perform a variety of procedures to improve your smile. We can reshape your teeth, close spaces, restore worn or short teeth or alter the length of your teeth. Common procedures include bleaching, bonding, crowns, veneers and reshaping and contouring. We offer comprehensive general and cosmetic dentistry. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where our goal is to make each visit to our office a comfortable and positive experience. Please call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Oral health is a long-term commitment we share with each patient. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com

Y Ceremony Sunday

The South Shore YMCA will hold a grand opening ceremony to celebrate the opening of their new Quincy facility on Sunday, Jan. 26.

The ceremony will be held at the new YMCA building, located at 79 Coddington St. in Quincy Center. The program and dedication will take place between 6 and 7 p.m., followed by an hour long tour of the building and reception.

Mayor Thomas Koch; South Shore YMCA President and CEO Paul Gorman; Dan DeMarco, the immediate past chief volunteer officer for the South Shore YMCA; Capital Campaign Committee Chairman Alex Clark; Building Committee Chairman Mark Dickinson; and Eric Snyder, the executive director of the Quincy Branch, are among those who will take part in the ceremony.

Other guests will include the SSYMCA New Quincy Facility Capital Campaign donors and the project leadership team.

Last Minute Goal Scuttles QYH PW B2

Despite a valiant team effort, the QYH PW B2 lost an epic battle to the Tri-County Saints of Taunton and one of the perennial South Shore Conference hockey programs.

Though Callum Valleli's four goals had the teams knotted deep into the third period, the Saints were able to capitalize on a power-play goal for the 5-4 victory. Line mates Joey Murphy and Ryan Graf sparked the QYH offense, and the relentless back-checking Sean O'Brien, Eoin Varden, and Nick Brink frustrated the Saints for much of the game.

First year PW B2 goaltender Tahla Qasim turned away 31 shots while thwarting several break-aways. The team travels to Bridgewater next Saturday evening and will host the Barnstable Chiefs next Sunday at 4:20 p.m.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Sunday, January 12, 2014, at approximately 1:35 A.M., Officer Mark Connolly was dispatched to the Wendy's Restaurant parking lot at 520 Southern Artery. He was looking for a red Ford vehicle that was reportedly driving erratically on various streets in Quincy prior to pulling into the lot.

Upon arrival, the Officer located a vehicle matching the description in the drive through lane. As the Officer approached, he was flagged down by the group of people, who informed him that the Ford struck a vehicle ahead of the Ford in the drive through lane. There were no signs of damage to either car from this accident, however there was damage to the rear bumper of the Ford. Officers' David Levine and Edward Bagley arrived on scene at this time.

Officer Connolly watched as the driver of the Ford staggered to the rear of his car and looked at the rear bumper, which was hanging off. The Officer instructed the driver to sit on the curb, then asked him where he was coming from and headed to. The driver said he was coming "from a place close by" and "going up the road to drop off my friends." His responses were slurred, evasive and vague. When asked for a license, the driver said that it was revoked. During this time, Officer Levine spoke with the two passengers inside the Ford and observed a glass Nantucket Nectars Red Plum juice bottle near the center console by the seatbelt clasp. It was filled with a clear liquid that smelled like the odor of an alcoholic beverage. Officer Levine also uncovered a bottle of Captain Morgan Original Spiced Rum (approximately 1/8 full) under the front seat and a bottle of Club Caribe Raspberry Rum with a small amount left.

Officer Connolly joined in the conversation, speaking to the owner of the Ford, who was seated in the rear. When asked why she was not driving her vehicle, the owner said that the driver picked them up in Boston because she and the other passenger were too drunk to drive home. Officer Connolly then asked the driver to stand up and as the driver did this, he became unsteady and lost his balance leaning forward, causing the Officer to grab hold of him so he wouldn't fall forward. Based upon the totality of the circumstances, namely, being unsteady on his feet, losing his balance, slurring his speech, bloodshot glassy eyes, the bottle that appeared to contain an alcoholic beverage that was on the driver's seat, and the other alcohol bottles under the driver's seat, Officer Connolly placed the driver under arrest for "Operating Under the Influence of Intoxicating Liquor."

Prior to transporting the driver to the station, Officer Levine found a tied small clear baggy with 9 white pills marked with G31 (Gabapentin) and a small tied clear white baggy with 6 yellow pills marked with MYLAN 4250 (Doxepin) in the small upper right pants pocket of the driver. When the tow truck arrived, the owner of the Ford immediately became agitated and wanted to know why she couldn't drive the car home herself. The Officer recounted their conversation in which she said she was too drunk to drive. The owner then angrily said, "I hate the government."

When Officer Connolly returned to his cruiser, the driver/prisoner was sound asleep in the back seat. The Officer woke him up to make sure that he was o.k.. Upon arrival at the station from the short ride up the street, the driver/prisoner was again sleeping. The driver, a 24 year old Quincy resident, was charged with, "Operating Under the Influence of Intoxicating Liquor, Operating a Motor Vehicle with a Revoked License, and Possession of Class E drug. During the booking process, two active default warrants were found for the driver too! Nice Work!

QUINCY POLICE DEPARTMENT OPEN HOUSE/ TOURS/BLOOD DRIVE! On Saturday, February 15th, the Quincy Police Department will have an open house and tours of the station from 10:00 A.M. to 2:00 P.M. Tours will include the communications area and the cell block. There will also be a cruiser available to check out all the equipment used by Officers. Be sure to bring a camera!

BLOOD DRIVE INFO: From 8:00 A.M. to 2:00 P.M., there will also be the Quincy Police Department/Glennon Family blood drive in the parking lot of the Quincy Police Station. For more information on either the open house/tours or the blood drive, contact Lieutenant Daniel J. Minton at 617 745 5719.

"NO ONE IS GOING TO BREAK IN WHILE I'M HOME" or "NO NEED TO LOCK MY DOORS WHEN I'M HOME" is an invitation for trouble. Often times, the selection of a home to break into is random. Other times, the chosen home may have signs that someone may not be home, such as no car in the driveway, or the garage door is up, or there is mail or newspapers outside. The Quincy Police Department strongly recommends that you lock your doors while you are home to protect yourself as well as your property.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Seeing the silly side of some really ridiculous situations helps give the Lamb a new perspective on how to handle them. Some important contacts can be made this weekend.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Try to complete your outstanding tasks by midweek. This leaves you free to take advantage of new possibilities -- both professional and personal -- opening up by week's end.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) With both your creative side and your energy levels rising this week, you should be able to tackle that too-long-neglected project again. A family member might have important news.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) An explanation you requested seems to be more confusing than enlightening. You should insist on clarifications now, rather than deal with problems that might arise later.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Your energy levels might be ebbing a bit. But that's no excuse for taking catnaps when you could be working on those unfinished tasks. There'll be time to curl up and relax by week's end.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) It's a good time to get those ideas out of your head and into a readable format if you hope to have them turned into something doable. A good friend is ready with worthwhile advice.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Careful -- you might be stepping into dangerous territory if you decide to "exaggerate" the facts too much. Remember: The truth speaks for itself and needs no embellishment.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Although your workplace successes have earned you many admirers, there are some colleagues who are not among them. Be careful how you proceed with your new project.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might have to go into great detail to explain why you're currently reluctant to make changes to an already prepared plan. Be sure you have all the facts to back yourself up.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Travel plans might still be uncertain. But instead of getting upset about the delay, open yourself up to other possibilities, and begin checking out some alternative destinations.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Changing conditions might require you to alter some of your plans. While you might be agreeable to this, be prepared with explanations for those who do not want changes made.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Although you might have to deal with some detractors who aren't too kind in their critiques, you gain points when you're willing to stand up and defend your work.
BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for creating a warm and loving environment between yourself and others.

Ernest J. DuBeau, Sr.

ERNEST J. DuBEAU, SR.

A funeral Mass for Ernest Joseph "Ernie" DuBeau, Sr. of Mashpee and formerly Quincy and Roxbury was celebrated Tuesday at Christ the King Church, Mashpee.

Mr. DuBeau died Jan. 14 after a brief illness, surrounded by his loving family.

He was born in Boston and grew up in Roxbury. After marriage, he and his wife Mary settled in Dorchester and later Quincy and Weymouth and raised their family. After retirement, they moved to Mashpee, where they lived for the past 15 years.

Mr. DuBeau was a self-employed upholsterer for over 50 years. He was known in Quincy as a very loyal, hard-working and generous businessman, always offering to help anyone whenever he had the chance. He enjoyed model ship building, bowling, and was an avid whist player and Boston sports fan.

Mr. Dubeau and his wife loved to dance and were enthusiastic followers of Noel Henry's Irish Show Band. In addition, he loved history, watched the History Channel and was especially versed on the Civil War. He was a member of the McKeon Post in Dorchester for many years. Mr. Dubeau was a proud WWII Navy veteran having served on the USS Vincennes (CL-64) in the Pacific. Above all, his family brought him the most joy. He will be deeply missed by all who are fortunate to have known him.

Beloved husband of 65 years to Mary (Greene) DuBeau of Mashpee. Loving father of Suzanne and Walter Austin of Mashpee, Linda and Frank Garofalo of Scituate, Karen and Paul Keefe of Braintree, Mary Beth and Kenny Marsters of Mashpee, Ann Marie and Jack Moore of Braintree and Ernest J., Jr. and Debbie DuBeau of Rockland. Brother of Anna Powell, Lorraine Bisnaw, James DuBeau and his wife, Mary Lou, and the late Helen, Lucille, Wilma, Richard, Dorothy and Arlene. Cherished grandfather of 20 devoted grandchildren and blessed with 13 sweet great-grandchildren. Also survived by many loving in-laws, nieces, nephews and friends.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Mary C. McLaughlin, 91

A funeral Mass for Mary C. (Barker) McLaughlin, 91, of Quincy was celebrated Jan. 18 at St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mrs. McLaughlin died Jan. 13.

MARY C. McLAUGHLIN

She was born in Boston in 1922, one of eight children – five girls and three boys. She used to say they did not have a lot of money, but they had good times and always had a good Christmas.

All her life, Mrs. McLaughlin loved to read and could often be seen carrying a heavy bag of books home from the Thomas Crane Library. The thicker the book, the more she enjoyed them and would often read a good one late into the night.

"When my friends would ask about my mother," said her daughter Nancy, a former Quincy Sun reporter, "they would always ask if she was still reading. And she was into her 90s. Her last book was by Maeve Binchy, a longtime favorite."

"My mother was a thoughtful, caring and sensitive person who quietly helped family and friends throughout her life. She also sent so many cards she helped to keep card companies in business," said Nancy. "She regularly sent cards to one friend who had been sick for quite a while. That prompted the friend's granddaughter, after seeing all the cards, to ask if my mother's name was 'Sincerely Mary'. Maybe it was."

When Mrs. McLaughlin's husband Joe passed away in 1976, she went back to work after staying home to raise her children. She worked at the Bargain Center, TJ Maxx, the A & P and finally at Shaw's, where she worked in the deli department for about 10 years. She enjoyed her work and her coworkers.

She also enjoyed a hot cup of tea in a china cup and saucer in the morning, planting flowers in her yard, playing bingo, listening to talk radio, and baking at Christmastime. Mrs. McLaughlin's cookies were the best and she always brought some to her longtime physician, Dr. Charles Schwartz of Quincy.

Singers Al Martino and Tom Jones were her favorites. In her younger days, she enjoyed going to dances and loved to polka. She also liked to softly sing "The Party's Over" after family get-togethers.

The family dogs, Patch, Buffy, and Callie brought her many years of companionship and enjoyment. She treated them as special members of the family.

Mrs. McLaughlin also volunteered at the Mayor's Thanksgiving dinner in Quincy, contributed to the Salvation Army, which helped her family as a child, and sent coupons to humane societies for dogs.

Beloved wife of the late Joseph F. "Tell It to Joe" McLaughlin. Loving mother of Nancy McLaughlin of Quincy and Joseph McLaughlin and his wife Janice of Braintree. Dear grandmother of Brendan, Brian, and Kevin; . great-grandmother of Brendan Jr. and Ryan McLaughlin of Braintree. Beloved sister of William Barker of Wrentham. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Funeral arrangements were made by Dennis Sweeney Funeral Home, 74 Elm St., Quincy

Memorial donations may be made to the Thomas Crane Library, Att. Ina Cutler, 40 Washington St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Martin P. Quigley

A funeral Mass for Martin P. "Marty" Quigley of Quincy, formerly of Sudan Street, Dorchester was celebrated Jan. 17 at St. Joseph's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Quigley died suddenly Jan. 11.

Beloved of Stacey Pentz. Loyal son of Elinor "Ma Quigs" of Quincy and the late David R. Quigley. Lovingly survived by four brothers, three sisters, and too many loved ones to count.

Funeral arrangements were made by Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St., Quincy.

Interment was private.

William Kelly, 61

A Mass of Christian Burial for William Kelly, 61, of Quincy and formerly Dorchester was celebrated Jan. 17 at St. Mary's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Kelly died peacefully Jan. 13 at home.

Born and raised in County Galway, Ireland, Mr. Kelly immigrated to the U.S. with his wife and young family in 1986, settling in Dorchester before eventually moving to Quincy in 1994. He worked in the construction trade, and was a member of Laborers Local 223.

Loving husband of more than 36 years to Mary (Conneely) Kelly. Devoted father of Aongus L. Kelly and his wife Lauren of Quincy and Fiona C. Bailey and her husband Brian of Weymouth. Cherished grandfather of Irene, Liam, and Evelyn Kelly of Quincy and Declan Bailey of Weymouth. Dear brother of Annie, Bridie, Sarah, Catherine, Grainne, and Nora, all of Ireland, and the late Martin and Paraic Kelly. Also survived by many nieces, nephews and extended family.

Funeral arrangements were made by Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St., Quincy.

Interment was at Cedar Grove Cemetery, Dorchester.

McCauley Remembers Peter Kenney

By FORMER MAYOR FRANK McCAULEY

I first met Peter Kenney back in 1978, when I was serving on the Quincy City Council as one of three city councillors at large. I was introduced to Peter by a colleague of mine on the city council, Paul Harold. Paul and Peter grew up together in the Adams Shore section of Quincy. They also attended the University of Massachusetts at Amherst together. Paul was running for the state senate that year and Peter was a member of his campaign team.

Three years later, in 1981, I was running for mayor and Peter joined my campaign team. After I was elected I had a number of appointments to make in my new administration, of which one of the most important being executive secretary. Senator Paul Harold, along with my wife Sandra, strongly recommended Peter for the job. After some consideration Peter accepted the position.

The executive secretary (the position presently titled chief of staff) handles a myriad of problems that may not require the attention of the mayor and coordinates the efforts of other members of the administration.

Peter Kenney had that unique ability to differentiate between items that he could handle at his level of responsibility and the more important problems that needed the mayor's attention. Peter's performance as my executive secretary considerably lightened by day-to-day duties as mayor of the city.

Never once during my eight-year tenure as the City of Quincy's mayor did I ever receive a written or verbal complaint about Peter's performance as my executive secretary. To the contrary, some of Peter's affable demeanor may have humanized me in the bargain.

In the fall of 1988, Peter came into my office and in effect gave his notice. He told me that while he would finish out my fourth term as mayor he would be leaving city employment in January 1990.

At the time I had not given serious thought to seeking a fifth term but at that time I started to consider my political future. I decided to leave the mayor's office at the conclusion of my fourth term in January 1990.

In the ensuing years, Peter and I stayed in touch. Peter spent a number of years as Mayor Jim Sheets' appointee on the Park and Recreation Board. Peter, along with Arthur Foley, Bob Denvir, and Jay MacRitchie joined me in monthly luncheons at various restaurants around the city. It was in May 2012 while arranging our monthly luncheon that I became aware that Peter was seriously ill.

During the ensuing months, Peter attended some of our luncheons. In this period I never once heard him complain about the circumstances of his illness, always remaining upbeat about his chances for the future. I think it was this optimistic attitude that contributed to his remaining with us longer than his initial prognosis. The birth of two grandsons brightened his time with us.

Peter has left us now but he will be fondly remembered by those of us who served with him over the years in city government. On a more personal note, Peter was more than a former employee for me. Sandra and I, along with the entire McCauley family, regarded Peter as a virtual member of our extended family and will miss him. We send our condolences to his family.

Peter M. Kenney, 65

PETER M. KENNEY

A funeral Mass for Peter M. Kenney, 65, of Scituate and formerly Quincy was celebrated yesterday (Wednesday) at St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset.

Mr. Kenney died peacefully Jan. 18 at his home surrounded by loved ones after a long battle with cancer.

Raised in the Adams Shore section of Quincy, he was a graduate of Boston College High School, Class of 1966, and UMass Amherst in 1970. He was a longtime employee of Cook and Company of Marshfield.

Mr. Kenney was the executive secretary to then-Quincy Mayor Francis X. McCauley from 1982 to 1990. For many years he was a coach of youth soccer, baseball, and basketball in Quincy. Mr. Kenney was also a member of the Quincy Parks and Recreation Board. He enjoyed gardening, coaching sports, fishing, birding, and spending time with his family and friends.

Beloved husband of Susan Shillue. Devoted father of Michael Kenney and his wife Aileen of Milton, and his stepchildren, Jake Shillue and Sophie Shillue. Adoring grandfather of John Joseph and Matthew Peter Kenney. Son of the late Phillip and Barbara Kenney and the brother of Mary Sullivan and husband John of Falmouth, Patricia McCarthy and husband John of Whitman, Frank Kenney and wife Jeanne of Brewster, Phillip Kenney and wife Patricia of Brookline, Michael Kenney and partner Nancy Loubier of Quincy, and Judy Cotter and husband the late William Cotter of Quincy. He was the beloved uncle of many nieces and nephews.

Funeral arrangements were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home, Cohasset.

Private interment.

Memorial donations may be made to the Wounded Warrior Project, PO Box 758517, Topeka, KS, 66675.

Katherine F. Thomas, 81

A funeral service for Katherine F. (Poch) Thomas, 81, of Plymouth and formerly Quincy will be held at 11 a.m. today (Thursday) at Christ Church, Plymouth.

Mrs. Thomas died Sunday.

She was born Oct. 20, 1932, as the middle child of seven to the late Elizabeth (Squibb) and Theodore Poch in Quincy. Mrs. Thomas was a graduate of North Quincy High and Quincy City Hospital School of Nursing. She moved to Plymouth upon marrying in 1954. She worked as an RN for many years at Jordan Hospital and as a Silver Lake High School nurse later in her career.

She served her community through active involvement with the American Legion Auxiliary and as a lay Eucharistic minister first at St. David's Episcopal in Halifax and later at Christ Church in Plymouth.

Loving sister of Mary Jane Poch of NH. Devoted mother of Max Paronich and wife Sharon Paronich of Plymouth and Patricia (Paronich) Iafrate and husband Paul Iafrate of Orleans. Cherished grandmother of Rebecca White of Medway, Paula Ribeiro of Chatham, Alysa Iafrate of Dennis, Max Paronich III of Plymouth, U.S. Navy Corpsman Ben Paronich, and Alex Iafrate of Orleans. Proud great-grandmother of Madelyn, Mason, and Ava. She will be missed by many nieces, nephews, and cousins in New England and Wisconsin.

Visiting hours 9:30-10:30 today at Bartlett Funeral Home, Plymouth.

Interment at Mass. National Cemetery, Bourne.

Memorial donations may be made to the Alzheimer's Association.

Adolph J. Monson, 94

A funeral service for Adolph J. Monson, 94, of North Attleboro, MA and Pompano Beach, FL, and formerly of Quincy, will be held at 11 a.m. today (Thursday) at Dennis Sweeney Funeral Home, 74 Elm St., Quincy.

Mr. Monson died Jan. 18.

He was raised on a dairy farm in West Salem, Wisc., where he was born on May 6, 1919, one of four children of Clara (Moan) and George Monson. After joining the 43rd Division of the U.S. Army in 1939, he served honorably for 5 years.

Following his discharge in 1944, he settled in Quincy. He worked as a cook at Eddie's Diner, where he met his future wife, Ella May Bonani. In 1947, they were married and he started working for HP Hood in Boston. In 1955, they opened up an A & W Root Beer franchise on Quincy Avenue and named it Al's Drive-In. After managing the business for 10 years, they sold the franchise and opened up the Martin & Monson Sales and Mobile Home Park on Route 1 in Foxboro. They then purchased and managed Guertin's Gardens and Rustic Pines Estates in North Attleboro.

Mr. and Mrs. Monson traveled extensively, both domestically and internationally, visiting every state in the U.S. except Alaska. Mr. Monson was active in the community where he was a member of the Lion's Club and the Mobile Home Association. After semi-retiring, he became an avid golfer, enjoying courses in Florida and Massachusetts. He also enjoyed bowling and playing a friendly game of cards, especially poker and cribbage.

Beloved husband of the late Ella May of North Attleboro. Dear brother of the late Myrtle Olson, Charlotte Indhal, and Alton Staff, all of WI. He is survived by numerous nieces and nephews and many good friends.

He was loved by his family and friends and will be missed by all who knew him. Mr. Monson's family would like to thank each one of his caregivers who made such a positive difference in his daily life.

Visiting hours are 9-11 a.m. today at the funeral home.

Bruce E. Mason, 74

A celebration of life service for Bruce Edward Mason, 74, of East Sandwich and formerly Norwell and Quincy was held Jan. 18 at Nickerson-Bourne Funeral Home, Sandwich

Mr. Mason died Jan. 13, reluctantly after a lengthy illness.

He was born in Quincy to Edward Lawrence Mason and Veronica (Phillips) Mason. Mr. Mason grew up in Quincy on Langley Circle where he spent time exploring Blacks Creek and Pine Island with his beloved spaniel Spanker.

He graduated from Quincy Trade School in 1957. During his younger years he was a member of the Wollaston Yacht Club, enjoying his time on the waters of Quincy Bay. Upon graduation he was employed with Grass Instruments until his retirement. He worked for the same company for 46 years, of which he, proudly, never missed a day.

Mr. Mason enjoyed many summer and winter adventures in the mountains of New Hampshire, and in the woods and on the rivers of Maine. He was an accomplished outdoorsman, and was quite comfortable hunting in the woods of Maine. Canoe trips on the rivers of Maine always provided him great joy.

He retired to East Sandwich on Cape Cod and married Patricia (Lawler) Quintiliani. They had been friends for most of their lives. They enjoyed travel, long-time and new friends, and had hoped to enjoy a longer second half of their lives together.

Beloved husband of Patricia Anne (Lawler) Mason. He was predeceased by his first wife Grayce Francis Mason. Loving father of David Bruce Mason of East Sandwich and his wife Colleen and Kenneth Edward Mason of ME and his wife Patricia. Cherished grandfather of Bradley Edward Mason, Kathleen Francis Mason, Jack Edward Mason, and Eliza Kay Mason. He will also be missed by his wife's sons, Louis, Stephen and his wife Tracy, and Matthew Quintiliani. "Grandpa Bruce" was also loved by Anthony, Arrianna, and Danielle Quintiliani.

Interment was private.

Memorial donations may be made to the cancer charity of your choice.

Marcia J. Farrell, 73

A funeral service for Marcia J. (Galvin) Farrell, 73, of Brockton and formerly Quincy was held yesterday (Wednesday) at Conley Funeral Home, Brockton.

Mrs. Farrell died unexpectedly Jan. 15 at Signature Healthcare Brockton Hospital.

Born in Boston, she was raised and educated in Quincy, a daughter of the late Thomas and Margaruite (Johnson) Galvin. Mrs. Farrell had been a resident of Brockton for over 50 years and had been employed for 17 years as head chef at the Massachusetts Respiratory Hospital in Braintree and retired from Emmanuel House in Brockton after six years.

She was most happy when she was cooking, entertaining and gathering with family and friends for the holidays.

Loving mother of Michael and Mark Farrell, both of Brockton. Dear sister of Thomas M. Galvin and John W. Galvin, both of Quincy, and Harold A. Galvin of FL and Quincy. Cherished grandmother of Kristina, Michael, and Mark Farrell, and Matthew Loring, and great-grandmother of four. Also survived by many nieces and nephews. She was the mother of the late Lisa M. Farrell and sister of the late Judith C. Galvin, Kevin A. Galvin, and Cheryl E. Stokinger.

Interment at Calvary Cemetery, Boston.

Bald Eagle Sightings: Not As Rare As 20 Years Ago

Two Squantum Residents Get Glimpse Of Majestic Bird Near Commander Shea Blvd.

By JOE REARDON

Spotting a Bald Eagle in the region, while not common, is not nearly as rare of an occurrence as it once was.

So says Norman Smith, the director of the Trailside Museum in Milton. Smith is confident the population of the majestic birds is on the upswing after years on the list of endangered species.

"It's not common like seeing a robin or starling," said Smith. 'There are a number of places where they randomly show up. It's not as rare as it was 20 years ago. Twenty years ago it would have been unbelievable."

Julia Geary of Squantum was lucky enough to snap a photo of a majestic Bald Eagle perched on a tree branch last Tuesday off of Commander Shea Boulevard in North Quincy.

Julia's dad, Bill Geary, was on his way home when he spotted what he thought was a hawk being chased by a pair of crows. The birds flew about 20 feet over Geary's car and he realized it was a Bald Eagle.

He quickly went home to get Julia to take a photo of the Eagle. 'I've never heard of a Bald Eagle in this area," said Geary. 'It was so exciting. I couldn't believe what I was seeing."

Bald Eagles, which are the largest birds prey in Massachusetts, can grow to about 3 feet and have a wingspan of 7 feet. The birds had all but disappeared from Massachusetts by 1902, but a push was made from 1982 to 1988 by the Massachusetts Division of Fisheries & Wildlife to reintroduce the Bald Eagle. Forty-one of the birds from Michigan and Canada were relocated to the Quabbin Reservoir area. They were removed from the federal endangered species list in 2007 and down listed to threatened.

Ironically, Geary was the MDC commissioner at the time of the Bald Eagles' reintroduction and helped the department of fisheries and wildlife at the Quabbin and had the opportunity to see them up close. "I actually climbed up to where they were feeding them," said Geary. "They would wear an eagle puppet on their hand so they wouldn't get used to humans."

The Bald Eagles, which are a symbol of strength and freedom in the United States, have been thriving over the past five years within Massachusetts' borders. The birds are found near large bodies of open water with an abundant food supply and old-growth trees for nesting.

The Bald Eagle is an opportunistic feeder which subsists mainly on fish.

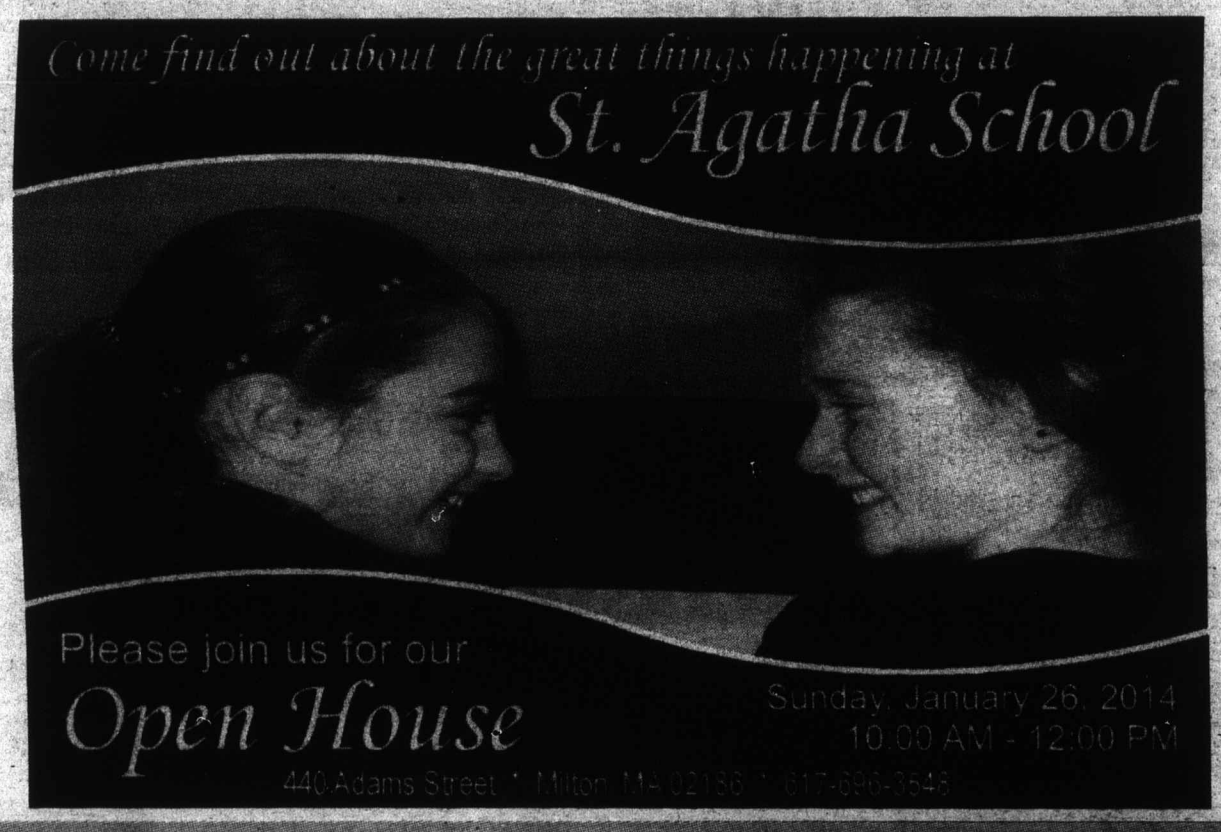

SQUANTUM RESIDENTS Bill Geary and his daughter Julia spotted this Bald Eagle Jan. 14 on Commander Shea Boulevard in North Quincy diagonally across from Fallon Ambulance on the marsh. Bald Eagle sightings – quite rare in Massachusetts 20 years – is more common today, bird experts say.

The Department of Fishing and Game (DFG) verified last May that there were 30 active nests in Massachusetts in locations along the Connecticut and Merrimack Rivers and the Quabbin Reservoir. Other nests were spotted at the Wachusett Reservoir and in Framingham, Webster, Middleboro, Fall River, Plymouth, Brookfield and Pittsfield.

Sightings have been reported in Carver, Arlington, Lunenburg, Russell, Sandisfield and the along the Housatonic River. Smith has also seen Bald Eagles in Boston Harbor near Logan Airport.

Police Add 15 New Recruits

By SCOTT JACKSON

During a ceremony Tuesday afternoon inside Quincy High's rotunda, Mayor Thomas Koch appointed 15 new members of the Quincy Police Department.

A standing-room-only crowd of family, friends, and police officers was on hand as the new officers – Michael Reilly, Sean Crowley, Veronica Acevedo, Christopher Fish, William Griffin, Bryan Donovan, Andrew Keenan, Tara Waters, Eugene Smith, Michael Dougan, David Sansevero, Jeffrey Bossart, Sean Fitzgerald, Maura Hayes, and Erin McFarland – were all sworn in by City Clerk Joseph Shea during the ceremony.

Mayor Thomas Koch said each of the new recruits would add to the Police Department by bringing their own unique experience, story, and values.

"Each of you will bring in life experience. Each of you will bring in your own story, your own set of values," Koch said. "You will be joining what I think is the most outstanding police department anywhere, particularly in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts – it's very professional with a tremendous legacy of service. You're bringing your story and adding it to the organization you'll be joining."

Police Chief Paul Keenan said the 15 officers were joining the department at an opportune time, noting they will one day patrol a revitalized Quincy Center.

"Quincy is a tremendous city and a tremendous city to work in. The City of Quincy is doing great things," the chief said. "These officers are coming on at a tremen-

New Windows Slated At Four Public Schools

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro is working with the Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA) to replace windows at several Quincy Schools.

"The mayor is looking at four schools; Lincoln Hancock, Parker, Point Webster, and Beechwood Knoll, and all with that focus on energy efficiency," he said. "The goal is to increase daylight in all our classrooms by 50 percent... these new windows just make classrooms bright and much more learner responsive in so many ways."

The new windows will have a built-in reflective film as well as a thermal pane, increasing energy efficiency.

Similar replacements are taking place at North Quincy High School, Wollaston Elementary

A 'Grand' Night For NQ's Grace Geary

Granddaughter Of Legendary Coach Scores 1,000th Point At Home - And Hallowed - Gym

By BILL GRIFFIN

There are words, memories and moments which remain forever in a person's life.

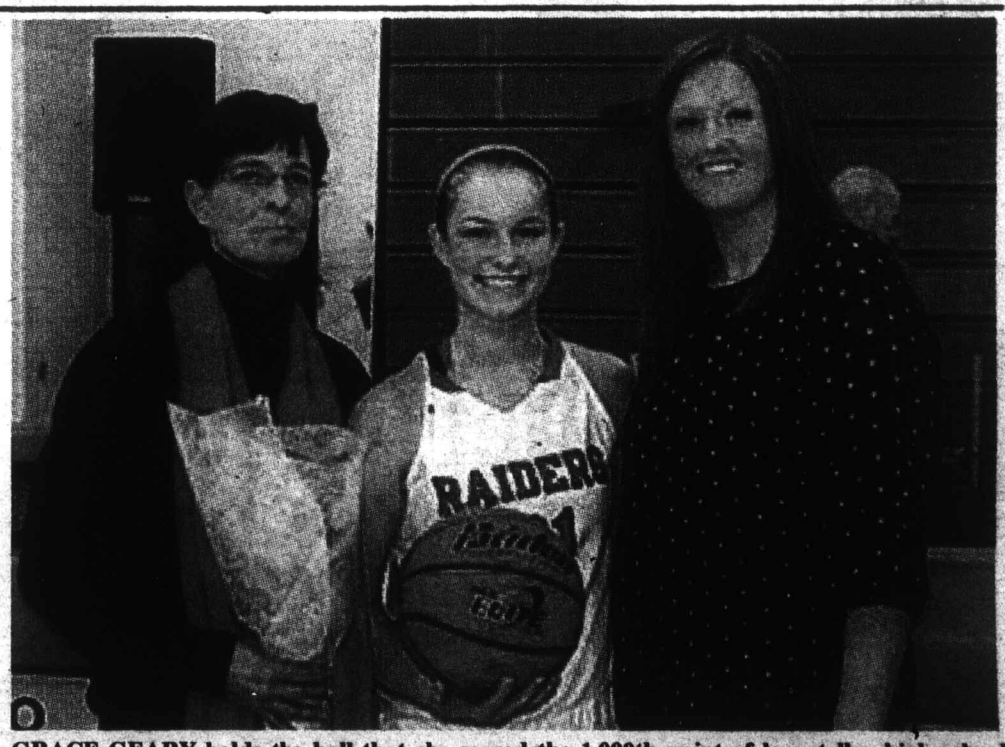

When Grace Geary scored her 1000th varsity point, her 30th point of the game in less than three quarters of play against Hingham Friday night in the North Quincy gym, she remembered two words which trace back to the happy days of childhood, two words that her grandfather spoke to her on walks to the bus stop and games in the driveway when she was smaller than the basketball she was trying to dribble.

Follow through.

"Follow through. Follow through. Follow through. That was always the big one for him," said Geary.

Her grandfather was Bob "Knobby" Nolan, the legendary coach of North Quincy basketball from 1961-1976. Coach Nolan's teams went 153-63. In 1970-1971, the Red Raiders won 20 straight and went to the sectional finals in the Boston Garden. However, more than records and tournaments, it was the people he touched, the young people he helped move to education and good lives that is his

FIFTEEN NEW POLICE Department recruits were sworn in Tuesday afternoon at a ceremony held in the Quincy High School Rotunda. dous time in their careers. Quincy Square is going to be a boomtown. There is going to be people living, people coming up to enjoy dinners. It's a thriving community and they're going to be an integral part of that."

Reilly, Crowley, Acevedo, Fish, and Griffin are all veterans who served in the U.S. military. Another spot was reserved for Michael Lind who is currently deployed with the U.S. Navy SEALs and will be sworn in once he returns.

Four of the new officers – Keenan, Waters, Smith, and Hayes – have already gone through the police academy and will now complete six to eight weeks of field training with the department before being deployed on the street. The other 11 will attend the MBTA Police academy in Braintree for six months then complete field training. All 15 will initially be assigned as patrol officers. Each year in March, all patrol officers bid on their assignments based on seniority.

"For the candidates that are going through the police academy, you're going to go through a very challenging six months," Chief Keenan said. "My recommendation to you is stick together, be strong, work hard, and work as a team and you'll get through it. And when you get through it you're going to have the best job in America."

Tuesday's appointments bring the total number of patrol officers in the Police Department to 158, adding a total of six new positions. In 2008, when Chief Keenan took over the department, there were 154 patrol officers. Koch indicated that more officers could be sworn in over the next two months.

The appointments followed the order of the most recent Civil Service exam list. Candidates also had to pass background, psychological, and physical tests before being deemed eligible to join the department. Chief Keenan did not participate in the screening process because Andrew Keenan is his son. Andrew Keenan is also a nephew of the mayor. Following the ceremony, the police chief said he was proud to see his son sworn in.

"It's a very, very proud day for myself and my family," he said. "He's worked hard to get to the point where he is. He got a tremendous mark on the exam and he was a trained police officer – he was at UMass-Boston for a couple years. It's really a proud day for us."

Also following in his father's footsteps is Michael Dougan. He is the son of Quincy Police Capt. John Dougan.

School, and Merrymount Elementary School this summer. The city will participate in the MSBA's Accelerated Repair Program, which provides funds for the repair of roofs, windows, and boilers simultaneously to multiple schools within a single district, resulting in energy-efficient and cost-saving upgrades and overall operational savings.

"We are looking forward to those summer projects coming to fruition," said DeCristofaro.

According to the MSBA website, "grants are approved based on need and urgency as expressed by the town, regional school district, or independent agricultural and technical school and validated by the MSBA."

Before going forward, a Statement of Interest (SOI) must be submitted to the MSBA to determine the percentage of funds which will be reimbursed to the city following the installation of the windows.

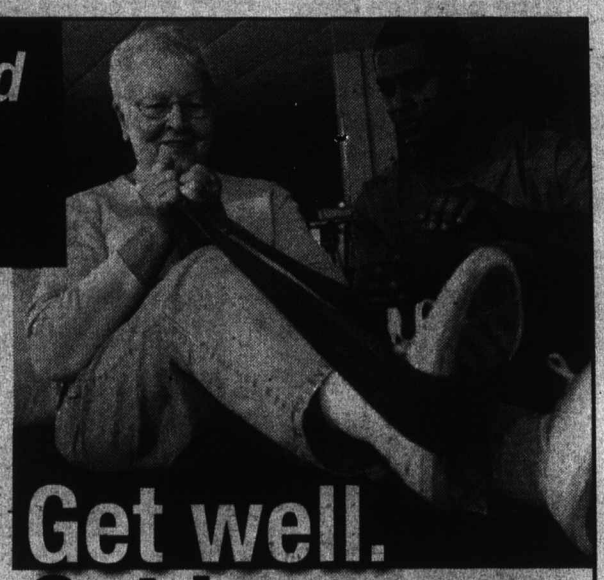

The School Committee is working with the Public Buildings Department to ensure that a specific timeline is followed in an effort to meet the MSBA's Feb. 14 deadline.

"The purpose of our work with the MSBA is to make sure our sites remain proactive in regard to all of our buildings, making sure that there is continued and consistent maintenance within our buildings while being reimbursed by the accelerated program of MSBA by 70 percent.

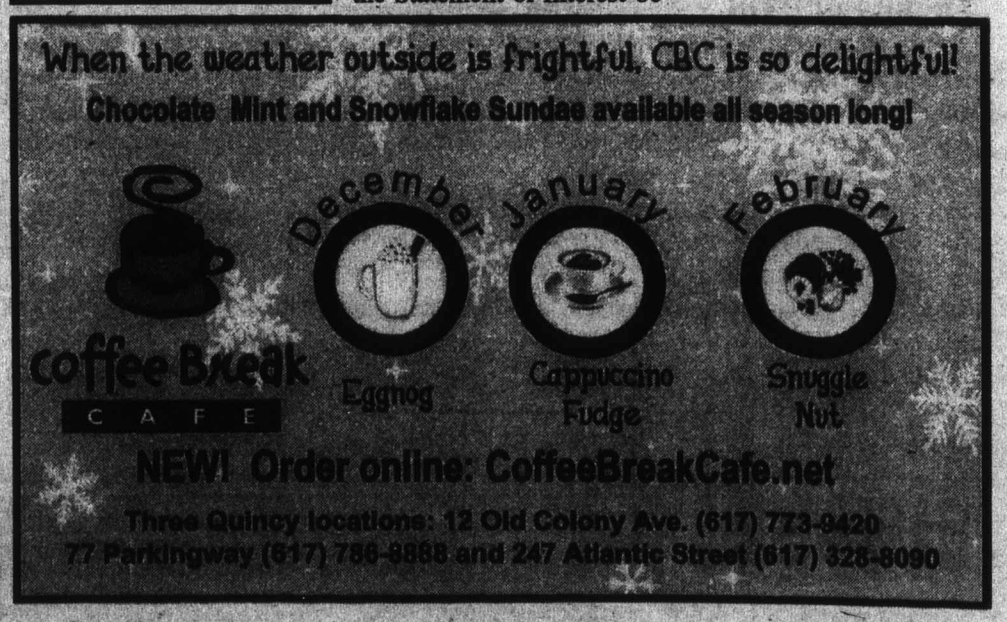

"Some of the schools are 15 to 20 years old but there's so much more efficiency to the windows today even versus 15 and 20 years ago that we can only benefit from that from projects like this," said DeCristofaro.

Unable to make the Jan. 22 meeting of the School Committee, Mayor Thomas Koch wrote in a letter that "based on our ongoing analysis of needs it is my recommendation that the Statement of Interest be submitted for Lincoln Hancock, Parker, Beechwood Knoll, and Point Webster... the city's participation in the Accelerated Repair Program with window replacements at North Quincy High School and Wollaston Elementary School and Merrymount Elementary School expected to begin this summer is a vital component of our broader program of building, expanding, and improving our school grounds."

A unanimous vote to submit SOIs for all of the schools, specifically for windows, was made. The matter will be presented to the City Council for their discussion and approval during their Feb. 3rd and 18th meetings. The proposal must also go before the Public Buildings Department, which oversees new construction in Quincy.

Bulk For Rice Road Project

$1.5 Million For Three Sewer Replacements

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council voted unanimously in favor of appropriating nearly $1.5 million to fund three sewer replacement projects.

The bulk of the money – $1.38 million – will go towards the replacement of the sewer line under the portion of Rice Road between Fenno Street and Quincy Shore Drive in Wollaston. Of the remaining amount, $85,000 will go towards sewer repair on Martensen Street and $29,000 will go towards emergency sewer repairs on Mallard Road. The MWRA allocated $121,000 to the city to help pay for the costs of the sewer repair on Mallard Road.

Water and gas mains under Rice Road were replaced beginning in 2011, and the city intended to resurface the road in 2012. But that didn't happen because the sewer line became compromised, according to Public Works Commissioner Dan Raymondi.

"We thought we would complete this worthwhile project with resurfacing in 2012. Whether it was because of all the work that had been done – the compaction – or just the aging aspect of this sewer line... the sewer line was being compromised at a few points," Raymondi told the council. "We brought in a geotechnical person, you folks supported that allocation. They found we needed to do more support with respect to the sewer line. That resulted in a redesign of the sewer line."

Councillor Doug Gutro, however, told the commissioner he felt the sewer replacement project should have already been completed. He recalled residents raising concerns about the sewer line in 2011 – when Gutro represented the neighborhood as Ward 5 councillor – during a public meeting shortly after Raymondi became DPW commissioner.

"The issue came up about the integrity of this sewer line. That was 2011," Gutro said. "So here we are heading into 2014 and it's finally going to happen – not sure the road is going to get done in 2014 because of the sewer line. The neighbors had pretty good instinct that everything needed to get done. Instead of piggybacking it all together it's three years of construction."

Raymondi said that the sewer wasn't compromised

Harold Crowley Retires From Library Board

By SCOTT JACKSON

Harold S. Crowley, Jr. – a member of the Thomas Crane Public Library's Board of Trustees for the past eight years – received a commendation from the City Council recognizing his service to the city.

Crowley, a former Quincy schoolteacher, is retiring from the Board of Trustees after eight years, including three as board chairman. Councillor Doug Gutro presented the commendation to Crowley, noting that he was a staunch advocate for the library's three branch locations during a period of municipal budget cuts that greatly affected the library.

"He's done an extraordinary amount in terms of advocacy for our branch libraries," Gutro said. "Whether it was North Quincy, Wollaston, or Adams Shore, he was a huge proponent. When the branches suffered, he stepped up and dealt with some of those and was a big advocate in Mayor [Thomas] Koch's office to restore some of those cuts."

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin thanked Crowley for his service with the library. He also cited Crowley for helping implement the Kids' Vote program citywide.

"My strongest recollection of him was the Kids' Vote. I remember when he reached out to get the community involved in it. I was one of the ward captains at the Montclair School in its infancy," Coughlin said. "His advocacy in terms of civic engagement and participation in the process starting at the very youngest age, and trying to engage parents through their kids... I can't say how important that is."

After accepting the commendation from the council, Crowley spoke briefly. He thanked current Library Director Megan Allen and the two others he served with – Ann McLaughlin and Harry Williams, and the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library, and the mayor and council for restoring hours at the branches in this fiscal year's budget.

"The branches are a wonderful resource for Quincy's families, students, and seniors," Crowley said. "I hope that the mayor and the council continue to provide the necessary resources to allow for the continued expansion of library branches in the years ahead."

THE VALUE OF CERTIFIED DIAMONDS

Knowledgeable consumers know the value of a diamond grading report, which is a certificate that provides information that gives a complete evaluation of the diamond in order to allow for relevant comparison. While there are a number of well-respected laboratories that issue diamond reports, the best known is the gemological laboratory of the Gemological Institute of America. Its comprehensive report includes information about the identity of the diamond (attesting to the fact that it is genuine), its weight, dimensions, proportions, finish (symmetry and polish), girdle thickness, culet, and the absence or presence of fluorescence. This comprehensive evaluation leaves no doubt in consumers' minds as to the quality and value of the diamonds that they purchase.

Your home has a deed, and your vehicle has to have a title and registration. It makes sense that you have similar documentation for something as valuable as your diamond purchase. A diamond grading report isn't an appraisal. It is the scientific blueprint of a stone's exact quality characteristics. As a couple, select the perfect diamond engagement ring, earrings, or pendants at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center or contact us at 617-773-3636

Karen Cashman Is Back On The Ice

A lot has happened to Karen Cashman since that glorious winter 20 years ago.

The 1994 Olympic bronze medalist is a wife, mother and public school teacher in Marshfield.

Her married name is Karen Lehmann and she and her husband John have an eight-year-old son, Bryan. The family lives in Plymouth.

But not everything has changed.

A big part of Karen's life remains on the ice.

She teaches youth figure skating at The Bog Ice Arena in Kingston.

Karen's life - you might say – has come full circle like a figure eight.

"Being on the ice is where I belong. I love it. Once I start I get so into it," Karen, now 42, says sitting in the stands at The Bog Ice before one of her group lessons on a recent Saturday morning.

Rinks and arenas - in some ways – have been a second home since she was a small girl growing up in Quincy.

The daughter of Fred and the late Jane Cashman, Karen first laced up a pair of skates when she was five. At first Karen wanted to play hockey. But her mom insisted that she be a figure skater.

That decision – and a suggestion by her father when Karen was a teen – would ultimately catapult her to the world athletic stage.

"I started out as a figure skater at the Commonwealth Skating Club in Randolph when I was about five. I loved figure skating. I thought I'd go to the Olympics as a figure skater and I did that until I was a senior in high school."

Karen excelled as a figure skater. She won the New England competition as a youth.

"But as I got older in my teens I realized I wasn't going to go to the Olympics in figure skating but I still had that desire to compete."

While one door was closing, another one opened during the 1988 Olympic Games in Calgary.

Karen was glued to the TV watching U.S. speed skater Bonnie Blair blaze to glory winning a gold and bronze medal. Her dad Fred said to her "Look at that. You've been running track your whole life and you know how to skate so why don't you try that?"

Her dad – who is 82 and still laces them up for the Bald Eagles hockey seniors at Quincy Youth Arena – later brought her to the Bay State Speed Skating Club in Boston for her first crack at speed skating.

"I jumped on the ice in a rickety pair of 1930s speed skates that I could barely stand on," Karen recalls. "I speed skated around the ice looking like a figure skater and I thought, 'yeah, I can do this.' That's how all of this started.

"I went to small competitions and got better equipment and as I went along I did a little bit better and then I got accepted to the training program at Marquette, Michigan where the U.S. national team trains. That's was where I really made a huge leap because I went from just being okay to training with the national team and I really made a big leap."

Karen trained with the team and "I had no choice but to try to keep up with them. They were flying by me in the beginning."

Her transition from figure skating to speed skating was not smooth.

"I felt awkward at first. I wasn't comfortable on the ice. I wasn't comfortable in my skates. Even when I moved to Michigan I was the one girl from Boston and I didn't know anyone, and some of the others had already been to the Olympics and I was intimidated and I wanted to quit at times. But I had strong parents and they told me if this is what you want to do, stick with it.

"It was hard. I felt out of place because I didn't skate as well as they skated but I had that inner drive. You have your doubts but there's something inside that says 'keep going, keep going, keep going.'"

But anyone who knows Karen knows not to underestimate her. In any sport.

Not only could she skate, but she excelled at track and cross country.

"Karen was one of the most dedicated athletes in North Quincy history," says Quincy Track Club director and NQHS track coach Geoff Hennessy.

"She ran track and competed in cross country winter track and spring track all four years at NQHS earning 12 letters, and attending the state meet every season. I returned to coach in the fall of 1988 and often I would train her at night as she would skate in the afternoon. We would run together from her house (Lyons Street) to the South Shore Plaza and back.

"Upon return Mr. Cashman would have a spaghetti dinner waiting for both of us.

"Her accomplishments in Quincy Track Club were even greater having made it to the Hershey Nationals five times as a member of Quincy's 4 x 100 relay team from age 9 to 13."

Karen certainly had the drive and athleticism to compete as a speed skater. All she needed was time to hone her new skill.

She was determined and she stuck with it. And her figure skating and track skills eventually gelled into an Olympic athlete.

"I remember being at a nationals competition held at the College of the Holy Cross in the early 1990s and someone said to me, 'You don't look like a figure skater in that race.' And I said to myself, 'Yes, I can do this. I'm a speed skater now."

Karen's pinnacle as a speed skater occurred 20 years ago next month. She and her three teammates won a bronze medal in the 3,000-meter short-track relay event in Lillehammer, Norway. She says her Olympic experience was everything she dreamed of and more.

The Opening Ceremony and standing on the podium when she and her teammates received their bronze medals are two vivid memories she'll never forget. She keeps in touch with her teammates through social media and saw one of her teammates at a wedding five years ago.

"I can't believe it's been 20 years. I watch the Olympics now and I still cry and I wish I were there but the time has flown by. It's been all good since."

After her bronze-medal feat in Lillehammer, Karen returned triumphantly to Quincy.

She was not expecting a hero's welcome.

"I was shocked (when I got back from the Olympics.) I'm living in my own little speed skating world and little by little you go to bigger and bigger competitions and before I know it I'm at the Olympics. I wasn't expecting the response. I got off the plane (at Logan Airport) and there were people with flowers and taking photos. It was crazy but it was wonderful."

Later that spring, Karen Cashman Day was proclaimed by then Mayor James Sheets and celebrated in Quincy. In the morning, she was feted at an assembly at NQHS attended by 1,600 students, family, local officials and other well-wishers. She was then honored that afternoon at a standing-room-only luncheon at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

"Everything that Quincy did for me afterward - having

THIS NOVEMBER 1939 real photo postcard reproduction is a view from the rear of the new home of Howard Johnson's candy and condiment factory at 180 Old Colony Avenue in Wollaston. The candy factory was previously in a small building on the corner in Norfolk Downs Center. The Howard Johnson's company – which began with one store just a few blocks from here in 1925 – had expanded to 100 locations and was outgrowing its offices that were in store fronts surrounding the first store. The City of Cambridge tried to lure Johnson into moving his burgeoning business headquarters there, but, after a struggle, the leaders of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce convinced him to buy this building instead. After extensive remodeling and renovations to what was the old Robert H. Stearns furniture building this was to become home to all of Howard Johnson's manufacturing and executive units employing about 500 people. Marketplace changes and World War II kept the executive offices from moving into the building, but this was home to its candy and condiment factory for almost 40 years. Today, this building is owned by Eastern Nazarene College and the top floor is occupied by the new Quincy Chamber of Commerce and its Quincy Innovation Center. Thanks to Jim McArthur of Marshfield for the picture. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Washington School Is Proposed For Veterans Housing

Mayor Charles A. Ross has advocated the expenditure of $100,000 to convert the vacant Washington Street School into veterans apartments as advocated by the Mayor's Emergency Committee on Housing.

The Mayor said, "I will send a loan order to the city council as soon as I ascertain from state authorities the proper legal methods of financing the proposition. Something has to be done for the veterans along housing lines and it looks like the Washington School is one method of easing the situation a little."

CAPTAIN JAMES DALY NEW DEPUTY CHIEF

Captain James Daly was appointed Deputy Chief of the Quincy Fire Department by Mayor Ross. Daly, a first cousin of former governor and Boston mayor Maurice J. Tobin, topped the list of three captains certified for the position by the Civil Service Commission.

Ross also appointed 59 men to the department as privates to implement the 48 hour workweek which goes into effect Thursday, Feb. 4th at 8 a.m. All but three of the appointees are veterans of World War II.

Children's Programs, Activities At Crane Library

By JULIE RINES

The Thomas Crane Public Library announces the following programs and activities for children during February.

Winter Storytimes

Weekday storytimes for children ages 4 months through 5 years old begin on Friday, Jan. 31st. The library offers several programs by age. Stop by the library or check our website thomascranelibrary.org for details. Reminder there will be no storytimes the week of Feb. 17th, school vacation week, check out our special vacation week programs instead.

Saturday Fun for Little Ones with Elaine Kessler

On Saturday, Feb. 1st at 10 a.m. celebrate Take Your Child to the Library Day with the Snow Princess Elaine Kessler as we celebrate winter with a program full of stories, songs and activities that explores the cold and snow. This program is for children ages 0-4 accompanied by an adult. No registration is required. Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Storytime with Cheryl

Join storyteller Cheryl Dunford for a family storytime full of stories, songs, rhymes and more for children ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult on Saturday, Feb. 8th at 10 a.m. at the Main Library. No registration required. Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Storytime with Cheryl at North Quincy

Join storyteller Cheryl Dunford for a bilingual family storytime full of stories, songs, rhymes and more for children ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult on Saturday, Feb. 22nd at 10 a.m.

Join us for some fun and learn something new, maybe even a song or two in Chinese. No registration required. Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Mad Science Preschool for ages 3-5- Trick your Eye

This Mad Science of Greater Boston workshop for ages 3-5 explores the science of optics, refraction, and the biology associated with sight. The camera obscura and Mad Science periscope will delight the children as they test out these curious objects. The children will have fun fooling their eyes with a variety of optical illusions: some old favorites like candlestick or the two faces, some new like Einstein's funny face. Spinning disks create surprising visuals to amuse and bemuse curious children! Each child will take home a small magnifying glass—an optical illusion some scientists use!

This 45-minute workshop for ages 3-5 will be held on Saturday, Feb. 15th at 9:30 a.m. at the Main Library. Registration is required. Beginning Monday, Feb. 3rd, register online, in person or by calling 617-376-2411.

Due to space limitations, this program is limited to Quincy residents. Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Mad Science Workshops for ages 6-10 Optical Illusions

This Mad Science of Greater Boston workshop for ages 6-10 explores the science of optics, refraction, and the biology associated with sight. The children will have fun fooling their eyes with a variety of optical illusions: some old favorites like candlestick or the two faces, some new like Einstein's funny face. They will also test out some optical illusion contraptions like a camera obscura and mirror mirage. After an instructional demonstration of the science and design behind periscopes, the children will construct their own periscope to take home.

This one-hour workshop for ages 6-10 will be held on Saturday, February 15th at 10:30 a.m. at the Main Library. Registration is required. Beginning Monday, Feb. 3rd, register online, in person or by calling 617-376-2411.

Due to space limitations, this program is limited to Quincy residents. Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Book Clubs for Kids

Do you like to read? Would you like to talk to others about books? Then you will like our book discussion groups. Join us each month to discuss all kinds of books. The Night Owls Book Club for children in grades 3 and 4 will meet on Monday, Feb. 10th at 7 pm.

We will be discussing books from our Oversize collection. These books that are too tall to fit on regular library shelves often get overlooked so we will be taking the time to investigate the wide variety stories in this collection. Please stop by the Main Library children's room to look through this collection you may never have noticed before and pick a book to read before the meeting.

The Phoenix Book Club for children in grades 5-8 meets on the second Tuesday of each month to discuss a variety of books. The Club will meet on Tuesday, Feb. 11th at 7 p.m. at the Main Library.

Each year the American Library Association gives out many different awards to authors and illustrators. The most well-known children's literature awards are the Newbery and Caldecott medals, but those aren't the only ones. This month we'll be reading books that have won the Newbery Medal or Newbery Honor in the past five years. Pick an award winner and decide for yourself if you think it deserved to win.

Don't worry if you're new to the group. We're always happy to meet new readers!

February School Vacation Week Events

During February school vacation week join us at all library locations for puppets, crafts and movies. Check out the schedule below for details.

Rosalita's Puppets

Tuesday, Feb. 18th at 10:30 a.m. in the large meeting room at the main library join Charlotte Dore of Rosalita's Puppets for a marionette puppet show featuring a princess a unicorn, a dog and more. In Search of the Unicorn, a princess dreams of unicorns and finally proves to her uncle that they truly do exist. This show's many puppets include a fairy, a unicorn and a dog. For families with children ages 4 and older.

Drop in Craft

Make a crown fit for a King or Queen. Stop by the library this week and design a royal topper. Pick the day and time that works best for you. This project is suitable for all ages, you're your crown as simple of as elaborate as you like. Materials will be available at the Adams Shore branch on Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 18th from 2-4. Make your crown at the Wollaston branch on Wednesday evening Feb. 19th from 6-8. On Thursday afternoon, Feb. 20th make a crown before or after the movie at the North Quincy materials will be available from 2-4. Crown supplies will ba available at the Main Library on Friday morning Feb. 21st from 10-12.

Movies

Thursday, Feb. 20th at 10 a.m. join us in the large meeting room at the Main Library for a showing of Disney's *Planes.

Dusty Crophopper is a little cropduster plane with a fear of heights and a crazy dream of being a racer. While his friends need convincing, Dusty gets the training he needs from Skipper, a veteran fighter, and qualifies for the Wings Across the World race. In the event, Dusty finds competitors who soon learn that there is something special about this underdog as he is tested to his physical and emotional limits. In doing so, Dusty soon finds enemies, and more importantly friends, who are inspired by his dream. In the face of all obstacles, the winner of this air race will be anyone's guess.

Thursday, Feb. 20th at 2:30 p.m. join us at the North Quincy Branch Library for a showing of Disney's *Tinker Bell and the Lost Treasure.

This year's Autumn Revelry promises to be something special. A blue harvest moon will rise, allowing the fairies to restore the Pixie Dust Tree- the source of all their magic. But when Tinker Bell accidentally puts all of Pixie Hollow in jeopardy, she mist venture out across the sea on a secret quest to set things right. Tink with some help from her friend Terence and a charming, rascally firefly named Blaze braves an astonishing new world and discovers the greatest treasure of all.

Run Time 80 minutes, rated G.

No registration is required for school vacation week programs. Programs sponsored by the Friends of the Crane Public Library.

Free Children's Concert Feb. 15

"Fire in the Big-Top!", a musical tale for narrator, brass, and percussion, will be performed by the Fenway Brass Quintet on Saturday, Feb. 15 at 11 a.m. at St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church, 1 Linden St. in Quincy.

The church is fully accessible. More information is available at www.stcquincy.org or 617-472-0737.

"Fire in the Big-Top!" tells the story of Tom and Maggie, two kids growing up in the 1890's, who save their town when a fire breaks out at the circus. In this interactive performance, children sing along with the musicians, make "fire sounds", and learn about the brass and percussion instruments while they hear the story set to music. The piece is suitable for elementary school children and younger, and lasts about 40 minutes. After the concert, attendees will have the chance to see the brass and percussion instruments up-close and meet the musicians.

"Fire in the Big-Top!" was composed by Quincy resident and Wheaton College music professor Delvyn Case, who has been involved in numerous community music events in Quincy over the past decade. It was originally commissioned by the Portland Symphony Orchestra, which performed it at schools and libraries across the state of Maine during the 2012-13 concert season.

Quincy Kiwanis Club Valentine Breakfast Feb. 9

The Quincy Kiwanis Club invites guests to attend a special Valentine Pancake Breakfast on Sunday, Feb. 9 from 8 to 11 a.m. at 1000 Southern Artery in Quincy.

Special Valentine themed surprises are planned for that morning. A full menu of, pancakes, sausages, eggs, fresh fruit and juice, coffee and tea will be served.

Children are invited to attend this event as it is planned as a family affair.

The breakfast will also include raffles.

Admission is $5.

Beaches Commission Public Hearing Feb. 1

The Metropolitan Beaches Commission (MBC) will hold a regional meeting to review the preliminary findings from the 2013 Metropolitan Beaches Commission hearings on Saturday, Feb. 1 from 10 a.m. to noon at the UMass Boston Campus Center (University Drive East, Boston, MA 02125).

Residents and beachgoers will be asked to review the preliminary findings of the Commission. They will also be invited to provide additional input to ensure that the Commission got things right during the 2013 hearings.

The information collected from the regional hearing will inform the Commission's upcoming report and will identify and showcase economic development and capital investment opportunities for local communities made possible by public investment in clean water and better beaches in our region's waterfront neighborhoods and beachfront communities. The final report is expected in the late Spring 2014.

The Commission, chaired by Senator Tom McGee of Lynn, was originally established in 2006 and reconvened in 2013 by the Massachusetts Legislature to assess the state of the Boston Harbor region's public beaches located in Nahant, Lynn, Revere, Winthrop, East Boston, South Boston, Dorchester, Quincy and Hull.

To RSVP for the meeting email info@savetheharbor.org or call (617) 451-2860. For more information, visit www.savetheharbor.org/mbc2013.

Manicotti - Made With 3 Ingredients

I was shopping recently in the supermarket, when a woman approached me and told me she had lost her recipe for manicotti that was printed a while ago in The Sun and would I write it again.

Manicotti is a crepe like pasta that only needs three ingredients, and they can be made ahead of time.

The mixture when done, resembles a pancake mix-just a little more liquidy.

I used a small skillet, which makes a perfect crepe all the time.

MANICOTTI

1- cup flour
2 eggs
1- cup water

Beat the eggs, and add the water and then the flour. Mix until well blended.

Brush the skillet with vegetable oil and measure out a quarter of a cup of the mixture. Spread it around until it covers all of the pan. They don't need to be turned.

When you remove the crepes, place them on a sheet of wax paper until they are ready for filling.

The following mixture is what I use, but any favorite filling is fine.

FILLING

1 bag of spinach (or frozen equivalent)
1- pound ricotta cheese
1- tablespoon fresh parsley (minced)
¼ cup grated Romano or Parmesan cheese
1 egg
Salt and pepper to taste

Beat the egg, and add the rest of the ingredients. Fill each crepe by placing a tablespoon or so in the center, and then form them into a roll.

In a baking pan, coat it with a little tomato sauce and place each manicotti side by side with the fold up. At this point if you are not going to cook them right away, cover and refrigerate them. When ready for baking, pour tomato sauce over each one, cover and bake in a 350-degree oven for 30 minutes or until done.

Pork Chops, Veggies & Win

Recently I found a different way to cook pork chops. Sometimes they can be a little tough, but this way, they were so tender and not dry. I used boneless pork chops and cut them in pieces.

EASY PORK SAUTÉ

4 boneless pork chops (cut in pieces)
3 tablespoons olive oil
2 carrots (cut up)
2 stalks celery (cut up)
1 small onion (sliced)
1 tablespoon flour
½ cup white wine

In the hot oil, sauté the pork turning until lightly browned on each side. Remove from the pan and set aside.

In the same pan, add the onion, carrots and the celery. Cook for a couple of minutes, and then add the wine and the flour cooking until the vegetables are half cooked.

Add the pork, cover and simmer for one hour. It can also be baked in the oven, covered until done.

Supervised Recreation Swimming Winter Schedule Starts Monday

Quincy Recreation Department winter swim schedule for supervised recreational swimming at the Lincoln Hancock Community School Pool will go into effect on Monday, Feb. 3, announces Director Barry Welch.

The new schedule is:

Family Swimming on Monday, Wednesday and Fridays from 6:30 p.m. to 7:15 p.m.; Tuesday and Thursday from 6 p.m. to 6:50 p.m. and Sundays from 1 p.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Senior lap swim Tuesday through Friday 7 p.m. to 7:45 p.m.

Adult lap swims Monday through Friday 8 p.m. to 8:45 p.m. and Sundays from 2:40 to 3:45 p.m.

The pool is located on Water Street in Southwest Quincy, and has six lanes, diving boards, and recessed stairs for easy entry. Locker room facilities for both men and women with child changing platforms are also available. All swims are supervised by recreation department staff lifeguards that are accredited to the standards of the American Red Cross. Participants may pay a guest fee or purchase a membership under a variety of plans. Memberships and guest passes are sold at the time of the swims in the lower lobby of the swimming facility. For additional information please contact the Quincy Recreation Department at 617 376 1394 or www quincyrec.com.

Winter Olympics Topic At Adams Academy

Quincy Historical Society will mark the upcoming Winter Olympics with an afternoon program Wednesday, Feb. 5 at 2 p.m. at the Adams Academy.

David Hodgdon, director of Blue Hill Adventure and Quarry Museum and founder of the Blue Hills' Nordic Ski Patrol program, will present a slide show based on his personal perspective on the 2002 Salt Lake Olympics.

Hodgdon was a volunteer at the Salt Lake Games and established a Nordic National Ski Patrol there. His images provide a detailed sense of both the competition and the pageantry of the games. Everyone is welcome. There is no admission fee.

'Have A Heart' Feb. 7

City Council Notebook

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council accepted nearly $21,000 in donations during its first regular meeting of the new year.

During the Jan. 21 meeting, the council accepted a $15,000 donation to the Fire Department from Joel and Kimberly Hanrahan. The council also accepted $250 from the Grossman Companies and $50 from A. Demoney, both earmarked for the Fire Department.

In addition, the council accepted a $5,000 gift from Eastern Bank to the Mayor's Charity Cup Golf Tournament Fund. The Police Department's DARE (Drug Abuse Resistance Education) program received a total of $610 from various donors – $300 from Yellow Cab of Quincy, $250 from Eco Muffler Centers, $50 from Nicholas and Suzanne Malone, and $10 from Regina Kingsbury.

Three members of the city's Parks and Recreation Board were unanimously re-appointed by the council.

Re-appointed for new terms were Jack Nigro, Josephine Shea, and School Committeeman Paul Bregoli.

The Parks and Recreation Board consists of nine members. The mayor appoints six of those members, one from each of Quincy's six wards. The council appoints the remaining three members, one of whom must be a member of the School Committee.

A request to make the former Central Middle School available for disposition was referred to the finance committee.

The school first opened in 1894 as a high school and closed in October once the new Central opened. On Oct. 27, the School Committee voted to declare the building as no longer required or suitable to serve as a public school building, the first step in authorizing the city to sell the property.

The old Central, at 1012 Hancock St., is currently in a Residential B zoning district.

City Council President Joseph Finn held a moment of silence prior the start of the meeting in honor of the late Peter Kenney. Mr. Kenney served as the executive secretary (chief of staff) to Mayor Francis McCauley from 1982 until 1990, and was later appointed to the Parks and Recreation Board by Mayor James Sheets. He died Jan. 18 at the age of 65, following a long battle with cancer.

"I would like to invite everyone to stand for a moment of silence to remember especially the members of our armed services, both here and abroad, but also this is evening I would like to remember Peter Kenney, former executive secretary under Frank McCauley, a great public servant and citizen of the City of Quincy, and to keep him in mind this evening, as well as his family," Finn said.

New Technology Committee Approved

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council unanimously approved the creation of new committee to review the city's technology.

Council President Joseph Finn first announced his plans to create the new committee, known as municipal technology and information management committee, during a speech following his election as council president on Jan. 6.

Before the council voted to approve the new committee on Jan. 21, Finn told his colleagues he wanted to create the committee because of concerns that had been raised about technology available to councillors. The committee will also explore technologies being utilized by other communities to see if they could be used in Quincy.

"A number of councillors have spoken to me about some of their issues or concerns specifically with the technology available to them as councillors within the council office, but also questions related to the human resources available to the City Council – to its members – in terms of serving your various constituencies in the wards and at-large," Finn said.

"That, coupled with the fact that all I've heard since coming up here for many years about the various technologies that are being applied in various municipalities around Greater Boston and throughout Massachusetts. This is probably the time to use our own bully pulpit in some regards to explore some of those and get some of those out."

The new committee will consist of five members selected by Finn. Finn has indicated that he would appoint Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest as the committee's first chairwoman.

Begins 35th Year In City Council Post

Reardon Re-Elected Clerk Of Committees

By SCOTT JACKSON

Members of the City Council unanimously re-elected Jeanne Reardon as clerk of committees for the upcoming year.

Reardon is entering her 35th year as clerk of committees. As part of the role she is responsible for helping to compile the agenda for each meeting, and keeps items at the ready in the event that they are taken out of committee during the meetings.

JEANNE REARDON is sworn in to her 35th year as the City Council's Clerk of Committees by City Clerk Joseph Shea Jan. 21. Quincy Sun Photo/Scott Jackson

Councillor Michael McFarland, who served as council president in both 2012 and 2013, nominated Reardon for the position during the council's meeting on Jan. 21. He said Reardon has been an asset to many councillors and council presidents during her time as clerk of committees.

"It gives me great honor to re-appoint Jeanne Reardon clerk of committees. Jeanne is starting with her 17th different council president this evening and she has served sitting with the City Council for 34 years, even though she's only 29 years old," McFarland said. "Her work goes without mention. She has been a help to many councillors and many council presidents over the years. It is a distinguished honor to nominate her as the clerk of committees for the Quincy City Council for the year 2014."

Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin seconded the nomination, saying he hoped Reardon continues to serve on as clerk of committees for years to come.

"Jeanne has been a tremendous resource for all of us who sit here on this council, especially when we begin as newbies, so to speak," Coughlin said. "She's been a reliable source of information and historian of how things work here. Her continued work on behalf of this council is something I hope will go on for several more years to come. I know that she's thought about stepping aside from time-to-time and speaking for myself, and I'm sure for others, I'm thrilled that she continues on and I'm happy to endorse her nomination for yet another term."

Injured in an accident?
Should you talk to a lawyer?

Maria Droste Presents Annual Service Awards

Good Shepherd's Maria Droste Counseling Services based in Quincy recently presented its annual awards in recognition of great service to the agency.

Chris and Jim Driscoll were honored with The Personal Commitment Award. The award is presented to the person/persons who epitomize the "Family Principles" that the Good Shepherd Maria Droste Agency holds in high esteem. Recipients are devoted to their individual family as well as to their community.

The Driscolls are friends of Marie Droste. The award was given to this charitable couple for their work at One Life at a Time. The organization is a non-profit operation established in 2008 in response to the rise in unemployment in the New England area.

The Driscolls' journey is both inspiring and noble and it has become the basis for their work at One Life at a Time. Their organization has helped over 8,000 individuals of all education levels and professional backgrounds with career building essentials so they can obtain and retain employment.

Because Maria Droste often relies on the generosity of area businesses, each year the Agency recognizes one of those special businesses with a Corporate Award. This year, Lantana's was recognized for their support.

Maurice and Joan Hart started a small catering business out of their Roslindale home in 1956. Growth forced them to move to the HP Hood plant in Dorchester and then again to accommodate their success to a larger facility in Randolph.

Lantana's is a family business and the current CEO, Paul Hart, accepted this year's Maria Droste Corporate Award given this year to his organization for their continued help and support they have given Maria Droste each year for their annual fundraising event.

For the first time this year, Maria Droste presented the Agency Award named in memory of its late director, Sister Lorraine Bernier. The first award was presented to Lorraine's family. Her sisters and their spouses have faithfully been an integral part of the agency's annual event for many years and have helped in many ways, including the auction tables.

The committee voted to give this first award to the Bernier family in gratefulness for their support and in the hope they will remain part of the Maria Droste family.

Since the agency's opening in 1992, the staff and volunteers have provided support to individuals, couples and family groups on an adjustable fee scale based on the client's ability to pay. The sliding fee scale is made possible by the generosity of support people in the community not unlike those given awards this year.

MARALIN MANNING, Maria Droste Founding Board Member, Kevin Mulvey, Maria Droste Board President and Senator John Keenan.

STEPHEN AND ANNE DesROCHE attended the recent Maria Droste Awards ceremony.

SISTER ALISH McPARTLAND and Director Michael Shanahan enjoy a moment during the 2013 Maria Droste Awards.

$1.5 Million For Three Sewer Replacements

when the project began in 2011, and that the problems with the line itself weren't found until the fall of 2012.

"There were backup issues up and down the street that were reported to me from the folks who work in the department. It was more gravity and those types of issues rather than compromise of the sewer or a depression of the sewer line," he explained. "Once that issue became known to us in the fall of 2012 we brought in geotechnical people to confirm that, then we moved in with a redesign."

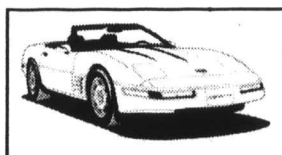

Before the council's vote, Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes urged her colleagues to approve the appropriation to ensure the project could go ahead as quickly as possible.

"Folks on Rice Road have been very patient. Some to a great extent have suffered sewer backups. I just think it's important right now that we make sure that this project gets done in as timely manner as possible," she said.

"As Councillor Gutro rightly pointed out this has been an almost four-year process. Commissioner Raymondi also did a neighborhood meeting with me, when I came in, with the residents on Rice Road so this is something they've been dealing with for a long time – sewer backups, things like that. I want to get it done as quickly as possible for those folks."

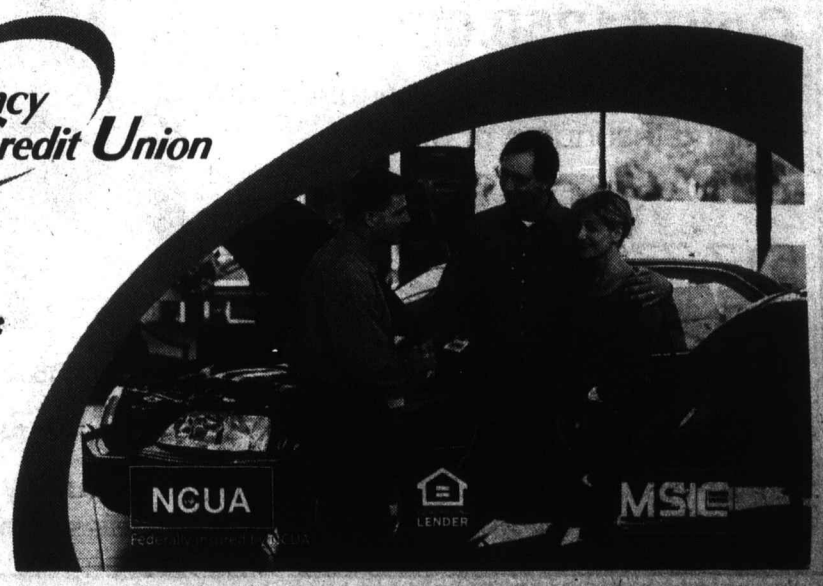

The money for the sewer projects was transferred from the Sewer Enterprise Stabilization Account. The sewer stabilization fund will be left with approximately $400,000 after this appropriation, according to Raymondi, but another $1.2 million in state-certified free cash is ready to be transferred into that account in either February or March.

The city's Water Enterprise Stabilization Account currently has about $2.6 million in it, Raymondi added, with another $400,000 in free cash that will be transferred in. The total amount in the two stabilization funds after the infusion of free cash will be approximately $4.6 million, roughly the same amount that was in the accounts before the appropriation for the three sewer projects.

JOINT BASE SAN ANTONIO-LACKLAND -

The son-in-law of a Quincy couple scrubs into the sterile operating room and reviews the instruments he will need. High-tech life-support machines surround him as his assistant draws blood from the patient's hairy paw.

This 6-year-old German shepherd is just one of the many military working dogs he, his fellow veterinarians and the animal care specialists who work for them provide medical care for on a daily basis.

Army Maj. Sean Majoy, whose wife, Kimberly, is the daughter of Colleen and Richard Lockhead, Willow Lane, Quincy, is the chief of the Medicine Clinic within the Department of Defense Military Working Dog Veterinary Service here at the Lt. Col. Daniel E. Holland Military Working Dog Hospital. The hospital is the only level four veterinary hospital, a one-of-a-kind facility providing primary and specialty care for government working dogs serving worldwide, including dogs assigned to the Transportation Security Administration or dogs undergoing training as part of the National Explosives Detection Canine Team Program.

The Veterinary Service has both a hospital and a clinic here and a team of 30 staff members combined. They provide complete veterinary care for about 800 on-base kenneled dogs. They also oversee all care of federally-owned dogs that are getting discharged from federal service. Typically, they see 25 dogs a week for surgeries, 100 dogs a week for dental work, 40 to 60 dogs a week for check-ups and 60 a week for physical therapy.

Majoy has been a veterinarian in the U.S. Army Veterinary Corps for eight years. His specialty is in emergency and critical care medicine. He said the biggest challenge he faces on the job is the caseload.

"The most challenging part of the job at our hospital is the sheer caseload. We care for more than 1,000 dogs on site and see more than 60 cases a day," said the 1991 graduate of Doherty Memorial High School, Worcester. He earned his Doctor of Veterinary Medicine and master's degree in 2006 from Tufts Cummings School of Veterinary Medicine, North Grafton.

As the chief of medicine at the hospital here, Majoy said he enjoys not only taking care of the dogs but also sharing his knowledge with his fellow Soldiers.

The hospital staff of about 30 federal employees and Army servicemembers care for more than 800 military working dogs kenneled at Joint Base San Antonio-Lackland and care for all Department of Defense dogs seeking care before they are discharged from federal service.

"I love working with the military working dogs and teaching Soldiers how to be great technicians," he said.

Majoy said he received the U.S. Army Health Professions Scholarship in 2003 as a means of paying for his veterinary education but also joined for other reasons.

"I have a family history of service, and I wanted to do my part in the wake of the events of Sept. 11," he said.

Majoy has been in the Army since 2006 and has been stationed in Florida and the Republic of Korea. He said he plans on continuing to serve.

Stuck Indoors? Don't Just Sit There

THIS IS A HAMMER

By Samantha Mazzotta

Q: I've heard plenty of my neighbors complain about being stuck inside this winter and unable to do much outdoor maintenance work. Well, I've been around long enough to know there's plenty of work to do inside, too. Think you can remind folks about some important stuff they could be doing while waiting for the weather to break? -- Oldster Stan, Buffalo, N.Y.

A: Stan, that's very true. While being stuck indoors can be maddening, there are plenty of smaller home-maintenance tasks to take care of -- even if it's too cold or snowy to get out to the home-improvement store. Here are a few:

• Descale your coffeemaker or electric kettle: Check the manufacturer's cleaning instructions online, but in most drip brewers you can flush several ounces of white vinegar through the system, rinsing thoroughly with clear water.

• Clean your dishwasher: Remove any parts that can be lifted out easily, such as racks, utensil holders, wash arms and filter. Soak smaller parts in a sinkful of vinegar-water solution and wipe down the racks, dishwasher interior and the door seal. Rinse and replace all the items, then run the empty dishwasher through a cycle to finish.

• Clean the garbage disposal by adding a few ice cubes and lemon peels and cycling it. Rinse with running water.

• Clean the wash tub of your clothes washer by filling it with hot water and one quart of white vinegar. Let it agitate for a minute and then pause the cycle so that the water sits for an hour; then resume the wash cycle to rinse.

• Vacuum the space in your clothes dryer where the lint filter sits. Inspect the dryer vent for lint buildup and remove any lint you find.

• Tighten the hardware on cabinets and drawers -- knobs, handles and hinges.

• Check child- and pet-proof latches and outlet covers, and replace any that are broken.

• Vacuum out the heat registers in each room, being sure to replace the floor vent covers immediately afterward so pets don't accidentally crawl in.

• Change the air filter on your heating system (you knew I'd get that one in here).

• Rotate houseplants, shifting them to new locations to vary the air and light they receive.

HOME TIP: Take a tour of your home and make note of as many improvement or maintenance tasks that you can find. Then create a schedule to tackle a few of them at a time.

Send your questions or home tips to ask@thisisahammer.com.

Normand Grenier Honored As 'Housing Advocate Of The Year'

NeighborWorks Southern Mass. President Normand Grenier recently received the Norma Moseley Housing Advocate of the Year Award from the Mass. Mortgage Bankers Foundation.

Presented at the Mass. Mortgage Bankers Association's annual dinner and installation of officers held at Spinelli's in Lynnfield, the annual award recognizes an "outstanding consumer advocate dedicated to issues of fair housing in Massachusetts."

Grenier served as executive director of Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore – now known as NeighborWorks Southern Mass. – for 23 years before being named the nonprofit agency's president in 2009. He facilitated its growth from a grassroots neighborhood housing rehabilitation agency with a staff of four to its current status as one of the region's leading community development organizations. Currently,

NORMAND GRENIER

NeighborWorks of Southern Mass. has offices in Quincy, Brockton and New Bedford and a $2 million annual operating budget. Under his leadership, the organization has developed more than 170 units of affordable housing and established partnerships with other nonprofit agencies, including Habitat for Humanity, DOVE, Father Bill's Mainspring and the Mayor's Commission on the Family.

A Lakeville resident, Grenier is a past chairman of the Interfaith Housing Partnership and previously served on the Federal Home Loan Bank's Affordable Housing Advisory Council. In 1998, the City of Quincy recognized his contributions by presenting him with the HUD Community Development Award.

Quincy's Audrey Roller Serving Aboard USS Leyte Gulf

2009 NQHS Graduate Promoted To The Rank Of Petty Officer

AUDREY ROLLER (right), a 2009 graduate of North Quincy High School, was recently promoted to the rank of petty officer, second class aboard the USS Leyte Gulf while the ship was at sea. Capt. Dean T. Rawls (left), the ships commanding officer, issued the promotion.

By SCOTT JACKSON

Audrey Roller, a 2009 North Quincy High School graduate, wanted to pursue a career in education until she decided to enlist in the U.S. Navy because of her family's history of military service.

Roller had been working at Jack and Jill Child Care in Marina Bay after she graduated from North, and wanted to become a teacher. In 2010, she decided to enlist in the Navy because of the sense of patriotism she inherited from her family – both of Roller's grandfathers served in the military, and her uncles had been deployed to Vietnam.

"I grew up in a family that was extremely patriotic. I was pursuing being a teacher and was working at Jack and Jill in Marina Bay. But one day I felt I was ready for bigger things," Roller said. "I walked in and told them I wanted to join."

Roller, who was recently promoted to the rank of petty officer, second class, is currently assigned to the USS Leyte Gulf (CG-55), a Ticonderoga-class guided missile cruiser. The ship is completing composite unit training and joint task for exercise of the Atlantic of coast of the southern United States with Carrier Strike Group 2.

Aboard the ship, Roller serves as a machinist's mate. She works as an engineer, operating and maintain the Leyte Gulf's steam turbines and reduction gears and machinery such as turbogenerators, pumps, oil purifiers and the ships air conditioning and water desalination systems. Prior to joining the Navy, Roller had no experience in engineering but chose to serve as a machinist's mate, her score on the ASVAB (Armed Services Aptitude Vocational Battery) test qualified her to train for that rating.

"They told me 'you can be a mechanic,'" Roller said. "It was something out of my ballpark, but I really like my job."

Prior to her time aboard the Leyte Gulf, Roller served on the USS Kearsarge (LHD-3), a Wasp-class amphibious assault ship from 2010 to 2011. During that time the Kearsarge was deployed to the Mediterranean Sea as part of Operation Odyssey Dawn as part of the international response to the Libyan Civil War.

The Kearsarge operated off the Libyan coast for three months in 2011. During that time, Osprey helicopters launched from the ship successfully a U.S. Air Force pilot whose F-15E crashed in Libya following mechanical problems.

While deployed onboard the Kearsarge, Roller met her husband Andrew who was at the time an engineman on the ship. The couple had a child together, and Audrey Roller took a leave of absence before returning to the Navy, when she was assigned to the Leyte Gulf.

Roller's tour of duty with the Navy ends this year and she plans on leaving the service at that time. She had considered being a career sailor, but Roller's plans changed after she had her daughter because she misses being able to spend time with her.

"It kills me," Roller said.

When she leaves the Navy Roller plans to work towards becoming a teacher, once again.

"It's definitely on my to do list," Roller said. "I loved it. Jack and Jill opened a lot of doors for me."

'One Night Only' Cabaret Concerts At The Common Market

JM Productions and The Common Market Restaurant of Quincy announce their final two "One Night Only" Holiday Cabaret Concert Series for 2014 featuring musical acts with national and local performance credits.

"We want to bring the very best entertainment - at affordable prices - to the area so our guests can enjoy dinner at The Common Market, sip a glass of wine at the shows while listening to some great live music," said Greg McDonald, owner and general manager of The Common Market.

Feb. 14th at 7 & 9 pm

North Shore Acappella "I Only Have Eyes For You" Valentines Day Show

For over 30 years North Shore Acappella has excited audiences throughout New England adding an experienced blend of harmony, rhythm, and tempo to songs from the 1940s through today. Every performance is arranged in a way that showcases each singer in a lead role – a trait that very few Acappella groups in the country can claim.

In 2011 North Shore Acappella was featured on NBC's The Sing Off. North Shore Acappella has appeared as the opening act for The Temptations, The Platters, Ben E. King, Johnny Maestro, Al Jarreau, Roberta Flack, Frankie Vallie, and Gene Pitney.

March 15th at 7 & 9 pm

March is CABARET MONTH

O'Connie, O'Brenda, O'Patsy & Me starring Sheila Fahey of Neponset with friends.

Singer and comedienne Sheila Fahey has been doing the "Connie, Brenda, Patsy & Me" show for a few years now (tribute to the music of Connie Francis, Brenda Lee and Patsy Cline), and wanted to do something different. Because it's the time of year, she thought she would use some of the songs from that show and add some Irish music.

Sheila comes from a big family and tells the story of her Irish family members and their traditions. Sheila is a masterful storyteller. For many years in JM's "What Christmas Means To Me" Sheila did a hilarious Christmas monologue.

All Seats are $20 in advance and $30 at the door on the evening of the show(s). Seating is general admission, first come, first served. Doors open one half hour before each show.

Purchase tickets in advance call Brown Paper Tickets directly 24/7 at 1-800-838-3006 or www.brownpapertickets.com/event/447115

JM's shows sell out every year as families, groups and reunions are held at these events. The seating is limited. Call The Common Market Restaurant at 617-773-9532 to make reservations pre and post show.

A 'Grand' Night For North Quincy's Grace Geary

legacy. Coach Nolan passed away in 2008.

"If I had one wish, it would be that he could have been here to see me do it," said Geary. "I think of him a lot especially in this place. It was where he spent so much time. His gym. He was an awesome man. We were very close."

For Grace's mother, Sheila, the story that covers three generations had come full circle. As a little girl, she watched her father coach games for North Quincy. As a mother, she watched her daughter score her 1000th point for the team and in the gym which will always be a hallowed place for her family.

"I looked around the first time I came into the North Quincy gym this year and realized I started coming here in 1965," said Sheila Nolan. "Absolutely, it's special because Grace accomplished it here as a North Quincy player. I know how proud my father would have been."

It was important that she score her 1,000th point at home. It was a matter of family.

"I wanted it to come at home," said Geary. "So many family members, players and coaches, have come through here. I wanted it to be here."

The 1,000th point came with 51 seconds left in the third period. Sophomore Marissa McGue ran down a loose ball near the baseline, fired a no-look, over-the-shoulder pass which Geary caught on the drive for a soft finish at the hoop.

"Marissa made the play," said Geary. "Haley (McKay) passed me the ball and I almost turned it over. Marissa saved it and threw it behind her shoulders to me. I caught it at full speed and all I had to do was finish. It was a great pass."

Coach Jess Worden called timeout. Players rushed off the bench and surrounded Geary. There was an announcement and a standing ovation. Athletic Director Michael Joyce retrieved the ball. It will be engraved and presented to Geary before the Rockland game at home Thursday night. Worden gave her flowers. Geary raced across the court, hugged her mother and gave her mother the flowers.

"I was really excited, but I was also a little shocked," said Geary.

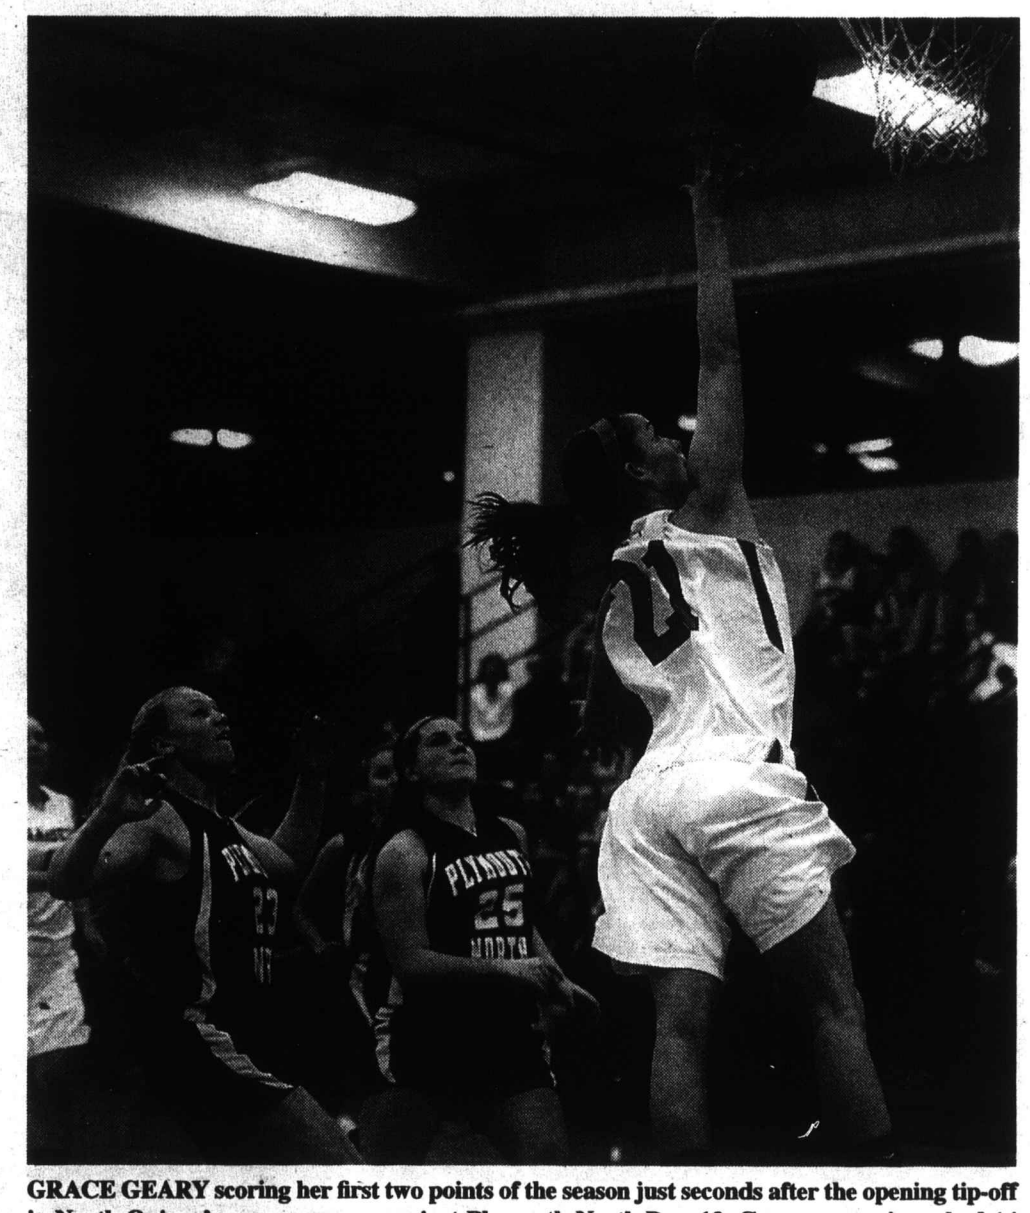

The reason for the disbelief is that points mean very little to her. When she came to the gym Friday night, she didn't know she needed 30. Her coach, her team, and the whole gym knew it, but Geary did not. As the game progressed, she had no idea she was close. After she scored the milestone bucket, she didn't know why the coach called time, why the game stopped, why all these people charged around her laughing and pointing to the ceiling. Shouldn't she be getting back on defense?

"I knew before the game I was close. I knew I needed 25, 30, 40, but I wasn't sure," she said. "During the game, I had no idea, no idea at all. I had no idea why everybody jumped up off the bench."

Playing the game correctly, not scoring points, means a great deal to Geary. She forced nothing. She scored 30 points in less than three periods of play, and she took nothing but good shots. When she got the ball, the first thing she did was look up, look up for the open player. She may not be the most unselfish player to ever score 1,000, but she is certainly in the top three.

"The first thing you always do is look for the open shooter. Always," said Geary.

She knows the game so well. In the first half, Hingham played man-to-man. Geary scored 17 points. All were on drives. She did not take a jump shot. Against a man-to-man, a basketball player drives. It's the way to play the game. In the third period, Hingham went to a 2-3 zone. Geary buried two threes and a short jumper. Against a zone, a basketball player shoots jump shots. It's the way to play the game.

GRACE GEARY scoring her first two points of the season just seconds after the opening tip-off in North Quincy's season opener against Plymouth North Dec. 12. Geary – a senior – had 14 points, including 10 in the second quarter. The senior starred at Falmouth High (scoring 851 points) before transferring to NQHS. Quincy Sun File Photo/Robert Bosworth

One more thing. On those two threes? The follow through was perfect, just perfect. Just like her grandfather had showed her.

"I remembered. I remembered," she said with a smile.

Geary transferred to North at the beginning of the season, her senior season. She had starred at Falmouth for three years and played on three tournament teams and two league champions. She scored 851 points at Falmouth, but there was little thought of the magic 1,000 mark.

She doesn't think about points at North. She didn't think about them at Falmouth. Give her a choice between scoring two and winning and scoring 20 and losing. She doesn't hesitate. She'll happily go home with the two and the win. Someone taught her well.

"I think more of team results. There wasn't a lot of talk of 1,000 points when I was at Falmouth," said Geary. "When I left, someone told me that I had a chance to get it. When I came to North, people started to talk more about it."

When she moved to Quincy, there was always the family connection. Her aunt Siobhan is the manager for the North Quincy team. Her mother was back in her hometown. She marveled at the number of people who were touched by her grandfather. She thought back to the walks to the bus stop when she was a little girl and the talks, the rich private time that is lasting and unique to grandparents and grandchildren.

"He lived with us when I was in elementary school," said Geary. "Every day he would walk me to the bus stop and pick me up after school. We became close. We'd talk about basketball and a lot of other things, too. I'll always remember those times."

"That was their special time, the walks before and after school. It was just two of them and they became close," said her mother. "Grace is the youngest of his eight grandchildren. We used to joke that she was the only one who couldn't remember when he had black hair. By the time Grace came along, it was all gray."

Always, there was basketball. Her older brother Nolan and her older sister Olivia played the game. Her mother played the game. Her grandfather played with her in the driveway. There were kind words of advice. There was a hoop to shoot at and basketballs lying around the yard which sometimes found their way into the house.

"Especially during basketball season," her mother smiled. "My father introduced her to the game. I think Grace was about two, just old enough to stand up and she just loved to play and play and play."

It has worked out just fine. She is not a scorer. She is a basketball player. She is an exceptional passer, a player so strikingly unselfish that the 1,000-point total takes on greater meaning. She does not look for her shot. She looks for the best shot. And the follow through, those two words that will always stay with her. Right out of a textbook. The wrist stays straight and firm, the ball spins off the finger tips, the hand reaches out for the rim. Maybe, just maybe, the basketball gene can be passed through the generations.

And lastly, there was her wish. Above all, she wanted her grandfather to see her score this point for this team in this gym. Perhaps he did. In a far better place, Coach Nolan may have had a look down and seen his granddaughter score her 1,000th point for his school in his gym on her special night. He would have been well pleased. Wishes really do come true.

QUINCY'S DREW MYERS draws an offensive foul against Silver Lake's Pat Cotter but the Lakers rallied for a 62-60 win over the Presidents last Friday night at QHS. Quincy was led by J.T. Bain who scored 28 points while Silver Lake got 28 points from Tanner Bouchard. The Presidents also got offensive production from James Lam (10 points), Colin Evans (9 points) and Myers (8 points). On Monday, the Presidents bounced back edging Scituate 53-52. The victory lifted Quincy's record to 5-2 in the Keenan Division of the Patriot League and 7-5 overall.

Quincy Nips Scituate In Thriller, 53-52

By BILL GRIFFIN

When he practices his jump shots in his driveway or on the playground, he plays imaginary games in imaginary situations. He pretends his team trails by two with ten seconds left. He is in his own world. He is Paul Pierce. He is being guarded by LeBron James. The game is at stake. He strokes the three and it goes in. It always goes in. His team always wins. Imagination is a wonderful thing.

Monday night, Drew Myers shot them for real against Scituate. Three times, he took a three-point jumper in the fourth period. Three times, Quincy trailed when he took his shot. Three times, he made them. Myers' clutch marksmanship and a brilliant all-around game by James Lam lifted the Presidents to an absolutely necessary 53-52 Patriot League win over the Sailors in a thriller at the Quincy High gym.

"Paul Pierce is my favorite player, so I always pretend I'm him going up against LeBron," smiled Myers. "I like taking the pressure shot. I've always been like that, and it means a lot to me that my teammates have the confidence in me to take them."

The victory boosted Quincy to 5-2 in the Keenan Division and 7-5 overall. It kept the Presidents tied with Whitman-Hanson and a game behind Silver Lake in the race for first place. It also avoided back-to-back heartbreakers for the Presidents who fell to the Lakers, 62-60 Friday night.

"I told the kids before the game that if we lost to Scituate, first place was probably gone. Two losses in the division might be OK. Three would be too many," said coach Dave Parry.

It was a gem of a game. The largest lead was five points. There were six ties and 11 lead changes. The Sailors rode the inside play of Ben McLarey (17 points) and built fourth-period leads of 42-41, 49-44 and 52-47 with 2:10 left in the game. Enter Mr. Myers who shot all those jump shots as Mr. Pierce against Mr. James. The difference was this was hardly imaginary and there were no guarantees.

"We called all three plays for him," said Parry. "When he's in a groove, you think everything is going to go in."

Presidents Down Titans After Bowing To S-L

Quincy Girls Bounce Back Against Pembroke

By BILL GRIFFIN

Defense, effort, and patient, accurate passing are a good formula for success and Quincy's girls basketball team used it well in a Patriot League meeting with Pembroke Saturday afternoon.

The Presidents held Pembroke to just 17 points over the final three periods and broke open a difficult 2-3 zone with excellent passing for a 46-28 win over the Titans at the Quincy High gym.

"We had a little trouble with their zone early in the game, but our defense was fantastic," said coach Jeff Bretsch. "We were coming off a tough loss to Silver Lake, and we talked about playing with enthusiasm and confidence. That's what the players did."

Friday night, Quincy carried a seven-point lead into the final period only to fall to Silver Lake, 45-34 on the road. The Presidents played strong defense for three quarters and Gabby Jerahian scored 15 points, but a late Lakers' rally decided the game.

"We were in control of the game and it changed in one of those short bursts for Silver Lake. It was a difficult loss, but I was proud with the way we turned the page against Pembroke," said Bretsch whose club finished the week at 4-8.

Quincy trailed, 11-6 after the first period, but after that the Presidents' fullcourt trap and sticky halfcourt defense took over the game. The key to the press was simple. Effort. The honor roll is a long one. Jerahian and Courtney Ryan chased the ball and the passer at the point of the trap. Senior Kayla McArdle roamed the floor looking for steals and guarding any open shooters.

Caroline McBride played well at the back end of the press. Jill Mulvaney, Colleen Andrews, and Kailen Chapple contested every pass and shot. At one point, Jorgensen raced out from the pivot and knocked away a pass at midcourt. The next time you see a center hustling out to deflect a pass at midcourt, write down the date and time. It doesn't happen often.

"Effort is contagious and that's what happens today," said Brestch. "Kids like Kayla and Gabby play so hard that others see it, and it spreads to everyone. The good thing was we not only got turnovers, we turned them into fast-break chances which is the way we want to play."

Quincy was equally effective in the halfcourt defense. Jorgensen, who scored all her 15 points in the second half, controlled the rim, blocked shots and hauled down 12 rebounds. Chapple, McArdle and Jerahian pressured Pembroke's shooters and McBride supported the inside with good position and rebounding. Pembroke scored four in the second, seven in the third and six in the fourth. That is good defense.

"We played well in our halfcourt defense, especially in the second half. Just as with the fullcourt press, the key was hustle. The girls worked hard. I thought Caroline played an excellent game for us inside," said Bretsch.

Pembroke's zone held Quincy to six in the first period. The Presidents solved it with passing. They worked the ball around the perimeter, found the seam in the corner for Jerahian (14 points) and entry lanes inside to Jorgensen, They used the bounce pass beautifully, avoided turnovers and did not settle for any hasty shots. They took good shots, got layups off the break, and won going away putting up 40 points over the final three periods.

"Pembroke's a good scrappy team and they play a tough zone," said Bretsch. "We made some adjustments at the half. We needed to be patient with our passing and get the ball to certain spots to unlock it. We did that in the second half."

There were two decisive stretches to the game. Jorgensen sat early in the second period with foul trouble and Quincy down, 11-6. Jerahian ran the offense, the press started clicking and McBride (six points) had a big inside bucket and an offensive rebound which led to a Ryan jumper. Ryan also hit a three and two free throws by McArdle (six points) put Quincy up, 17-15 at intermission.

With its best player on the bench, Quincy went from down five to up two. The Presidents showed Bretsch the balance he had been looking for in recent games.

"That's what we've needed, to get more people involved and that happened in the second period," he said.

The second run came in the fourth when Quincy went on a 15-4 blitz to put away the game. The passing here was exceptional. All 15 points came either off assists or passes which led to free throws. Quincy scored all of its points in the period off good passing. Jerahian, Ryan and Chapple had assists. Chapple also buried a three. Jorgensen had a 11 in the burst as the passing opened up the middle and Quincy's talented sophomore went to work.

Quincy hosts Whitman-Hanson Friday night at 6:30 p.m.

North Quincy Boys Notch 12th Victory

Red Raiders Rally On Road To Defeat Hingham

By BILL GRIFFIN

There was the consistent and the amazing as North Quincy put up its 12th straight win without a defeat against Hingham Friday night.

The consistent was the play of senior forward Efthim Butka. Butka scored two huge baskets in an 8-0 run which rallied the Red Raiders from a two-point deficit in the fourth quarter for a 53-45 road win over the Harbormen in a Patriot League contest.

"Efthim came through for us when it counted," said North coach Kevin Barrett. "He has really expanded his game this year, but what impresses me more is the way he has taken on the leadership responsibility. When we're in a tough spot, especially on the road, he is the player we rally around."

There was more consistency from senior center Anthony Green who had 11 points, 13 rebounds, and six blocks. What is noteworthy is this is not the exception for Green, it is the rule. He is averaging 12 points, eight rebounds, and five blocks for the year. While Butka buried two big hoops to ignite the offense, Green protected the rim and shut down the Hingham offense.

His presence was also likely one reason why Hingham attempted a staggering 39 three-point jumpers in the game. If the inside is shut off, you night as well put them up. Count 'em. 39.

"Anthony has been tremendous all year and he was excellent against Hingham," said Barrett. "It was a tough, hard-fought win. Hingham is a good team and we needed everything Anthony gave us."

For the amazing, we go to North's little big man, senior guard Kyle Richardson who had 14 points and 14 rebounds. He played excellent defense, ran the offense and scored important points. He always does that. But 14 rebounds? He's 5'7". Before any chatter begins, these were 14 legitimate rebounds. There is no inflating of numbers here. The count is spot-on.

"We have a group that breaks down our films and does our stats. They said he had 14. They counted them on film," said Barrett.

This is not the first time Richardson has had a game-high in rebounds. However, 14 is exceptional, even by his standards. He is strong, tenacious, gets great position considering he is rebounding out of the point-guard spot, and he has instincts that cannot be taught.

"He reads the ball so well. He knows the angle it's coming off the rim and where the ball is going to end up," said "He has great hands. I can't tell you the number of times that I've seen him go into a scrum with three or four players and come out with the ball. The rebounds also don't show the number of 50-50 balls he gets."

Junior Solomon Umoren and Butka (14 points) also played terrific defense on Hingham's Tom Staley. Staley leads the Patriot League with an 18.0 per-game average, but North held him to 12.

"Solomon did a great job on him," said Barrett. "When he got four fouls, we moved Efthim onto Staley. Not only did Efthim score the big baskets in the fourth period, he played good defense on the leading scorer in the league."

It was a close game throughout. The score was tied 20-20 at the half. The Red Raiders were down by two early in the fourth in what is generally considered one of the two toughest road gyms (along with Whitman-Hanson) in the league. However, just as they did at Braintree, at Dorchester, at Scituate, and at Wareham, the Red Raiders delivered by going back to basics in another tough road test.

"I didn't think we contested shots or rebounded the way we should in the first half," said Barrett. "We cleaned up those things in the second half, and I think they were the big reasons we won the game."

Jackie Chen and Matt Gerakis were solid in the win for North while Greg Clarke, once again, gave the Red Raiders valuable minutes off the bench.

They were 12-0 at the end of last week. No North team had started that fast in over 40 years. However, coaches and players on excellent teams are not satisfied easily.

"We talk about complacency at practice all the time," said Barrett. "We tell them that just because you play a good first half in a game, it doesn't mean you are going to win. The same is true of our season. We're about halfway through our season. We played a good first half, now we need a good second half. Just like in a game. We have to keep improving every time we step on the floor in practice or in a game."

North is at Silver Lake Thursday in what will likely be a match between the two division leaders in the Patriot League. The Red Raiders host Middleboro Friday. Both games are at 6:30 p.m.

Quincy Nips Scituate, 53-52

Shot number one. Quincy trailed 42-41. Myers buried a three from the left wing for a 44-42 lead. Shot number two. Quincy was down 52-47. Myers drained a three from the left of the key despite being flattened. Shot number three. Quincy was down 52-50 with 1:45 left. Myers nailed another three from the left corner for the 53-52 lead which held up until the end. Just like in the driveway. Just like on the playground. Nothing but swishes

"I try not to think, to block everything out and just trust my shot," said Myers who had 15 points on five three-pointers.

Still there was defense to play. Center J.T. Bain timed a Scituate entry pass perfectly and cleanly swatted away a pass to McLarey. The Sailors had a final chance and possession with 11 seconds left. The Presidents man-to-man gave nothing, not an inch, not a sliver of open space. Lam forced a desperation heave by the Sailors at the buzzer which had no chance, and Quincy had the win it needed to stay alive in the division.

"J.T. anticipated that pass perfectly," said Parry. "We worked hard on defense all week in practice. The kids took their defense personally and did a great job of team defense on the last possession."

It took Myers and defense and drama to take away top billing from Lam who had 18 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists, and he was a lot better than a triple-double. All he did was lead all scorers, all rebounders, all passers, play excellent defense, set picks to free shooters and steal the ball. If he had scored two points, he still would have been the best player on the floor.

"He's nearly averaging a triple-double," said Parry. "He is the whole package. It is a pleasure to have the opportunity to coach him."

Bain had eight and Brendan Cunningham added six for Quincy who led 20-18 after one thanks mainly to Lam who had four points, four assists and two steals in the quarter. Scituate was up, 28-26 at the half, and Quincy led 39-37 after three. The Sailors opened it to five twice in the final period before Myers, Lam and the defense, which blanked Scituate over the final 2:40 of the game, kept Quincy in the chase for first.

"It was a great game," said Parry. "Scituate always plays excellent defense. They are well coached. They took us out of what we wanted to do and we didn't find a rhythm until Drew got hot at the end."

Bain had 28 while Lam added 10 points, 10 rebounds and nine assists in the Silver Lake game. Colin Evans had nine and Myers added eight. The Lakers won on a runner by Josh O'Neill with seven seconds left in the game.

Quincy is at Whitman-Hanson for another divisional showdown Friday night at 6:30 p.m.

NQ Girls Down Hingham

By BILL GRIFFIN

When a player scores 30 in less than three quarters, earns her 1000th career point, and controls the game with her passing, defense and ball-handling, it doesn't take Red Auerbach to figure out what was the main story of the game.

Senior Grace Geary did all this and more. Marissa McGue, Haley McKay and Maya Umoren chipped in with solid games and North Quincy passed the ball brilliantly again en route to a 66-44 Patriot League decision over Hingham at home Friday night.

In action Monday night, Geary and North played another strong game before falling on the road to unbeaten Duxbury, 49-41. Geary had 17 points and five steals while Umoren had nine points and six rebounds. McGue had eight points and seven rebounds, and McKay played excellent defense.

After Monday night's game, North was 9-3 overall and 7-1 in the league.

"Overall, I thought we played great," said coach Jess Worden after the Hingham contest. "It might have been Grace's best game of the season. I thought our defense was excellent, we rebounded well and I liked the way we passed the ball."

It was Geary's game. She had 17 at the half as North built a 28-11 lead two minutes into the second quarter and a 38-20 advantage at intermission. She simply took the ball to the hoop. All 17 points came off drives. She did not shoot a jump shot. She pushed the ball on the break, found the open player (four assists in the first half) and played excellent defense (six steals).

In the third period, Hingham went to a zone and Geary went to her jump shot. She drained a pair of threes, a foul-line jumper, cashed an offensive rebound for a traditional three-pointer and reached the 1000-point milestone with 51 seconds left in the period on a drive off a terrific pass from McGue. She had 13 in the period and 30 for the night. Her 1,000th put North up, 57-34. Geary did not play again in the game.

Geary drove, passed, handled the ball, ran the offense, shot threes, and rebounded at both ends of the floor. For most players, the night of their 1,000th point is all about scoring. For Geary, it was just the beginning of the story.

"Grace just understands the game so well," said Worden who was a 1,000-point scorer in her career at Bridgewater State. "She knows when to drive and when to shoot the jumper. She's a great passer. On defense, she has great anticipation for where the ball is going. That's why she has so many steals."

Senior guard Jane Minton missed the game with a concussion she suffered against Scituate. Worden looked to her seniors – Geary, McKay, and Umoren – and they delivered. McKay had six points and another lockdown job on defense. Umoren had 10 points, eight rebounds and controlled everything close to the basket.

"I talked to the seniors and told them with Jane out, they had to step up," said Worden. "Haley played great defense again. We put her on Hingham's top scorer and Haley held her scoreless for the first half."

On any other night, McGue would have earned first star. She had 13 points, four assists in three periods and showed a soft touch while finishing at full speed at the basket. She is a gifted athlete who plays hard defense, runs the floor with speed and effort, and creates chances off the fast break.

"Marissa played a great game," said Worden. "She is a good athlete and she improves every game. I like the way she runs the floor. If the defense doesn't get back quickly, she gives a good chances on the break."

And there was the passing. Against Scituate, it was Minton, McKay and Geary who opened up the game with their passing in the second half. Against Hingham, it was Geary, McKay and McGue who zipped the ball around the perimeter, used crisp bounce passes to open cutters, and made great decisions on the break – forcing nothing and finding the open shooter with a smart feed.

"Our passing has gotten better and better," said Worden. "I think it starts with the unselfishness of the seniors. We do passing drills and emphasize it in practice. It's not just one player, we have several players who pass well and make good decisions."

North hosts Rockland Thursday night at 6:30 p.m.

At State Coaches Invitational Meet

Brysons Run To Personal Bests

The training circumstances have been less than perfect of late with illnesses, midterm exams and snow storms throwing a wrench into any good training.

Despite all that Emily and Julia Bryson, two of the most dedicated and consistent training athletes in the state, managed to clock personal bests at the MSTCA Coaches Invitational and Elite meets at the Reggie Lewis Center. On Saturday, Julia Bryson broke the magical 12 minute mark in the two mile with an 11:55, while on Sunday – The Elite Meet – featuring the top 24 in the state in each event, Emily Bryson ran 11:27, the fastest time in seven years for a Quincy girl (Alyssa Mullen ran 11:22 in 2007) and the fastest for North Quincy since Suzanne Lewis did it in 1993 (11:31).

Emily's previous best was 11:37 turned in back in December at the Boston Holiday challenge.

Both are setting their sights on the MIAA Division 1 championships on February 13. Another outstanding performance was turned in by Mia Healy whose 7.90 time in the 55 meters was a huge personal best. She just missed the 7.84 required to make it to states but there are two more meets to do it in.

Other competitors were Demoy Holding and Jahvae Handsome-Fields in the 55 dashes, and Curtis Calley and Mike Munroe in the Shotput. Both throwers had throws over 40 feet but no personal bests after their great performances at the Paul Davey meet on Martin Luther King Day.

QNQ concludes its regular season with a makeup of the Middleboro meet on Saturday and the Last Chance Invitational on Sunday. All meets will take place at the Reggie.

In other track news, The Paul Davey Freshman/Sophomore meet is a highlight for schools in the Hockomock league and others around Southeastern Mass. and the Blackstone Valley. The meet was held for the last time as the school is being torn down for a new one that goes up right behind it. What none of the 13 schools expected were the performances of several Quincy athletes.

In the 50-yard dash, Demoy Holding and Jahvae Handsome-Fields, placed 1-2 shocking the packed facility. Right after them, Mia Healy took the girls dash with Obehi Otoadese 4th.

In the Highjump, Aiden Smyth was 2nd and in the Shotput Mike Munroe and Curtis Calley went 1-2 in an event usually dominated statewide by Hockomock athletes. Mike had added pressure as he had to break 43 feet to qualify for the State Coaches invitational (1/25). Curtis had already done it the week before vs Pembroke.

Other competitors were Alessandra Toscanini(50), Vivian Tran(50), Nikaya Douglas(50), Alison Radzik (300), and Jimmy Cannon. Cannon took 4th in the mile.

All girls in the dash advanced out of the quarterfinals, and Douglas made it all the way to the semis, Obehi Otoadese dominated her qualifying rounds, creating a buzz in the crowd, but in the finals a girl false started and the race was recalled with Obehi running the entire race then having to go right into the blocks again. Tired, she had a slow start and only took 4th in a race she should've won. No problem, Mia Healy started quickly and won easily.

"We went into this to have fun, but everyone did really well," said Head Coach Geoff Hennessy who along with assistant Ed Dewitt accompanied the athletes.

"Franklin High field house was home to the Hockomock League for many years, and it's sad to see it go. I ran there in high school and college in their many invitationals, and the Quincy Track club would bring a bus-load to the many youth meets held there in the late 70's and early 80's.

"I was especially pleased with Mia," Hennessy said. "She's had a rough go of it in the dash this winter but this time she put everything together. As freshman go I expect them to make mistakes along the way, but in fun meets, sometimes a kid has a breakout day.

"I always tell them to be ready when opportunity knocks. On paper Obehi is far the faster individual but sports isn't competed on paper. Obehi understood what happened and learned from it.

"The good news is our kids got to run four rounds of dash. That doesn't happen in our league or the big MSTCA events. It will only prepare us for races down the road as we enter championship season.

"Mike Munroe also was "due" for a big performance. He works hard. Has great mentors (Mike Lorenzano and Dewitt) and has the pedigree (dad holds the school record at Watertown High and was an NCAA all-American in the shot). We expect even better things from Mike and Curtis later on and into spring track."

NQHS Hockey Hall of Fame To Induct 15 New Members

The North Quincy High School Hockey Hall of Fame will induct 15 new members at a ceremony Friday, March 7th, at the Quincy Neighborhood Club.

One of the inductees – Neil Cronin – will be honored posthumously.

Other inductees are:

Tickets are $40 and can be purchased by calling Fred Cobban at 617-653-8283 or Bob Doyle at 617-512-5309.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

WISE BEYOND THEIR EARS

One of the most common reasons that children visit a chiropractor is for the treatment of ear pain. One theory on the efficacy of chiropractic treatment for ear pain experienced by children is based on a possible link between the birthing process and recurrent middle-ear infections (acute otitis media). When the head pushes through the birth canal, the cervical vertebrae (at the base of the head and upper-neck area) often become misaligned, disrupting nerve function in this region. If so, this interference may compromise function of the Eustachian tube and lead to middle-ear fluid buildup. By stretching the soft tissue around the ear canal, chiropractic treatment facilitates the draining of fluid and thereby reduces bacterial buildup and risk of infection.

Consistent well-being helps children face the necessary challenges in their lives, through which they gain the wisdom to spiritually unfold and appreciate the love of life. A diminished life force sets up negative patterns of response. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we offer quality chiropractic care and state-of-the-art diagnostic testing in order to provide a lasting resolution to your or your child's health problem. You have nothing to lose, but vibrant health to gain. Call 617.472.4220 today to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Due to fears about overuse of antibiotics leading to the appearance of ever more drug-resistant bacteria, pediatricians no longer routinely recommend antibiotics to treat childhood ear infections. As always, chiropractic offers a drugless approach.

Outplays Norwell In 1-1 Tie

QNQ Girls Showing Strong Improvement

By JOE REARDON

There's frustration when your team is playing down right horrible and frustration when you're playing well but just can't catch a break in putting the puck in the back of the net.

Saturday's 1-1 tie against Norwell was an example of just how frustrating a winter it's been for the Quincy/North Quincy girls hockey team.

Steve Burgio's team played arguably its best game of the season and went up 1-0 on a goal by Kate McGahey with 1:35 left in the period. QNQ never let up and outplayed the Clippers the rest of the way at The Bog in Kingston.

McGahey's tally was all the squad had to show for its effort on the ice.

QNQ wasn't able to get the puck past Norwell goaltender Megan Quill again, despite numerous opportunities on Quill's door step and QNQ had to settle for the tie.

Still, this isn't the the team of a month ago. QNQ continued to show signs of life in its past three outings (1-1-1) and has been far more agressive in both ends of the rink. And when you put shots on goals consistently, your luck will inevitably get better.

"We had a slow start the first couple of minutes then they picked up the speed," Burgio said of his club. "They played well. Unfortunately we couldn't put more in the net. We had the chances. They just couldn't get the bounces on their sticks, but they did exactly what we asked of them."

QNQ had its best scoring chances of the game in the early minutes of the second period. Quill, who finished with 18 saves, denied Julia Donovan's wrist shot when she broke in alone and stoned Savannah Flynn and Alyx Patey on consecutive shots 4:05 into the second stanza. Flynn had another golden chance just seconds later, but Quill was there to glove the hard wrist shot.

Norwell made it a 1-1 contest when goalie Karissa Beal couldn't snag a wrist shot with 8:24 left in the second. That tally was the one time the Clippers got the better of the freshman goaltender, who has been tremendous between the posts for QNQ of late.

"Karissa is a freshman goalie and she's really adjusted well over the past five or six games to the speed of the game and what she has to do. Our losses have been by one or two goals."

Norwell had two huge chances a minute after the tally, but Beal held her ground in the crease. Patey, McGahey and Donovan continued to put pressure on Quill, courtesy of some strong forechecking towards the end of the period and it looked as though it would be just a matter of time before QNQ's effort in front of Quill would pay off.

QNQ's swarming of the net hasn't come about by accident. The girls have been focusing on that part of their game in practice and it has carried over into the their games.

"That's something we've tried to instill in practice," said Burgio. "It's a game of short spurts. You need to go out and give everything you've got for that 30 or 40 seconds. Get off the ice, take your rest and go out and do the same thing continuously. It's a game of making things happen."

Norwell wasn't backing down either and got off a pair of shots in the opening minute of the third period only to have Beal come up big again with saves. The Clippers had a huge opportunity with a one-man advantage over the final four minutes, but weren't able to get scoring threats on Beal.

Despite the 1-10-1 record, Burgio is convinced QNQ is a far better team than the one that opened the season struggling with its game.

"The girls are playing a lot better as a team," said Burgio. "It (a win) would have been nice, but we'll take the tie."

ICE HOCKEY

By JOE REARDON

Quincy's road to the tournament just got a whole lot tougher with time running out.

The Presidents took a 2-0 lead in the first period in their game against Pembroke Monday by controlling all three zones for the entire 15 minutes: text book tournament hockey. It was the Titans, though, who took over in the final two periods to come away with a numbing 3-2 win over Ted Walsh's crew.

The loss dropped Quincy to 6-7-1 on the winter with the Presidents having to get back to .500 and stay there to qualify for postseason action.

The frustrating part about the matchup with Pembroke was that Quincy let the Titans up for air and they were able to take full advantage and came away from the Quincy Youth Arena with two points.

"They outshot us in the second and third period," said Walsh. "We're just inconsistent now. We haven't learned how to win yet. We're winning and losing games, but we haven't learned how to win consistently yet. Once we put three periods together we'll be fine."

The Presidents got to Pembroke goaltender Adam Wainwright (28 saves) in the opening stanza. Aidan Pugsley jumped on a long rebound down the right wing and fired a slap shot home to make it 1-0 with 6:12 left. Wainwright was sharp though. He robbed Pat Donovan on a point-blank wrist shot with 3:14 remaining, but Quincy got on the board again on a Brandon Beal laser from the blue line to give the Presidents a 2-0 advantage with 3:08 left.

The Presidents didn't make it easy for Pembroke in the second and third periods, but they weren't able to completely shut down the Titans.

"We couldn't put two more periods together. We had one good period," said Walsh. "They took the second two periods and we paid for it. The key to our game is skating and we didn't skate hard enough. Sometimes we get away from the game plan and we try to do things as individuals and when that happens everything goes downhill. When we play as a team we can beat anybody."

Ryan Higgins (25 saves) came up big in the first two minutes of the second period as Pembroke came out and peppered him with five quick scoring bids. The Titans were finally able to get one by him with 6:57 left to make it 2-1.

Both teams traded shots to open the third period and Quincy nearly tied it with 10:31 left on a Mike Gendreau bid. The Titans continued to go at Higgins and it paid off at 3:27 with a shot that snuck underneath him to make it 2-2. Pembroke go the clincher just over a minute later for the 3-2 win.

Walsh is still confident the Presidents can will their way into the playoffs, but he conceeded it will be an uphill battle against teams also fighting for the postseason

"My message at the end was we have to make a decision on how we want the rest of the season to go," he said. "If they want to play three periods they can beat anybody. If not, it's going to be a tough climb into the tournament. It's going to be tough. We can do it. We have the talent to do it.

"There aren't going to be any easy games. All the teams are winning and everybody's knocking each other off."

The Presidents hosted Abington Wednesday at 8:20 p.m. at Quincy Youth Arena and travel to Newton North Saturday for a 4 p.m. face-off at Fessenden High School.

QNQ Swimming Diving Teams Sweep Pembroke

The Quincy/North Quincy swimming and diving teams swept visiting Pembroke Jan. 24 at the Lincoln-Hancock Pool in Quincy. The QNQ boys (6-1-1, 4-1-1 Patriot League) defeated the visitors 80-70.

In the girls meets, Quincy (3-5, 2-4 Patriot League) prevailed 52-46, and North Quincy (3-5, 2-4 Patriot League) earned the successful 57-40 decision.

The QNQ boys 400-yard relay contingent of Tommy Zhong (NQ), Thomas Tran (Q), Elio Daci (Q) and Randall Kwong (NQ) established a new Quincy school record swimming 3:45.04. Just a couple of events prior to that final race, Elio Daci, the three-year captain, bettered his own school record with a 1:04.50 effort in the 100 back in addition to first place garnered in the 200 individual medley (2:30.11) early on in the meet.

Freshman Tommy Zhong went the distance winning both the 200– (2:10.85) and 500-yard (5:58.17) freestyle events. Classmate Thomas Tran touched the pads first in both the 100 fly (1:03.94) and 100 breaststroke (1:11.40), and junior Randall Kwong's efforts of 23.78 and 55.48 in the 50- and 100-yard freestyle races earned him firsts in each of those events.

Junior Meg Caggiano helped pave the way for a Quincy victory taking first in the 500 free (7:37.44) and second in the 200 individual medley (3:15.56). Junior Sabrina Rauch compiled two wins in the 200 individual medley (2:34.75) and 100 fly (1:07.62). Second-year captain Marlena Forrester won the 100 breaststroke (1:23.52) and placed second in the 100 free (1:12.28) behind teammate Marina Chafa (1:07.18). Freshman Bailee Carey brought home gold in the one-meter dive with 196.575 points.

Captain Lauren Thorne led North Quincy with first-place finishes in the both the 50 (29.84) and 100 (1:07.28) freestyle events. Freshman Sinead Kelley took the 100 breaststroke (1:29.08) after placing second in the 200 freestyle (2:44.06). Junior Rachel O'Driscoll was first in both the 500 free (5:49.08) and the very next race, 100 backstroke (1:09.84).

In other recent action, the Quincy/North Quincy boys swimming and diving team (5-1-1, 3-1-1 Patriot League) tied league rival Middleboro Whitman/Hanson, 88-88 in Middleboro. The Quincy girls (2-5, 1-4 Patriot League) fell 29-61 and North Quincy (2-5, 1-4 Patriot League) dropped the close 45-54 decision.

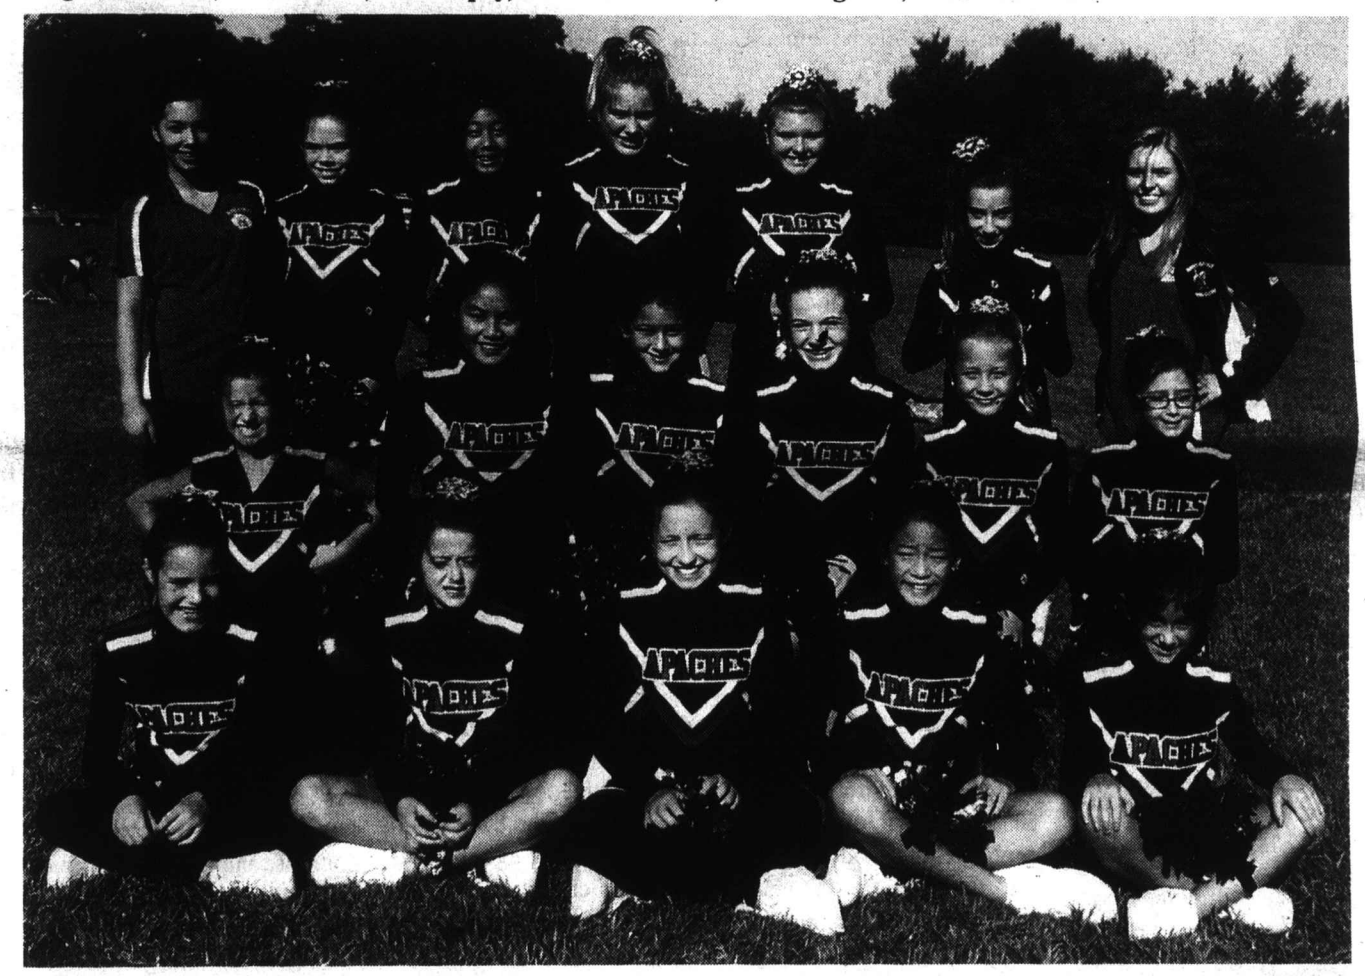

Halfway through the meet, QNQ boys and the hosts were tied 43-43 en route to the 88-88 knot in this evenly-matched contest. Freshman Thomas Tran (Q) won the 100-yard butterfly (1:04.84) and the crucial penultimate event, the 100 breaststroke (1:12.93) which gave QNQ a four-point edge heading into the final relay. The reigning Quincy High School 100 backstroke record-holder Elio Daci (Q) prevailed in that race (1:06.89) as well as the 200 freestyle. Junior Randall Kwong (NQ) dominated in the sprint freestyle events clocking 22.55 in the 50 and 54.90 in twice the distance.

North Quincy's Rachel O'Driscoll earned a pair of victories. The junior won both the 200- (2:07.23) and 100-yard freestyle (59.29) events.

Quincy freshman Bailee Carey compiled 190.20 points to win the one-meter dive. Classmate Grace Scuzzarella took home the win in the 100-yard butterfly (1:15.28) in addition to third in the 200 individual medley.

NORTH QUINCY APACHES youth football cheerleaders fielded three competitive teams (freshmen, JV and Varsity) this past season. "The performances all three levels put on at the QYFL cheerleading competition this year shows they are heading in the right direction and are poised to remain a force in the league," said Franchise Holder Steve Koski. "I am very proud of all the girls, and the job (head coach) Stacey Jackson and her staff has done in a short time" Koski added. Members of the varsity cheerleader squad are (front row from left) Mia Nguyen, MaryKate McDonald, Lindsay Lee, Jessica Bille, and Maeve Griffin. Second row: Mindy Chen, Jasmine Beam, Cassandra Davis, Meghan Greene, Lauren Beardsley, and Kayla Lindsay. Back row: Abigail Gilmartin, Fallon Hobin, Gia Murphy, Katherine Scanlan, Becca Podgurski, and Juliane Andrade.

Burke Attends UMass Hoop Hall Of Fame Dinner

The George "Trigger" Burke Hall of Fame Dinner was held Sunday at the Student Union Building at the University of Massachusetts.

The following seven people were inducted:

Tony Barbee, Ned Deane, Rebecca Donaghue, Julie Ready-Mulvey, Doug Welene, Jim Weller and Elaine Sortino who passed away was inducted posthumously.

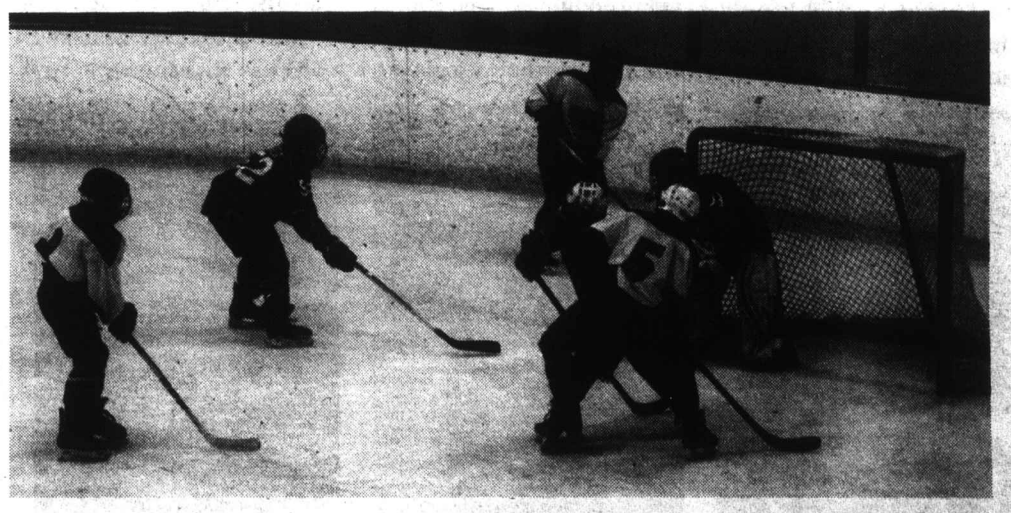

At the dinner the president of the UMass Alumni Association presented George "Trigger" Burke with his new license plate which is number 32, the same number that is retired at the University of Massachusetts in the Mullins Center.

Burke also attended the UMass-Fordham basketball game Sunday. The Most Valuable Player Cup in basketball is awarded each year and is called the George Trigger Burke MVP Cup.

QYH Pee Wee B2 Triumphs, 9-3

After back-to-back one goal losses, the young QYH squad responded with its best effort of the season in a resounding victory over the Coastal Panthers from New Bedford.

Tahla "Tuukka" Qasim delivered another stellar goaltending performance, as the defensive tandems of John Bell / Chris Hussey and Colman Gillis / Ryan Graf quelled several Panther power play chances. Offensively, the seamless passing of Robbie McClelland contributed for two first period goals apiece by QYH PW B2 forwards Nick Brink and Callum Valleli. However, the bigger Panthers stormed back with two early goals in the second period to cut the QYH lead to 4-2. With Neasa O'Donnell moving up to forward with Eric Sanders, their relentless fore-checking knocked the Panthers back on their heels, as Sean O'Brien, Joey Murphy, Eoin Varden, Gillis and Valleli each scored the final QYH goals to secure the South Shore Conference win. The QYH team squares off with first place powerhouse Bourne next Sunday 7:50 a.m. at Gallo Arena.

All-Star Selections For Girls, Boys Basketball Teams

By BILL GRIFFIN

Picking an all-star team is never easy. There are always too many worthy players. The selections are based too much on strictly what the writer has seen rather than a complete body of work. Choosing an all-star team in a season that has featured such excellence as this one is especially difficult.

Here are my all-city basketball teams as the mid-point of the season approaches. If you feel differently, you are probably correct.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

Forwards: Kayla McArdle and Maya Umoren

Guards: Grace Geary and Jane Minton

Sixth man: Haley McKay

Top defender: McKay

MVP: Umoren

There were two tough choices here. The first was for MVP. Nobody plays harder or is better in the clutch than Minton. Geary is the best player I've seen all year. However, if MVP means the most valuable to a team's success, the choice is Umoren. She makes double-doubles a routine which is remarkable. She scores, plugs the middle on defense and rebounds off the offensive and defensive boards. She also throws a great outlet pass. She is my MVP.

The second was for top defensive player. McArdle is a brilliant defender who has been handling big scorers for two years. McKay has done the same for North. I picked McKay because I saw her shut out (no points) Hanover's top offensive player in a showdown game for first place. She missed the opener and North gave more than 50 points for the only time in its first 11 games. It was not a coincidence.

A front line of McArdle, Umoren and Jorgensen gives you scoring, rebounding and defense every night. McArdle handles the top offensive threat and if there is any penetration, Jorgensen protects the rim well. Umoren has the athletic ability to move from center to forward. She is quick, strong and has great hands. Pencil them in for 35-40 points and 20-25 rebounds a night.

Jorgensen has been slowed by an ankle injury, but as a sophomore, continues her growth as blue-chip center. She handles better the zones and double-teams she sees every game. On defense, her timing and patience on blocked shots has improved. She also plays her best in the big games. Against Hanover, Duxbury, and North she combined for 51 points and 47 rebounds.

Geary does everything a guard should do. She shoots the three, gets to the basket, and dishes to the open player. She rebounds and defends. She knows the game. She knows when a simple, fundamental entry pass will do the job and she can also fire a full-court strike to a teammate streaking to the hoop. She makes the easy pass and the pass which draws fans out of their seats. She is unselfish to a fault.

Minton is a winner. In the victory over Hanover, Minton switched to the Indians' top post player in the second half, gave away six inches and held her to six points. She hit the free throws in the final seconds which beat Quincy. She gives full- throttle, maximum effort each second she is on the court. She is a well-rounded guard who can score, pass and play defense.

Not only is McKay a shutdown defender, she is an excellent outside shooter. She also combines with Geary and Minton to give North quickness and three fine passers. The trio put on a passing show against Scituate which was a treat to watch and won the game for North.

BOYS BASKETBALL

Forwards: Efthim Butka and J.T. Bain

Center: Anthony Green

Guards: Kyle Richardson and James Lam

Sixth man: Brendan Cunningham

Best defender: Green

MVP: Richardson

The obvious problem here is two glaring omissions. Drew Myers and Matt Gerakis are all-star caliber players. My problem was I ran out of positions.

Myers is that rare player who can play shooting or point guard with equal effectiveness. He can crisply run an offense and move to the wing or corner and drain three-pointers until the moon falls from the sky.

Gerakis is an example of everything a basketball player should be. He is a complete, intelligent player. He handles the ball, plays good defense, rebounds and scores. He had 32 in a showdown against Scituate while taking only 12 shots. His offense is as well-rounded as his total game. He can shoot the three, get to the basket and is a good foul shooter. He also commits about one turnover a month.

A final thought on Myers and Gerakis is they will both make all-star teams a lot more important than this one.

I played some games with my frontcourt. I moved Bain from center to forward. Bain and Green had to be on the team, and Bain has the shooting and passing skills to play forward. He is accurate out to 18 feet and finds the open cutters well.

Butka was an excellent player last year who expanded his game for his senior season. He is a stronger, tougher rebounder, can shoot out to the three-point line, still has a great elbow jumper, and is a willing, unselfish passer. His 27-point effort against Quincy will be long remembered. He and Bain on the same team would give you 30-35 points and 15-20 rebounds a game. Not bad at all.

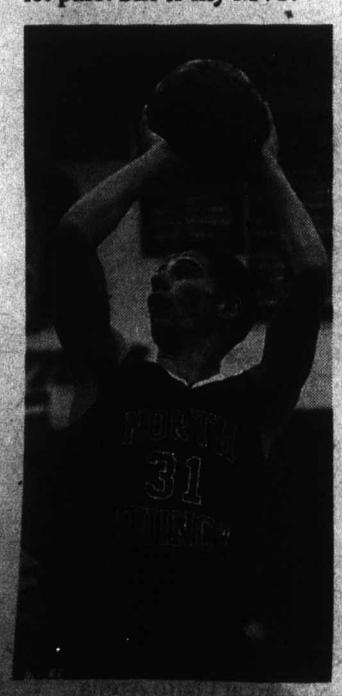

Green is an easy choice at center and top defender. When basketball people say a good player makes everyone around him better, the thought is usually about offense. Green makes everyone around him better defensively. Why? North is free to extend its man-to-man and run outside shooters off their spots because Green is there to erase any mistakes. He is dominant defensively. His rebounding was good last year and better this year. Offensively, he has a nice touch around the basket.

Richardson runs the point and is the MVP. No player impacts a game in so many ways. He is 5'7". Teams design their entire defenses to keep the ball out of his hands. Why? Once he gets it, nobody is going to take it away from him. He has an explosive first step and an unteachable sense for finding the open man. He can shoot a three and he makes his free throws. His defense starts at one endline and finishes at the other endline. He is that rare defender who can shut off both the outside shot and penetration at the same time. Opposing shooters must dread playing against him. Tough? He talked his way back into the Braintree game in the fourth quarter and ran off 13 points with an injured hamstring to give North a 66-64 win. Enough said.

Lam is too good an athlete to leave off any team. He has the quickest first step and the best leaping ability in the city. He easily has the athletic ability to move from forward to guard. He is a good outside shooter, but he is at his best with a medium-range jumper and a soft finish close to the hoop. He is the best rebounder on his team. With Green, Butka, Bain, and Lam on the same club, there would be many rebounds.

Cunningham brings senior leadership to a junior team. He is a deadeye three-point shooter and a blue-chip defender. He gets to the basket and he rebounds. He is a tough fourth-quarter player when the game is at issue. He worked tirelessly in the off-season to improve and expand his game. Like so many players in the city, he is not a specialist. He is a complete player.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Sunday, January 19, 2014, at approximately 3:30 a.m., Officers Dwayne Goldman and Joseph Cox were dispatched to Kendrick Avenue on a report of two males looking into vehicles. The caller stated that one of the suspects was carrying a bag and wearing a hoodie.

Upon arrival, the Officers began checking the area, focusing on the larger parking lots where suspects could go directly from car to car. As Officer Cox entered the parking lot of 155 Kendrick Avenue, he spotted a male carrying a bag walking swiftly from the parking lot. Officer Cox shouted for the male to stop and after brief hesitation, the male stopped. Officer Goldman joined Officer Cox during this encounter and immediately noted that the male was wearing latex gloves and carrying a flashlight.

When questioned by the Officers, the male said he was alone and was "just walking through the parking lot." He could not give a good reason as to why he was in the parking lot or where he was going. The male said he found the bag he was carrying next to a car in the lot. He said he took a scarf out of the bag and put it on because he was cold. When questioned about the latex gloves (that the Officers believed were worn to eliminate fingerprint evidence), the male said he wore them to keep his hands warm.

Since there is no insulation in these gloves, the Officers informed the male that all signs indicated that he was breaking into cars, which the male denied. The bag the suspect was carrying was an open top canvas bag from Barnes and Noble. In plain view in the bag was a Garmin Nuvi GPS system, several Compact Disc cases and two pairs of sunglasses. There were other items in the bag as well, all of which appeared to be common items that would be found in a motor vehicle. Officer Cox conducted an inventory search of the bag which revealed a pair of gloves, a sunglasses case, a driver's documents wallet and a large number of multi-colored bean bags. The male was placed in handcuffs and put in the back of a cruiser so that the Officers could continue their investigation.

The Officers checked the parking lot and located two nearby vehicles which appeared as though they had been entered. Both were unlocked and had items strewn all over the seats and floors.

A registration check of the vehicles indicated that the owners were residents of the building where the cars were parked. Officer Goldman contacted one of the owners, who said that none of the items in the bag were hers, but confirmed that someone had entered her vehicle. The second owner was on crutches and could not go out to her car, so Officer Cox brought the bag of items to her apartment, where she identified the six empty compact disc cases as belonging to her. She was not able to identify any of the other items.

Officer Cox returned to the parking lot and found another vehicle that had been entered. The owner came out and immediately identified the canvas Barnes and Noble bag as hers, along with the Garmin Nuvi GPS (verified through previous destinations), the brown scarf the suspect wore, brown gloves, black and gold sunglasses and the 30 multi-colored bean bags. She stated she uses the bean bags when she teaches Pilates and stores them in the Barnes and Noble bag for easy transport. She was not able to identify the few remaining items.

The Officers did not find any other vehicles in the area that appeared to be entered. Officer Goldman advised the male, a 23 year old Milton resident, that he was under arrest for three (3) counts of "Breaking and Entering into a Motor Vehicle in the Nighttime with the Intent to Commit a Felony. He was transported to the station by Officer Cox for booking and processing. Nice Work!

QUINCY POLICE DEPARTMENT OPEN HOUSE/ TOURS/BLOOD DRIVE!

On Saturday, February 15th, the Quincy Police Department will have an open house and tours of the station from 10:00 A.M. to 2:00 P.M. Tours will include the communications area and the cell block. There will also be a cruiser available to check out all the equipment used by Officers. Be sure to bring a camera!

BLOOD DRIVE INFO:

From 8:00 A.M. to 2:00 P.M., there will also be the Quincy Police Department/Glennon Family blood drive in the parking lot of the Quincy Police Station. For more information on either the open house/tours or the blood drive, contact Lieutenant Daniel J. Minton at 617 745 5719.

ROBO-CALLS: are recorded calls to your home and many other homes at the same time. The caller's message, sometimes live or recorded, gives information for an offer that seems too good to be true. The purpose of these opening lines is to get the victim to push "1" to speak to a live operator. This is when the scammer goes after your hard earned money. Even if you do not buy anything, you have verified that this is a good number to call, which may result in many more calls from similar scammers. Do not push "2" to be removed from the call list since this can result in more robocalls – again you have verified that your number has potential for the recipient of the call to be scammed. To eliminate some (but probably not all) robocalls and phone solicitations, sign up for the "Do Not Call" list by registering online at www.donotcall.gov or by calling 1-888-382- 1222.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Doing something nice for others is typical of the generous Arian. But be prepared for some jealous types who might try to question one of your more recent acts of kindness.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You're eager to take on new responsibilities. But before you do, you might want to check out exactly what would be required of you so that you don't face any "surprises" later.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It might be best to put off an important decision until a fluctuating situation becomes more stable. Recently received news could help resolve a long-standing family matter.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) If you still have a problem getting that information gap closed, you might consider asking a higher authority to resolve the matter, leaving you free to move on to another project.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) A family matter needs to be dealt with at the start of the week. Once it's resolved, the Big Cat can devote more attention to that new opportunity that seems to hold so much potential.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Pay attention to those niggling doubts. They could be warning you not to make any major decisions until you've checked them out -- especially where money matters might be involved.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A business venture might need more of your attention than you are able to provide. Consider asking a trusted friend or family member to help you work through this time crunch.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A more-positive aspect helps you get a clearer focus on how to handle your time so that you can deal with several responsibilities that are just now showing up on your schedule.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A very close friend (you know who that is!) has advice that could help you work through a confusing situation. So put your pride aside and ask for it. You'll be glad you did.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A workplace situation could turn a bit tense. The best way to handle it is to confront it and deal with it openly. Doing so can help reveal the underlying reasons for the problem.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A colleague's remarks appear to be especially cutting. But don't waste your time or your energy trying to deal with the situation. You have more important things to do.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Support for your work comes as a surprise from someone you thought was critical or, at least, indifferent. Your spouse or partner has big plans for the weekend.
BORN THIS WEEK: Your spiritual strength often acts as an inspiration to help others make decisions about their lives.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Mabel J. Hajjar, 90

A funeral Mass for Mabel J. Hajjar, 90, of Quincy was celebrated yesterday (Wednesday) at St. Joseph's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Hajjar died peacefully Jan. 24 in her home.

Mabel was born Aug. 3, 1923, in Quincy. In 1941, she graduated from Quincy High School. Seven years later, while in Lebanon, she met Ferris Hajjar and they were married in 1948. Mr. and Mrs. Hajjar then traveled back to the U.S. to start life as newlyweds. In 1972, they opened the "Mae Fare," a small coffee shop located across the street from the Quincy Shipyard, which served the needs of the shipyard workers.

In the early 1980s, after many years of serving her community, Mrs. Hajjar retired and devoted her life to her family. Though she did not have children of her own, Mrs. Hajjar gave her time and love raising her many nieces and nephews. Her love for family showed best in the kitchen, cooking Lebanese food. She will be remembered for her generosity and kindheartedness.

MABEL J. HAJJAR

Beloved wife of the late Ferris Hajjar. Dear sister of Julia and Linda, both of Quincy, and Sidney and his wife Evalynne of Milton. Also survived by many nieces, nephews, great-nieces and great-nephews both in the U.S. and Lebanon.

Mr. Trudeau died Jan. 24 at Brockton Hospital surrounded by his loving family.

He was born on Dec. 7, 1936 in Weymouth to Priscilla (Pat) Cormier and Frank J. Trudeau. He grew up in Squantum and was a 1955 graduate of North Quincy High School where he was an All Scholastic football player. Mr. Trudeau graduated from Wentworth Institute and worked for Eastern Airlines first in Miami and then at Boston's Logan Airport for 32 years. He then worked for the Trump Shuttle and retired from U.S. Airways in 1995. He served in the U.S. Navy.

In 2005, Mr. Trudeau was inducted into the Quincy/North Quincy Football Hall of Fame, which was something that brought him much pride and joy. He was a member of Old South Union Church, the Weymouth Elks, and was a Lifetime Member of the DAV.

For many years, he bowled with the North Weymouth Men's Bowling League. He was very active in Troop 19 and was a Webelo leader for several years and was most proud that two of his sons became Eagle Scouts. Mr. Trudeau never missed a swim meet or football game that his sons were involved in. He designed sets and executed lights for Showstoppers theatrical productions lead by his son, Doug. He loved watching the Patriots and Boston College football games.

He was married to Ann (MacKenzie) Trudeau for 55 years. They lived in Weymouth for 35 years and then moved to the Oak Point Complex in Middleboro. He spent many years wintering in West Palm Beach, FL.

Loving father of Donald Trudeau and his wife Janet, Dale Trudeau and his wife Kathryn, and Tracy Baker and her husband John, all of Weymouth, and Douglas Trudeau and his wife Kim of Scituate. He was the proud "Papa Ed" to his grandchildren Stephen, Donald, Jeffrey, Daniel, Brooke, and Edward Trudeau, Jack, Luke, Benjamin and Joshua Baker, all of Weymouth and Ashley and Tyler Trudeau of Scituate. # Quincy Fondly Remembers TV News Anchor Chet Curtis

'He Loved Quincy And Was Great For The City'

By JOE REARDON

An icon in the Boston news market during the golden years of local television coverage, Chet Curtis also made a lasting impression in Quincy, where he called home for nearly 15 years.

The enormously popular Curtis died on Jan. 22 at Brigham and Women's Hospital from complications due to pancreatic cancer. Curtis, 74, had been diagnosed with the disease in 2012.

Friends were shocked and saddened to hear the news of Curtis' passing.

"He was a really good friend, customer and neighbor," said Kristie Henricksen, the manager of Siro's restaurant in Marina Bay, where Curtis lived. "He was an ordinary guy, but a great, wonderful man. Everyone loved Chet."

Curtis oftentimes would sing at the piano bar and was a favorite with the crowd. He particularly enjoyed singing Polish folk songs. "He sang all the time and had an amazing voice," said Henricksen. "To know him as a friend, we're going to miss him so much. He had the best outlook, always. We could all learn something from him."

Born Chester Kukiewicz, Curtis worked in television in Washington D.C. and New York before landing at WCVB Channel 5 in 1968. Along with his then wife and co-anchor, Natalie Jacobson, Curtis became one of the most recognized and respected faces in Boston news. He went on to work as a news anchor at New England Cable News in 2001. Curtis was inducted into the Massachusetts Broadcasters Hall of Fame last September.

Tony Agnitti, owner of Agnitti Insurance Agency, remembers Curtis as always willing to help out local charities. Both were involved with the Boy Scouts Breakfast and Good Scout Award that recognizes local leaders who exemplify scouting's ideals.

"He was always a gentleman and always would help out a good charity," said Agnitti. "He would lend his name, advice and treasure. He always had a smile and a story. He loved Quincy and was great for the city."

Curtis was an advocate for the Beechwood On The Bay Center and was the master of ceremonies for its annual spring fundraiser six times.

Beechwood Executive Director Sharron Beal recalled meeting with Curtis to discuss the fundraiser. "I called at the recommendation of someone else and he arranged a lunch with me to see what we really did at the Beechwood," said Beal. "He wanted to make sure it was an entity he wanted to support. I really admired that. As we left, he put his hand on my shoulder and said that we did so much with so little.

"He had such a mentoring manner about him. He was so encouraging about getting to know the people he served. I'd see him at Marina Bay and he'd ask how things were going at the Beechwood. He wasn't an elected official, but he really identified with the city. He was such a great man."

Curtis was also participated in a 2007 fundraiser at the Alba Bar & Grille that raised $25,000 for five badly burned children from Kosovo who were treated in Boston.

Quincy native and well-known radio personality Ron Della Chiesa fondly rmembered seeing his good friend Chet Curtis several months ago at the Marriott Hotel in Quincy when they were both inducted into The Massachusetts Broadcasting Hall of Fame.

"I had heard that he was in poor health, but wanted to be there with his family to accept his award.

"He came to the podium, two of his daughters on each side to assist him, and delivered one of the most emotional and heartfelt speeches I've ever heard.

"He talked about how lucky he was to be at the right place at the right time, to be able to meet Popes, Presidents, world statesmen, actors, and musicians, in a career that spanned some 40 years.

"He thanked those people who helped him become one of the very best in the the world of TV news, ending with a tribute to those he loved most: his family."

After his remarks, Mr. Curtis received a standing ovation with cheers and applause that went on and on as he was assisted back to his seat.

"For weeks after that memorable event, he fought a courageous battle against his illness until the very end," Della Chiesa said.

"I like to think that ovation and applause continued when he entered heaven.

"Chet Curtis made the world a better place with his talent, humility, great sense of humor, love of his family and friends, and he was a damned good singer too!"

Mr. Curtis is survived by his daughters, Dana, Dawn and Lindsay; his grandchildren, Ryan, Carlin, Matthew, Devyn; his long-time partner, Kerry Kristine, and his former wife Natalie Jacobson.

A funeral service was held Monday at St. Cecilia's Church in Boston.

Arrangements were made by Waterman & Sons Funeral Home of Boston.

Olympian Karen Cashman Lehmann Is Back On The Ice

my own day - was more than I could have dreamed of. It was unbelievable. The assembly. The reception at the Neighborhood Club I was terrified but I was so happy," she says flashing a brilliant smile. "My knees were knocking."

This anniversary of her bronze medal win will be the first without her mom, Jane. She passed away Jan. 9 at the age of 78.

Jane traveled with Karen to many of her competitions but was not fond of flying so she stayed in Quincy while Karen and her father Fred and brother-in-law joined the speed skater in Lillehammer.

"My mom held down the fort at home but we had a phone bill that was in the thousands of dollars because I called her every day from the Olympics and I was talking to her like she was a next door neighbor. I miss her terribly. She was the one who provided all of these opportunities for me. My dad, too.

"My dad drove thousands of miles to be with me and get me where I needed to go. I am very lucky to have parents who put their kids above everything else because I couldn't have done it without them."

Karen also credits the City of Quincy, the Koch Club and the Quincy Track Club for her athletic success.

"I am very lucky to have grown up in Quincy. It's a wonderful city with so many opportunities. Quincy Track Club was huge. I started when I was in third grade. I loved it.

"(Director) Geoff Hennessy is so dedicated to that program. It got me into shape. It taught me about competition and I loved the competition. Just doing the local track meets and before I know it I'm doing regional track meets and then I'm going to nationals in Hershey, PA. That was really my first taste of big-time national competition and it's all these little things that I did along the way that my parents got me involved in.

"You start off small and then there are regionals and nationals and it was the same thing with speed skating. I'm doing local competition and then I'm on the national team and then I'm going to the World Championships and the Olympics. There are stepping stones and they are very, very important and I'm grateful to have grown up in Quincy that provided me these opportunities."

About 15 years ago, Karen began her teaching career first in Plymouth before moving on to Marshfield High School where she's been teaching French for eight years. She also taught English in France for a year and took some time off when son Bryan was a baby.

For about six years she was away from skating.

But that all changed about two years ago after Bryan got a pair of hockey skates for Christmas.

Karen brought Bryan to the Bog for public skating and ran into an old friend - Joan Bunnell - who runs the learn-to-skate program there.

"She asked me if I could help out with the group lessons. I said sure and Bryan jumped into his hockey skates and he did great and he kept asking for figure skates so here we are now. Two years later and he's doing fantastic and he's one of my students."

Another one of the teaching instructors is Debbie Minihan. She was Karen's very first figure skating teacher.

"She taught me and now I teach with her. I have really come full circle."

Bunnell says The Bog is fortunate to have Karen as a skating instructor.

"She's so wonderful and she's so responsible and the kids love her. We are so fortunate to have her. She teaches private lessons and all of her students are doing very, very well in competition and testing."

This is not the first time Karen and Joan have crossed paths.

"I had started my teaching career in 1983 and Karen was still in high school. I was teaching at a rink in Randolph. She was a teenager at the time and I knew her as a figure skater. Years later, I heard she was in the Olympics and that she had gone from figure skater to speed skater and had won a medal in the Olympics. It's a storybook tale. Kids dream about that. I'm sure in her mind she said, 'I'll think I'll try speed skating' and to think she won a medal in it is just amazing.

"We are proud of her and it's a wonderful thing."

Karen knows what it takes to be a successful skater. It's more than a leather skate and sharp metal blade on a fresh sheet of ice.

It's the opportunities and love from parents that is that important very first step.

"Parents should let their kids try different things and see what they really take to," Karen says. "What do they love? Soccer and baseball and other team sports may not be to every kids' liking. Find what they love to do, let them lead the way.

"Bring them to as many things that they want to go to. As long as they're loving it, I don't think you can go wrong. Just feed them it as much as you can as long as they want to do. You can see in a kid's face if they're enthusiastic. It might take some time to find the right fit.

"I'm fortunate that Bryan found something he's passionate about. It might change one day but right now he seems to like figure skating so I'll provide an opportunity."

It's a Saturday morning at The Bog and Karen Cashman Lehmann is on the ice again, guiding a small group of young figure skaters. She is smiling and they are smiling right back at her.

A few feet away her son Bryan is practicing his moves enjoying his time on the ice just as his mother did when she was his age.

Karen will be watching the Winter Games in Sochi next month. She and her husband host an Opening Ceremonies party. She'll hang posters and flags up and play music in her front yard.

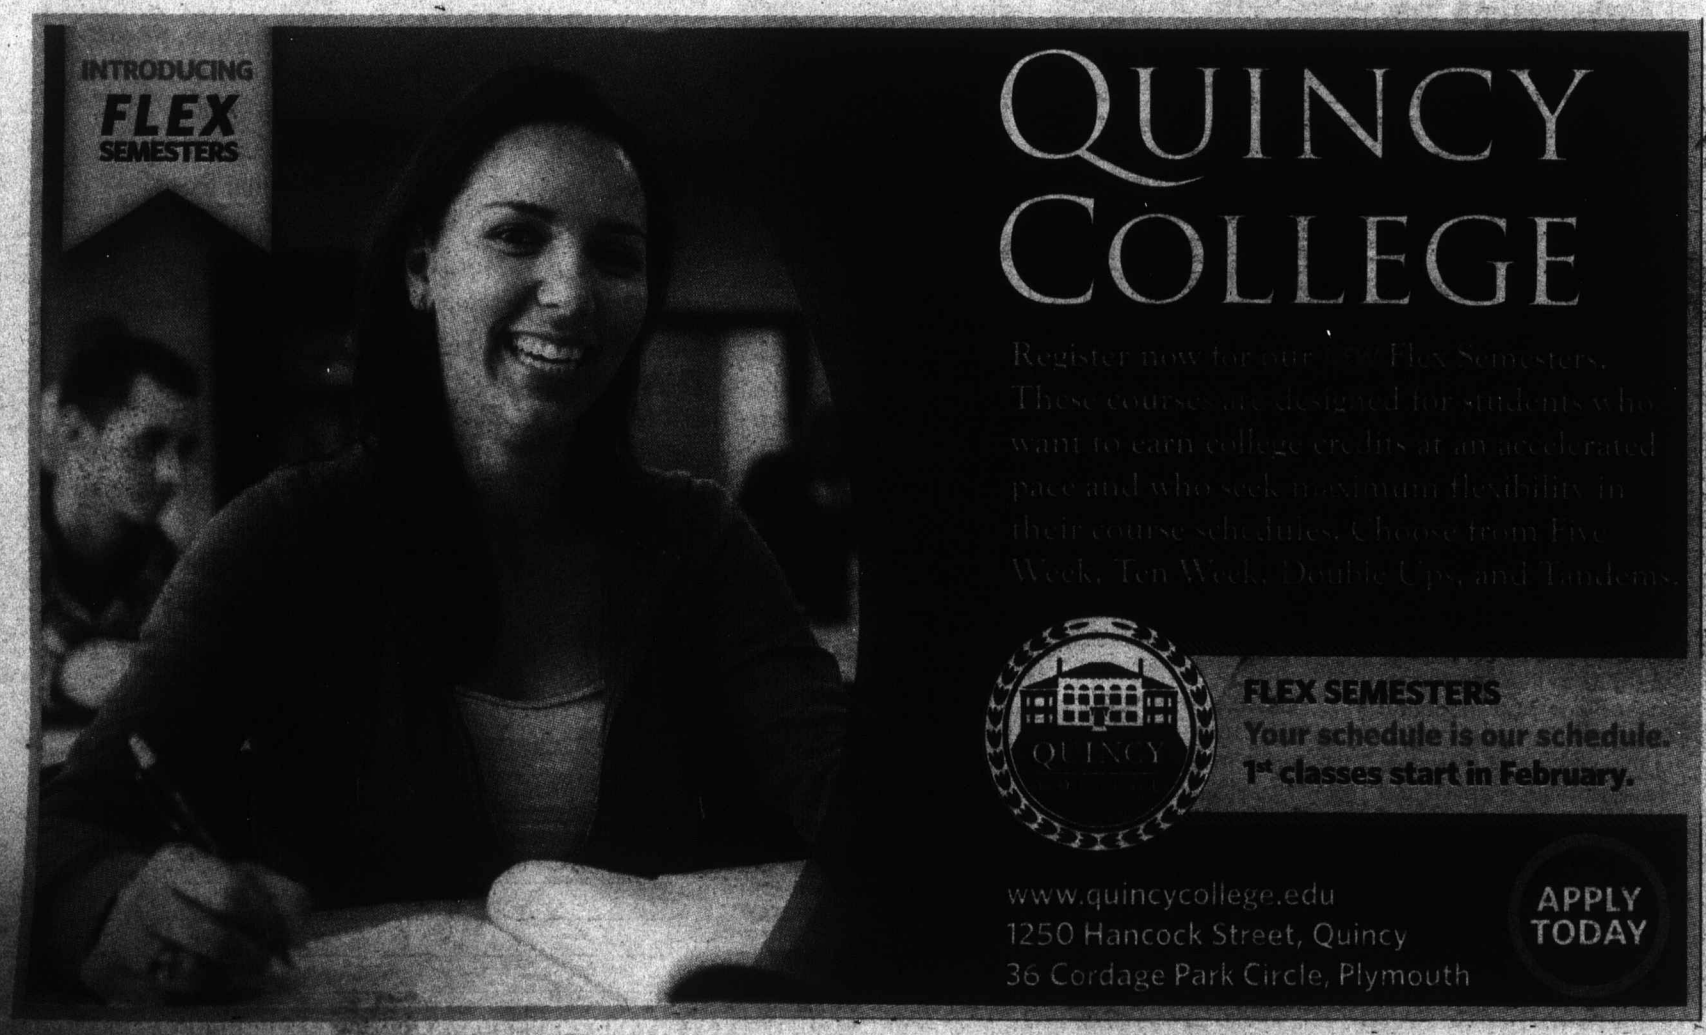

"We love it. We're all into it. John grew up playing hockey and coached Leominster and Plymouth North hockey teams so he's all about skating and the Olympics, too. It's really a family affair.

"We're glued to the television like when I was a kid."

What's that old saying?

The more things change the more they stay the same?

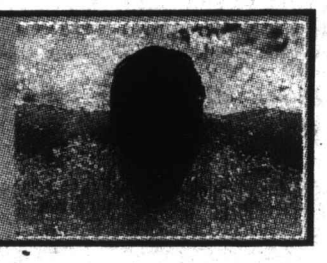

It's certainly true for Olympian – and figure skating instructor – Karen Cashman Lehmann.

Mayor To Update Council On
$1.6 Billion Redevelopment Project

Koch 'Bullish' On Downtown Quincy

By SCOTT JACKSON

As officials from the city and developer Street-Works contemplate potential changes to the agreement between the two sides, Mayor Thomas Koch plans to provide an update on the $1.6 billion Quincy Center development project to the City Council in the coming weeks.

In an interview with The Sun before Monday's City Council meeting, the mayor said he would address the council during one of its next two meetings – either on Feb. 18 or March 3. At Monday's council meeting, Jim Fatseas, the mayor's chief of staff, said the update would happen on Feb. 18. In the interview, Koch said he does not know whether he would be able propose any specific amendments for the council to make to the land disposition agreement (LDA) between the city and the developer at that point.

"I expect to go to the City Council myself, either the second February meeting or the first meeting in March, to give a complete update on the downtown from my perspective," the mayor said. "I don't know if I'll be ready at that point to make the recommendations for change, but I am going to give a full update. I think I'll be prepared enough with some legitimate information to share at that time based on all our team's work."

Koch plans to tell the council that he remains optimistic about the redevelopment of Quincy Center. Components of the development may be altered, and the overall square footage of the project reduced, but the mayor said the redevelopment will take place.

"I'm bullish on downtown Quincy," Koch responded when asked what his message to the

Mayor Eyes New Squantum School

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Other School Project News Page 3

Mayor Thomas Koch has begun the process of working with the Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA) to secure funds for what he believes is the necessary construction of a new Squantum Elementary School.

"It is important that we continue to review and assess school buildings with larger needs," said Koch. "Therefore, it is my intention to begin a formal analysis for core improvements to Squantum Elementary School up to and including the potential for building a new school."

"After Quincy High, Central, and Sterling...the worst building in the system is Squantum," he said. "I don't know where you would start and stop rehab-wise. The additions aren't quality."

Koch's goal is for the construction of a new, two-story building. He feels the abundance of land surrounding the current school will keep disruptions to neighboring properties to a minimum.

House OKs $10M For MBTA Station Redevelopment

The Massachusetts House of Representatives has approved a transportation bond bill that includes $10 million for the Quincy Center MBTA Station Redevelopment Program and $1.2 million in improvements at the intersection of Sea Street and Quincy Shore Drive.

The transportation bond bill was backed by Quincy's state representatives: House Majority Leader Ron Mariano, Rep. Tackey Chan and Rep. Bruce Ayers. The bill assists Quincy and other Massachusetts communities in funding local transportation-related projects.

The bond bill authorizes $300 million in Chapter 90 funding to help cities and towns complete road, bridge and infrastructure improvement projects. This marks the eighth consecutive year that the House has either raised or level-funded Chapter 90.

"Chapter 90 funding gives cities and towns the ability to plan ahead and make much-needed im-

Sheets, Council Concerned Over Salem Closure

Commuter Ferry Service Suspended

By JOE REARDON and SCOTT JACKSON

City officials expressed concern about the MBTA's decision to indefinitely suspend plans to repair a wharf in the Fore River Shipyard that serves as the home to both the USS Salem and commuter ferry service.

The transit agency recently announced that it would put off the repairs, citing their high cost. MTBA officials said a short-term fix would cost roughly $15 million, and a long-term fix would cost upwards of $50 million.

The USS Salem (CA-139), a Des Moines-class heavy cruiser, was launched from the Fore River Shipyard in 1947 and commissioned two years later. It served as the flagship of the U.S. Navy's Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean Sea during in the 1950s during the Cold War before being decommissioned in 1959.

In 1995, after being berthed in the reserve fleet for decades, the Salem was brought back to Quincy as a museum ship. Then-Mayor James Sheets was instrumental in bringing the heavy cruiser to the shipyard. In an interview with The Sun, the former mayor said it would be unfortunate if the Salem is relocated because of the MBTA's decision.

"Obviously we got it because it was built at the Fore River Shipyard and it memorializes all the warships that were built there," Sheets said. "It would be unfortunate if it has to move, because of its history."

Sheets added that if the ship is moved, it needs to be kept somewhere nearby the shipyard and city where it was built.

"You want a location in Quincy and if you can't, you want to find one as close as possible," he said.

The former mayor also said he would offer any help he could provide to keep the ship in place.

"If there was any way I could help," Sheets said, "I would certainly do that."

Sheets wasn't the only one who spoke out about the MBTA's decision to put off repairs. At Monday night's City Council meeting, councillors unanimously passed a resolution expressing concern about the transit agency's decision and seeking an update from MBTA officials.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, a co-sponsor of the resolution whose district includes both the shipyard and adjacent neighborhoods, said residents he's heard from were caught off guard by the decision. He noted the closure of the ferry terminal would negatively impact those who relied on the service.

"I think that folks were certainly caught off guard. When I think about that particular area, obviously what comes to mind first and foremost is impacting commuter patterns. It is a heavily traveled terminal. I have had folks reach out to me quite aggressively in the last week or so just saying 'hey, what's going on here?'" Croall said.

"I understand we're not in the business of making financial decisions for the MBTA; however, I do wholeheartedly subscribe to the fact that these decisions really have the capacity to negatively impact certain folks that utilize the terminal."

Croall added that the Salem is a symbol of Quincy's past as a hub for shipbuilding, and that many of his constituents want to keep the ship in the city.

"Outside of the commuter ferry we also have the USS Salem, which in my opinion is the emblematic symbol of the City of Quincy back in its shipbuilding days when the city was that economic powerhouse," he said. "I know from experience and working with the folks down there at the USS Salem that they do a lot of good things and there is an appetite certainly in the Ward 2 section of Quincy to make sure we're doing what we can to keep this ship docked in the City of Quincy."

Croall and Councillor Doug Gutro also noted that the MBTA is in the preliminary stages of launching a new ferry service between Lynn and Boston. Gutro said he would press for continued ferry service in Quincy, which was one of the first communities to have ferry service in Greater Boston,

"We are seeing in other parts of the state and Boston Harbor the potential expansion of ferry service, when we in the City of Quincy that have literally had ferry service from the early days, now see in a news release that there's a potential we may lose ferry service," Gutro said.

"I think that the door should not be closed and we should want the opportunity to get some answers

New Sterling School Project Receives Initial OK

After meeting with Mayor Thomas Koch and School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro Jan. 29th, members of the Massachusetts School Building Authority issued a critical preliminary vote that will begin formal planning for a Sterling Middle School project.

The Sterling project will be Quincy's third major school project in just the last few years and creates the foundation of a broader program of major improvements to schools citywide that include major roof repairs, window replacements, and campus and field upgrades among a litany of other projects.

"There is no more important investment than the ones we make in our young people, and we must continue to move forward with these vital projects. Sterling is another project discussed for years, and we're going to get it done," said Koch. "I wish to thank Treasurer Steve Grossman and the MSBA their unbending commitment to investing in educational facilities statewide."

Added Dr. DeCristofaro:

"Sterling Middle School project will provide unparalleled opportunities to the students and families of Southwest Quincy. A new Sterling Middle School will provide the school's dedicated staff with a state-of-the-art facility that allows them to enhance educational and extracurricular programs in academics, arts, technology, and athletics. We know from our recent experiences at Quincy High School and Central Middle School that these new facilities transform and enhance a school's culture and climate in so many ways."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, who has lobbied extensively for a Sterling project, said that the SBA vote was "a great first step many years in the making. This is a vital project for our city and especially for this neighborhood."

The vote by the SBA board essentially qualifies the City to move forward in the coming months with preliminary planning for a Sterling project that will in turn lead to a full feasibility study and then on to design. The ultimate goal is to qualify the building project for state reimbursement, which dramatically lowers the cost of new buildings for City taxpayers.

At its Jan. 29th meeting, the School Building Authority also approved the Accelerated Repair Program design schematics for the North Quincy High School, Wollaston and Merrymount Elementary School window and door replacement projects. These projects will now proceed to the next stage, which includes execution of the Project Funding Agreements and preparation of bid packages. Installation of new windows and doors for all three schools is scheduled for Summer 2014.

$5.3M Request For Window, Door Replacements

By KRIS KALABOKAS

A request for $5,338,930 for window and door replacements at Wollaston Elementary School, Merrymount Elementary School, and North Quincy High School will go before the Finance Committee according to a motion passed at Monday's meeting of the City Council.

"Where we are this evening is looking at a funding vote," said School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, who has been working with the Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA) for the past three months in the hopes of securing a 70 percent reimbursement rate for the school projects.

"It's all based on just about 70 percent reimbursement from the MSBA which is a real plus for us as a city," he said. "These three window projects would obviously benefit our schools in a great way.

"We've been looking at working with a design team, taking a look at these three buildings, taking a look at the principals, looking at timelines, schedules, and we got the final OK on Jan. 29."

The project is slated to begin this summer. However DeCristofaro said he hopes to get things started several weeks earlier at North Quincy High due to the early departure of graduating seniors.

Three separate contractors will be used for the projects, which have received School Committee approval and will be presented to the Finance Committee for a breakdown of costs and approval.

"Public Buildings has done an extensive survey of all of our buildings," said DeCristofaro, who noted that, if possibie, construction would be restricted to evenings and weekends as to not interfere with school ground activities.

When asked about window and door improvements at Squantum Elementary School, DeCristofaro stated that the school had a "significant need" and would benefit from being included in the Core Program, which reimburses school districts for major renovations up to and including the construction of new school buildings.

"There was a lot of discussion as to whether we look at Squantum for new windows and doors, and the Mayor decided that in looking at it, that had a significant need," said DeCristofaro. "The Mayor decided that this was the best approach."

Authorization for SOI submission for window and door replacement has also been given by the City Council for Lincoln-Hancock Community School, F. W. Parker Elementary School, Point Webster Middle School, and Beechwood Knoll Elementary School but action will not be taken until next year according to DeCristofaro. "I think we're moving along and these were the next four prioritized lists of windows," he said.

Shelly Dein Named City Energy Manager

Mayor Thomas Koch has tapped a new energy manager to lead the city's efficiency and environmental efforts following a search that included more than 30 applications from candidates from as far away as Spain.

Shelly Dein, a former energy manager for the town of Middleborough and a principal author of an energy reduction plan in Arlington, was appointed by Mayor Koch after recommendations from a selection committee that included members of the Mayor's climate and sustaintability committee. The position pays $91,980 annually.

In her role, Dein is responsible for leading the City's efforts to maintain its status as a certified Massachusetts Green Community. The City won that designation in 2011 based on its implementation of several environmentally friendly policies and a pledge to reduce the City's total municipal energy consumption by 20 percent.

Whatever Happened To Mini Fenway Park?

By RON IACOBUCCI

When my son recently told me that the kids at school were still talking about mini Fenway Park, I decided to go public and give a full answer to the question, what happened?

I am grateful to The Quincy Sun for the opportunity to tell the story. The people of Quincy have a right to know. I could write a book. Maybe someday I will. For now this response will hopefully answer the question.

For a start up nonprofit, the mini Fenway Park team of volunteers achieved a number of significant milestones in record time.

Our early achievements from 2002-2007 included: passing legislation that authorized a mini Fenway Park on state owned land; signing a long term lease with the Commonwealth for twelve acres of land; signing a long term management and use agreement with the Commonwealth for the operation of the facility; signing a licensing agreement with The Boston Red Sox and Major League Baseball. In addition, the mini Fenway Park conceptual design was approved by The Boston Red Sox; we were featured on redsox.com/minifenwaypark; provided access to Fenway Park to promote the project; we launched a capital campaign for $2.5 million to build the first phase of the project with a lead gift of $1 million pledged and we launched a sponsorship campaign with Red Sox Corporate sponsors for signage in the replica ballpark.

Most importantly, we completed the project to put the "Fenway Park" Massachusetts Special License Plate into production. This fundraising tool has the potential to generate $500,000 annually for the operation of the facility. We requested and were issued a ticket resellers license by the Commonwealth (the only nonprofit organization to receive one) in order to form a partnership with StubHub and Ace Ticket that has the potential to generate $500,000 annually for the operation of the facility. We also identified media sponsors that included: WRKO (radio), Comcast (television) and the Boston Globe Family (Boston Globe, Boston.Com, Metro Boston and Boston Globe Media). We established a partnership with The Boys and Girls Clubs to welcome children of all abilities to our facility and successfully launched our pilot "Legend Camps" partnering with Major League Baseball's Breaking Barriers Program and Red Sox Legends.

But we also faced a number of serious challenges. From 2005-2011, these challenges included opposition from Friends of the Blue Hills and our direct abutter Quirk Auto. Environmental concerns were identified by the Department of Environmental Protection and we had disputes with two environmental contractors.

We overcame all of these challenges. The Friends of the Blue Hills are not opposed to our project. We have reached an understanding with Quirk Auto relative to parking and they are now a supporter of our revised concept and will assist us with fund raising among the various automobile associations. The Department of Environmental Protection welcomes our revised concept (recently approved by the Department of Conservation and Recreation) because it will avoid all of the areas of environmental concern: vernal pools, archeological sensitive areas, solid waste dump and endangered species habitat (snakes) that have been identified on our Quincy site. We have also settled our differences with the two environmental contractors.

Any one of these challenges could have killed the project. Each of these challenges certainly contributed to the delays. However, to this day our volunteer team remains faithful to our stewardship and committed to our mission to build a kid size replica of Fenway Park for children of all abilities that will promote baseball and youth development.

In 2008 The Boston Globe reported that we were "Hitting a wall." At one point in the process of making the Quincy site work (building our original concept complete with all of its components: Yaz museum, Comcast Theatre, State Street Concourse, Tiant Restaurant, etc.) Governor Patrick signed legislation that declared mini Fenway Park an "overriding public interest." Unfortunately, that still didn't get us the permitting relative to the vernal pools.

If we wanted to build our original concept, we had no choice but to look at other sites. We spent several years in this effort with no result because unfortunately the Red Sox business office became our last and greatest challenge. Our best attempt at finding another viable site involved a $2.6 million gift of land that the Red Sox business office would not approve.

It is important to note that the Red Sox business office struggled from day one with the question of how to validate us. They eventually decided to license our project. This arrangement ultimately served to undermine our efforts. From the beginning, there was always a question mark about their support, especially when we approached their corporate sponsors. We had a support letter, we were on their website, in the ball park and had the license plate. But there was a question mark because the Red Sox business office was not at the table.

It is also important to note that a number of possibilities may have contributed to the reluctance of the Red Sox business office to continue to promote our project, such as: their negative experience with Teddy Ebersol Field; their thinking that we were "competition" (especially after the comment made to us by their Foundation Executive Director that the license plate should belong to them) and their understandably protective nature relative to liability/trademark issues.

Clearly the delays caused by the challenges we faced left us vulnerable. However, while we were still licensed, we continued in good faith to find a viable path forward. But, the Red Sox business office now became the main reason for the delay, rejecting site after proposed site. This cost our nonprofit organization valuable time and money. In fact, an individual representing one of the rejected sites revealed to us that "the Red Sox needed to show a little more enthusiasm." The Red Sox business office eventually forced us to do a major regroup when they decided to terminate our license to use the phrase "mini Fenway Park." We never went public with this. For the sake of the project we wanted to keep things positive as well as keep the door open for future Red Sox involvement. Similarly, the Red Sox business office, since there was no cause to criticize or disparage our organization, pledged not to do so. We continued to maintain a positive relationship with the Red Sox business office even when, as a result of the withdrawal of their license, we lost a $1 million gift that had been pledged for naming rights. This gift had been previously approved by the Red Sox business office under our license.

From 2011-2013 we tried to regroup again in Quincy. We would not give up, we would not go away, and so the Red Sox business office gave us a settlement agreement where we could continue to build a mini Fenway Park (but not call it mini Fenway Park) and where we could keep the Fenway Park License Plate that several years ago our public charity worked so hard to put into production. That effort to put the license plate into production included the design of the logo as well as paying for all the costs associated with its production. Dedicated mini Fenway Park volunteers completed the collection of the first 1,500 required license plate applications and State Street Corporation hosted the Fenway Park License Plate Auction at the State Street Pavilion.

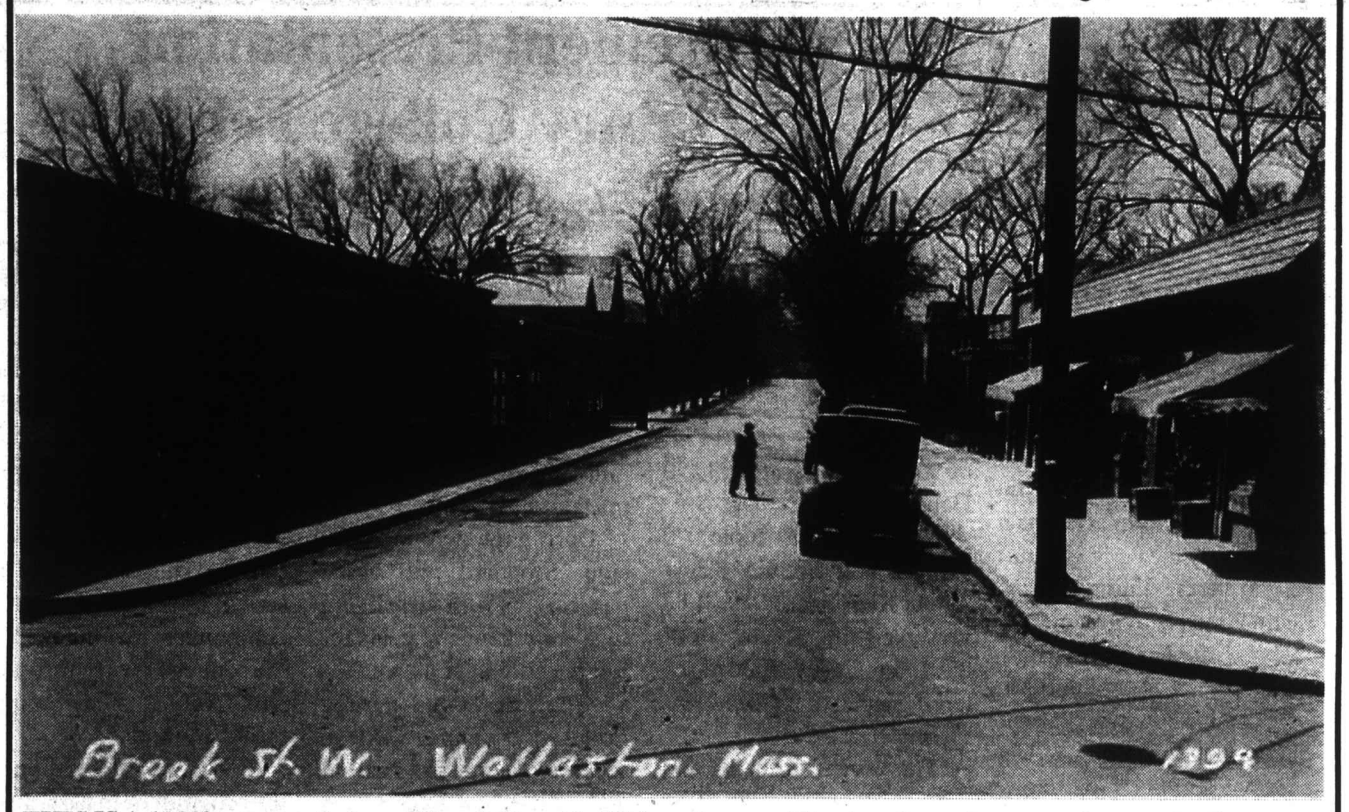

We are grateful to everyone who purchased a Fenway Park License Plate and have renewed their registration. Every day when I see a Fenway Park License Plate, I give it a thumbs up. It has certainly inspired me to keep going. We were also blessed to have pro bono services over the years that combined with the proceeds from the sale of license plates made a difference in moving our project forward. Since we started the project, there are many people to thank for being so helpful.

So the Red Sox business office no longer wanted to promote the project, we were no longer licensed, what's next? We have been working very hard the past year to regroup from the settlement agreement that we signed with the Red Sox business office in 2012. We set the stage to get back on track in Quincy by rebranding as a Ripken Academy, selecting a project manager, a civil engineer, a revised conceptual design that was approved by the Commonwealth, and a fundraising plan to pay for the construction documents necessary to secure our permitting so we would be in a strong position to move the project forward. Major League Baseball and the Registry of Motor Vehicles approved our auction of remaining low number license plates and Quirk Auto was on board to help us with the balance of the funding.

However, during the last few months, the Red Sox business office has been at it again. We believe they actively told Major League Baseball not to renew the license agreement that governed the Fenway Park License Plate. As a result the registrar recently issued a letter that indicated the Registry of Motor Vehicles is no longer able to issue or renew the Fenway Park license plate. This decision impacts many folks in Quincy that have a Fenway Park License Plate, so I want to share our position. We strongly believe that the Registry of Motor Vehicles does not have the authority to take these license plates away. We strongly believe that Major League Baseball does not have the authority under the licensing agreement to tell the Registry of Motor Ve-

THIS IS A 1920's postcard view of Brook Street in Wollaston looking west from Newport Avenue. The street was named for Sachem's Brook which runs from Milton through the Montclair bog and now underground to between the yacht clubs on Wollaston Beach. From Newport Avenue to Highland Avenue the brook is buried to the left of this street. It runs under the rear of the buildings on the left. Commercial buildings were first built on this part of Brook Street early in the 20th century. One of the first was James MacFarland's Hardware store that opened on the right side in 1900 and was in business for over 75 years. Over the years, dozens of other stores have located along here including an A & P market in the last store on the left and a First National on the corner at the right. ## Broad Meadows Seen As College Site

Mayor James R. McIntyre sought the return of 117 acres of Broad Meadows land to the city as a site for the proposed $15 million South Shore Community College. Some 125 acres of Sea Street in Merrymount were sold to the old Quincy Electric Company for $80,000 in 1959. Mayor McIntyre said he would ask the present owner of Massachusetts Electric Company to consider returning the land to the city as a proposed college site.

He is writing to John J. Ahern, president of Mass Electric Co., to arrange a meeting to discuss the possibility. "This would be an ideal site," McIntyre said. "It would also save the city a considerable amount of money."

TUPPER PLANS TO RETIRE – at 88!

This will be Tupper Miller's last "one more year."

Tupper, who at a spry 87 is probably the oldest municipal employee in the nation, again this week, requested and was granted a "one more year" extension as Quincy Sewer Department foreman.

The request-and approval-has been an annual rite since 1952 when he reached what for most is the mandatory retirement age of 70. But Tupper, who will be 88 on April 14, likes to work. And because when he went to work for the city in 1937 he came under a special category excluding him from retirement law, he has been able to stay on the job-with City Council permission.

He got it again for the 18th consecutive year. Tupper confided to The Quincy Sun, "This will be my last year."

Tupper Miller was born in 1882 when Chester Arthur was president. He was the son of Quincy Mayor John J. Miller, who died in office in October 1914, the only mayor to do so.

Arthur Keough Exemplifies The Meaning Of Giving

The Germantown Neighborhood Center has had a strong partnership with the Committee For Refugees and Immigrants under Arthur Keough's leadership for 24 years.

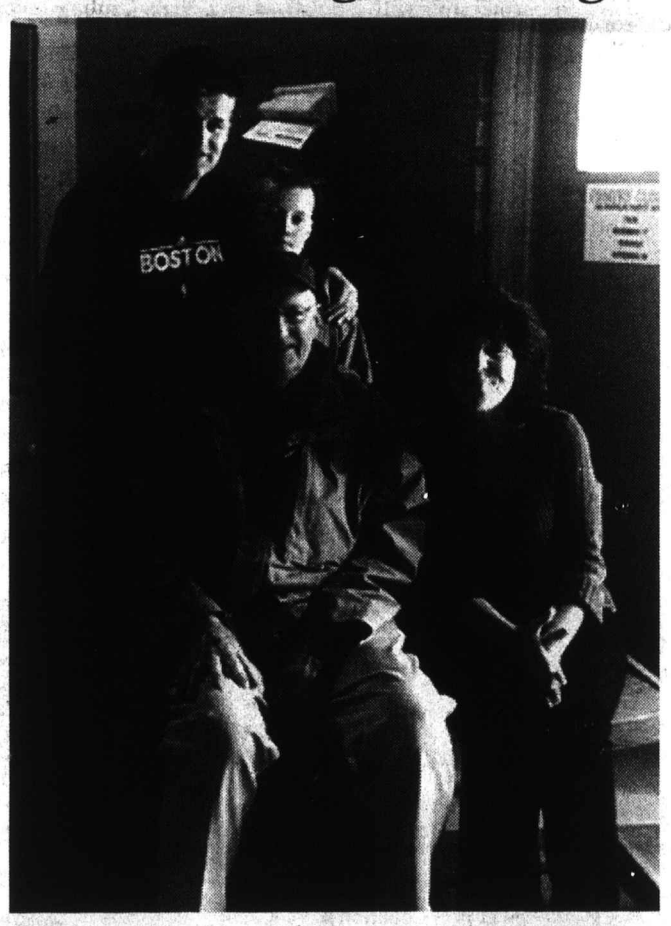

Since 1989 Arthur Keough and members of his family have been bringing truckloads of food to the Germantown Community during the holidays.

On a cold Saturday in November, I remember being at the Center waiting for Arthur Keough to arrive, looking around in the pantry at empty shelves and refrigerators, waiting anxiously and hoping we could achieve enough food to help the hundreds of families that would soon be lining up for assistance.

That morning Arthur Keough, his son Chris along with his grandson Timmy arrived with a huge boxed trucked. As they began to unload all the boxes, I sat with Author and realized that this goes far beyond what it means to give and that the true meaning of giving is passing on something special to each generation and instilling that special quality of caring about others.

Arthur Keough has exemplifies this year after year.

Quincy Symphony Orchestra Free Concert Feb. 16

The Quincy Symphony Orchestra (QSO) under the direction of Music Director Yoichi Udagawa continues its 60th season with a free concert on Sunday, Feb. 16th at 2:30 p.m.

The concert will feature Bach's Brandenburg Concerto No. 3, Haydn's Symphony No. 104 "London" and Bruch's Violin Concerto No. 1.

Critically acclaimed violinist Irina Muresanu joins the QSO to play one of the most popular concertos in the repertoire.

The performance will take place at the Lloyd Hill Performing Arts Center at Quincy High School, 100 Coddington St. in Quincy. Free parking is available on site.

The concert hall is also walking distance from the Quincy Center MBTA station.

Founded in 1955, the QSO consists of more than 50 volunteer musicians, including both amateurs and professionals from the Boston Metro-South region. The QSO offers three free concerts every season, in addition to an annual "Pops" fundraiser and holiday concert in partnership with the Quincy Public Schools.

For more information, contact us at 800-579-1618 or e-mail at: quincysymphonyorchestra.org.

Retirement Presentation At Quincy College Feb. 8

'You've Got The Floor' Speaker Series

Quincy College Life-Long Learning Program, "You've Got the Floor" Speaker Series, will host its first event of the year on Saturday, Feb. 8 at 9:30 a.m. on its Quincy campus, 1250 Hancock St.

The featured topic "8 Things You Should Know About Retirement" - will be presented by Kevin Stoddard, President and registered Principal of Stoddard Financial, LLC.

The event is free and open to the public. The first 25 registrants will receive a free copy of Stoddard's book, "Retire A Winner."

As a Chartered Financial Analyst (CFA) with over 20 years of experience, Stoddard is a veteran in the financial services business. His background includes investments, estate planning, tax strategies, and risk management.

During the two-hour session, Stoddard will assist participants with visualizing long-term financial goals for future retirement plans.

The Life-Long Learning Program at Quincy College seeks to enrich the cultural and intellectual lives of the communities in which it serves through stimulating and accessible programs and courses (non-credit), lectures and presentations. "You've Got the Floor" Speaker Series will be a program offered throughout the year to students, faculty, and the greater Quincy and South Shore communities.

Fred Doyle, Quincy College's Director of Non-Credit Education, said the series seeks to encourage community involvement at the college with informative, lively, and entertaining guest speakers.

For more information on the program or to participate as a guest speaker contact Fred Doyle at fdoyle@quincycollege.edu.

'My Favorite Teacher Contest'

Middle and high school students in Quincy are invited to submit entries in the "My Favorite Teacher Contest" sponsored by Barnes & Noble in Braintree.

The essay writing contest provides middle and high school students with the opportunity to tell their communities how much they appreciate their teachers.

Middle and high school students can nominate their teacher by writing essays, poems or thank you letters that share how their teacher has influenced their life and why they appreciate and admire their teacher. Entries will be judged on the compelling nature of the teacher's qualities, the sincerity of the student's appreciation and the quality of expression and writing.

Essay deadline is March 1. Students who want to participate should submit their essay or poem in person or by mail (attention "My Favorite Teacher" Contest) at the store location, 150 Granite St., Braintree, MA 02184 by March 1.

Complete details and entry forms can also be picked up at the Reference Desk of the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington Street, Quincy and at the North Quincy branch, 381 Hancock St., North Quincy.

The local winner will be recognized at a special community celebration in April 2014 at Barnes & Noble, Braintree. The student who wins the local essay contest will be awarded a Barnes & Noble Gift Card.

For more information visit: www.bn.com/myfavoriteteacher, or contact Barnes & Noble, Braintree @ 781 380 0914, with any questions.

11 Local Students Inducted Into National Honor Society

Eleven Boston College High School students from Quincy were recently inducted into the National Honor Society.

They are:

Connor McGonagle '14, Patrick O'Connor '14, Eric Casinelli '15, Timothy Chu '15, Sean Dooling '15, Mark Gillespie '15, Jack Kennedy '15, Terence Lau '15, Michael McDevitt '15, Eric McLoughney '15 and Jonathan Toomey '15. They were among the 143 seniors and juniors at B.C. High inducted into the Robert J. Fulton, S.J. Chapter of the National Honor Society at an evening ceremony at Boston College High School's Fahey-Hunter Commons.

The evening began with a processional march by the BC High Concert Band, followed by an invocation by Father Ronald Perry, SJ, BC High Assistant Coordinator of Service and Justice Initiatives.

Guest speaker was Ulrich Alvarez, a 1993 graduate of BC High and a teacher in the BC High Modern Language Department.

Patrick Tiernan, the NHS moderator, William Kemeza, BC High president, and Charles Drane, BC High Academic Vice Principal presided over the induction.

Father Ronald Perry, SJ gave the final blessing. The BC High band played the recessional. A reception for the inductees and their parents followed the ceremonies.

The National Honor Society is established under the National Association of Secondary School Principals to provide recognition to high school students who have clearly distinguished themselves in their school and community for scholarship, character, leadership and service.

Barbara Pyne Honored As ISS Volunteer Of The Week

In recognition of her dedicated service Barbara Pyne of Quincy was recently selected as Interfaith Social Services' volunteer of the week.

Each week over 100 people volunteer at Interfaith's offices in Quincy. The comprehensive multiservice center provides assistance to families and individuals from the South Shore in need of food, clothing, housing assistance and counseling.

Pyne has been volunteering at Interfaith for just a few months but has already become an important member of their team. She first heard about Interfaith from her sister-in-law, an Arbella Insurance employee, who had volunteered with Interfaith's food pantry as part of a corporate team. When Barbara looked at Interfaith's website and saw the variety of programs which they offer to the community she instantly loved it and has been with the organization ever since.

Every Monday morning she volunteers in the food pantry helping to package and distribute food to all of the people who come to Interfaith in need of assistance. Then on Tuesday afternoons she comes back to serve in the Bureau Drawer Thrift Shop. Alongside a team of other volunteers, Barbara helps to sort all of the clothing and household items that are donated every day. These volunteers pride themselves on the quality of items which they sort and prepare for sale in the thrift shop; as all of the proceeds benefit Interfaith's programs.

Here she is tagging an item of gently used clothing for resale in Interfaith's boutique style thrift shop, The Bureau Drawer. Two of the aspects of volunteering that Barbara loves the most are: the people and the Help for the Holidays program. "From the first day that I started volunteering everyone was so friendly and welcoming. They made me feel very comfortable. I've gotten to meet many new people and made a number of new friends."

During the holiday season Interfaith provides toys for local children whose parents are unable to otherwise purchase gifts. Assisting with that program by helping to sign up families and distributing gifts had a profound impact on Barbara. "Volunteering at Interfaith has brought joy to my life," she said. "This is the perfect place for me, I feel like I am truly needed."

With hundreds of individuals volunteering alongside civic, religious and corporate groups Interfaith Social Services has become one of the South Shore's most popular centers for volunteerism and community engagement. "Our volunteers are the heart and soul of the organization." said Interfaith's volunteer coordinator Paula Daniels. "Without their assistance our programs wouldn't be able to serve over 25,000 South Shore residents every year."

Interfaith operates one of the largest food pantries in Greater Boston. Last year, volunteers distributed 593,000 pounds of food to hungry families.

Interfaith's volunteers commit to at least one three-hour shift each week, some fulfill multiple time slots. Shifts are available between 9:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m. Volunteers work in the food pantry, thrift shop, front desk, or Career Closet. Serving in the food pantry includes assembling grocery orders for clients, restocking shelves and sorting food donations. Volunteering at the thrift shop is similar to working in a retail store. Volunteers sort through donations of clothing and household goods. They assist customers, fold clothes and organize merchandise for sale.

"Volunteering is a great way to get to know people in the community," said Cindy Lee of Braintree who has been volunteering at Interfaith for over 20 years. "You can come in as a group, or by yourself. High school students come in on their breaks and summer vacations. It is a real team spirit here, the volunteers get to know each other and there is always a familiar face."

Anyone interested in volunteering at Interfaith Social Services is encouraged to contact volunteer coordinator Paula Daniels at 617-773-6203 ext. 28 or via email pdaniels@interfaith-socialservices.org.

Tortellini - Sausage Sauté

During the holidays, there were many different kinds of foods on several buffets that we either cooked or had at each other's homes.

It was hard to pick a favorite-they were all so delicious. And when you don't cook it yourself, it always tastes better.

One entrée that my daughter Nancy made was wonderful and easy to prepare.

TORTELLINI, SAUSAGE SAUTÉ

2 large sausages
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 cloves of garlic (chopped)
2 tablespoons butter
2- tablespoon flour
1 -cup milk
1- pound spinach, cheese tortellini

Par boil the sausages. When cooled, slice in small pieces and set aside

In large skillet, heat the oil, sauté the garlic, and place the sausages and cook on low heat until done.

In another pan, make a roux by melting the butter, add the flour and milk and cook until thickened. Pour into the skillet.

Cook the tortellini according to directions.

Add the tortellini and cook until well blended and done.

Here is a great recipe for a meatloaf roll that went with it.

MEATLOAF ROLL

1- pound ground meat
1- egg
¼ cup seasoned breadcrumbs
¼ cup milk
2 tablespoons soy sauce (low sodium)
1 teaspoon Rosemary (or favorite herb)

Beat the egg and add the bread crumbs then the rest of the ingredients. Mix well and set aside.

FILLING

1 small zucchini (shredded)
2 cups spinach
3 slices provolone cheese
3 slices mozzarella cheese

Mix salt and pepper, some garlic powder and olive oil on the raw spinach and zucchini.

In between two sheets of either wax paper or aluminum foil, place the meatloaf mix. Roll it into a round pizza like shape and place filling in the center. Fold the meat shaping it like a log. Remove the paper, and place on to a greased cookie sheet. Bake in a 350 degree oven for 30-35 minutes. Let cool before cutting.

THE ARNEIS QUARTET will perform Arnold Schoenberg's second string quartet and Beethoven's string quartet op. 74, "The Harp" at a 3 p.m. concert Sunday at The Thomas Crane Public Library.

The Arneis Quartet Concert Sunday

The 2014 Winter/Spring Concerts at the Crane season continues at 3 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 9 with the critically acclaimed string chamber ensemble the Arneis Quartet. They will perform Arnold Schoenberg's second string quartet and Beethoven's string quartet op. 74, "The Harp."

Praised for their "beautiful sound" (Beijing Global Times) the Arneis Quartet is proving to be one of the finest emerging ensembles of its generation.

"As a relatively young quartet, they have already achieved something it often takes years to develop: a unique, collective sound which is as warm and full of sparkle as liquid gold." (Boston Musical Intelligencer)

The Boston-based quartet was hand-picked by the St. Lawrence String Quartet for its inaugural John Lad Prize, which included debuts on the Stanford University Lively Arts series and Music on Main in Vancouver. Arneis Quartet received a fellowship at the Aspen Center for Advanced String Quartet Studies for the summer of 2012, and acted as the 2011 Young Artist Fellows for the Apple Hill Center for Chamber Music. The Quartet has also attended Juilliard Quartet Seminar, the Deer Valley Emerging Quartets and Composers Program, and the Banff Centre Chamber Music Residency.

Arneis Quartet is the faculty ensemble in residence at the Dana Hall School of Music. The Quartet members are on the faculties of Boston University, Brookline Public Schools, the Chestnut Hill School, and act as coaches for the Boston Youth Symphony Orchestras. Arneis has also been guest faculty of the Lyceum Music Festival in Park City, UT.

Mayor Eyes New Squantum Elementary School

Rehab with little disruption to the current educational facility may still be an option, although Koch has his mind set on a completely new school. "That's the challenge with rehab—to try to do it without much disruption. It's almost impossible," he said. "I don't believe, from my perspective, that the Squantum School is worth saving."

Before an official decision can be made, a Statement of Interest (SOI) must be submitted to the MSBA, a government authority that oversees the funding of capital improvement projects in Massachusetts public schools.

He is hoping to have the application submitted and approved for a 70 percent reimbursement rate from the MSBA for the construction by next year.

"There was a lot of discussion as to whether we look at Squantum for new windows and doors, and the mayor decided in looking at it that that had a significant need," said Superintendent Richard DeCristofaro. "We'd be looking at a Statement of Interest in the next six or seven months to go to the MSBA to begin to really take a look at a new Squantum School."

SOI submissions determine eligibility for the Core Program, which reimburses school districts for extensive repairs, renovations, additions, and new school construction. Such a process requires School Committee and City Council approval and must be discussed before the Public Buildings Department.

Reimbursement rates are based on community income, per capita equalized property valuations, and the proportion of the district's low-income students.

Koch has little concern that the reimbursement formula will change despite the departure of current MSBA Treasurer Steven Grossman.

"The SBA and reimbursement is a very structured process," he said. "I don't think anyone is going to fool around with the structure of the SBA."

The deadline for SOI submissions to the MSBA is Feb. 14.

He added that he would be working closely with in-house engineers and staff to review the school's structure in preparation for the next cycle of the reimbursement process.

Meetings with the School Committee, ward councillor, and neighborhood residents are still necessary before SOI submission.

Squantum Elementary School, which opened in 1919, has undergone recent renovations such as the addition of new security cameras, locks on all classroom doors and interconnecting doors, as well as a proxy card building entry system for school staff, however Koch still considers it a "significant need" building.

According to School Committee Member David McCarthy, it is too early to determine the cost of such an undertaking. "Cost will impact decisions and public input will be warranted," he said, noting that if a new school were to be built, it would remain in the same area albeit with a different campus layout.

McCarthy said discussion needs to be focused on what schools need at a priority level. "We are grateful we have the ability to exercise our new building options but must always be aware of all budget issues in the school budget and city wide."

Koch wanted to remind Quincy taxpayers of the benefits of maintaining the city's buildings. "If we don't maintain them, you pay now or you pay later and you'll pay a lot more later if you let these buildings go."

"Beginning the planning process for our needs at Squantum Elementary School is the logical next step in our efforts together to create learning environments city wide, ready to welcome future generations of our young people," he said.

House OKs $10M For MBTA Station Redevelopment

provements to local roads that they otherwise would not be able to pay for," Rep. Mariano said.

"These improvements are crucial to promoting an inviting business climate in Quincy as well as protecting the quality of life of our residents."

The legislation includes $10 million for the Quincy Center Station Redevelopment Program, and designates the city of Quincy as the principal planning entity for the program. This would authorize the city to enter into a public-private partnership to address the economic, social and transportation needs of the area and instruct the MBTA and other appropriate public agencies to work with the city to develop a master plan for the site, which could include the construction of a state court house. The parking garage at Quincy Center station has been closed indefinitely since July 2012 when the MBTA deemed it structurally unsafe.

"The parking garage at Quincy Center has been sitting empty for too long and must be addressed, it also sits in a prime location which is ripe for development in conjunction with Mayor Koch's vision for the entire downtown," Mariano said. "We all understand how important a modern and accessible transportation system is for economic growth and Quincy Center is no exception."

The legislation also includes $1.2 million designated for improvements to the intersection of Sea Street and Quincy Shore Drive, supported by Rep. Chan. "Improving traffic flow on and off of Sea Street at Quincy Shore Dive is an important first step towards traffic safety on Sea Street," said Chan. "I will work closely with both state and city agencies on moving this project forward."

The legislation will improve and modernize the state's infrastructure system through other projects including $125 million to support the Department of Conservation in preserving and improving historic parkways and $2.5 billion for MBTA rail improvements including new Red and Orange Line cars. The bill also includes $50 million in grant monies for the 'complete streets' project which supports investments that accommodate users including motorists, pedestrians, cyclists, and public transit.

The bill now moves to the Senate.

Death Of Burned Man Appears Accidental

By SCOTT JACKSON

The death of a man found burned to death in North Quincy early Sunday morning is being treated as accidental, according to Fire Department officials.

Capt. Roger Kineavy said Engine 2 from the North Quincy Fire Station responded to a call for an outdoor fire that came in at 2:40 a.m. Sunday. Firefighters were able to reach the fire, which occurred in the wooded area between the Jimmy's Tire Shop and the entrance to Hannaford on Hancock Street.

The firefighters discovered the body after they arrived, and the State Fire Marshal's Office and Quincy Police Department were both notified and responded to the scene. Kineavy said Monday that police continue to investigate the man's death, but the initial report by Fire Department Inspector Jim Wong indicates nothing suspicious.

"It appears accidental," Kineavy said. "It's not suspicious."

According to the Norfolk County District Attorney's Office, there was evidence at the scene suggesting that the individual may have been living in that area and may have used Sterno and other means to keep warm.

The remains were taken to the Office of the Chief Medical Examiner in Boston. An autopsy was performed on Sunday. The cause and manner of death remain undetermined pending further study and testing. The OCME did not report any signs of suspicious trauma at this stage. Detectives are investigating a possible identification on the individual, but positive ID has not yet been made.

The investigation is ongoing.

The selection committee interviewed 10 of the candidates and passed along recommended finalists, including Dein, to the Mayor to make the final decision.

In her role, Dein is responsible for a wide range of policy initiatives all targeting energy efficiency and sustainability, including coordinating the City's energy reduction plan, tracking data, pursuing Green Communities grant funding, working on the various solar-energy initiatives within the City, working to add energy-efficient vehicles to the City's fleet; and working with City departments and community groups on energy policies, among other priorities.

Dein, of Arlington, joins Energy Technician David Scott of Quincy as the leaders of the Mayor's expanded energy policy in the Department of Public Buildings that was included as part of the 2014 budget. Scott, a mechanical engineer, is responsible for technical systems management, repairs and changes while Dein leads policy initiatives.

"We are committed to a sound, sustainable and efficient energy future for Quincy, and these appointments are important additions to our team that will help us get there," Koch said.

Lunar New Year Festival Feb. 16 At NQ High School

More than 8,000 people are expected at North Quincy High School on Sunday, Feb. 16 for one of the biggest Lunar New Year Festivals in the region.

The 26th Quincy Lunar New Year Festival hosted by Quincy Asian Resources will open with a traditional Lion Dance at 10:45 a.m., followed by hours of live entertainment, exhibits, activities and information for people of all backgrounds and cultures to enjoy.

The festival is just part of the global celebration of the Lunar Year of the Horse. The spirit of the horse is revered as the symbol of the Chinese people's character and is considered to be energetic, warm-hearted and intelligent.

This year's festival features a Family Area with crafts, games and physical activities for kids organized by the South Shore YMCA; a "Chinese farming village" themed Cultural Area with Chinese brush painting, costumes and an eastern herbal medicine display; a Green Area sponsored by State Street to educate visitors about the environment; and a Chinese Wishing Tree where people can ask for their dreams to come true.

Free parking at several locations around North Quincy High School, a large food court featuring traditional foods, and more than 100 volunteers from the community will help to make this an event you will enjoy and remember.

The entire festival is free to the public thanks to Presenting Sponsor South Cove Community Health Center, along with dozens of other businesses, community organizations, and government and social service agencies, many of which will be available with information tables within the exhibit area.

In the event of bad weather, the event will be rescheduled for February 23rd with announcements on local media channels. More information is available at www.quincyasianresources.org.

Cuban Political Posters Exhibit

Cuban Political Posters from the collection of Stephen Lewis will be on display in the Library's Coletti reading room at The Thomas Crane Library through Feb. 26.

They represent a small fraction of the poster collection of this long-time activist in the labor movement. Stephen has exhibited at a number of public libraries in Massachusetts and two of the state Heritage parks. He has presented at the annual conference of the National Council on Public History, and on cable television programs.

Organizations in many countries use posters as a way to communicate ideas and messages to their audience. Posters are sometimes used as billboards and are pasted on walls, fences, and poles all over a city. Unions sometimes hang posters in work places to warn of dangers, educate about benefits or inspire actions. Posters sometimes use mainly the written word to communicate a message. Other times they rely on creative art to communicate the idea. It is an art form that is easily accessible to many people. The art goes to the people rather than the people having to go to a museum. It is a communication tool that is less frequently used by unions in the United States.

In 1959, the Cuban people staged a revolution against the dictator Batista. The revolution had the broad support of most of the peasants and workers of Cuba. Once the revolutionaries had consolidated power, they set about to make profound changes in Cuban society. Art and culture were areas included in these changes. Many Cuban artists used the medium of poster art to create powerful images that reflected the change that was occurring in Cuban society. As some years passed, Cuba was strangled by an economic blockade imposed against them by the government of the United States. This made it expensive and difficult to obtain many things, including art supplies. In spite of this, the artists of Cuba survived and their art flourished.

Koch: 'I'm Bullish On Downtown Quincy'

council would be. "We are going to see drastic changes for the good, for the future of our city with a rehabbed, renewed, however you want to put it, downtown Quincy. It's going to happen. The buildings may change. The square footage is going to change. Some of the uses may change. But it's going to happen."

As originally envisioned, the project would create 3.5 million square feet of new retail, residential, and commercial space throughout Quincy Center. But because of market conditions, including a smaller appetite for large offices outside of Boston, Koch said that number could be reduced by up to 20 percent. The square footage could increase again during later phases of the project, depending on market demand.

"I think that what was 3.5 million square feet of development for everything, I think it will be less than that. I think we'll be 2.8 to 3 million based on some of the scaling down. Some people may be happy with that. Some people were critical, thought we were trying to put too much down there," the mayor said.

"Obviously we're focusing on Step 1, then Step 2 and Step 3. Market conditions change. It may explode and all of a sudden we're doing more density."

At a December meeting at the Quincy Chamber of Commerce headquarters, Koch told business leaders and residents he was preparing to ask the council to amend the LDA to reduce the amount of money Street-Works is obligated to pay the city. That announcement came one month after Street-Works partner Richard Heapes told the council that downtown development, in particular work on the Merchants Row/Block 4 project at the 1400 block of Hancock Street, had stopped because of surging construction costs throughout Greater Boston.

In the recent interview, the mayor noted he has continued to meet with officials from the developer and its financial backers since his announcement in December and has instructed city officials to review the current LDA and investigate how it can be changed to expedite the project.

"I want to make it perfectly clear to people we're working extremely hard to continue to keep the downtown on track. It's an extremely complicated program. There are a lot of pieces to it, a lot of moving parts, and it is market-dependent," Koch said.

"Having said all of that, I meet with the developers at least once weekly; it's been more often lately. I'm out with other parties relating to the development – investors and others. I have tasked my team, particularly the legal group, to come together and they've been meeting, to look at every aspect of the LDA – to look at any way from our perspective, proactively, how we as a city can make this thing move more quickly.

"At the same time, the Street-Works team is doing the same thing from their angle, their perspective. The two teams have had some general discussions but they're going to be meeting more formally to talk about what the game plan is going to be going forward."

Once officials from both sides make their recommendations, Koch said he would decide what he would ask the council to consider. The mayor explained that it could be either an amendment to the current LDA or potentially an entirely different approach. In either case, he said the city's general fund revenue would not be used to finance the project.

"When the teams have finished and they make recommendations to me, I will make decisions about what I'm going to bring to the council. Perhaps it's changes to the LDA. There could be a whole new approach that makes sense for the city but we're not aware of it yet because the minds are now meeting on that stuff," the mayor said.

"Everything is on the table as far as how to get this done without any costs to the city. I'm not going to touch the general fund to do this project. I am not going to ask the taxpayers of this city to spend money down here with no return. It's not going to happen."

The mayor also commented on the Merchants Row project. When that component of the downtown project was originally introduced in late 2012, Street-Works said it would include two new buildings – one 15 stories tall and the other five stories tall – adjacent to the Granite Trust Building at 1400 Hancock St, which was set to be renovated during the project.

In August of last year, the developer announced the acquisition of additional property on the block, and said the site would include three six-story buildings instead of the 15-story and five-story buildings. Koch said he favors the current plan, with the shorter buildings on a larger footprint, because it includes additional space for street level retail and won't overshadow the Granite Trust Building.

"The Merchants Row/Block 4, whatever we're going to call it, was never intended to be 15 stories if you looked at the master plan. The market got hot residential and [Street-Works] thought it was going to take advantage of that market. But then obviously with further cost analysis they couldn't make it work with the return," the mayor said.

"So they're spreading out the footprint, and they've got more property under control on Cottage Avenue and Hancock Street, so they were able to spread it lower and spread it out, which reduced the cost. I think that one is a better program. I wasn't as crazy about the 15-story there because of the effect it has on 1400. 1400 is an iconic building. If you're coming south on Hancock, picture that 15-story dwarfing it. And Mass. Historic had the same challenge with that one.

"We're still talking about the same amount of units. We're talking about more square footage in retail space. I think it's going to be a better program in the end."

Koch declined to give a timeline for the Merchants Row project, but said he hopes construction on that site begins by the end of this year. The mayor also noted Street-Works has until September under the current LDA to close on the Ross Garage, where the remainder of the first phase of the downtown project will be built.

"I'd love to see some activity before the end of '14 – construction activity. There is a lot of activity going on behind the scenes – a lot of money being spent on revisions of plans and all that stuff," Koch said.

"As you know, Street-Works bought an extension last September for $250,000, which was allowed under the LDA for this September. The clock is ticking on all that stuff. We're going to know this year where we are on Step 1 and the rest of the project."

Even if Street-Works abandoned its plan to redevelop Quincy Center, the mayor said Quincy would have still benefited by using the project to leverage state and federal funds to finance the relocation of Town Brook and construction of the Walter J. Hannon Parkway.

"I don't believe this because I think [the project] is going to happen, but in the worst case the scenario if [Street-Works] left town there would be 10 developers in here tomorrow looking to develop parcels downtown. We're ripe now for development. Town Brook has been moved. Hannon Parkway has been built," he said.

"Those things had to happen and if you didn't have the development to leverage those two projects those wouldn't have happened. It's the chicken and the egg thing. We go to the state. We have a development here. Okay, it makes sense for them to fund it. If we didn't have a development there, we just wanted to willy-nilly go in there and ask for this, it was never going to happen.

"We've leveraged the development to get the federal and state dollars to come in and do the infrastructure changes, which allows the downtown to be developed. The land is already far more valuable than it was before we started this program. And I don't say that in a defensive way. I say that in a realistic way. That's how things work."

Sheets, Council Concerned Over Salem Closure

and some action before final decisions are made by the MBTA because the City of Quincy I think wants and deserves to have commuter boat service, and I for one will fight for it."

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest, who helped launch a campaign to bring a Navy ship back the shipyard when she was a student at Broad Meadows, said there was no warning given to anyone when the MBTA closed the pier back in September. She noted the MBTA also gave no warning when it closed the Quincy Center garage in July 2012.

"Everyone knew there were poor conditions at the garage at the Quincy Center train station, but no one anticipated the garage's close. The garage was closed with no warning to our community. The MBTA did the same thing to the ferry terminal," Laforest said. "Late September they show up on the USS Salem's gangway [and say] 'sorry your operations are closed, the public cannot board the ship.'"

"When you know you have a problem and you're dealing with it, why the shock and instant closure without communicating to the public?" Laforest added. "The public deserves to know more. I have many commuters who are anxiously awaiting being able to park in the Quincy Center garage and being able to take the ferry into Boston."

7 Quincy Firefighters Graduate From Training Academy

By SCOTT JACKSON

Seven new firefighters have reported for duty following ten weeks of training.

The firefighters – John P. Holler, Darryl J. Zoia, George E. Zirngiebel, Justin M. Pothier, Timothy M. Lynch, Stephen T. Spring, and Jonathan W. O'Driscoll – graduated from the academy recently, a ten-week long training period capped off by a graduation ceremony at the Quincy Sons of Italy on Jan. 24.

The new firefighters are currently reporting to Fire Department headquarters on Quincy Avenue, where they will be assigned to fill in at other stations as needed, according to Deputy Fire Chief Joe Jackson. Jackson said the department is trying to keep the seven firefighters at the three stations that house both engine and ladder companies – fire headquarters and the Wollaston and North Quincy firehouses – for six weeks. After that, they may be assigned to other stations.

"They're going to report to duty at headquarters," Jackson said. "We're trying to keep them at multi-piece stations for the next six weeks."

During their ten weeks at the academy, the firefighters trained in a number of areas, including fire suppression, hazardous waste handling, rappelling, and vehicle rescues. Most of the training took place at the Fore River Shipyard, and the firefighters also practiced putting out live fires on Moon Island.

"It's a ten-week program. It's pretty intensive," Jackson said.

Ex-Red Sox Closer Donates $15K to QFD

By SCOTT JACKSON

Former Red Sox closer Joel Hanrahan and his wife Kimberly donated $15,000 to the Quincy Fire Department, a donation that will likely go towards safety training for firefighters.

Paul Moody, the president IAFF Local 792 – the Quincy firefighter's union – said Hanrahan donated the money out of his playoff share, money players earn when their team appears in the MLB postseason. Moody said Hanrahan has made similar donations to police and fire departments in the past.

"He is friends with one of the members and donated the money out of his playoff purse," Moody said. "Joel and his wife Kim made the donation. She has ties to the city and enjoyed living here."

Moody added that the Fire Department and union are weighing how they will utilize the money, which he said would likely be used to improve firefighter safety.

"The Quincy Fire Department and the union are working on how best to use the money for the safety and education of the firefighters," Moody said.

The Red Sox acquired Hanrahan last offseason from the Pittsburg Pirates as part of a six-player trade. The right-handed pitcher began the 2013 season as Boston's closer, but appeared in only nine games before being placed on the disabled list on May 7. He then had season-ending Tommy John Surgery nine days later. Hanrahan is currently a free agent.

Safer Internet Day

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

While the eyes of the world focus on the XXII Winter Olympics in the resort town of Sochi, Russia this month, we'd like to bring your attention to another worthy focal point: internet safety.

February 11 is Safer Internet Day. If there were an Olympic event for safe Internet transactions, we believe the Social Security Administration would be in the running for a gold medal.

We take Internet security seriously. After all, Security is our middle name.

What are some of the convenient, safe, and secure things you can do online at www.socialsecurity.gov?

You can get a personalized estimate of your future benefits using our Retirement Estimator. Apply for retirement or disability benefits. If you don't plan to retire but you want to apply only for Medicare at age 65, you can do it online. You can even establish and maintain a my Social Security account at any age to access all your personal Social Security information at any time convenient for you. All of these things can be done in minutes, and you don't have to worry about security issues. On Safer Internet Day and every day, your information is secure with us.

If you've experienced a safe, convenient service at our website, why not share the experience at our social media hub? Of course, you'll want to be careful not to post any personal identifying information, such as your Social Security number. But whether you want to spread the word about Safer Internet Day or share an experience you've had dealing with Social Security, we encourage you to join us on Facebook, Twitter, YouTube, and Pinterest. You'll find these connections, along with the ability to get email updates, view the photo blog, join webinars and more at our social media hub. Just visit www.socialsecurity.gov/socialmedia.

The next Olympic event is about to begin in Sochi. But remember that the Social Security Administration gets a gold medal when it comes to safe transactions on the Internet. Security is our middle name.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

THE TOOTH FAIRY EMERGES FROM THE RECESSION

As the American economy emerges from a deep recession, there is one sure economic indicator that shows that things are improving. According to the latest survey of Tooth Fairies, children are receiving an average $3.70 for each of their lost teeth. This represents a healthy 23% increase over last year's $3 reward. For those keeping track, there has been a 42% spike in the value of teeth placed under children's pillows since 2011. Of course, the value of lost teeth varies widely, from region to region and family to family. To the dentist, the real value in losing a "baby" tooth comes with the understanding that the permanent tooth that replaces it is invaluable and should be treated so.

Today's column has been brought to you by our entire staff. We know how important having a great smile is to looking and feeling good. Our entire team provides highest quality, individually tailored healthcare to every one of our patients. We know that the first step towards a beautiful smile begins with selecting a dentist that you can rely on. Don't hesitate to give us a call if you have any questions, or if you would like to schedule an appointment. Please call 617-479-6220. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we are currently accepting new patients. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com

P.S. Many years of advising Tooth Fairies has led numerous dentists to conclude that children often prefer a shiny silver dollar (or two) to the so very ordinary and lackluster paper money with the numbers on it.

Whatever Happened To Mini Fenway Park?

hicles not to renew license plate registrations. We hope Major League Baseball will agree with this too, however, they have not responded to our letter. If Major League Baseball does agree, then the registrar has pledged to immediately resume the renewal of license plates. However, the question will remain: can we resume the selling of license plates? Unfortunately, that doesn't get resolved until the Red Sox business office withdraws their opposition to the renewal of the Major League Baseball license.

Throughout all of our challenges we have always remained positive and respectful, especially with the Red Sox business office. We could have kicked them when they were down. Remember those two seasons? But we didn't. However, given the recent situation they put us in; our only choice is to go public with these facts. I hope they appreciate that and recognize we have compromised as far as possible!

All of this is most unfortunate since the #11 license plate was presented to John Henry in appreciation of his support for the mission of Kids Replica Ballpark and for his donation to our non profit organization of the Fenway Park License Plate Series to help us realize that mission. It is unfortunate in many other respects too because many people who are loyal Red Sox fans have license plate numbers that connect to birthdays and anniversaries. They will now lose their license plates. It has also made our fundraising and development efforts more challenging with the loss of revenue from the Fenway Park License Plate and the need until this matter is resolved to keep on hold our plans to promote and market the license plate statewide; plans that would generate significant revenue for the project.

This situation regarding the license plate would also make it more challenging for our Capital Campaign to raise the $2.5 million to build the replica ballpark. Given that we already lost a $1 million pledged gift, one possible strategy going forward is to regroup with corporations headquartered in Quincy that have a connection to Red Sox/Fenway Park and that have previously expressed an interest in mini Fenway Park (Arbella, State Street, Stop & Shop and Granite City Electric). At this point, however, the lack of enthusiasm from the Red Sox business office may continue to create a problem.

Another strategy is to go to independent corporate sponsors that have no connection to the Red Sox business office. The most logical choice is CITGO. They have a corporate presence in the Quincy/Braintree area and a strong yet independent connection to Fenway Park with the CITGO sign. We approached CITGO in the past and they did express an interest.

Hopefully, we can identify others and move forward once again. The bottom line, however, is that we have not got this done and I take my share of responsibility for that. But to our credit, we have also not given up. I wear a Red Sox Nation wrist band that reminds me every day to "believe." It hurts to disappoint kids, so I hope the Red Sox business office comes around because if you love the game of baseball then you have to love mini Fenway Park; it's about kids and the future of the game. We hope you will agree.

Cabaret License Granted

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Arben Berberi's request for a Cabaret License for The Granite Street Café located at 378 Granite St. was granted at last Tuesday's meeting of the Licensing Board.

The license allows for live music to be played by three or less instruments in the café, as well as a karaoke machine and trivia nights.

"I'm concerned a little bit from this turning from a restaurant into a night club," said board member Jay Duca. "Where is the band going to go and how often will you be open and until what time of night?"

Berberi currently holds a liquor license for the 49-seat café.

"This is different than a restaurant use, when you're getting into karaoke and that kind of stuff," said Duca.

The establishment currently stays open until 8 p.m. on Friday and Saturday nights. Berberi's request allows for extended hours on those nights for live Albanian, country, Greek, and Irish music to be performed roughly every two weeks.

Weekend and holiday hours could potentially extend from 3 p.m. until midnight.

Co-Chairman Andrew Scheele echoed Duca's concerns.

"If we grant you the Cabaret License, if we find that all of a sudden you're opening up six days a week until midnight and you're having different bands there every single night of the week, I'm not sure that's what we're looking for for that particular area," he said.

Berberi assured board members that he had no intention of overextending the use of his license. "What I'm doing right now, the people like it and the neighborhood is happy," he said.

"In the instances where live music has been allowed by this board I have received no complaints from the residents in the area," read a letter from Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci. "Further, it is my understanding that there have been no requests for police or fire services as a result of live music events held at The Granite Café. I have always found Mr. Berberi to be a partner in the community who has its interests in mind."

Scheele suggested granting the license with the understanding that live music events would only be permitted on Friday and Saturday nights until midnight. Other events would require a separate, One-Day Cabaret License. Additionally, the license would require renewal at the end of the year.

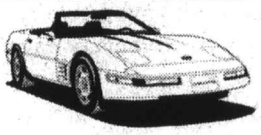

In other Licensing Board news, Louis Tozzi was granted a One-Day Special Use Permit for the Jimmy Kennedy Memorial Run for ALS—also known as Lou Gehrig's Disease—to take place Saturday, June 14. The walk is scheduled to begin at 9:30 a.m. followed by a race to begin at 10:30 a.m., rain or shine.

A request by Patricia Sullivan for the United First Parish Church for a One-Day Wine & Malt License for Saturday, Feb. 8 was also heard. Sullivan said the event will raise money for the church ESL (English Second Language) program and will also extend to a celebration honoring the church's 375th year as a congregation. The event will take place from 6 -10 p.m. The license was granted unanimously.

Kara Kuntupis was granted a One-Day Wine & Malt License for the Houghs Neck Congregational Church located at 310 Manet Ave. for their 5th annual Chili Cook-Off to take place Saturday, Feb. 15 from 2-5 p.m.

The request of Matteo Pizzeria, Inc. doing business as Matteo's Pizza & Subs at 243-247 Atlantic St. for a Common Victualer License was unanimously granted. Manager Esmeralda Polena, Represented by Attorney Jon Aieta, said she and her husband would work full-time at the no-seat, take-out establishment which would serve predominantly lunch and dinner fare.

Good Fortune Supermarket Manager Wu Xiao Yong's request for a Common Victualer License was granted, allowing for the establishment of a 24-seat coffee shop inside the market located at 226-230 Quincy Ave.

New Q/A Column On Interior Decorating

In future issues of The Quincy Sun; we will be presenting a new column called "Dear Secretary of the Interior," in which Quincy interior decorator, Barbara Graceffa, will answer your decorating questions.

This new column will offer advice on everything from freshening up a tired looking room to finding low-cost storage solutions or ideas to prepare your house for the real estate market.

Readers are invited to submit questions via email directly to Graceffa's website and she will select two or three to answer each week. Your questions can be about color selection, furniture placement, arranging artwork, choosing window treatments, decorating on a budget, and other interior decorating needs. Inquiries about downsizing and decluttering your home or office will be answered as well.

Barbara Graceffa is President and CEO of Secretary of the Interior, a home-based, part-time business she opened six years ago. She has a certificate in interior decorating from Massasoit Community College and has taught courses at Braintree Adult Education, UMass Boston's Osher Lifelong Learning Institute, and for several women's organizations on the South Shore. She is also an accomplished craftswoman with skills in photography, sewing, and floral arranging.

"I really enjoy my job," said Graceffa, "especially the variety of projects. I have designed bachelor pads with dark leather furniture and an oversized TV, sewn bedding and curtains for a baby's nursery, and led shopping excursions with a client looking for new furniture, rugs, or accessories. My specialty is finding creative solutions at reasonable rates. I have a knack for thinking outside the box, too; for example, I love to sew unique pillows from grandpa's neckties, your old scouting badges, or karate belts, or turn a beautiful pair of high heels into a stunning floral arrangement."

Do you have a decorating problem needing a professional solution? Send your questions to Secretary of the Interior at barbara@secinterior.com.

Quincy Planning Department Receives National Achievement Award

The City of Quincy's Department of Planning and Community Development was recently presented the Audrey Nelson Community Development Achievement Award from the National Community Development Association (NCDA) at the Winter Legislative Meeting of NCDA next month in Washington, D.C.

This is the third time the City of Quincy has won this award over the past six years.

The Audrey Nelson award recognizes exemplary uses of Community Development Block Grant and "HOME Investment Partnership" funds in meeting the needs of families and neighborhoods.

Quincy was recognized for the "Winter Gardens" project, in collaboration with NeighborWorks Southern Mass. Winter Gardens is a 24 unit energy-efficient affordable family rental housing development in the city's Quincy Point neighborhood, which opened in October 2012.

$11.9M In Construction, Tech Improvements At QMC

Quincy Medical Center, a part of the Steward Health Care System LLC (Steward), today released an economic impact report for 2010-2012, produced by the Health Business Group, an independent consulting firm in Boston. The report reveals that Steward invested $11.9 million in construction and technology improvements at Quincy Medical Center, provided $14.5 million in community benefits and delivered $2.1 million in tax revenues to the City of Quincy.

"Steward acquired community hospitals facing significant financial headwinds," explained David Williams, president of Health Business Group. "Our analysis shows that significant investments made by Steward had a positive economic impact on the surrounding communities. Meanwhile, quality of care measures have improved."

The $11.9 million capital investment at Quincy Medical Center includes radiology waiting area updates, patient care unit upgrades, and 14 beds for the Orthopedic Surgery Growth Initiative and other significant upgrades. For example, the updated patient care units provide high quality, up-to-date care for patients in a modern and welcoming environment. The new units incorporate the latest technology for patient comfort and rehabilitation.

In addition to construction and capital improvements, the hospital provided $14.5 million in community benefit investments, which included supporting programs that promoted chronic disease awareness and screening, reducing disparities in the provision of care and promoting wellness in vulnerable populations. This figure also includes unreimbursed Medicaid costs.

In 2011 and 2012, the hospital contributed $2.1 million in local property taxes, making it the third largest contributor of property taxes in Quincy. It is also one of the largest employers in Quincy, which generates additional economic benefits to the community. Steward pays more than typical employers in Massachusetts (the median full-time Steward job pays $47,071 in wages compared with $43,420 for Massachusetts as a whole). Steward pays all of its employees a "living wage" of $11.50 per hour, which is $3.50 more than the Massachusetts minimum.

As a system, Steward has committed $600 million in new capital that directly and indirectly supported approximately 33,000 jobs, generated nearly $35 million in local real estate taxes and was responsible for $8.4 billion of economic impact in 2011 and 2012. In addition to direct impacts, Steward creates secondary benefits as employee and supplier spending ripples through the economy to local businesses such as grocery stores, auto dealers, dry cleaners and others.

Steward's integrated community care model coordinates patient care among primary care physicians, specialists and other related healthcare providers in the system. Steward's network includes over 3,000 physicians, 11 acute care hospitals, home care, an imaging operation, and a number of other post acute services. Patients are able to see their primary care doctors close to where they live and they are referred to specialists within the Steward system when needed. For patients, this means that their medical records are shared, their doctors are talking to each other, unnecessary duplication of tests can be avoided, and all levels of care are seamlessly integrated to meet personal needs.

Refrigerator Recycling Rebate Increased To $100

For a limited time, The Sponsors of Mass Save® - Cape Light Compact, National Grid, NSTAR Electric, and Western Massachusetts Electric Company - are offering a special $100 rebate to residential electric customers for recycling outdated, second refrigerators or freezers through the Mass Save® appliance recycling program.

The Mass Save® appliance recycling program encourages residential electric customers to reduce their energy use by recycling old refrigerators and freezers. By participating in the program, customers will receive the special $100 rebate and save as much as $150 a year by lowering their household energy usage.

Refrigerators and freezers must be in working order, clean and empty, with an inside measurement of between 10 and 30 cubic feet — standard size for most units. A maximum of two units per household per calendar year will be accepted.

The program runs year-round with a $50 rebate, but the special $100 rebate only lasts through February 28, 2014.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Wednesday, January 26, 2014, at approximately 1:01a.m., Officer David Levine was dispatched to Domino's Pizza, located at 61 Hancock Street, for a report of an armed robbery that had just occurred.

While en route to the location, the Dispatcher gave out a description of the suspect vehicle, the registration and southerly direction of travel to numerous units. As Officers converged on the area, the Dispatcher informed them that the weapon used in the armed robbery was a pickaxe and that the suspect vehicle was reported stolen from Hingham the day before.

When Officer Levine arrived on scene, he observed the pickaxe on the ground just outside the entrance door and two one dollar bills and one five dollar bill scattered on the ground along with a few coins. The Officer quickly interviewed the Assistant Manager in order to get more information out to responding Officers. It was determined that the suspect vehicle headed south on Hancock Street (one way at this point) but it was unknown if the vehicle turned and went over the Neponset Bridge, took Newport Avenue or continued on Hancock Street. The description given of the male suspect and the stolen vehicle involved were given out to all local police departments.

The suspect attempted to hide his identity by wearing winter gloves and some type of gas mask, with circle filters on each side and a clear plastic face cover. The Assistant Manager said he saw the suspect enter the store with the mask on, holding a pickaxe in full view. The suspect yelled out repeatedly, "I want the register!" The Assistant Manager then told the suspect he was calling the Police as he pulled out his cell phone. The suspect reacted by swinging the pickaxe into the wall next to the counter, followed by the suspect stating, "I'm serious." The suspect then went to the register and took the money. There were $1 and $5 dollar bills and some coins in the register. The suspect kept dropping the money, so he decided to take the drawer and ran out of the store to an awaiting car, which had the passenger side door open. In his haste, he left the pickaxe at the crime scene. The vehicle fled south on Hancock Street. The Assistant Manager saw that the driver was a white male.

It was estimated that the suspect got away with less than $90. When asked about the video surveillance evidence, the Assistant Manager said that he did not have the access code and it would be available at 11:00 a.m. when the store supervisor came in. Officer Levine went to the Police station to type his report and soon after a woman came into the lobby. She identified herself as the owner of the stolen vehicle. She said that she was at the Hingham Police Station reporting the larceny of her vehicle when the Hingham Officer told her that the Quincy Police were presently looking for the vehicle because it was involved in a crime.

The Officer asked her if the pickaxe came from her vehicle and she said that it was hers and she works as a Mason. She also confirmed that the mask was hers too. The owner of the car said that she knew who took her car without permission and identified him.

LT. DAN MINTON

Sergeant Patrick Buonaugurio showed a photo of the suspect to the Assistant Manager at Domino's and he responded, "That definitely looks like the guy." At 11:00 a.m., Detective A.J. Carthas picked up the investigation by contacting Domino's Pizza to see if the video was ready. After numerous delays, he was told that the video would be available on the 27th in the Brockton store.

In the meantime, Detective Carthas re-interviewed the car owner, who said that a female and a male (suspect) were "all hanging out at my house." At some point in the evening, the male suspect took the car without permission. When she realized this, she called and texted him numerous times explaining that she wanted her car back or she was going to report it stolen. When he didn't bring the car back, she went to the Hingham Police and it was then that she learned her car was involved in an armed robbery.

On January 27th, Detective Carthas learned that the stolen vehicle had been located on Skyline Drive in Braintree, where the suspect was staying with his parents. Braintree Police Officers made contact with the suspect, who said that the car owner gave him permission to use the vehicle. Once the vehicle was towed to a secure location, Detective Dave Pacino assisted Detective Carthas in searching it for evidence and came up with the following items:

1. Green hooded Celtics sweatshirt.
2. Green dress shirt
3. 2 Mountain Dew bottles (20oz.)
4. Receipt from NH Dept. of Transportation (01/26/2014-11:43am)
5. Stop and Shop receipt from Amesbury Ma store (01/26/14-12:06pm)
6. Home Depot Receipt from Somerville MA store (1/26/14-3:10pm)
7. 2 Ma. license plates-Ma Reg-6SH100 and MA Reg. 677NG9

The owner said that these items were not in her vehicle when she last drove it.

The Hingham Police notified the Quincy Police Department that a warrant had been issued for the suspect for "Larceny of a Motor Vehicle." At approximately 3:00 p.m., the Detectives met with Hingham and Braintree Detectives to arrest for the suspect at 10 Skyline Drive. The suspect was taken into custody and transported to the Braintree Police station for booking.

After being given Miranda rights, the suspect willingly said that the owner gave him permission to take it, so he went to South Boston where he got drunk and high. He said that he did not leave South Boston until the next afternoon when his friend drove him home. As receipts showed that the vehicle may have been in Amesbury, Somerville or New Hampshire, the suspect was asked if at any point he was in those locations. The suspect adamantly denied this. When told about the receipts found in the vehicle, the suspect continued to deny that he left South Boston. When asked what he was wearing during the time of the robbery, the suspect said he had on a "red hoodie, jeans and sneakers. When he was shown the green Celtics hooded sweatshirt that was recovered from the stolen motor vehicle and asked if he knew who it belonged to, the suspect said it was his. When asked why it was in the vehicle he stated, "Obviously, I was wearing it."

The suspect denied being in Quincy during the time of the robbery but was in possession of the vehicle at the time. A review of the Domino's security video showed the Celtics sweatshirt being worn during the robbery and the physical build of the suspect and limited head/facial features were in line with that of the suspect. In addition, Detectives went to the Amesbury Stop N Shop store to review video, which showed the suspect in the store wearing the same sweatshirt. Based on evidence available and the lies the suspect was caught in, there was strong evidence to believe that the suspect, a 27 year old Braintree resident, committed the crime of Armed Robbery and soon after he was arrested again. Nice Work!

QUINCY POLICE DEPARTMENT OPEN HOUSE/ TOURS/BLOOD DRIVE! On Saturday, February 15th, the Quincy Police Department will have an open house and tours of the station from 10:00 A.M. to 2:00 P.M. Tours will include the communications area and the cell block. There will also be a cruiser available to check out all the equipment used by Officers. Be sure to bring a camera!

BLOOD DRIVE INFO: From 8:00 A.M. to 2:00 P.M., there will also be the Quincy Police Department/Glennon Family blood drive in the parking lot of the Quincy Police Station. For more information on either the open house/tours or the blood drive, contact Lieutenant Daniel J. Minton at 617 745 5719.

Emily Bryson Posts Personal Best In Mile

Q/NQ Competes At League Championships

More Photos From Track, Field Championship Page 20

By JOE REARDON

With personal bests in the 2-mile and mile in her last two meets it's become very apparent that North Quincy junior Emily Bryson is in the zone and she's priming to go even faster in the coming weeks.

Bryson, who capped off a spectacular cross country season with a sterling fourth-place finish in the Div. 1 All-State race in Gardner last November, was at it again in Saturday's Patriot League Track & Field Championships at the Reggie Lewis Center.

Racing in the mile, Bryson ran down and passed Whitman-Hanson's Samantha Coletti with 150 meters to go. Coletti fought back to pass Bryson and capture the win in 5:15.55, but Bryson's runner-up time of 5:16.64 was a startling new personal best. The Red Raider starlet sliced an amazing 11 seconds off her previous best time in the mile, a week after placing eighth in the Coaches Elite Invitational in 11:27 – an indoor personal best.

Bryson knew that Coletti was the favorite heading in and she'd have to stay close. "I knew she was fast so I just tried to pace off her," Bryson said. "I wanted to keep her in sight and at the end I wanted to see if I could pass her. This is probably my last mile of the season. I'm going to focus on the 2-mile at divisionals and hopefully I can make it to states."

Red Raiders' Late Rally Rocks Rockland, 66-64

By BILL GRIFFIN

The best game of the season.

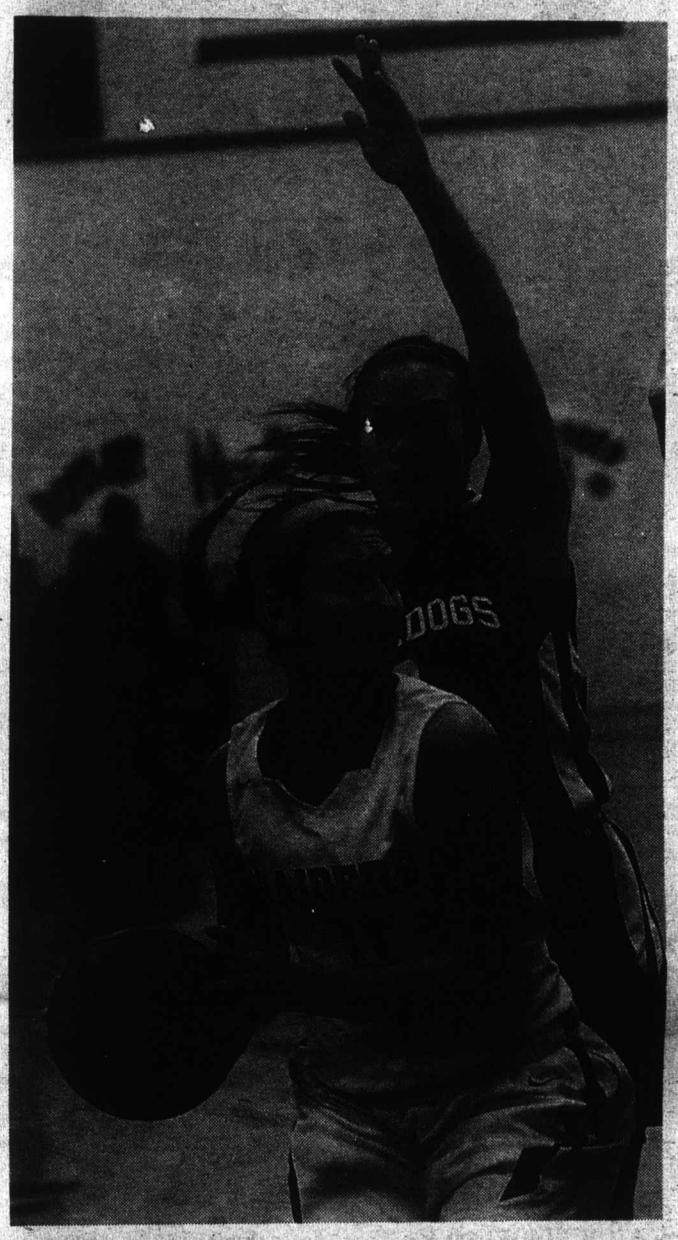

It was a jewel of a match buried in a week of adversity. North Quincy played three games in four nights. Two were on the road. The three opponents had a combined record of 32-8. They were without two starting All Scholastics, Maya Umoren and Jane Minton. Their best defender Haley McKay sat most of the fourth period due to a neck injury.

Their best player missed six minutes of the second period with foul trouble. They were down 11 at the half, down 13 early in the third and down three with 40 seconds left. Three or four starters sat for most of the game. The supporting players would decide the result. They had lost two straight. They were weary. Surely, they would go away quietly.

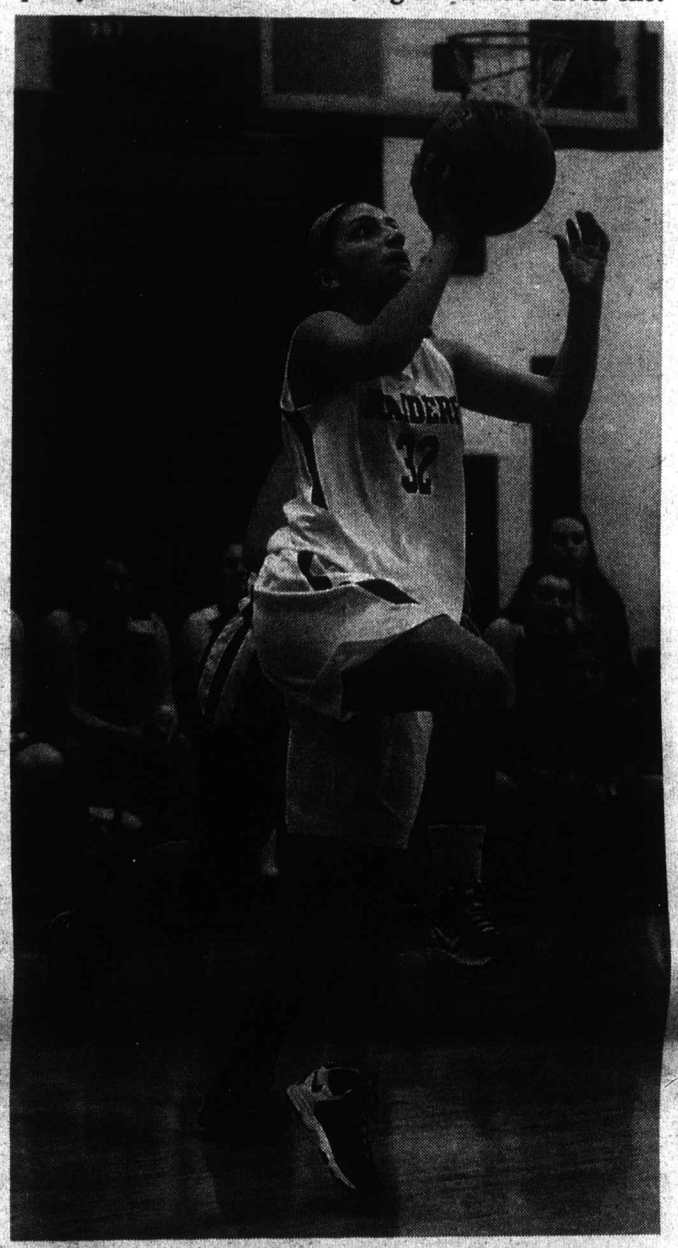

But they did not. North Quincy showed that good things happen if you just don't quit, and Grace Geary, provided a remarkable snapshot of grace, or Grace, under pressure by scoring 29 points, nine in the final 1:50, and a believe-it-or-not running left handed hook shot with 13 seconds left for the winning points in a memorable 66-64 victory over Rockland in a non-league contest last week.

"They had every reason to hang their heads, but they didn't. We stayed positive and we kept playing hard when we were down. Grace was great at the end, but we got fantastic efforts from everyone, especially from the players who came off the bench," said coach Jess Worden after her club went to 10-4, 7-2 in the Patriot

NQ Boys Rattle Off Three Wins In Four Days

By BILL GRIFFIN

They ran three wins in four days and strung out their streak to 15-0 at the end of last week. They were the only undefeated team left in Division 1 South. As Februrary began, they were walking with kings and could only be compared with teams from years past because no team this season had matched them through 15 games. Not a one.

North Quincy handled a strong Whitman-Hanson team at home, survived its toughest test of the season in overtime at Silver Lake and rolled to a convincing win over Middleboro. There were three different story lines, but at the core of all three wins, at the core of the season was the same thing: Defense.

Friday night, center Anthony Green established the defense at the rim with five blocks despite playing just over half the game and 12 different players scored as North downed Middleboro, 77-50 to up its Patriot League record to 9-0.

5th Grade Sacred Heart Girls Travel Team Wins NY Championship

Third Title This Season

Sacred Heart Girls 5th grade Travel Basketball Team recently took home their third tournament Championship this season in a convincing win in the E. Tunney Maher January Jam Tournament down in Hasting on the Hudson, New York.

The Sacred Heart Basketball Travel program, led by Director Mark Jaehnig, has been participating in the January Jam Holiday Tournament in New York for more than 20 years.

Players, both girls and boys from 3rd through 8th grade, travel down to New York for the Martin Luther King Holiday weekend to play local parishes in the Westchester County area.

The year was a successful trip for the Sacred Heart program with 5 of the 8 teams that traveled to New York winning the title in their age brackets.

For the 5th grade Girls Travel Team this marks their third title this season with tournament wins in the Milton Thanksgiving Holiday Basketball Tournament and the Hanover Hoop Central December Holiday Bash at the U. Tournament.

North Quincy 6th Grade A Talented Hoop Team

The 6th grade Sacred Heart Travel Basketball Team is currently in second place in the highest basketball division in the daunting MetroWest division 1 league.

The future basketball stars in the City of Quincy are on display right now, and they are only 11 years old. The team is coached by Kyle Costa, a former North Quincy High School basketball star and 1,000 point scorer. This is Costa's third year of coaching this 6th grade travel group.

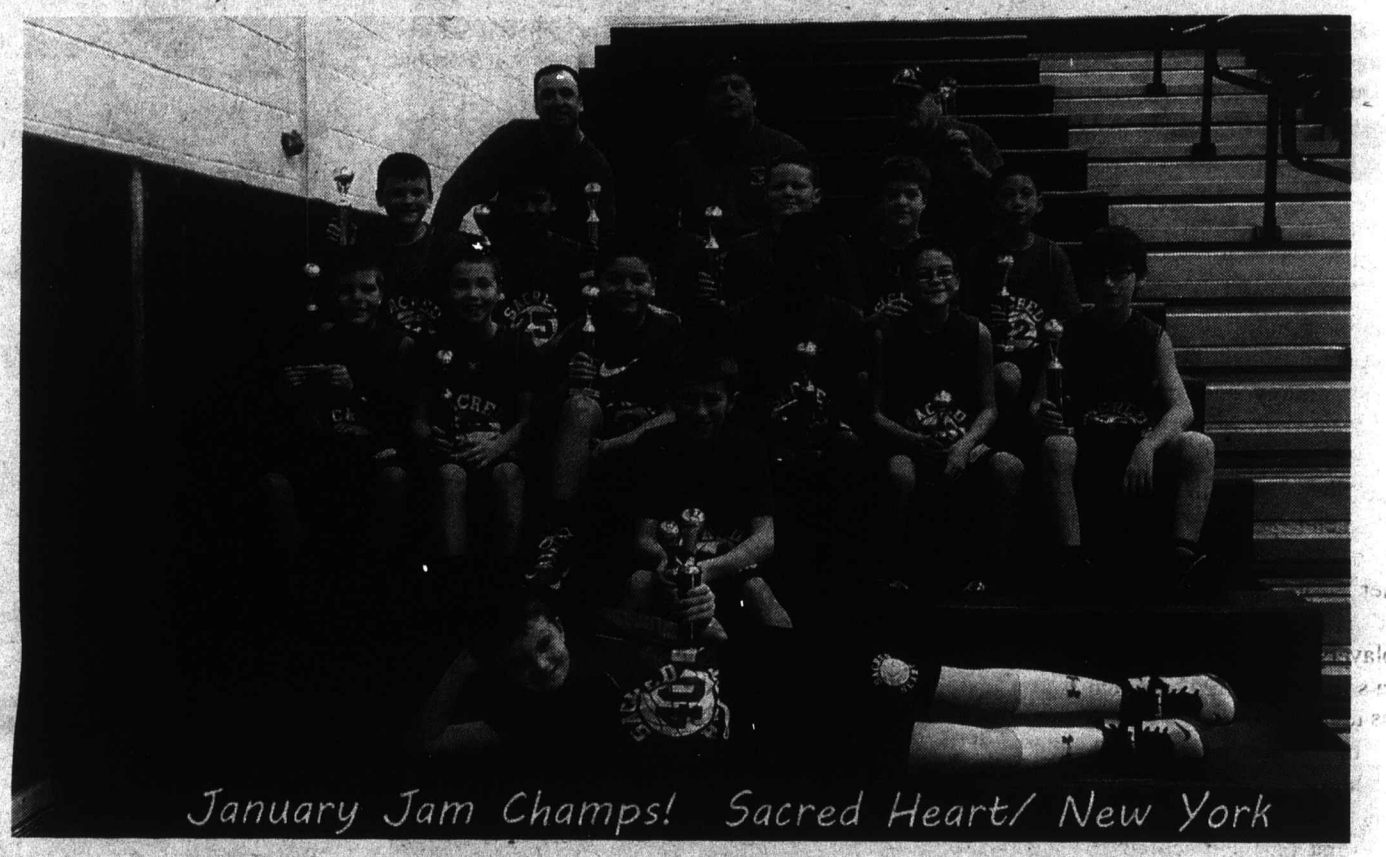

"These kids have a phenomenal work ethic," Costa said. "I push them and the focus is always on basketball fundamentals in practice." Coach Costa emphasizes team play and transitional offense /defense. The team is athletic, talented, and very deep.

"We are very quick. We literally try to suffocate other teams with our defensive style of play. We are like a pack of hyenas and most teams fold under that type of pressure," Costa said.

The team players are: Franco Calabro, Johnny Cristiani, Brenden Donovan, Eoin Gormley, CJ Jaehnig, Michael Levine, Ethan McDevitt, Aaron O'Toole, Landon Pierron, David Ryan, and Frank Yhombi.

Costa said that after every game, either the opposing coach or referee comments on what a great team Sacred Heart has.

"We play as a team and try to put all individual goals aside. It all starts in practice. It would be one heck of a high school team if all these kids were able to stay together and play. Sometime I forget they are only in 6th grade," Costa said

Q/NQ Swim, Diving Teams Compete At Patriot League Championships

The Quincy and North Quincy girls and boys swimming and diving teams competed at the Patriot League Championships this Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 1st and 2nd at the Lincoln-Hancock Pool in Quincy.

After not finishing higher than sixth in the previous four seasons under Coach Bob McGillicuddy's tutelage, the Quincy/North Quincy boys squad (6-2-1, 4-2-1 Patriot League) placed third with 170 points behind Duxbury and Hingham. Quincy (3-7, 2-6 Patriot League), despite losing to North Quincy in head-to-head competition Jan. 30, earned fifth overall with 91 points in the girl's competition won by Duxbury while North Quincy (4-6, 3-5 Patriot League) was eighth with 83 points.

Four students from the City of Presidents earned Patriot League All-Star recognition including North Quincy junior Rachel O'Driscoll, the lone girl's representative, who took silver in the 200-yard freestyle (2:06.93) and bronze in the 100 butterfly (1:05.79). A trio of QNQ boys swimmers, led by the talented freshmen duo of Thomas Tran (Q) and Tommy Zhong (NQ) with junior Randall Kwong (NQ) earned league distinction. Tran and Zhong finished second and third in the 100-yard breaststroke event, the meet's second to last event with Tran swimming 1:12.25 just edging Zhong who finished at 1:12.58. Tran was also fifth in the 100 butterfly (1:04.73), and Tommy Zhong placed third in the 200-yard freestyle clocking 2:06.23, four seconds better than his seed time. Randall Kwong placed fourth in both the 50- (24.07) and 100-yard freestyle (54.09) events. Tran, Zhong and Kwong teamed up with three-year captain Elio Daci (Q) for second in the 200-yard medley relay and third in the 200 freestyle relay (1:42.52).

On his own, Daci, the reigning 100-yard backstroke record holder, earned fourth in that event (1:05.67) and sixth in the 50-yard freestyle (24.35). Junior Mike Mullaney, the second-year captain from North Quincy, placed sixth in the grueling 500 freestyle swimming 6:43.31.

For the Quincy girls, junior Sabrina Rausch was fifth in both the 100 butterfly (1:07.19) and 100 freestyle (59.85), undercutting her seed team in the last event by nearly three seconds. Rauch swam the butterfly leg for the Quincy 200 medley relay squad that qualified for South Sectionals. She was joined by freshman Grace Scuzzarella, captain Marlena Forrester, and junior Marina Chafa in their 2:07.44 effort that landed them fifth in addition to another performance by the quartet in the 200 freestyle relay, good enough for fourth place. Scuzzarella was the second of two Quincy swimmers to place in the top-eight of the 100 butterfly with her eighth-place time of 1:12.89. She added one more eighth, this time in the 100 backstroke (1:13.18). Marlena Forrester helped Quincy's cause in the 100 breaststroke swimming a season-best 1:20.85 for fourth overall. Freshman diver Bailee Carey earned third in the one-meter dive accumulating 340.50 points.

The North Quincy 200 freestyle relay contingent of senior Sarah Tran, senior Lauren Thorne, and juniors Evlyn Scuzzarella and Rachel O'Driscoll nipped Quincy for third with their time of 1:53.73. Evlyn Scuzzarella amassed a pair of ninth-places, clocking season-low times of 2:41.36 in the 200 individual medley and 1:14.92 in the 100 backstroke.

Quincy and North Quincy's end-of-the-season awards were announced as well. The Patriot League Sportsmanship Awards were given to Lauren Thorne (NQ), Marlena Forrester (Q) and Brian Rooney (Q). A new award, the Bill Walker Scholastic Award, given to those with the highest GPA, honored Carolyn Schwartz (NQ), Kelly Dooling (Q) and Elio Daci (Q).

The girls will compete at South Sectionals Saturday, Feb. 8 at Wellesley College and the boys will swim the following day.

Valiant QYH PW B2 Effort Falls Short

In South Shore Conference hockey action this past Sunday, the QYH PWB2 team almost pulled off an epic comeback against the first place Cape Cod Waves at Gallo Arena.

Trailing 3-0 and shorthanded, Eric Sanders sent Sean O'Brien alone for the first QYH goal in the closing minutes of the second period. As the third period got underway and courtesy of great penalty killing efforts by John Bell, Eoin Varden and Nick Brink, QYH was able to close the gap to 3-2 on another short-handed by Caiden Valleli.

QYH goalie Ryan Graf made several clutch saves, however the Waves capitalized on their seventh power play to make it 4-2. After foiling a dangerous Wave scoring threat, Neasa O'Donnell cycled the puck to her defensive partner, Colman Gillis, whose end to end rink scoring rush pulled the QYH team to within one goal. Amidst an empty net, an extra skater, and a relentless QYH attack in the final minute of play, the Waves were able to hold on to for 4-3 victory.

The QYH team hopes to rebound next Saturday 11:10 a.m. against Duxbury at Bog Arena in Kingston.

McArdle Torches W-H In Presidents' 49-42 Win

By BILL GRIFFIN

There were two parts to Kayla McArdle's performance against Whitman-Hanson Friday night worthy of being taped and saved for viewing for many years.

The first part is obvious. McArdle scored 15 points in the fourth quarter, including three three-point jump shots, to lead Quincy to a 49-42 home win over the Panthers in a Patriot League Keenan Division contest and keep alive her team's chances to qualify for the state tournament.

"It was one of the best performances that I've ever seen as a coach," said Quincy coach Jeff Bretsch about the play of his senior captain.

The second part involves the intangibles. As much as her points, it was her toughness, energy and competitiveness which carried the Presidents to the victory.

"She plays with so much character and confidence," said Bretsch. "She carries her effort to another level. It's contagious for the other players. They follow Kayla's lead. She almost willed us to the win."

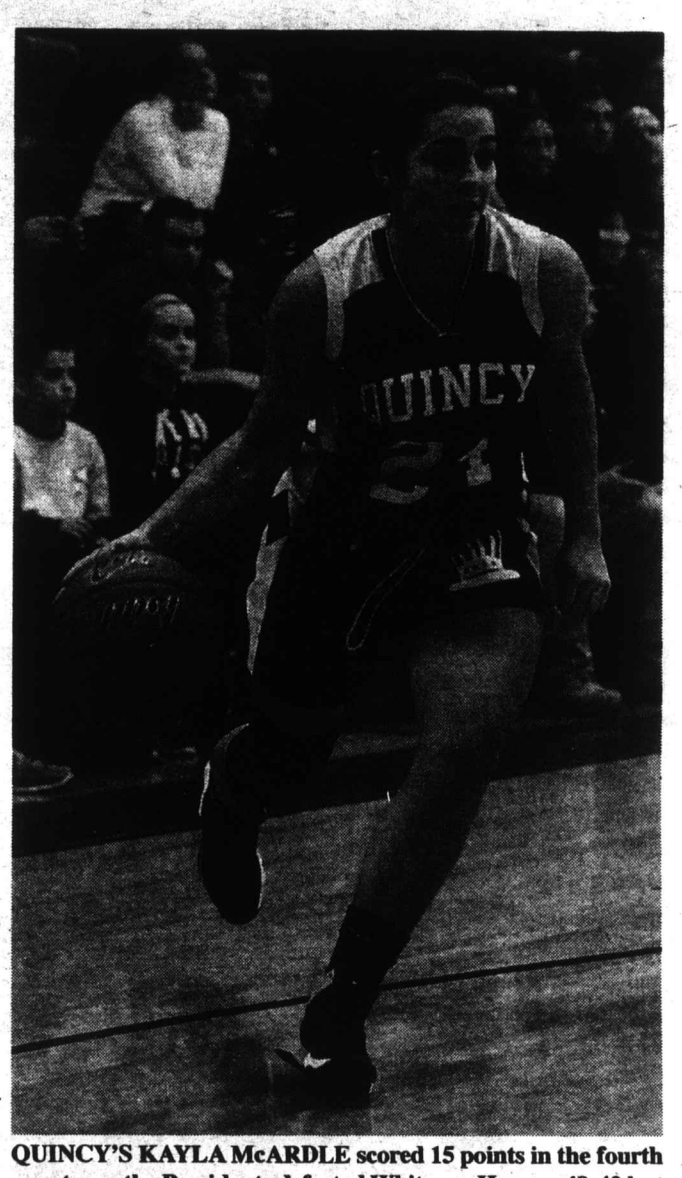

In other action last week, Gabby Jerahian connected on four three-pointers in the first half and scored 16 points as the Presidents defeated Middleboro in a Patriot League match, 59-29.

Sophomore center Nicole Jorgensen led the scoring for Quincy with 20 while McArdle chipped in with nine. Leann McColgan played a strong second half with eight points and solid inside play.

Jerahian stayed hot with five three-pointers, but Quincy fell to a strong Barrington, R.I. team, 66-51 in a non-leaguer.

Jorgensen once again scored well with an assortment of moves close to the basket and finished with 23 points. Jerahian added 20. McArdle, who played excellent defense on Whitman-Hanson star Erin Clifford Friday night, had a strong defensive game against Barrington who played in the Rhode Island Division 2 State Championship game last year.

The win over W-H left Quincy at 6-9 overall and 4-4 in the league at the end of last week. The comparisons to last year's Quincy team at this stage of the season are so similar they are eerie. A year ago, Quincy was 6-9 and won four of its last five to make the tourney. A year ago, McArdle carried Quincy to a win on its homecourt against Whitman-Hanson to keep alive Quincy's hopes.

Quincy has five games left, just like last year. If the Presidents win four, they make the tourney. Quincy also has another avenue. If the Presidents finish second in the Keenan Division, they make the tourney. The win over the Panthers kept Quincy in the race for second with W-H and Silver Lake behind unbeaten Duxbury. Quincy has a game remaining on the road against Duxbury.

"If we had lost to Whitman Friday, we would have been in trouble. We had to win that game," said Bretsch.

Quincy trailed for most of the the game against W-H and was down, 32-29 entering the fourth. McArdle is a fine shooter, but she doesn't attempt a lot of threes. However, with W-H playing a box-and-one on Jerahian, who had nine three pointers and 36 points in her previous two games, the corners opened up and McArdle stepped up with the big shots.

"Kayla is a good shooter, capable of making the three. Against Whitman, they became available to her because of the box-and-one on Gabby," said Bretsch.

Jorgensen, who had 13 against W-H and 56 points in three games last week, made two excellent moves inside to give Quincy the lead early in the fourth. Then McArdle took over. Whenever, the Panthers drew close, she hit a three to stretch out the lead. McArdle also made four clutch free throws in the final period as Quincy avenged a loss to W-H earlier this year.

"Nicole got a couple of nice inside touches because she moved well without the ball," said Bretsch. "That got us over the top and Kayla protected the lead with her shooting after that."

The Presidents were down, 10-6 after one and 23-22 at the half. Courtney Ryan, who had nine points for the Presidents, had a pair of threes in the second period to draw Quincy close.

"I thought Gabby played a big role in the win as well," said Bretsch. "Whitman used their top scorer to shadow her in the box-and-one. Gabby really made her work and I think it might have worn her down a little at the end."

Quincy hosts Silver Lake in an important Keenan Division game Friday night at 6:30.

Quincy Bows To W-H, Showdown At S-L Friday

By BILL GRIFFIN

Quincy's boys basketball team learned two things last week. It sure is great to play at home. And as the sun rose Saturday morning, they were still in a tie for first place in the Keenan Division of the Patriot League.

Friday night, Whitman-Hanson played exceptional man-to-man defense and shot down the baskets from three-point land to hand the Presidents a 63-45 road loss, a stunning reversal of the first time the two teams met this year when Quincy won by 27 at home.

In other action last week, Ken Sorensen scored 11 and Kevin Williams added 10 as the Presidents showed their depth in a 59-30 league win over Middleboro.

The differential between playing at home and playing on the road for Quincy against W-H was 45 points. Location is everything.

"I said to Bob Rodgers (the W-H coach) that we didn't know how much how home gyms meant to our teams," said Quincy coach Dave Parry.

Despite the loss, Quincy (8-6 overall) and W-H were tied for first in the division with 6-3 records. If a team is in first place as February begins, it is never a bad thing.

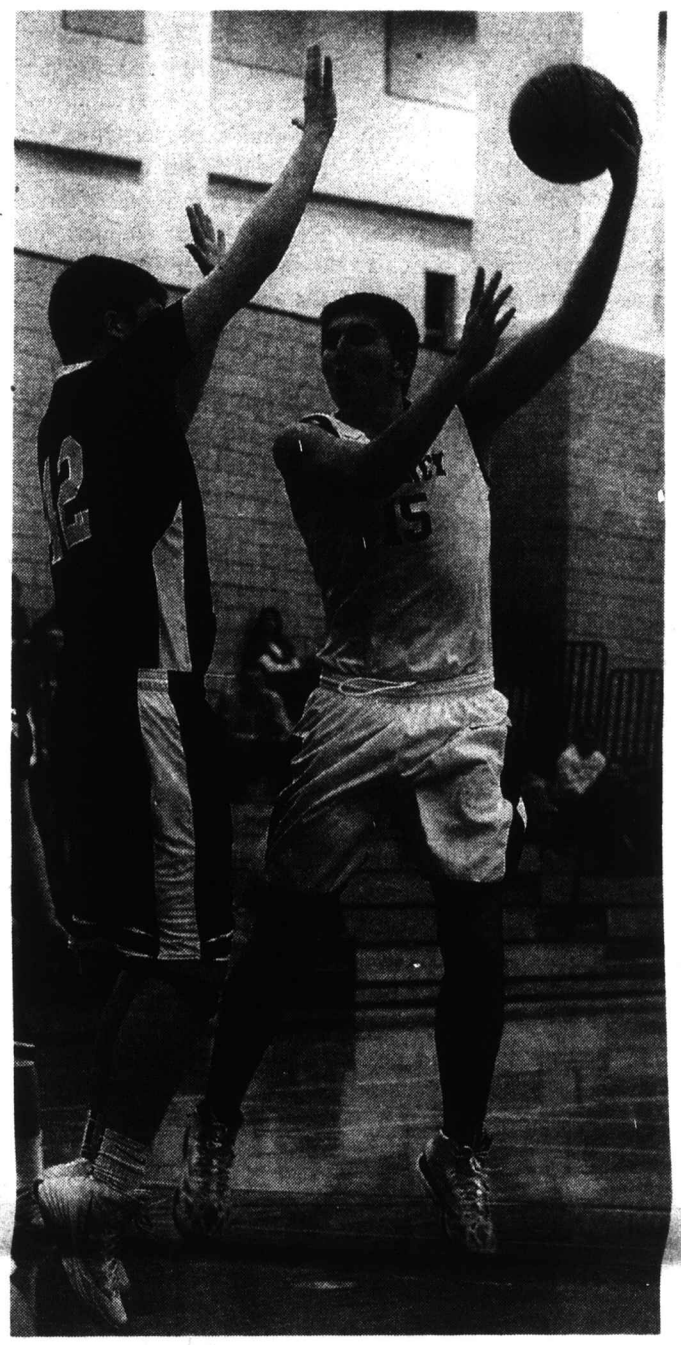

"We're still in first place, we still control our own destiny," said Parry. "I told the kids that after the game. The sun would rise the next morning and there is a lot of basketball left to be played."

Parry is a coach who never makes excuses and he gave full credit to the Panthers' defense. Holding some teams to 45 points is not a huge accomplishment. Holding Quincy to 45 is an event. Quincy can score. They can drive, shoot from the outside, and score on the break and from the set offense. They had 74 against the Panthers in the first game and scored 60 or more in 10 of 14 games.

"Their defense was excellent. They controlled our offense. I told the kids that it happens, that there games like this," said Parry.

The second ingredient in the win for W-H was the three-ball. The Panthers had 13 three-pointers for the game and used four to take an 18-11 lead after one.

"When they got through our press, they were setting up in the corners for threes and drilling them," said Parry. "They must have shot over 50 per cent from behind the arc for the game."

Red Raiders' Late Rally Rocks Rockland, 66-64

League and qualified for the state tourney.

In other action last week, Whitman-Hanson rallied from a 15-point deficit to down North, 60-51 despite 20 points from Geary. It was the second game of back-to-back road trips. The previous night, unbeaten Duxbury overcame a 13-point North lead for a 49-41 win. Geary had 17 for the Red Raiders.

Marissa McGue had her third strong game in a row with 17 points and 10 rebounds against W-H. Umoren played a powerful game inside with 10 points and 17 rebounds before injuring her knee in a collision with McKay with three minutes left in the game. McKay hurt her neck on the play.

There is a long and worthy honor roll of players from the Rockland game who made Geary's closing drama possible. McGue had five points, 10 rebounds and shut down Rockland's best player in the fourth period. Tristine Thong added 11 points, six rebounds, and battled for every possession all night. Molly Minton added 10 points and worked hard rebounding despite give away inches and size to the taller Bulldogs.

Camille Mullaney came of the bench in the fourth period, cashed two big buckets, and gave North a needed presence on the boards. McKay played hurt and well in the final two minutes when Thong fouled out. Hannah Donovan and freshman Remy Aucoin gave North valuable minutes. It was a singular game in which everybody played a leading role in the win.

"We were all nervous before the game playing without Jane and Maya," said Geary. "Everyone, every single player came off the bench and contributed. We needed it. If one of those players who stepped up didn't do her job, we lose the game."

And there was Geary. She showed well the difference between a player with great talent and a great player. She is that rare player for whom the game slows down in the moments of truth. She sees everything, she knows the clock and the situation, she makes her decisions -- when to shoot, when to pass, when to drive -- with the cool precision of someone who was born to play in these games.

"She is a special player who has the composure to make the plays at the end of games," said Worden.

With 1:50 left and North down 56-55, she buried a three from deep along the right wing despite being bulldozed by a hit which belonged in the Super Bowl. With 1:35 left and the scored tied at 58-58, she took the left baseline, drove past three defenders while tiptoeing along the edge of the endline, and fired a bullet of a pass to Thong for a short jumper in the the lane.

With 40 seconds left and North down, 63-60, she drained a three from the right sideline after Mullaney, McKay and Minton gave themselves up setting picks to spring her free for the shot. On each three, Geary had little time. She caught and fired in a fraction of an instant with defenders attacking her shooting hand. With 13 seconds left and the score tied at 63-63, she dribbled down the clock, saw a crease along the left wing and flipped home a running left-handed hook between two defenders for a 65-63 lead.

"We wanted to take time off the clock, so we kept the ball outside. I saw an opening and I went for it," said Geary.

Geary added a free throw and McGue had a huge rebound to maintain possession in the final seconds to seal the win and a trip to the tourney for the second straight year.

These were not easy shots for Geary. These were not layups or short jumpers. These were two deep threes with defenders flying at her, a laser pass through traffic for Thong's bucket and a running hook shot with her off hand. Geary has a great left hand because she has worked tirelessly on it. But a left-handed hook at full speed in a tie game with 13 seconds left and the shot clock ticking down? A hook shot? A left-handed hook shot? Think about it. Special stuff.

"I don't think about the pressure. I think I feed off the energy, the adrenaline of the game. Do I shoot many left-handed hook shots? I really don't know," she said with a shrug and a smile.

The Rockland game completed a four-game run for Geary in which she scored 97 points. She had five threes and 29 points (seven rebounds, five assists) despite sitting six minutes in the second period with foul trouble and being the focus of an aggressive box-and-one which doubled and tripled her whenever she touched the ball. In her absence, Rockland hit the offensive boards hard and built a 31-20 halftime which grew to 39-26 midway through the third.

"All you can do is chip away, take one possession at a time. You're not going to get it all back at once," said Geary.

"So many people stepped up. Tristine, Marissa, Molly, Camille and everyone who came off the bench played great. It's a sweet win," said Worden who played for Rockland High with current Bulldogs' coach Diana Mitchell on the state championship team in 2000.

North is at Plymouth North Wednesday and hosts Pembroke Friday on Senior Night, the final home game of the regular season. Both games start at 6:30. Minton, who missed four games with a concussion, should be ready to play. Umoren's status with her knee is uncertain.

NOT A CHANCE YOU WANT TO TAKE

If you've ever driven in an automobile and found the crossover shoulder strap was too high, you might have decided to slip the strap under your armpit and wear it across your chest. While this ill-advised repositioning of the shoulder strap may seem to be more comfortable, in a crash, it can cause the upper part of the body to snap forward while the lower half remains securely in place. As a result, the traumatic spinal fracture known as a "Chance fracture" (named after a British radiologist) may result in snapping the spinal column. Because chiropractic treatment is totally focused on maintaining the health and integrity of the spine, we want to do everything possible to preserve what nature created.

Are you wearing your seatbelt correctly? Chiropractic treatments can get your body back in alignment fairly quickly after an accident. The sooner you get started on chiropractic care the sooner you will get relief from seat belt injuries. Your nervous system is the master controller of all functions in your body. It is the job of your nerve system to see that everything is functioning properly and keeping you healthy. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we're currently accepting new patients and welcome you to call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

Thursday night, Solomon Umoren had three huge late defensive stops, Efthim Butka snatched the decisive rebound, and drained two clutch free throws to clinch a 54-50 overtime win over Silver Lake.

Earlier in the week, North held Whitman-Hanson to nine points in the first period and raced past the Panthers, 66-56 in a game that was not nearly as close as the final score. North had Whitman Hanson, who finished the week at 11-3 and tied for first in the Keenan Division, down 19 in the fourth. It was a big win over a good team.

"Defense was the key for us all week and it's been the backbone of our season," said North coach Kevin Barrett whose team held opponents under 50 points 10 times in 15 games. "We've had games where we haven't shot or played particularly well, but we've won because of our defense. Dorchester, Hingham, and Silver Lake are good examples."

In baseball, good defense starts up the middle. Catcher, shortstop, and centerfield. The same is true in basketball. It begins with the point guard and the center. In three games last week, Green had 36 points, 28 rebounds and 16 blocks. Nothing at the rim. In three games last week, Kyle Richardson shut down three point guards, allowed no penetration, and stalled three offenses. Nothing at the point.

"Kyle and Anthony are like our battery, our pitcher and catcher," said Barrett. "Kyle extends the defense to 90 feet and Anthony handles everything at the other end."

Richardson and Green do not only prevent points, they change offensive game plans. Richardson makes advancing the ball to halfcourt an accomplishment. Precious seconds are wasted off the clock. Richardson forces opponents to worry more about turnovers and finding someone, anyone to throw the ball to rather than running their offense. Players aren't in position to shoot, pass or set a screen because they have to rescue and help against Richardson's pressure. He changes everything.

"He disrupts everything and forces team to do things they don't want to do. They can't get the ball where they want it to go," said Barrett.

At the point, good defense begins with good offense. If a point guard gives away the ball, an easy basket almost always follows. Richardson does not give up the ball. This makes pressing harder. This cuts down on easy baskets. If a team wants to run on North, they have to get a stop, a rebound and make at least two good passes. They are not going to run off Richardson. In the Quincy game, Dave Parry changed his press in the second half with the stated goal of getting the ball out of Richardson's hands.

He stops points and he changes game plans.

"He's strong on the ball and he's such a good passer than it is very hard to get it away from him," said Barrett.

Green influences everything. The numbers show he is averaging 13 points, nine rebounds, and six blocks. That tells part of the story. Here are two more numbers. Whitman-Hanson tried 43 three-point jumpers against North, a game after Hingham fired up 39. Teams can't get inside, so they settle for shooting from the outside. There are no numbers that tell the number of shots he alters. A good guess would be to take his blocks and multiply by three. Like Richardson, he doesn't just stop points, he changes what a team can do.

"Plus teams are seeing him for the second time around. They are aware what he can do," said Barrett. "His timing and anticipation have improved so much in the past year. He is playing on his toes now. He is confident he can get to balls that he might have hesitated on a year ago."

Umoren has emerged as third defensive power, taking over Marquis McClendon's role as a stopper. Two or three times a week, every week, he matches up against the best scorer. In the Silver Lake win, Lakers' standout Tanner Bouchard has two chances in the final 15 seconds in regulation to win the game and one more late shot in the OT to tie the game. Three times Umoren shut him down.

"He has embraced his role," said Barrett. "I don't think we walk out of Silver Lake with a win without him."

Matt Gerakis led the way with 17 in the win over Middleboro. Richardson added 11 and Green had 10. North executed crisply on the second night of a back-to-back building leads of 20-10 after one, 42-23 at the half and 62-31 after three.

"We had some things from the Silver Lake game that we needed to clean up and I thought we played well right through our whole roster," said Barrett.

Dhaaky Drake (8), Vinny Tran (6), Joijuan Phoenix (5), Andy He (4), Pat Janeiro (4), Butka (4), Umoren (3), and Greg Clarke (2) cracked the scoring column.

In the Silver Lake game, Butka hit three free throws in OT, including a pair with five seconds left to clinch the win. Butka had 17 points and 11 rebounds while Green ruled the paint again with 10 points, 10 rebounds, and seven blocks.

"It was out toughest test of the year. We didn't shoot well, we had foul trouble and injuries, but we persevered," said Barrett.

Richardson added four points and 12 rebounds which upped his total in three games against Hingham, Whitman-Hanson and Silver Lake to 35, an amazing stat for a 5'7" guard. Twice in three games, he led his team in rebounding.

Against W-H, Green once again was dominant with 15 points, 10 rebounds, four blocks.

Richardson had 13 points and nine rebounds. Umoren had eight points and fueled an early run with a pair of steals which led the fastbreak baskets.

Gerakis had 14 points and four assists for the Red Raiders while Butka chipped in with 11.

North hosts Duxbury in a makeup game Thursday and is at Pembroke Friday. Both games start at 6:30.

Quincy Bows To W-H, Showdown At S-L Friday

a man-to-man press and closed within 30-27 at the half. J.T. Bain (11) and Drew Myers(10) led the offense for Quincy.

The Panthers pulled away in the second half by nailing nine threes and holding Quincy to 18 points.

"We had some very good looks early in the third period and we just couldn't get the ball to go down," said Parry.

Fatigue could well be a factor. These are the dog days of the basketball season. The makeups force three-game weeks. The tournament is still in the distance. It is a tough period to work through especially for teams like Quincy who rely on timing and sharpness in its offense.

"I think we were a little drained, "said Parry. "I gave them Saturday off. I told them don't go near a basketball, a gym or a weight room. I told them just to be kids for the day. They needed it."

Chris Callahan, who played excellent defense earlier in the season, returned from a foot injury against W-H and scored six points. Another strong defensive player, senior Johnny Marsinelli, is due back this week.

"Chris went to the basket well. He was a little rusty on defense, but that's to be expected. The defense will come back in a game or two," said Parry.

Quincy received balanced production in the win over Middleboro with 11 players making the scoring column. Carl Zapata had five, including a three-pointer. Tyler Beach added a three-point jumper. Reda Laftih played good defense and scored twice on drives to the basket.

Quincy is at Silver Lake in a big division game Friday at 6:30. The Lakers pushed North Quincy to overtime and finished last week in second place at 5-4 in the division.

H.S. Basketball Notebook

By BILL GRIFFIN

At the end of last week, North Quincy had run out to a 15-0 start, the best at the school in more than 40 years. The Red Raiders had six games remaining.

Whenever a streak like this happens, fans and supporters scan the schedule for future tests and possibilities. A coach never does this. A coach takes one practice, one game at a time. He demands the same from his players. It is true that they are cliches. However, they are cliches because they are true.

"Our goal all year has been to improve collectively and individually one practice and one game at a time," said North coach Kevin Barrett. "I think we've done a good job with our focus all year. I don't think we've looked past the next opponent, past any opponent all season. I don't think we became lax in any game."

It is a mentally tough team. Credit seniors Kyle Richardson, Efthim Butka, Anthony Green, Greg Clarke, and Vinny Tran. It is a toughness that has sharpened the team's focus and served them well in hostile gyms on the road. It has helped them survive an overtime test at Silver Lake, rally for wins at Hingham and at Braintree, and roll past a quality Scituate team on the road. It also played a role in withstanding a furious Quincy comeback at home.

"We talked about playing before hostile crowds and I told them to get used to it," said Barrett. "Whenever, a team has a winning streak like ours, everybody wants to beat you. You're a target for everyone you play."

It is not only a good team, it is a tight team. Rarely will you see starters root as hard for reserves as North's top players did when they were on the bench for the second half of the Middleboro game Friday night.

"That comes from practices," said Barrett. "To reach our goals, our bench has to push our starters in practice. The bench players earn that respect with how hard they practice."

Could you make an argument for Kyle Richardson and Grace Geary as players of the year in the Patriot League?...Whitman-Hanson paid Quincy sophomore Gabby Jerahian quite a compliment Friday night by using a box-and-one on her. Jerahian had 36 points and made nine threes in her previous two games.... Another talented sophomore, Marissa McGue, has emerged for North. She had five points and 10 rebounds in the thriller over Rockland, finishing a four-game stretch during which she had 43 points and 33 rebounds... Senior Courtney Ryan is a steady player who works hard on the press for Quincy's girls team. She also has a nice touch from three... North's boys team has a pair of promising sophomores in Dhaaky Drake and Tyshawn Moore...Along with his other skills, Richardson has evolved into an excellent passer. He had six assists against Middleboro, including a pair of touch passes inside to Vinny Tran.

Injuries play such a key role in a condensed season with multiple makeups in a sport like basketball where front-line players are difficult to replace...Quincy is a different team since Nicole Jorgensen returned from her ankle injury, and the Presidents missed the services of Alyssa Lydon who was out with a finger injury...Quincy's boys team missed the defensive presence of Chris Callahan and Johnny Marsinelli when the pair was out with injuries...North has missed Jane Minton, Maya Umoren and Haley McKay for stretches this year...Minton was a big loss. She sat four games with a concussion. North was 8-2 with her and 2-2 without her. In the two games the Red Raiders lost, they had leads of 13 and 15 points. Minton might well have made the difference in both games.

Unlike many of his peers, Quincy coach Dave Parry doesn't think Whitman-Hanson's road gym is a tough shooter's gym and refused to use it as an excuse for his team's loss last Friday.

"I think the background at Whitman is a lot like our own in Quincy," he said. "I think Duxbury and Hingham are the toughest gyms to shoot at for us."

Former North star Danny Gould recently won his third Rookie of the Week Award for Framingham State in the Massachusetts State Collegiate Athletic Conference. Gould averaged 13 points, 2.3 assists and four rebounds in three games. He is also a strong contender for the Rookie of the Year award in the conference.

Q/NQ Track Team Competes At League Championship

his workouts with the team all winter, courtesy of the snow and cold conditions. "Training's been a little tough with mid-terms and the snow," said Bryson. "We've been making the most of things."

Hennessy said the winter has made his job all the more challenging. "It's (training) been inconsistent this winter with the weather and kids getting sick and we can't get on the track every time we want," he said. "We've been trying to adapt workouts with pick ups on the road and running in the cemetery. We can't practice the long jump really. You're running in the gym, jumping into high jump mats, things like that. It's not quite real. We do what we can do."

Emily isn't the only Bryson who is making huge strides this winter. Julia was a strong third in the 1,000 just a second off her personal best 3:18.92, but like Emily, Julia also bettered her 2-mile personal best just a week before at the Reggie, knocking seven seconds off and dipping under 12 minutes for the first time with an 11:55 and qualifying for the Div. 1 championships.

Julia has her eyes on a strong showing at the divisionals and is confident the deep field will pull her along. "I thought I could have gone a little faster," Julia said of her 2-mile. "I definitely slowed down my last half of the race. I'd like to get under 11:50 next. We'll see what happens.

"I'm going to try to stay with the top group to see if I can make it to all-states. Last year the cutoff was around 11:45 so I'll try to stick with them and get a personal record."

There is a strong possibility that Julia could be in Emily's heat and she would love to have her sister as one of the tracksters pushing her. "We haven't run together yet this season so that should be fun," said Julia. "In cross country I'd try to stay within a minute of her.

"I was pretty sure I could do it (break 12 minutes), but I didn't do it in the Holiday Challenge and that was my goal."

Breaking the 12-minute barrier was a benchmark for Julia in what is one of the deepest events in the state this indoor season. "She's finally done it so the monkey's off her back there," said Hennessy. "We're hoping she just gets better and better. The state is just loaded with (distance) kids. There used to be a time where you could place and not break 12. You can barely qualify with that now. The qualifying standards are through the roof."

Mia Healy is one athlete who should flourish when track moves outdoors in the spring. The North Quincy freshman owns the city middle school record in the long jump at 15-9 and has been close to that distance for most of the season. Healy stretched to a 13th-place finish against the rest of the Patriot League with 14-10-1/2 effort. She was even better in the 55-meter dash, sprinting across the finish line in a personal best of 7.83 to qualify for the Div. 1 championships.

"Geoff taught me how to use my arms better because I hadn't been doing that," said Healy. "I ran through the finish line and I still have to work on my form. My first couple of meets weren't that good, but they've been getting better. I improved by a second."

Hennessy believes Healy could have a huge spring season in the sprints and on the long jump runway. "She's been doing track since she was 5 or 6-years-old through the (Quincy Track) Club and through middle school," said Hennessy of his pint-sized talent. "Mia's multi-talented. Once we get more time on the runway and more coaching (outdoors) things will improve."

Mile transplant Steve Simons didn't have his best day in the 1,000, but still raced more than respectably, taking 14th in 3:13.5. The Quincy High senior began the season in the mile and lowered his time to 5:05. He hopped in the 1,000 at one meet and has been hooked ever since. Still, Simons would like to break the 5-minute mark in the mile come springtime.

"I started with the mile and we had too many kids one meet so I said I'll try the 1,000 and I ended up liking it a lot better," Simons said.

Simons is an example of a solid soccer player excelling on the track as well. "He's a great kid," said Hennessy. "He's really coming along. Steve's a soccer kid. We're hoping having a couple of good soccer kids on the team – him and Aidan Smyth – we'll get more soccer kids out this spring. Soccer's got some athletes. If we can get them it can only help us."

Smyth, a Quincy sophomore, chased Pembroke's Christian Stafford across the finish line to take second in the 600 with a strong 1:29.09. North Quincy's Jimmy Cannon was the highest finishing freshman in both the mile (10th, 5:15.14) and 2-mile (fifth, 11:18.71) while Quincy junior Weitao Wu was 14th with a 12:33.14. Quincy junior Jahvae Handsome-Fields broke into the top 10 in the long jump at 10th with a 17-6-1/2 leap while Smyth checked in at 18th with a 14-10-1/2 effort. Quincy senior Alex Alexandre nailed down 18th in the 300 in 42.21 and Quincy freshman Holding copped third in the 55 with a terrific 6.96 with Handsome-Field nailing a 7.19 to clinch 13th. Other finishers for Q/NQ include sophomore Mike Munroe in the shot put with a 42-3 heave for sixth, junior Curtis Calley taking eighth with his 40-9 toss and senior Alex Leo hitting 36-3 for 15th. Sophomore Hashim Hamdi was eighth in the high jump with a leap of 5-1 and he was fifth in the 55-meter hurdles at 9.34. The 4x400 relay team was ninth in 4:12.30 and the 4x200 raced to eighth with a 1:42.49.

Quincy sophomore Nakiya Douglas was 28th in the 55 dash with an 8.71. Q/NQ had several strong showings with freshman Vivian Tran taking 31st in the 55 with an 8.92 and fellow freshman Alessandra Toscanini a step back in 9.10 for 32nd. Senior Brandi Parker ran a strong 300 to take 15th in 46.55 and freshman Alison Radzik placing 20th in 50.59. Toscanini also competed and was 25th in 52.84. Junior Jean-Rivka Louise was 15th in the shot put with her 21-11 throw and the 4x200 relay team was a strong 11th in 2:03.30.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Some unsettling facts about a past situation could come to light. And while you'd love to deal with it immediately, it's best to get more information to support your case.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A straightforward approach to a baffling situation is best. Don't allow yourself to be drawn into an already messy mass of tangles and lies. Deal with it and move on.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Don't be discouraged or deterred by a colleague's negative opinion about your ideas. It could actually prove to be helpful when you get around to finalizing your plan.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Ignore that sudden attack of "modesty," and step up to claim the credit you've so rightly earned. Remember: A lot of people are proud of you and want to share in your achievement.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) A financial "deal" that seems to be just right for you Leos and Leonas could be grounded more in gossamer than substance. Get an expert's advice to help you check it out.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Don't ignore that suddenly cool or even rude attitude from someone close to you. Asking for an explanation could reveal a misunderstanding you were completely unaware of.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Unless you have sound knowledge, and not just an opinion, it's best not to step into a family dispute involving a legal matter, regardless of whom you support. Leave that to the lawyers.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) An awkward situation presents the usually socially savvy Scorpian with a problem. But a courteous and considerate approach soon helps clear the air and ease communication.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A calmer, less-tense atmosphere prevails through much of the week, allowing you to restore your energy levels before tackling a new challenge coming up by week's end.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your approach to helping with a friend or family member's problem could boomerang unless you take time to explain your method and how and why it (usually!) works.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Someone who gave you a lot of grief might ask for a chance for the two of you to make a fresh start. You need to weigh the sincerity of the request carefully before giving your answer.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Too much fantasizing about an upcoming decision could affect your judgment. Better to make your choices based on what you know now rather than on what you might learn later.
BORN THIS WEEK: You have a way of seeing the best in people and helping them live up to their potential.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Quincy Point Congregational

Sunday worship is at Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St.

The Cross Roads adult worship band will bless the service with their music. The sanctuary is handicap accessible from the Abbey Road side of the building.

The deacon of the day will be Wayne McCulley and the lay reader will be Marie Nosalek.

This week is special following worship in the social hall. Come and enjoy a Soup and Bread Luncheon, make Valentine's for shut-ins or visit the Candy Sale. The "Sweets for the Sweet" Candy Sale will feature, all kinds of fudge, bark and nuts. To order contact Deanna at vanschagen@aol.com. All proceeds will benefit the Access/Elevator Fund.

Did you get to buy a Legacy Brick in the "Circle of Gratitude" in the new pocket park at the corner of Abbey Road and Washington Street? The opportunity to order bricks has re-opened. Remember a loved one, honor a veteran, commemorate a family occasion, record the name of a local business or organization or simply send a message of encouragement to future generations.

Bricks are $75 a piece. All proceeds will benefit the Access/Elevator Fund. Visit http://quincypointcong.org or call the church office at 617-773-6424.

Houghs Neck Congregational

The Sunday morning worship service at Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Avenue is held at 10 a.m.

Pastor Felix Carrion will lead the service and deliver the sermon "Excelling and Exceeding." After the children's message, the Sunday school students will go downstairs to classes. The nursery is open at that time. Martha Chase and Rob Rheault will serve for the Diaconate.

The Valentine Princess Tea will be held on Saturday with two sessions-10am to noon and 2-4 pm. Reservations are required.

On Tuesday, the Transition Committee will meet at 7 p.m. in the Gordon Room. Choir rehearsal is on Wednesday at 7 p.m. Yoga continues on Thursday at 7 p.m.

'Mamadrama' Film Feb. 15

"Mamadrama: The Jewish Mother in Cinema" will be the concluding film in this season's Winter Movie Series of Cong. Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills (formerly Temple Shalom of Milton and Temple Beth El of Quincy), co-sponsored by Milton's First Congregational Church.

The film, part of the series theme: "Strong and Funny Women," will be screened on Saturday, Feb. 15th, at 7 p.m. (doors open at 6:45) in Huntington Hall of the First Congregational Church, 495 Canton Ave., Milton, with entry at the rear door. The film series is open to the public.

In "Mamadrama," Australian director Monique Schwarz takes a funny, penetrating look at how the loving and affectionate portrayals in early films developed into the stereotyped Jewish Mother of modern Hollywood and, conversely, the more flesh and blood characterizations in contemporary Israeli cinema. The film features a number of hilarious clips from Hollywood movies, as well as rare Yiddish films and Israeli features.

The donation for admission is $3 per person, or two for $5. Advance reservations get a free popcorn or bottle of water.

To order tickets in advance or for more information, call Cong. Beth Shalom at 617-698-3394.

Epiphany Lights At Union Church

Because the Church is now in the season of Epiphany, the season between Christmastide and Lent, and the season which celebrates the Wise Men following a star to Jesus then returning home, bearing light to others, Union Church has strings of lights decorating the outside of the church and the two rooms where parishioners gather for coffee hours and other programs.

The public is invited to attend Sunday morning Worship Services, held at 10 a.m. The Pastor is Rev. John Carl Swanson. For further information call the Church Office at 617-479-6661.

Joyce Kulhawik To Speak At Cancer Support Group

JOYCE KULHAWIK

Joyce Kulhawik, an Emmy-winning arts and entertainment reporter for WBZ-TV for over 30 years, will speak at St. Agatha Church Thursday, Feb. 27.

Her appearance is sponsored by the St. Agatha Cancer Support Group.

All are welcome.

The evening will be held in the lower level of the church from 6 to 8 p.m. Feb. 27.

Kulhawik will discuss her experience living with and through melanoma and ovarian cancer.

Bethany Congregational

Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy Center will have Sunday Worship Service and Sunday School at 10 a.m.

The Rev. Gary W. Smothers will conduct the service and preach a sermon entitled "You Shall Be Christ's Witnesses." Fellowship with light refreshments will follow the worship service.

All are welcome to attend Bethany Church Worship Services and its numerous group activities. Bethany has a Youth Group, a Men's Group, an Outreach Mission Group doing various charity works and a Friday morning Bible Study Class.

The church office is open from 8:30 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m.

Visit http://www.bethanychurchquincy.org/ for updates and activities. Thanks to the Video Ministry, those unable to attend worship service on Sundays, the Bethany Church Service is broadcast on Quincy Access Television at 6:00 PM on Thursdays and 10:00 AM on Sundays on Channel 8.

Childcare will be available for infants and toddlers during worship service on Sundays. The church is wheelchair accessible.

Visiting hours are 4-8 p.m. today (Thursday) at McDonald Keohane Funeral Home, South Weymouth.

Interment at Mass. National Cemetery, Bourne.

William M. Donahoe, 83

A Mass of Christian Burial for William Michael Donahoe, 83, of Quincy was celebrated Feb. 1 at St. Mary's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Donahoe died Jan. 27 at Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital Milton.

Born in Boston and raised in the Clam Point Section of Fields Corner, Dorchester, he graduated from Dorchester High School in 1947. He served in the U.S. Air Force from 1947 to 1952 and had resided in Quincy for 48 years.

Mr. Donahoe was a retired member of the Local 3 Bricklayers Union and co-owner of Donahoe Bros. Construction Company with his brother Paul. He was also a charter member of the Braintree Lodge of Elks. As a life-member of the Old Colony Yacht Club he was an avid boater. He served as commodore of the Old Colony Yacht and was a member of the Commodores Club of America for many years. He enjoyed spending his winters in Florida with

Janet C. Barry, 79

A funeral Mass for Janet C. (Muldoon) Barry, 79, of Milton will be held at 10:30 a.m. today (Thursday) at St. Agatha Church, Milton.

Mrs. Barry died Jan. 30 at Hancock Park Nursing and Rehabilitation Center in Quincy.

She was born in Boston and raised in the city's Dorchester section where she graduated from St. Gregory High School in 1952. She then studied at the former Boston Clerical School to prepare for a career as a secretary. A proficient typist, she found a position as secretary to Billy Sullivan then the chief executive of Metropolitan Oil and the Boston Patriots. Mrs. Barry enjoyed her time working with Sullivan saving a football he had given her that was autographed by the entire team.

She married Edward F. "Ted" Barry in 1968, beginning a new chapter in her life that would later include a daughter, Jeannine. Mrs. Barry moved away from working outside the home for a few years to be with her young family. Those years were spent in Braintree with many of their summers spent happily on Peter's Pond in Sandwich.

Mrs. Barry's typing skills led her once again to a clerical position with Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Massachusetts where she spent several years and made many friends working as a data entry clerk before taking her "first" retirement. Then following her husband's death in 1993, she embarked on another career as a sales associate at the Sears store in Braintree. She remained with Sears for over 10 years earning her a "second" retirement.

Following her second retirement, Mrs. Barry settled into an apartment at Winter Valley in Milton to be closer to Jeannine and her family. At Winter Valley, she developed many friendships serving on the residents council, participating in her building's scrabble games, coffee hours and movie nights, joining the Milton Women's Club and volunteering at Milton Hospital where she offered over 1,000 hours of her time helping patients and their families.

As someone who enjoyed a party, Mrs. Barry loved socializing with family and friends. She hosted a family Christmas party for many years, had a weekly Bingo date with her sisters-in-law Mary and Betty, fully enjoyed family milestone celebrations and all of her grandchildren's parties, school shows, recitals and sporting events. Her time spent with her grandchildren became such a special part of her life.

Of all of the experiences of Mrs. Barry's life, her one constant was her faith. She faithfully attended Mass and will be buried from the church where she has annually had an anniversary Mass offered for her late husband.

Beloved wife of the late Ted Barry. Devoted mother of Jeannine B. and her husband Joseph M. Reardon of Milton. Loving "Gram" to Margaret B. and John B. Reardon. Dear sister of John P. Jr. of Hingham, Edward T. of Hingham, the late Gerald F., and late Paul R. Muldoon. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Visiting hours were 4-8 p.m. yesterday (Wednesday) at Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy. Celebration of life at the funeral home at 9:30 a.m. today prior to the Mass.

Interment at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Memorial donations may be made to St. Agatha School, 440 Adams St., Milton, MA 02186.

Free Basic Boating Safety Courses

The Quincy Police Marine Unit, in partnership with the Massachusetts Environmental Police, will be presenting three Basic Boating Safety Courses at the Houghs Neck Maritime Center, 137 Bay View Ave.

These courses – free to public – are designed for persons 12 years old and up, regardless of boating skill.

Course offerings are:

- Saturday, March 8, 15 and 22 from 1 to 5 p.m.
- Saturday, March 29, and April 5 and 12 from 1 to 5 p.m.
- Monday, May 5, 12 and 19 from 6 to 10 p.m.

Completion of the course by persons between 12 to 16 years of age will allow them to operate a motor boat without adult supervision. In addition, some insurance companies offer policy discounts for customers that complete a Basic Boating Safety Course.

To register for a course or for more information, call the Mass. Environmental Police Dept. at 508-564-4961.

Keenan Announces Passage Election Reform Bill

State Senator John F. Keenan announced that the State Senate has passed a comprehensive Elections Reform bill.

The bill, which passed by a vote of 37-1, is seen as a vital step in expanding voter access, protecting the integrity of elections, and ensuring that Massachusetts remains a modern and inclusive democracy.

With this bill, Massachusetts would join 32 other states and the District of Columbia in allowing early voting, which would allow people to vote at a designated polling place up to ten days prior to an election. "With so many people currently using the absentee voting process and voting at city and town halls in advance of the election, this is a logical next step," said Keenan. The bill also allows for online voter registration through a secure portal, eliminates check-out desks at polling places, and updates the process by which voters are declared inactive and removed from voting lists.

Keenan said while considering this bill he focused on "maintaining the important and admirable goals of the bill – enabling more citizens to exercise their fundamental right and responsibility to vote – while making sure we do not place burdensome costs on our cities and towns."

One such measure to reduce municipal burdens would be a change in how voter lists are kept current. "I heard from our election clerks that the existing process results in otherwise active voters being removed from voting lists, creating an unnecessary burden both on citizens and local election officials," said Keenan. A new process under this bill would place voters on an inactive list only after having missed two consecutive federal elections.

Five amendments filed or co-sponsored by Keenan, who represents Abington, Braintree, Holbrook, Quincy and Rockland, were adopted by the Senate. One amendment ensures that annual training requirements set by the Secretary of State would be paid for by the state rather than by cities and towns. Keenan also joined with Millbury Senator Michael Moore and Gloucester Senator Bruce Tarr to pass an amendment tying early voting requirements to the state's existing "local mandate" laws, which provide that mandates on municipal governments cannot be considered binding unless funded by the state.

"I was very pleased to see these two funding amendments adopted," said Keenan. "We cannot require our cities and towns to carry out these critical updates and expansions to the voting process without providing them adequate resources."

Another amendment offered by Keenan and adopted by the Senate would grant greater flexibility to municipalities in selecting early voting sites.

Keenan and seven other senators voted against an amendment allowing voter registration on the same day of an election. "With everything else contained in this bill to promote voter participation," said Keenan, "I don't think allowing same-day registration would result in any more people voting, and would likely cause such confusion and extra work on election day as to slow down the voting process and actually frustrate voters."

The Senate's elections reform bill comes on the heels of the House of Representatives passing its own version. The two bodies will now meet to resolve differences in the bills, and then send one bill to the Governor for his consideration.

North Quincy Tops Quincy In Swim/Diving Meet

By JOE REARDON

Ten minutes after Quincy High freshman Grace Scuzzerella's ferocious second leg put the Presidents in the lead to stay in the 200-yard medley relay against North Quincy, she was in the stands at the Lincoln-Hancock Pool, a wide smile on her face.

The transition from competing in middle school to high school has been a smooth one for the talented dark-haired ninth grader, who has an ally in her older sister Evlyn, a junior at North Quincy. Because the two teams train together, the sisters see each other every afternoon in the pool, swimming endless laps like they've been doing since elementary school.

And while there is a healthy rivalry between the sisters, there is also a mutual respect and each pulls for the other in competitions.

"She pushes me and it's really nice to swim with someone I know," Grace said of her older sister, then added with a smile, "I've beaten her before and it felt good. We're both better in different events."

Evlyn, an easy winner in the 200 freestyle, has seen her younger sister steadily improve over the years in the pool while competing for the Dorchester Marlins swim team. "I want to beat her, but at the same time I want her to do well," said the junior.

The two teams paired off against each other last Thursday in a historic meet that proved the momentum for the sport is building in the city. The meet had a slew of impressive performances and North Quincy came out one top 95-84, marking the first time the teams have competed against each other in 18 years.

The Red Raiders' victory improved their record to a respectable 4-6 in the Patriot League while Quincy went to 3-7 in a meet that had the feel of an intra squad competition.

Bob McGillicuddy, who coaches both teams and is the face of swimming in the city, saw the meet as a stepping-stone for both programs. Five years ago there was minimal interest in the sport with a grand total of 20 swimmers on the cooperative squad. Under the leadership of McGillicuddy, though, swimming has shown a pulse and it continues to get stronger. The teams have healthy rosters this winter with 23 girls on the North Quincy squad and 21 swimming for Quincy.

"The teams are progressively growing each year," McGillicuddy said before the meet. "We practice together, travel together and today they're going to compete against each other."

Not only are the numbers improving, the program is also developing swimmers who can compete at the state level. The North Quincy 400 freestyle relay lineup of Sarah Tran, co-captain Lauren Thorne, Scuzzarella and Rachel O'Driscoll qualified for the South/Central Sectionals and was victorious against Quincy in the 200 freestyle relay in 1:58.44. The versatile O'Driscoll captured the 100 butterfly in 1:04.49.

O'Driscoll, arguably the best all-around swimmer in the city, is having a mammoth season, qualifying for postseason competition in the 200 freestyle, 100 freestyle and 100 butterfly.

Quincy freshman Bailee Carey, one of the up-and-coming divers in Massachusetts, was an easy winner in her specialty with a score of 184.075 and led the Presidents to a 1-2 finish. Freshman teammate Madison Synan was second with 114.60 points.

Carey is making a name for herself on the board in her rookie campaign and has qualified for both the Central/South Sectionals and All-State meet.

Carey is looking to soak in the entire postseason experience with the hopes of using what she has learned in the coming years competing for Quincy.

"I just want the experience," Carey said. "I want to do well, but I really want the experience."

And add Carey to the list of swimmers who enjoy training with their cross-city rivals.

"It's been a really good season," Carey said. "You get to know the girls a lot better practicing with them. Even though we train together it's a friendly competition. We all help each other."

Rausch, whose muscular arms and shoulders are a product of swimming and rowing for the high school team, had a big afternoon at Lincoln-Hancock. The junior's winning time of 59.44 in the 100 freestyle qualified her for the South/Central meet. Rausch was already headed to the postseason after qualifying in the 100 butterfly. Rausch also won the 200 individual medley in 2:39.94.

Rausch believed the camaraderie of training together trickled down to the meet. "We're all sitting together like we're one huge team," said Rausch, pointing to the stands. 'There's still a rivalry going on though. It gets you hyped up for the competition.'

North Quincy co-captain Carolyn Schwartz captured the 100 backstroke in 1:19.50 and Quincy's Marlena Forrester finished strong in the 50 freestyle for the win in 29.33.

The South/Central Diving Championships will be held Feb. 6 at the Lincoln-Hancock Pool, while the swimming will take place Feb. 8 at Wellesley College.

'Puppy Doe' Suspect Arraigned On Larceny Charges

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Polish national already charged with numerous counts of animal cruelty for his alleged mistreatment of a Quincy dog known as "Puppy Doe" pleaded not guilty Tuesday to four counts of larceny and attempted larceny.

Last Friday, Norfolk County prosecutors indicted Radoslaw Czerkawski, 32, on two counts of larceny over $250, one count of larceny over $250 from a person over age 60, and one count of attempted larceny. Czerkawski pleaded not guilty to all four charges Tuesday in Norfolk Superior Court in Dedham. Judge Thomas Connors set Czerkawski's bail at $500,000 on the larceny charges, and the defendant was ordered to appear back in court on March 5 for a pre-trial conference.

Council To Review $1M In Appropriations Tuesday

By SCOTT JACKSON

During the City Council's most recent meeting, five appropriations totaling more than $1 million were referred to the finance committee for further review.

The largest proposed appropriation – $276,783 – would go into various Fire Department payroll accounts to complete funding of negotiated salary increases beginning in the current fiscal year, FY14. A separate appropriation would give $200,000 to the Fire Department's overtime account.

Another appropriation would provide the Park and Cemetery Departments with a combined $225,000 for the purchase of six vehicles. According to Chris Cassani, the executive director of the Park, Forestry, and Cemetery Departments, the Park Department is in need of a new ramp truck, chip truck, dump truck and crew cab while the Cemetery Department needs two new pickups.

A separate appropriation, requested by Public Works Commissioner Dan Raymondi, would provide $174,800 for the purchase of a new street sweeper. That money would pay for the purchase of a new 2014

Coast Guard Boathouse Headed For Mound Street Beach

Home Base For Rowing Program

THIS 80-YEAR-OLD historic Coast Guard boathouse – donated by developer Jay Cashman and temporarily stored at the former Fore River Shipyard – will be relocated to the Mound Street Beach area in Quincy Point. The 30-by-60 foot structure will be the home base for Quincy's rowing program, city officials announced Monday.

By KRIS KALABOKAS

An 80-year-old, historic Coast Guard boathouse, which made its way from Chatham via the Cape Cod Canal, will be the home base for Quincy's rowing program thanks to a generous donation by Developer Jay Cashman of Cashman Inc.

Mayor Thomas Koch, who publically thanked Cashman at a press conference on Monday at the Fore River Shipyard where the boathouse is currently located, said it was "a very exciting day for the City of Quincy, in particular a very exciting day for our Park and Recreation Departments and the public at large."

The 30-by-60 foot, 35-ton building was at one time located on Chatham's Stone Island. It was scheduled to be demolished to make way for new construction, however Cashman had the building towed to Quincy in 2009 in an effort to preserve maritime history.

The boathouse was once the home to CG-36500, a 36-foot motorized boat used to rescue 32 sailors following the wreck of oil tanker Pendleton during a nor'easter in 1952, and represents a time when such undertakings were difficult due to the equipment available, according to Cashman.

"The Coast Guard saved a lot of people who got stranded in boats and equipment wasn't what it is today and this building represents a day in which these buildings were spotted up and down the whole coast of the United States of America," he said. "We get to preserve maritime history with this project and then at the same time obviously we do something for young people."

"This is a double win really," he said. "Originally we were trying to do a favor for the town of Chatham. We were going to remove the building and bring it back to Chatham but after two years they couldn't find a place to put it and that's when I talked to the mayor, if he would consider using it."

Quincy Recreation Director Barry Welch, city Park and Forestry Director Christopher Cassani, Park and Recreation Board Members Josephine Shea and Tom O'Brien, School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, City Councillors Michael McFarland and Brad Croall and Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti were also in attendance. Joining the officials at the press conference were members of the Quincy and North Quincy High School rowing program.

Koch extended his gratitude on behalf of the City of Quincy to Cashman for the donation which is estimated to be worth between $500,000 to $1 million dollars. "He's so committed to doing this for the young people of our city."

"Our rowing program has been off to a start but we've been sputtering because there's no home for it," he said, alluding to the building which will eventually end up at the Mound Street Beach, an area he called "one of our greatest spots for utility…for Park and [Recreation] use in our city." # $2 Million Spent On Snow Removal

With several major storms already under its belt, the City estimates that it has spent about $2 million to date on snow removal operations.

For cities and towns across Massachusetts, snow budgets are almost always spent in deficit and balanced at the end of the year as allowed by law.

Mayor Thomas Koch has implemented an annual policy of increasing its snow and ice removal budget to ease year-end deficits. This year, the budget is $1.5 million, about five times the amount of just a few years ago.

While still in deficit, snow and ice will have a "far less detrimental impact on our bottom line than at any time in recent history," Koch said.

With its new salt shed and a host of changes to plow operations over the last several years, the City has essentially overhauled how it handles winter storms. The City has used about 2,000 tons of salt so far this winter and has about 3,000 tons at its disposal, a number that would be far lower without the ability to store major amounts of salt, officials said.

Puppy Suspect Arraigned On Larceny Charges

from the judge at Tuesday's arraignment, Assistant District Attorney Greg Connor stated that the indicted offenses involve $130,000 in savings bonds which Czerkawski is alleged to have improperly converted to cash for his personal use on various occasions.

"The financial exploitation aspect of this case has involved a far-reaching and involved examination of bank and other financial records through the grand jury process," District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey said following the Feb. 7th indictments. "This has involved a tremendous volume of hard work by Quincy Police detectives Bill Monteith, Chuck Landry, Thomas Pepdjonovic and the State Police detectives assigned to the DA's Office, as well as Assistant District Attorney Greg Connor, who brought it through grand jury." Connor serves as DA Morrissey's Chief of White Collar Crime prosecution.

Czerkawski is already being held without bail in the "Puppy Doe" case. He was arraigned on a dozen counts of animal cruelty and one count of misleading an investigation in December, and pleaded not guilty to those charges at the time.

CHAIN OF COMMAND

One of the more popular recent trends in men's watch design takes its cue from centuries-old armor. Chain mail is the flexible outerwear worn by knights and sword combatants, which consists of small metal rings linked together in a mesh pattern. Strong, impenetrable chain mail, which protected wearers from sword points and blades, often made the difference between life and death on the battlefield. Today, jewelry designers are putting these interlocking links to work for more peaceful purposes. The woven steel straps are making masculine statements on men's watches. Simple '60s-style watch dials, in particular, work best with the sleek, lightweight metal mesh straps to deliver a subtle dash of flash on the wrist.

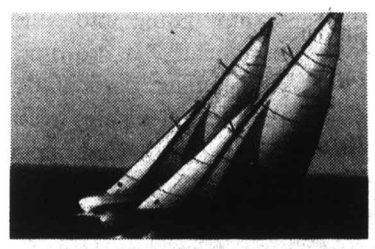

Gold and silver chain mail (maille) jewelry has had something of a rebirth in recent years with many designers using this classic technique as a way to add textural interest to metal designs. Aside from its use in the world of fashion and jewelry, chain mail (mesh) can be used for industrial, architectural and scientific applications as well. Shop at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center to discover just the right piece of chain mail jewelry or other gift or contact us at 617-773-3636.

Finally ... you get to do what you want to do

The question now – what's the best way to pay for it?
Maybe you're simplifying your life. Maybe you're complicating it. Either way, you're at the point where some new doors are opening. You have resources. You have options. What you want is a lender you can talk to – someone you like, whose judgment you trust and respect – to help make the financing happen intelligently. At Colonial Federal, we specialize in working with people like you. Here you deal directly with lenders who actually like coming up with good ways to make things happen. Including sometimes being able to make customized loans. Sound interesting? Like to talk? Call Angela Blanchard, Vice-President/Retail Lending, at 617-471-0750 or apply online at colonialfed.com.

ing and kayaking will also be stored in the building.

The Mound Street Beach has been without a boathouse since 1920, city officials said.

Koch hopes that by creating a stable rowing program, high school students can become competitive in the field of sports college scholarships. "The opportunities for our young people in high school to get scholarships going into college, particularly in rowing, is tremendous, particularly in the area of females availing themselves to that opportunity."

Cashman, a Quincy native who has also made substantial donations to the nonprofit organization DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended), said his family has always focused their charitable giving on women and children. He hopes that the North Quincy High and Quincy High School girls' rowing teams will benefit from his most recent gift.

"Mr. Jay Cashman is one of those outstanding corporate citizens that the city is very fortunate to have operating in our city," said Koch.

Croall, the Ward 2 councillor, thanked Cashman for the "notable gift" which he said would be located in the ideal spot for park and recreational use in the city. "It's quite fitting, in my opinion, that we stand here at the shipyard, which is obviously very symbolic of giving to the community of Quincy Point and affording so many people opportunities," he said. "Jay, in my opinion, is the epitome of the American dream. You put your head down, you work hard, you build, you run a business, and you're successful. In my best estimate, what defines success is a man's ability to give back to his community."

Croall called the project a "recreational rendering we can all be proud of."

"I'm excited by the momentum...and I can't wait to get to work."

Prior to becoming operational, the building will need new heat and plumbing systems, a new foundation, and the addition of bathrooms and offices according to Cashman. All electrical components must also be replaced. New windows will be necessary, however he hopes to keep external renovations to a minimum. "I hope to not have to do too much to the outside," he said. "We'll keep the original wood shingles. I think they're good for another four or five years."

Koch estimated the cost of permitting and designing the site at roughly $200,000. "My commitment is that we're going to fund the design of the site and the permitting required at the state level so I'll be going to the City Council for appropriation once I know those numbers," he said. "There are a number of areas I can grab that from. I haven't yet made that decision. It could be hotel tax money which is for that use."

Cashman said a permit may possibly be obtained by this summer and renovations may be completed in the following six months.

Once renovated, the boathouse will be accessible to all Quincy residents during permitted hours and will be maintained by the Park Department.

"I love Quincy and I'm very happy to do something here," said Cashman.

Moments in time
THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

• On Feb. 26, 1564, poet and playwright Christopher Marlowe is baptized in Canterbury, England, two months before the birth of his fellow playwright William Shakespeare. Historians believe Marlowe served as a spy for Queen Elizabeth while at Cambridge.

• On Feb. 25, 1862, the U.S. Congress passes the Legal Tender Act, authorizing the use of paper notes to pay the government's bills. This ended the long-standing policy of using only gold or silver in transactions, and it allowed the government to finance the enormously costly Civil War.

• On Feb. 27, 1915, "The Valley of Fear" by Arthur Conan Doyle is published. Sherlock Holmes had been a popular character since he first appeared in the story "A Study in Scarlet" in 1887. The detective was modeled partly on Dr. Joseph Bell, a medical-school teacher at the University of Edinburgh.

• On March 2, 1944, a train stops in a tunnel near Salerno, Italy, and more than 500 people on board suffocate and die. The train's locomotives were burning low-grade coal substitutes that produced an excess of odorless and toxic carbon monoxide. Approximately 520 passengers were asphyxiated.

• On March 1, 1961, President John F. Kennedy establishes the Peace Corps as a new agency within the Department of State, which would send trained American men and women to foreign nations to assist in development efforts.

• On Feb. 24, 1981, socialite Jean Harris is convicted of murdering Dr. Herman Tarnower, the author of the bestselling "The Complete Scarsdale Medical Diet." Harris claimed that she had been trying to kill herself but that Tarnower was shot when he tried to wrestle the gun away from her. He was shot four times.

• On Feb. 28, 1993, at Mount Carmel in Waco, Texas, agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms (ATF) launch a raid against the Branch Davidian compound as part of an investigation into illegal possession of firearms and explosives by the Christian cult. During an extended gun battle, multiple agents and Branch Davidians were killed or wounded.

Job Skills Workshop Today

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. Adult Education & Workforce Development will host a Job Readiness Skills Workshop today (Thursday) from 2 to 4 p.m. at 1509 Hancock St., second floor classroom.

The workshop is focused on communication and interpersonal skills, assertiveness and listening skills.

To register, contact Margaret Doherty at: mdoherty@qcap.org or call (617) 479-8181 ext. 387

The next workshop – entitled "Communication & Interpersonal Skills Part 2 – Working with Diversity, Resolving Conflict in the Workplace" is scheduled for Thursday, March 13.

Wollaston Garden Club Unusual Bulbs Program Feb. 20

As part of the mission of the Wollaston Garden Club, the community is invited and encouraged to attend many of its monthly meeting programs.

Programs range from floral design to conservation, horticulture and garden study, and are held at the Wollaston Congregational Church Social Hall at 48 Winthrop Ave., Wollaston.

The next program on Thursday, Feb. 20 at 12:30 p.m. will feature a horticulture power point lecture on "Unusual Bulbs" with Russell Stafford. Stafford is a trained and experienced ecologist, horticulturist, botanist and owner of Odyssey Bulbs. His power point presentation on rare and choice bulbs and ornamental plants is a stunning show of color and unusual plants.

Attending a garden club program is a great way to get introduced to "garden club." The club currently has 109 members including men and women gardeners of all ages, abilities and interests, from novice to master gardener.

More information about the garden club can be found on the club's award-winning web site at www.wollastongardenclub.org.

The open meeting on Thursday, March 20 at 7:30 p.m. will feature "Clematis" with Master Gardener, Cheryl Monroe.

The Wollaston Garden Club, in its 86th year, is dedicated "to promoting and encouraging the love of gardening and the study of horticulture, floral design and landscape design; and to aid in the protection and conservation of our environment and to continue civic beautification in the City of Quincy.

It is a member of the National Garden Club, Inc, and The Garden Club Federation of Massachusetts, Inc.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1911 real photo trade postcard used by the Deacon Brothers Granite Company that was on Centre Street in South Quincy. Begun in 1889 as Cole & Deacon, William Deacon soon bought out his partner and brought in his brother, Walter. They were both immigrants from England where they had learned the stone cutting trade with their father. The company operated under the Deacon Brothers name until World War II, even though Walter had left in 1906 to start his own company and William died in 1923. This view of the plant and its employees is from across Centre Street at the end of Trafford Street showing the expansive operation on almost an acre of land. The site is now home to Schlager's Auto Body Repair shop. Deacon Bros. was only one of dozens of stone cutting companies that operated in South Quincy for over 100 years. Today, there are only a few still in business. An example of the company's work can be seen in the beautiful Celtic cross marking William Deacon's grave at Mount Wollaston Cemetery. ## Weekend Storm Strikes City

By SCOTT JACKSON

A weekend snowstorm dropped about 18 inches of light, powdery snow on Quincy and forced the abandonment of more than 40 vehicles on Palmer Street.

Mayor Frank McCauley declared a state of emergency at 4 a.m. on Saturday, Feb. 12. The state of emergency and associated bans remained in effect for 18 hours until midnight.

The vehicles on Palmer Street between Adams Shore and Germantown were all abandoned after 4 a.m. The street was impassable at the height of the storm.

"If a fire were to have broken out, a life threatening situation would have existed," said Anthony Siciliano, auxiliary police chief and acting Civil Defense director.

Extra tow trucks were pressed into service to free the 40 vehicles and an MBTA bus.

Some 70 volunteers, including skin divers and operators of four-wheel drive vehicles and snowmobiles, answered the call to assist Civil Defense personnel, mostly by transporting key workers to jobs.

Civil Defense workers transported a five-day old baby to the hospital and brought insulin to an elderly diabetic. Some 18 nurses were picked up from Quincy and neighboring towns and brought to City Hospital at 12:30 a.m. Sunday to relieve personnel still on duty.

Civil Defense workers also helped employees of WJDA and The Quincy Sun Cable News Channel 8 get to their work places and distribute storm news to listeners and viewers.

The city had received early warning of the storm and the Civil Defense office was opened at 6:30 a.m. Friday. Division heads and others were called to CD headquarters that night at 8 p.m. as snow began to fall and 90 percent of the personnel were dismissed at noon Sunday.

McCauley praised Civil Defense and Public Works employees for their work in clearing snow from city streets.

"The Public Works Department got a good early start opening the roads and the crews kept up with it," he said.

"Parked cars were still the biggest snow removal problem. I would urge in future storms that people park their cars in vacant lots, driveways, any place to get them off the streets."

The cost of cleaning up the storm had yet to be calculated, but Quincy's snow removal fund of $127,000 had already been depleted by previous snowstorms.

A Few Thoughts As The Snow Falls

Just wondering, as I watch the heavy snow falling:

• Why are there no Quincy police cadets of color (Black, Hispanic, Asian, etc.) in the most recent class? There must be qualified candidates. The police force should reflect the city's diversity. And this is an very old question, view, and issue.

• Has the City of Quincy, specifically North Quincy High School, properly and affectionately honored the team that won last year's WGBH State High School Quiz Challenge? Is there a banner at the school, similar to the ones given to sport teams? Was there a school wide celebration? I don't think so, sadly. Unfair and inexcusable.

• Homeowners and businesses - please shovel out your intersections/street corners so pedestrians will have an easier time crossing the streets. Your cooperation is much appreciated.

• Butler Road - Could the city plow the sidewalks that are next to the old Central Middle School and across the street at the Quincy House? Residents need not to have to walk on the streets because of snow-covered public sidewalks.

That's it. Got to go out and shovel, again.

Keep Progressive Projects Moving Forward

Kudos to Quincy Councillor Doug Gutro for his article in The Quincy Sun (Jan. 23). He pointed out the need for oversight and quarterly updates on the current Street Works/Quincy developmental projects in process throughout our historic city.

Also, heartfelt applause goes to an alert in that same Sun issue, written by Rebecca McWilliams, chairperson, Quincy Climate Action Network. Her letter to the editor is about Quincy's efforts to realize various environmental standards. Particularly, our commitments to "The Green Communities Program," and our intention to cut Quincy's energy use 20 percent by 2016. Also, to this end, Quincy has hired a new Energy Manager, Shelly Dein, who comes with extensive experience in energy-use reduction projects. She should do much to carry our program forward.

Perhaps Ms. Dein will contribute her expertise to the Street Works group, and help assure that new buildings and infrastructure plans, as well as the new contract being agreed upon will focus on high environmental standards and best practices, so necessary today as we go forward in restoring, retrofitting, and establishing new developments for our city.

When I, a lifelong Quincy resident, think about the beautiful resources of our city, I'm attracted to its history, its people and our beautiful shoreline. The environmental challenges and possibilities here are many. However, the solutions can be found. One may be in our use of tidal waters.

Several tidal energy programs have proved successful in communities, I think that some are right here in New England. And, I believe that QCAN is trying to get a program of Solar Panel Energy resources available for Quincy residents and businesses. Wouldn't it be great to have the sun and tides rather than sustainable oil, gas, and/or coal heat all of our new buildings?

Again, thanks to all concerned politicians, activists and citizens of Quincy who help keep these sustainable and progressive projects moving forward.

Lunar New Year Festival Sunday At NQ High School

More than 8,000 people are expected at North Quincy High School on Sunday, Feb. 16 for one of the biggest Lunar New Year Festivals in the region.

The 26th Quincy Lunar New Year Festival hosted by Quincy Asian Resources will open with a traditional Lion Dance at 10:45 a.m., followed by hours of live entertainment, exhibits, activities and information for people of all backgrounds and cultures to enjoy.

The festival is just part of the global celebration of the Lunar Year of the Horse. The spirit of the horse is revered as the symbol of the Chinese people's character and is considered to be energetic, warm-hearted and intelligent.

This year's festival features a Family Area with crafts, games and physical activities for kids organized by the South Shore YMCA; a "Chinese farming village" themed Cultural Area with Chinese brush painting, costumes and an eastern herbal medicine display; a Green Area sponsored by State Street to educate visitors about the environment; and a Chinese Wishing Tree where people can ask for their dreams to come true.

Free parking at several locations around North Quincy High School, a large food court featuring traditional foods, and more than 100 volunteers from the community will help to make this an event you will enjoy and remember.

The entire festival is free to the public thanks to Presenting Sponsor South Cove Community Health Center, along with dozens of other businesses, community organizations, and government and social service agencies, many of which will be available with information tables within the exhibit area.

In the event of bad weather, the event will be rescheduled for February 23rd with announcements on local media channels. More information is available at www.quincyasianresources.org.

JQA & JFK's Profiles In Courage Topic At Historical Society Feb. 19

Quincy Historical Society will present a program on Wednesday, Feb. 19, at 7:30 p.m. in the Adams Academy that will consider the role John Quincy Adams plays in John F. Kennedy's Profiles in Courage.

Kennedy began his book with an account of Adams' support, while he was a U.S. Senator, of President Jefferson's controversial Embargo. Intended to resolve abuses to American shipping and sailors by both English and French navies, the Embargo was deeply unpopular in New England, and Adams' support threatened to destroy his career. The issues with which Adams struggled in the Embargo crisis form a prelude to the War of 1812, whose bicentennial culminates this year.

The program will look at how Kennedy depicts Adams and his decision. A highlight of the program will be a screening of the John Quincy Adams episode of the classic 1965 television drama based on Kennedy's book.

Everyone is welcome. Admission is free.

LEGOs Workshops Feb. 18-21

The Quincy Recreation Department will offer LEGO Workshops during February School Vacation for boys and girls in kindergarten through grade three.

Children will create and build with the popular LEGO toys in both individual and group projects.

The workshops will take place Tuesday, Feb. 18th through Friday, Feb. 21 from 9 a.m. to noon in the Community Room of the Richard J. Koch Park and Recreation Complex located at One Merrymount Parkway. Cost is $20 for a three-hour session and will include the LEGOS, supervised instruction and a snack. The sessions are:

Enrollment will be limited, and a minimum number will be needed for each session for proper group activities. Supervision will be provided by members of the Quincy Recreation Department Staff and participants will also be guided in related LEGOtm activities such as design challenges and games.

Registration is ongoing and can be done online at QuincyRec.com or in person at One Merrymount Parkway from 9 a.m to 4 p.m. For additional information, call 617-376-1394 or visit QuincyRec.com

Blue Hills Winter Fest Feb. 25

The Blue Hills Winter Fest will be held Tuesday, Feb. 25, from 5 to 8 p.m. at Blue Hills Ski Area.

Come for a night hike with a naturalist or get your exercise on the slopes with downhill skiing. There will be plenty of indoor fun, too.

Adults and children alike can do a jig to the spirited Irish tunes of Songs For Ceilidh, sample some piping hot chili and vote for their favorites, make some creative winter crafts, and warm up to the company of old and new friends in the cozy ski lodge. Blue Hills Brewery will also be on hand selling select beers produced at their microbrewery in Canton, and additional refreshments will be available at the snack bar.

This will be the first time The Fours in Quincy will be competing in the Chili Cook-off at Winter Fest. Local elected and town officials will serve as judges, and a "people's choice award" will also be presented.

Blue Hills Ski is offering discounted rates of $20 each for lift tickets, ski rentals, or lessons that evening. To receive the discount, print out and bring the Friends of the Blue Hills website www.FriendsoftheblueHills.org or Facebook page.

The Friends of the Blue Hills is celebrating its 35th year in 2014. Winter Fest is just one of many events the organization sponsors throughout the year to encourage people to explore and enjoy the Blue Hills Reservation. For details about the event or to join Friends of the Blue Hills and support events like Winter Fest, visit www.friendsofthebluehills.org.

Olivia's Poached Pears

The kids are lucky these days especially those who enjoy cooking. Between the Food Network and online recipes, they have so many recipes to choose from.

I am amazed at what my young grandchildren and some great grandchildren are baking these days.

Here is one from my great-granddaughter Olivia who brought me over a delicious dessert-poached pears with wine.

She served with a spiced whipped cream.

POACHED PEARS

4 Bartlett Pears (peeled, cored, and cut in halves)
1 ½ cup red wine
½ cup brown sugar
½ cup granulated sugar
1- teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon salt

Bring the wine to a boil. Add the sugars, vanilla and salt. Drop the pears, and simmer for one hour until the pears are fork tender. Pears will be a lovely shade of red.

SPICED WHIPPED CREAM

1 -pint heavy cream
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 tablespoons powdered sugar
¼ teaspoon cloves
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon nutmeg

Beat everything together for a delicious addition to the pears.

School Resource Officer Trained To Help Students Who Come To School Impaired

Quincy Police School Resource Officer Lisa Devine recently attended a full-day "Drug Impairment Training for Educational Professionals" seminar provided by Norfolk District Attorney Michael W. Morrissey.

"When a student is running into problems with drugs, you need to know what you are dealing with," District Attorney Morrissey said after the training, which drew educators and police professionals from across Norfolk County. "Different drugs provide different forms of intoxication and different symptoms. Speech patterns, statements, coordination, pupil dilation. And they may require different intervention by school officials."

Roughly 60 principals, nurses, and police school and juvenile officers from 23 Norfolk County municipalities attended the Jan. 28 event, held in amphitheater space donated by the Bank of Canton at their headquarters. The trainers were Jack E. Richman, OD, retired Nahant police Sgt. Don Decker and Middleboro Police Sgt. Deborah Batista.

"Connecting drug-involved students with the services they need has to start with establishing and documenting what is really happening," DA Morrissey said. "Whatever we can do to help schools stem destructive behavior – before it becomes a problem for the courts and my office – I'm all for it."

Early intervention also has a long-term impact, Sgt. Decker said. "If you teach the lesson at a young age, hopefully it will carry over."

Morrissey called the training a natural step in his work to improve school safety and security across the Norfolk District, which has included grants for security upgrades and several other seminars. "It is another layer of school security. The environment in a school is most stable when students aren't abusing illegal drugs, and when students who have prescribed substances are taking what they should."

Earlier this month, Morrissey provided training to 40 Norfolk County educators on established guidelines for risk-assessment when a student is re-entering a school population after a substance abuse or mental health intervention.

"These are important issues for individual students and school populations as a whole," Morrissey said. "I appreciate Quincy's partnership and dedication to safe schools."

Town Brook Smelt Monitoring Meeting Feb. 26

A smelt is a small 5- to 10-inch fish that is endangered in local waters. Early each spring smelt make their way up the Fore River. Many branch off and come up the Town Brook to spawn sometime between March 1st and May 30th.

The Quincy Environmental Network (QEN) will be conducting a program in the Community Room (Atrium Level) at the Thomas Crane Library on Wednesday, Feb. 26 at 7 p.m. to help the community learn more about these hard working fish.

At this meeting, QEN will be asking for volunteers (citizen-scientists) to look for and document smelt in the brook. If you, or your group, are interested and can donate 15 minutes per week in March and April to look for smelt in the brook, then attend the Feb. 26 the meeting to learn about the best times, and procedures to find and document fish.

Those who cannot volunteer are also invited to attend the meeting to learn more about the smelt and this great ecosystem running from Town River up to the Blue Hills, right here in Quincy, called the Town Brook.

Medical Marijuana Dispensary Planned For Ricciuti Dr.

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy could be among the first 19 communities in Massachusetts with a medical marijuana dispensary after the state gave preliminary approval for one on Ricciuti Drive.

The state's Department of Public Health (DPH) recently announced that they awarded a provisional license to Provincetown-based Ermont, Inc. to open a dispensary at 216 Ricciuti Drive. Statewide, the department granted 20 provisional licenses to companies planning to operate dispensaries in 19 communities. Two such licenses were awarded for Boston.

The building Ermont plans to use for its dispensary is currently rented to Clifford's Flowers, Smith & Nephew, and KPR, Inc. Under a 10-year agreement with the building's owner, Ermont will lease the entire building, paying $260,000 to rent the building in year one of the lease, a number that increases to $450,000 in year ten. According to its application filed with the state, Ermont plans to both cultivate and sell marijuana at the site, keeping a 30-day inventory in the building.

Ermont will still need approval from several Quincy boards before they can begin doing business in the city. The company must seek a special permit from the Zoning Board, complete a site plan review for the Planning Board, and receive a license from the Licensing Board. Ermont also said in its application to the DPH that they intend to reach a host agreement with the mayor's office.

Once open, Ermont expects to have 2,056 customers in its first 12 months of operation, a number that grows to 3,065 in its second year of operation, and 3,725 customers in year three, according to its application to the DPH. The company anticipates revenues of $3.5 million in its first year, a figure that will double to $7 million in year two and increase to $8.4 million in year three.

Those projections are based on charging $350 per ounce of medical marijuana – a price the company said is being kept above the average price range to discourage reselling of the drug and because of its higher quality. Ermont expects the average transaction to be in the $75 range, and will offer discounts to low-income clients.

Ermont is solely owned by John "Jack" Hudson, the president and owner of OP3, Inc., a company that provides fundraising consulting and events planning to non-profits. He is also a former vice president of Avon Products, Inc. Hudson will serve as Ermont's executive director. Other members of the board have experience working with both medical marijuana advocacy organizations and dispensaries in other states that already permit the sale of medical marijuana.

In 2012, voters statewide approved a law authorizing the DPH to grant licenses for up 35 dispensaries throughout Massachusetts. The referendum mandates that each county have at least one dispensary, and no more than five. The DPH has given preliminary approval for two dispensaries in Norfolk County – the one in Quincy and another in Brookline.

In 2013, the City Council passed zoning restrictions limiting requiring dispensaries to operate at least 1,500 square feet from a residential zone, school, childcare center, any facility with a liquor license, or another dispensary. That regulation limited possible locations to the former Fore River Shipyard, Crown Colony, or Quarry Hills.

Flood Map Community Meeting Set For Tonight

2012 that could drive up the cost of flood insurance for property owners. Lynch hosted a similar meeting previously in Scituate, and expects a heavy turnout at tonight's event. He noted that upwards of 1,400 Quincy residents could be placed into flood zone as a result of the new FEMA maps, which would force them to purchase flood insurance. Others already in flood zones could face higher premiums.

"We expect a good turnout. We know there are between 1,000 and 1,400 residents tentatively placed in flood zones and others would have higher premiums. They'll be keenly interested and we expect interest from residents in Weymouth and Hull," the South Boston Democrat told The Sun in a phone interview. "We had a meeting in Scituate with 1,400 people. The potential for premiums going up is a motivation for people to come."

Lynch is one of more than 180 co-sponsors of H.R. 3370, a House bill introduced by U.S. Reps. Michael Grimm (R-NY) and Maxine Waters (D-CA). The bill, known as the Homeowner Flood Insurance Affordability Act or the Grimm-Waters Act after its sponsors, would delay implementation of the new FEMA maps by up to four years by requiring the agency to conduct an affordability study.

"We've had a number of meetings between Democrats and Republicans who represent coastal areas, areas near rivers and major tributaries – anyone with a flood zone in their district. We came up with a flood relief bill," Lynch explained.

"It would require FEMA to complete an affordability study before going forward with the new premiums. This would delay implementation by about four years – two years for the affordability study, then a period of review by FEMA and a period for review in Congress.

"We would have an idea or range to determine what increases may be coming. We think it's a better approach."

The Senate passed companion legislation of the House bill on Jan. 30, by a 67-32 margin. Lynch was pleased by that vote, but he said House Speaker John Boehner (R-OH) has been unwilling to let the Grimm-Waters bill come to a floor vote. Lynch said representatives on both sides of the aisle are working on alternative bills that would delay the insurance rate increase.

Tonight's flood forum comes 10 days after Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest, Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci, and Councillor Doug Gutro introduced a resolution seeking a presentation on FEMA's proposed new maps and the potential impact on property owners. The council accepted new FEMA maps in 2012, but the agency submitted revised flood maps based on a different methodology for Norfolk County in January that require local approval by June.

Laforest said her constituents are already feeling the effects of the changes to the flood insurance program. She noted that a family in the "Pre-G" section of her ward – the Empire Street, Broady Avenue, and Brockton Avenue neighborhood off Palmer Street – whose house was placed in a flood zone after the 2012 maps were adopted received a flood insurance bill for $5,000 after being told the insurance would only cost $1,500. That family, who was trying to sell their home at the time, had to cut its price from $250,000 to $210,000.

"This could have a major, major impact on property values, particularly in Ward 1 but elsewhere within the City of Quincy," Laforest said. "It's very important that we're not accepting these maps with poor methodology, and that we're looking into this for our constituents."

Property owners do have the ability to appeal the new FEMA maps, and can challenge either their property's placement in a flood zone or the amount of flood risk assessed to their property. In several Plymouth County communities, where the FEMA maps based on the new methodology were unveiled last year, residents expressed so much concern over the maps that the towns themselves chose to appeal the maps. Gutro said that appeal effort is the fair thing to do.

"Towns like Scituate, Marshfield, and Duxbury have done a good job questioning the science, the protocols, and the procedure because it's a fair thing to do," he said. "It impacts the one nest egg most people have, and that's their homes and their businesses."

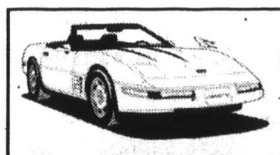

Coughlin, whose house on Small Street would be added to the flood zone by the proposed FEMA maps along with his neighbors' houses, said environmental consultants working with those communities in Plymouth County have called FEMA's new methodology 'junk science.'

"The specific modeling they used looks at a coastline that is significantly different than what we have on the East Coast," Coughlin said. "The Woods Hole Group that has been working with Scituate and some of the other communities in Plymouth County has clearly shown that this is junk science in terms of its application to the East Coast."

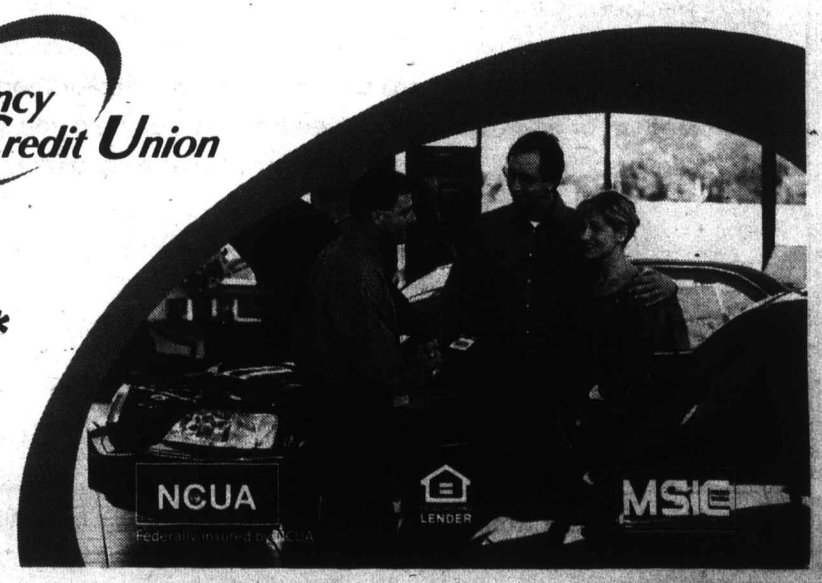

He added that changes to the flood insurance program, which lead to the increased premiums, were made solely to recoup losses incurred in major storms over the past decade.

"I think people are seeing this for what it is – it's a money grab trying to bail out the flood insurance program for Hurricane Katrina and some of the other recent significant events," Coughlin said. "It's really placing the burden on the backs of those who can least afford it."

Declan McGaffigan Awarded Eagle Scout

By SCOTT JACKSON

Declan McGaffigan was awarded the rank of Eagle Scout after overseeing the installation of a new floor at a Quincy food pantry.

McGaffigan had been volunteering at the food pantry run by the Quincy Crisis Center, a part of the Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion, on Billings Road in North Quincy for two years. While volunteering there, McGaffigan mentioned that he was looking for ideas on what to do for his Eagle Scout service project and the managers of the pantry suggested he could replace the floor of one of the main rooms.

"I had volunteered there for about two years – a kid in my troop had actually done an Eagle Scout project there and that's how I became familiar with the Quincy Crisis Center in the first place," McGaffigan said. "While I was volunteering with them I told them I was looking for an Eagle Scout project if they ever needed anything done. When the time came I brought it up again and they came up with the idea to redo the floor in the main food pantry."

The project took about a week to complete, and the 500-square-foot room now has a laminate floor that was donated by Lumber Liquidators instead of the old carpet it was once had.

"It was a disgusting old carpet that had been there since the building was built," McGaffigan said.

McGaffigan, a member of Troop 42 out of Christ Church, completed the project with the assistance of his fellow scouts and their parents.

"There were a lot of scouts from my troop that helped me," he said. "A lot of adults from the troop helped out – parents of the scouts."

McGaffigan has been a Scout for the past six years. When he first joined, he never envisioned himself reaching the rank of Eagle Scout.

"When I first joined, no, I could never see myself doing it," he said. "It wasn't really until a few years ago that I could really see it happening. It was just such a big achievement. I could never see myself attaining such a prestigious award.

McGaffigan received the Eagle Scout award during a ceremony at Christ Church on Jan. 5. McGaffigan's friends and fellow scouts Tyler Chen and Jack Monahan also received Eagle Scout awards during the ceremony.

"It was really nice to see it all come together and be on the stage with two of my best friends from boy scouting was really great," McGaffigan said. "We all helped each other with each other's projects and we'd been there from the very beginning and finally we were ending it together."

McGaffigan, a senior at North Quincy High School, said he hopes to attend the Massachusetts Maritime Academy in Buzzards Bay next school year to pursue a career in maritime engineering.

"I'd like to attend Mass. Maritime in the fall," he said. "Probably go into the field of maritime engineering or something like that."

Chuck Phelan III An Eagle Scout

By SCOTT JACKSON

Chuck Phelan III will receive scouting's highest honor, the Eagle Scout award, for overseeing the restoration of the Quincy Salt Marsh Trail and the installation of a new osprey nest.

The trail Phelan III restored, located off Fenno Street opposite Andrews Road, was actually constructed in 1973 by his father, Chuck Phelan, Jr., Quincy's IT director and a former Ward 5 councillor, as part of his Eagle Scout project.

The half-mile long trail winds its way through the marsh near Black's Creek to and from Sailors' Cemetery and features more than two-dozen signs detailing plants, flowers, and other features of the marsh.

Students from the nearby Beechwood Knoll School, including the younger Phelan, had helped maintain the trail over the years but it had fallen into disrepair over the last decade.

"I built it in 1973," Phelan, Jr. explained. "It was later then maintained by the Beechwood Knoll School, actually he was going there, and they rebuilt the trail back about 10 years ago but it had fallen into pretty much disrepair. There were no signposts up. No stickers left."

"The trails were all wooded in," Phelan III added. "You couldn't even walk by to see the posts. They were all bushed in."

It took two months last summer for Phelan III and a group of fellow Scouts and other volunteers to restore the trail and install an osprey nest, which sits atop a pole 18 feet above the marsh.

He had a lot of help with the project, including from Beechwood Knoll Assistant Principal Nancy Barron and teacher Brenda Shore, who had information and had put together a printed guide on the trail; P.J. Foley, who helped design the osprey nest; Jack Lydon and Joe Giggey, two Eagle Scouts who work in the city's IT Department; and from his father. Phelan III said it was cool to be able to restore the trail his father completed 40 years earlier.

"It was pretty cool," he explained. "I wanted to put a different spin on it too, so we put the osprey nest out there to be a little bit more original. But it was definitely cool doing my dad's project."

"I was happy he was doing it," his father added. "We live in the neighborhood. We used to see it and it definitely needed some work."

The younger Phelan, a member of Troop 20 out of St. Ann's Church in Wollaston, joined Cub Scouts when he was 6. He didn't think about getting the Eagle Scout award when he first joined, but as the years went on it became his goal.

"When I was in Cub Scouts I really didn't care – I was little and kind of just having fun going through the program," Phelan III said. "Then when I first got into Scouts all I wanted was the Eagle. I wanted the Eagle really bad. I went to Scout camp, I stayed up at Scout camp for two summers and I worked there another two summers. As I got older, it faded a little bit but that happens to everyone. Then I got back in it and I'm still liking it."

Phelan is a senior at the Landmark School in Beverly. The 18-year-old plans to attend UMass-Boston or UMass-Lowell to study exercise science and hopes to become a personal trainer or physical therapist after college.

He will receive his Eagle Scout award at a ceremony to be held later this month or in early March.

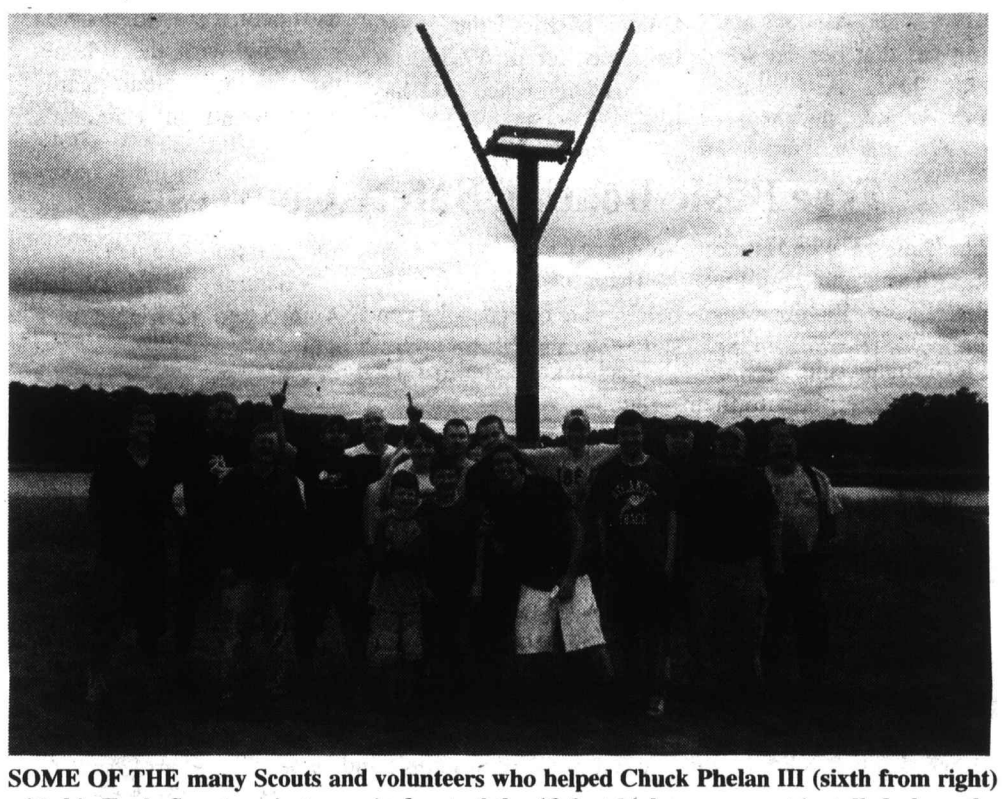

On Jan. 21, Phelan received a commendation from the City Council for overseeing the project and achieving scouting's highest honor.

"As somebody who is very outdoor work illiterate, I am extremely humbled to be in your presence today," Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes said.

"Chuck, you truly are a role model and an inspiration to your peers and to our community. You have accepted a unique challenge to construct an osprey tower in the Beechwood Knoll marsh and nature trail to benefit not only the osprey, but naturalists from all over our state."

Chelsea Man Arraigned On Carjacking Charges

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Quincy police have arrested 53-year-old Walter C. Hairston of Chelsea for a carjacking witnessed by a Quincy Police officer while he was on a work site detail at approximately 12:30 p.m. in Quincy Center on Monday.

Officer Ryan Donnelly immediately called for back-up after seeing the 22-year-old victim being forcefully pushed to the ground by the suspect at 1359 Hancock St., close to City Hall.

Hairston allegedly lured the woman out of the vehicle by gesturing for her to roll down her window and telling her that her car was leaking fluid. As she exited the vehicle, the suspect knocked her to the ground and hopped into the driver's seat. The victim attempted to stop the car by grabbing the steering wheel from outside the vehicle but was unsuccessful.

He was arrested by Boston Police in the Grove Hall neighborhood of Dorchester at 3 p.m., just two hours after the crime.

Hairston faces charges include carjacking, assault by means of a deadly weapon (the car), larceny over $250, and malicious destruction of a motor vehicle.

He pled not guilty at his arraignment Tuesday in Quincy District Court. Cash bail was set at $7,500. A pretrial conference date has been set for March 17 at 9 a.m. Hairston has several outstanding warrants from outside Quincy as well.

A syringe was found on the ground at the arrest site and additional syringes were found in the Toyota.

The car was located using an app on the victim's iPhone, which was in the car. Police were able to track Hairston as he traveled through Dorchester and Mattapan, and eventually to the supermarket parking lot where he was apprehended by police and identified by the victim who was brought to the site by officers.

She declined any medical treatment.

Along with the iPhone, the victim's credit cards were found in Hairston's pockets.

To Promote Health, Cut Health Care Cost

Manet Community Health Awarded State Grant

A community-based partnership led by Manet Community Health is one of nine such partnerships in the Commonwealth to receive funds in an innovative health and wellness initiative, the Patrick Administration announced.

The Administration named more than $40 million in grants that will be shared by nine partnerships to help fight chronic illness and improve health outcomes on the community level while reducing health care costs. Part of the Prevention and Wellness Trust Fund, this first-in-the-nation effort is part of a $60 million grant over four years created by the Legislature and administered by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health.

"We are both honored and readied for this groundbreaking opportunity. Together, we praise Governor Patrick, Secretary Polanowicz and Commissioner Bartlett for their vision and exemplary dedication that has lead to this pioneering occasion to work in tandem with clinical health providers, municipalities and community based organizations. Jointly, we will work effectively and efficiently to improve health outcomes; decrease preventable risk factors; reduce illness; promote and prioritize better health and reduce health care costs," said Henry N. Tuttle, Chief Executive Officer, Manet Community Health.

The Prevention and Wellness Trust Fund supports community-based partnerships in achieving measurable health goals through research-based interventions. Working together, municipalities, health care systems, community organizations, businesses, regional planning organizations and schools design community-specific programs addressing issues such as: hypertension, smoking, falls prevention among older adults and pediatric asthma. As a condition of funding, each partnership must achieve specified health and cost saving benchmarks on at least two of these four health issues determined by the Trust.

Funded partnerships will work to reduce rates of the most prevalent and preventable health conditions, advance healthy behaviors, increase the adoption of workplace wellness or health management programs and address health disparities.

Manet Community Health formed a partnership in Quincy and Weymouth that addresses emerging populations and strategically incorporates community health workers across all health priority health conditions identified by the Prevention and Wellness Trust Fund. In addition to addressing multiple priority health conditions, tobacco use, hypertension, falls among the elderly, and substance abuse, an advantage of the partnership is the existing relationships among the partners and their strong alignment with addressing health conditions. The coordinating partner, Manet Community Health, is part of the State Innovation Model grant, making it well positioned to implement electronic referrals.

Each of the nine partnerships in the Commonwealth that have been awarded grants will receive up to $250,000 for the first phase of their work. As grantees demonstrate their readiness to implement interventions in community and clinical settings, they will receive additional funding between $900,000 and $1.5 million for each of the next three years. The amount each receives depends upon population covered and the number of conditions addressed.

Manet Community Health is the coordinating organization on the South Shore for the grant, working together with the following partners to achieve the goals outlined in the grant:

Bay State Community Services, Inc.; City of Quincy (Quincy Health Department); Quincy Medical Center; South Shore Elder Services, Inc.; South Shore Hospital; South Shore Workforce Investment Board; South Shore YMCA, Inc. and the Town of Weymouth

Free Basic Boating Safety Courses

The Quincy Police Marine Unit, in partnership with the Massachusetts Environmental Police, will be presenting three Basic Boating Safety Courses at the Houghs Neck Maritime Center, 137 Bay View Ave.

The HNGC Student Awards Committee will review every completed application, which must include a brief information form and a written statement of the student's educational goals.

VOICE FOR HEALTH
by Dr. Gabrielle Freedman
Chiropractor

AN INSIDER'S PERSPECTIVE

In the mind of the chiropractor, so-called "back problems" encompass more than back pain. Displaced vertebrae, muscle spasms, and swollen discs are all conditions that can exert pressure on nerves as they exit the spinal canal. The longer nerves endure pressure and irritation, the more likely they are to undergo degenerative changes. Furthermore, pinched and irritated nerves are compromised in their ability to relay electrical impulses to muscles, tissues, and internal organs. Chiropractic's goal is to restore health to these tissues and organs by releasing any pressure or irritation exerted on nerves caused by misaligned vertebrae. Once the nerve pathways are clear to deliver commands and healing energy, pain and dysfunction elsewhere in the body can be restored to health. Talk to us at FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC to see what you can do to maintain and improve your health. We are highly trained experts on helping you maintain good health with accurate, reliable information about the benefits of chiropractic care. Maybe it's time you give expert chiropractic care a try. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we serve the needs of the entire family by providing professional chiropractic care. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule your appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

Important Safety Tips About Natural Gas, Carbon Monoxide

National Grid Reminds Customers To Use Caution When Clearing Snow, Keep Gas Meters Clear Of Snow

National Grid reminds customers to use caution when clearing snow to avoid covering or damaging natural gas lines, meters, regulators, and intake and exhaust vents for gas appliances. Customers should keep their gas meters clear of snow and should be careful not to drop heavy rooftop snow onto any outside meter.

Customers should also use care when shoveling or plowing near outside gas lines, because damage to this equipment can result in a natural gas leak.

As the winter months continue, National Grid reminds customers about what actions they should take if they suspect a natural gas leak and how to avoid exposure to potentially deadly carbon monoxide.

Report Natural Gas Leaks

Like any fuel, natural gas is safe when used properly. In the interest of customer and public safety, National Grid crews continually test, repair and improve the underground system that delivers natural gas, but the possibility does exist for a gas leak in or near your home. Natural gas is odorless, but National Grid adds a harmless substance called mercaptan, which has a strong odor similar to that of a rotten egg, to natural gas so that you can tell if gas is escaping.

Any natural gas leak is a potentially hazardous situation. If you or a loved one detect a natural gas leak, National Grid recommends that you evacuate the premises for your own safety while taking the following immediate actions:

- Do NOT touch any electrical or light switches, appliances, thermostats, doorbells, phones or anything that could cause a spark.
- Do NOT turn any electrical equipment on or off.
- Do NOT pull any plugs from outlets.
- Do NOT smoke or light matches.
- If you have a gas range or oven, make sure the controls are turned OFF. Extinguish any easily accessible open flames such as lit candles, but never try to put out a fire you suspect may be caused by escaping gas. Leave immediately.
- Call National Grid's gas emergency number from a safe location: 1-800-233-5325 in Massachusetts and 1-800-640-1595 in Rhode Island. National Grid technicians respond immediately to any calls about gas leaks.
- Do not return to your home until National Grid tells you it is safe.

Carbon Monoxide

Carbon monoxide is an invisible, odorless gas that can be deadly if left undetected. It is the byproduct of the incomplete burning of fuels such as natural gas, butane, propane, wood, coal, heating oil, kerosene and gasoline.

Common sources of carbon monoxide include malfunctioning forced-air furnaces, kerosene space heaters, natural gas ranges, wood stoves, fireplaces and motor vehicle engines.

During the heating season when windows and doors are tightly shut, fresh air is sealed out, creating the potential for carbon monoxide to build up over time.

National Grid reminds its customers of the following safety information to help identify and prevent carbon monoxide poisoning.

The symptoms of carbon monoxide poisoning are similar to those of the flu. Depending upon the amount of carbon monoxide in the air and length of exposure, symptoms may include headaches, weakness, confusion, chest tightness, skin redness, dizziness, nausea, sleepiness, fluttering of the heart or loss of muscle control.

If you suspect carbon monoxide is present in your home, go outside immediately and call 911. After calling 911, call the appropriate National Grid emergency contact number:

- Massachusetts: 1-800-233-5325
- Rhode Island: 1-800-640-1595

Carbon Monoxide Prevention Tips:

- Arrange for an annual check of your heating system by a licensed professional heating contractor. If you haven't had your heating system inspected yet, call them now.
- Have your chimney or flue checked for debris, bird nests or other blockages, and have them cleaned periodically.
- Be sure space heaters and wood stoves are in good condition, have adequate ventilation and are used in strict compliance with the manufacturer's instructions.
- NEVER use a gas range for heating or burn coal or charcoal in an enclosed space.
- Install a government-approved home carbon monoxide detector on every floor.
- If you use a back-up generator to supply power during outage, be sure to operate it outdoors. Open windows do not provide sufficient ventilation to safely operate a generator indoors.

For additional safety information, visit National Grid's web site: www.nationalgridus.com

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Friday, January 31, 2014, at approximately 3:10 p.m., Community Policing Officers Sean Glennon and Greg Mar were dressed in plain clothes working at the CVS located at 42 Beale Street due to the high number of calls for police services. Most of these calls have been for shoplifting and unwanted parties.

At this time, the Officers observed a male enter the parking lot. He was nervously looking around the lot like he was conducting counter surveillance before finally grabbing a cart and entering the store. Officer Glennon followed the male into the store and observed him place some paper goods in his cart before going to the electronic accessories aisle. Moments later, the Officer observed the male grab a white boxed item from the shelf, scan the area as if to see if anyone was watching him and then stick the box in his pants pocket.

Officer Glennon contacted Officer Mar and advised him of what occurred and to take up a position outside the door so the Officers could confront the male when he exited the store. The male approached the register and began the checkout process, then abruptly left the items in the carriage and quickly exited the store. Upon entering the parking lot, he was encountered by Officer Mar who had his badge conspicuously displayed outside his clothing.

Officer Mar announced "Quincy Police" to which the male responded by throwing the stolen item at Officer Mar and yelling, "Here -take it!" and then ran. He was quickly detained by Officer Mar and escorted back to the front of the store.

After getting identification from the suspect, Officer Glennon read him his Miranda Warnings which he stated he understood. The suspect then said, "I didn't take anything. They got it all back." Officer Glennon advised the male that he observed the male put the item in his pocket that he threw at Officer Mar. Prior to performing a pat frisk, Officer Glennon asked the male if he had any needles on him to which he replied, "Yes, in my pocket - I have a needle." Inside the male's pockets were two prescription bottles and a glove, which contained the hypodermic syringe.

LT. DAN MINTON

Upon closer inspection, one of the prescription bottles labels was obliterated, however the medication appeared to be Gabapentin and this was confirmed by the male. The second bottle's label read that it contained IC Sertraline. The Officer knew from training and experience that drug abuser's trade and steal medications from one another and remove the name on the bottle to avoid police detection. The Officers placed the male, a 41 year old Everett resident, under arrest for "Shoplifting, Possession of Class B Drug and Possession of Class E Drug." Officer Glennon took the second bottle to the Pharmacist who identified the pills as Adderall, even though the script on the bottle was for IC Sertraline (Zoloft). Nice Work!

QUINCY POLICE DEPARTMENT OPEN HOUSE/ TOURS/BLOOD DRIVE!

On Saturday, February 15th, the Quincy Police Department will have an open house and tours of the station from 10:00 A.M. to 2:00 P.M. Tours will include the communications area and the cell block. There will also be a cruiser available to check out all the equipment used by Officers. Be sure to bring a camera!

BLOOD DRIVE INFO:

From 8:00 A.M. to 2:00 P.M., there will also be the Quincy Police Department/Glennon Family blood drive in the parking lot of the Quincy Police Station. For more information on either the open house/tours or the blood drive, contact Lieutenant Daniel J. Minton at 617 745 5719.

FITNESS AND HEALTH CLUB THEFT: rates vary depending upon the facilities effort to prevent crime. The theft can range from removing valuables from a member's locker to stealing a car by removing keys from a locker, then using the remote on the key to locate and then take the car. The rate of crimes in these clubs are often dependent upon the actual physical set up of the club, the clientele and the effort made by the club to deter crime.

Here are some suggestions to avoid becoming a victim:

*Don't bring valuables into the club. Leave items like your wallet, watch, phone, etc. in your car, well hidden, preferably in the trunk. The clear majority of car breaks are due to unlocked doors. Parking in a visible, high traffic, well lit location are all deterrents.

*The only item you really need is one key to your car and this should be with you at all times, especially if you do not shower at the facility. Tie it to your sneaker laces. Do not bring in the car remote.

*Use a padlock on your locker with a combination lock, not a key lock. When showering, secure your locker during that brief period of time. If you follow the suggestions above and only have a car key, hide the key within your belongings (inside a sock – who wants to look in there!) You could also covertly pin the key to the towel that you bring to the shower area.

*Don't rely too much on the padlock. Thieves sometimes bring in bolt cutters to cut through the thin metal in the lock, hitting numerous lockers at once.

*If you need to bring in valuables, such as a cell phone, etc, consider using a fanny pack, which can be kept with you at all times with the exception of the shower. Thieves know that valuables are kept in fanny packs too!

*As always, report suspicious activity to protect other members.

50 Players Take Part In Quincy Youth Basketball Clinic

Quincy Youth Basketball recently welcomed the Boston University Women's Basketball team for a free clinic.

Over 50 QYB players braved frigid temperatures to welcome the Terriers and their coaches to Broad Meadows Middle School for the free hoop clinic. Including QYB coaches, Board Members and parents, the gym swelled to over 100 in attendance.

BU Director of Basketball Operations Brendan Burke and Assistant Coach Jenna Loschiavo ran the clinic with the help of eight of their players: Rashidat Agboola, Whitney Turner, Melissa Gallo, Troi Melton, Katie Poppe, Sarah Hope, Courtney Latham, and Meghan Green.

The BU team made the hardy winter trip to Quincy after a very long day of classes and basketball practice at BU. The BU players promptly spread their energy and enthusiasm throughout the gym by leading a brief stretching exercise. They then distributed the large QYB group into drill stations and promptly got to work for over an hour and half doing every hoop drill imaginable including rebounding and boxing out to proper form on passing and shooting drills.

Defensive foot-fire / slide drills, some speed work with orange cones, a few contests and more ensured every player had assistance from one of the BU players at some point during the clinic.

The BU coaches and players were a case study in efficiency and time management while smiling and sharing their laughter and energy throughout the night. The evening was capped off with a BU basketball-related trivia contest with numerous QYB players winning BU hoop t-shirts for their efforts.

The BU team invited QYB players and their families to attend their home game against Bucknell as their guests. With a strong contingent of QYB players and family members in attendance at the BU – Bucknell game, BU overwhelmed Bucknell for an exciting and fast-paced win during a fun afternoon on the BU campus.

For the last several years QYB has partnered with local colleges to bring the very best basketball experience to the QYB players. In prior years Harvard and UMass Boston Women's basketball teams have visited and executed the QYB basketball clinics. UMass has returned this season to do a second clinic for QYB while Stonehill College and Boston College are among teams who are on a developing waiting list to perform future basketball clinics for QYB players.

For four minutes in the third period, Quincy's girls basketball team did what it does best: Force turnovers, get out on the break and translate the defense into instant offense.

The Presidents ran off an 8-0 blitz to end the third period, Nicole Jorgensen and Gabby Jerahian supplied consistent offense, and Quincy downed Silver Lake, 48-38 in an important Patriot League Keenan Division game at home Friday night.

"I was very pleased. I liked our energy," said coach Jeff Bretsch. "I think we're at our best when we get out and run, and that's what we did in the third period."

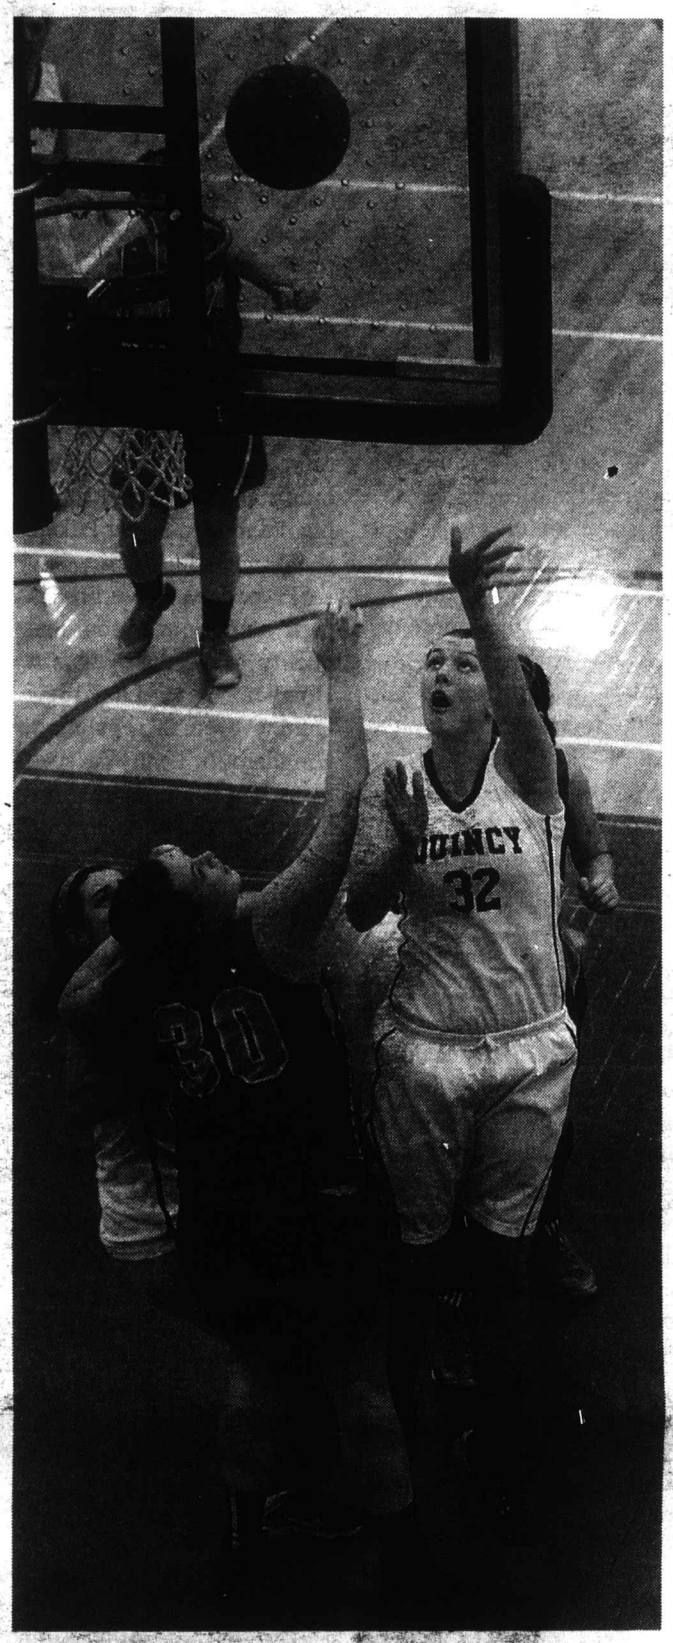

The win lifted Quincy to 7-10 overall and 5-5 in the Keenan Division. It kept the Presidents in the mix with Silver Lake and Whitman-Hanson in the race for second place in the division behind unbeaten Duxbury. If Quincy finishes second, the Presidents make the state tourney.

"It was a game we had to have," said Bretsch. "I liked the aggressiveness we showed. We attacked the dribble and took control in the third period."

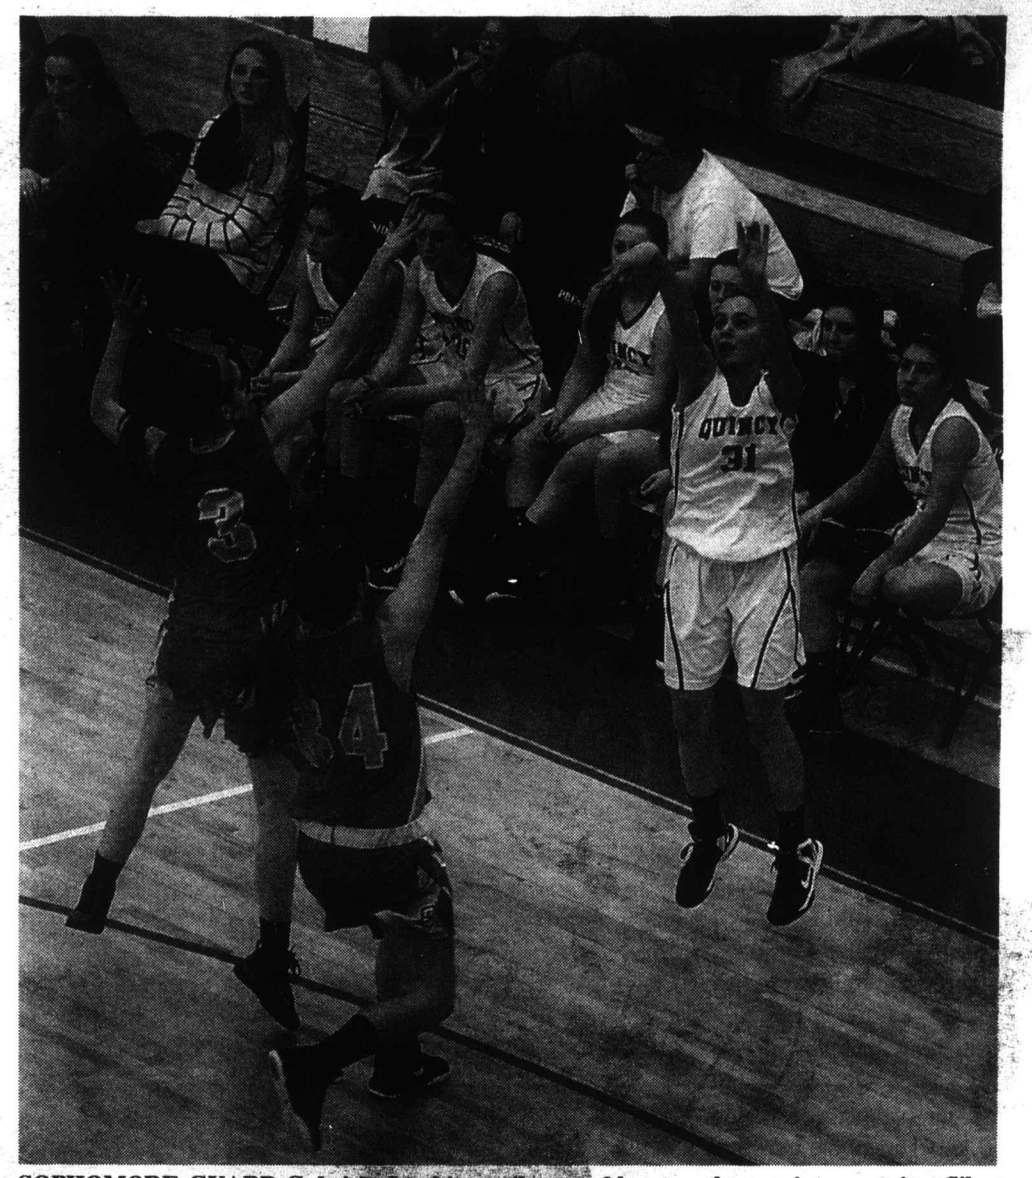

In other action last week, Quincy led by 11 at the half, but fell on the road to Hingham, 48-39. Jorgensen and Jerahian had nine apiece. Kayla McArdle and Caroline McBride each scored eight.

It was a close game against Silver Lake for 2 ½ periods. Quincy led, 25-24 at the half which saw three ties and eight lead changes. The Presidents were up, 32-31, midway through the fourth. Then Quincy's half-court man-to-man seized the game, creating turnovers and fast-break chances.

Jerahian forced two turnovers, McArdle and Courtney Ryan forced one apiece. When Quincy stole the ball, the Presidents were not satisfied with possession. They looked up. They looked up for the open player streaking down the floor and cashed layups and free throws, which were set up by the running game for a 40-31 lead after three.

"I tell them to run, don't think. Just run," smiled Bretsch. "You can't hesitate. You need the mindset to just go."

Jerahian had two drives in the burst, Jorgensen put back an offensive rebound and knocked home two free throws set up by a beautiful pass from Jerahian. It was fast-break basketball. It was what Quincy does best.

"We were aggressive in transition," said Bretsch.

Jorgensen led all scorers with 18 while Jerahian added 16 and played a terrific all-around floor game. Jorgensen also had 11 rebounds and passed the ball well. She threw several bullseye outlet passes and had a wonderful assist on a back-door cut by Alyssa Lydon for a hoop in the first quarter."

"The prettiest play of the night," said Bretsch.

Jerahian hit nine threes in a two-game stretch two weeks ago. She had two Friday night, but she showed she is a lot more than a three point-shooter. She is an athlete who flourishes in the running game. She handles and finishes well at full speed.

"Gabby's defense was good and she led the break for us," said Bretsch.

McArdle and Ryan supplied excellent defensive games. McArdle played great off-the-ball defense against the Lakers' top scorer, Bridget Hughes, limiting her touches and holding Hughes to nine points. The Lakers' Brianna Walker had nine in the first half, but Ryan worked hard and held her to five in the final 16 minutes. Quincy limited Silver Lake to five field goals in the second half, and the lead was not seriously threatened in the fourth period.

"Kayla must have fought through 100 picks," said Brestch. "That's what makes her a great defensive player. She never takes a play off. Anyone can play good defense for a couple of plays. Kayla never lets up.

"I was also pleased with the play of Leann McColgan at center. She played a good all-around game and had an early hoop that helped get us off to a good start."

Presidents Sink Hingham In Double OT Thriller

By BILL GRIFFIN

The thrill of victory. The agony of defeat.

Quincy's boys basketball team experienced both last week. Tuesday against Hingham, James Lam tied the game with two seconds left in regulation and the Presidents posted a thrilling 71-68 double-overtime win in a Patriot League Keenan Division contest.

Friday at Silver Lake, Quincy came out on the other end of the emotional see-saw. The Presidents rallied from down seven late in the fourth period, but the Lakers' Pat Cotter cashed an offensive rebound with five seconds left to down Quincy, 75-73 in another classic which left the nerves raw and drained.

"Just two tremendous high-school basketball games," said Quincy coach Dave Parry. "It's a roller coaster of emotions. I thought we were going to pull out another close one."

In another contest last week, Quincy rolled past Pembroke, 77-43 behind 16 each from Lam, Drew Myers and Brendan Cunningham.

The loss left Quincy at 10-7 overall, 8-4 in the division and tied with Silver Lake, one game behind first-place Whitman-Hanson at the end of last week.

Quincy trailed the entire game against the Lakers. The Presidents trailed by three after one period, by three at the half and by three entering the fourth. The Lakers hiked the lead to seven, but Quincy came roaring back behind Myers who nailed a pair of clutch threes just as he did late in the Scituate game. Myers had seven threes and game-high 23 points against Silver Lake.

Quincy drew even at 73-73 on a strong drive by Cunningham with 15 seconds left. After the Lakers worked the clock, Quincy's defense forced a miss, but Cotter put back the rebound for the winning hoop.

J.T. Bain, who scored 42 points in two games last week, had 21 for Quincy while Chris Callahan added 11. Johnny Marsinelli returned to action from a hand injury and played outstanding defense on Silver Lake's star Tanner Bouchard.

There was an ending of high drama and four-star quality basketball against Hingham. After Lam drew Quincy even in regulation, Hingham Joe Leahy swished a catch-and-fire three to tie the game for Hingham with the clock reading 0:00 in the first overtime.

The lead and momentum switched back and forth like leaves in the wind. Finally, Callahan nudged Quincy ahead in the second overtime with a drive and a beautiful assist, and Colin Evans drained two clinching free throws

"What a game," said Parry with a shake head. "Both teams played great. We just worked and worked. We persevered at the end."

With 12 seconds left in regulation, Quincy was staring at a damaging loss. The Presidents were down, 52-50. Hingham had the ball. The Harbormen were dribbling out the clock when a great pass presented a cold, clear layup. Hingham missed it. Lam battled to tie up the rebound. The possession arrow pointed to Quincy. The Presidents had a last chance.

"We called a play we had never called before," said Parry.

Lam took the inbounds pass in the backcourt and loped at three-quarter speed to the foul line. His eyes were up, he saw everything, he was in control. There was no rush, no panic. He knew the clock, he knew the play and its options. He was in control. Suddenly, he turned into another gear, a gear all his own with that matchless first step. He flew down the left of the lane and banked in a runner for the 52-52 tie.

"We knew they had to respect our three-point shooters," said Parry. "We knew James was so smart that if anyone helped on him, he would find the open shooter. If nobody helped, we wanted him to drive. It worked because James has the trust of everyone on the team,."

Bain (21 points, 12 rebounds) and Lam (14 points, 10 assists, 10 rebounds, seven steals in a near quadruple-double) ran seven straight points for a seven-point lead in the first OT, but Hingham buried three of its 13 threes, the final one by Leahy from the top of the key as the clock hit 0:00 to tie the score at 61-61. There would be more.

"All those threes. They shot them well and they shot them under pressure. I couldn't believe that last one went in," said Parry whose team swept the season series with Hingham.

In the second OT, Callahan, who looked great in his second game back from an ankle injury, hit a three-point drive and found a streaking Lam clear with a perfect pass for a three-point lead. After Tom Staley (18 points) cut it to one with yet another three, Evans stepped up and cleanly knocked home two free throws to finally end it.

It was a prize of a game. The largest lead in regulation was five points. There were five lead changes and 15 ties. Quincy was down, 15-14 after one, up 29-25 at the half and down, 42-37 entering the fourth period.

Along with the win, there were several encouraging signs. Quincy went away from the press early and played tough man-to-man defense all the way. The man-to-man held Hingham to 10 in the final quarter and pushed Quincy back into it.

Lam, as his flirtation with a quadruple double would suggest, was brilliant. He brought the ball up the floor, he chased down three-point shooters, hit both boards and passed the ball like it was tied to a string. Bain was relentless inside. Evans (12) delivered the two winning free throws and big-time drives to the hoop.

"James is just incredible. He has such a presence that the whole team looks to him," said Parry. "J.T. is so dependable inside and Colin has played very well over the past four or five games for us."

And there is Callahan (eight points) who could be a difference maker. He missed nearly a month with his ankle injury. He is a quick, physical player who can defend and loves the physical stuff around the basket. He has skill and toughness and is an excellent piece for the Presidents to add as they come down the stretch.

"People didn't realize how much he meant to us" said Parry. "He has a quick vertical leap. He's a good rebounder, and he has long arms which makes him tough defensively."

Quincy hosts North Quincy Friday at 7 p.m..

Expanded Youth, Family Recreational Swimming At Lincoln-Hancock Pool During Vacation Week

NQ Wrestlers Showing Improvement, Success

By JOE REARDON

North Quincy High wrestling coach Michael Notarangelo knows the key to a successful program is exposing potential grapplers to the mats well before their freshman year.

And although the Red Raiders are challenged by a small roster, Notarangelo fully believes a feeder program at the middle school level could go a long way in completely turning around the sport on the North Quincy mats.

He plans to visit the schools in the city and sell the sport to the youngsters in an attempt to get them interested to the point where wrestling becomes their number one sport.

There used to be an eight-week clinic at the middle school level that culminated with a wrestling tournamet. Notarangelo would like to do something similar with the younger kids. "Recently I've started talking to people about trying to reestablish that," he said. "It would be imperative to get the middle school kids to help refuel the program."

Notarangelo is the perfect coach for the job of selling the sport to the youngsters. A 1984 graduate of North Quincy, he wrestled during the golden years for the Red Raiders when they were among the mix for state titles. His senior year was the final year of the middle school program.

What he learned to become a successful wrestler has stuck with him and now it's time to get the youngsters excited about pushing themselves on the mats.

"We have nothing to feed the program," said Notrangelo. It's starving. Wrestling is a really tough sport and kids have to identify themselves as a wrestler. They have to learn the fundamentals when they're young. It's a common theme that if you don't have that youth program it's going to be difficult. I'm finding that the kids on the team that survived were exposed to wrestling at a young age."

Notrangelo believes that many kids don't stick with the sport because they don't always experience immediate success. But it's in the losses where the kids learn the most and that's invaluable in becoming a competitive wrestler.

"The kids that come to the high school play football," he said. "A couple of kids have tried wrestling, but it's so demanding and they lose, and I'm trying to convince them in the losing is where the winning is created because that's where you learn the most. But they only buy into that for so long. It's challenging to keep kids focused and identify themselves as a wrestler because they've never been.

"Wrestling is an important sport for kids in development beeause it teaches kids discipline and what they're capable of and it makes them reach down deep and find what they're made of. It challenges a kid and that's so valuable. I really feel they're missing out because they haven't been."

North Quincy Defeats Pembroke, 4-1

Red Raiders Closing In On Tournament Berth

By JOE REARDON

For 15 minutes, Pembroke had North Quincy reeling and was able to knot things up 1-1 Saturday at the Hobomock Arena.

Then the Red Raiders were able to do something they've had problems with all season: North Quincy closed out a 4-1 win against the Titans with a paralyzing three goals.

The victory drew Matt Gibbons' crew one step closer to the tournament moving them to 8-5-2 and an intimidating 5-1-1 in the Patriot League. The Red Raiders needed just two more points heading into this week to qualify for the postseason.

"We're right there," said Gibbons. "We didn't play well in the second period at all. Our last three third periods we have not played well. So to come out and score three goals was big. We got the the two points. We're two points closer, but we need to be better. I think we can get better."

Robert Cameron scored a pair of tallies, the first coming 4:25 in the first when he picked up a Timmy Glynn pass and went top shelf past Jason Wainwright (16 saves). Adam Trip tied it 1-1 in the second period before the Red Raiders thoroughly dominated the Titans in the third.

Cameron put North Quincy up for good 2-1 when he slid a pass between Wainwright's pads and then picked up the assist on the Red Raiders' next goal to make it 3-1.

Goaltender Nolan Greene had 13 saves extending his streak to one goal in a three-game span. "He's playing huge right now," said Gibbons. "The kids in front of him play with confidence because they know he's back there. He's back to 100 percent, too. He wasn't healthy at the beginning of the year. You're seeing it now. It trickles down to the rest of the team."

While North Quincy is playing its best hockey of the season, Gibbons believes the Red Raiders can improve on the way to the playoffs.

"That wasn't our best effort, which is a good thing because we won the game," said Gibbons. "We're seeing different things on the breakouts and guys getting stuck in our own end too long. It's little stuff where we can get better. That's a positive because we can get better. We haven't hit our ceiling yet. We're two points closer to the tournament.

"Our goal at the beginning of the season was to win a league and go to the state tournament and see what happens. We're pretty close to that."

Presidents Edge W-H

By JOE REARDON

Put the puck on net enough and good things will eventually happen most always.

Ted Walsh stressed to his Quincy High squad that he wanted them shooting early and often in Saturday night's matchup against Whitman-Hanson and to keep the Panthers back in their end.

Walsh got what he wanted from his squad and it bodes well for the final push towards the tournament.

The 2-1 win over the Panthers at Rockland Arena was not nearly as close as the one-goal difference would seemingly show. Quincy never allowed W-H to sustain any pressure in the Presidents' end.

And the Presidents did exactly what the coach ordered as they put a barrage of 37 shots on freshman goalie phenom David Perry and dominated W-H. The Panthers were only able to muster up 13 shots as Quincy played its best 45 minutes of all-around hockey to improve to 8-8-1 with five games remaining as of Monday.

Pat Donovan and Brandon Nunnink provided all the offense the Presidents would need with first-period tallies, while W-H also found the back of the net against Ryan Higgins. Perry and Higgins were spectacular the rest of the way and Quincy completely shut down the W-H attack.

"That's what impressed me the most," said Walsh. "We wanted to get the puck in deep and work on their defense because we thought it was something we could exploit. We tried to put the puck on the net."

This win was hatched during what have become intense practices during the week. All winter long, Walsh has been stressing the importance of making the most of every shift, every practice, every period and every game. His players got a good look at what they can do when they go full speed for three periods and control all three zones.

"The kids realize they have to win three periods," said Walsh. "We put so many shots on him (Perry) I couldn't believe we didn't score again. They're very confident. We've had some great practices and had a team meeting and talked about what we liked and what we didn't like. I think the guys realize how much they care about each other as teammates."

The win was almost a carbon copy of the Presidents' first victory this season over W-H. Quincy was in complete control in that contest as well in the 2-2 tie. Perry made the difference by turning away 36 President shots and Higgins was his usual solid self with 13 saves.

Quincy started the week needing two wins and a tie moving forward in its final five games. Saturday's showdown against North Quincy (8:15 p.m. face-off, Quincy Youth Arena), who defeated Pembroke 4-1 last weekend, should have a tournament feel to it with both teams wanting to get the edge heading to the postseason.

Red Raider Girls Win 2, Hold 1st Place In Division

By BILL GRIFFIN

Injuries are a fact of life in sports. Few teams have dealt with them better than North Quincy's girls basketball club.

The Red Raiders have been without all-league caliber players Jane Minton, Maya Umoren and Haley McKay for stretches this season. Not only have they have survived, they have flourished, winning two games last week to maintain their hold on first place in the Fisher Division of the Patriot League.

North played both contests without Umoren who has been sidelined with a knee injury. Against Scituate, Grace Geary had 22 points, eight rebounds and six steals to lift North to a satisfying 58-55 road win.

On Senior Night against Pembroke, Geary had 27 and Haley McKay added 14 to lead North to a 76-48 decision.

"It was satisfying to play that well without Maya. We count on her for a great deal," said coach Jess Worden whose club finished the week at 12-4 overall and 9-2 in the league.

The Pembroke victory was North's third straight without Umoren which is remarkable. Umoren is a reliable double-double player in rebounds and points. It is not easy to replace both. Geary and a balanced attack have helped with the scoring. North has dealt with the rebounding by going as a team to the boards.

"It's team rebounding, no question about it," said Worden. "Everybody has to get into the mix, box out and go for the ball. That's the only way we can rebound without Maya. Tristine Thong had a great game rebounding against Scituate."

Having Minton back helps. She missed four games with a concussion. North lost two of them. That was not a coincidence. She had 11 points and eight assists against Pembroke and 13 points against Scituate. Her value extends far beyond points. She can defend a post or a perimeter player, she can pass, she boxes out and gets to the boards.

"Jane can give us so many things. Having her back was a big lift in both games," said Worden.

Sophomore Marissa McGue has also stepped up. She had 14 against Scituate and nine in the Pembroke win. More importantly, she is an athlete who runs the floor and has emerged as a good rebounder, just when North needed a rebounder the most.

"She is so quick. She gets to the offensive boards especially well and gives us second chances," said Worden.

And of course, there is Geary. She leads the league in scoring. In a six-game stretch through the Pembroke game, she scored 146 points for a 24.4 average. With Minton and Umoren out, she delivered despite seeing box-and-ones and trick defenses every night. She also got to the boards with seven rebounds against Rockland and eight against Scituate. She is a special player.

"Grace has given us the scoring when we've needed it and the opposing defenses focus on her every night," said Worden. "I think we've blended in well with her as the season has gone along and we're doing a better job getting her the ball. Jane is an excellent passer."

The Scituate win was rewarding. It is always a tough road gym. The Sailors improved greatly from the first North game as shown in their upset of Hanover last week. It was a tense, back-and-forth game against North. Geary had two steals which she turned into buckets that gave the Red Raiders a late lead which they protected with good defense.

McKay had eight in the win over Scituate while Molly Minton chipped in with 11 against Pembroke. Umoren and Toni Kelly were honored, but unable to play on Senior Night against Pembroke.

North Quincy is at Quincy Friday at 5 p.m.

North Quincy Boys Clinch Best League Record

Defeat Scituate, Duxbury, Pembroke

By BILL GRIFFIN

72-30. 68-49. 60-38.

The numbers represent the final scores of North Quincy's wins over and Scituate, Duxbury and Pembroke last week and show exactly how good this team is right now.

The victories ran North's winning blitz to 18-0, clinched the Fisher Division crown and the best overall record in the Patriot League for the second time in three years, and maintained the Red Raiders' valuable spot as the top seed in Division 1 South.

"Right now our main goal is to keep that No.1 seed. That could be a big help in tournament matchups," said coach Kevin Barrett whose team finished the week at 11-0 in the league. "Our first two goals were to make the tourney and win the division. We accomplished those. Now we want to stay sharp for the tourney."

Friday against Pembroke, Efthim Butka had 17 points and eight rebounds while Kyle Richardson (12) and Anthony Green (11) also scored in double figures for North.

In the Duxbury game, Butka had 14 points, Solomon Umoren added 10 and Green blocked eight shots despite playing just half the game in the victory.

Against Scituate, Green had 15 points, five rebounds and five blocks in limited playing time while Richardson added eight points, seven rebounds and five assists. Butka led the scoring with 13 and Matt Gerakis added 11.

Not only has North won 18 in a row, the improvement in the Red Raiders since the Brockton opener two months past has been remarkable. Consider this. North beat defending champion Scituate twice. In the first meeting, the Sailors came in unbeaten. In the second game they were, 9-3. North won the two games by a total of 68 points. Duxbury came in last week at 8-8. North led by 29 in the fourth. Whitman-Hanson, a 13-3 first-place club in the Keenan Division, visited two weeks ago and the Red Raiders were up 19 in the fourth.

Defense?

North held Scituate to seven two-point field goals. Duxbury scored ten points in the first half. W-H scored nine points in the first period. These are good, sound basketball teams. They can play and they are well-coached. North has been simply dominant. To win 18 straight is exceptional, to win games as North has against solid teams the past two weeks is walking in uncharted territory.

"I think a big part of it is unselfishness," said Barrett. "It's a tribute to the kids. I think every kid realizes he doesn't have to score a point for us to win. They stick to their defensive assignments and pick their spots on the offensive end. They know they'll get their shots."

It begins with the defense and evolves into a complete mix of rebounding, passing, shooting and depth which were all on display against Duxbury.

Defense: Green plays like he is trying to abolish the layup from Patriot League play. He had 13 blocks combined against Scituate and Duxbury and didn't play more than half of each game. More importantly, he has refined his shot-blocking. There are fewer and fewer thunderous dunks which send the ball skitttering into the hallway and brings the fans roaring out of their seats. That is all quite nice. The problem is the other team keeps the ball.

More and more frequently, Green is controlling his blocks. Rather than slamming them through a wall, he has a softer touch. He not only blocks the shot, he taps the ball to himself or a teammate. The crowd sits, but the good part is North gets the ball and is frequently off in transition.

"Last year, I just tried to send them out," smiled Green. "Now, I'm trying to control it more, to keep possession and get us out on the break. I've worked on my timing and it's helped,"

It translated into several fast-break buckets against the Dragons, the best of was a checker-board passing play which went from a Green block, a pass to Gerakis and pinpoint feed to Richardson for a layup and 20-3 lead after one period. The ball didn't end up in the hallway. It ended up in the basket.

"We talked to Anthony about it after the first Scituate game," said Barrett. "Blocking shots is one thing, but if we can control it, it's great. Anthony listened. He's like a sponge. He wants to learn. It's shown up in his game."

All defense includes rebounding. The Dragons saw few second chances. Green is a tougher, stronger rebounder than he was last year. He had 14 rebounds against Scituate and Duxbury. Butka is a power inside and Richardson may well be the best inch-for-inch rebounder on the South shore. At 5'7" he had seven rebounds against Scituate and six against Duxbury.

Passing: Duxbury started with a zone which a good idea because it is difficult playing North man-to-man with Richardson getting into the lane from the point. Umoren and Gerakis hit early threes against the zone. However, North used passing rather than shooting to slice it open. They zipped ball around the perimeter until a slasher or shooter opened up in a crease for a great look, and the entry passes were sharp and true.

"You don't want to just shoot over a zone," said Barrett. "We fine-tuned our zone offense for Duxbury. We were able to move the ball inside and out and find high-percentage shots."

Richardson also had eight assists, five in the third period which got Umoren and Gerakis layups. One was a fast-break, bounce-pass strike to Gerakis moving at full speed to the basket which was a treat to watch.

"We tell the kids in practice all the time to just run their lanes and be ready. Kyle will get them the ball," said Barrett.

Good passing leads to good shooting. North was 21-for-42 against Scituate from the field and 20-for-44 against Duxbury. That is team shooting approaching 50 per cent against two good defensive teams.

Depth: Barrett has had the chance to use his bench in the convincing wins. The first wave of Jackie Chen, Greg Clarke, Vinny Tran and Tyshawn Moore have developed well with the extended playing time and could play a role in the tourney.

Chen (8), Dhaaky Drake (5), Clarke (4), Tran (4) and Green (4) all made the scoring column in the Duxbury win.

North Quincy is at Quincy Friday at 7p.m.

School Vacation Gym Schedule

The Quincy Recreation Department will conduct an expanded schedule of free, supervised gym programs during the upcoming school vacation period, announces Director Barry Welch.

Gyms will be supervised from 9 a.m. to noon for free activities for boys and girls from age 8 through high school. Eight school gyms will be open in various neighborhoods throughout city and will feature activities such as basketball, floor hockey, gym games and dodgeball.

Registration is done at each location and those ages 8 through grade 5 will attend from 9 to 11 a.m. Those in grade 6 through 12 will attend from 11 a.m. to noon. Participants may attend the program of their choice.

Some minor changes in times may occur in some locations to accommodate differences in enrollment. In addition to the weekday schedule, the ongoing regularly scheduled Saturday morning programs will be conducted on Saturdays, Feb. 15th and Feb. 22nd. Also, the regularly scheduled night gym program will be conducted on Tuesday, Feb. 18th from 5 to 8 p.m. at Atlantic Middle School and 4:30 to 8:30 p.m. at Point Webster Middle School. Participants are requested to wear sneakers at all locations.

Including the Saturday locations, the department will supervise over 130 hours for free programming and will promote beneficial active lifestyle among Quincy youth.

There will be no programs on Monday, Presidents Day, Feb. 17th. The expanded schedule for the rest of the week is as follows:

The schedule of gyms for Tuesday, Feb. 18th from 9 a.m. to noon is:

Atherton Hough School, Beechwood Knoll School, Merrymount School, Squantum School, Atlantic Middle School, and Point Webster Middle School.

The schedule of gyms for Wednesday, Feb.19th from 9 a.m. to noon is:

Preview Of Girls, Boys Matchups

Quincy, North Quincy Hoop Doubleheader Friday

By BILL GRIFFIN

Be there.

When Quincy and North Quincy last met in a doubleheader of basketball, it was a memorable night of hoops. North won the girls game by a point, a game that wasn't decided until there was no time left on the clock. In the boys game, Quincy rallied from a 19-point hole, but North and Efthim Butka (27 points, six three-pointers) stood up to the charge and took home an eight-point victory.

It was not only excellent basketball. It was great theater. It was two grand rivals playing with a full measure of effort before a roaring, overflow crowd. It was something out of Hoosiers.

They will meet again at the Quincy High gym Friday night. The girls game starts at 5 p.m. The boys game starts at 7 p.m. There will be three tournament teams in action. There may well be a team shooting for an undefeated season. There will be at least one divisional champion and two more who have been in first place for most of the season. The quality will be high, the emotions will be higher.

Think of seniors like Kayla McArdle, Jane Minton, Kyle Richardson and Brendan Cunningham who have grown up with this rivalry. This will be their last shot, a game they will remember as long there is a rim and a basketball.

Let's have a look:

THE TEAMS

North Quincy's girls team has played small ball all year. Maya Umoren was cranking out double-doubles despite playing at 5'9" and giving away inches in every game. After she hurt her knee, the focus became sharper on the speed and skills of Minton, Grace Geary, Haley McKay and Marissa McGue. There is little size here, but they hound you on defense and pass like wizards. They rebound as a team with help from Tristine Thong, Camille Mullaney, and Hannah Donovan. It all works because Geary is a special player, that rare 1,000-point scorer, who influences a game with her passing, rebounding and defense.

Quincy is a dangerous team as the Presidents proved again with recent wins over Whitman-Hanson and Silver Lake. Sophomore center Nicole Jorgensen was dominant in the first North game with 15 points and 22 rebounds and she will be the main focus for the undersized Red Raiders. McArdle is a superb defender who can beat you with her offense as she proved with a 15-point fourth quarter against W-H. The Presidents can run, their press is relentless and they can wear down a team.

Key players:

Geary: She is a different player from the first Quincy game, a player who has had the time to know and function better with her teammates. She leads the league in scoring, but that is only a small part of her influence on a game. She leads her team in steals. In the first Scituate game, she scored seven points and was the best player on the floor because of her passing. Against Rockland with North playing without Umoren, she went to the boards. The key for her is to stay out of foul trouble.

Gabby Jerahian: North will almost certainly have to help on Jorgensen. This should leave Jerahian with opportunities to shoot the three. She had a two-game stretch late in the season in which she hit nine threes and scored 36 points. She is also a skilled player in transition. Courtney Ryan and McAdle are other three-point threats. If Quincy hits from the outside, it will give Jorgensen more room to work close to the basket.

THE TEAMS

North Quincy has been a model of excellence from the opening game when the Red Raiders dominated Brockton. They won at home, on the road, in the city, in close games and and in romps. They rallied on the road to beat Braintree, Hingham and Silver Lake. Their combined margin of victory in two games against a quality Scituate team of 68 points is striking. The heart of the team is their defense which has held opponents under 60 points in 16 of 18 games. Kyle Richardson is the best point guard in the league, Anthony Green protects the rim, and Butka is a senior who scores and leads, an invaluable experienced player in games like this. The development of Matt Gerakis as a complete player who can shoot the three (32 against Scituate) and Solomon Umoren as a shutdown defender makes this North team a better one than the one Quincy saw earlier in the year.

Quincy also brings a different look, a much improved team from the first meeting, and the Presidents have a legitimate chance at an upset. Quincy could always score. The Presidents have scored 60 or more points in 13 of 17 games. What has improved greatly is their defense. The Presidents played excellent defense in the Scituate and Hingham wins. They are especially good in the halfcourt man-to-man, and do not have to take unnecessary chances with their fullcourt trap. The halfcourt defense is just fine James Lam will be the best athlete on the floor, a complete basketball who can influence a game in countless ways. J.T. Bain is a master post player. Drew Myers, Colin Evans and Cunningham can shoot the three, and Chris Callahan brings toughness and defense. It is no coincidence that Quincy started playing better defense when Callahan returned from an ankle injury.

Richardson: Quincy still likes to press, but Richardson is so strong on the ball that he makes playing a fullcourt trap a challenge. His defense makes it difficult for any point guard on any team to get into his offense. He gets the ball where it belongs, rebounds well at 5'7", and is a big-game player. Keep an eye on Umoren as well, especially if he is matched against Lam.

Bain: North, for good reason, likes to keep Green close to the basket and out of foul trouble. Bain proved in the first game that not only is he a challenge in the post, he can take the ball out to 18 feet, hit a jump shot, and find the open cutters along the baseline. If Green has to come out and play Bain, it opens up the middle for drives and dishes to open three-point shooters.

Alyssa Lydon, Gabriela Jerahian Teaming Up To Fight Cancer

Silent Auction, 50-50 Raffle At Q-NQ Game Friday

By JOE REARDON

Alyssa Lydon is taking her passion for helping raise money for the American Cancer Society to the basketball court.

The Quincy High senior co-captain is organizing a fundraiser to take place during the Presidents' final home game on Friday, Feb. 14 against rival North Quincy. The fundraiser will be held in memory of her mother, Tricia, who passed away in September 2012 and teammate sophomore Gabriela Jerahian's father, Jay, who passed last August.

The Quincy team has rallied around Lydon and Jerahian in the effort to raise money and awareness about the deadly disease.

"My team and I talked about it and decided it would be a positive way to incorporate what happened into our season," said Lydon, who will attend Roger Williams University in the fall. "I definitely hope the team continues doing it."

A silent auction will be held at the game with prizes that include a gift pack from F1 Boston, a pair of tickets to the Boston Ballet's Cinderella at the Opera House and a Sea Glass picture donated by a local artist.

There will also be a 50/50 raffle Friday evening. Players on the JV basketball team will also go around the gym collecting donations for the American Cancer Society.

Lydon, along with Jerahian and fellow co-captain Kayla McArdle also designed a T-shirt that will be worn by the team during pre-game warm ups. Lydon came up with the quote on the shirt: "Together we fight. Together we win."

Lydon also raised more than $8,500 for the Jimmy Fund by participating in the Boston Marathon walk the past two years.

Sports & More Program During School Vacation

The Quincy Recreation Department will offer a Sports & More Program during February School Vacation, announces Recreation Director Barry Welch.

The program will be held on Thursday, Feb. 20th from 5:30 to 8 p.m. in the Merrymount Elementary School Gym for boys and girls in Grade Three through Grade Six. The cost of the program is $5.

The Sports & More Program provides traditional activities under supervision that will include group games and organized play like dodge ball, "Minute to Win It" contest, arts & crafts, sports and more. This recreational experience will be planned and informal; spontaneous, and organized with plenty of fun. Supervision will be provided by members of the Quincy Recreation Department Staff.

This Sports & More Program is scheduled at a point in the vacation week that parents are ready for a special event for their kids and some time for themselves.

Enrollment will be limited, and a minimum number will be needed for proper group activities.

Registration is ongoing and can be done online at www.QuincyRec.com or in person at One Merrymount Parkway from 9 a.m to 4 p.m.

For more information, call 617-376-1394 or visit www.QuincyRec.com.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Try to say as little as possible about the work you're doing through the end of the month. Then you can make your announcement and accept your well-deserved plaudits.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You face a more difficult challenge than you expected. But with that strong Taurean determination, you should be able to deal with it successfully by week's end.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Before you act on your "feelings" about that upcoming decision, it might be wise to do a little fact-checking first. You could be very much surprised by what you don't find.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A recent workplace success can open some doors that were previously closed to you. On a personal level, expect to receive some important news from a longtime friend and colleague.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Put your wounded pride aside and do what you must to heal that misunderstanding before it takes a potentially irreversible turn and leaves you regretting the loss of a good friend.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) One way to kick a less-than-active social life into high gear or rebuild an outdated Rolodex file is to throw one of your well-organized get-togethers for friends and associates.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Getting out of an obligation you didn't really want to take on can be tricky. An honest explanation of the circumstances can help. Next time, pay more attention to your usually keen instincts.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Use your Scorpion logic to push for a no-nonsense approach to a perplexing situation. This could help keep present and potential problems from creating more confusion.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A friend's problem might take more time than you want to give. But staying with it once again proves the depth of your Sagittarian friendship and loyalty.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The Sea Goat can benefit from an extra dose of self-confidence to unsettle your detractors, giving you the advantage of putting on a strong presentation of your position.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You might want to ask a friend or relative for advice on an ongoing personal matter. But be careful not to give away information you might later wish you had kept secret.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Use the weekend for a creativity break to help restore your spiritual energy. Once that's done, you'll be back and more than ready to tackle whatever challenge you need to face.
BORN THIS WEEK: You get great joy out of creating beautiful things and sharing them with others who appreciate them.

OBITUARIES

Harriet L. Baker, 87

A memorial service for Harriet Lillian (Moynahan) Baker, 87, of Hingham and formerly Quincy will be privately held.

Mrs. Baker died peacefully Jan. 30 surrounded by her loving family.

She was born in Boston on Sept. 4, 1926, to Frederick Granville Moynahan and Lillian Teresa Piotti and graduated from North Quincy High School and attended Boston University. Mrs. Baker had a successful career as an interior designer, owning and operating a design firm and fine furniture store. As a 60-year resident of Hingham, she was an active member of the community; involved with the Hingham Historical Society, the South Shore Conservatory of Music, South Shore Hospital and Hingham Mothers Club.

Mrs. Baker enjoyed skiing, tennis and sailing. She was a former member of the Hingham Yacht Club and the Neighborhood Club of Quincy. She and her husband traveled frequently to Great Britain to pursue their interest in architecture and antiques. They wintered in St. Croix in the U.S. Virgin Islands for the past 30 years where they were members of the St. Croix Yacht Club, Ha'Penny Beach Club and St. Croix Landmark Society.

Devoted wife of 63 years of the late Stephen Baker, Jr. Loving mother of Stephanie Baker Andersen of Hingham and her husband Neil, Susan Hayward of Plymouth and her husband Gregory, Stacey Baker Marcellino of Milton and her husband James, and Stephen Baker of CA and his wife Claudette. Grandmother of Sean Hayward, Clifton Hayward, James Marcellino, Marianna Marcellino, Stephen Baker, Jr., and Abigail Baker. Great-grandmother of Emily and James Hayward. Dear sister of the late Frederick Moynahan, Jr. and Marion Donnell.

Funeral arrangements were made by Downing Cottage Funeral Chapel, Hingham.

Memorial donations may be made to the Episcopal Parish of St. John the Evangelist, 172 Main St. Hingham, MA or the Hingham Historical Society, P.O. Box 434, Hingham, MA.

Marilyn F. Johnson, 81

A funeral service for Marilyn F. (Kealiher) Johnson, 81, of Quincy was held Monday at Central Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Johnson died peacefully Feb. 4 at the home of her daughter, Rosanne, surrounded by her loving family.

She was born in Bangor, Maine, raised and educated in Bangor schools and was a graduate of Bangor High School. She was also a graduate of Gordon College, formerly of Boston. She lived in Quincy for most of her life and had enjoyed summers in the campgrounds of Carmel, Maine, for many years.

Mrs. Johnson was employed as a teacher at the Center Elementary School in Hanover for many years and later worked as a substitute teacher for the Quincy Public School Department. She was a longtime active member of the Central Baptist Church in Quincy and also a member of the Weymouth Baptist Church where she directed the children's choir. She was one of the founders of the "Sunshine Club," a bible study group that visited Weymouth nursing homes.

Mrs. Johnson was devoted to her family and especially to her eight cherished grandchildren.

MARILYN F. JOHNSON

Beloved wife of the late William A. Johnson. Devoted mother of Rosanne McCarthy and her husband David of Quincy. Loving grandmother of Collin, Gerald, Rosella, Diana, Lisa, Francis, Chloe, and Harrison. Dear daughter of the late Grace (Hillman) and Clyde Bates Kealiher. She was pre-deceased by her twin sister, Carolyn Pinkham and her brother Clyde Bates Kealiher, Jr. and is survived by many nieces and nephews.

The Rev. David Martinez, the church's pastor, officiated the service.

Funeral arrangements were made by Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Interment was at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Reece's Rainbow, P.O. Box 4024, Gaithersburg, MD 20885.

Joan L. Hatfield, 83

A funeral Mass for Joan L. (Kerrigan) Hatfield, 83, of Quincy was celebrated Feb. 8 at St. Agatha Church, Milton.

Mrs. Hatfield died Feb. 3.

She loved being the official cheerleader for her family's participation in activities ranging from the rigors of football to the graceful artistry of dance. Mrs. Hatfield enjoyed many family gatherings and frequent trips to the beach. She also enjoyed bowling, bingo, following New England sports teams and playing cards and board games with her family.

She will be remembered as a loving and supportive mother, grandmother and sister who was always there for her family – she was devoted to them all. They have wonderful memories of a devoted woman who lead by example. Mrs. Hatfield's support and loyalty to her family and the boundless love she shared will be deeply missed by everyone. She will never be forgotten for she will live in her family's hearts forever.

Beloved wife of John R. Hatfield, Sr., they celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary on Jan. 23, 2014, attended by the entire clan and many close friends. Devoted mother of Carol Hatfield of Quincy, John R. Hatfield, Jr. and his wife Tracy of Whitman, Maureen Aronson and her husband

William A. Bernardi, 79

A funeral Mass for William A. Bernardi, 79, of Norwell and formerly Quincy was celebrated Feb. 7 at St. Helen's Church, Norwell.

Mr. Bernardi died peacefully Feb. 2 at home, surrounded by his loving wife and children after fighting a long battle with cancer.

He was born in Quincy in his family home, the youngest of three children and grew up on Wollaston Beach. He entered the U.S. Marine Corps, stationed at Camp Lejeune at the age of 18 and served eight years prior to being honorably discharged at the rank of sergeant.

In addition to his family, friends, and growing the best tomatoes in town, music was his career and passion. Mr. Bernardi was the inventor of the Lyricon, an electronic wind instrument and the first wind controller to be constructed. The Lyricon was featured by notable artists including the late Chuck Greenberg of Shadowfax, Tom Scott on Grateful Dead's "Estimated Prophet," and Steely Dan's "Peg." Mr. Bernardi was very much a musical prodigy, teaching himself to play any instrument he put his mind to, including, the guitar, piano, bongos, flute as well as composing his own music.

Mr. Bernardi's connection to the Norwell community ran deep for over 50 years. In addition to being on many town boards, he was a devoted member of St. Helen's Church as well as the church's choir director. He took great pride in bringing music into other people's lives.

Beloved husband of Judy (Desmond) Bernardi. Loving father of Peter Bernardi of Norwell, Paul Bernardi of Boston, and Claudia Bernardi of Norwell. Loving grandfather of Liza, Ginger, and William. Beloved son of the late William and Mary Bernardi, formerly of Quincy, and brother of Raymond and Gilda.

Anne F. Muir, 98

A Mass of Christian burial for Anne F. Muir, 98, of Quincy was celebrated Monday at Our Lady of Good Counsel Church of Holy Trinity Parish, Quincy.

Mrs. Muir died peacefully Feb. 6 following a brief illness.

ANN F. MUIR

A daughter of the late Joseph and Filimena Budrick, she was born July 14, 1915, in Quincy and remained in Quincy her entire life. She was the wife of the late William W. Muir who was a retired Quincy Police officer. They were married Jan. 2, 1933, in Quincy.

Mrs. Muir worked as a credit investigator and interviewer with the Quincy Sears & Roebuck credit department for more than 20 years. She was a member of the Our Lady of Good Counsel Church in Merrymount for over 50 years and attended services regularly until recent health issues prevented her from attending.

Mrs. Muir was a 20-year member of the Quincy Art Association holding a number of different offices. She was an avid painter and exhibited many of her works. Her paintings are currently on display in Egypt and several states across the U.S.

Her other interests included braiding rugs, working with copper, knitting and get-togethers for tea with her many friends. Mrs. Muir was the founder of the "Nine Belles Bridge Club" 70 years ago and continued to be an active member until 2009. This was perhaps the oldest running bridge club in Massachusetts.

As a mother, grandmother and friend, her warmth and happiness was a comfort to everyone who knew and loved her. She will be greatly missed by her family and friends.

Loving mother of the late Margaret Caldwell of Quincy, the late Richard Muir of NH and her surviving son James Muir and his wife Carol of Kingston. Mother-in-law of Virginia Muir of NH. Cherished grandmother Scott Muir and his wife Terry, Gary Muir and his wife Laurie, Derek Muir and his wife Nikki, all of NH, Gregory Muir and his wife Michaela of CA, Marcia King of ME, Lisa Brodrick and her husband William of Bradford, Karen Nabhan and her husband Tarek of VA, and Laurie Finn and her husband William of TX. She is also survived by 23 great-grandchildren and one great-great-granddaughter. Dear sister of the late Casper Budrick and the late Stanly Budrick, she is survived by her only sister Phyllis and her husband Robert of Braintree.

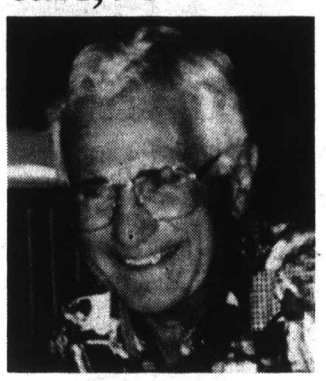

Funeral arrangements were made by Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St., Quincy.

Interment was at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Harold Pearl, 98

Harold Pearl, 98, of Quincy died Feb. 4.

Mr. Pearl proudly served his country as a U.S. Merchant Marine as an Army transport aboard the Thomas H. Barry. He attended Hebron Academy, Ohio State University, University of Pennsylvania, and Boston University Law School with an LLB Degree.

HAROLD PEARL

He was the owner of the Clam and Chicken House in Norwood and retired as the sales manager of Grossman's in Braintree. He and his wife traveled extensively and enjoyed wintering in Naples, Fla. He enjoyed playing golf at the President's Golf Course in Quincy, where he had the great experience of a hole-in-one. Mr. Pearl will be sadly missed by all those who had the pleasure of knowing him.

Adoring husband of 71 years of the late Dorothy Pearl. Beloved father of Jeffrey Pearl of FL, Dennis Pearl of Orleans, Heidi Pearl of Quincy, and the late Hayden Pearl. Papa of Eden Pearl, Heidi Becker, Adam Pearl, Haley Pearl, Lauren Anastasia, Elise Pearl, and Devin Anastasia. Great-grandfather of four. Loving son of the late Etta (Mover) Pearl and Morey Pearl.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Donations in memory of Harold may be made to Interfaith Social Services, 105 Adams St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Robert D. Hester, 86

A funeral Mass for Robert D. Hester, 86, of East Falmouth and formerly Quincy was celebrated Monday at Christ the King Church, Mashpee.

Mr. Hester died Feb. 4 at home after a brief illness.

ROBERT D. HESTER

He was born in Roslindale and lived in Quincy for 30 years until he retired in 1989 and later moved to Falmouth in 1994. After high school Mr. Hester entered and served in the U.S. Navy and was honorably discharged in 1954. He worked for the New England Telephone Company.

He was a communicant of Christ the King Church and volunteered for St. Vincent DePaul Society. Mr. Hester was an avid golfer and enjoyed sports.

Beloved husband of 54 years of Kathleen (Flaherty) Hester. Loving father of Robert Hester and his wife Mimi of Quincy, Eileen Johnston and her husband Douglas of Weymouth, Tricia Donovan and her husband Jack, Timothy Hester and his wife Kate, and Liz Haugh and her husband John, all of Braintree. He is also survived by 12 grandchildren, one great-grandson and a sister, Gail Linehan of Canton. He was predeceased by his brother Edmund Hester.

Funeral arrangements were made by Chapman, Cole & Gleason Funeral Home, Mashpee.

Interment was at Mass. National Cemetery, Bourne.

Memorial donations may be made to St. Vincent DePaul Society c/o Christ the King Church, P.O. Box 1800, Mashpee, MA 02649 or Hope Hospice 765 Attucks Lane, Hyannis, MA 02601.

Concordia E. M. Smith

A memorial service for Concordia Emma Martha "Connie" (Just) Smith of Quincy will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday at the Wollaston Lutheran Church.

Mrs. Smith died Feb. 7 at the John Adams Healthcare Center, Quincy.

She was born in Providence in 1918 to Arthur G. A. Just and Concordia (Nee) Schaefer. Her younger siblings, Norma J. Wismar and Arthur A. Just, predeceased her. She attended public schools in Providence, graduating from Central High School in 1936.

In 1940, she married George Judson Smith III of Providence. The marriage ended in divorce in 1960; there were no children. For most of her career Mrs. Smith assisted in preparing caseloads for the appellate division of the Internal Revenue Service. She worked in federal offices in Albany, New York City, Hartford, and Miami. She had a lovely soprano voice, and she sang in several church choirs and in the early 1950s she sang in the Tanglewood Festival Choir.

She was blessed with a perennially sunny disposition. Upon retirement in 1986, she moved to Fort Pierce, Fla., where she resided with her late mother and late sister, spending summers on Music Mountain in Falls Village, Conn. In 2004 she moved to Quincy.

Jean B. Crowley, 86

Funeral services for Jean B. Crowley, 86, of East Bridgewater and formerly Randolph and West Quincy were held Tuesday at McDonald Keohane Funeral Home, South Weymouth.

Mrs. Crowley died Feb. 7.

She was born in Weymouth, and attended Weymouth Public Schools. From the age of 14, she was an active member of the Weymouth #18 Order of Rainbow Girls. After graduating from Weymouth High School in 1945 she enrolled in the U.S. Cadet Nurse program at Quincy City Hospital. This program was initiated to provide nurses for the military during World War II. In 1945 the program provided 80 percent of the nursing staff in civilian hospitals.

After graduation on Aug.14, 1948, as a registered nurse, Mrs. Crowley worked at Quincy City Hospital for four years. She then worked at Milton Hospital for 25 years in various specialties. She retired from Milton Hospital in 1984. Mrs. Crowley loved nursing and loved going to work as a nurse every day.

She loved people and doing things to help others. She especially loved spending time with her family and friends. Mrs. Crowley had many friends and maintained many close friendships with her nursing classmates and friends especially Doris, Esther, Louise Jean Mac, and Betty. They were a great support system to Mrs. Crowley, especially during her failing health.

Mrs. Crowley loved to travel, and went on many trips and cruises. She especially enjoyed her yearly trips to Aruba. She enjoyed playing cards and going on the casino trips by bus with her friend Jean MacDonald.

Loving mother of Richard Schatzl and his wife Lori of NH, Dana Schatzl of Avon, and Kimberlee (Schatzl) Sheehan and her husband Robert of East Bridgewater. She was also the mother of the late Alan Schatzl. Cherished grandmother of Adam Sheehan of East Bridgewater, Stephen Schatzl of NH, and Kathryn DiTullio and her husband Robert, of NH. She was the wife of the late William Crowley and Francis Schatzl. She was the daughter of the late Alice Hartford and sister of the late Marjorie Bailey and Dorothy Draper. She is also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Council To Review $1M In Appropriations

Elgin Pelican NP dual street sweeper and a five-year warranty for parts and labor.

Raymondi also sought an appropriation of $130,000 to pay for street lighting. The FY14 budget included $1.005 million for street lighting, $300,000 less than in previous years because it was anticipated that the city would purchase streetlights.

All of the appropriations would be taken from the city's free cash account. The finance committee is scheduled to meet Tuesday, Feb. 18, at 6:30 p.m., immediately prior to a regular council meeting.

Also pending in the finance committee is an order that would make the former Central Middle School at 1012 Hancock St. available for disposition and a request for $5.3 million to pay for new windows and doors at North Quincy High and the Merrymount and Wollaston Elementary Schools. The city would likely be reimbursed by the state's School Building Authority (the MSBA) for up to 70 percent of the costs associated with the latter.

Councillors Doug Gutro, Kevin Coughlin, Margaret Laforest, and Brian Palmucci introduced a resolution seeking an update on the city's obligations as a participant in the Green Communities Program.

The state declared Quincy a Green Community in December 2011, making the city eligible for certain grants. As a condition of being named a Green Community, the city must reduce its energy use by 20 percent over five years.

"This is an opportunity to get our new energy manager up to speed pretty quickly because I would imagine this would be part of her portfolio," Gutro said, "and to update the City Council on the City of Quincy's efforts to meet the obligations in the Green Communities Act."

The resolution was referred to the council's ordinance and environmental committees.

A separate resolution from Palmucci, seeking information on the potential installation of LED streetlights and solar panels on city buildings, was referred to the ordinance and oversight committees.

The oversight committee is scheduled to meet Feb. 24 at 6:30 p.m.

Councillor Michael McFarland, chairman of the finance committee, scheduled dates for the committee to review the FY15 municipal budget.

The budget hearings will be held May 12, May 27, and June 9. The council can make cuts to the budget, but not increases.

In recent years the mayor has unveiled his budget proposal for the next fiscal year during the council's first May meeting, which is scheduled for May 5 this year. The council has also received an update from Quincy's Beacon Hill delegation the same night the budget is presented.

The council accepted a donation of $250 from Russell Affsa, Inc. d/b/a Hairplace One for the Quincy Police Department's Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) program.

A donation of $50 from Ann and Danielle Demoney of Ricciuti Drive to the Police Department for crime prevention was also accepted.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall and Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes were reappointed to new terms on the Quincy Medical Trust.

Before Quincy Medical Center became a for-profit hospital, money from the trust was used to finance projects at the hospital. Because the hospital is now a for-profit entity, the trust is used to help non-profit health organizations in the city.

Quincy, North Quincy Teams Swim At South Sectionals

The Quincy and North Quincy girls swimming and diving teams swam at the South Sectionals Championships Feb. 8 at Wellesley College.

North Quincy (4-6, 3-5 Patriot League) placed 30th out of the 45 teams competing.

Patriot League All-Star Rachel O'Driscoll, in back-to-back races, placed sixth in the 100-yard butterfly (1:02.50) and 14th in the 100 freestyle (57.42) with personal best times. The North Quincy junior also swam a speedy 56.01 in the anchor leg of the 400-yard freestyle relay with seniors Sarah Tran and captain Lauren Thorne, and classmate Evlyn Scuzzarella. The same four swimmers earned 31st in the 200 freestyle relay.

For the Quincy girls, freshman diver Bailee Carey finished 17th out of 27 divers, and the 200 medley relay contingent of freshman Grace Scuzzarella, senior captain Marlena Forrester, junior Sabrina Rauch and junior Marina Chafa were 31st swimming 2:09.06.

Q/NQ Teams Compete At League Championships

Junior Randall Kwong (North Quincy) represented the Quincy/North Quincy boys swimming and diving team (6-2-1, 4-2-1 Patriot League) at South Sectionals Feb. 9 at WPI in Worcester.

The Patriot League All-Star Kwong swam 24.26 for 33rd in the 50-yard freestyle and 54.42 for 28th in the 100 freestyle.

Quincy/North Quincy was recognized at the meet as Head Coach Bob McGillicuddy was selected to distribute ribbons and medals to the top-16 finishers of the 100-yard freestyle.

"I am honored and humbled for the acknowledgement of Quincy's swimming and diving teams," said coach McGillicuddy.

After not finishing higher than sixth in the previous four seasons under Coach Bob McGillicuddy's tutelage, the QNQ boys squad placed third with 170 points behind Duxbury and Hingham at the Patriot League Championships February 1st and 2nd. Their 4-1-1 dual meet record in the league this season was the most wins during McGillicuddy's tenure. Overall, Quincy/North Quincy amassed six victories in each of the last two seasons after totaling only five wins through the first three seasons.

Randall Kwong will compete in the State Swimming Championships, Sunday, Feb. 16 at MIT in Cambridge.

Support For Animal Cruelty Legislation

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Quincy City Council added their support last Monday night to pending legislation presented by State Rep. Bruce Ayers that would double penalties associated with committing acts of animal cruelty.

House Bill 1182, which is described as "An Act relative to the penalty for killing, maiming, or poisoning of animals," extends penalties for the maiming or killing of animals to individuals other than the owner of said animal.

The legislation came about as a result of the high profile Puppy Doe case, in which a malnourished female pit bull, later found to be named Kiya, was found abandoned on a Quincy Street on Aug. 31, 2013, suffering from severe wounds resulting from systematic torture and abuse. Puppy Doe was eventually euthanized due to the extent of her injuries which included dislocated limbs, a split tongue, burns, and face, skull, and vertebrae fractures.

Suspect Radoslaw Czerkawski, a native of Poland in the country illegally, was indicted by a grand jury on 12 counts of animal cruelty and one count of misleading police.

He has also been indicted on four counts of larceny. He is alleged to have stolen from a 95-year-old woman who he was hired to take care of. He was found in possession of the elderly woman's passport, jewelry, and banking documents and was found to have stolen over $100,000 in saving bonds.

He has also been accused of stealing $6,000 from a New Bedford church.

"Unfortunately, this past year, Quincy had a very high profile animal cruelty case with Puppy Doe," said City Councilor Margaret Laforest. "It was very difficult for the community. There was a lot of outpouring of support."

More than 250 Quincy residents and their dogs attended a candlelight vigil held in Puppy Doe's memory last September at Pageant Field. Vigils were also held across the country, drawing attention to outdated and inadequate laws currently in place regarding penalties associated with animal abuse.

According to Laforest, the current legislation is worded too loosely, allowing for milder penalties for those charged with harming animals under their control.

"The language is pretty loose. They're adding additional language to say that if it's your own animal or if it's an animal you're in control of," she said.

Current language would be replaced and would define punishment as imprisonment in state prison for not more than five years or a fine totaling no more than $5,000, or imprisonment for not more than two and a half years and a fine of not more than $2,500.

The word "tortures" is also to be replaced by "mutilates or kills."

Laforest praised the Quincy Police Department and said an amendment to the current legislation would allow for officers to better do their jobs.

'The Quincy Police Department has done a tremendous job with the Puppy Doe case," she said. "We need to be making sure that the legislature has the tools to support the work of our police department and that the penalties are there."

In addition to harsher penalties, she hopes expanding what constitutes as animal abuse will catch violent individuals before they have the chance to harm not only animals, but people.

"This was a very violent individual that committed the crime," she said. "What this individual did in the Puppy Doe situation, we need to make sure that the penalties are in place to further deter any animal cruelty cases."

'Mamadrama' Film Saturday

"Mamadrama: The Jewish Mother in Cinema" will be the concluding film in this season's Winter Movie Series of Cong. Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills (formerly Temple Shalom of Milton and Temple Beth El of Quincy), co-sponsored by Milton's First Congregational Church.

The film, part of the series theme: "Strong and Funny Women," will be screened on Saturday, Feb. 15th, at 7 p.m. (doors open at 6:45) in Huntington Hall of the First Congregational Church, 495 Canton Ave., Milton, with entry at the rear door. The film series is open to the public.

In "Mamadrama," Australian director Monique Schwarz takes a funny, penetrating look at how the loving and affectionate portrayals in early films developed into the stereotyped Jewish Mother of modern Hollywood and, conversely, the more flesh and blood characterizations in contemporary Israeli cinema. The film features a number of hilarious clips from Hollywood movies, as well as rare Yiddish films and Israeli features.

The donation for admission is $3 per person, or two for $5. Advance reservations get a free popcorn or bottle of water.

To order tickets in advance or for more information, call Cong. Beth Shalom at 617-698-3394.

Her appearance is sponsored by the St. Agatha Cancer Support Group.

All are welcome.

The evening will be held in the lower level of the church from 6 to 8 p.m. Feb. 27.

Kulhawik will discuss her experience living with and through melanoma and ovarian cancer.

Are Social Security Benefits Taxable?

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

If you've recently begun receiving Social Security benefits or plan to apply in the near future, you may be wondering this tax season: are Social Security benefits taxable?

The short answer is: sometimes.

Some people have to pay federal income taxes on their Social Security benefits. This usually happens only if you have other substantial income (such as wages, self-employment, interest, dividends and other taxable income that must be reported on your tax return) in addition to your Social Security benefits.

There is never a case when a person pays tax on more than 85 percent of his or her Social Security benefits, based on Internal Revenue Service (IRS) rules. Now, let's get down to the numbers.

If you file a federal tax return as an individual and your income is between $25,000 and $34,000, you may have to pay income tax on up to 50 percent of your benefits. If your income is more than $34,000, then up to 85 percent of your benefits may be taxable.

If you are married and you file a joint return, and you and your spouse have a combined income that is between $32,000 and $44,000, you may have to pay income tax on up to 50 percent of your benefits. If your combined income is more than $44,000, then up to 85 percent of your benefits may be taxable.

Note that your "income" for the purpose of determining whether you must pay taxes on some of your Social Security benefits includes your adjusted gross income, your nontaxable interest, and one half of your Social Security benefits.

In January, you should have received a Social Security Benefit Statement showing the amount of benefits you received last year. You can use this statement, or SSA-1099, when completing your federal income tax return to find out whether some of your benefits are subject to federal income tax. If you didn't receive yours, you can request one at www.socialsecurity.gov/1099.

So, are your Social Security benefits taxable? Maybe. To learn more, read page 14 of our booklet, Retirement Benefits, available at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs or visit www.irs.gov/ to obtain more detailed information on the subject.

Koch: Street-Works Has Not Met Required Project Milestones

Mayor Thomas Koch told the Quincy City Council on Tuesday night that Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance will be the lead private partner for the first step of Quincy Center development and announced that he formally notified Street-Works Development today that it has not met milestones required to remain as Quincy Center's master developer

"We're moving forward," Koch said in an update on the downtown project. "Partners may change, but the plan and the potential for a new Quincy Center remain fully intact. We are thrilled that a company with the history, reputation and experience of Quincy Mutual is expanding its role, while at the same we recognize that Street-Works has not met the very strict benchmarks set forth in the master

Flood Forum, FEMA Map Update Tonight

Lynch, Koch To Speak At Community Meeting

By SCOTT JACKSON

Residents will have a chance to receive updates on congressional efforts to undo changes to the National Flood Insurance Program and the city's potential appeal of proposed FEMA flood maps at a community meeting tonight (Thursday) at Central Middle School.

The meeting, co-hosted by U.S. Rep. Stephen F. Lynch and Mayor Thomas Koch, will start at 7 p.m. inside the school's auditorium at 875 Hancock St. Tonight's meeting had been scheduled for last Thursday, Feb. 20, but was postponed one week because of a winter storm.

The National Flood Insurance Program, created by Congress in 1968, allows property owners in to purchase flood insurance directly from the federal government. Residents in high-risk areas, as determined by FEMA (the Federal Emergency Management Agency), are required to purchase the insurance if their property has a mortgage from a federally regulated or insured mortgage.

The Flood Insurance Reform Act of 2012 changed the program by requiring FEMA to charge higher premiums in effort to recoup losses incurred because of Hurricane Katrina and other severe storms over the past decade. More than 180 representatives whose districts include coastal communities and other flood zones, including Lynch, have signed on as co-sponsors of H.R. 3370, also known as the Homeowner Flood Insurance Affordability Act. The proposed bill would require FEMA to conduct an affordability study on the new premiums, delaying those premium increases by up to four years.

"We would have an idea or range to determine what increases may be coming," Lynch said of the proposed legislation's effect. "We think it's a better approach."

The FEMA flood maps include

Report On Salary Increases Before Council Postponed

By SCOTT JACKSON

A report on recommended salary increases for the mayor, City Council, and 57 other department heads and non-union appointees that had been scheduled for Tuesday's council meeting has been postponed with no makeup date announced.

The recommended salary increases were unveiled during a press conference last November. A five-member panel, known as the Quincy Salary Commission, was formed in August 2013 to review compensation of city officials. David Colton, who his peers named chair of the panel, was slated to provide a presentation on the report Tuesday night but that has been delayed for now.

"It was to give a little more background," Colton said of his planned presentation. "To talk about the process we went through, what we looked at for our evaluations, and how we came to the conclusions we reached."

The salary commission recommended a $38,000 salary increase for the mayor, which would bring that position's salary to $160,000 from the current salary of $122,474. That recommendation and others were based on pay rates for officials in cities similar to Quincy. At the November press conference, Colton cited Somerville as one of those comparable communities. Somerville's board of alderman voted in 2012 to give the city's mayor a $20,000 pay raise and an annual salary of $145,000. Somerville has about 18,000 fewer residents than Quincy.

The panel also recommended raising the salaries for members of the council. Under the commission's reccomendation, each member of the council would receive a raise of $5,000, bringing their salary to $22,500. Each councillor currently earns $17,500, plus a travel allowance of about $5,000 each. Colton said in November that the committee recommended a raise for the councillors because they haven't received a salary increase in six years.

The panel also recommended raises for 56 of the 57 other department heads and non-union appointees listed in the report.

The committee's report recommended that the police chief be paid under a contract, similar to how the fire chief is paid. The report doesn't recommend a specific salary for the position; only saying the chief should earn at least $180,000. In calendar year 2012, Police Chief Paul Keenan earned $178,792, which includes money paid for incentives such as education bonuses.

The report also recommends a pay raise for Fire Chief Joseph Barron, who is making $155,530 in FY14. The report would give the fire chief a new salary of $160,000.

The salaries for other department heads would be broken up into tiers. The

Ask the GEMOLOGIST

BY JEFFREY M. BERTMAN
GRADUATE GEMOLOGIST

SEA FOR YOURSELF

If you are fortunate enough to have aquamarine as your March birthstone, you have even more reason to be enamored of the gemstone that everyone seems to love. High-quality, clear, transparent aquamarine looks very much like its namesake in colors ranging from light blue to dark blue to blue-green and green-blue. The more saturated the color is, the higher the value of the gemstone. While nearly all aquamarine is typically a lighter blue tone, a deeply saturated blue is the most desirable color and particularly rare in larger sizes. However, unlike other colored gemstones, aquamarine's popularity is not diminished by colors of lesser intensity. In fact, many actually prefer the more crystal-clear lighter colors over the deeper shades.

During the 19th century, sea green varieties of the stone were the most popular, but today, the more blue the color, the more valuable the stone. In the early 1900s, the largest aquamarine was discovered in Brazil, weighing 243 pounds. There is a Roman legend suggesting that the stone absorbs the atmosphere of young love and "When blessed and worn, it joins in love, and does great things." Aquamarine was also considered the most appropriate morning gift for a groom to give his bride following their wedding night. # Louisa Catherine - A Nobody No More

In her later years, former First Lady Louisa Catherine Adams wrote an unpublished memoir that she called "The Adventures of a Nobody."

Well, in Quincy, the wife of Sixth U.S. President John Quincy Adams, is somebody.

And local groups hope she'll always be considered one.

Last Wednesday – on her 239th birthday anniversary – Louisa Catherine Adams was remembered with fondness and great admiration at a celebration held at United First Parish Church.

The special ceremony featured remarks from several speakers including Caroline Keinath of the National Park Service and author Louisa Thomas. Thomas has written a biography on Louisa Catherine that is scheduled to be released some time next year.

Among those responsible for the special event were United First Parish Church, Christ Church Episcopal, the National Park Service, Quincy Historical Society and the Abigail Adams Historical Society.

While she may not be as famous as her father and mother-in-law, John and Abigail Adams nor her husband, John Quincy Adams, Louisa Catherine is still a compelling and fascinating historical figure.

She should be admired and revered for overcoming many personal struggles in her life. By some accounts, she experienced the terrible misfortune of as many as a dozen miscarriages. Only one of her four children outlived her. She also moved more than 20 times during her 77 years – some relocations lasted a mere two months.

Thomas said Louisa Catherine's life story captivated her after she began reading her diaries seven or eight years ago.

"I wanted to know more and more about her and the more I learned about her and her incredible story – constantly moving all over the world and some of the troubles she went through. She occupied an unusual place in the Adams Family and I wanted to know more and more. I was fascinated by her."

For instance, her days in the White House were among the darkest and most depressing in her life.

"There were times when John Quincy and Louise Catherine were barely speaking," Thomas said. "It was probably the most difficult time in their marriage.

"In the White House, Louisa Catherine both shut herself out and was shut out. In the Presidential campaign, she played quite a significant role because he was sort of famously known as someone who was who was unapproachable or cold. She was more electrifying."

Louisa Catherine could also be a little coy.

Thomas said while she feigned interest in politics, she was a keen observer to Washington's ways.

"She actually noted in her diaries how many senators, how many congressmen came through the (White House) doors. She was always very careful to say she had nothing to do with politics and she was not interested in politics. There was a give and take and she could only admit so much but she would reveal a lot."

Louisa Catherine has the distinction of being the only U.S. First Lady born on foreign soil – in London, England, on Feb. 12, 1775. Her future father-in-law –John Adams – first objected to his son marrying a woman born in another country but he eventually welcomed her into the family.

Louisa Catherine is certainly not as well-known as some of the other Adamses but her unique position in one of America's most famous families gave her an unusual perspective, Thomas says.

"I think being a little bit of an outsider gave her an unusual perspective and an ability to step back and see things as they are. She was not shy about saying what she thought and saying what she saw.

"She had a keen perception into human nature. I'm always amazed when you read writings from the 19th century you don't get a lot of the sense of how life was – you do in her writing. She had a way of bringing that time and those people and this world to life.

"She was not a modern woman in any way but she's a very modern voice. I think it resonates now and I think it's worth listening to."

Thomas also called Louisa Catherine a very brave woman.

"She went through a lot that would crush a person. She often felt crushed but she just kept picking herself back up. There was this sense that she didn't have power in this country and didn't have power in her own family.

"John Quincy Adams made a lot of important decisions without her. She never quite had a home but she made herself so important to so many people."

And she's important in Quincy, too.

Louisa Catherine – and the city's other First Lady – Abigail Adams – are entombed with her husbands in the crypt at United First Parish Church.

Each year, on the birthday anniversaries of John and John Quincy Adams, a White House wreath commemorates their lives at a ceremony at the church.

Last year, members of the church and the Abigail Adams Society decided to organize a program celebrating the lives of Quincy's First Ladies.

An observance in honor of Abigail Adams is planned for November near her birthday.

"Last year we recognized this is something that is long overdue. It's timely and I thought today's program in particular hearing some of the real nuances about a historical figure like Louisa Catherine is just remarkable," said H. Kirtland Switzer, II, president of United First Parish Church.

There was some consideration in combining John Adams and Abigail birthday celebrations since their anniversaries are about three weeks apart.

But Switzer said each is worthy of their own special day.

"We should have individual wreath layings on their birthdays and we'll basically make sure we have the resources to do two major events so close together," he said.

Louisa Catherine died May 15, 1852 after suffering a heart attack. Out of respect for the former First Lady, both the U.S. House and Senate adjourned in mourning.

Nearly 162 years after her death, Louisa Catherine's life is being remembered in Quincy.

Clearly – in the City of Presidents and "First Ladies" – Louisa Catherine is a nobody no more.

A FLORAL WREATH is placed on the tomb of First Lady Louisa Catherine Adams last Wednesday – Feb. 12 – the 239th anniversary of her birth. The wife of Sixth U.S. President John Quincy Adams, her husband and Second U.S. President John Adams and First Lady Abigail Adams are entombed in the crypt of United First Parish Church. From left are: Rev. Clifford Brown, rector, Christ Church; Louisa Thomas, author and biographer; Caroline Keinath, National Park Service, Rev. Dave Johnson, interim minister, United First Parish Church; Dr. Christopher Hannon, Judy Alukonis and Cathy Torrey, all members of the Abigail Adams Historical Society; H. ## Moments in time

THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

• On March 6, 1475, Michelangelo Buonarroti, the greatest of the Italian Renaissance artists, is born in the village of Caprese. His most important early work was the Pieta (1498), which showed the body of Christ in the lap of the Virgin Mary. He extracted the two perfectly balanced figures of the Pieta from a single block of marble.

• On March 8, 1862, the Confederate ironclad Virginia wreaks havoc on a Yankee squadron off Hampton Roads, Va., when it attacked the U.S.S. Cumberland. Other Union ships fired back, but the shots were, in the words of one observer, "having no more effect than peas from a pop-gun."

• On March 3, 1931, President Herbert Hoover signs a congressional act making "The Star-Spangled Banner" the official national anthem of the United States. In 1814, Francis Scott Key composed the lyrics after witnessing the massive overnight British bombardment of Fort McHenry in Maryland during the War of 1812.

• On March 4, 1944, Louis "Lepke" Buchalter, the head of Murder, Inc., is executed at Sing Sing Prison in New York. Lepke was the leader of the country's largest crime syndicate throughout the 1930s. His downfall came when several members of his notorious killing squad became witnesses for the government.

• On March 9, 1959, the first Barbie doll goes on display at the American Toy Fair in New York City. Barbie was the first mass-produced toy doll in the United States with adult features. Barbie's appearance was modeled on a doll named Lilli, based on a German comic-strip character, and originally was marketed as a racy gag gift to adult men.

• On March 5, 1977, the Dial-a-President radio program, featuring President Jimmy Carter and CBS news anchorman Walter Cronkite, airs for the first time. Approximately 9 million calls flooded the radio studio during the two-hour broadcast.

• On March 7, 1987, Mike Tyson defeats James "Bonecrusher" Smith to unify the WBA and WBC heavyweight titles. At age 20, Tyson became the youngest undisputed heavyweight champion in boxing history.

Scenes From Yesterday

Energy Considerations Warrant Critical Thinking

Now that the city of Quincy has an Energy Czarina, it would behoove the citizenry to consider some facts.

Not all solar panels are alike. The maximum efficiency of a solar panel is 29 percent. There is a company in California installing panels with 25 percent efficiency. Another company in California is developing a prototype, hopefully to go into commercial production this year, with 26 percent efficiency. Their panels will operate earlier and later in the day than other panels.

As of 2012, natural gas will provide a kilowatt hour of electricity for two cents, solar panels for $27 dollars. Solar Federal tax credits expire in 2015.

There is a proposal to build a natural gas pipeline to Massachusetts utilizing natural gas derived from fracing (the proper spelling, not fracking). Given the arctic blasts we have had this winter, the question is "What global warming?"

One cold winter doesn't spell the coming of an ice age but critical thinking, not feel good solutions, should determine energy considerations.

Property Taxes And Politics

I have read, according to The Quincy Sun, a few weeks ago, the council voted to raise our property taxes again.

We just had an election, lost more revenue, in the past few months, and "our" councilors vote to raise our property taxes?

I believe it is called "taxation, without proper representation." My councillor (Palmucci) also asked for more money to buy two new patrol cars "SUV" to patrol Ward 4? Hell, we don't know what the "old cars" look like, and Palmucci voted to buy "new ones"?

What a waste of taxpayer money, to see two patrol cars sitting at a school, watching the time go by, wasting gas just sitting doing what? I have heard cops asking for former Chief Crowley to return, as Keenan is useless at the job.

I believe the last time we had patrols in Ward 4 was under former Mayor Phelan. Under Phelan, we still had businesses in downtown Quincy (revenue).

I do know one thing, Koch does not like revenue in this city. His mind set is "let's tax the home owner, there is our revenue."

Politics, go figure!

Panel To Weigh School Closings

By SCOTT JACKSON

The School Committee came one step closer to the closing of city schools by approving a motion to appoint a panel of residents to study the subject.

Each committee member was expected to name two residents to the panel at an upcoming meeting. The task force was established to study various options on school closings and give its recommendations to the School Committee, likely by the end of March. The committee would not be bound to the panel's recommendations.

"I think the question is no longer should we close any close any schools, but which ones and when," said School Committee member Patricia Toland, who made a motion to create the panel.

Quincy's six smallest schools – Great Hill, Myles Standish, Hunting, Cranch, Beechwood Knoll, and Gridley Bryant – were among those being considered for closure. Shutting down all six schools, each with a projected September 1980 enrollment of under 200 students, was expected to save the city $260,028, enough to reduce the tax rate by a total of 85 cents.

School Committeeman Frank Anselmo opposed the motion to create the special panel, saying the committee already had enough information.

"This can only serve to delay the decision, which only the School Committee can make. We have all the facts, we have all the figures," he said. "I say full speed ahead, damn the torpedoes, and let's do what we have to do."

School Committeeman John Sullivan, who voted in favor of the new panel, already announced his appointments. He selected Jason Stone, the commander of the Quincy Jewish War Veterans, and William Hurley, a Boston teacher.

NEW HOSPITAL MANAGERS, COMMISSION

Mayor Arthur Tobin filled two of three vacancies on the City Hospital Board of Managers, naming attorney Lawrence F. O'Donnell and accountant Richard W. Corner to the nine-member board.

The two new members were also added to a special-seven member commission tasked with studying the hospital and making a recommendation on its future course to the mayor. Also appointed to the commission Drs. Russell Irons, William Frates and William Helfrich, attorney Matthew McDonnell, and Mildred Trout, a nurse. Irons was the president of the hospital's medical staff and Frates the immediate past president.

The biggest decision the commission was tasked with was determining whether the hospital would remain a public entity or become a private one. The medical staff favored private management, but Irons said they would consider all options.

The Lego Movie Builds A Fun World

MOVIE REVIEW

By STEPHEN PALMATIER

With technology nowadays, many movies are looking better than ever. The Lego Movie is yet another example as to how far movies and animation has come.

This first movie ever done about Lego's tells the story of an average guy lego figurine named Emmet, who all the other lego figurines believe is the special person who will fulfill a prophecy to save the world and take down the evil tyrant. The plot sounds simple, and for all purposes is. Yet, the movie does enough to make you forget about the simplicity of the film.

To start, the animation is tremendous. With computer and stop-and-go animation, the visuals at times are breathtaking and take you into different worlds that seem completely believable. It is the strongest aspect to the film, and once again shows how far animation has come. Frozen, the last great cartoon to have come out from Disney also showed off its incredible animation, and this competes well with that.

There is also a great voice cast with Chris Pratt voicing the lead Emmet, Elizabeth Banks as his goth girl sidekick and potential love interest Wyldstyle, Will Ferrell as the evil tyrant President Business, Liam Neeson as a Bad Cop but also a Good Cop, and Morgan Freeman as the wizard Vitruvius. All do great work here, and they make the characters come alive.

The other great aspect to the film is the number of pop-culture parodies the movie has, with superheroes such as Superman, Batman and Green Lantern to Abraham Lincoln to Shaquille O'Neal. There are so many that make surprise appearances that I dare you not to laugh during this film when they enter.

What puts this movie higher however is that it adds a slight emotional aspect as well, showing that people's imaginations are a wonder to behold and Lego's are toys that are meant to replace past creations.

From top to bottom, The Lego Movie is a fun, thrilling adventure that will please children of all ages and also appeal to adults with reasons perhaps as to why they ever played with Lego's in the first place.

Town Brook Smelt Monitoring Meeting Feb. 26

A smelt is a small 5- to 10-inch fish that is endangered in local waters. Early each spring smelt make their way up the Fore River. Many branch off and come up the Town Brook to spawn sometime between March 1st and May 30th.

The Quincy Environmental Network (QEN) will be conducting a program in the Community Room (Atrium Level) at the Thomas Crane Library on Wednesday, Feb. 26 at 7 p.m. to help the community learn more about these hard working fish.

At this meeting, QEN will be asking for volunteers (citizen-scientists) to look for and document smelt in the brook. If you, or your group, are interested and can donate 15 minutes per week in March and April to look for smelt in the brook, then attend the Feb. 26 the meeting to learn about the best times, and procedures to find and document fish.

Those who cannot volunteer are also invited to attend the meeting to learn more about the smelt and this great ecosystem running from Town River up to the Blue Hills, right here in Quincy, called the Town Brook.

Second Generation Takes Over At The Ice Creamsmith

After more than 37 years as owners of The Ice Creamsmith, a homemade ice cream parlor in Dorchester Lower Mills, founders David and Robyn Mabel announce that their daughter, Sarah, and her husband, Chris Skillin, will be taking over this year.

Although Sarah and Chris both pursued other careers, they began thinking about carrying on the Mabels' ice cream tradition at about the time they were expecting a daughter of their own, more than three years ago. They had both worked part-time in the ice cream shop for many years, and began to learn the details of running the business, which is open from March 1st to Thanksgiving.

The Ice Creamsmith makes its own ice cream on the premises, and offers a variety of candies, nuts and cookies that can be mixed into the ice cream to create custom flavors. Since 1976 it has been a strong and stable influence in the Lower Mills business district, a supporter of many community causes, and an employer of many local youths and adults. Recently, the Mabels were honored by the Lower Mills Merchants Assoc. and the L.M. Civic Assoc. for outstanding service and generosity to the community. David Mabel was president of the Merchants Association for many years, and also served as president of the New England Ice Cream Restaurant Association.

Sarah and Chris may make a few changes over time, but they plan to continue the friendly service and premium ice cream that has made The Ice Creamsmith a favorite in Dorchester, Milton and surrounding communities. It is located at 2295 Dorchester Ave. Dorchester, and is open from noon to 10 p.m. daily.

No-Bake Oatmeal - Peanut Butter Cookie And Banana Muffins

Over the holidays, with so many events going on and sometimes what to bring is a problem. But I found two desserts that were a bit different than my usual pies and a little easier. One is a no-bake cookie and the other is a delicious banana muffin,

NO BAKE OATMEAL PEANUT BUTTER COOKIE

2 -½ cups oatmeal
2 cups sugar
½ cup milk
½ cup peanut butter
4 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa
1- teaspoon vanilla

In a bowl, mix the oatmeal and the peanut butter together. In a pan, mix the milk, sugar, and cocoa and bring to a boil. Boil for one minute. Add then vanilla, and pour this mixture into the oatmeal and peanut butter. Mix well. Drop by spoonfuls on a waxed paper cookie sheet and let cool.

BANANA MUFFINS

4 ripe bananas
½ cup sugar
1 egg
½ cup melted butter
1- teaspoon baking powder
1- teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup whole -wheat flour

Place the bananas in the blender or food processor. Melt the butter and add the flour, egg and all the other ingredients. Add the bananas and mix well. Place either in slightly greased muffin tin or a lined tin. Bake in a 350-degree oven for 30 minutes or until a toothpick in the center comes out clean.

Senior Circuit Breaker Property Tax Credit

Sen. John F. Keenan (D-Quincy) reminds seniors across his district to look into the state's Senior Circuit Breaker property tax credit program while they're completing their taxes this year.

The Circuit Breaker is a property tax credit, made law by the Massachusetts State Legislature, designed to help seniors who pay local property taxes or who rent. The 2013 Circuit Breaker tax credit program provides tax credits of up to $1,030.00 for eligible senior citizens over the age of 65. To qualify, seniors have to meet certain income thresholds and pay more than 10% of their annual income in property taxes.

A senior is eligible if:

- The senior is a Massachusetts resident, age 65 or older
- The senior owns or rents a residential property in Massachusetts as their primary residence
- The senior's income is $55,000 or less if a single filer, $69,000 or less if a head of household, and $82,000 or less if filing jointly file
- The senior's property tax payments exceed 10% of their annual income
- 25% of the senior's annual unsubsidized rent exceeds 10% of their annual income

All seniors who are eligible and have not claimed the circuit breaker tax credit in previous years can file back three years to claim the credit. There is no special application or form to apply; the senior just needs to fill out the Massachusetts state income tax form before the April filing deadline. If the senior does not owe taxes, he or she can still claim the credit by filing a tax return.

Seniors with any questions related to the Circuit Breaker or any other matter can call Senator Keenan's office at 617-722-1494.

Staying Balanced In Mind, Body Topic Feb. 26

Aedan P. Ford, PT, DPT, COS-C, CARETENDERS Rehabilitation Director will be at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum Street, Quincy on Wednesday, Feb. 26th at 10 a.m. for a presentation on Staying Balanced In Mind and Body As You Age.

Falls are the leading cause of emergency department visits, hospital admissions and unintentional death for older adults. Ford will focus on treatment strategies in balance, vestibular and fall prevention training.

This presentation is sponsored by Atria Senior Living at Marina Place in Quincy. Refreshments will be served. Registration is required as space is limited. To register call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1506.

'Mamadrama' Film Screening

"Mamadrama: The Jewish Mother in Cinema" will be the concluding film in this season's Winter Movie Series of Cong. Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills (formerly Temple Shalom of Milton and Temple Beth El of Quincy),. co-sponsored by Milton's First Congregational Church.

The film, part of the series theme: "Strong and Funny Women," was postponed from last month and will be screened on Saturday, March 1st, at 7 p.m. (doors open at 6:45) in Huntington Hall of the First Congregational Church, 495 Canton Ave., Milton, with entry at the rear door. The film series is open to the public.

In "Mamadrama," Australian director Monique Schwarz takes a funny, penetrating look at how the loving and affectionate portrayals in early films developed into the stereotyped Jewish Mother of modern Hollywood and, conversely, the more flesh and blood characterizations in contemporary Israeli cinema. The film features a number of hilarious clips from Hollywood movies, as well as rare Yiddish films and Israeli features.

The donation for admission is $3 per person, or two for $5. Advance reservations get a free popcorn or bottle of water.

To order tickets in advance or for more information, call Cong. Beth Shalom at 617-698-3394, email: office@TempleShalomOnline.org, visit www.BethShalomBlueHills.org, or call the church at 617-698-8517 or email info@fccmilton.org.

Cong. Beth Shalom and First Congregational Church are both located at 495 Canton Avenue, Milton, which is handicapped-accessible.

'Inside The Trial Process' Topic

Trial attorney Russ Pollock will be the guest speaker at the next Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills Brunch Speaker Series on Sunday morning, March 2nd (postponed from December), at the Pierce Middle School in Milton.

His topic will be "Voir Dire and Trial: The Anatomy of Jury Selection and the Trial Process." The brunch and talk are open to the public.

Pollock is a longtime trial lawyer from the firm Bergstresser & Pollock in Boston. He will outline the heuristic thinking process that lawyers undergo when selecting a jury and conducting a trial. A segment of his presentation will be the opportunity for his audience to think like an attorney and vote whether to retain or reject potential jurors. It should be a fascinating, behind-the-scenes look at how trials work.

Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills, formerly Temple Shalom of Milton and Temple Beth El of Quincy, invites the public to its Brunch Speaker Series, which begins at 10:15 a.m., with the speaker starting at approximately 11 a.m.

A $5 donation for the brunch is requested to defray food costs, and a call or email to the congregation office is required for planning. The speaker portion can be attended for free.

Beth Shalom's brunches are currently held at the Pierce Middle School cafeteria, 451 Central Avenue (entrance on Brook Road), Milton.

For more information, call 617-698-3394 or email: office@TempleShalomOnline.org.

Pirate Fest At Houghs Neck Church March 8

Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave., Quincy, will host a "Pirate Fest" Saturday, March 8th from 10 to noon in Fellowship Hall.

There will be Pirate School, treasures, crafts, activities and snacks. This event is planned for pirates from pre-school through about grade 3.

The cost is $10 per child and $5 per adult.

Pirate costumes are optional (no pistols, swords, daggers or other weapons please).

Reservations are required as space is limited. E-mail Sue at hncc@comcast.net or call 617-479-2311. All children must be accompanied by an adult.

WORK, Inc. Receives $2,855 Donation

Granite Telecommunications, LLC, a provider of communications solutions to businesses, recently contributed $2,855.80 to WORK Inc., a national nonprofit with a mission to close the opportunity gap for individuals with disabilities.

Headquartered in Dorchester and with a local office in Quincy, WORK Inc. is providing rehabilitation services and developing community based employment for residents in our community.

Through weekly Jeans Days, held every Friday, Granite employees have the option to wear business casual attire or jeans with a donation of $3 to the selected charity. Each week, the Granite Cares Committee, comprised of Granite employees, chooses a qualifying nonprofit organization nominated by other employees. Granite then matches the amount raised by employees.

Quincy's Alyssa Lydon: A True Inspiration

Consummate Teammate Overcomes Adversity

By BILL GRIFFIN

Two years ago, Alyssa Lydon was a sophomore starting at point guard for one of the best teams in the history of Quincy High. The team went to the sectional finals. It was a team of seniors, seniors who would move on, but Lydon would be back for two years. Surely, they would be two grand years.

She was quick, she could shoot and pass and run. She had the confidence to lead a veteran team. She would be a great player. The road rose clear in front of her under bright, blue, sun-kissed skies. All would be well. Nothing could stop her.

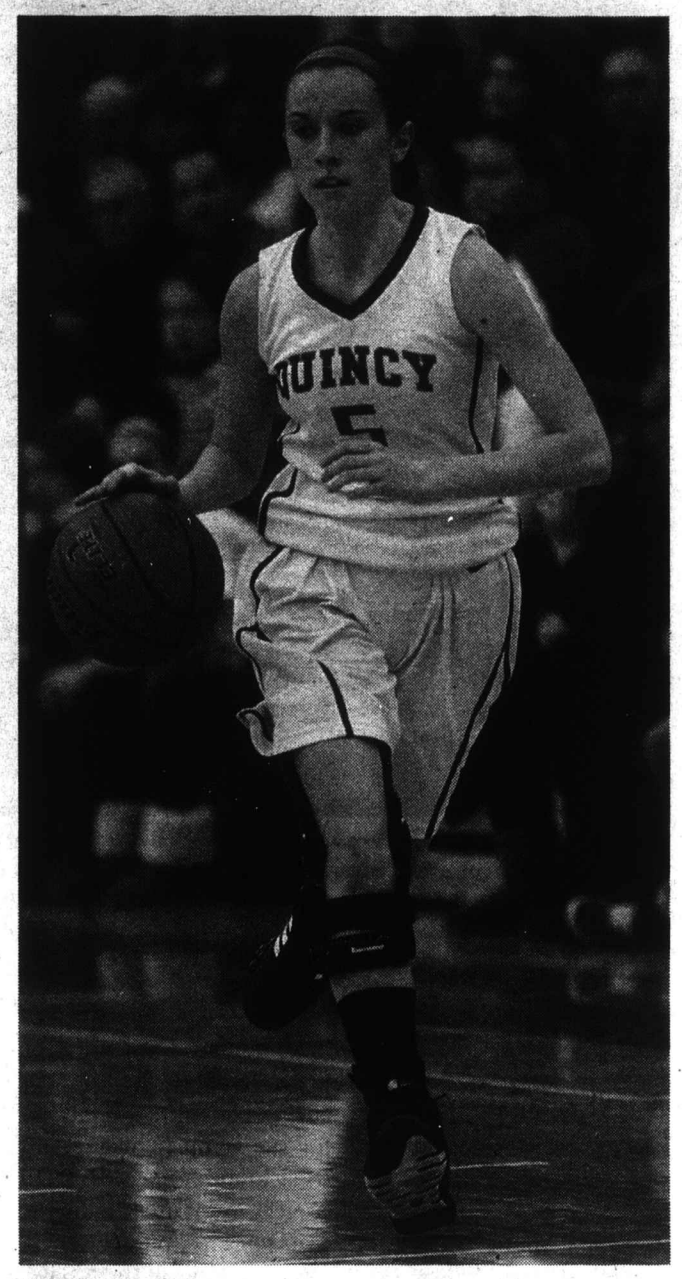

Except life. Sometimes life gets in the way. It is random and heartless. It is never fair. Lydon would face great loss and crippling injuries. Two years after running that dream team from Quincy, she would be wiser and stronger, a wonderful young woman who had learned well and hard about things far more important than basketball games. She would know what many never know, that joy in life comes from helping others.

Early in her junior year, she lost her mother to cancer. It is a loss and an ache that never goes away.

"I think of my mother every time I walk into this gym. Every game I play, every shot I make is for my mother," said Lydon at Friday night's contest against North. Lydon had helped organize a fundraiser to benefit the American Cancer Society during the game.

Perhaps basketball could be her refuge after her mother passed away. It would be a silly, inadequate refuge, but still a place to go and play and forget for a short time. She played a game for the ages against North as a junior. She had 21 points and nine assists, and she was twice as good as her numbers. It was a 32-minute instructional video on how to play point guard.

Then she injured her left knee in January. She played with it. She needed basketball. In February, she tore the ACL in her right knee. Basketball was gone. She had surgery on March 1. It was not an easy time.

QUINCY SENIOR and girls basketball co-captain Alyssa Lydon has become an inspiration overcoming much adversity including injuries and the loss of her mother.

"Maybe I shouldn't have played with the first injury. Maybe I put too much pressure on my right knee," she said.

While friends enjoyed the spring and went to the beach, Lydon went to rehab. She was back in less than nine months. Professional athletes, motivated by money and contracts, come back in 15 months. Alyssa Lydon, motivated by the love of the game, was back in less than nine.

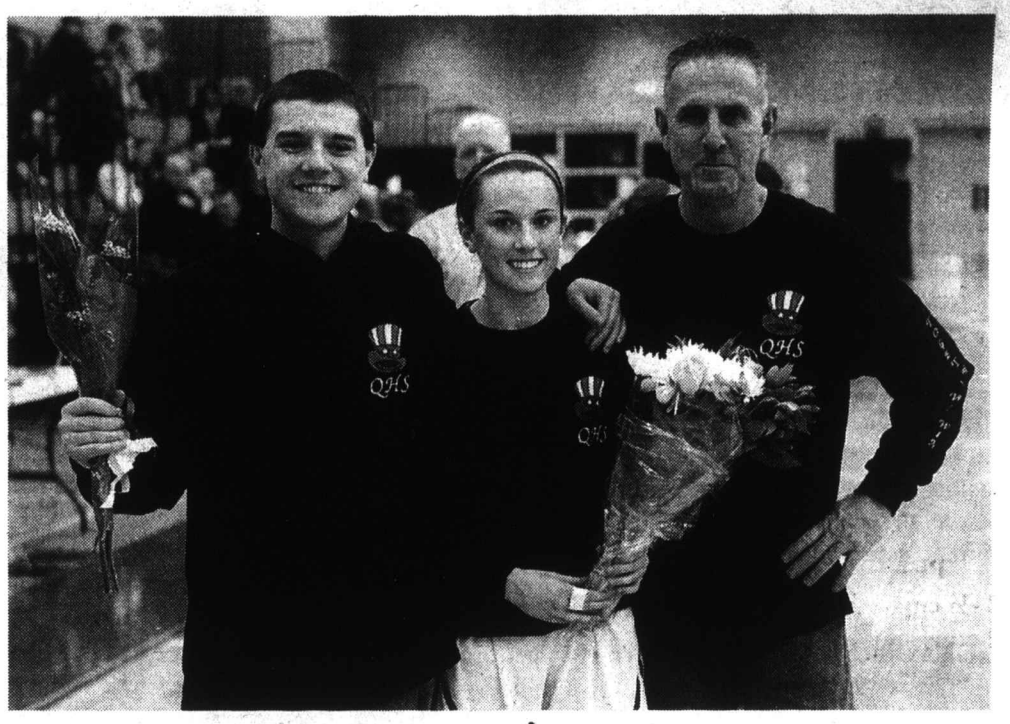

"I wanted to play so badly. It was senior year, my last year. As soon as I was cleared, I came back. I was playing basketball again by the end of November," she said.

But she was not the same. When moving on a straight line, she was fine. However, she had no lateral movement. Cutting, stopping, setting herself to shoot, looking for that short, quick burst were all difficult and painful. What had always been there was gone.

"I learned to play with pain. Basically any basketball move hurt. I'd feel a deep, sharp pain in my knee," she said.

She fractured a knuckle on her shooting hand against Hanover. She did not fool herself. She was not the same player. She could have given in. She chose to help others.

"I knew I wasn't what I once was," she said. "So I concentrated on what I could do which was pass, move the ball around, help others be better."

Off the court, she did the same. She wrote for the school newspaper, volunteered for Students Against Drunk Driving, and served on Student Council. She took part in the Jimmy Fund Walk to help kids with cancer. She approached her coach with an idea for the fundraiser at Friday night's game. Her teammate, Gabby Jerahian, had lost her father to cancer. It would be the last home game, Lydon's last night as a player in her gym. It seemed right.

Three posters hung on the far wall for Lydon. One was dotted with pictures. All three contained messages of love. When she she was introduced, she received the warmest ovation of the night. Just before the moment of silence for her mother and Jerhian's father, it became clear that Lydon had thought of more than just herself and her teammate.

She had learned that North's Camille Mullaney and Sydney Chang had also lost family members to cancer. She reached out and made sure the families from North were remembered as well.

"I took the initiative because I knew what the families were going through. I wanted all four families to be remembered. It was important to me," said Lydon.

If this were a movie, Lydon would have hit a jump shot at the buzzer to beat North. But it is not a movie. She played well, buried a pair of three-pointers, and passed the ball to open teammates. She thought of her mother and looked around her gym where she had played basketball and grown so much from that young sophomore and her great team two years ago.

"My mother might have been a little upset that we lost," smiled Lydon. "But she would have been proud of me, just like she was proud of me in whatever I tried to do. It's a little bittersweet. I never thought I would be a captain and I am. Tonight was a special night. It will always be a good memory for me."

She has seen too much of life too young. It is impossible to control the hard times life sends. It is possible to control our response. Alyssa Lydon has responded just fine.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

TEETH TO MATCH REJUVENATED FACES

Once they have undergone facelifts or other less-invasive procedures (Botox injections, dermal fillers, microdermabrasion, chemical peels, etc.), many plastic surgery patients find that their teeth no longer match the youthfulness of their rejuvenated skin. The truth is that yellow teeth can compromise the effect created by youthful-looking, wrinkle-free skin. The good news is that it is possible to whiten teeth professionally faster than the time it takes to treat a patient's skin; tooth-whitening is also quite a bit less expensive and the results are equally dramatic. When performed in the office, the procedure can result in teeth that are many shades lighter in only one treatment session. There is no down time, unlike plastic surgery, and the results are immediate.

Your smile is one of the first things people notice about you. A beautiful smile creates a youthful appearance, projects confidence, and leaves a lasting impression. We can help you regain that smile. Please call us at 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Help is available through cosmetic dentistry. You will feel more confident when you can freely smile whenever you want. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where you'll find that our staff is knowledgeable, friendly, and accommodating. We're confident that you will be pleased with our professionalism and high standards. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. # Assistant City Clerk Maureen Hallsen Calls It A Career

Retiring After 40 Years Working For City, State

By SCOTT JACKSON

After more than 40 years working for the city and the state, Assistant City Clerk Maureen Hallsen will be retiring at the end this month.

Hallsen began working for the state's Division of Civil Service in 1973 at the age of 19. She started with Civil Service when its offices were located on Washington Street in Boston, before the opening of the current state office building at One Ashburton Place, and transferred to Quincy's City Clerk's Office in 1976.

"I worked before they built Ashburton Place – I went there when it was brand new," Hallsen recalled in recent interview. "I worked on Washington Street, which was great because Filene's and Jordan's were down the street in Downtown Crossing. Then they built Ashburton Place and we moved up there. In August of '76 I came to the City of Quincy as a transfer and I've been here ever since."

Hallsen spent 18 years working in Vital Statistics for the city. Sixteen of those years were with then-City Clerk John Gillis and two years were with current City Clerk Joseph Shea. When Shea appointed her assistant city clerk in November 1994, Hallsen became only the fourth assistant clerk since 1959 following Thomas Burke (assistant from 1959 to 1991), Shea (assistant from March 1991 until he was appointed clerk in March 1992), and Patricia Toland (assistant from April 1993 until her death in September 1994). Hallsen was also the first union employee to be named assistant clerk.

"John had the good sense to hire Moe, and she's moved through the ranks," Shea noted. "We decided to go with a career employee, and it's been very positive."

As the assistant clerk, Hallsen handles a diverse portfolio. One of the biggest roles she fulfills is presiding over weddings as a justice of the peace. She also works closely with the City Council, including filling in for Shea when he is absent at council meetings, and hires workers to staff polling locations during elections.

"The biggest thing you do is you can perform marriages, I'm a justice of the peace as part of the job. My first one was nerve-racking and now I can almost do it with my eyes closed and that's a lot of fun, doing marriages," Hallsen said.

"You work with the City Council, and when Joe is not available you run the City Council meetings. And another big job you do is I take care of all the election workers. We have 30 precincts with a minimum six or seven people in a precinct. There are over 300 people – you hire them and keep track of them. That's a big part of election time, especially the presidential."

Now, after almost 20 years as the assistant clerk, Hallsen is planning to retire. Her last day is Feb. 28, just two days after she turns 60 on Feb. 26.

"It hasn't really hit me that I'm going to retire," Hallsen said. "This job – I enjoy it – and it will give someone else a chance. I've had it for 20 years. I've been here 37-and-a-half years. It will give somebody else a chance to move up the ladder and see how things work out."

Shea has known since December that Hallsen was planning to retire, but the idea of her leaving the Clerk's Office is just sinking him.

"I've known Moe since the '70s when she came here. It's kind of hard to think about her not being here," Shea said. "It's beginning to sink in now because it's getting close. We've been trying to get some of her knowledge out of her head."

Shea called Hallsen well versed in the state's vital statistic's laws. But he said her expertise extends to all aspects of the Clerk's Office and beyond, noting he was never nervous about having her fill in for him at meetings of the City Council and other boards.

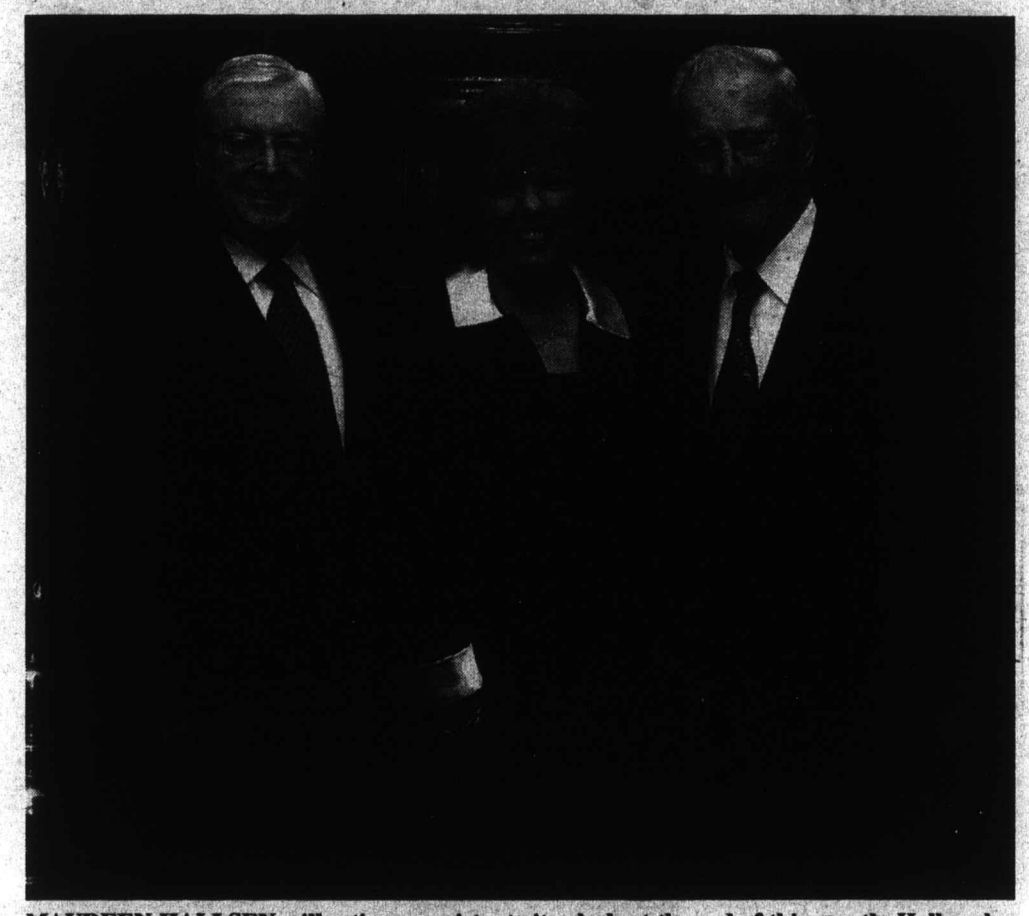

"She has a great ability and she's done a great job. It's a comfort having someone like Moe backing me up," Shea said. "There isn't anything she wouldn't tackle or couldn't do. I never worried about sending Moe to one of those meetings."

"She's been an A1, terrific employee," Shea added. "It speaks well of all employees that come through the ranks and the work they do. Moe epitomizes that."

Much has changed, in the 40 years Hallsen has worked for the city and the state. She noted that technology has come a long way since she began working in the City Clerk's Office in 1976. Back when she first trained everything was done in longhand and then typewriters were used. Hallsen believes that one day everything will be done online.

"A lot of stuff is done online. The day will come you won't even have to come in here to apply – I'm sure they'll have it online somewhere," she said. "Technology has really changed the office. The way I was taught, the way I was trained, everything was done in longhand. When I came there were no computers. Everything was typed, and typed, and typed. You hardly could Xerox anything – if they wanted five death records you had to type them all up."

Hallsen also noted that identification requirements are much stricter now than when she first started working for the city.

MAUREEN HALLSEN will retire as assistant city clerk at the end of this month. "I didn't get a Social Security card until I was in middle school. Now babies coming out the hospital have a Social Security card," Hallsen said. "Because the way the world is with terrorism and 9/11, things have changed so much. You could go through life without ever having a birth certificate. Now you can't do anything without a birth certificate."

Hallsen spent almost her entire career with Clerk's Office working in the old City Hall building, formally the James R. McIntyre Government Center, which is currently undergoing a thorough renovation scheduled for completion early next year. Hallsen remembers being told at various times over the years that the city planned to install new windows in old City Hall, and joking that she would be retired before those windows were put in.

"That was always the running joke, that they were going to put new windows in, and I would always say I'd be retired before they ever put new windows in City Hall," she said. "I enjoyed working in that building. It was a beautiful old building and I can't wait to see it. I worked here before the glass building was built so I remember what it was like when everyone was in that one City Hall."

Hallsen grew up in Quincy and attended St. John's School, Point Junior High School, and Quincy High. She's lived in the city for almost her entire life, except for six years in Weymouth soon after she and her husband David were married, and they live together in a house he built off of Adams Street. They have two children – Erica, who works at Quincy Medical Center, and David, a senior at Curry College.

Hallsen, who has worked fulltime since she was 19, is looking forward to retirement and having time to herself.

"Just having time on my own, being able to get up in the morning and not having to go to work," Hallsen replied when asked what she was looking forward to in retirement. "Go for a walk, go down the beach – my husband comes from the Neck, he loves being on the water. Maybe get a new dog. We had a dog for 13 years and he passed away two-and-a-half years ago. We thought about getting another dog."

Hallsen also plans to do more genealogical work, which has long been an interest of hers. While working for Vital Statistics, she helped a man from Seattle whose family had roots in Quincy map out his family tree.

"I love doing genealogy work," Hallsen said. "Anything historical – I live down the street from the Adams Mansion and I love historical stuff and doing genealogy. I have some Irish ancestors I'm trying to look up. It's time consuming."

"My niece is getting married in Kentucky in Louisville in October and we hope to go down there," Hallsen added. "I hope to spend a week down there with my sister, or even two weeks if I wanted to. We're looking forward to that. It's a beautiful city, Louisville."

Hallsen is also looking forward to traveling. She and her husband have traveled in Europe before, visiting Iceland, Ireland, Germany, Italy, and Austria, and Hallsen hopes to explore the western U.S. after she retires.

"I've never been out west. Hopefully we do some traveling – I won't have to fit it in between council meetings and elections, you can go where you want," Hallsen said. "I'd like to do some more traveling, here and abroad, but mainly this country. There's a whole other world here in the western part of the country. That's what we're looking forward to."

Shea will be hosting a retirement party for Hallsen on April 17 at Port 305 in Marina Bay. He said tickets will be available through his office.

Climate Action Network Awarded $2,000 Grant

Quincy Climate Action Network has won a $2,000 grant from the New England Grassroots Environmental Fund, a Vermont-based nonprofit that supports long-term civic engagement and action on local environmental issues.

"QCAN serves a crucial role in their community of educating and encouraging residents, businesses, and civic leaders on the key energy and climate change issues while serving as a model for groups in other Massachusetts and New England communities," said Julia Dundorf, NEGEF's energy and climate change program director. "The Grassroots Fund is enthused about the progress of QCAN and their plans for 2014."

In its first year, the Quincy group, founded in October 2012, cosponsored the public library's popular Kill-a-Watt loaner program; signed up 40 residents for free energy audits; held 10 public forums on home energy use; and worked with city government to hire a new energy manager and identify ways of reducing energy use by city departments and increasing renewable energy production on city property.

Plans for 2014 include a membership drive, a major fund-raising event, outreach to the business community, and continued engagement with city government.

QCAN was one of 59 grantees in NEGEF's fall 2013 funding round. The grants help local environmental groups build organizational capacity, according to Dundorf.

First-Time Homebuyers Workshop March 3, 5

NeighborWorks Southern Mass. will offer a two-part workshop for first-time homebuyers, to be held from 5 to 9 p.m. Monday March 3 and Wednesday March 5 at the Winter Gardens apartment complex (lower level community room), located at 45 Winter St. in Quincy.

Sponsored by Dedham Savings, the workshop will give participants an opportunity to meet and hear from real estate brokers, insurance agents, attorneys and loan originators.

Attendees also will have an opportunity to learn about NeighborWorks' down-payment assistance programs and speak to a lender about various mortgage options.

The registration fee for the workshop is $20 per person.

To register or for more information, call 617-770-2227 or visit www.nwsoma.org.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Monday, February 10th, 2014, at approximately 12:34 p.m., Officer Ryan Donnelly, working a detail in front of City Hall, was approached by a citizen stating that a pedestrian was struck by a vehicle a few blocks away. As the Officer ran to the scene, he notified Communications to send help.

Officer Donnelly located a female being attended by others and soon learned that a male suspect had just stolen her vehicle. The victim, very upset and with minor injuries, said that she fell to the pavement as she tried to stop the suspect from stealing her car. Officer Donnelly requested EMS to the scene and then gave out information about the stolen vehicle, which was then given out statewide. The victim then gave a full account of what occurred. She said that she got into her car and started the engine. A male approached her and told her that her car was leaking fluids. When the victim exited her car to take a look, the suspect jumped into the driver's seat, telling her, "I will fix it for you" as he attempted to drive away. The victim realized that the suspect was trying to steal her car, so she reached inside the vehicle and held onto the steering wheel. As the suspect drove off, the victim was knocked to the ground, nearly being run over by her own vehicle.

The victim gave a thorough description of the suspect. Sergeant Sean Duggan arrived on scene and asked the victim if she had a cell phone. She told him that her cell phone was inside her stolen car. He asked her if the phone had tracking capabilities to which she replied that it did. Sergeant Duggan logged into the victim's cell phone and using a special app, was able to determine that the stolen vehicle was in the area of Columbia Road in Boston. The Boston Police Department and Massachusetts State Police were updated with the suspect's possible location. A short time later, the application showed an updated location of Blue Hill Avenue and Geneva Avenue in Boston. There is a Stop & Shop Supermarket in the area and it appeared the vehicle was located inside the parking lot of the store. Boston Police Operations were updated as to the location of the stolen vehicle. Officers called Stop & Shop loss prevention and they confirmed that the vehicle was in the parking lot and occupied.

Quincy Police Detectives Landry, Monteith and Karvelis responded into Boston to the area to assist in locating the vehicle and suspect. A short time later, Detective Monteith stated that the stolen vehicle had been located and the suspect was being detained on Mascoma Street in Boston. Officer Donnelly asked the victim if she would be able to identify the suspect and she said she could, so she was transported by cruiser to the suspect's location. Upon seeing the suspect by a Boston Police cruiser, the victim immediately said, "That's Him. I'm very sure, that's him." In addition, the victim's cell phone was located in the suspect's jacket pocket! The suspect was transported to Boston Police District B-2 for a courtesy booking. During the booking process, three credit cards were found on the suspect. Two of the credit cards belonged to the victim and the third card was the victim's mother's card. The victim said that the only thing still missing was $180.00 from her wallet.

LT. DAN MINTON

Back at the scene, Detective Monteith located a loaded hypodermic syringe on the ground just outside of the stolen vehicle. He also located a bag of new hypodermic syringes on the floor of the passenger compartment that appeared to just have been purchased. It is believed that the missing money was used to purchase the drugs and syringes. Upon seeing her vehicle, the victim said that the damage on the passenger's side of her vehicle, a broken side mirror and scrapes down the side of the vehicle were all new.

Officer Hartnett then took the suspect, a 53 year old Chelsea resident, to Quincy Police headquarters where he was charged with, "Car Jacking, Assault by Means of Dangerous Weapon (motor vehicle), Malicious Destruction to a Motor Vehicle over $250, Larceny of Property over $250, along with two outstanding warrants." Nice Work!

ANOTHER JOB WELL DONE: On February 7, 2014, at approximately 2:30 p.m., Officers Dave Cooper and Jim Menz were dispatched to the area of 75 Copeland Street for an Unarmed Robbery. While en-route, Communications informed the Officers that the suspect fled on foot in an unknown direction. Officer Jim Menz interviewed the male victim, who claimed that he just walked out of the 7-Eleven store on Copeland Street and was counting his money when a male came up to him and "ripped the money out of my hands – then took off running." The victim gave chase briefly up Buckley Street and then turned onto Arthur Street, where the suspect ran into an apartment complex. The victim said he lost the suspect at that point. He added that the suspect took $40.00 (2 twenty dollar bills) from him. The victim then gave Officer Menz some identification cards he said fell out of the suspect's pocket as he fled.

One card was a Mastercard with a male's name on it. There was also a Commonwealth Of Massachusetts Transportation access pass with a female's name on it. The Officers recognized her name from past calls and arrests in a nearby rooming house on Nelson Street. Officer Cooper immediately recognized the males name on the credit card as someone who hangs around the area and commits crimes. He also knew that the suspect often went to the same Nelson Street rooming house where the female resided.

The Officers went to the Nelson Street address and knocked on the door. They were met by the female. When asked if the male suspect was in the apartment, she stated, "I don't know." She then gave consent to search the apartment. Officer Roger White joined Officer Cooper in the search and moments later found the male suspect hiding in the closet. The Officers gave the suspect his Miranda Rights, which he waived and then said, "It was a drug deal gone bad," adding that he didn't take the victim's (actually stated his name) money and that "He's mad at me because he got beat on some pills by someone." Officer White went back into the female's apartment to determine if the suspect left the money in her apartment. The female admitted that the suspect came running into her apartment just prior to the Officer's arrival, saying he just got $40.00. The suspect, a 37 year old homeless person, was placed under arrest for "Larceny from a Person" and transported to the station for booking. During booking, Officer John Leuchte found $40.00 in the suspect's sneakers and it was two $20.00 bills. The money was taken as evidence. Nice Work!

"One-ring" cell phone scam: The Federal Trade Commission has issued a warning stating that people are being scammed by a "one-ring" cell phone scam. Scammers are using auto-dialers to call cell phone numbers across the country. They let the phone ring once and hang up. This gives just enough for a missed call message to pop up. The scammers hope you'll call back, either because you believe a legitimate call was cut off, or you will be curious about who called. If you do, chances are you'll hear something like, "Hello-You've reached the operator, please hold." While on hold, you could be tallying up some hefty charges of a per-minute charge on top of an international rate. The calls are from phone numbers with three-digit area codes that look like they're from inside the U.S., but actually are associated with international phone numbers, often in the Caribbean. The area codes include but are not limited to: 268, 284, 473, 664, 649, 767, 809, 829, 849 and 876.

If you get a call like this, do not pick up and don't call the number back. There's no danger in getting the call, the danger is in calling back and racking up a whopping bill.

If you're tempted to call back, first "google" the area code. Go one step further and put in the entire number with the word "scam" after it and you will likely get comments from others who experienced similar situations. If you've been a victim of the "one-ring" scam, try to resolve the charges with your cell phone carrier. If that doesn't work, file a complaint with the Federal Trade Commission and the Federal Communications Commission. As a general rule, read your phone bill often line by line. If you don't recognize or understand a charge, contact your carrier. (Excerpts from Federal Trade Commission.)

Flood Forum, FEMA Map Update Tonight

two high-risk areas where insurance is mandatory – zone V, coastal high hazard areas, and zone A, special flood hazard areas – both of which are broken down into different categories. Both A and V zones are subject to inundation by 100-year floods, according to FEMA, with the V zone also subject to additional hazards from storm-induced waves.

Under the current FEMA flood maps, Quincy has both A and V zones. Areas in the A zone include low-lying portions of West Quincy, North Quincy, Wollaston, Houghs Neck, and Germantown, as well as areas adjacent to Town Brook and Furnace Brook. Most areas along Quincy's coast are in the V zone.

Ed Flavin, the president of Quincy-based realty and insurance firm Flavin & Flavin, said flood insurance premiums in properties included in the A zone have increased to between $2,000 and $2,500 locally, up from $500-800. Flavin said potential homebuyers have grown concerned about flood insurance because of the new premiums. Instead of asking about schools, transportation opportunities, or the condition of a home, interested buyers are now asking if a property is in a flood zone.

"I think it's a concern," Flavin said. "Flood insurance is probably now the first question asked. It is a very important part of home ownership now."

Because of the current market for real estate – there is a shortage of houses listed for sale – Flavin said the new premiums aren't driving down prices for properties in flood zones, but the premiums are increasing the value of properties outside flood zones.

Flavin recommended that people worried about their flood insurance premiums, especially those buying or selling a home, should get an elevation certificate. The certificates are used to determine if a property is located above the base flood elevation. Premiums generally decrease as the height above the base flood elevation increases.

In addition to the changes to the flood program, the meeting will address the city's plans to appeal proposed new FEMA flood maps that would place up to 1,400 Quincy properties into flood zones, mostly in Houghs Neck, Merrymount, Montclair, and North Quincy. A copy of the proposed maps is available for residents to review at the Engineering Department at DPW headquarters at 55 Sea St.

The maps for Norfolk County were released by FEMA for local approval in January, and are based on a different methodology than previous flood maps. Plymouth County communities such as Scituate, Marshfield, and Duxbury received their proposed maps last year and are already appealing them.

development agreement."

The Mayor's notification means that Street-Works has 30 days to meet expired deadlines for filing permit plans for a large portion of the development, including the area of the Ross Parking garage and the Parkingway. The required filings are for a portion of the project independent from the first step that will be led by Quincy Mutual and its development team.

The Quincy Mutual team will be responsible for the first major private project of the development, which includes a residential and retail complex in the area bordered by the Granite Trust Building, Chestnut Street, Cottage Avenue, and Hancock Street. This area is referred to as Block 4 or Merchants Row.

The Mayor told the Council that despite changes to development dynamic, he remains bullish on the future of Quincy Center and the redevelopment. Any project of this magnitude, including recent ones in places like Somerville, Boston, and Westwood, have all undergone changes and continue to move forward. Those changes, the Mayor said, do not diminish to progress of the last several years.

He pointed to a series of infrastructure projects, including the vital relocation of the Town Brook culvert, that are either underway or completed valued at more more than $30 million, all financed privately or by state and federal grants.

"This is not an end, nor a beginning. It's a part of the middle that we're going to have work through," he said. "No one doubted that there would be challenges and obstacles, it's how we meet them that will decided the fate of our downtown. There can be no doubt that based on the work we have already completed together, we will continue to make progress."

Koch also noted that the development agreement, called the Land Disposition Agreement, is working as it was designed by protecting taxpayers from costs associated with the private development. The agreement required all costs to be absorbed first by private entities and for new buildings to be generating tax revenue before the City would be obligated to essentially purchase infrastructure work first completed privately. In turn, the City would use only revenue generated by new development to purchase the infrastructure.

At its core, the agreement set the protections for the City while giving a developer the opportunity to purchase and build on City-owned land at the Hancock Parking Lot and Ross Parking Garage. It includes a litany of benchmarks and financial reporting requirements, which have protected the City's financial interests and are now coming into sharper focus.

The City's general fund has not absorbed any cost relative to the development agreement, and that was the ultimate goal of the agreement, Koch said. That includes several million dollars of underground utility work already completed and paid for privately as part of the plan's first step.

"The agreement works," Koch said, crediting the City Council and the team of renown real estate lawyers that joined him on the negotiating team to write the protections into the agreement. "We have said from Day 1 that a new downtown will be built, but it will be built only if the taxpayers of the City are protected. That is the case today, and will be the case going forward."

He called the notice sent to Street-Works a "business decision," and did not dismiss Street-Works' work to date helping to create an overall vision and for investing millions of dollars in design, land control, permitting and preliminary work.

"We are charting our own course as we always have, and this is not a decision I take lightly. At the same time, we have an agreement in place with milestones and those milestones must be met.

"We are moving forward either way."

highest tier, $115,000 per year, would include the city clerk, public works commissioner, city solicitor, and municipal finance director. The city clerk's salary would receive the biggest increase of any official other than the mayor, as City Clerk Joseph Shea is making $99,669 this fiscal year.

The only employee the panel recommended cutting of the pay of the traffic engineer. The report calls for paying that position a salary of $95,000, down from $103,599 in the FY14 budget.

The salary commission did not review the compensation of any School Department employees, including Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, or members of the School Committee.

The commission also only made recommendations on salaries, and did not review possible changes to any job descriptions or duties.

In addition to Colton, Easton's town administrator and a former Quincy Public Works commissioner, the panel also included Edward Flavin of Flavin & Flavin; QCAP Executive Director Beth Ann Strollo; Dolly Di Pesa of the Di Pesa Company; and Kate Yaeger, a former Quincy human resources director.

Basketball Rivalry From Head Coaches' Perspective

By BILL GRIFFIN

Rivalry games are different.

Basketball coaches need to maintain a fine balance in their preparation and in-game coaching which keeps their team's emotions under control. Getting a team fired up for a doubleheader like the one Quincy and North Quincy played last Friday night is seldom a problem. It was North vs. Quincy, after all. Keeping those feelings focused can be an issue.

"The biggest thing is that you don't want them trying to do too much, trying to do things they don't normally do," said Quincy boys coach Dave Parry.

"I try not to get them too hyped up. That energy comes from the seniors and the action of the game. You don't want too much anxiety or emotion," added Quincy coach Jeff Bretsch.

It is not football. A football coach wants his team so primed it will will run through a wall. In basketball, a coach wants his or her team excited, but players can lose their touch, their basketball intelligence, their feel for the game if the emotions grow too strong.

"You want to create an environment that is as normal as possible," said Parry.

It begins with preparation. Coaches try to keep the days of practice leading up to the game as regular and familiar as possible. There is obviously a sharper focus, but the goal is to stay with the routine that has been established over the long season.

"We try to prepare as we would for any other team," said Parry. "We look at their tendencies, what they like to do offensively and defensively and matchups. It's obviously not just another game, but that's the way we try to approach it."

The intra-city nature of the rivalry alters the preparation as well. The players know each other other. They have played basketball with and against each other for most of their lives. The schools are barely a James Lam spiral apart. There are few secrets.

"The proximity does influence the preparation," said North coach Kevin Barrett. "Because the schools are so close, we might send someone to scout Quincy more than another opponent. There's more focus on the preparation. The teams know each other so well. It's not just another game."

The passion of the rivalry also influences what a coach will do, especially with timeouts, during a game. In most games, timeouts are called for instruction or to stop an opposing that is on a run. When North plays Quincy, the gym is full and rocking with noise, the game is being played on a high level with great feeling. Timeouts in these games are often used to settle a team.

"Momentum is so huge in basketball. You can almost feel the building move in a game like North when a team is on a run," said Bretsch. "That's when you use a timeout to get the players to calm down and focus on what they do well."

"Six points. That's my rule. If a team scores six straight, I usually call a timeout or a game like this can get away," said Parry. "You use it to make adjustments, change matchups, but also to settle a team and stop the momentum because it is so loud and the emotions are so high."

Experience also plays a role in such an electric atmosphere.

"With a young team, I might be more apt to reel them in and calm things down if Quincy is on a run," said Barrett. "With a more experienced team like this year, I might let them on the court a little longer before I call a timeout."

The goal in a rivalry game is clearly to win, but it is an experience which should be savored.

"It is a special game and you want them to enjoy playing in in," said Brestch.

"I tell my kids to have fun and enjoy the atmosphere. That's important," said Parry."

The meaning of the game needs little explanation and is unique to each team.

"I'll start my four seniors. It's their final game against North," said Parry

"It's such a unique experience," said Barrett. "To play a game in front of a crowd like the game attracts in a game that everyone in the city cares about is a special opportunity for the kids."

"It's a legacy game, part of the way they will be remembered, a game they will never forget," added Bretsch.

Each coach had a favorite memory of a rivalry game from the past.

"I remember the night Doug Scott scored 53 against North in their gym," said Parry. "I also remember my son John's final game as a senior. We weren't supposed to win, but we did. It's a great memory.

"They're are so many close games, so many great games we had against them. I remember a game six or seven years ago when Megan Tobin threw in six three-pointers and we won," said Bretsch."

"We have so many good games, they all blend together," added Barrett. "I think back to the first game this year when there were a half dozen lead changes in the fourth period. That's a tough one to beat."

Stephen O'Brien Nominated For Appointment To Service Academies

Stephen O'Brien of Quincy has been nominated for appointment to the United States Military Academy (West Point) and the U.S. Air Force Academy by Cong. Stephen F. Lynch

O'Brien is a senior at Boston Collegiate Charter School.

As part of his annual Congressional responsibilities, Cong. Lynch nominates exemplary candidates to the service academies.

"Since September 11, 2001, the quality of applicants has steadily improved every year, and this year was no exception. These candidates are the best of the best, and I am proud of their desire to serve our country," Lynch said.

"Stephen was highly recommended by his teachers and coaches at Boston Collegiate Charter School. He is a remarkable young man, and we are fortunate that young people like Stephen are willing to serve our nation," said Lynch added.

Cong. Lynch and his Congressional Liaison to the U.S. Service Academies, Bob Fowkes, examined each candidate's record of academic, athletic, and service achievements, as well as letters of recommendation. After an extensive review process and a personal interview, O'Brien was selected as someone whose scholastic record and community contributions elevated him to the top of a list of well-qualified candidates.

Students interested in attending one of the U.S. Service Academies should contact Robert Fowkes in Congressman Lynch's Boston office at 617-428-2000.

VOICE FOR HEALTH

ALL IN YOUR HEAD?

By some estimates, three-quarters of American adults suffer from a headache in any given month. While most headaches are occasional and fleeting, millions of Americans experience chronic, recurring headaches. About nine out of ten of all headaches can be classified as "tension headaches," which are usually characterized by a dull, squeezing, or pressure type of pain around the whole head. Tension headaches may be episodic (occasional) or chronic (occurring 15 or more days a month). It is believed that episodic headaches are linked to muscle contraction and that tightness in the neck or shoulders (resulting from stress or bad posture) radiates to the head to cause the pain. Chiropractic may help treat these causative factors.

We are on a mission, and your health is our focus. We want to be the first choice among our community to improve or maintain your health. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we specialize in treating acute and chronic conditions; including headaches, neck and lower back pain, and rehabilitation. Call us at 617.472.4220 and let us help you. Give chiropractic a try and see just what it can do for you and your family. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we are currently accepting new patients. Regular chiropractic adjustments are your body's best insurance for a healthy place to live for the rest of your life. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Misuse and overuse of pain medications to treat headaches may lead to "rebound headaches," which are indicative of a vicious cycle that is not easy to break.

Presidents Over North Quincy, 51-49

Quincy Boys Snap NQ Winning Streak

By BILL GRIFFIN

You are a Quincy High basketball fan and you are granted three wishes.

You wish for a dramatic two-point win over city rival North Quincy on Senior Night at home before a packed and rocking gym.

Now you get a little greedy. You wish that the victory breaks a 13-game losing streak to North which extends back five years.

Now, you shoot for the moon. You wish that the win comes against a 19-0 North team and spoils the Red Raiders' chance at an unbeaten season.

It all really happened and it didn't happen by magic. There was poise, defense, three-point shooting, passing and a decisive steal by Christian Callahan in the final seconds which lifted the Presidents past North 51-49 in a unforgettable chapter to the grand rivalry before a wild, overflow crowd.

"It has been a drought, a few years since we beat them, but that's not what tonight is about," said Quincy coach Dave Parry whose team went to 12-7 with the win. "It's about these kids. Our juniors and seniors had never beaten North. It's their night."

"Unbelievable, awesome, words can't describe the feeling right now," said Callahan, a senior who had 10 points and made the play which brought home the sweetest of wins for Quincy.

Quincy controlled most of the game. The Presidents took the lead at 21-20 with 3:40 left in the second period and never surrendered it. It reached as high as eight midway through the third, but this was North, a team that plays with the heart of a champion The Red Raiders would come back.

"We have all the respect in the world for them," said Parry.

Twice in the fourth, the Red Raiders closed within one. A three-point play by Efthim Butka (12 points) cut it to 45-44 and a drive by Kyle Richardson made it 46-45 with 2:50 left. The gym was shaking with noise. North knows how to win these games. The moment required poise and talent. Quincy had both.

Junior Drew Myers, the Drew Myers of the clutch shots against Hingham, Scituate and Silver Lake, hit a jumper and a drive. Entering the final three minutes of the game, Myers had two points. Then up he steps with two indispensable hoops. Perhaps, Mr. Myers has a feel for the big moment.

"Drew has a short memory. All scorers need it. When he misses, he forgets it. If he misses 20, he thinks he's going to make the next 20," said Parry.

A beautiful back-door feed from center J.T. Bain, who passed the ball better than most guards all night, to Colin Evans upped the lead to 51-46 and seemingly finished it.

"J.T. passes the ball better than any big man I've ever coached," said Parry. "Our poise was good. As a group, they are steady. They never let the moment overtake them. That last pass was chemistry, they've played so much basketball together"

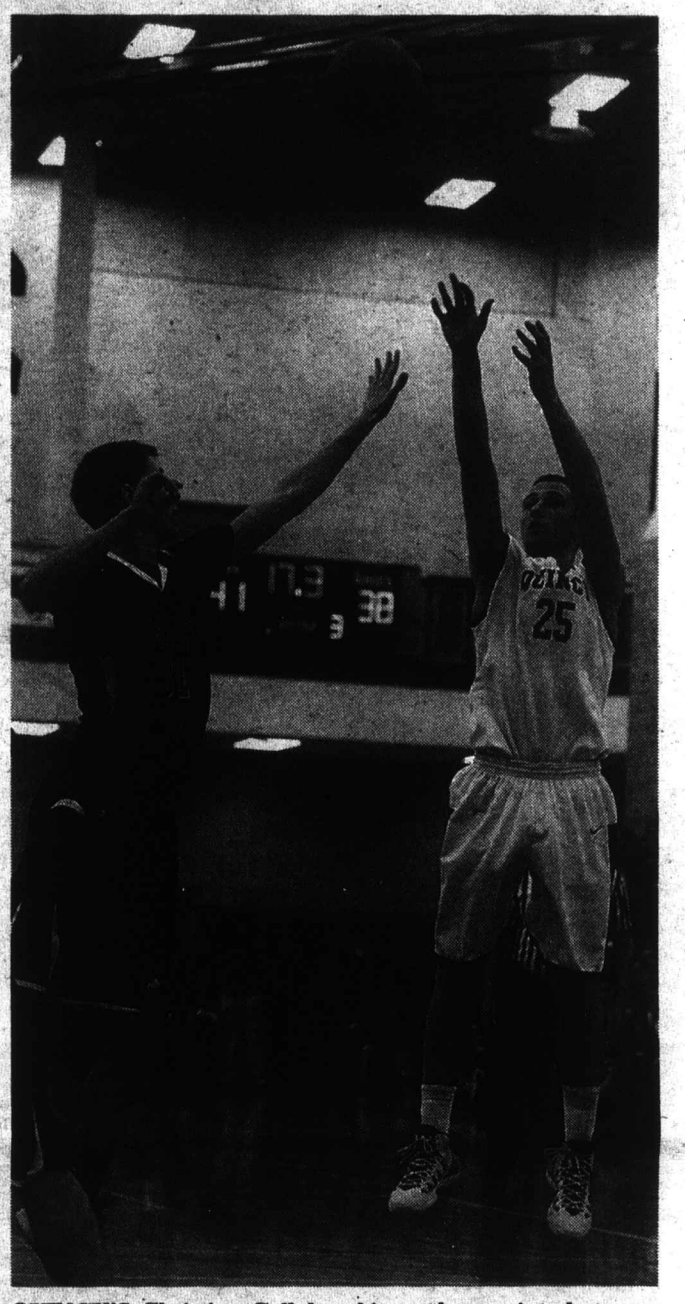

However, it was not finished because when a team has Kyle Richardson, there is always a chance. Richardson calmly drained a three which would have been good from five feet behind the NBA line to cut it to 51-49 with 1:30 left in the game and old memories started to the haunt the Quincy sideline.

"It was nervous. I thought the wheels might be coming off again," said Parry. "Kyle is such a great player. We ran three or four players at him, trying to get the ball out of his hands. We couldn't do it."

Quincy wasted the clock with successive possessions, but Anthony Green (17 points, 12 rebounds, five blocks) tore away a rebound and fired a bullseye outlet pass to send North away on the break. The Red Raiders crossed midcourt with eight seconds left. They had a chance, but Callahan reached out, flicked away the ball and made a no-look pass to Myers which ended it.

"The first thing I thought of was to find Kyle and pick him up," said Callahan, "Then I saw the ball come out a little and I just swatted it. I didn't really see Drew.

Red Raiders Defeat Presidents, 61-49

NQ Girls Clinch Share Of Division Crown

By BILL GRIFFIN

They are a championship team with a great heart and with a great player.

North Quincy put both on full display with a convincing 61-49 victory over city rival Quincy Friday night which clinched a share of the Fisher Division crown before a packed gym in the Patriot League finale for both teams.

Grace Geary once again played basketball the way the Beatles sang songs with a 30-point, nine-steal, six-rebound performance. Jane Minton went under the boards, gave up nine inches and pulled down 10 rebounds because that's what her team needed most. Haley McKay, an under-appreciated defensive standout in two sports for three years, hit the two biggest jump shots of the game. Sophomore Marissa McGue supplied, speed, hustle, rebounding, and boundless energy.

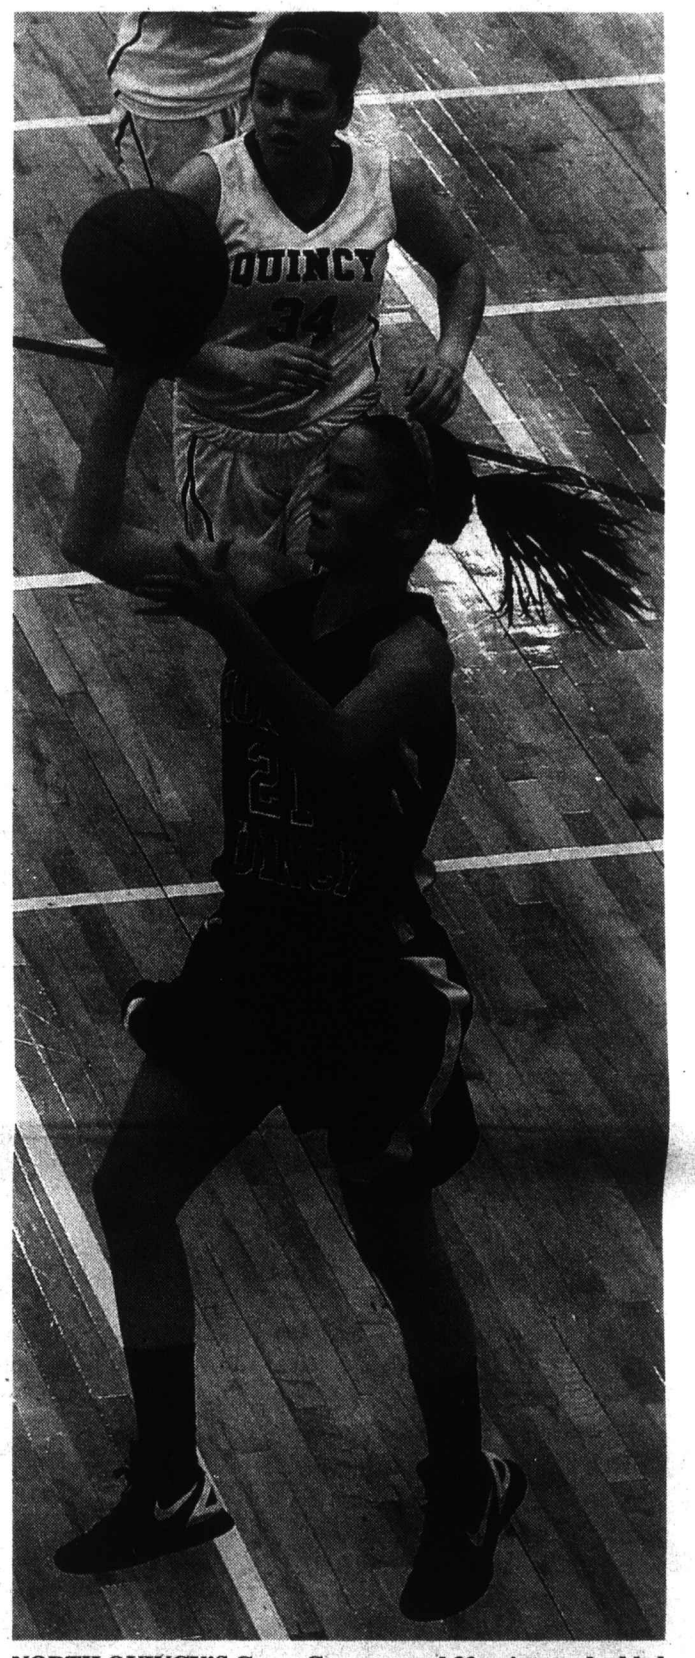

North (13-5 overall) and Hanover each finished with 10-3 records in the division. North had its starting five healthy and together for just seven of 18 games. Minton missed four games. North played its last five games without All-League center Maya Umoren and won four of them. They are worthy champions.

"If you told me we would only have our starting five for seven games and end up sharing the division title, I wouldn't have believed you," said North coach Jess Worden. "I couldn't be prouder of them, the way they competed and picked each other up. They left everything out on the floor."

It starts with Geary. In the last eight games, with Minton and Umoren injured, she scored 293 points for a 27.0 average per game. When her team needed her to score, she scored. Against Quincy, her game was defined as much by what she didn't do, as much as it was by what she did do. She was challenged by an outstanding defender in Kayla McArdle. Geary never grew frustrated, never became greedy, never sunk to the I'll-prove-I-can-score mentality which finishes many players who can only score.

She played basketball. She ran the offense, threw beautiful passes, and she rebounded. She jump-started her offense with her defense, by turning steals into layups. She let the game come to her. When it did, she buried threes behind picks and got to the basket with a spinning move off a left-handed drib-

Presidents Snap Red Raiders' 19-Game Win Streak

I heard him calling really loud. I passed the ball in the direction of his voice."

Quincy won the game because of its man-to-man defense. That's a sentence that could not have been written six weeks ago. Quincy won when its leading scorer (James Lam) had 12 points. That's another sentence that couldn't have been written six weeks ago. The Presidents' calling card for most of the year has been their offense. Quincy scored 60 or more points in 14 of 19 games.

Their defense was a mix of full court traps, tricks and switches. Gradually as the second half of the season unfolded, the Presidents went more and more to the halfcourt man-to-man. They had the quickness and basketball IQ to play it. It helped them rebound. It was the key in wins over Scituate, Hingham and Duxbury. Against North, Parry played the defense his kids wanted to play: straight up man-to-man. No gimmicks, no frills.

"To be truthful I had a couple of junk defenses in mind," he said. "I asked the kids what they wanted to play. They wanted to play straight man-to-man. That's fine with me. It makes my job a lot easier."

Give gold stars to Lam, Callahan and Brendan Cunningham, but everyone played defense.

"All credit to coach Parry and Quincy's defense. It gave us a lot of trouble. They deserved the win with the way they played defense," said North Quincy coach Kevin Barrett.

The other key to the game was the three-point shot. Quincy buried five in the first half. Callahan and Lam had two each and Kevin Williams added one. North didn't hit a three until Richardson's with 1:30 left in the game. When Quincy hit the early threes, it drew out North's defense just a bit and opened the back door for the Presidents swift cutters and slashers.

"I just wanted to hit one to bring them out a little," said Parry. "James uses his body so well and Chris is a contortionist going to the hoop. We got some big baskets on drives in the second half."

For North, there was Green who was the best player on the floor. He ruled the boards, blocked and changed shots. He hit three outside jumpers and had two layups in the fourth spin down and out. His rebound and outlet pass in the final seconds were big-time stuff. He gave his team every chance to win.

"You always have to be conscious of where he is," said Parry.

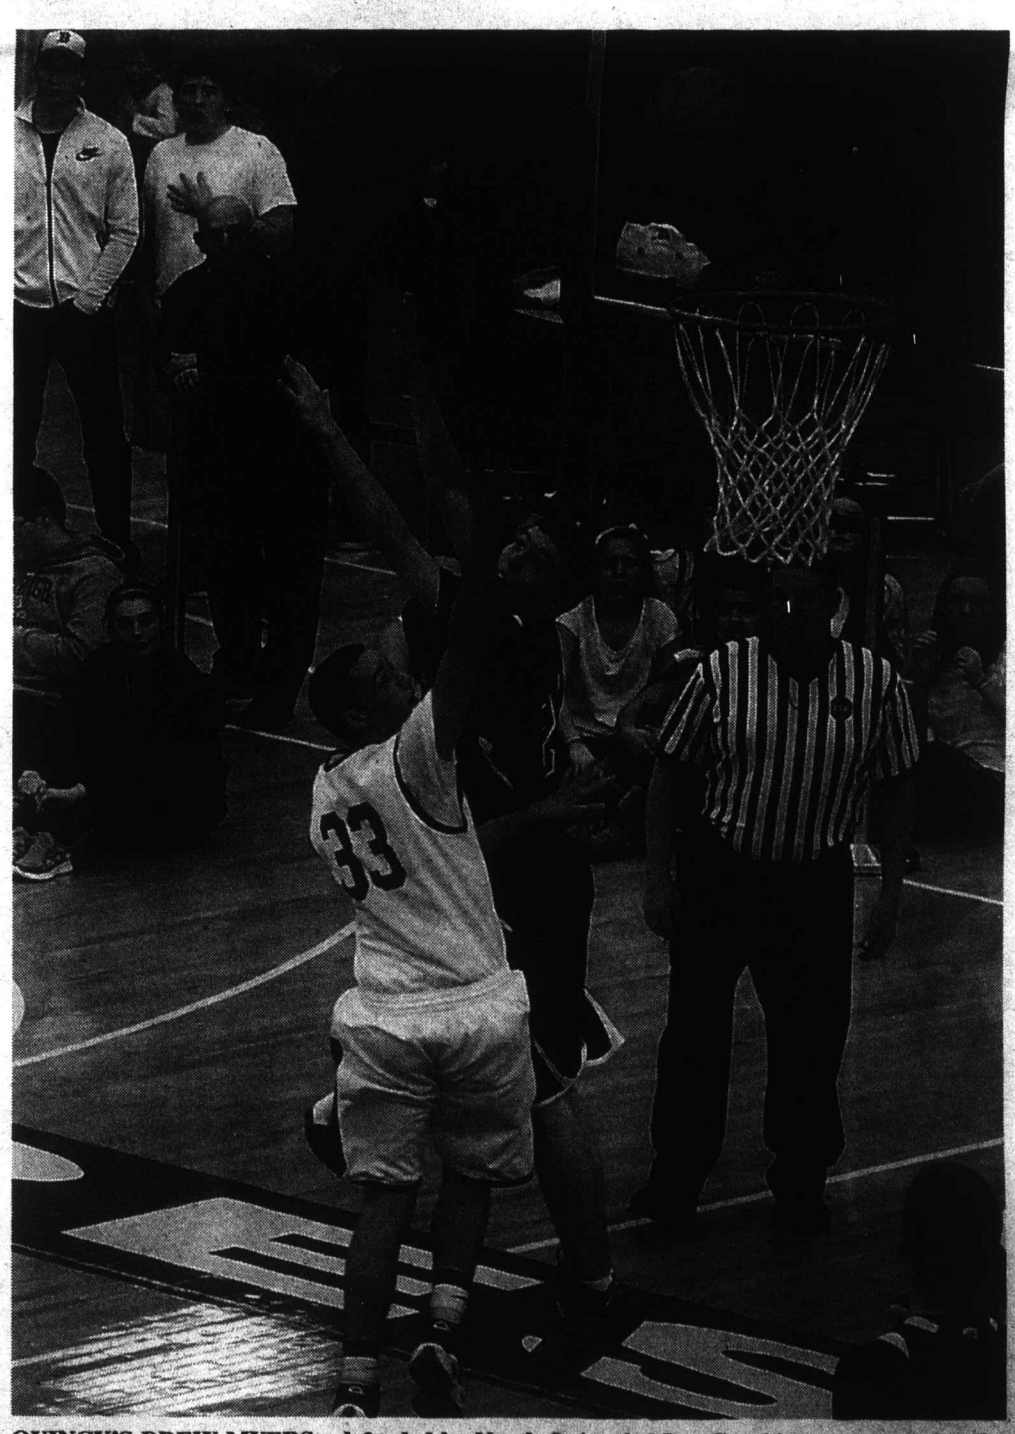

And there was Richardson. He had 10 of his 12 in the fourth period, much as he did when he brought North back in memorable late rally against Scituate his junior year. He somehow got to the basket and finished through hard, physical defense and a stream of double-teams. He lacked only one thing. One more touch.

"We wanted to get him another touch because he can make things happen, but again give Quincy the credit. That steal was a great play," said Barrett.

The game was an event. Cars were parked out as far as the Southern Artery. The permanent and temporary bleachers were full. Fans ringed the corridor on the floor above the gym. Fans stood three and four deep in the open space behind each basket. Both Boston daily newspapers covered the game. It was shown on television and broadcast on radio. The night was played out at a fever pitch, but the play was clean and the behavior of the fans was exemplary.

When it was over, it fittingly was a family affair for Quincy. Parry's son, John, played on the last team in 2009 which defeated North before Friday night. As father and son took a good, last look at the scorebook long after the gym had emptied, the coach wanted to make one thing clear.

"This was the kids night, not mine," he said. "They made the plays, they hit the shots, they came through at the end against a great team. They did it. It's their win."

ble. For anyone who loves the game, she has been a joy to watch.

"I've run out of things to say about Grace. She always know what to do. She just knows," said Worden.

"Grace? I'm just happy she decided to come to North," smiled McKay.

Minton began the season scoring points as a guard. When Umoren was hurt, she went inside and played the post. She is 5'7". She gave up seven and nine inches in two games last week, and combined for 22 points and 27 rebounds. She had a double-double in both games. She had 11 points and 10 rebounds against Quincy. North gave her plenty of help against Nicole Jorgensen (13 points), but it was Minton who did the hard, thankless work off the boards.

Three of her rebounds came off missed free throws when North was trying to waste the clock in the final minutes.

"We all helped, but it was Jane who did the boxing out," said McKay.

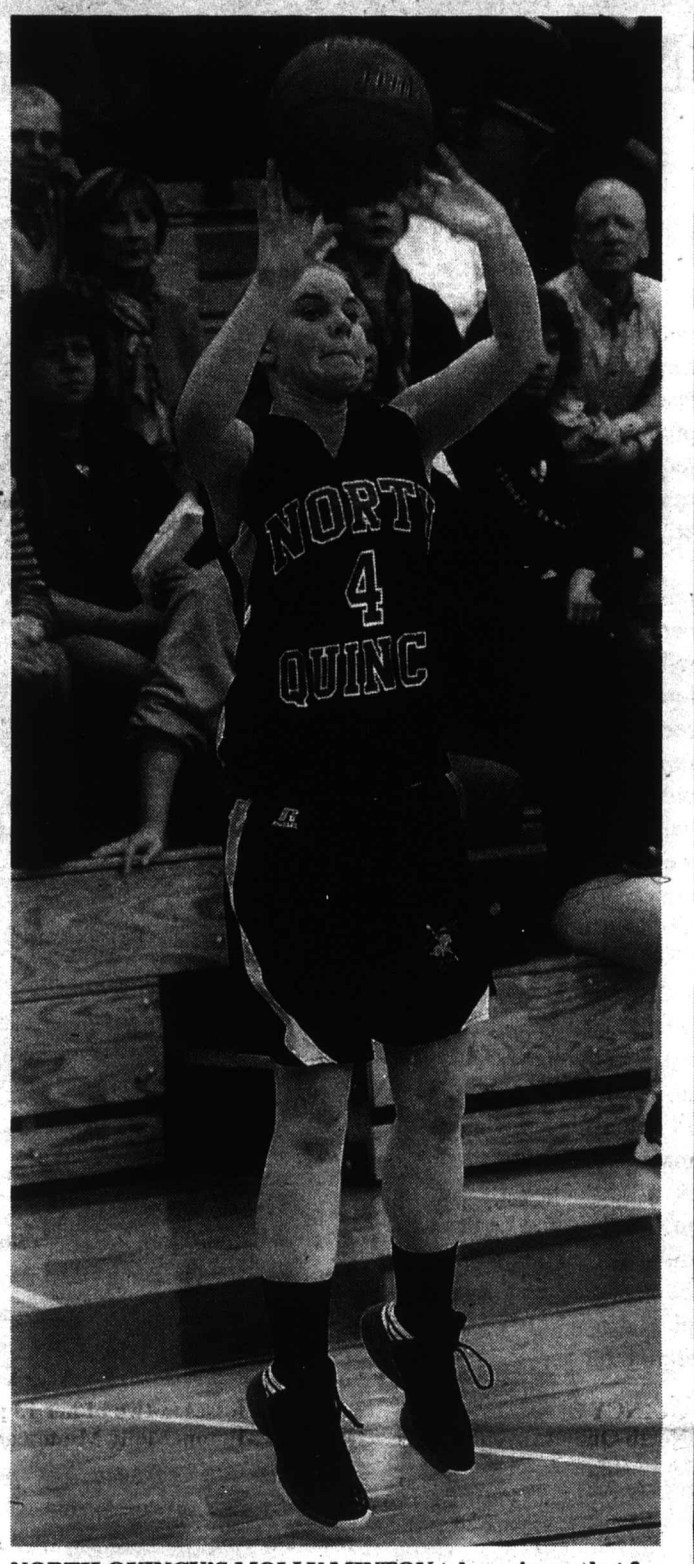

Even with Umoren, North is a small team. Without her, everybody had to go to the boards. Everybody - did. Against Quincy, Minton had 10 rebounds. McGue, McKay and Camille Mullaney had seven each. Geary had six. Five players shared 37 rebounds. They were able to scoop several rebounds off the bounce because the boxing-out was so good. That is a pretty good definition of rebounding as a team.

North led 12-5 after one and 23-15 at the half. Geary went on a spree, running 11 points and an assist in a two-minute blitz to hike the lead to 39-20 midway through the third.

It was here that Quincy played its best basketball, putting together a 12-0 run to end the period and cut the lead to 39-32. McArdle hit a fast-break layup and cashed an offensive rebound for a three-point play. Colleen Andrews drained a three. Jorgensen had a free-throw and an offensive rebound. The defense gave nothing. Quincy was right there, down by just 7 and on a roll.

"It was our best spurt," said coach Jeff Bretsch whose team finished the week at 7-12 overall and 5-7 in the league. "We pushed the tempo. The effort on defense was great and we were finally able to knock down an outside shot."

It was a game again. Enter Haley McKay. She swished two mid-range jumpers and made a terrific pass to set up a McGue basket and stretch the lead to 46-35 less than three minutes into the fourth.

NORTH QUINCY'S MOLLY MINTON takes a jump shot for the Red Raiders against Quincy.

"Those jump shots by Haley McKay were huge," said Bretsch. "We were on the cusp of a comeback, but her baskets gave North a big lift."

"I could feel our lead slipping away, so I wanted to step up," said McKay who was excellent on defense both out of the zone and in North's man-to-man. "I didn't want to force anything, but if the opportunity was there, I wanted to take the shot. It was my last Quincy game, so it was a good feeling when they went in."

North switched between a man-to-man and a zone in the early going. The Red Raiders settled on the zone with several players surrounding Jorgensen. Quincy had good looks at threes, but couldn't find the range with its outside shots which could have opened up the middle for Jorgensen.

"The shots were there for us, we just didn't make them. Scoring five points in the first quarter and getting down early against a good team is difficult to overcome," said Bretsch.

Gabby Jerahian and McArdle each had nine for Quincy. Alyssa Lydon cooly sank a pair of three-pointers and produced the most important winner of the night. She helped organize a fundraiser which was held during the game that raised more than $2,500 for the American Cancer Society in memory of her mother and Jerahian's father who died within the last year of the disease.

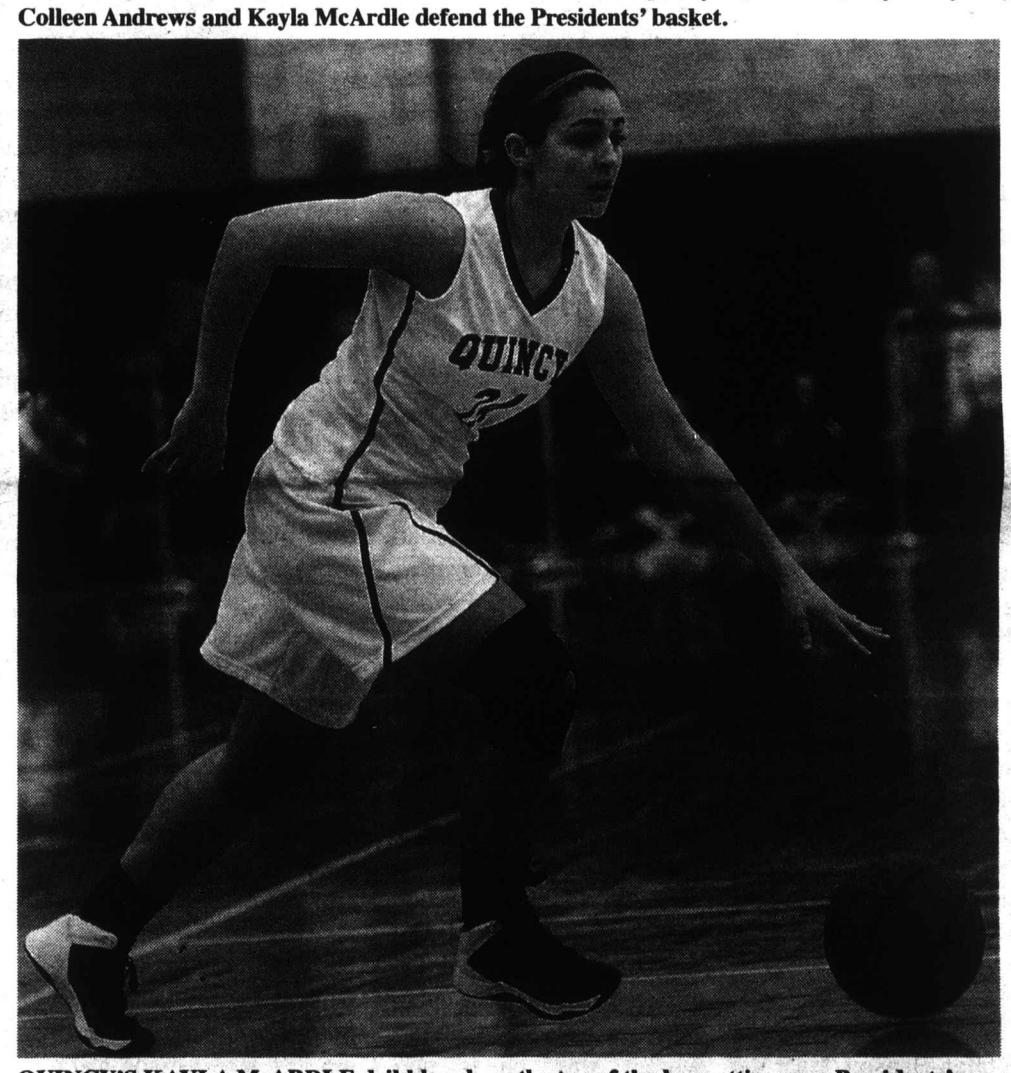

When Lydon found out that Mullaney and Sydney Chang of North had also lost family members to cancer, she reached out and included their memories in the moment of silence which preceded the game.

"I felt good that were were able to include Sidney and Camille's family," said Lydon. "I think the night meant a great deal to all of us. We played as hard as we could and that's all you can ask. North has a great team."

NQ (9), Quincy (7) On Boys, Girls All Star Teams

By BILL GRIFFIN

North Quincy's boys basketball team placed all five starters on the Patriot League All Star team and Quincy added four players to the squad. That is reason for pride, but the schools won a pair of awards that may well be more important, awards that show they don't only produce good basketball players, they produce good people.

Quincy won the Team Sportsmanship Award voted by the coaches. North won the sportsmanship award voted by the referees of Board 54. Last year North won the league award and Quincy won the award from the officials. North has won at least one of the awards in five of the last six years.

The two combined for a 22-4 Patriot League record. North finished the league undefeated at 13-0 and set the school record for the most consecutive games won in a regular season. All that is just fine. However, both coaches point to the sportsmanship awards as more telling than wins and losses.

"It's the whole purpose for doing this," said North coach Kevin Barrett. "You want to teach the kids lessons and how to act that will stay with them the rest of their lives."

"It reveals the character of the kids and that means a great deal to me," said Quincy coach Dave Parry.

There was a good example of this character off the court during the season. In the second Hingham game, James Lam scored the tying hoop with two seconds left in regulation, came within three steals of a quadruple-double and led his team to a thrilling double-overtime victory.

The next day it snowed. Lam and Jake Bergonzi, who played linebacker for the football team, walked from West Quincy to near Beechwood Knoll to shovel out retired Quincy High Principal Frank Santoro.

"That's a good example of the kind of kids they are," said Quincy coach Dave Parry.

North placed starters Kyle Richardson, Anthony Green, Efthim Butka, Matt Gerakis and Solomon Umoren on the squad.

"I can't recall a team placing all five starters on the all-star team since I've been coaching," said Barrett.

Quincy's boys team placed four players on the all-star squad: Lam, Brendan Cunningham, Drew Myers and J.T. Bain. Johnny Marsinelli won the Team Sportsmanship Award and Ken Sorensen was named top scholar-athlete on his team.

North's girls team, which shared the Fisher Division title with Hanover, put four seniors on the team: Grace Geary, Jane Minton, Maya Umoren, and Haley McKay. Marissa McGue won the Team Sportsmanship Award, and Minton was the top scholar-athlete on the team.

Kayla McArdle, Nicole Jorgensen, and Gabby Jerahian were league all stars from Quincy's girls team. Alyssa Lydon won the Team Sportsmanship Award while Colleen Andrews was named best scholar-athlete.

BASKETBALL ROUND-UP

By BILL GRIFFIN

The Patriot League season ended Friday night with the city boasting one undisputed division champion, a division co-champion and a second-place team which finished one game out of first place.

North Quincy's boys team won the Fisher Division title with a 13-0 record. North and Hanover shared the girls crown with 10-3 records.

Quincy boy's team (9-4) finished a game behind Whitman-Hanson in the chase for first in the Keenan Division. All three teams will participate in the Division 1 South Sectional Tourney. Pairings should be announced this weekend.

Quincy's girls team was eliminated in the race for second place in the Keenan Division and a tournament berth. Silver Lake clinched second in the division with a win over Whitman-Hanson Friday night.

Unfortunately for North Quincy, history did repeat itself Friday night when Quincy edged the Red Raiders, 51-49. North had won its first 19 games of the season.

In the 1965-66 season, North won its first 15 games before being upset by Quincy. It was North's only regular-season loss.

Dave Zink, Pete Varney and Paul Bregoli were members of the 1966 North team. Paul Beston, Paul Fitzpatrick and Jim Rendle were on the Quincy team. Fitzpatrick's free throws clinched the win for Quincy.

Fitzpatrick went to on coach Boston State. Rendle was a long-time North Quincy volleyball coach and athletic director for Quincy Public Schools.

Zink won a full scholarship to the University of Wisconsin and played Division 1 ball against opponents like Pete Maravich. Varney went on to play football at Harvard where he caught a pass for the two-point conversion in the final seconds that gave the Crimson its iconic 29-29 tie in 1968 against undefeated Yale. Bregoli is a long-time coach at North and currently coaches the girls soccer team.

In other action last week, North Quincy finished an unbeaten league schedule at 13-0 with a 70-30 win over Hanover. Jackie Chen came off the bench to score 14. Matt Gerakis added 13, Efthim Butka had 12 and Anthony Green chipped in with 11 as the Red Raiders placed four players in double figures.

Green also had six rebounds and five blocks.

Senior Brendan Cunningham had 15 points to lead a balanced attack as Quincy ended its league season in style with a 70-52 victory over Duxbury.

Christian Callahan scored 12 points while Colin Evans and Drew Myers added 11 apiece.

North Quincy's girls team came within an eyelash of a huge road win which could have clinched the division crown, falling 50-46 to Hanover.

North was once again without Patriot League All Star center Maya Umoren, but Jane Minton had a remarkable game with 11 points and 17 rebounds. Minton has played guard for her entire varsity career, but when her team needed her inside in Umroen's absence, Minton stepped up and has been invaluable.

Grace Geary had 17 points, seven assists, and six steals while Marissa McGue had another solid overall game with six points and seven rebounds. Haley McKay added seven points and another strong defensive game. Molly Minton chipped in with six for the Red Raiders

For the second time this season, Quincy's girls team battled unbeaten Duxbury in a close game before falling on the road, 45-38.

Sophomore center Nicole Jorgensen had 16 points and 19 rebounds for the Presidents.

NQ's Matt Gerakis Excels On And Off The Court

By BILL GRIFFIN

When North Quincy coach Kevin Barrett walked into the locker room at halftime of the Hanover game last week, Matt Gerakis approached him and made a request that the coach had never received from a player. Never.

"I carry a list of our offensive sets on a piece of paper in my pocket," said Barrett. "Matt asked if he could look at them. He wanted to see which ones we had run in the first half, which ones we had left for the second half. He talked about what we could get from them, which ones we might go to after halftime. I listened to him."

Exceptional academic intelligence is rare. Exceptional athletic intelligence is rare. To find them both in one-student athlete is remarkable. Gerakis is ranked No.1 academically in his junior class and he has used his high basketball IQ to flourish as an invaluable player in his first year as a starter for the Red Raiders in their season of making history.

Gerakis is averaging nearly 13 points a game. He is fifth in the Fisher Division in scoring and is one of the top ten scorers in the league. He is a Patriot League All Star for North who set a school record for most consecutive regular-season victories.

"He's so inquisitive. He's always asking about our offensive and defensive game plans. He's like a sponge," said Barrett. "It's come to the point where sometimes during timeouts, I'll defer to Matt. I'll look at him and ask if he has anything in mind."

When Barrett asks, Gerakis is prepared. A good student is always prepared.

"If you ask me what my biggest asset is as a player, I'd probably say my brain," Gerakis smiled. "I love being a student of the game. I'm always thinking, looking for what defenses the other team are playing, what matchups might work. When coach asks me, I always have an idea."

Intelligence is a gift. Academic and athletic success are not. Hard work is necessary to develop any talent and Barrett sees this daily with the way Gerakis goes about his business on and off the court.

"I'd be hard-pressed to name a more self-motivated kid or one with a stronger work ethic from the players

NORTH QUINCY'S MATT GERAKIS

I've coached," said Barrett. "That motivation and focus is what allows him to succeed in the classroom, and it's a big part of what he is as a basketball player as well."

Gerakis is more than a thinker. He can play. His game has no weakness. He shoots well from deep and medium range. He passes, plays defense, and helps on the boards. He handles the ball cleanly and can get to the hoop out of the set offense and on the break. He has the ability to function and finish at full speed which have made him and Kyle Richardson excellent partners in the running game.

"We ask so much of him. He's our second ball-handler behind Kyle, we need his outside shooting, and he often defends a good scorer," said Barrett.

His complete set of skills served Gerakis well when he took over the position Danny Gould played for last year's team which went to the sectional finals. He worked on his shooting, but few guards shoot like Gould. Gerakis understood that this was a different team, a different season, and that a different skill set at the position would work just fine. A student of the game.

"I worked on my shooting over the summer, but I certainly didn't think I could emulate Dan," he said. "I think we've been able to establish our own identity, independent from last year's team. I think the identity starts with our defense. The reason we are improved is that Anthony (Green) and Efthim (Butka) are so much better than they were last year."

Even his breakout game against Scituate when he scored 32 points on just 14 shots was as much a result of his basketball IQ as his physical ability. He understands the game, he knows basketball is the ultimate team sport which works best when the ball is shared and shots are taken by the player who has the best looks against a particular opponent on a particular night.

"Whenever we play a good team like Scituate or Quincy, I know they're going to concentrate on Anthony, Efthim and Kyle," he said. "In the Scituate game, it just left me with open shots. Everything came from within the offense. A few times when I drove to the basket, there was nobody there to guard me. They were worried about Kyle, Anthony and Efthim."

Balancing the demands of a varsity sport and challenging academic load can be difficult. A day only has so many hours. It is not a problem for Gerakis for a simple reason. He enjoys it.

"It's not a chore when you're having fun. I like school and I like basketball. I like doing both," said Gerakis.

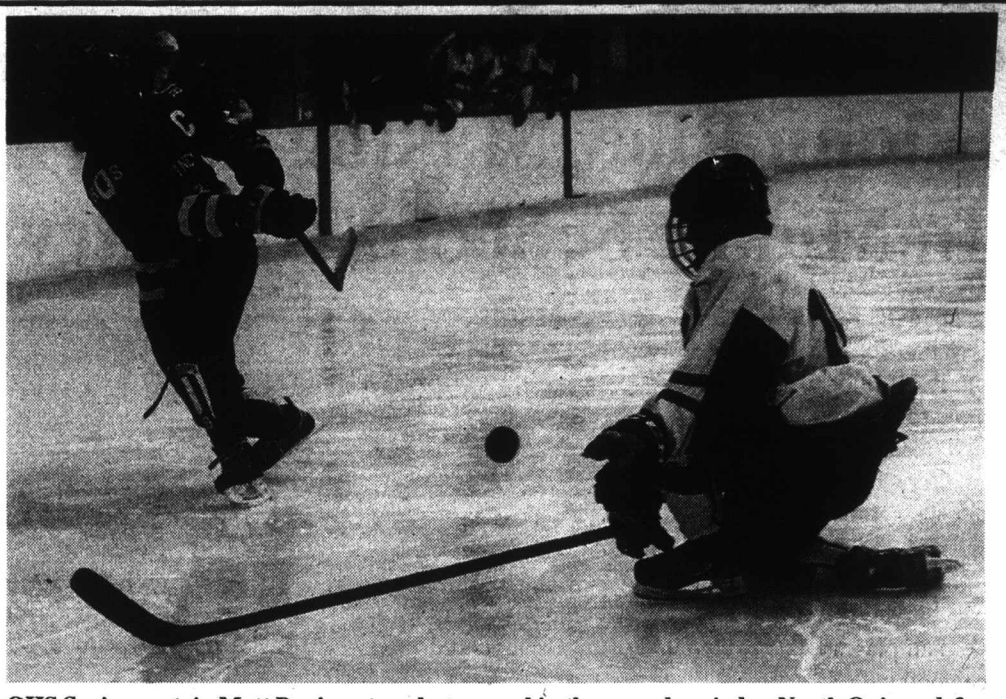

His coach appreciates well what he has in his junior thinker and player.

"I said at the beginning of the year that our success would depend on the play of our wing players," said Barrett. "A big part of wing play is making the right decisions. Matt's grade? An A-plus."

Just like in the classroom.

Presidents Ice Red Raiders In 5-1 Victory

By JOE REARDON

The Quincy locker room was as loud as it's been all season after its second showdown of the season against North Quincy Saturday evening at the Quincy Skating Arena.

And why not? With the snow coming down outside, the Presidents were taking care of business inside and moved one step closer to the postseason.

Brian O'Callaghan put up a pair of goals and Pat Donovan, Pat Freeman and Steve Ross had single tallies to give Quincy a decisive 5-1 win over the Red Raiders. John Ross McEvilly broke up Ryan Higgins' shutout bid with 1:41 left for North Quincy's lone tally.

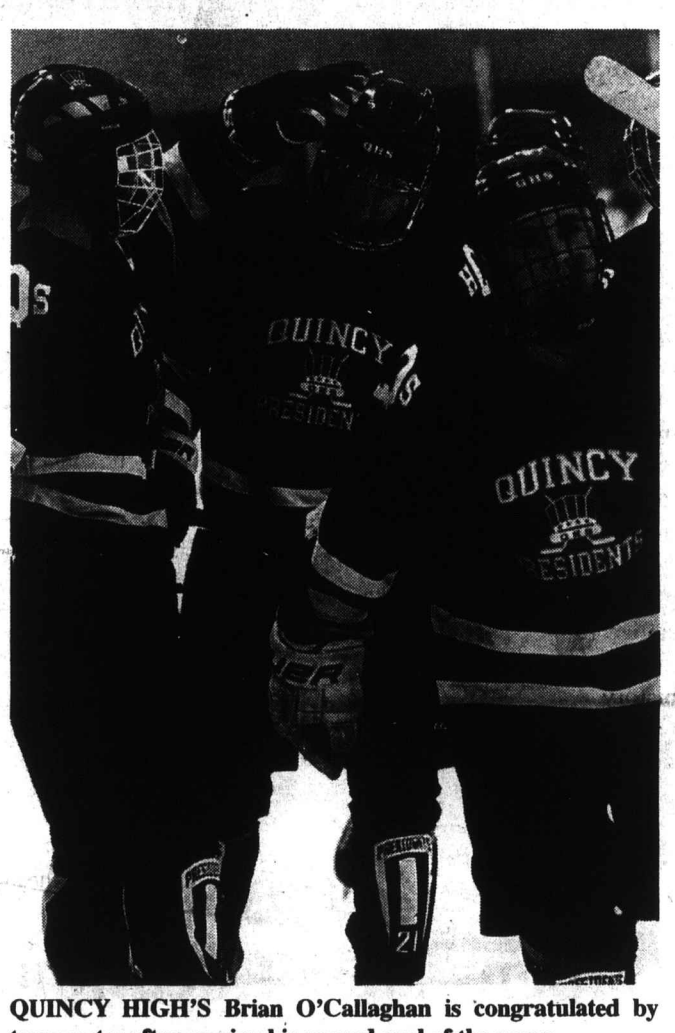

The victory put the Presidents at 10-8-1 on the season, but because two of those victories were against Cambridge and didn't have tournament implications, Ted Walsh's crew needs to win two of its three games this week or win one and tie one to qualify for the Div. 2 South tourney.

As far as wins go, beating North Quincy for the second time this season in front of a packed crowd on Senior Night heading into winter vacation was as good as it gets.

"This was absolutely huge," said Walsh. "They're (North Quincy) already in so there was no pressure on them. All the pressure was on us and we responded.

"It was a Quincy, North Quincy game; up and down, hard fought, hitting and penalties. For us it was a tournament game. They're all going to be tournament games for us until we make the tournament."

Nolan Greene was sharper between the posts for the Red Raiders than the score would indicate with his 17 saves. The North Quincy goaltender made a great save on a Jake Hallisey wrist shot in the opening minutes of the game, but Quincy's solid play in the Red Raiders' zone paid off early.

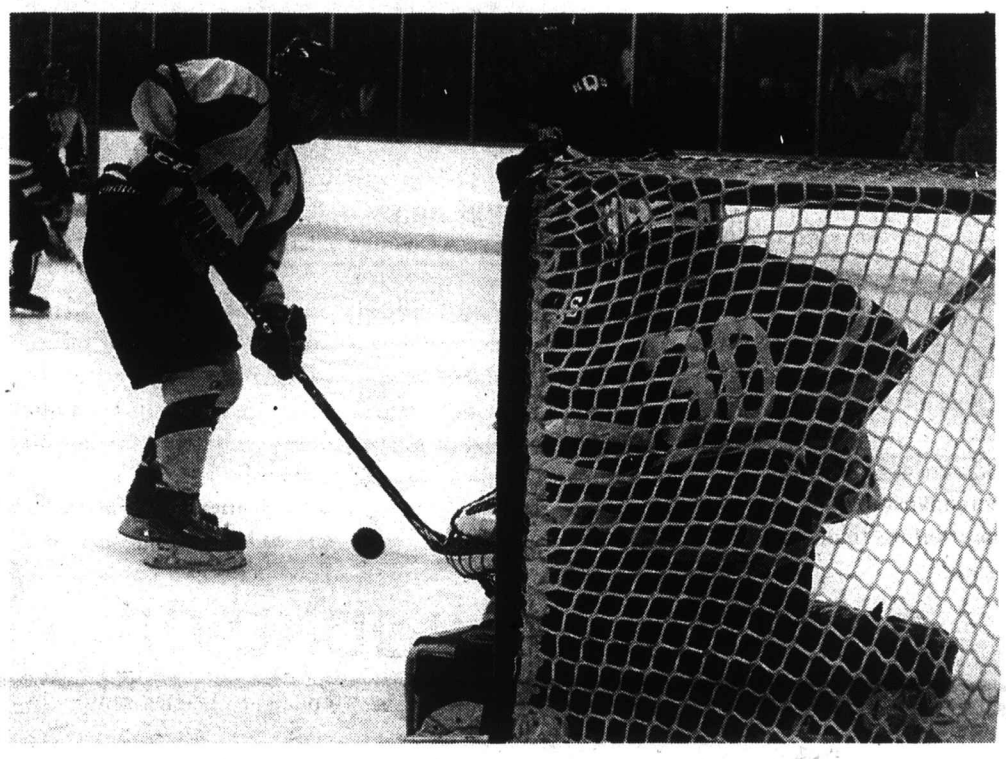

QUINCY HIGH'S Brian O'Callaghan is congratulated by teammates after scoring his second goal of the game.

Pat Donovan unleashed a wicked slap shot from 30 feet out that beat Greene top shelf to give the Presidents a 1-0 lead 3:19 into the first period.

O'Callaghan led Quincy with seven shots on Greene and he picked up his first goal of the game with 5:13 left in the first when he uncorked a quick wrister on a break down the wing to give the Presidents a 2-0 advantage. O'Callaghan very nearly had his second goal in the final minute of the period, but Greene smothered the slap shot that was headed for the short side.

Quincy's ability to carry out the game plan put together by Walsh and his staff has been a big reason

Central Seventh Grader Wins State Meet

John Riley Making Mark In Middle School X-Country

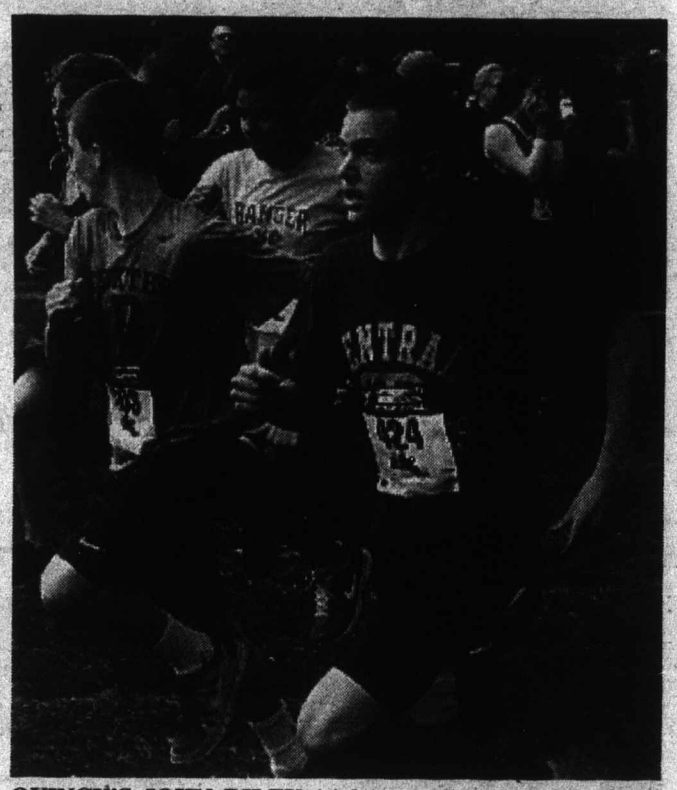

By JOE REARDON

When John Riley surged into the lead of the seventh-grade race at the Massachusetts Middle School Cross Country Championships last fall, he figured it would be short lived and another harrier would inevitably take over first place.

That scenario never came close to being played out in what was the defining race of Riley's short career during a very eventful autumn.

Riley had taken full command of the 243-runner field over the thick, spongy grass of the Ponkapoag Golf Course in Canton. The hard-running Central Middle School harrier started his kick from 400 yards out and no one was able to respond to the brazen move. He crossed the finish line of the 1.8-mile course in 9:59, putting him seven seconds in front of runner-up Charlie Donahue of Belmont Hill in a most unexpected but exhilerating victory.

"I really wanted to come in the top 15," said Riley. "I never thought I'd get first. There's a lot of private schools that start with seventh grade and I knew there'd be a lot of competition."

QUINCY'S JOHN RILEY (right) won in the 2013 Middle School State Cross-Country Championship for 7th grade boys.

Riley rarely looks back to get a gauge on his lead, but he was able to catch a glimpse of Donahue around a hairpin turn with less than 800 yards to go. For a fleeting moment, Riley thought Donahue was going to run him down. Instead, Riley surged hard and put the race away.

"I didn't look back except for one time on a turn," said Riley. " I could see him on the side of me. That was near the end and when I looked at him then I could tell he was closing on me. I was almost positive he'd pass me. I ended up running really hard the last 400 yards.

"I started out in sixth then made my way up to third. We made the turn onto the second lap and that's when I took the lead."

That Riley won and won so decisively shouldn't have been a big surprise. The previous year he ran to a solid sixth-place finish in the sixth-grade race, crossing the finish line as the first public school harrier. And earlier in the month, Riley dominated the city middle school championships at Pageant Field, covering the picturesque 1.7-mile double-loop layout in a swift 8:46 and crossing the finish line nearly 100 yards in front of the second-place runner.

The win came on the heels of a third-place finish in the sixth grade when he ran 9:28. Riley took the lead early and turned it into a rout as he traversed the winding trails in the woods around Pageant Field with the second runner nowhere in sight.

Riley's trademark front-running strategy played into both races last fall during his undefeated season on the trails. "Normally, I'm in the lead after the first 50 meters," he said. "I really run hard on the straightaways. I can just take off and really get going. I know if I really start hurting, I have to keep the lead."

Riley is especially looking forward to the track season after a successful spring campaign last year. He was a strong second in the 800 in the city championships and was part of the winning 4x400 relay team from Central. Riley wants to make the move up to the mile, a distance he believes he's more suited for, and is looking to dip under the 5-minute barrier.

Riley will also continue to compete in road races throughout the year. He's already put together an impressive resume to go with his exploits in cross country and track. Riley churned out 6:25 miles to win his age group at the enormously popular Jim Kane Sugar Bowl 5K last July. His time of 19:52 put him 29 seconds in front of the second-place finisher and placed him 51st overall in the 1,350-runner field. Riley had a huge summer on the roads with age-group victories in the Bill Dunn Jr. race, The Squirrel Run and the Merrymount Beach Association race. In his debut road race in 2012, Riley won his age group, clocking 37:00 for five miles in the Smegs Legs event.

Riley's biggest challenge will come in the fall when he takes aim at Mike Mullaney's Pageant Field course-record time of 8:17. The run at the record could very well come when Riley looks to defend his city title. "I really want to win it again," he said. "I hope to go undefeated like I did last year."

Quincy/North Quincy's Randall Kwong Swims At States

Junior Randall Kwong (NQ) represented Quincy/North Quincy (6-2-1, 4-2-1 Patriot League) at the boys States Swimming and Diving Championships Feb. 16 at Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge.

Kwong, a Patriot League All-Star, swam 24.31 for 53rd in the 50-yard freestyle and 54.20 for 46th in the 100 freestyle. QNQ was one of 60 teams that qualified for the meet.

The Quincy/North Quincy boys had another standout season. After not finishing higher than sixth in the previous four seasons under Coach Bob McGillicuddy's tutelage, the QNQ boys squad placed third with 170 points behind Duxbury and Hingham at the Patriot League Championships Feb. 1-2. Their 4-1-1 dual meet record in the league this season was the most wins during McGillicuddy's tenure.

Overall, Quincy/North Quincy amassed six victories in each of the last two seasons after totaling only five wins through the first three seasons.

Q/NQ Teams Compete At State Swimming, Diving Championships

The Quincy and North Quincy girls teams competed at the States Swimming and Diving Championships Feb. 15 at Massachusetts Institute of Technology in Cambridge. Quincy (3-7, 2-6 Patriot League) placed 31st out of the 48 teams that qualified, and North Quincy (4-6, 3-5 Patriot League) was 33rd.

Quincy freshman diver Bailee Carey amassed a personal-best 353.35 points for sixth in the States competition after placing 17th the previous weekend at the South Sectional meet.

For the third consecutive week, North Quincy junior Rachel O'Driscoll swam in the 200-yard freestyle and 100 butterfly. She clocked a personal-best time of 2:00.23 for 10th in the 200 free and raced 1:02.93 for 15th overall in the 100 butterfly. O'Driscoll joined teammates Sarah Tran, Lauren Thorne and Evlyn Scuzzarella whose time of 1:53.95 in the 200 freestyle relay earned them 27th.

Head Coach Bob McGillicuddy was asked to hand out ribbons and medals in the 100-yard backstroke event. He was one of only 12 coaches selected to hand out the event honors.

Peak Physical Therapy Opens New Location In Quincy

Norwell resident Eric Edelman, owner of Peak Physical Therapy, recently opened a new location in Quincy at 2300 Crown Colony Drive.

Peak Physical Therapy, with locations in Scituate and Norwell, specializes in Sports Therapy, Spine Therapy, Orthopedics, Women's Health, Vestibular Disorders, and TMJ. In addition to treating patients with hands-on manual therapy and high-tech treatment and training, Peak also has an aquatic program for patients with severe pain and those benefiting from reduced weight-bearing exercise.

"The greatest part about working with kids in our Sports Therapy Program is that, in addition to helping them get back into the game, most times they actually expand and enhance their skill set," said Eric.

According to the Center of Disease Control, nearly 30 million children and adolescents participate in youth sports in the United States, with 3.5 million children under the age of 14 receiving medical treatment for sports injuries each year. Over-training injuries account for almost half of the injuries in middle school and high school participants.

Orla M. Murray

A funeral Mass for Orla M. Murray of Quincy and formerly Clonmel, County Tipperary, Ireland, was celebrated Feb. 15 at St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Murray died Feb. 9 at Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston.

The beloved wife of Eric Murray and daughter of Maureen and the late Patrick, she was born in Ireland and came to the United States in 1989. Her first community of friends began during her work as a nanny in Boston but her compassionate nature blossomed in her dedication and commitment to a career in nursing. Beginning as a nurse's aide, Mrs. Murray's love of nursing led her to pursue advanced education and she would have proudly received her bachelor's degree in nursing this spring.

Her intelligence, sense of humor, energy and empathy filled the lives of family and friends throughout her life. Her partner in life, her husband Eric Murray, a fellow Irishman, was her best friend and soul mate and they celebrated over two decades of friendship and almost fourteen years of marriage.

ORLA M. MURRAY

A large extended family in the United States and Ireland grieve the loss of her presence and friendship and include her Mother Maureen, her sister Deirdre and brother Padraig and a large extended family of her husband's family. Mrs. Murray's love of her nieces and nephews, cousins, aunts and uncles was returned with love in full measure. She will be sadly missed by the family of friends that she and her husband Eric created in the United States.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Your efforts in behalf of a colleague do not go unnoticed, let alone unappreciated. Meanwhile, arrange to spend more time investigating that troubling fact you recently uncovered.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Devoting a lot of time to a current career move means having less time for those in your private life. But once you explain the circumstances, they should understand and be supportive.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Organizing your many duties in order of importance should help you get through them pretty quickly. Additional information puts that still-to-be-made decision in a new light.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Lingering bad feelings over a recent misunderstanding should fade as reconciliation efforts continue. Meanwhile, vacation plans might need to be revised because of new developments.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Love dominates the Lion's heart this week, with Cupid shooting arrows at single Leos and Leonas looking for romance. Partnered pairs also enjoy strengthened relationships.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) "Getting to Know You" should be the single Virgo's theme song as you and that special person discover more about one another. That workplace situation needs looking into.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might be upset at having your objectivity questioned in the handling of a dispute. But it would be wise to re-examine your feelings to make sure you're being fair with both sides.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A family dispute creates mixed feelings about how you hope it will be ultimately resolved. Best advice: Stay out of it and let the involved parties work it through by themselves.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Making an effort to smooth over even the smallest obstacles now will go a long way to assuring that things run smoothly once you're set to move on with your plans.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A challenge to your authority can be upsetting, but your longtime supporters want you to defend your position so you can win over even your most adamant detractors.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Being unable to get involved in a friend's problem calls for an honest approach. Provide explanations, not excuses. Another friend might be able to offer support for your decision.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) You find yourself swimming in circles, looking for some way to get back on a straight course. But things get easier once you're able to refocus your energies.
BORN THIS WEEK: You're known for your charm and your wisdom, and there's no one who wouldn't want you to be part of his or her life.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

for the Presidents' surge late in the season.

"We're very focused right now. In practice we put in a game plan and they execute it," said Walsh. They get all the credit. Any coach can coach but unless the kids listen and execute it's not going to get better.

"It really says something about the character of the kids in the locker room. We've won three of the last four and we're on a little roll. Hopefully we can keep it rolling in the right direction. They just keep responding. They just keep on fighting."

North Quincy (9-6-2) had its best offensive output in the second period and had a golden opportunity to cut into the Presidents' lead with a 5-on-3 power play, but were unable to get a shot on Higgins thanks to some solid defense by Quincy in its own end. McEvilly had the best scoring bid of the period with 48.7 seconds left when his hard backhander directly in front of the net was smothered by Higgins.

North Quincy, which has had its ticket to the tournament stamped, fell behind early and was never able to put together a consistent presence in the Presidents' end.

"Quincy just outplayed us," North Quincy head coach Matt Gibbons shrugged. "They were tougher than us. They deserved to win. We didn't capitalize. We weren't able to take advantage of the chances we did get. When you don't do that you put yourself in a hole and you wind up running around late trying to get something together."

With three games left coming into the week, the Red Raiders were looking to move up on the seeding chart and help themselves before postseason action begins.

"We'll still go with what we've been doing all year," said Gibbons. "Because at the end of the day we do have something to play for. There are six points to get. If we can get those six points we're talking the top half (of the seeds) instead of the bottom half.

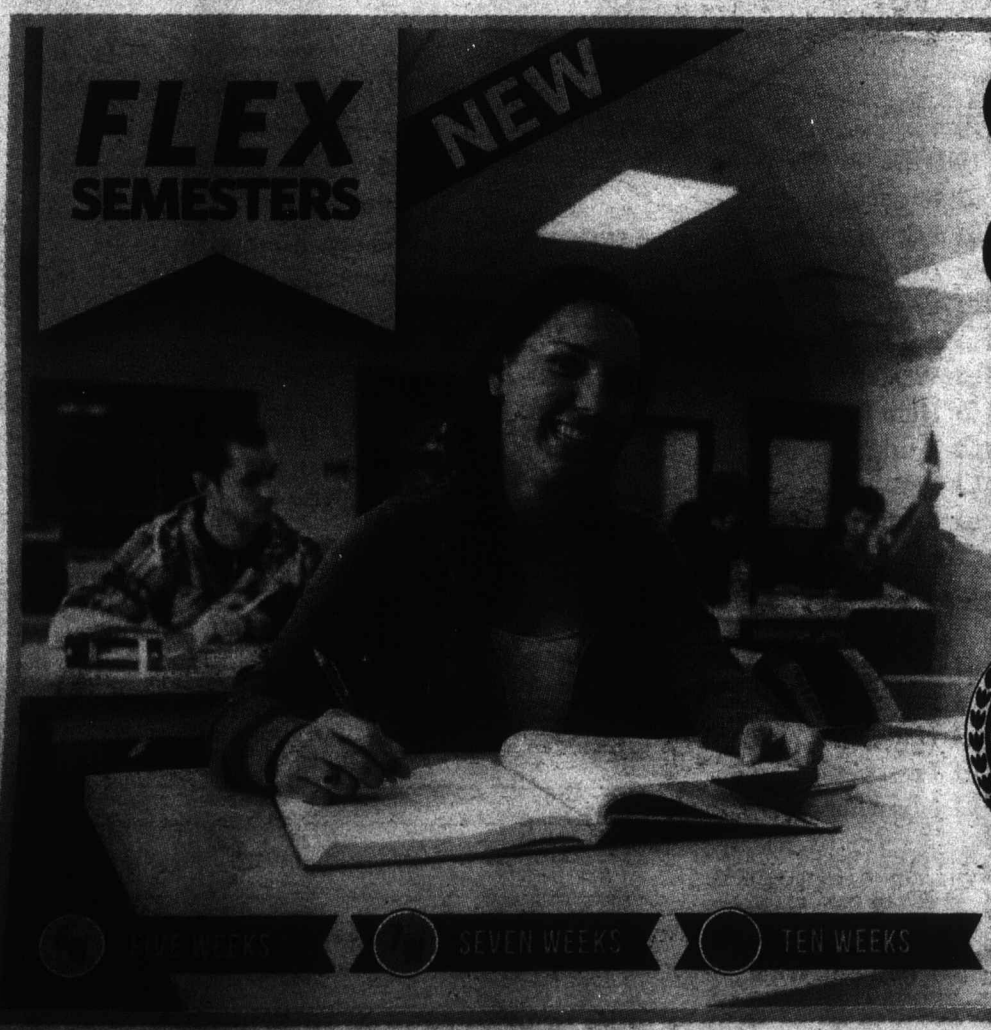

"The longer you can avoid the top couple of seeds the better off you are. We want to get ourselves at least in the middle of the pack and go from there."

The Red Raiders needed a goal early in the third period to keep pace with Quincy, but it was the Presidents who added to the lead, putting North Quincy in a deep hole in the process. Pat Freeman picked up a rebound in front of Greene and stuffed it home for the big 3-0 lead with 3:10 left to play in the game.

Gibbons pulled Greene twice in the final 3:30 in favor of an extra skater, but the Red Raiders weren't able to get to Higgins. McEvilly finally got to Higgins when he stickhandled through the Quincy defense and snapped a shot between his legs to make it 4-1 with 1:41 left. O'Callaghan picked up his second goal on an empty netter just before McEvilly's tally and Steve Ross closed out the scoring with an empty net goal with 1:26 remaining.

Trish Bossart can't emphasize enough the importance for people to take the time to learn how to administer CPR.

It was the CPR performed by a pair of MBTA workers, Fallon Ambulance EMTs and medical personnel at the Quincy Medical Center that ultimately saved her 24-year-old son Kevin after he suffered a heart attack, fell backwards down six stairs and slammed his head on the concrete floor at the Wollaston MBTA station back on Jan. 27. Kevin has a genetic condition called hypertrophic cardiomyopathy that causes sudden cardiac arrest.

"It's just so important for people to be trained in CPR because you never know when you'll be faced with an emergency situation – a life or death situation," said Trish.

MBTA employees Tomas Gonzales and Karen Kane jumped to action immediately after Kevin hit his head and lost consciousness. Kane called 911 and the pair began to administer CPR. The process kept blood flowing to Kevin's brain and ultimately saved him from brain damage.

That Gonzales, a certified CPR instructor for the MBTA, happened to be at the Wollaston station was a stroke of luck. "The irony was he's not normally at that station," said Trish. "He just happened to be there that day."

EMTs shocked Kevin ten times with paddles to no avail and doctors continued CPR on him for another hour and a half before a slight heartbeat returned. Trish commended the work Dr. Michael Snyder, M.D. in the emergency room.

"He encouraged his staff to continue CPR and we're so thankful for their efforts," she said.

He was immediately transferred to Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston where he lapsed into a coma. Kevin wasn't expected to survive the

City Appealing Flood Zone Maps

Without Revision, 4,000 Property Owners Would Pay Higher Insurance Premiums

By SCOTT JACKSON

With up to 4,100 property owners facing higher flood insurance premiums because of proposed new flood zone maps, the city is working with an engineering firm to appeal those maps.

The new flood insurance rate maps (FIRMs) proposed by the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) would place 1,400 properties currently outside of flood zones into special flood hazard areas, according to Joseph D. Shea, senior vice president of the engineering firm Woodard & Curran. Owners of properties in the special flood hazard areas with federally insured or regulated mortgages are required to purchase flood insurance. An additional 2,700 properties already in flood zones would be placed in higher risk zones, which could cause increases in their premiums.

During a community meeting devoted to flood insurance held Feb. 20 at Central Middle School, Mayor Thomas Koch told the crowd of 300 residents and city and state officials present that the city has contracted with Woodard & Curran to appeal the maps using the best information available.

"The city has engaged Woodard & Curran to challenge the maps that FEMA has produced – challenge

After Developer Placed On Notice

Officials Remain Optimistic On Downtown Project

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch and other officials remain optimistic about the revitalization of Quincy Center even as developer Street-Works' involvement with the project may be coming to an end.

On Feb. 19, Koch placed Street-Works on notice after the company missed a November deadline to file key documents related to the first stages of downtown redevelopment. Under terms of the city's land disposition agreement with Street-Works, signed in January 2011, the company has 30 days to address, or cure, the problem or it could be forced out of the project altogether.

Koch announced he was placing the developer in default during the Feb. 18 City Council meeting. During his remarks that night, the mayor said the project would continue to move forward, with or without Street-Works. He also noted that key infrastructure projects, the rerouting of Town Brook and constructing the Walter J. Hannon Parkway, have been completed while planning is taking place for Adams Green and a new bridge at Cliveden Street. Those projects, Koch said, will set the table for any redevelopment of Quincy Center.

"The table is set. Town Brook being moved is huge. Hannon Parkway being done is huge. The Adams Green moving forward is huge. The bridge being added is also a tremendous value. We've set the table, as someone once said, 'maybe the dinner guests change but the table is set.' I believe we're going to be moving forward with Street-Works or perhaps without Street-Works," Koch said.

"We've made tremendous progress and I'd like to underscore that because though there aren't those visible buildings going up quite yet, there is an incredible amount of infrastructure that we've accomplished together that now allows that to happen."

the maps with science, with due diligence," Koch explained. "The city has committed substantial revenue to that task. We believe if we have to make the case, we have to make the case with good science and good information."

Other communities are already appealing the flood maps and have said FEMA's coastal modeling is not applicable to the Atlantic coast. Shea said his firm would base the appeal on the model being used by those communities.

"The city has outlined a plan to do some coastal modeling using a different model than the one that was used to date to produce the proposed maps – that's the model the City of Boston is using and the model that Plymouth County has used – to do their own analysis within the city to determine how to best file a letter of map revision to those neighborhoods that should not be in the special flood hazard zones," Shea said.

The meeting at Central was co-hosted by Koch and U.S. Rep. Stephen F. Lynch. In an interview with The Sun prior to the flood forum, Lynch explained why the Pacific model used by FEMA does not work for the Atlantic coast.

"They were using a Pacific wave model on the East Coast, which is much, much different. There, the waves roll in completely unobstructed. It's a very deep drop off the California coast so there's nothing to stop any wave action, which is why they have great surf," Lynch said.

"For us, the topography is much more gradual. You've got sandbars. You've got harbor islands. You've got topographical features like Cape Cod that shield a lot of the inner harbor properties. And so we think that the science is faulty that they're using to predict what the storm surge is using, what the wave action will look like."

At the Central meeting, Lynch explained the potential repeal of the Flood Insurance Reform Act of 2012. That act forced FEMA to charge the actual rate for flood insurance, and not a subsidized rate. Those changes were made because recent severe storms such as Hurricanes Katrina and Sandy had depleted the National Flood Insurance Program of cash.

Lynch, a South Boston Democrat, is one of more than 230 sponsors of the proposed Grimm-Waters Bill, named for its sponsors U.S. Reps. Michael Grimm (R-NY) and Maxine Waters (D-CA). The bill would delay implementation of the 2012 act for up to four years by requiring FEMA to conduct an affordability study, which would then be sent to Congress for review.

The Grimm-Waters Bill is still pending in the House, while companion legislation has passed in the Senate. Lynch said House Speaker John Boehner (R-OH) has not let Grimm-Waters come to a vote in that chamber, but a similar bill may be voted on this week.

Officials from FEMA also attended the meeting. Robert Desaulniers, an insurance specialist with the agency, explained the two ways residents who are being placed into the special flood hazard areas can be grandfathered into lower rates.

The first type of grandfathering, known as the preferred risk policy, applies to residents whose houses are being mapped into a high risk zone from a low risk zone. Instead of paying the full cost, they would pay a lower premium that would increase over the years until reaching the regular cost for that zone.

The second type of grandfathering applies to houses built or substantially improved since December 31, 1974, when the first flood insurance rate maps for Quincy were issued. Those property owners may be eligible to qualify for a lower rate based on the FIRM in effect when the house was built or substantially improved.

ABOUT 300 citizens attended last Thursday's flood forum and FEMA map update at Central Middle School. The forum included a question and answer segment. The new flood insurance rate maps proposed by the Federal Emergency Management Agency would place 1,400 properties currently outside of flood zones into special hazard areas, according to an engineer.

Desaulniers advised residents to contact an insurance agent to see if they would be eligible for either discount.

Copies of the proposed flood insurance maps are viewable in the city engineer's office at 55 Sea Street during regular business hours. Officials at the meeting indicated they planned to put the proposed maps online on the GIS Property Viewer found on the city's website, quincyma.gov. The night, but he remained in a coma where his prognosis was still very questionable. "The doctors warned us that even if he survived they didn't know what his brain capabilities would be," said Trish said.

Kevin gradually regained some strength and woke from his coma after six days. He remained at Brigham and Women's for 2-1/2 weeks and another week at the Spaulding Rehabilitation Center in Charlestown before going home last Thursday. Kevin is getting stronger every day and is anxious to get back into a routine.

Trish said the outpouring of support from friends and family has been overwhelming. Teammates he played baseball with at Southern New Hampshire University visited him as well as several teachers, some going all the way back to elementary school.

"There were people we haven't heard from for years who contacted us," said Trish. "It really brought a lot of people from this community together."

There are ongoing fundraisers for Kevin that have been set up by his friends. One friend, Rachel Dobinski is running the Boston Marathon and raising money for Kevin's bills. She is sponsoring a fundraiser at the Cask & Flagon on March 29 from 6 to 9 p.m. People can purchase Boston Strong t-shirts for $15.

NQHS Campus Plan Before Finance Committee

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council's finance committee will review the first phase of Mayor Thomas Koch's proposal to expand North Quincy High's campus and renovate Teel and O'Neil Fields at its meeting on Monday, March 3, at 6:30 p.m.

Under the mayor's proposal, which he unveiled late last year, the city would purchase nine houses on Hunt Street and Newbury Avenue. They would be razed to make way for a parking lot on Hunt Street and two new retaining ponds, one on Newbury Avenue and one on Hunt Street. Koch told the council the parking lot would accommodate 157 vehicles, providing a net gain of 127 parking spaces for North Quincy High. That would help alleviate congestion on Hunt Street.

"Many of you have gone to athletic events at night on Hunt Street. It's a disaster trying to navigate your way through there and try and find a parking spot," Koch told the council. "Many of you were at the Lunar New Year Festival on Sunday – no easy task to find parking for that as well."

The mayor said his proposal would also improve drainage on Hunt Street as well as create a new drop-off and pick-up zone for the high school.

Under the plan, Teel Field would be rebuilt with a new FieldTurf playing surface and outfitted for football, soccer, and lacrosse. A new, 600-seat grandstand would be constructed, as well as a scoreboard, concessions, restrooms, a sound system, and lighting.

Before the work on Teel Field takes place, the mayor wants to renovate O'Neil Field on the grounds of Atlantic Middle School. Koch wants to renovate that field this summer so North could use O'Neil Field while Teel Field is renovated between September 2014 and April 2015.

During the most recent council meeting on Feb. 18, Koch submitted a requested appropriation of $1.56 million. Of that appropriation, $425,000 would go towards the improvement of O'Neil Field at Atlantic Middle School, $685,000 would go towards drainage repairs at Atlantic, and $450,000 would be for preliminary legal and engineering work related to the proposed improvements to North Quincy High's campus and Teel Field.

"This program would deal with a number of drainage issues at Atlantic," Koch said. "It would change and re-arrange the driveway areas providing more parking to the facility and give us a brand new athletic facility there, which North Quincy High could slide down the street and use, along with Atlantic, when we take Teel out of action."

The mayor said he is planning to finance the project, which is projected to cost a total of $12 million, with a number of revenue sources. The proposed $1.56 million appropriation would be

STICKING TO THE CARAT APPROACH

Gemstones are sold by carat weight, but do you know how much one carat weighs? In ancient times, the term originated when gemstones were weighed against the carob bean. Although the weights of the beans varied slightly, each bean weighed about one carat. By 1913, carat weight was standardized internationally and adapted to the metric system so that one carat equaled one-fifth of a gram (200 milligrams). Because the term "carat" is more romantic than referring to gemstone weight in terms of fractions of grams, it is the preferred unit of weight for gemstones. As for the unit of weight known as the "point," which is used to express the weight of smaller gemstones, it is equal to 0.01 carats.

While most often a carat is a unit of weight for diamonds and other gemstones, a karat, when used with gold, is used as a unit of purity-- 24-karat gold is pure gold. When purchasing gemstones or gold, the carat weight or karat purity may affect the value of your purchase. As a couple, select the perfect diamond engagement ring, earrings, or pendants at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center or contact us at 617-773-3636.

Moving Forward

The city's impending breakup with Street-Works as the lead developer in the ambitious $1.6 billion redevelopment of Quincy Center signals a new start for one of the most important issues in the city today.

And to that end, we'd like to make a suggestion:

A public hearing or community meeting should be scheduled to bring all parties up to date on what transpired between the city and Street-Works and how Quincy is moving forward with its new lead developer, Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company.

The city council hears quarterly updates on the downtown issue but we're advocating a meeting larger in scope.

A public hearing or meeting held in a large auditorium – perhaps Quincy High School – where interested and concerned citizens and taxpayers can ask questions about the future of the downtown and receive answers from elected officials and the developers.

We certainly hope that – down the road – the change from Street-Works to Quincy Mutual will turn out to be a very positive development – perhaps even a watershed moment.

Quincy Mutual is a local company with deep community roots. The company employs more than 200 workers and its leaders are active in the community. And they have shown good faith with an investment of at least $20 million in the redevelopment.

Mayor Thomas Koch trumpeted Quincy Mutual's new lead role in his update to city councillors last Tuesday night.

"Partners may change, but the plan and the potential for a new Quincy Center remains fully intact. We are thrilled that a company with a history, reputation and experience of Quincy Mutual is expanding its role."

The mayor also noted that there's been tangible progress in the downtown, notably the opening of the Walter J. Hannon Parkway and the relocation of the Town Brook. Without these two projects, the rest of the downtown doesn't have a chance to get off the drawing board.

And the mayor deserves credit for accomplishing both. The Hannon Parkway was on many mayoral agendas dating back to the early 1970s but for one reason or another, never came to fruition. Relocating the brook was never really seen as feasible – nor practical – but today it is reality.

Still, some remain skeptical that the first phase of the downtown redevelopment – Merchants Row in the area of 1400 Hancock Street – may never be built. Development on Block 4 was halted last fall and construction now is not expected to begin until next year.

But city leaders - including the mayor - are bullish and confident the downtown will reach that next stage of construction.

That's where a community meeting comes in to play.

Straight answers from straight questions posed by concerned citizens.

With eyes fixed on the future - not blame games.

Councillor Doug Gutro is correct when he said, "The single most important thing we can do at this point is look forward and to figure out what does that forward looking vision look like? Is it pieces of different projects? Is it one block at a time? Or will we once again have the vision and the master plan and the land disposition agreement?"

Those are just some of the questions that need to be answered.

And there are others.

What will Block 4 – Merchants Row – finally look like after the latest design concept is finished?

Will the project be built by union labor?

Why will Quincy Mutual be able to pull off what Street-Works didn't?

Speaking of Street-Works, don't they have some responsibility to the public as to why they couldn't meet project milestones and thus were put on notice by Mayor Koch that, ultimately, will probably mean they will not be part of any future development in Quincy Center?

We may never know that answer.

But if there are lessons to be learned we hope they are revealed so they are not repeated.

We're not advocating finger-pointing.

Just answers.

And as a business located in the square for more than 40 years, we are optimistic that the downtown project can get traction again and real results occur.

But with so much that has transpired over the last six months – and what hasn't transpired – we think the citizens of Quincy deserve a full accounting of what happened and we do we go from here.

The city has made progress.

We hope it can continue moving forward.

READERS FORUM

A Hole In The Ground Downtown And Despair

I had the news of downtown development on the periphery of my consciousness.

A fact came out the information ether which has drawn my attention to the overreaching plans which have finally faced reality.

The fact is that the initial plan was the building of two, 20-story buildings in downtown adjacent to the Granite Trust building. A 20-story building is 260 feet high. The Granite Trust is 10 stories high.

It is hard to imagine that such tall buildings would blend into downtown architecture.

Quincy is a small city, not a metropolis. It reminds me of the poem which states "look upon my works ye mighty and despair."

This might have been the original political intent although now the citizens can look at the hole in ground in downtown and despair. Another mighty work would be the huge statues planned for the park in front of city hall.

A paean to grandiosity that one can only hope which reality will also kibosh.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920 postcard view of the Purity Lunch that was located at 73 East Howard Street in a building owned by the Fore River Shipyard in Quincy Point. Claus Samuelson, shown here with his wife, Lavina, operated this lunch counter restaurant for almost 20 years. Although it doesn't look big enough, inside there were three long lunch counters with over 40 stools. It probably was a pretty good business to need all those milk cans at the lower right. The store also carried confectionaries, personal items and tobacco products such as cigars and chewing tobacco for the workers at the shipyard. Samuelson was forced to close this store in the middle 1930's when the U.S. government widened the street and had to demolish the building. He then became a sexton as the Faith Lutheran Church on Granite Street until he died in the early 1950's. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Health Insurance Coverage - Now What?

OP ED

By RAY HURD

The Affordable Care Act created the Health Insurance Marketplaces, which means thousands of Massachusetts residents now have the ability to enroll in health insurance coverage, many for the first time. Navigating the health insurance industry can feel overwhelming, but it is important to remember that your health insurance coverage offers access to benefits that can help keep you healthy.

Once you're enrolled in a health plan and your coverage has started, you can use it to help cover medical costs for services like going to the doctor, filling a prescription at the pharmacy and getting emergency care.

One of the most important steps you can take to improve your health is to seek appropriate care through a primary care physician. Most health plans give you the best deal on services when you see a doctor who has a contract with your health plan. While you may be able to see doctors who don't contract with your health plan, visiting an "in-network" provider usually means you will have lower out-of-pocket costs. To find a doctor "in-network" you can visit your health plan's website and check their provider directory. A provider directory is a list of the doctors, hospitals and other health care providers that your health plan contracts with to provide care. In addition to checking online you can call your insurer to ask about specific providers or call a doctor's office directly to see if they accept your insurance.

Health plans will also help pay the cost of certain prescription medications. You may be able to buy other medications, but medications on your health plan's "formulary" (approved list of prescription medications) usually will be less expensive for you. To find out which prescription drugs are covered, visit your insurer's website and review the list of covered prescriptions. You can also find this information in your Summary of Benefits and Coverage documentation. If you still have questions about covered medications, you can always call your insurer directly to find out if a particular medication is covered.

Now that you know different health plans cover different medications, it's important to note that different health plans allow you to get your medications from different pharmacies (called "in-network" or "specialty" pharmacies). Call your insurer or visit their website to find out whether a local pharmacy is in-network under your new health plan and, if not, what pharmacies in your area are in-network. You can also learn whether you can get your prescription delivered to you in the mail, which may be a convenient option for you.

In an emergency, you should get care from the closest hospital that can help you. Your insurance company can't charge you more for getting emergency room services at an "out-of-network" hospital.

If your health insurance company doesn't pay for a specific healthcare provider or service, you have the right to appeal the decision and have it reviewed by an independent third party. Your insurance company must first notify you in writing within a set amount of time. Based on the type of claim you file, your health plan will need to explain why coverage was denied. They also have to let you know how you can appeal their decision.

If the timeline for the standard appeals process would seriously put your life at risk, or risk your ability to fully function, you also can file an appeal that would get you a quicker decision. If you meet the standards for an expedited external review, the final decision about your appeal must come as quickly as your medical condition requires, and no later than 72 hours after your request for external review is received.

In addition to creating the Health Insurance Marketplace, the Affordable Care Act is providing consumers with new benefits and protections. Health insurance plans can't refuse to cover you or charge you more just because you have a pre-existing health condition. And many preventive screenings are now available to you at little or no out-of-pocket cost.

It remains imperative that consumers learn about the health insurance industry and their individual health plans. Always ask questions and carefully review your health plan's certificate of coverage to ensure you are taking full advantage of the benefits offered.

If you have additional questions about the Health Insurance Marketplace, call 1-800-318-2596. (TTY users should call 1-855-889-4325.)

Jamaican Compost Plan To Be Evaluated

The results of the Jamaican composting trip taken by Quincy city officials last week will be evaluated at a conference to be held next Monday night at his office, Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa said.

Della Chiesa said that he drew the following conclusions as a result of his trip to Kingston, Jamaica:

One, the operation at Kingston is successful in that it converts a waste material to a marketable product at less cost to the city than incineration.

Two, the evidence indicates that the end product is a valuable soil rebuilder and conditioner.

Three, the indications are that there will be an adequate market for the product as it is promoted and advertised and as it becomes better known.

DELLA CHIESA TO SEEK MORE SNOW REMOVAL FUNDS

Mayor Della Chiesa planned to ask the City Council at its next meeting for an additional $50,000 for snow removal operations. Since the first of the year the city has spent $212,000 for snow removal while only $180,000 was placed in the 1964 budget.

FINANCE COMMITTEE REVIEWS DPW BUDGET

One hundred jobs have been cut from the Public Works Department budget since 1958 through Mayor Della Chiesa's "No hire, no fire" policy, DPW Commissioner Charles R. Herbert told the Council's Finance Committee. The Finance Committee cut a total of $12,995 from the $2,314,000 Public Works budget requests.

Stephen Sacchetti Cast In 'Our Town'

Quincy resident Stephen Sacchetti is among the cast members in Moonstruck Theater Company's production of the American play"Our Town".

Performance dates are Friday, March 14 through March 23 at Amazing Things Art Center, 160 Hollis St., Framingham.

This Pulitzer Prize-winning play is Thornton Wilder's most frequently performed work. Set in the early 20th century in the fictional town of Grover's Corners, New Hampshire, the play explores the beauty of love, marriage, family and the everyday precious moments that may be taken for granted.

"Our Town," known for its minimalistic use of set and props, has the Stage Manager narrate the love story of George Gibbs and Emily Webb. As the couple moves through life we are reminded of how important it is to stop and take time to appreciate the significance in the simplest of moments.

The production features 14 performers from the Boston and MetroWest regions, including Stephen Sacchetti of Quincy as George Gibbs, the kind but irresponsible boy next door. "Our Town" marks Sacchetti's return to the Moonstruck stage, having previously played Moritz in Spring Awakening. Recent theatrical endeavors include Stanley Kowalski (A Streetcar Named Desire), Romeo (Romeo & Juliet), and Benny (The Line That Picked Up 1000 Babes). Off-stage, Sarchetti is a bartender at Anthem in Boston.

STEPHEN SACCHETTI

The show is produced by Caroline Fonseca and directed by Matthew Sherman.

Tickets are $24 for general admission, $23 for senior citizens and students, $21 for Amazing Things Members, and $12 for children 12 and under.

For tickets, reservations, and more information, visit www.moonstrucktheater.org or call 508-405-ARTS (2787).

Children's Programs, Activities At Library

By JULIE RINES

The Thomas Crane Public Library announces the following programs and activities for children during March.

Winter Storytimes

Weekday storytimes for children ages 4 months through 5 years old continue through March 13th. The library offers several programs by age. Stop by the library or check our website thomascranelibrary.org for details.

Happy 110th Birthday Dr. Seuss

It is Dr. Seuss' birthday and we are having a Cat in the Hat birthday bonanza on Saturday March 1st! Stop by the Main Library children's room from 10 a.m. to noon to meet the Cat in the Hat and his friends Thing 1 and Thing 2.

Make your own red and white striped Cat hat and red bow tie (while supplies last), watch a Dr. Seuss movie, play pin the hat on the Cat or Dr. Seuss Tic Tac Toe and search the children's room for the Cat's hat. How many red and white striped Cat hats can you find?

Please note this special celebration is happening in place of our regularly scheduled Saturday Fun for Little Ones event.

Storytime with Cheryl

Join storyteller Cheryl Dunford for a family storytime full of stories, songs, rhymes and more for children ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult on Saturday, March 8th at 10:00 a.m. at the Main Library. No registration required. Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Storytime with Cheryl at North Quincy

Join storyteller Cheryl Dunford for a bilingual family storytime full of stories, songs, rhymes and more for children ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult on Saturday, March 22nd at 10 a.m.

Join us for some fun and learn something new, maybe even a song or two in Chinese. No registration required. Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Mad Science Preschool for ages 3-5: Acids and Bases

This Mad Science of Greater Boston workshop helps children ages 3-5 uncover the secrets of chemistry and the effects that acids and bases have on our daily lives. The children will explore how acidity and alkalinity are detected and measured, and using the same methods scientists use, they will get to test various solutions. The children will enjoy an entertaining application of their new knowledge by making their own Penny Shine to take home.

This 45-minute workshop for ages 3-5 will be held on Saturday, March 15th at 9:30 a.m. at the Main Library. Registration is required. Beginning Monday, March 3rd, register online, in person or by calling 617-376-2411.

Due to space limitations, this program is limited to Quincy residents.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Mad Science Workshops for ages 6-10: Acids and Bases

This Mad Science of Greater Boston workshop helps children ages 6-10 uncover the secrets of chemistry and the effects that acids and bases have on our daily lives. The children will explore how acidity and alkalinity are detected and measured and will use the same methods scientists use to test various solutions.

Once the fundamentals have been established, the children will be introduced to the many applications of acids and bases and their reactions, such as how the carbon dioxide produced in an acid-base reaction can be used to put out fires.

Finally, the children will enjoy an entertaining application of their new knowledge in the construction of a popping test tube.

This one-hour workshop for ages 6-10 will be held on Saturday, March 15th at 10:30 a.m. at the Main Library. Registration is required. Beginning Monday, March 3rd, register online, in person or by calling 617-376-2411.

Due to space limitations, this program is limited to Quincy residents.

Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Spring Storytimes

Weekday storytimes for children ages 4 months through 5 years old begin on Friday, March 28th.

The library offers several programs by age. Stop by the library or check our website thomascranelibrary.org for details. Due to overcrowding advance registration is required for Mother Goose on the Loose and Just for Twos storytimes.

Registration will begin at 9 a.m. Tuesday, March 18th. Register online, by phone at 617-376-2411 or in person in the Main Library Children's Room. Registration is limited to Quincy residents.

Registration for Spring Explorers

Beginning Tuesday, March 18th register for the Afternoon Explorers online, by phone at 617-376-1330 or in person at the Wollaston Branch. Registration is required and limited to Quincy residents

Junior Explorers for ages 4 and 5
Mondays, March 31, April 7, 28 and May 5
3 - 4 p.m.

Pirates: Let's weigh anchor and set sail with some pirate stories and crafts. We'll read about pirate dogs, pirate mothers, when pirates come to visit and when we're done we'll go hunting for some hidden treasure!

Explorers for ages 6 to 8
Wednesdays 3-4 p.m.
April 2, 9, 16, 30 and May 7

Superheroes: It's a bird, it's a plane, it's a storytime! Join us for some superhero stories and design your own superhero costumes. We'll be ending by making our own comic book pages.

Book Clubs for Kids

Do you like to read? Would you like to talk to others about books? Then you will like our book discussion groups. Join us each month to discuss all kinds of books.

The Night Owls Book Club for children in grades 3 and 4 will meet on Monday, March 10th at 7 pm.

We will be discussing The Year of Billy Miller by Kevin Henkes one of this year's Newbery Honor books. Please stop by the Main Library children's room to pick up a copy of the book to read before the meeting.

The Phoenix Book Club for children in grades 5-8 meets on the second Tuesday of each month to discuss a variety of books. The Club will meet on Tuesday, March 11th at 7 p.m. at the Main Library.

This month we will be discussing Time Travel. Whether it's by magic, a time machine or through mysterious unknown methods, time travel stories let us explore years gone by or the distant future.

What would it be like to suddenly find yourself 1,000 years in the past? Or what if you could zap yourself a week into the future?

Take a trip through time and join us to talk about where and when we went. There is a selection of time travel stories available in the Main Library Children's Room to choose from or you can go to the shelves and pick your own.

Don't worry if you're new to the group. We're always happy to meet new readers!

Cupid Splash March 29 Benefits Save The Harbor

Save the Harbor/Save the Bay and the Harpoon Brewery will host the 4th Annual Harpoon Helps Cupid Splash Saturday, March 29 at the BCYF Curley Community Center, M Street Beach, South Boston.

The cold-weather plunge and pledge fundraiser will benefit Save the Harbor/ Save the Bay's Better Beaches Program.

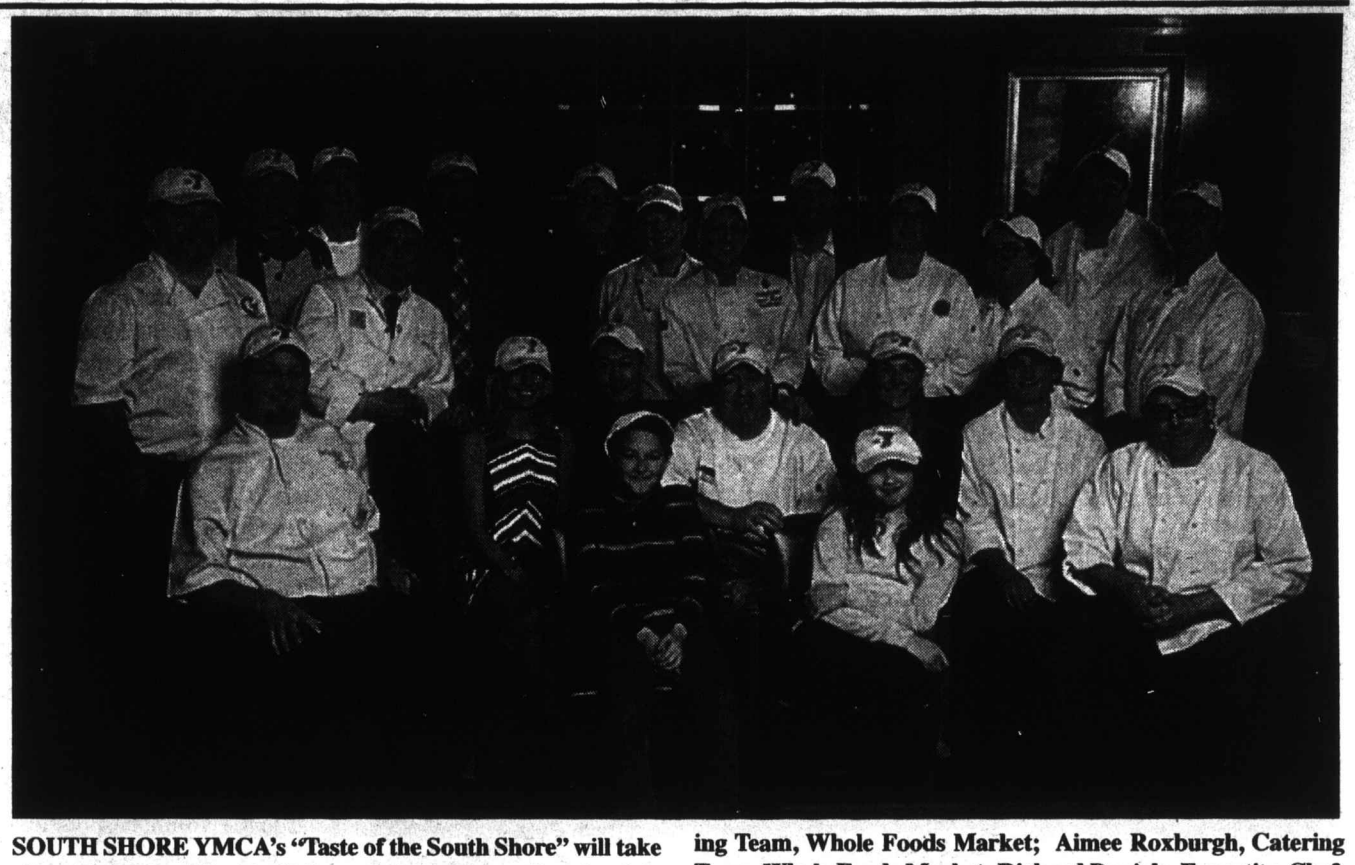

Last year about 200 splashers raised over $30,000 to support great events for the public in Lynn, Nahant, Revere, Winthrop, East Boston, South Boston, Dorchester, Quincy, and Hull.

At 12 noon March 29, participants will dash and splash into the clean waters of Boston Harbor. After the big splash, Harpoon Brewery and Tasty Burger will provide refreshments and burgers on the beach.

This year there are four ways to win a round trip ticket on JetBlue Airways—the top three overall fundraisers automatically win tickets, the best costume winners (male and female) each win tickets, everyone who makes a contribution (registration fee or pledge) is entered into a raffle to win a round-trip ticket, and everyone who raises $1000 or more wins a Harpoon Hoodie and is entered into a raffle to win a round-trip ticket.

Funds raised will support Save the Harbor/Save the Bay's Better Beaches Program, which gives small grants to friends groups and local organizations to run free events and programs on each of the DCR beaches from Nahant to Nantasket.

To register online for the Cupid Splash, visit www.cupidsplash.com.

Roasted Vegetable Soup

It was a cold frigid day and we were on our way to my granddaughter Ellie's basketball game in Scituate. And since my daughter Rita lives in Scituate, she invited us all for dinner.

We started off with a delicious roasted vegetable soup and what a treat on such a cold day. Here is the recipe:

ROASTED VEGETABLE SOUP

1/2 head cauliflower florets
1 medium onion sliced
2 golden beets (cut in 1-inch cubes)
4-5 cloves garlic (unpeeled)
1 cup cubed turnip

On a cookie sheet, place all the veggies with salt and pepper and a drizzle of olive oil and any favorite herb.

Bake in a 400 degree oven for 45 minutes until tender. After that place in a sauce pan with 1 1/2 cups water and simmer until softer. Place in a blender and emulsify until smooth.

She served it with Parmesan croutons and some bacon bits. Prepare the bacon by cooking about 4 slices of bacon until crisp.

QUINCY POLICE DEPARTMENT recently held an open house and tours of the station. The tour provided the opportunity for residents to see some of the equipment that officers use daily. ## Town Brook Stream Team To Count Smelt This Spring

By PAT ARTIS

Every March and April for centuries the smelt have been returning to the Town Brook in downtown Quincy to spawn and lay their eggs.

In the springs of 2011 and 2012, members of both the Quincy Environmental Network and the Wollaston Garden Club's Conservation Committee counted hundreds of smelt. Last spring (2013) none of these same volunteers saw any fish at all. This spring the group has decided to enlarge the volunteer pool that observe smelt, and formally log the fish count data. The good news would be that the "Town Brook Enhancement" project returns smelt numbers back to norm.

The goal of the organizers of the Town Brook Stream Team will be: to educate its volunteer members and the greater community regarding the life cycle of the smelt and the brook's fragile ecosystem; to develop community advocacy for the smelt and its ecosystem; and to conduct an accurate, methodical fish count for this spring. The Stream Team intends for this to become an annual event with the intention of collecting data for many years to come.

QEN and the Wollaston Garden Club Conservation Committee members conducted a program in the Community Room (Atrium Level) at the Thomas Crane Library Wednesday (Feb. 26) at 7 p.m. to help the community learn more about these hard working fish and to enlist fish count volunteers.

At this meeting, volunteers (citizen-scientists) will be assigned a time and location to look for and document smelt in the brook beginning March 1 through April 30. Volunteers will choose one day/night of the week and a specific location to monitor; they will also receive a data log to compile their weekly information. Stream Team organizers have developed the protocols and data collection format for this project with the advice and support from local watershed associations and the MA Department of Marine Fisheries. You can find more information about the Stream Team data log and other pertinent Town Brook information at www.townbrook.org.

If you, or your group, are interested and can donate approximately 15 minutes per week to look for smelt in the brook, then join the Town Brook Stream Team on Feb. 26th to learn about the best times, and procedures to find and document fish.

If you can't volunteer, then come anyway to learn more about the smelt and this fascinating ecosystem running from Braintree Dam to Town River, right here in Quincy, called the Town Brook.

5 Democrats On Special State Rep. Election Ballot Tuesday

Voters In Only One Quincy Precinct - Ward 3 Precinct 3 - To Help Elect Walsh Successor

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Five Democratic candidates are on the ballot next Tuesday in a special primary election that will essentially fill the state representative seat vacated by new Boston Mayor Martin Walsh.

The special state primary March 4 is for the vacant seat in the 13th Suffolk District. One Quincy precinct – Ward 3 Precinct 3 – is part of that district.

Polls will be open next Tuesday, March 4, from 7 to 8 p.m. at the Montclair School, 8 Belmont St.

Walsh held the seat for 16 years until he was sworn in as the mayor of Boston in January. The special election to fill the vacancy was called by the office of Secretary of State William Galvin.

There are five contenders to succeed Walsh – all of them Democrats and all are residents of Boston. There are no Republican challengers for the seat meaning the winner of the Democratic primary is virtually assured of winning the seat in the final election April 4.

The Democratic contenders are:

Liam P. Curran, 37 Coffey St.; Gene I. Gorman, 4 Hooper St.; Daniel J. Hunt, 31 Pierce Ave.; Paul L. McGann, Jr., 165 Savin Hill Ave.; and John K. O'Toole, 114 Main St. – all of Boston.

Curran. Hunt, and McCann are attorneys. Gorman is a filmmaker and Emerson lecturer while Lynch is Savin Hill community activist.

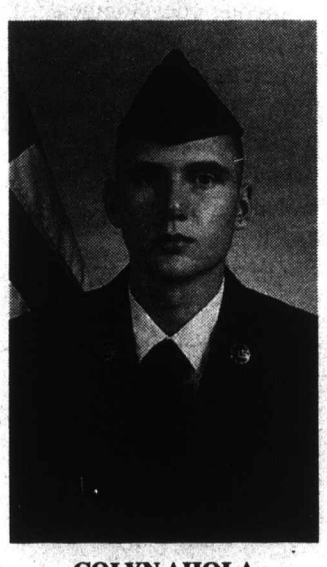

The 13th Suffolk District is comprised of 13 districts – 12 that represent Boston's Dorchester section and the lone Quincy precinct – Ward 3 Precinct 3 in the city's Montclair neighborhood.

Ward 3 Precinct 3 was redistricted into the 13th Suffolk District after the 2010 federal census.

City Clerk Joseph Shea said about 1,676 voters are registered in Ward 3 Precinct 3, of which 631 are Democrats, 156 Republican and 878 are unenrolled. Registered Democrats and unenrolled voters are eligible to vote in the Democratic primary; Republican and enrolled in the Republican primary.

The special election will cost Quincy $24,000 – about $12,000 for the primary and another $12,000 for the final election, Shea said. The city clerk noted that the state pays for the printing of ballots. Since this is a special election, Shea said he is hopeful the state will pick up some of the city's election tab, such as police details, election workers and advertising costs.

Shea said he expects turnout will be low because it is a primary election and no Quincy residents are on the ballot.

Officials Optimistic On Downtown Revitalization

The construction of the new Town Brook culvert and Hannon Parkway were funded by the state and federal government, respectively. The land for the Hannon Parkway was purchased using a bond issued to the city in 2007 for Quincy Center improvements while William Phelan was mayor. The city expects to pay that bond off using revenue from the downtown project.

The mayor also noted that other large-scale development projects in Greater Boston – including University Station in Westwood and the Assembly Row project in Somerville – have gone through similar circumstances in recent years and are now underway.

"That's another thing to remind the public of – developers come in, developers come out," Koch said. "Westwood was dead. It's back on track. We've seen changes in Assembly Square – that was dead; it's back on track in Somerville. There are a number of projects in town that we could point to and we're no different."

Council President Joseph Finn also said that such changes aren't rare when it comes to projects with size and scope similar to the Quincy Center plan. He noted that plans to revitalize the downtown area have been contemplated numerous times in the past before Street-Works moved forward with the city on its proposal.

"What's distinguished this from other plans in the past has been that there's actually been action that's been taken upon it – at times incremental, but nonetheless always moving forward. It's little consolation to use the metaphor 'we're building cathedrals,' but in fact we are," Finn said.

"The real thing that is at stake here is the long-term vision of the city. I've heard a lot of misrepresentations about what this means and what this represents. I think it's important to make perfectly clear that, in terms of municipal development, this is more the norm than people would think."

Councillor Doug Gutro, who chairs the council's downtown committee, told the mayor that it was important to continue looking forward.

"The single most important thing we can do at this point is look forward and to figure out what does that forward-looking vision look like. Is it pieces of different projects? Is it one block at a time? Or will we once again have the vision and the master plan and the land disposition agreement?" Gutro said.

"I'm not asking you to lay that out for us today. But what I am interested in, whether you say it now or at a subsequent committee meeting, is to have some of the attorneys walk us through the legal issues that are all being contemplated and what we have to do and not do so that we continue to protect ourselves and the taxpayers."

Gutro scheduled a March 31 downtown committee meeting to receive further updates on the project. That meeting will take place after the 30-day cure period ends.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci noted the city has not paid any money for the Street-Works project to date, and thanked the administration for protecting residents in the 2011 agreement with the developer.

"The protections we put in place are doing just that now, unfortunately to some to degree, but the protections are coming into to play now," Palmucci said. "I congratulate the team for putting those protections in and thinking of worst-case scenarios when they did that. It certainly is benefitting the city at this point."

"I look forward to working with the administration and your very capable team to see the vision we have for the downtown become a reality," Palmucci added. "My confidence in that is not shaken one bit."

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes echoed the same sentiments as Palmucci.

"I agree with everything my colleague Councillor Palmucci stated about the LDA and the fail safes that were thought of and conceived at the time of the signing," she said. "Much credit goes to the team for that – contemplating those worst-case scenarios issues."

During an interview with The Sun following the mayor's decision to put Street-Works on notice, U.S. Rep. Stephen F. Lynch said he continues to stand by the city's plan to redevelop Quincy Center while saying the project's finances must be settled before any work takes place.

"I think it's a solid idea. I think it showed vision and courage. I support Mayor Koch's ideas and I think if we're going to seize the future, then we've got to seize it. I think the City of Quincy is uniquely positioned to really capitalize on the next wave of growth. I think it's time. We've got to figure out the finances and get the funding stream in place. We don't want to go off half-cocked," the South Boston Democrat said.

"I'm not sure what the analysis was of Street-Works in coming in. They certainly had great expertise but I'm not sure there was a financial commitment behind them to accomplish what they aspired to. We really needed a strong hand financially to come in."

"I definitely think that the Quincy downtown area needs this," Lynch later added. "We've got to step up our game. I realize I have a responsibility on the infrastructure side to make sure that the public infrastructure is improved on a level that is equal to the investment that is being made on the private side. I'm willing to meet that obligation."

Koch put Street-Works on notice because they missed a November deadline to file a certificate of consistency (COC) containing plans for Step 1 of the project, the development in the area of Parkingway and the Ross Garage. Street-Works had paid for extensions of that deadline previously, but did not do so in November. The mayor explained to The Sun that he continued negotiations with the developer before putting them on the clock to meet their obligations.

"Under the LDA there are certain benchmarks that they're required to meet and we're required to meet. We've met our benchmarks as a city. We've done the due diligence, gotten the necessary moneys from the feds and the state to do certain aspects," Koch said.

"Once they didn't ask for the extension on the COC – a little time went by, we had been in discussions – it became clearer to me that for them to get the capital to execute is getting more and more doubtful. Therefore, I put them in default and they have a 30-day cure period. And we'll see what happens from here."

Street-Works has 30 days from Feb. 19 to file a COC for Step 1. The firm must also submit documents detailing financial backing for that part of the project and pay $500,000. If those obligations are met in time, Koch said a decision on the future of the downtown project would be at his discretion.

"If they meet all their obligations – file a COC, file a financial submission, pay $500,000 with the COC – if they meet all those conditions it's at my discretion and we'll make a decision about going forward."

The mayor's decision to put Street-Works on notice came days after it became apparent that Quincy Mutual would take the lead on developing the area known as Block 4 on the downtown master plan – the wedge-shaped block bounded by Hancock Street, Chestnut Street, and Cottage Avenue and anchored by the Granite Trust Building. Eight months ago in June, Street-Works had broken ground on their Block 4 project, known as Merchants Row, but construction stopped in October, which the developer attributed to rising construction prices.

At the Feb. 18 council meeting, Koch said he expected the new development to look similar to Street-Works' plan for the site. Street-Works had submitted two plans for the site. The original included two residential buildings – one 15-story tower and the other five stories tall – with street-level retail in both. After breaking ground on the project and before halting work all together, the company changed its proposal to include three six-story buildings on an expanded footprint, with roughly the same amount of residential units and more retail.

"I'm very confident Quincy Mutual is going to continue that concept we've seen as far as the numbers and the ratio in terms of residential units versus retail in that piece. I think we'll continue to see a mixed-use development," Koch said. "That's the goal. As the market changes and evolves that certainly dictates to what extent each of those areas of the mixed-use may be."

While the details are still being ironed out, with Quincy Mutual developing Block 4 the mayor said the terms of the LDA, including the requirement that at least 80 percent of work be done by subcontractors employing union labor, would likely not apply.

"They're in the urban redevelopment district and they're certainly in the district that requires certain design guidelines and certain submissions. Whether they're bound by the LDA is still something the lawyers are working out," Koch told The Sun.

"They are going through a separation process with Street-Works…If this part gets separated out there is no public land there. It's a private development if they're not asking the city to purchase garages and so forth. My guess is it will not be part of the LDA and they would be out of that and it would be purely a private development."

On the issue of labor, Finn said he was concerned about newspaper columns and other opinion pieces he had read blaming labor unions for the increase in construction costs that caused work on Merchants Row to come to a halt. Finn said the mayor should continue to work with unions to ensure they would play a part in the development of Quincy Center, even if the deal with Street-Works falls apart. He called language in the LDA guaranteeing construction jobs for union workers one of the 2011 document's 'great achievements.'

"There were some opinion pieces out that were out there printed in the press that suggested that the costs associated with this were somehow tied to organized labor," Finn at the council meeting. "Interestingly enough, one of the great achievements of the LDA was actually the agreements you had reached specifically with trades associating them to the project moving forward."

The mayor said that he had met with Bob Rizzi, president of the Quincy-South Shore Building Trades Council and other union workers over the past several weeks to discuss the Quincy Center project. That dialogue, he said, would continue into the future.

"Absolutely – that's my goal," Koch said in response to Finn's query. "I had a meeting a few weeks back, I went down to the South Shore Trades. I met with individuals to give them an update. I spoke with Mr. Rizzi today indicating what we were doing tonight. There will be an ongoing dialogue going forward. In my administration we've certainly encouraged union labor for each of our projects."

Lynch, a former president of Ironworkers Local 7, said the cost of paying union workers as opposed to non-union workers should not be prohibitive enough to sink the project.

"Non-union labor is pretty competitive – they're not working for free. I have friends who are open shop contractors. Sometimes they're union in the inner city area and then out in the rural areas they're open shop, but at all levels they are employing fairly highly skilled individuals. Especially for a project like this, I don't think the differential between union and non-union will make the difference in this project going forward. I really don't," Lynch explained in his interview with The Sun.

"When you think about the price, these are probably big firms…in most cases they'll have to provide health care because they'll all be over 50 people. That's usually where the difference comes in. And also most of these companies on the open shop side have 401(K)s that are on par with some of what the unions have. At the end of the day I don't think that's the big differential…I don't think it will be necessary to have worker versus worker compete in order to make this viable. We could probably meet the letter of the law with respect to the LDA."

The default letter to Street-Works also comes as work on Adams Green is set to commence.

The first part of that project, which will result in a new Adams Green park between City Hall and the United First Parish Church, is a series of roadway improvements throughout Quincy Center. The mayor, in his interview, said that work would begin this year as planned because a federal earmark is funding it.

"The traffic work begins this year. That money is in place; that was a federal earmark," Koch said. "Once that's done the next phase will be utility work. We are ongoing with design – we're at 25 percent design and we'll continue to push that until we get to the 75 percent and 100 percent."

The state is expected to pay for construction of the actual park. Quincy had planned on using the state's I-Cubed (Infrastructure Investment Incentive) Program to finance that project and the building of the new Cliveden Street bridge. Koch said the city would review its application for the I-Cubed funds, and possibly look into other sources of state money to finance those two projects, as a result of the recent developments in the Quincy Center project.

"The I-Cubed is tied to construction downtown. New tax money going to the state pays down the I-Cubed obligation. By getting Block 4 under way, that begins the process of new state tax revenues going to the state. Whether it's Street-Works or somebody else once the construction starts and money starts going in that's the obligation under I-Cubed," Koch explained.

"We got an extension for a year on the I-Cubed preliminary application, and this will give us an opportunity to work those issues out and perhaps we will look to the state for additional MassWorks money to keep the project moving – Adams Green and the bridge project – and bridge, if you will, the two funding sources at the right time. So we've got some work to do but we've had very good state partners and federal partners and I'm sure we're going to be able to work out some of these details."

Life Of Louisa Catherine Adams Celebrated At UFPC

By KRIS KALABOKAS

First Lady Louisa Catherine Adams was honored on her birthday at the United First Parish Church as a woman who maintained the poised exterior expected of a First Lady, yet who struggled internally to find her true home; a woman who is often neglected in historical literature despite being a member of one of America's most written about families.

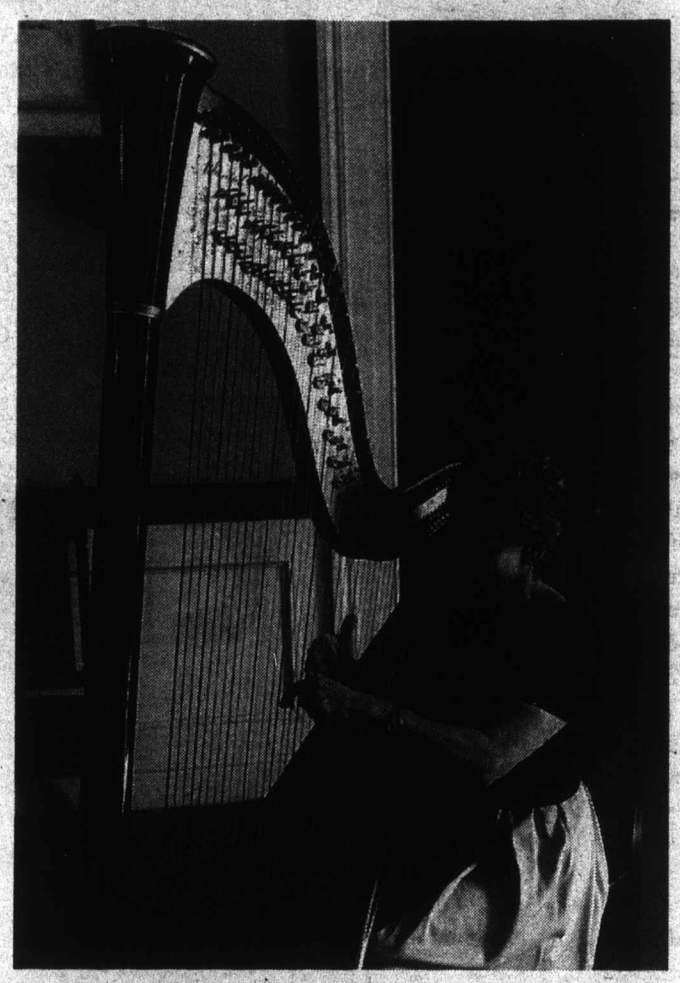

Featured speaker Louisa Thomas, a Fellow of the New America Foundation, contributor to Grantland, and author of an about to be published biography on Louisa asked of the First Lady "what makes her so compelling to us now?. Where did this incredible, electric, funny, insightful, and at times pained and sad voice come from?"

She lamented the limited biographical writings on Louisa. "She usually merits a line or two in books about her more famous family members and what little is said about her often gives an incomplete picture of who she was," she said.

Louisa was born on Feb. 12, 1775 in London, making her the only First Lady to not be born in the United States.

Louisa's youth was a difficult one according to Thomas. "Her childhood was formative," she said. "She grew up as an outsider as the daughter of an American patriot in a country that had lost a war to the US."

AUTHOR AND BIOGRAPHER Louisa Thomas was the keynote speaker at a celebration Feb. 12 commemorating the birthday anniversary of First Lady Louisa Catherine Adams at United First Parish Church. At right is a wreath that was placed on the tomb of the wife of Sixth U.S. President John Quincy Adams in the church crypt.

"Louisa in some ways kept herself as an outsider... she could be morose and morbid and overwrought," she said of the woman whose "Americaness was challenged from the start."

This moroseness did not prevent her from reaching out to other politicians in an attempt to gain their favor, and electoral power.

"She did what her husband could not, or would not do at times, especially when he was running for president...she covered up for his steady coldness by the force of her own warmth."

She remained warm after suffering great losses. "She suffered so much. The death of three children with whom she was very close and perhaps ten miscarriages. It's hard to count...she thought of her children as a sacrifice to political ambition. She blamed her husband and she blamed herself in some ways."

Caroline Keinath, Deputy Superintendent of the Adams National Historic Park, recounted the difficulties Louisa had in finding what she considered to be a real and permanent home.

"In Louisa's 77 years of life, she moved some 24 times; 22 of these moves would take place during her 51 year marriage to John Quincy Adams," she said "Her longest stay in one home was in Washington D.C., during the last 14 years of her life."

While away at boarding school in England and France as a young woman she longed to return home. As she later reflected on her life she wrote "Oh home, sweet home, thou ever were to me the joy of life."

She met 28-year-old John when she was 20 and they were married roughly one year later.

The birth of their first child, George Washington Adams, in April of 1801 was a joyous event to Louisa, however that joy was short-lived. The small family traveled to America and frequently moved between Quincy, Boston, and Washington D.C. for eight years as John served as a Professor at Harvard, as a Massachusetts State Senator, and United States Senator.

FELICE POMERANZ plays the harp at at celebration marking the 239th birthday anniversary of First Lady Louisa Cathrine Adams at United First Parish Church. The first lady, who is entombed in the crypt in the church alongside Presidents John Adams, John Quincy Adams and First Lady Abigail Adams, also played the harp.

During this time two more children were born; John and Charles Francis.

Leaving Europe proved difficult for Louisa, said Keinath. She had a hard time adjusting to "rural Quincy," as she put it in her journals. She said of her arrival "Quincy! What shall I say of my impressions of Quincy! Had I stepped into Noah's Ark, I do not think that I could have been more utterly astonished!"

After becoming accustomed to her "rural" life in Quincy, she and John Quincy—without consulting her—left so that he could fill the position of Minister Plenipotentiary to Russia. The two older boys were left in the care of their grandparents. Her only comfort was in caring for her youngest son.

In 1817, the family would move back to the United States only to move nine times between Washington and Boston.

While Louisa wasn't a politician in her own right, she managed to host events that drew influential and powerful politicians to her home.

"Louisa earned the reputation as one of the finest hostesses in public life with the ability to put people at ease and make them feel at home," said Keinath. "She was equally as gracious as a hostess in the White House, dining at Mount Vernon with the Washingtons, Monticello with Thomas Jefferson, and Montpelier with the Madisons."

A ceremonial wreath was laid upon her tomb in the Adams family crypt in the presence of Mayor Thomas Koch who called her "one of the most important ladies in our history," and President of the United First Parish Church H. Kirtland Switzer II who called her a "most remarkable woman." The crypt also houses the remains of John Adams, John Quincy Adams, and Abigail Adams.

Harpist Felice Pomeranz of Gilded Harp paid homage to Louisa's life and extraordinary musical skills by playing a piece she said was reminiscent of the time and one that would be "very familiar to Louisa."

She died May 15, 1852, in Washington, D.C. three years after suffering a stroke.

Cosponsors for the free and open to the public event included the Quincy Historical Society, National Park Service, The Abigail Adams Historical Society, and the United First Parish and Christ Church, which is where the Adams family worshiped.

Council Approves School Window Projects

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council has cleared the way for window and door replacement projects at three Quincy schools.

The council approved appropriating $5.3 million to replace the windows and doors at North Quincy High School and the Merrymount and Wollaston Elementary Schools. The project at North is the most expensive of the three, with a projected cost of $3.7 million, the project at Wollaston is expected to cost $921,000 and Merrymount $744,000.

The replacement projects are slated for this summer. After completing the window and door replacement the city expects to be reimbursed for about 70 percent of the total cost by the Massachusetts School Building Authority (MSBA), which is equal to approximately $3.7 million. That would make Quincy responsible for paying the other $1.6 million.

Before the council voted on the projects, Public Buildings Director Gary Cunniff explained the benefits the new windows will provide to each of the three schools.

"They'll each receive new windows that will exceed the Stretch Energy Code. They'll be efficient at sealing and insulating," he said. "They'll also improve the thermal characteristics and also the light transmission in the building, especially at Wollaston, which back in the late '70s received windows that consisted of 50 percent of an opaque panel. This will be a dramatic improvement. It's very similar to what we achieved a year ago at Montclair."

The council voted 8-0 in favor of the appropriation, with Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin absent.

Quincy has already submitted statements of interest to the MSBA for similar window and door replacement projects at the Marshall, Lincoln-Hancock, Parker, and Beechwood Knoll Elementary Schools.

charged to the city's sewer and drain rehabilitation fund ($1.085 million) and hotel/motel tax fund ($475,000). Koch said he hopes to use any money the city would receive from selling the old Central Middle School to fund the purchase of nine properties needed for the parking lot and retention ponds.

"We're looking at using different sources of money. We're not touching general revenue on the first phase. We're looking into using some money from the sewer rehabilitation fund, using some money from the hotel tax fund, to begin this initial phase," the mayor said.

"As we move forward on the whole project we're looking at proceeds from the sale of Central Middle School, which this body would have to approve obviously and I know that's in committee now. It's our hope that that would take care of the bulk of the purchase of the properties – eight homes on Hunt Street and one on Newbury Avenue. As we speak appraisals are being done through the Law Department for those properties."

The request for $1.56 million was referred to the finance committee after the mayor's presentation. Councillor Michael McFarland, chairman of that committee, said the project is long overdue.

"In 1999, both [City Solicitor] Jim Timmins and I sent our daughters to North Quincy High as freshmen and what we talked about at the first PTO meeting was plans to correct the drainage on Hunt Street and the drop-off and pick-up area," McFarland said. "I am very happy to see that this plan now has a real plan in funding. I would like to thank the mayor and administration for moving this long overdue project along."

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Tuesday February 18, 2014, at approximately 7:45 p.m., Officer Dan Parisi was on patrol in the area of Granite and Whitwell Streets. The Dispatcher advised units in the area that a drunk male suspect was falling down into traffic near the intersection of Granite Street and Burgin Parkway. The Officer, one block away, arrived quickly and observed the suspect walking in the middle of the street suddenly fall into a snow bank.

As Officer Parisi exited his cruiser, two vehicles crashed into each other nearby, so he requested additional units. The Officer immediately noticed that the suspect was extremely intoxicated - he could not stand up and his speech was slurred and incoherent.

While checking the suspect for warrants, Officer Parisi recognized the suspect's name for a recent assault on a Quincy Police Officer. The suspect said that he was "wanted" and a warrant check confirmed that the suspect had 4 warrants for his arrest. The suspect, who could barely stand on his own, was handcuffed and a pat frisk followed.

The Officer located a large knife in the suspect's his right front pants pocket. Upon closer inspection, this knife, with a "Batman" logo emblazoned on it, had a blade that extended from each side and was spring assisted, operated by a simple touch of a lever. This knife is considered a "Dangerous Weapon" per se in the state of Massachusetts, so the suspect was placed under arrest. While en route to the Quincy Police station, the suspect began violently smashing his head off the plexi-glass partition in the cruiser. Officer Parisi advised Communications of this and requested additional Officers be ready to assist in bringing the suspect inside. He also had Fallon Ambulance EMT's ready to assess the suspect.

LT. DAN MINTON

About 15 months ago, the suspect, during one of his arrests in Quincy, banged his head repeatedly against the cell block walls and door, which required medical assistance. Upon arrival at the station, the suspect was escorted from the cruiser to the booking area, where he purposely smashed his head off the concrete wall of the building.

Once Fallon ambulance arrived on scene, the EMT determined that the suspect needed to be transported to the hospital, not for his intoxication, but for possible injuries and to have a psychological evaluation performed. Once at the hospital, the suspect was physically restrained with handcuffs and leg irons to the bed. After a period of time where the suspect did not calm down, the medical staff gave the suspect medication to slow him down.

Meanwhile, back at the scene of the initial contact, Officers conducted an accident investigation of the two cars that crashed nearby. Based on the driver's and witness accounts, it appeared that the suspect staggered into the street, in front of several cars, without regard for his own safety or that of others. This resulted in motorists either jamming their brakes on or swerving to avoid hitting the suspect or the other cars. The two cars in the accident swerved to avoid hitting the suspect, colliding with one another.

Due to the actions of the suspect, a 32 year old Quincy resident, Officer Parisi also charged the suspect with "Disorderly Conduct" for causing the accident. Nice Work!

QPD BLOOD DRIVE HELD: Recently, the Quincy Police Department sponsored the Glennon Family Blood Drive, the third drive in a year. In a 6 hour period, 61 units were donated and 25 were from the Quincy Police family. Thanks to all who donated. I hope to have blood drives in June and September this year.

City Appealing Flood Zone Maps

2012 and 2006 FIRMs are already viewable through that website.

Residents had a chance to voice their concerns at the two-and-a-half-hour-long meeting, and nearly two-dozen did so. Edgewood Circle resident Bill Zamzow asked why Quincy did not file an appeal of the maps prior to the June 2013 deadline to do so. He noted that communities in Plymouth County appealed their maps within the deadline and had already been granted a one-year delay in implementation of the new maps.

"With all respect due Mr. Mayor, I will never understand why you did not challenge the now-pending FEMA maps by last June's deadline. Especially given that you have since both decided to appeal these new maps long after the deadline and use the same engineer who advised you to not file an appeal last June," Zamzow said.

"Your original decision now subjects roughly 1,500 local homeowners to significantly increased property insurance bills on the order of several million dollars this coming June. Plymouth County, on the other hand, duly challenged the new maps and thus its residents are still enjoying at least a year's reprieve in rate increases as well as all manner of hassle."

Koch did not respond but Lynch, who represents Scituate, one of the Plymouth County towns granted a one-year delay, offerered a reply. He said Quincy would not be placed at a disadvantage by choosing to file letters of map revision instead of appealing by last year's deadline.

"I don't see Quincy being at any disadvantage from other community in my district with respect to the opportunity for relief from these flood maps," Lynch explained. "I think the relief will equitably distributed. I think it would be an impossibility to carve out tens of thousands of different treatments for different communities all across America in order to get some inequitable results. Just from the legislative standpoint, I think Quincy is well protected."

One of the FEMA officials on-hand, Richard Verville, added that it would never be too late to file an appeal of the maps.

"At no time is it too late to file an appeal," he said. "The maps are scheduled to go effective June 9 for Norfolk County. That does not close the door."

Don Kusser, an Edgewater Drive resident, asked Lynch why he voted for the Flood Insurance Reform Act of 2012 that many in Congress are now trying to appeal.

"You supported this original bill. That's why we're all here tonight – because you supported this bill," Kusser said. "How are we going to pay for this? Where do you expect people like us, just working people, to get the money to pay this? It could go up almost $1,000 a year."

Lynch, who was one of more than 400 representatives who voted in favor of that bill, said the intent was for FEMA to conduct a study on the affordability of premium increases before they took place. But that didn't happen because the agency stated it lacked enough funds to conduct such a study.

"There was supposed to be an affordability study done. You can make your own judgment of this, but do you think when you put a requirement in a bill to make sure that an affordability study is done on a piece of legislation like this bill, that you should do the affordability study before you raise people's premiums? That's the understanding I had from reading the bill," Lynch said.

"The position of FEMA is that they didn't have enough money – they didn't have enough funding to do the affordability study. That's a fair argument on their part, but it's not the congressional intent of the bill to go forward without an affordability study."

Jim Stamos, owner of Stamos & Stamos Realtors of Squantum, said he and other realtors have been placed in a bind by the new maps. He gave an example of one client looking to purchase a home that would be included in special flood hazard area on the proposed maps but is currently not in a flood zone. That client could wind up purchasing flood insurance only to have the implementation of the new maps delayed.

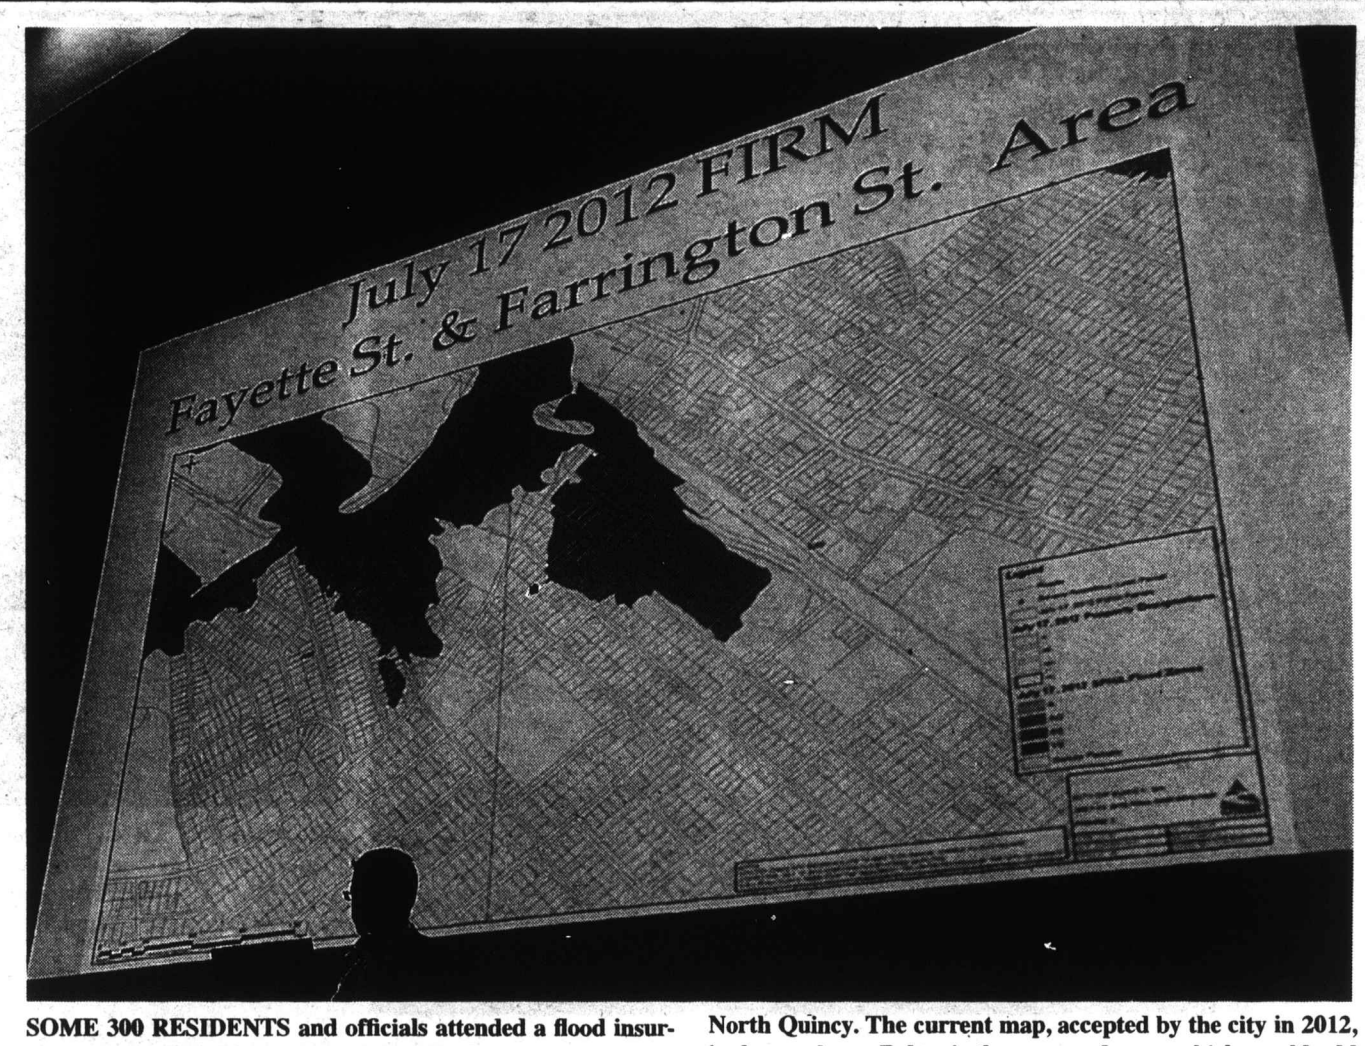

"It puts professional people in my business in quandary as to how do we go advise," Stamos said. "She gets an elevation certificate and then they say you need flood insurance under the new map, which is not in place yet and it may not be in place. She goes to her agent and she gets a policy and now she doesn't have to have it for however long the delay is. How do they get out of it? It's a very complicated issue for property owners out there."

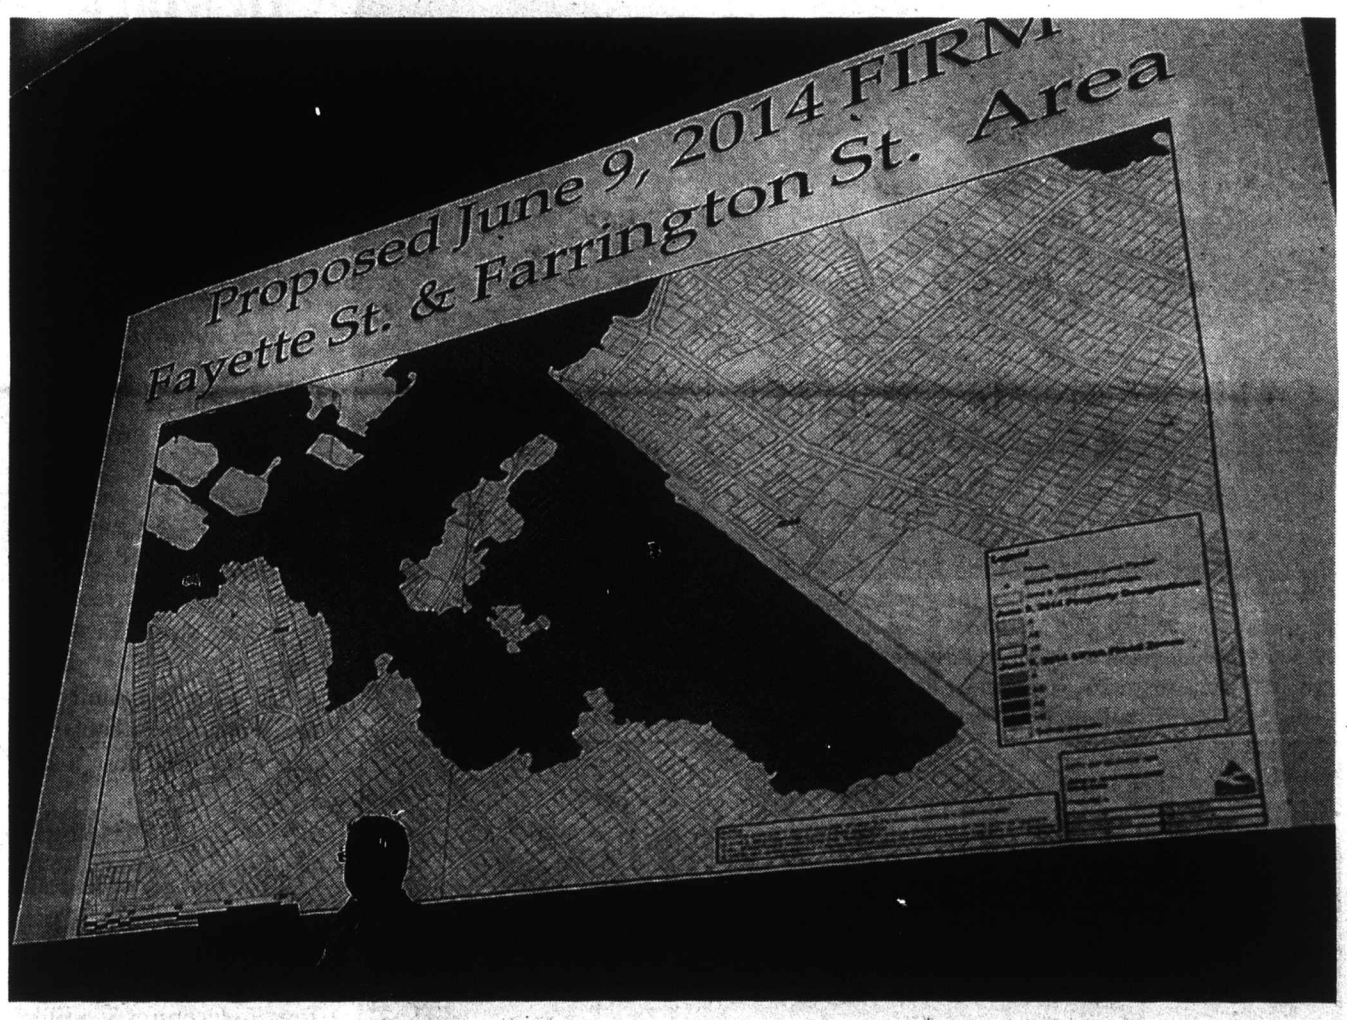

Palmer Street resident Tammy Quinlan asked a similar question. She had been placed into flood zone but was able to successfully appeal that and was removed from the special flood hazard area. Quinlan wanted to know if she would be reimbursed for the insurance premiums she paid during the 13 months she was required to buy flood insurance.

"Are we, or is any city, getting the money back that we paid? I was never in a flood zone and shouldn't have been put in a flood zone," Quinlan said. "Is there any recourse for the people put in that zone?"

Desaulniers responded that she would likely be able to receive a refund, provided she didn't have to file a flood insurance claim during that time period.

"As long as you didn't submit a flood insurance claim you should be able to that money back," he said.

Wollaston Elementary School To Mark 100th Anniversary April 12

Wollaston Elementary School has announced a reception to commemorate the opening of the school 100 years ago. Principal James Hennessy is looking for memories and testimonials from former students and teachers to help commemorate the event.

"We are looking forward to welcoming back former students and teachers on April 12. We also are hoping that many will share their memories, photos, or comments prior to our reception by posting on our Face book page."

On Saturday, April 12th, the Wollaston School staff and PTO will host a celebration from 2-4pm at the school. Open to all current and former Wollaston School students and teachers, the reception will feature tours of the building, student -created exhibits representing the past 10 decades, as well remembrances of former students and staff.

The school, located in the heart of the Wollaston area of Quincy, has 327 students enrolled in kindergarten to grade 5. Principal James Hennessy notes that the school continues to play an important role in the Wollaston community.

"We are fortunate to have an outstanding teaching staff and an active Parent Teacher Organization," Hennessy said. "Both of them create a sense of community here. A hundred years later, we here at Wollaston continue to strive to provide positive learning experiences which will contribute to growth as individuals, citizens, and workers."

Opened in September 1913, the present Wollaston School building was predated by a wooden structure that stood in the current Safford Park diagonally across the street. The well-known Boston architectural firm of McLean & Wright, the same firm that designed the former Cranch, Adams, and Bryant Schools as well as the Squantum School in 1919, designed the current building. The cost of the Wollaston School construction in 1913 was $166,450.

A. H. Wright designed the Wollaston School in the colonial revival mode. This style is a model that has a symmetrical facade composed of a large center section dominated by five keystone tall arched windows and a central entrance and two side pavilions which project slightly.

Special Moments Mark Q/NQ Winter Track Season

Spring Track Season Opens March 14

By JOE REARDON

It was all about special moments this winter for the Quincy/North Quincy tracksters and the potential is there for athletes to improve even more when the preseason opens March 14 and the weather gradually turns warm and more conducive to quality performances this spring.

The cooperative team sent seven athletes to the Div. 1 championships – a number legendary coach Geoff Hennessy was pleased with. "We can't complain about that," he said. "We had our moments. Even kids who didn't make divisionals were close."

The boys finished 3-2 overall and the girls struggled in dual meet competition, but the story of the season was more than the teams' overall records.

When you talk about track in Quincy the Bryson sisters, Emily and Julia, are at the top of the discussion.

After finishing a sterling fourth in the Div. 1 All-State race in cross country, Emily ran personal best times in both the mile and 2 mile.

She put up mile times of 5:33.6 and 5:37.3 in Patriot League dual meets before uncorking a best-ever 5:16.64 for second place at the league championships.

Emily was even better in the 2 mile, her specialty. She took fourth in the Boston Holiday Challenge in 11:36.54 and clocked an 11:49.50 in a dual meet then ramped it up at the prestigious Coaches Elite Meet. Racing against the best 2 milers in Massachusetts, Emily sprinted across the finish line with a new best time of 11:27.54 for eighth place. She went on to run 11:40.03 at the Div. 1 meet, but a cold slowed her at the all-state meet and she finished a disappointing, but still respectable, 10th.

Julia jumped to the next level in the 2 mile when she broke 12 minutes for the first time with an 11:55.86 at the Coaches Invitational after running 12:02.94 in the Boston Holiday Challenge. Julia also recorded a personal best at 1,000 meters with a 3:18.92 for third at the Patriot League meet. She ran the mile just once this winter, but was under 6 minutes with her 5:59.80.

Freshman Mia Healy had a solid winter campaign and is someone to keep an eye on in the coming years. Healy's personal best in the 55-meter dash came at the Patriot League meet where she broke the tape in 7.83 for eighth. Healy was also under 8 seconds at the Coaches Invitational (7.90) and Div. 1 championships (7.95).

Healy was equally tough and consistent on the long jump runway. She got off a terrific leap of 13-11-1/2 at the Boston Holiday Challenge and stretched out a 13-10-1/2 effort later in the season. Healy bettered 13 feet six times this winter and will be looking to jump even further this spring.

The Patriot League meet produced some solid showings from the Quincy/North Quincy squad. Steve Simons clocked a very respectable 3:31.5 for 14th in the 1,000, while Brandi Parker took 15th in the 300 in 46.55. Alessandra was 25th in the 300 in 52.84 and Nakiya Douglas leaned across the finish line for a time of 8.71 in the 55.

Sophomore Jahvae Handsome-Fields showed huge potential in both the 55 and long jump. He put up a personal best of 7.06 in the sprint and was well over 18 feet in the high jump with an 18-8 effort. Junior sprinter Lauan Mason went to the Div. 1 meet where he took 39th in the 55 at 7.04 as did freshman Demoy Holding who clocked the same 7.04. Sophomore Aidan Smyth didn't make opening height in the high jump, but still had successful season in the event.

Greene Leads Red Raiders Into Tournament

By JOE REARDON

Nolan Greene paused and thought the question over for a moment; What NHL goaltender does he most admire?

It shouldn't have come as much of a surprise what the answer was, given the fact that both are cut from the same cloth.

"Carey Price, definitely," said Greene, referring to the Montreal Candiens' All-Star goalie, who led Canada to an Olympic gold medal in Sochi. "He's relaxed in the net. He's always out of the crease. He knows how to control rebounds and he's the most calm goalie in the NHL. He's composed and even keeled."

That description fits the 17-year-old senior to a t as well.

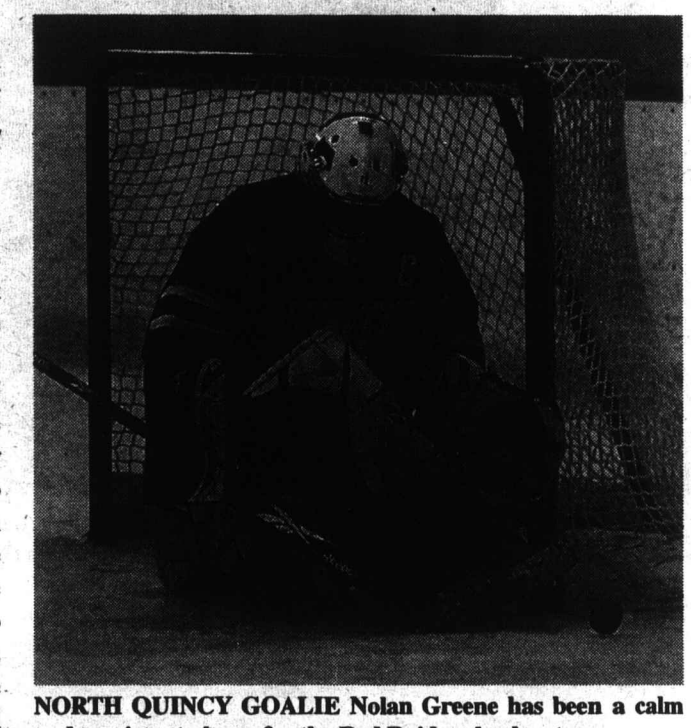

Greene, who first donned the mask and blocker when he was 8 years old, has been the perfect blend of calmness and consistency for North Quincy this season and is looking to continue his shut down play in the postseason. The Red Raiders, who reached the tourney for the fourth year in a row, earned the No. 9 seed with their 9-7-4 record. They'll meet No. 8 seed Bishop Feehan (12-7-1) in a first-round game tonight (Thursday) at 8 p.m. in Taunton and Greene cannot wait to start high school hockey's second season.

While many goaltenders wilt under it, It's the postseason pressure that Greene embraces. His ability to shake off a goal and keep his head in the game are a testament to his mental toughness.

"Goals are going to happen,"Greene shrugged. "You can't get too angry with yourself. You forget about it.

"I like that everything comes down to my shoulders," said the personable netminder after the Red Raiders' Sunday afternoon practice. "I like the pressure. I like hearing after a game that I stole that one for us. You have to like the pressure. If you don't it's going to break you. I like having everyone being able to count on me."

Greene is hoping North Quincy can put together a run in the postseason this time around after a one-and-done showing last year. A tourney bid was one of the goals for the team at the beginning of the season and going as deep as possible was another. Greene knows the nerves will be there, but they will simply melt away once the puck is dropped.

NORTH QUINCY GOALIE Nolan Greene has been a calm and consistent player for the Red Raiders hockey team.

"In the locker room before you can tell everyone is a little jittery," he said. "You try to ignore all the fans and concentrate on the game. Once the puck drops you forget about it. It's like any other game.

"I want to go all the way hopefully. We have high hopes. We have a very tough team this year. We don't have big goal scorers, but we can win the 1-0 and 2-1 games. We have kids that will block pucks and do everything to win. That's the attitude you have to have to get to the tournament."

He admitted a loss in the opening game would be a bitter disappointment after such a successful season. "If you lose in the first round you almost rather you didn't go," Greene said.

As good as Greene was last year for the Red Raiders he's even better this winter. Confident and quick between the posts, he put up a sterling 1.85 goals against average and had some stellar performances. Playing against Super 8 Duxbury earlier in the season, Greene made 18 second-period saves as the teams went into the third period tied 1-1. The Green Dragons did manage to light the lamp two times in the final 15 minutes, but Greene was brilliant, finishing with 40 saves, several of them of the spectacular variety.

Greene's versatility between the pipes and quickness across the crease make him special and he's frustrated opponents all season keeping the red light from going on. He's not afraid to come out of the crease to challenge an opponent and he's vocal with his teammates. Rebounds are rare and if they do happen, Greene is quick to pounce on them or they're cleared by a North Quincy defenseman.

"I'm pretty agressive," said Greene. "I take care of the first shot most of the time. As long as I can cut down the angle our defense can clear out in front of the net. Once you take care of the first one (shot) my defense helps on the next one. "I'm pretty vocal just telling them where to go with the puck. They have their heads down a lot so I have to tell them what to do with it (the puck)."

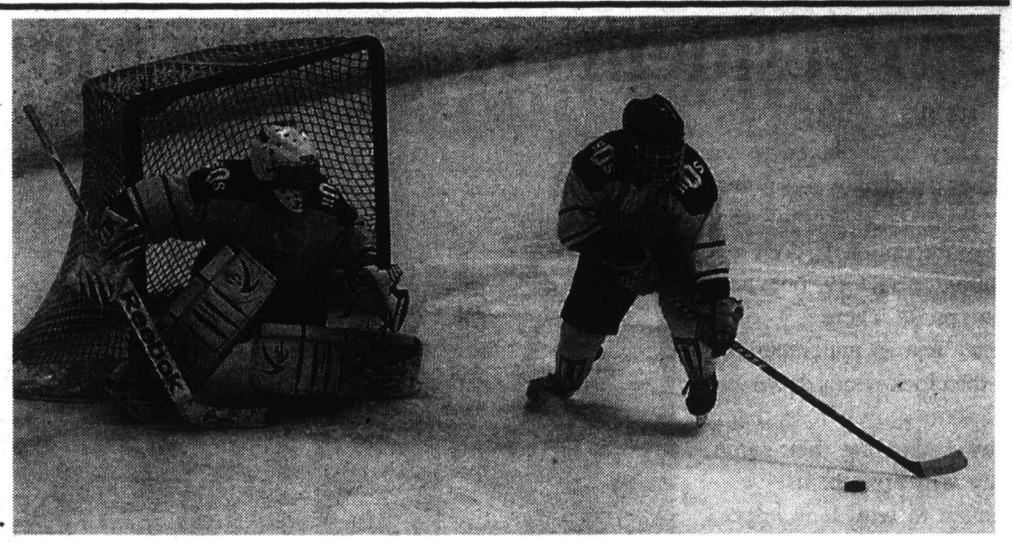

Greene considers himself a "hybrid" style goaltender. He's equally comfortable in the butterfly and stand up positions depending on the shots. "Some goalies go down automatically but a lot of times I stand up and get it in the chest," Greene explained. "When you go down you're going to control it on the ice. When I stand up I feel more comfortable up top."

Greene's skills in goal haven't come by accident. He's a huge talent to be sure, but it's the offseason work he puts in that turned him into an all-star. Greene admires the play of hall-of-famer Patrick Roy, who he considers the first "technically sound" goalie who blazed the trail as to how the position should be approached.

Greene has always worked at his craft and has never taken his status as the starting goaltender for granted. He knows there is always room to get better, to get that little advantage.

"His work ethic is great," said head coach Matt Gibbons. "The two summers leading into the last two years, you go to a hockey

Presidents Earn Spot In Div. 2 South Tourney

Quincy Vs. Medfield Tonight In Franklin

By JOE REARDON

Quincy coach Ted Walsh was heading to the locker room after the second period with his team trailing 6-2 to Abington in their Feb. 18 game and the postseason on the line.

The scorekeeper, who Walsh has known for years, commented to him as he walked past, 'Hey I'm sorry about this.' The Quincy hockey hall of famer looked at him and had just a few words the scorekeeper wasn't expecting to hear.

"I looked at him and said, 'This isn't over,'" said Walsh. "You don't know this team."

Walsh knows his team very well and was confident what appeared to be an insurmountable defecit to some was hardly beyond reach for the Presidents and they had fifteen minutes to make things right again on the ice.

In what was probably the Presidents' most electrifying game of the winter, Quincy roared back in the third period to shock the Green Wave with a 6-6 tie on Abington's home ice at Rockland Arena to give the club the point it needed to qualify for the Div. 2 South Sectionals.

The Presidents finished out the regular season last Friday with a lopsided 10-0 defeat at the hands of Super 8 power Duxbury to put the Presidents at 12-9-2 on the season. No. 14 seed Quincy will meet No. 3 Medfield (14-3-3) tonight (Thursday) at 8:30 p.m. in Franklin in its first tourney game in four years.

To understand how the Presidents made it onto the postseason schedule one only has to look at the way the contest against Abington played out. Quincy was relentless on offense the entire game, putting a whopping 59 shots on net to the Green Wave's 19, but it was Abington who was lighting the lamp early on.

Walsh believes the turning point came after he called a timeout in the second period and addressed his team bluntly. "It started with a timeout," he said. "I told them we had a decision to make - we either sink and I'd sink with them - but you don't realize what you're letting slip by."

Quincy began to force the puck deep into the Green Wave's end in an effort to tire out the defense and the Presidents began their comeback with 10 minutes remaining. The explosive line of Steve Ross, Brian O'Callaghan and Pat Donovan was responsible for all of the Presidents' offense and proved to be unstoppable in the third period. Walsh pulled goaltender Ryan Higgins with 2:30 left in the third and the Presidents responded wit their fifth goal to make it a 6-5 game. Donovan completed the comeback with just 1:20 left with his second goal of the game to make it 6-6.

"It was getting down to the wire," said Walsh. "We knew we were going to tie it. Everybody on the bench knew. They (Abington) looked a little deflated. I think they were surprised by how happy we were with a tie. I don't think they realized that point qualified us for the tournament. We're resilient. There's no quit in this team. There was no question in my mind that we were going to bounce back.

The trickle-down effect of confidence has been a huge reason for the Presidents' success all season and the resiliency of the club against Abington was the most shining example of the fight in Quincy when it's on the ice.

"The message from the coaches and the leaders

Presidents Repeat As Moscardelli Tourney Champs

By BILL GRIFFIN

They have played seven games decided by five points or less. They know what they are doing. It does not guarantee victory, but there is no panic. There is a confidence and an understanding as the clock winds down and the score grows close, that if they simply play their game, they will give themselves a chance to win. It is impossible to ask for more.

And Quincy has found a formula that works. It worked in its stunning upset of North Quincy and it worked in the championship game of the 25th annual Moscardelli Tournament against Milton last week. Play defense, slash to the bucket for perfect bounce passes from J.T. Bain, and, most of all, get the ball to Drew Myers who is rapidly gaining a reputation as a cool-handed gunslinger who makes big shots that win basketball games.

With Quincy trailing by one, Myers calmly swished a three-pointer from deep along the right wing with 35 seconds left to lift the Presidents past Milton for the second straight year in the tourney's title game, 66-62. The win guaranteed Quincy a home game in the Division 1 South Sectional Tourney which begins this week.

Myers, who had 18 (including four threes) against Milton and was the tourney MVP, poured in 15 to lead the Presidents past Plymouth South, 66-45 in the first round of the tourney.

"It was a nice way to get ready for the sectional tourney," said coach Dave Parry. "The Moscardelli means a lot to us, and I was happy with our poise. We showed it at the end, and we showed it when we got down early."

Myers added Milton to the list of Scituate, Hingham, Silver Lake and North as late-game victims of his clutch marksmanship. He has the shooter's mentality. He does not flinch. He loves the big moment. He thinks every shot is going in. If he misses one, the next one is going in. For many, the basket shrinks in the fourth period of close games. For Myers, it grows larger.

"Right now, there is no such thing as a bad shot for Drew," said Parry.

It was a game of spurts and runs. Milton went on a 5-0 burst for a 62-61 lead in the final minute. It was Myers' time. The Presidents zipped the ball around the perimeter. Myers caught it and shot it. That's it. No hesitation, no doubt, no nerves. A Moscardelli title and a home game in the tournament at stake, and he fired away like he was playing HORSE with friends on the playground in July. The shot barely disturbed the string as it cut through the rim for the game-winner.

"When he feels it, when he is in his rhythm, he does not hesitate. He has the green light and when it goes up, I have all the confidence in the world in him," said Parry.

Backtrack a couple of minutes in the fourth period. Bain, who had 14 of his 16 points in the first half to keep Quincy in the game, fired two bounce basses on backdoor cuts to Myers and Brendan Cunningham for layups and a 61-57 lead. He is a 6'3" center, and he is throwing textbook passes that would challenge a point guard. Both with were thrown with the perfect pace and spin. They both came up waist high, caught the cutters in full stride, and all they had do was kiss the ball off the glass.

"They were both called plays. We wanted J.T. and the cutters on the same side of the floor. That's how much confidence we have in his passing," said Parry.

"Brendan and I made eye contact when I got the ball and I knew exactly where he was going to be," said Bain who made a similar backdoor feed to Colin Evans for a big bucket late in the North game. Bain was selected to the tournament all-star team.

Milton broke fast with a scary running game (16 fast-break points in the first half), and led 24-11 after one and 39-30 at the half. Milton scored ten fewer points in one half than Quincy gave up in the entire game against North. If it weren't for Bain's 14 in the half, the game might have been over.

"I liked the way we stayed steady. I always tell the kids, nobody every puts halftime stories in the paper," said parry.

Quincy needed to play defense. The Presidents went back to the halfcourt man-to-man. They ran at shooters, denied the middle and with Bain and James Lam leading the way, kept the quick, athletic Wildcats off the boards.

"They wanted to run up and down the floor and play run-and-gun, so we went back to the halfcourt man-to-man to slow them down," said Parry.

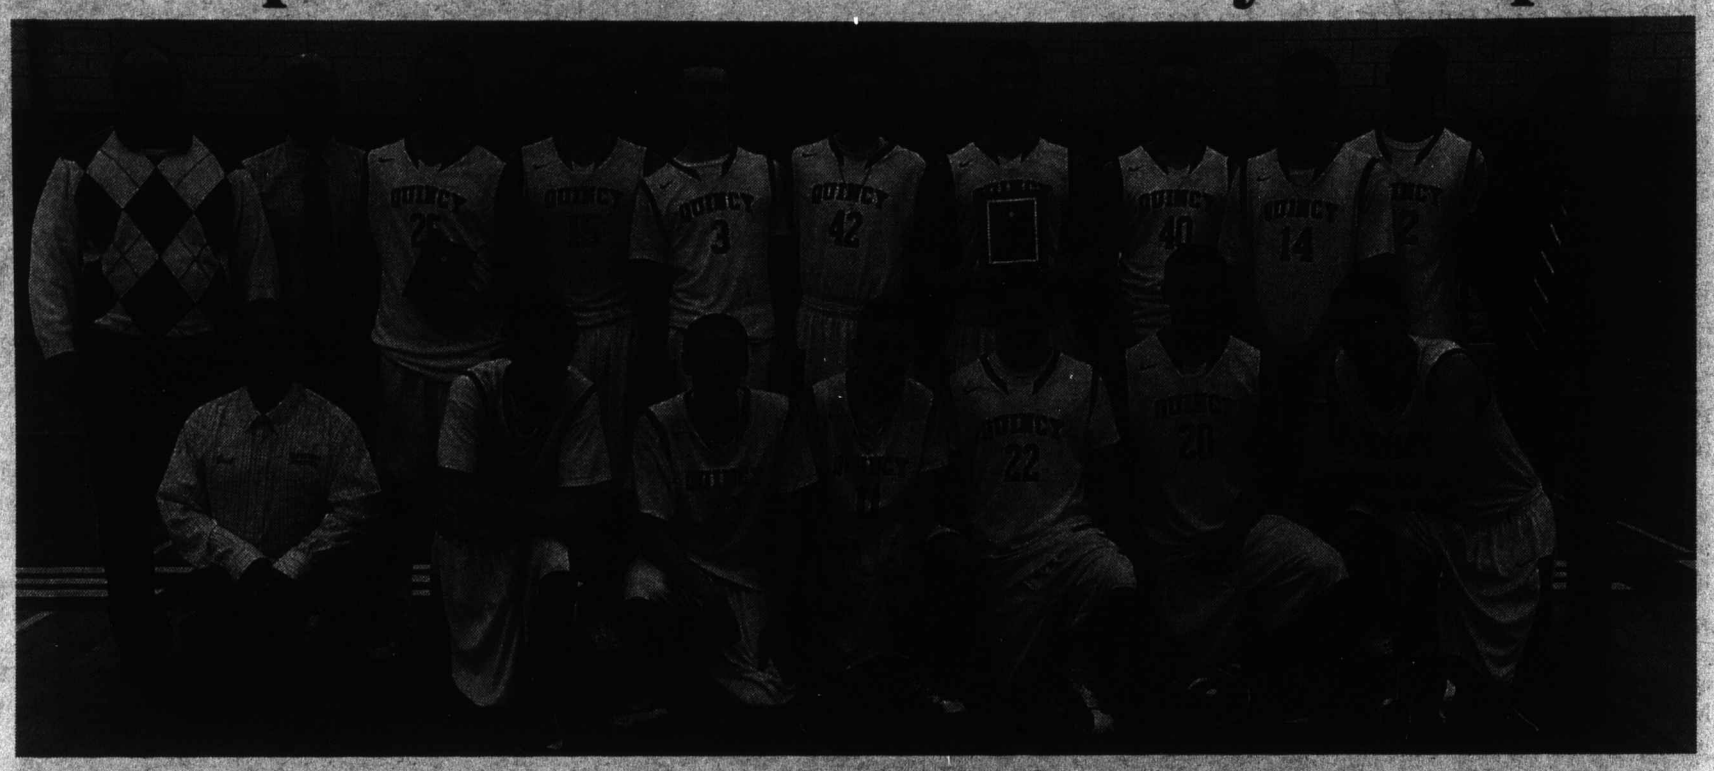

The defense established the foundation for a 24-10 run in the third which showcased Quincy at its best. Chris Callahan, who scored 11 and was named a tourney all-star, was in the middle of it all, scoring hoops on everything from a tap-in to a three-point jumper. Seven different players scored in the quarter. The offense was balanced. The ball moved. Everybody got touches and shots. Parry would like to wrap the period up, put it in a box, and bring it with him to the sectionals.

"We stepped it up a level," he said. "We don't have a me-first player on the team. We're best when we share the ball."

In the opening game against Plymouth South, the starters were a bit sluggish early. (perhaps a carry-over from the North thriller), but Quincy received a lift from Callahan (11 points) and Kevin Williams (10) off the bench. The Presidents led, 19-11 after one, 35-16 at the half, and 48-33 after three.

The starters played much crisper in the second half. Myers had 15, Evans played a strong game with 13 and Lam added 11 as Quincy placed five players in double figures.

Milton defeated Southeastern, 59-50 in the other semifinal game.

VITAL ENERGY

While it may go by different names, it is generally accepted that all life is infused with energy that animates it. For their part, Chinese acupuncturists embrace the concept of "chi" in their work. As for chiropractic, it has long held that the human body has the ability to heal itself from within if barriers are removed that inhibit the healing potential of all its vital functions. This life force is believed to emanate within the nervous system, which serves as its conduit. Thus, chiropractors manipulate the spine and other joints in an effort to allow the nerves to pass through them unimpeded. By removing barriers to nerve energy, the life force is allowed to fully express its healing ways.

Patient care is our top priority and we ensure that you and your family's chiropractic health care needs are met with respect given to short term and long term health goals. We care about you and offer quality care on an individual basis for individual needs. Give us a call to see how we can help you live a healthier, more mobile life. Life shouldn't hurt! For gentle, safe, and drug-free chiropractic care, we ask you to call FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, at 617.472.4220. After all, your spine protects your nervous system, and that controls your whole body. To be healthy, you want to make sure your nervous system is functioning at 100 percent. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

NQ's Grace Geary Tops Three-Point All-Star Contest

By BILL GRIFFIN

North Quincy senior Grace Geary outdueled Quincy sophomore Gabby Jerahian in the finals to win the the three-point shooting contest at the Patriot League All Star Night Friday at Silver Lake High in Kingston.

Jerahian had a terrific semifinal round in which she buried 13 three-pointers in a minute. However, Geary won a shootout to advance to the finals and captured the the competition.

In the boys' game, North Quincy's 6'9" center Anthony Green sank seven three-point jumpers.

"I told him I may start running the offense for him," smiled North coach Kevin Barrett.

Quincy's Colin Evans finished third in the boys' three-point shooting contest. Jackie Chen shot well for North in the competition.

"We got out of there with no injuries," smiled Quincy coach Dave Parry. "The point of the night was to have fun, and enjoy each other, not competition. I think everyone had a good time."

Tournament Time For Three H.S. Hoop Teams

By BILL GRIFFIN

For three of four high-school basketball teams from the city, March Madness begins in the final week of February for the second straight year.

North Quincy's boys and girls teams along with Quincy's boys club all make their second straight tournament appearance when the Division 1 South Sectional playoffs begin this week.

North boys, the top seed in the sectionals with a 20-1 record, open Wednesday night at home at 6:30 against the winner of a preliminary game between No. 16 Marshfield (11-9) and No. 17 Newton South (11-10).

Quincy's boys (14-6), seeded No. 8, host No. 9 Barnstable (13-7) Wednesday at 6:30. Barnstable and BC High were tied with identical 13-7 records. Barnstable won the coin flip for the No. 9 seed. If BC High had won the flip, it would have been a terrific local matchup with Quincy.

Speaking of terrific local matchups, if North and Quincy win their first-round games, they would meet for the third time this season at North Friday at 6:30. The two teams split the season series. Quincy handed North its only loss, a 51-49 thriller, after the Red Raiders had run 19 straight wins. If the two meet for a third time, the crowd would likely fill Fenway Park.

North's girls (13-7), seeded No. 10, faced No. 7 Mansfield (14-6) on the road Tuesday night. The winner of that game travels to meet No. 2 Brockton (17-3) Thursday.

Before the ride begins, it is worth noting the facts of life of playing in the tourney.

• This is Division 1. These are the best teams from the biggest schools in the sectionals. Most of the Patriot League schedule is against Division 2 teams. All three city teams have played Division 1 non-leaguers. This will help because Division 1 offers no easy rides. Every game is a danger zone.

There is also the element of the unknown, especially in the early rounds. Seedings and pairings are done strictly by record. No weight is given to strength of league or schedule. An 11-9 team from a tough league could be a harder test than a 15-5 team from a weak league. You don't know. You show up and you take your chances.

• Everything is about matchups. Basketball is always about matchups. When two teams are unfamiliar with each other, matchups dominate the game. A team that has trouble with its outside shot will struggle against a tall team that packs in a zone. A team that has trouble handling the ball will struggle against a small, quick team.

Two years ago, North won the Fisher Division, had the best overall record in the Patriot League and earned the No. 1 seed. Its tallest player was 6'2". New Bedford walked into the North gym with a team of big athletes, seven players over 6'2", which had spent the winter playing Brockton and Durfee. New Bedford won by eight. Against a small, quick team, North wins. New Bedford was just too big. Matchups.

They are especially important in the first round. Teams don't know each other. They have not scouted each other. Dave Parry and Jess Worden networked and tried to find out as much as possible about Barnstable and Mansfield. However, it is not the same as playing Hingham, Scituate, or Hanover – teams that are known well.

The top seed not only gave North's boys homecourt, it gave the Red Raiders a chance to scout the Newton South vs. Marshfield game. That is a huge advantage. North saw its opponent. Its opponent did not see North.

• As North proved last year with its magical ride to the sectional finals, it can be time of memories which will never dim. The whole school, the whole city is swept up, and the entire state gets to watch what local fans have been seeing for years. Nobody who saw Danny Gould shooting jump shots against Braintree and Newton North last year will soon forget it.

However, it can be the cruelest time. One loss and you go home. There is no margin for error. One bad night, one bad period, one bad play, and it is over. Two months and 20 games of the regular season, all those spring, summer, fall leagues slip away in one moment. Only one team wins its final game.

Too often the disappointment obscures a great season which would be unjust for these three teams. North's boys have been a model of consistent excellent and set a school record for consecutive wins in the regular season. Quincy's defensive improvement over two months has been striking. North's girls have set an example of how to deal with adversity. All that should not be forgotten.

• Looking past any opponent is foolish. Looking past a tournament opponent is very foolish. Put all thoughts of a Quincy vs. North rematch aside and just play the first-round game.

North Quincy Boys

Strengths: The Red Raiders have the best player in the Patriot League in senior point guard Kyle Richardson. He changes opposing game plans. He doesn't give up the ball, so forget the press. He is an exceptional passer. At 5'7", he is second on his team in offensive rebounding and third in total rebounding. His defense is endline to endline pressure. Opposing coaches frequently refuse to let Richardson's man bring the ball up the floor. He is at his best in the fourth periods of big games.

North's defense, anchored by Anthony Green, is remarkable. North gives an average of 45 points per game, the best in the school's history since start of the shot-clock era. Green blocks shots, changes shots, and, at times, abolishes the layup. Solomon Umoren is an excellent one-on-one defender. Matt Gerakis and Efthim Butka play hard and are well above average defensively.

Jackie Chen and Greg Clarke let coach Kevin Barrett got at least seven deep.

Keys to success: The outside shot. When North hits from the outside, the Red Raiders are a great team. They are at home, they shoot better at home, and if they hit, the middle will open and Richardson will spend the entire game penetrating and dishing for layups.

Quincy Boys

Strengths: Balance and depth. Their first eight players can shoot, pass, and rebound. Putting four or five players in double figures is a habit. At the end of close games, Drew Myers is a big-time shooter. J.T. Bain is a brutal cover inside and finds open cutters for big baskets like the ones which help decide the Milton and North games.

Chris Callahan is the first player off the bench and would start for most teams. Kevin Williams and Tyler Beach are solid reserves. Callahan keys the defense which has been the story of the season. Quincy tightened up its man-to-man over the second half of the season against Duxbury (52 points), North (49), Plymouth South (45) and Milton (23 in the second half) to earn a home tourney game.

Keys to success: Rebounding. They are not huge and this will be a factor against a big Barnstable team. James Lam is an athletic force off the boards, but everybody has to block out. There also can be no gaps in defensive intensity as in the first half of the Plymouth South and Milton games.

North Girls

Strengths: Speed, defense, heart and one of the best players in the state in senior guard Grace Geary. Geary averaged 28 points over her last 12 games. She is impossible to cover her straight-up, one-on-one, so expect to see boxes and all manner of trick defenses. The fact that she can pass, handle the ball, rebound and defend means that she could score seven points and still be the best player on the floor as she was at home against Scituate.

Jane Minton has played the post at 5'7" in Maya Umoren's absence and has used grit and intelligence to give North an even break off the boards. Marissa McGue rebounds, scores and flourishes in the running game. Haley McKay is a lockdown defender who can shoot. If defenses completely focus on Geary, McKay is a good option.

Keys to success: Health. North had its starting five healthy for seven of 20 games. All-league center Maya Umoren missed the last seven games with a knee injury. North missed her especially in the final week of the season when two close road losses cost the Red Raiders a home tourney game. Umoren's return is uncertain for the tournament.

rink and he's there. His work ethic is just unbelievable. His sophomore year he was sitting but working as hard as anyone. Some kids would look at it and say, 'Well I'm the starting goalie next year.' He works hard."

Greene sat for two seasons behind starter James Dunn before taking over as a junior. The time on the bench - watching and learning - were instrumental in Greene's growth as a goaltender. "Nolan learned the position and what it takes during the tournament and the regular season," said Gibbons. "I think that pays off. Nolan has been just unbelievable. You know he's back there and you feel a little more safe."

Greene feels lucky to be part of such a great rivalry with cross-town power Quincy. The games between the two teams are always huge draws and have that special tournament-feel to them that is rare for a regular-season game.

"We're all best friends with them," Greene said. "During the season we're still friends except for those forty-five minutes on the ice. A lot of teams don't have that kind of rivalry - getting to play in a packed rink. The intensity definitely goes up during those games. It's two points on the schedule but it means a little more."

Greene knows the importance of the old cliche to take one game at a time, but he still likes to look at the big picture in quiet moments. For a high school hockey player, that means Causeway Street.

"That's what you dream about," Greene said. "That's the ultimate goal."

Presidents Earn Spot In Div. 2 South Tourney

on this team was that there would be no quit," said Walsh. "There was never one hint of anybody quitting. They've decided talent alone wasn't enough. They play with talent and character. That was a perfect example of what character on the team can do. It starts with the leaders in the locker room - not just the captains but the seniors who refuse to let go. They wanted to make that tournament and they did.'

Walsh and his staff were even able to take some positives away from the loss to the Green Dragons last Friday at in the regular season finale at Quincy Youth Arena.

The effort was apparent against the fast-skating Duxbury squad, but Quincy did stray from its game plan and that allowed the Green Dragons the green light assault on the Presidents' net.

Although the effort was there against the Green Dragons, the Presidents weren't finishing checks or putting enough pressure on coverage. Walsh said these were some aspects of Quincy's game that will be addressed this week at practice.

"We skated hard," said Walsh. "If anything, they learned if they don't follow the game plans this the damage that can be done against them. It just seems like 95% of the time when we execute our game plan we win. When we get away from it, we don't play so well. We have to focus on the positive things we did this year.

"We were 4-1-1 the last six games - still very good. I'm proud of this group, believe me. We're looking to go into the tournament and do some damage."

Heart - Not Height - Defines North Quincy's Kyle Richardson

By BILL GRIFFIN

The best way to measure Kyle Richardson is in his own words.

"I'd like to be remembered as a player who put heart over height, worked as hard as he could, and most importantly, was a good teammate who made those around him better."

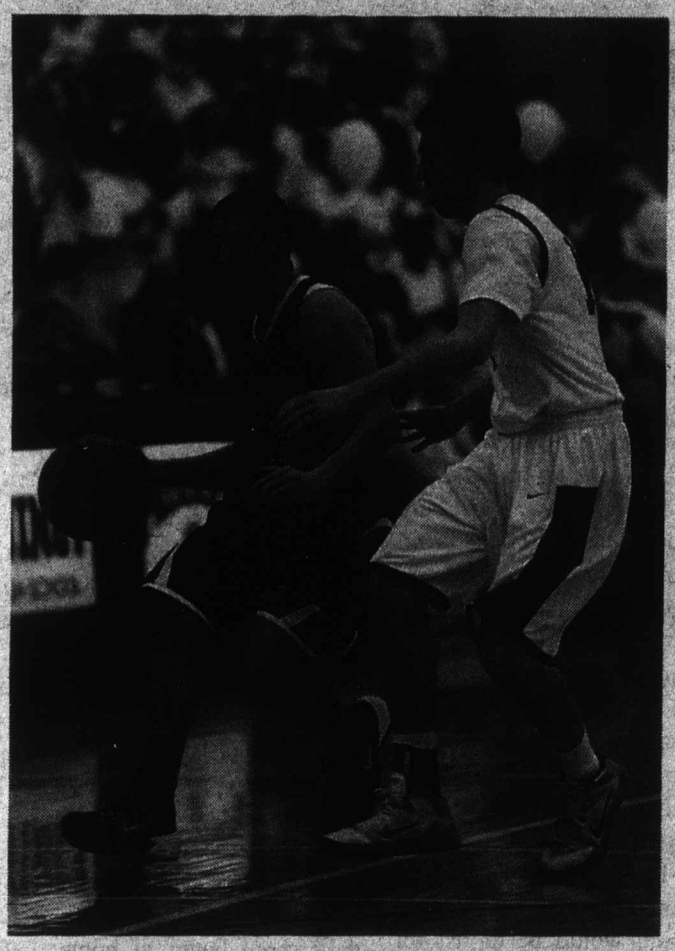

Richardson is 5'7", he does not have a traditional jump shot and he is the best player in the Patriot League. How? Excellence is not defined by height, inches and jump shots. It is far more than mere numbers. It is about the person as much as it is about the player.

"A lot of people have told me I was too small for basketball," said Richardson, North Quincy's senior point guard and leader in its 20-1 regular season. "Every time I see my name in the paper, it has my height next to it. It doesn't bother me. It's what you do with your ability that counts."

And he does have ability. He is an athlete. He is quick, strong, and he can jump. He has studied and worked at basketball, and understands it the way a coach understands it. He has instincts which cannot be taught. He is a fierce competitor. He loves the moment of truth in the fourth period of close games. These may not be the traditional qualifications for a basketball standout, but perhaps they should be. How is he the best player in the league? All of the above.

"He's a tremendous competitor. He is an intelligent player who makes the right decisions, and he is a great teammate. It's hard to ask for more," said coach Kevin Barrett.

The best place to start is with his rebounding. He is the second leading rebounder on his team. He has been in double figures three times this year. He watches games on television and studies the angles and bounces. How does the rebound come off the rim? Where does it go? What's the best way to use his quickness and strong hands to get to the ball?

'IT'S WHAT YOU do with your ability that counts," says North Quincy senior point guard Kyle Richardson (left).

"Shots from the corner generally go to the other side. Shots from the key generally bounce long. I watch on TV, and it helps me judge the angles and direction of rebounds better during games," said Richardson.

There is more to rebounding. A rebound frequently goes to the player who wants it the most. Few want the ball more than Richardson.

"I cannot count the number of scrums I've seen Kyle in against four or five players bigger than him when he's come out with the ball," said Barrett.

He may not have a jump shot, but he can shoot. He has a step-back set shot with a quicksilver release which is good out past 20 feet. He can kiss home a floater at full speed with soft touch through a maze of taller leapers and jumpers. He doesn't give the ball away because his hands are so good and he understands well how to keep his body between the defender and the basketball. He is a generous, smart passer who knows when to flip a lob and when to fire a dart because he has thrown each about a million times.

"I was always smaller in basketball," he said. "I kept getting jump shots blocked, so I went with the set shot. I can get it off quickly and I step back to create more space. Against taller teams, I'd have layups blocked, so I learned the floater when I drove. I've worked on both every summer, all summer since freshman year"

On defense, he is an endline-to-endline hound. Defense is work. Nobody works harder. Opposing coaches will not allow Richardson's man to bring the ball up the floor. He is that good. In every phase of his play, he has understood his talent and built upon it with intelligence and effort. He knows the game.

"I have complete trust in him. There are no better hands to have the ball in at the end of a game. He's earned that trust with work," said Barrett.

Richardson has been on varsity for three years. On any team that doesn't have Pat Gould, he would have been a three-year starter. North is a remarkable 55-11 over those three years. The Red Raiders made the sectional finals his junior year. They are two points away from an undefeated season. They are a one-point loss to Scituate away from three straight Fisher Division titles and three straight years with the best record in the Patriot League. These are the good old days.

"It's no accident that we've had those three years with Kyle on the team," said Barrett.

As a sophomore and junior, Richardson supplied defense, energy and the occasional clutch bucket. He played with Pat and Danny Gould, Marquis McClendon and Tim Liuzzo. His job was to help, move the ball to the open man, do all the dirty, little work of basketball that lets the stars shine. This year, the ball has been in his hands. It is his team.

"Me, Efthim (Butka) and Anthony (Green)," he corrected. "The hardest part for me is to be more vocal. I like to lead by example, but this year I've talked more and try to encourage everybody."

There are three fourth periods that tell well Richardson's story. In his junior year against Scituate, he brought North back from down 14 with an array of three-pointers, offensive rebounds, floaters and bullseye passes for layups. Against Braintree this year, he talked his way back into the game with an injured hamstring and scored 12 in a two-point win. Against Quincy, he had ten in the fourth, including a three-pointer off the set shot which brought North within two in the final minutes.

The Quincy and Scituate games were losses. North fans have one regret about both. Richardson didn't get one more touch.

"I try to play myself into the game in the first three quarters and see what we need," he said. "If we're down in the fourth period, I try to make something happen. It's a different mindset. It's not just me. It's Efthim too. Look what he did against Wareham and Silver Lake in the fourth period."

He is not a player to be judged by numbers, but here they are. He is averaging nine points and five assists. His assist-to-turnover ratio is better than 2-1. He has 43 steals and 103 (count 'em) rebounds. And his coach has one more number It is a big number.

"As a player and person, Kyle is one in a million," said Barrett.

At least.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Take time from your busy schedule to check out what's going on around you. You might find that someone has been secretly trying to pull the wool over those beautiful Sheep's eyes.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Once again, the Bovine's boldness pays off in uncovering the source of a disturbing workplace situation. Your personal life calls for patience, as a certain matter plays itself out.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Forget about going all out to impress someone in your personal life. Just being yourself is all that matters. A workplace decision will need more time. Don't rush into it.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Some supersensitive Crabs might take offense at what they perceive as a slight. But a closer look points to a simple misunderstanding. The weekend holds a welcome surprise.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Sure, you can roar your head off over someone's failure to keep a promise. But the wiser course would be to ask why it happened. Be prepared for an answer that might well surprise you.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A developing relationship needs time to find its direction. So please be patient and resist pushing things along. A recently cooled-down workplace situation could heat up again.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Congratulations. Your well-thought-out proposal seems to be working. Someone who hasn't agreed with you on most things in the past could turn out to be one of your major supporters.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Things seem to be going well. However, you can still expect criticism -- some of it pretty heavy. But as long as you can back up your position, you'll be able to rise above it.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Getting together with people who care for you is a great way to get that ego boost you might feel you need at this time. Things start to look brighter by week's end.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You should be able to continue with your plans once you get past those temporary delays. Surprise, surprise. An offer to help comes from a most unlikely source.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Prioritizing your tasks is important this week because of all those demands you have to deal with. The pressure eases in time for you to enjoy the weekend.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Save your energy and stay focused on what has to be done, despite all those distractions you're likely to face. You should see some evidence of real progress by week's end.
BORN THIS WEEK: You are a generous, giving person who is always ready, willing and more than able to help others in need.

Houghs Neck Congregational

This Sunday morning a Communion service at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Avenue will be held at 10 a.m.

Pastor Felix Carrion will lead the service and deliver the sermon "The Transfiguration." The choir will sing under the direction of Minister of Music, Steve Reed. The members of the Diaconate serving communion are Janice Hughes, Shirley Pearson, Joseph Giggey and Bryan Logue.

Light refreshments will be provided in the Coffee Room following the service, donations accepted.

Friday, Feb 28 the First Friday Fun Night will be at 5:30 for our Sunday School pupils and their friends sponsored by the teachers.

Union Congregational

Mr. Mark Goodwin, Sexton of Union Congregational Church since August of 1998 and Senior Deacon of the church, will be honored by a macaroni and cheese and hamburger Luncheon this Sunday.

The Luncheon is being served by the church in honor of Goodwin's 40th birthday and is being coordinated by the Pastor of the church, the Rev. John Swanson. Friends of the church and Goodwin are invited to attend the 10 a.m. Worship Service preceding the Luncheon as well as the Luncheon, which follows at 11:30 a.m. Call 617-479-6661 for more information. Union Church is located at the corner of Beach Street and Rawson Road in Wollaston.

United Methodist Church

On Ash Wednesday, March 5, Quincy Community United Methodist Church will begin the Lenten season with a shared supper and service, and everyone is invited to participate.

The evening will begin at 6:30 p.m. with a potluck supper. In keeping with the Lenten season, bring something very simple to share. A brief service of Holy Communion will follow and, for those who wish to receive them, ashes will be available.

The church is located at 40 Beale St., diagonally across the street from the Wollaston MBTA station. For more information call 617-773-3319.

Quincy Point Congregational

Sunday, March 2 is Stewardship and Communion Sunday at 10 a.m. at Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington Street. All are welcome.

The sanctuary is handicap accessible from the Abbey Road side of the building.

Deacon of the day will be Wayne McCulley. Fellowship hour will follow the service in the social hall. Light refreshments and coffee will be served.

Lent begins on March 5th. A service of communion and an optional Imposition of Ashes will he held at 7 p.m. in the Baharian Chapel (enter via the Dunkin Donuts doors). The Lenten Mission for the church is collecting socks, showers shoes (flip-flops or slides) and travel size toiletries for Father Bill's.

The collection box will be in the Social Hall on Sundays and can also be dropped in the office weekdays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. The final day for donations will be on Easter Sunday.

Bethany Congregational

Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy Center will have Sunday Communion Worship Service and Sunday School at 10 a.m.

The Rev. William Harding will conduct the service and preach a sermon entitled "Desire for Love." Fellowship with light refreshments will follow the worship service.

All are welcome to attend Bethany Church Worship Services and its numerous group activities. Bethany has a Youth Group, a Men's Group, an Outreach Mission Group doing various charity works and a Friday morning Bible Study Class.

The church office is open from 8:30 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m.

Visit http://www.bethanychurchquincy.org/ for updates and activities.

The Bethany Church Service is broadcast on Quincy Access Television at 6:00 PM on Thursdays and 10:00 AM on Sundays on Channel 8.

Pretzel Sunday

Sunday, March 2, is the last Sunday before Lent begins and it's also Pretzel Sunday at Quincy Community United Methodist Church. During the 10:30 a.m. worship service, everyone will get a pretzel.

The Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden said that she really didn't know the origins of the custom, but guessed it may have its roots in legend. "According to folklore, a German monk invented the pretzel as a reward for his students," she said. "When they knew their catechism, he gave them a pretzel. The shape is supposed to represent a person's hands crossed over her or his chest in prayer. A pretzel has three holes and yet it's still one pretzel – similar to the shamrock's symbolism of the Trinity. However, as to how pretzels became associated with the last Sunday before Lent, I have no idea."

The church is located at 40 Beale St., Wollaston,

For more information call 617-773-3319.

Pirate Fest March 8

Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave., Quincy, will host a "Pirate Fest" Saturday, March 8th from 10 to noon in Fellowship Hall.

There will be Pirate School, treasures, crafts, activities and snacks. This event is planned for pirates from pre-school through about grade 3.

The cost is $10 per child and $5 per adult.

Pirate costumes are optional (no pistols, swords, daggers or other weapons please).

Reservations are required as space is limited. E-mail Sue at hncc@comcast.net or call 617-479-2311. All children must be accompanied by an adult.

Garden Club Meets March 5

The Houghs Neck Garden Club will meet Wednesday, March 5th at 7 p.m. in the Community Room at Nut Island.

The program titled "Gardening is Murder" will be presented by author Neal Sanders.

Refreshments are served at 7 p.m. hosted by Susan Lewis and Jane Hoffman. After a brief business meeting and announcements at 7:30 the program will begin.

She dedicated her life to raising her children, and was active in the Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts of America. She enjoyed crafting, bird watching and cooking shows.

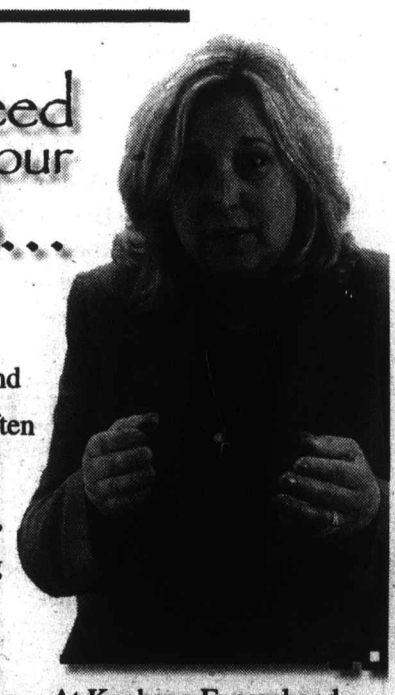

Loving mother of Michael and his wife Laurie of Marshfield and Cathleen Broderick and her husband James of Bridgewater. Cherished grandmother of Shannon, Brenna and Jake Broderick, all of Bridgewater. Also survived by her twin sister Janet Cain and her husband Merrill of Sandwich, brother Ted Randall of FL, and her late sister Mary O'Donnell and family of CT.

Funeral arrangements were made by Prophett-Chapman, Cole & Gleason Funeral Home, Bridgewater.

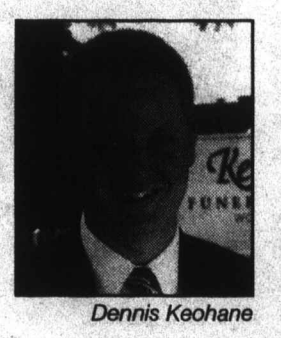

Interment was at St. Thomas Aquinas Cemetery, Bridgewater.

Memorial donations may be made to the Lupus Foundation of America or St Jude's Children's Hospital.

I just need your help...

We do hear this, and in lots of ways. Often it's a combination: weariness, anxiety, not really knowing what to do.

Dr. J. Philip McLaren, 72

A memorial service for Dr. J. Philip "Doc" McLaren, 72, of Hawaii and formerly Quincy will be held in Quincy in the spring.

Dr. McLaren died Feb. 12 in Hawaii after a brief illness.

DR. J. PHILIP McLAREN

Originally from Los Angeles, he was the son of a science educator who instilled in him a curiosity for the natural world and a profound commitment to his Christian faith. Dr. McLaren attended Moody Bible Institute where he met the love of his life, Lynne McLaren (Hipskind) to whom he was to be married to for 51 years. In 1964, he graduated from Bethel College in Indiana and went on to receive his PhD from Western Michigan University in 1968, during which time he and Lynne started a family.

Dr. McLaren moved to Quincy with his family in 1976 to become a professor of biology at Eastern Nazarene College. Over the course of 35 years at the college, he inspired curiosity and shared his passion for teaching and science with students, colleagues and family alike. He is most remembered as an educational adventurer and world traveler – always with a ready story or a lesson to share. He organized and chaperoned hundreds of foreign educational field trips for students to discover God's wonders on this planet and made personal connections everywhere he went. Dr. McLaren's favorite travel advice to his students was to "sleep when you can, eat what's in front of you, and if you like it, buy it, as you may never see it again."

In typical fashion, he had recently retired to Hawaii with Lynne hoping to continue their explorations and education – and with volcanoes, rainforests, birds and bugs to see he was surely in his element. To no one's surprise, he immediately found himself a volunteer tutoring position with the local elementary school where his great grey beard was a welcome sight.

Beyond education, Dr. McLaren got great joy out of the hobby farm he had on the coast in Nova Scotia. There he and Lynne shared a quiet spot where they grew blueberries to sell, had an extensive garden and became part of the local community.

His interests included becoming a private pilot, SCUBA diving, sailing, celebrating his Scottish heritage as a member of the Royal Scottish Dance Society and his long time membership in the Scots' Charitable Society. He always took an active role in his church. Bethel College honored him as Alumnus of the Year in 1999 and he served as President of Massachusetts Marine Educators, (MME) from 1985-1987.

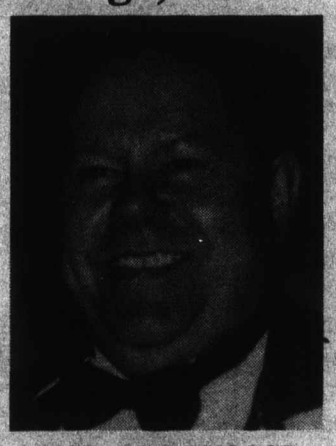

Beloved husband of Lynne McLaren of HI. Dear brother David McLaren of Georgia. Loving father of Lark McLaren, Merry Smith and her husband Jeffrey of Quincy, and Reilly Guardino-McLaren and her husband Chris of CA. Cherished grandfather of Lauren McGough of NJ, Tessie McGough of Cambridge, and Logan Guardino of CA. He will be missed by all of his friends and students alike.

Memorial donations may be made to scots-charitable.org.

Richard J. Dhooge, 71

Louise E. Randall, 89

A memorial service for Louise Ellen (Hey) Randall, 89, of Squantum and formerly Winchester will be held at the First Church of Squantum.

Mrs. Randall died Feb. 14 after a brief illness.

Mrs. Randall was born in October 1924, the daughter of George H. and Edna M. (Shay) Hey. She graduated from the Woodward School for Girls in 1942 and the Massachusetts General Hospital School of Nursing in 1945. She then worked as a registered nurse at Massachusetts General Hospital, in the Nurse Cadet Corp at Camp Edwards in Bourne, and at Quincy City Hospital until 1949.

After raising her six children, she continued her education at Boston University and was awarded the Bachelor of Arts degree in anthropology, Summa Cum Laude and Phi Beta Kappa in 1974, and the Masters of Arts in anthropology, with honors, in 1984.

She was a volunteer at the Peabody Museums of Natural History in Cambridge. She was a former member of the boards of trustees of the Woodward School, the Quincy Symphony Orchestra, and the Boston Harbor Associates.

Long active in civic affairs, she was a member of the League of Women Voters and served on the Board of Registrars of Voters for the City of Quincy. She was a member of the First Church of Squantum where she enjoyed singing in the choir. A longtime member of the Squantum Yacht Club, Mrs. Randall was an avid sailor and raced Hustler-class sailboats with her husband well into her 70s.

Beloved wife of 67 years of Douglas A. Randall. Loving mother of Kristie and her husband Dwight Dewsnap of Milton, George and his partner Alice Horner of Hingham, Nathan "Ted" and his wife Deena of Squantum, Alexander and his wife Virginia of Hingham, Roger and his wife Elizabeth of Wellesley, and Barry and his wife Lisa of MN. Cherished grandmother of 16 and great-grandmother of six. Dear sister of Carolyn Richardson of Pembroke, Judith Halberg of VT, the late Pauline Edson of Quincy, and the late William Hey of WA.

Funeral arrangements were made by Alfred D. Thomas Funeral Home, Milton.

Private interment.

Memorial donations may be made to the Alzheimer's Association, Massachusetts/New Hampshire Chapter, 480 Pleasant St., Watertown, MA 02472.

Mary A. Bestick, 67

A funeral Mass for Mary A. (Urban) Bestick, 67, of Quincy was celebrated Feb. 21 at St. John the Baptist Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Bestick died Feb. 16 at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth.

Born in Quincy on Nov. 20, 1946, she was the loving daughter of the late Stanley and Elinda (Purpura) Urban. Mrs. Bestick was a graduate of Quincy High School. She worked for the former Bargain Center and Jordan Marsh in Quincy. She valued family, loved caring for them and was a devoted caretaker for her mom.

Beloved wife of the late Roland L. Bestick. Loving mother of Mary E. Brown and her husband Colin of Quincy. Cherished grandmother of Ava. Dear sister of Robert Urban and his wife Cheryl of E. Bridgewater. Cherished aunt of Taylor.

Funeral arrangements were made by Bolea-Buonfiglio Funeral Home, 116 Franklin St., Quincy.

Interment was private.

Daniel W. Harding, 50

Funeral services for Daniel W. Harding, 50, of Quincy were held Monday at Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Mr. Harding died unexpectedly Feb. 20 at the home of his sister in Weymouth.

DANIEL W. HARDING

He was born in Boston, and raised and educated in Quincy schools. He was a third generation pipefitter and member of Local 537 for twenty years. He enjoyed sports, especially NASCAR and the New England Patriots. Mr. Harding was loyal to his family and friends.

Beloved father of Tyler M. Thomson of Attleboro, Krystal M. Colantonio of RI, and Stephen W. Harding, Samantha L. Harding, and Shawn D. Harding, all of Quincy. Loving grandfather of Jayleana and Jacob. Cherished son of Elizabeth (Crossman) Anderson of CA, the late Harold W. Harding and the late Elaine (Couch) Harding. Dear brother of Christine DeThomas of CO, Michele Ash, Michael Ash, Adrienne Giles, and Patrick Harding all of Weymouth, Jennifer King of Brockton, and the late Julie Harding. Also survived by many aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews, cousins and friends.

Private interment.

Memorial donations may be made to Father Bill's Place, 422 Washington St., Quincy, MA 02169.

Edward L. Tidwell, 58

A memorial event for Edward Lee "Ed" Tidwell, 58, of Quincy will be privately announced in the near future.

Mr. Tidwell died Dec. 27 in his home from complications arising from a hernia.

He was born in Fort Dix, N.J., the son of Lee and Sophie Tidwell. He spent his youth in Quincy Point, attending Sacred Heart High School in Weymouth. He was enrolled in the U.S. Air Force Reserve during the mid 1970s, stationed in California. Mr. Tidwell began a decade-long career in electronics when he attended RETS in the late 1970s, with tenures at Honeywell, Oros, and Interleaf during the 1980s.

A jack-of-all-trades with marks of excellence in anything he put his mind to, Mr. Tidwell's career trajectory changed in 1990. He spent a few years trying his hand at real estate, vending machines, and charitable work with The March of Dimes. In 1994 he established Cafe Mundo in Brockton, where he was well-loved by the downtown community until its closing in 2006. Upon closing the restaurant, he embarked on a career working as a FEMA-contracted disaster recovery analyst with various agencies including Adjusters International and SAIC.

He was an avid music fan, notably rock, jazz, and the blues, and a skilled guitar player. His other interests included fixing computers and cars, traveling, sports, film, and cooking, with his specialty being Italian cuisine.

Beloved husband of Linda. Loving father of Jeff and David. Also survived by his mother, Sophie, many good friends, and an extended family that loved him very much.

Adam P. Holmes, 53

A memorial service for Adam P. Holmes, 53, of Foxborough and formerly Quincy was held Sunday at Roberts and Sons Funeral Home, Foxborough.

Mr. Holmes died unexpectedly Feb. 17 in his home.

He was born in Boston on Nov. 16, 1960, and was a longtime resident of Quincy. He had been a Foxborough resident for the past year. Mr. Holmes was formerly employed at Republic Plumbing of Quincy.

He was a former member of the V.F.W., George F. Bryan Post in Quincy. He enjoyed playing darts and participated in a dart league in Quincy. He was an avid New England Patriots fan, enjoyed fishing and loved animals.

Beloved son of Sally (McLeod) Holmes of Foxborough and the late Ronald N. Holmes. Loving father of David Church. Beloved brother of Ginger Carvell and her husband Ken of CT, Douglas J. Holmes, Sr. and his wife Cynthia of Foxborough, Natalie Peterson and her husband Ronald of NH, and Andrew P. Holmes of Weymouth. Also survived by several nieces and nephews.

Memorial donations may be made to the MSPCA Angell Fund, 350 S. Huntington Ave., Boston, MA 02130.

Mary E. Raux, 98

A funeral Mass for Mary E. (O'Brien) Raux, 89, of North Quincy, was celebrated Monday in Sacred Heart Church, North Quincy.

Mrs. Raux died Feb. 20.

Beloved wife of Eugene J. Raux. Daughter of the late John and Mary (McDonough) O'Brien. Sister of John O'Brien and his wife, Lorraine, and the late Jane C. O'Brien, Ellen T. O'Brien and Redmond O'Brien. Mother of Mary Ellen Raux, Rev Redmond Raux, Christine Putnam and her husband Stephen, and the late Eugene Raux and his wife Debra. Survived by ten grandchildren and seven nieces and nephews.

Mrs. Raux was born in Milton and graduated from North Quincy High School in 1942 and from Bridgewater State College in 1980. She was a children's librarian at Thomas Crane Public Library for 60 years.

She was a lifelong member of Sacred Heart Parish where she was a member of the Women's Sodality, and she co-directed the Bingo game for half a century with her husband Eugene. She was also a Girl Scout leader and an avid reader and gardener.

Burial was private.

Funeral arrangements were made by the Keohane Funeral Home, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Sacred Heart Church Fund.

Chili Lovers Gather At Annual Cook-Off

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Chili lovers gathered at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church on Feb. 15 for the 5th annual "Chili Bowl" Chili-Cook-Off.

Twenty contestants, five in the restaurant category and 15 in the individual category, brought their best recipes to compete for the title of best chili in Quincy.

With a small $5 admission fee, the public was welcome to come and sample as much chili as they could eat. They then were asked to vote on which was their favorite recipe.

Competing in the restaurant category were Quincy staples Coop's Bar & Grille, Louis, The Wheelhouse Diner, Jamie's Catering, and the relatively new Wild Willy's Burgers with their sirloin steak chili which boasts a tasty blend of black beans, peppers, and mesquite flavoring.

In case the generous helpings of chili weren't enough to fill stomachs, hotdogs, cookies, brownies, soda, water to cool down burning mouths, and beer were also available.

Kara Kuntupis of Houghs Neck Congregational, who hosted the event for the first time this year, wasted no time in sampling the offerings. "I've tried about eight or nine I think," she said, although she wasn't at liberty to say which ones were her top picks.

Some people were repeat contenders and several had come from outside of Quincy to compete. "We have about eight repeats and nine or ten new," she said.

"People definitely come from out of town and they bring their people with them. We have contestants from the area. Most from Quincy but some from Stoughton and other areas too."

Despite the snowstorm closing in, people still made their way to Houghs Neck for the event. "We're hoping for a couple hundred," said Kuntupis, who noted a bit of a slow-down in attendance during the competition's last hour, although she was still happy with the turnout.

"At the beginning there was a really good crowd so we're pleased."

George Green and Jack Oliverio of Coop's Bar & Grille were back hoping to secure their 4th consecutive win and made sure to ladle out generous helpings of their house recipe chili.

"Three time champs!," said Green who described his entry as "spicy but not too spicy."

"Chili isn't chili unless it's spicy," he said.

Entries ranged from traditional to barbeque and buffalo chicken, although there were no vegetarian entries this year according to Kuntupis.

Securing their winning streak by placing first in the restaurant category was Coop's Bar & Grille.

"It seems that [Coop's] does it every year," said Ralph Jacobs, Chair of Trustees at Houghs Neck Congregational, who handed the winners their medals.

Third place in the individual category went to Kathryn Hubley, who is vice-chair of the Quincy School Committee. An unprecedented tie occurred for first place. The honor went to both Nicole O'Hare and Meredith Earnest.

"What are the odds that we have a tie for first place?" said Jacobs.

All proceeds gathered from the event will go directly towards funding the operational costs of the church.

Barn Owls For Rodent Control Lecture At Trailside Museum March 11

Dr. Motti Charter will present a lecture on "Project Bird Box Israel," which uses barn owls instead of poison to control rodents in Israel, Jordan, and the Palestinian Authority. The talk is on Tuesday, March 11, from 7:15 to 8:30 p.m. at the Blue Hills Trailside Museum, 1904 Canton Ave., Milton.

The talk is sponsored by Cong. Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills, along with Mass. Audubon, Blue Hills Trailside Museum, Friends of the Blue Hills, Brookwood Community Farm and The Wakefield Estate, and it is FREE and open to the public.

Project Bird Box has assisted in the placement of nearly 3,000 barn owl nesting boxes in seven regions in cooperation with three governmental ministries and private funds. An important goal of the project is to raise public awareness about the usefulness of raptors and the benefits that human can derive from environmentally friendly agricultural practices. One British naturalist said, "Amazingly, this barn owl nesting scheme has transcended Middle Eastern politics and cultures by expanding to Jordan and the Palestinian Authorities with the full support of the governments involved."

Dr. Charter recently received a Special Achievement Award from the World Owl Hall of Fame for Project Bird Box, which is supported by the University of Haifa and Israel's Society for the Protection of Nature. He is a graduate of the University of Massachusetts and earned his Master's and Doctorate from Tel Aviv University in Israel.

The talk will include free admission into the Trailside Museum, which exhibits local wildlife, including a close-up look at a barn owl.

For more information, contact Cong. Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills at Office@TempleShalomOnline.org or call 617-689-5151.

DA Morrissey Wants Drug More Readily Available To Reverse Opiate Overdoses

Glynn Supports Narcan OTC

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Quincy police lieutenant who has overseen the department's nationally-recognized program to use Narcan to reverse opiate overdoses supports Norfolk County District Attorney Michael Morrissey's effort to make the drug more readily available.

Officers with the Quincy Police Department started carrying Narcan in October 2010. The drug, a trademarked name for naloxone, is used to reverse overdoses caused by opiates such as heroin, hydrocodone (found in Vicodin), oxycodone (found in Percocet and OxyContin), and fentanyl. Law enforcement personnel, including Quincy's police officers, use a naloxone nasal spray, though other preparations of the drug are available in clinical settings.

Between October 2010 and Feb. 25 of this year, the department's officers have used the nasal spray to reverse 226 overdoses, according to Det. Lt. Patrick Glynn, who oversees the Narcan program and received an Advocate for Action Award from the White

Gutro Faults Koch For Not Appealing Flood Map Sooner

Councillors: City Should Provide Tax Abatements To 4,100 Homeowners

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch's decision not to appeal FEMA's flood zone map before last summer's deadline drew the ire of Councillor Doug Gutro Monday night, and his colleagues agreed the city should consider providing tax abatements to the 4,100 affected homeowners.

The new flood zone map proposed by FEMA would add 1,400 homes to flood zones and place 2,700 others already in flood zones into higher risk zones, which have a higher insurance premium. Norfolk County communities had a 90-day period ending on June 12, 2013, to appeal the maps. Quincy did not appeal its proposed map at the time. The city is

Palmucci's Objection Tables Salary Commission Report

By SCOTT JACKSON

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci's objection will keep the Quincy Salary Commission's report, which calls for the mayor to receive a $38,000 raise, from heading to the council's finance committee.

The report, which also proposes raises for the City Council and 56 other department heads and non-union appointees, was placed on the agenda at Monday night's council meeting and was supposed to head to committee. Palmucci, however, objected to it, saying information that justifies the proposed raises was not included the report.

"I'm going to object to this coming in this evening. I'm uncomfortable with this coming into the council

Glynn Supports Call To Make Narcan OTC

House in 2013 for his work. Between Jan. 1 and Feb. 25 of this year, there have been 24 opiate overdoses in the city. Police officers were able to reverse 21 of them with naloxone.

"I think it's a good idea," Glynn said in a phone interview about Morrissey's proposal to make naloxone available over the counter. "It's been proven to save lives, as you can tell by the numbers."

From his perspective, Glynn sees no drawbacks with making Narcan an OTC medication. He noted the drug can't be used to get high and is non-addicting.

"I can't see any off the top of my head," Glynn said. "It's non-addicting. It has no ill effects. It only affects those in an opiate overdose state."

Glynn also said making naloxone more readily available wouldn't encourage someone to try more opiates.

"If someone is overdosing they'll be unconscious and won't be able to administer it," Glynn said. "That dispels that myth."

He added that substance abusers and their family members in states including Massachusetts already have the option of going through a training and education program that allows them to carry naloxone.

The Quincy Police Department's officers have been given Narcan as part of a state Department of Public Health pilot program, working in partnership with Bay State Community Services and Impact Quincy. A DPH physician currently writes a prescription for the nasal spray and provides it to Glynn, who then distributes it to the department's officers. In other communities in the state, police and fire departments have worked with their medical control personnel – who oversee equipment such as defibrillators – to obtain naloxone.

"It's an easy process – involved but not overly burdensome," Glynn said.

As part of the DPH pilot program, the Quincy Police Department receives its supply of Narcan for free. Each dose of the nasal spray typically costs $22, Glynn explained. He said the department would've spent only $10,000 for each dose of nasal spray carried by officers since October 2010 when the program started if they had to purchase it at full cost.

"It's really miniscule," Glynn said of the nasal spray's cost. "It's a small drop in the budget when you're saving lives."

He also noted that other funding sources could be available to pay for the purchase of naloxone, including grants and assets seized from drug dealers.

Morrissey began his push to make naloxone an over the counter drug last week during a meeting with U.S. Sen. Ed Markey, R. Gil Kerlikoske, the director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy, and other two-dozen other officials. Morrissey told Kerlikoske that the federal Food and Drug Administration (FDA) should make it easier to access, citing the Quincy Police Department's success in using the drug.

"The Quincy Police Department has had amazing success in preserving human life since it became the first department in the country to equip its cruisers with Narcan," Morrissey said after the event in a release. "Now Norwood and Stoughton police have implemented Narcan and now Braintree and Weymouth fire have it as well."

The district attorney is offering Narcan training and funding a starter batch of Narcan doses for any police or fire department in Norfolk County willing to take the training March 26. But he said wide spread implementation has been delayed in part because of its prescription-only status. Like Glynn, he noted that nasal spray has no potential for abuse or overdose.

"There is no potential for abuse or overdose with Narcan, it has no euphoric or addictive properties," Morrissey said. "It saves the addict's life and allows them to be transported to a hospital for further treatment – and hopefully get straight. Period."

Morrissey, center left, discusses the opiate overdose epidemic in Norfolk County and steps needed both locally and federally to help stem the crisis. Standing to Markey's right is former Boston Celtic Chris Herren, who was revived from a potentially fatal overdose by Narcan and now helps other addicts. Photo Courtesy Norfolk County DA Office

There were 60 confirmed fatalities from opiate overdoses in Norfolk County in 2013, according to Morrissey, and another dozen since Jan. 1.

"There are so many avenues to attack this problem. Given the loss of life, loss of productivity and criminal activity associated with opiate use in this region, we need to be taking all of them," Morrissey said. "The time to act is now – right now."

Jennifer Fay-Beers To Become New Asst. Supt. In Braintree

Central School Principal Leaving

By SCOTT JACKSON

After more than a decade as principal of Central Middle School, Jennifer Fay-Beers will be leaving at the end of the school year to become the new assistant superintendent of the Braintree Public School system.

Fay-Beers has spent the past 11 years as the principal of the school. Prior to that she was the school's assistant principal, working under then-Principal Frank Santoro, who she succeeded as principal when he accepted the principal's position at Quincy High School. Fay-Beers also worked as a teacher at Central – in fact she's spent almost her entire career at the middle school.

"That's the hardest part for me – leaving Central," Fay-Beers said. "I've spent 19 of my 21 years at the school. But as much as I love it, I want to learn more about elementary and high school education."

As Braintree's assistant superintendent, Fay-Beers said she would be dealing with a wide-range of issues, including curriculum and personnel, working on district-wide initiatives, and helping out the town's superintendent, Maureen Murray. Fay-Beers decided to leave her position at Central because of the chance to take on those new roles.

"It's not about leaving Central," she said. "It's about moving on and seeing if my talents work in another arena of education."

Fay-Beers spent almost her entire career at Central working inside the old building before moving into the new, $50 million facility in October. While she's excited others at the school have a chance to take advantage of the state-of-the-art facility, Fay-Beers said she doesn't feel bad that she'll miss out on that chance. It's the people of Central Middle School she said she would miss the most.

"I don't feel badly that I won't get to use the nice, new things. You don't become a principal to sit in a new office," Fay-Beers said. "For the staff, kids, and families, I'm thrilled they got all the newness after being in the old school. For me, the families and the people made it special. That's what I'll miss."

Quincy School Superintendent Dr. Richard DeCristofaro said he would miss Fay-Beers and wished her well in her knew position in Braintree. He said she is one of the school system's many talented principals and she was able to take the opportunity to advance her career elsewhere.

"We have so many real talented principals that always look to move forward because of their education and passion for teaching," DeCristofaro said.

"Ms. Fay-Beers is someone who is a parent of a Quincy Public School student and someone who worked here as a teacher and administrator and loves the city. But on the other hand the opportunity is there for her to advance."

Lynch Optimistic Flood Insurance Compromise

By SCOTT JACKSON

Congressional Democrats and Republicans are nearing an agreement on a bill that would protect many homeowners from the rising costs of flood insurance, according to U.S. Rep. Stephen F. Lynch.

The two parties are working out how to undo changes to the National Flood Insurance Program made by the Flood Insurance Reform Act of 2012, also known as the Biggert-Waters act, which has made flood insurance premiums increase exponentially for some.

A bipartisan proposal known as the Grimm-Waters Bill to undo those changes and delay increases for four years gathered more than 230 co-sponsors, including Lynch. While more than half of the 435-members House of Representatives signed on to co-sponsor the bill, Republican leadership in the House declined to put it to a vote.

Instead, GOP leaders proposed their own flood relief bill last week. But Lynch said that proposal did not go far enough and would have left many in Quincy and neighboring communities unprotected.

"There were huge gaps in coverage in terms of people who would get relief under the Republican bill – it left a lot of people on the South Shore uncovered," Lynch said Friday in a phone interview.

After that proposal was introduced, about 40 Democrats met and came up with their own counterproposal to the Republican bill. Lynch said Friday he was optimistic a compromise would be reached this week.

"We are very, very, very close to an agreement," he said. "I'm extremely optimistic we can get the necessary votes."

He said the new proposal would delay increases in premiums for many South Shore property owners, including those in Quincy.

The compromise bill would also allow for better previews of proposed rate increases. It would do so by requiring FEMA to say how the rate would increase would affect each home, in-

CELEBRATE YOUR JOURNEY

Everyone's life is a journey, whether it involves love, work, or personal growth, and what better way to celebrate the journey you are about to begin, to continue, or finish than with a diamond journey pendant? This beautiful piece consists of seven (or nine) diamonds arranged in an S-shaped pattern of graduated diamonds, which refer to the winding road taken by travelers who pass milestones with ever greater appreciation of the journey taken. The diamond journey pendant makes the perfect gift for commemorating a life spent together, special attainment, wishes, or dreams. Diamond journey pendants follow in the path of diamond engagement rings, diamond-encrusted wedding bands, and other fine diamond jewelry that celebrates everlasting love and success

When presenting the journey pendant to someone special, they know that you are with them the entire way. The diamonds may be the same size or start small and grow with your journey, as your love has grown. Another way is with a heart-shaped diamond journey pendant to express love and the journey at the same time. With this design, one side of the heart is made of the graduated diamonds while the other side is plain. Shop from our large selection of quality and brilliant diamond jewelry at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center or contact us at 617-773-3636. • On March 20, 1852, Harriet Beecher Stowe's anti-slavery novel, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," is published. The book was so widely read that when President Abraham Lincoln met Stowe, he reportedly said, "So this is the little lady who made this big war."

• On March 22, 1933, President Franklin D. Roosevelt signs the Beer and Wine Revenue Act. The law levied a federal tax on all alcoholic beverages to raise revenue for the federal government and gave individual states the option to impose further regulations.

• On March 18, 1942, the War Relocation Authority is created to "take all people of Japanese descent into custody." Earl Warren (who would go on to become chief justice of the Supreme Court) claimed that a lack of evidence of sabotage among the Japanese population proved nothing, as they were merely biding their time.

• On March 21, 1963, Alcatraz Prison in San Francisco Bay closes down and transfers its last prisoners. At its peak use in 1950s, "The Rock," or "America's Devil Island," housed more than 200 inmates at the maximum-security facility.

Will Remain Neutral In Democratic Primary For Governor

Lynch Seeking Seventh Term, Would Support Clinton For President

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Democratic Cong. Stephen Lynch will seek a seventh term this fall and predicts his party may lose as many as a dozen seats in the House of Representatives and Republicans could regain control of the U.S. Senate because of problems associated with the national health care initiative or Obamacare.

Lynch also told The Sun he would support former U.S. Senator and past Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton who is expected to seek the Democratic nomination for President in 2016.

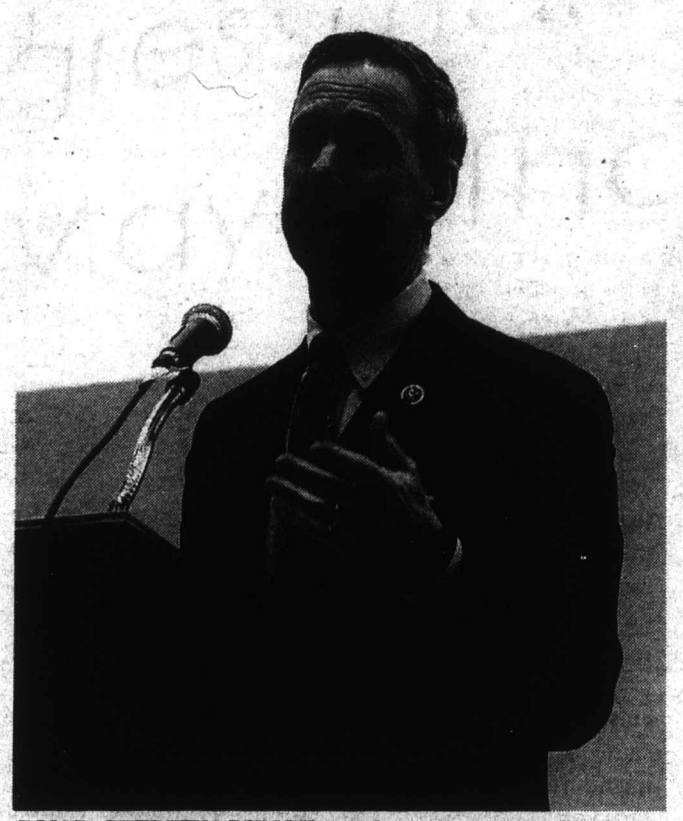

The 58-year-old South Boston Democrat has pulled nomination papers for re-election. He said the main issue in the Congressional races of 2014 will be Obamacare. The rollout of national health care championed by the President has been plagued by website and other technical problems.

"The phase in for (national health care) has been disastrous," Lynch said in a recent interview. "I can go online and see how my Democratic colleagues are running their campaigns and they are running away from their vote on Obamacare and they're saying they blew the whistle on this and they want changes and we've got to fix this thing.

"I think that gives an advantage to the Republican candidates running against Democrats in swing districts like in Arizona, parts of California, Ohio and Indiana. I think it will be the healthcare piece that causes Democrats to lose seats and I would think that we lose less than 12 but we're already done by 25 or so."

Heading in the 2014 election this fall, there are 201 Democrats and 234 Republicans up for re-election in the House of Representatives.

In the U.S. Senate, there are 36 seats up for re-election – 15 are currently held by Republicans and 21 are held by Democrats. One of those seats is held by Bay State Democrat Ed Markey who was elected last year to fill the seat vacated by John Kerry after he was appointed Secretary of State by President Obama.

"If the Republicans are smart – and the Democrats are not – they could recapture the Senate," Lynch said. "That would be a very tough road for the President (during the last two years of his Presidency) because right now the Democratic Senate is sort of a stopping point for a lot of crazy legislation. The President would have to get out that veto pen."

The South Boston Democrat has represented Quincy in the 8th District since 2012 after the federal census of 2010 redrew all of the state's congressional districts.

"I have a great district and I think I'm a pretty good match for the cities and towns that I represent. I think people are very, very fair in terms of what they require of you. We are doing what we can for education, making sure we protect our seniors and veterans, making sure that our kids have a decent opportunity with a solid education.

"Those kind of issues really predominant among the people I represent and we also have some unique issues like the flood maps – it's a great coastal district."

Lynch said he has a good relationship with all the elected officials in the cities and towns he represents and enjoys his work as a congressman.

"I still feel it's a huge honor for me to have this position and I'm lucky and I will continue to do it as long as people are happy to have me doing it."

Lynch made a bid for the seat vacated John Kerry who became U.S. Secretary of State. He lost in the Democratic primary to eventual winner and Congressional colleague Ed Markey.

If that opportunity surfaced again, he would give another Senate run some consideration.

"I would really have to weigh that – I don't think it will happen anytime soon. I'd have to cross that bridge when I come to it."

Another consideration: Lynch's seniority ranking in a Democratic Congress.

If he is re-elected, Lynch could be in line for a major subcommittee chairmanship. "There are many people leaving Congress that I have spiked in seniority, even over the past six months there have been a lot of members who have left my committees. Now, if (the Democrats) were to retake the House, I would have a major subcommittee chairmanship if I wanted it and that would give me an opportunity to get some things done for my district and for my country."

Commenting on other races, Lynch said he would support Hillary Clinton for President. In the race for Massachusetts governor, he said he will not endorse any of the Democratic challengers in the party primary but would support the nominee in the general election in November.

"I think Hillary is the most qualified candidate and that she's probably the likely nominee. There is a drag on being the front runner and people trying to take her down.

"I'm going to support her because I have worked for her in the past. I think she's a moderate in terms of her politics. I think there are some people on the very far left of the party who don't want to see her succeed. I think I have a responsibility to support her," Lynch said.

He also called the former First Lady – who later represented New York in the U.S. Senate and then served as Secretary of State in the first Obama Administration – the most qualified Presidential candidate since George H.W. Bush. Bush was a former CIA director and served eight years as Vice President under President Ronald Reagan before he was elected commander in-chief in 1988.

"She has the qualifications and I think her politics would be more unifying than someone from the far left or the far right," Lynch said.

Asked if the 2012 terrorist attack at Benghazi, Lybia that killed four Americans including Ambassador J. Christopher Stevens will dog Clinton on the campaign trail, Lynch replied:

"It will but I don't think it will be the issue foremost in people's minds when voters are pulling the lever on Election Day. I think in her position she did everything that she could based on the information she had and that there was no purposeful intent to leave people stranded," he said.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS REAL PHOTO postcard reproduction is an 1899 view of the Old Colony Boot and Shoe Company's factory on the corner of Main and Union Streets in Quincy Point. This company was a successor to the John Whicher family's company that produced shoes and boots in Quincy for over 60 years. At the time of this photo 200 people worked here and the company had another similar plant in Whitman. Several other custom and hand-made boot and shoe companies, including the widely renowned John R. Graham brand, were located in Quincy Point in the late 1800's. Unfortunately, though, they could not keep pace with the many new factories producing machine-made shoes in Brockton, Lynn and Haverhill. This company and most of the other shoe companies in Quincy were closed within a few years of this picture, but these buildings are still extant having been converted into apartment houses, as have a few other old shoe factory buildings in Quincy Point. ## Brett Files $1M Flood Relief Bill

By SCOTT JACKSON

Rep. Joseph E. Brett of Quincy filed a $1 million bill in hopes of solving flood problems in West Quincy and along Furnace Brook and Black's Creek.

The bill would direct the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC) to construct and maintain tunnels and surface conduits along Furnace Brook and Black's Creek in Quincy based on a comprehensive report made by Charles T. Main, Inc., Engineers in 1956.

The study, made following 1955's Hurricane Diane, was made by the firm under contract with the state's Department of Public Works.

"Little or no action has ever been taken on the recommendations," Brett said. "For far too long there has been much talk but little action toward correcting the periodic flooding conditions, which harass so many of our citizens and homeowners in West Quincy and along Furnace Brook and Black's Creek."

Brett pointed out that Furnace Brook is the principal drainage channel carrying surplus water from West Quincy's hills to Quincy Bay. Furnace Brook becomes Black's Creek when it reaches the salt tidewaters.

Years prior, when Furnace Brook and Black's Creek were open streams, there were no flood problems, Brett noted. Highway, residential, and commercial development over the years brought about the containment of the brook and the creek into inadequately sized culverts.

The Main report recommending widening of all culverts, commencing at the lower end of Quincy Bay and continuing up into West Quincy.

Brett's proposal called for the state to seek a $1 million bond for the project, to be paid off over 30 years. He also suggested that any federal funds available be spent for the flood relief.

POLLUTION THREATENS WOLLASTON BEACH

Mayor James R. McIntyre requested a meeting with state health officials to avert a possible closing of Wollaston Beach and others in Quincy Bay beaches in the summer because of the threat of pollution.

The mayor said several clam beds in the area had already been closed because of pollution.

McIntyre sought the meeting in a letter to state Public Health Commissioner Alfred L. Frechette. In it, the mayor noted Wollaston Beach was nearly closed in 1969 because of the pollution threat.

"I know that you are aware of our problems along Wollaston Beach, which came close to being closed last year because of the pollution which affected other areas in the Boston Harbor," McIntyre wrote.

"I am concerned about the Wollaston Beach area for swimming this year and the pollution factors, which could possibly endanger the would who would be using Wollaston Beach and Quincy Bay for swimming during the 1970 season."

Finds Quincy Center Redevelopment Disheartening

As a tax paying citizen as well as a life long Quincy resident, I am finding this redevelopment or revitalization of Quincy Center a bit disheartening.

I found your recent article about the latest developments about the project in which you advised lawmakers and all involved to generate some type of new communication pipeline with Quincy residents. I make my way around the city throughout the week doing errands and work and have asked numerous people about this project and not one person can honestly tell me exactly what's going and what will be going on. My conversations usually end with "I don't know."

I understand the magnitude of this type of project. I am aware that there are unforeseeable circumstances in which can cause delays and missed deadlines. What I am scratching my head at is why it took until now, with a big gaping hole in Quincy Center, the traffic tie ups that occurred that come along with this, that we are just now finding out about these missed deadlines and delays.

I have heard for a few years now about the ambitious project that Street Works wants to do with Quincy Center and how this will change the landscape of our beloved city. I have asked city councilors and other officials what their opinions and thoughts are on this project. Most answers were vague but now I understand why they were vague. Nobody knows exactly what's happening.

I agree wholeheartedly with Mr. Bosworth's article that we need better communication as to what is happening with the downtown project. Whether it's from Street Works, the city, the mayor's office or any other official directly related to this project, we need to know what's going on. In all honesty, this should have been part of the project to begin with. I also think if we, the people of the city, were kept in the loop so to speak there would be no shock and awe about the recent setbacks with the revitalization of downtown Quincy Center.

From what I have read about the project I am excited for the proposed changes that hopefully will occur. Downtown Quincy Center is not what it used to be years ago. I understand the officials of Quincy are optimistic about the project but don't we deserve more information than just being "optimistic?" After all this time and setbacks the city finally had to divulge what has transpired. And now we're being slammed with some type of damage control. All of which could have been diverted if we were all kept informed.

City officials need to stop with the damage control and now need to start asking the right questions. Why did this happen? How did this happen? How can we prevent this from happening again? I would think there would be some type of contingency plan in the beginning of this project so these questions would not arise. So here we are now, waiting for the deadline to pass so another player can jump into Street Works' seat. As the Mayor said "the dinner guests may have changed, but the table is set."

I don't know about you but if I were preparing a 1.6 Billion-Dollar Dinner, I would worry more about who is eating this dinner as opposed to who is sitting at the table.

'The Code' Author At Book Store March 25

Local author Scott Britz-Cunningham will be making an in-store appearance and signing copies of his newest medical thriller, Code White, on Tuesday, March 25 at 6 p.m. at Barnes & Noble, 150 Granite St., Braintree.

Set in the fictional Fletcher Memorial Medical Center, Code White, is the story of Ali O'Day, a dedicated young neurosurgeon, who is about to implant a revolutionary mini-computer into the brain of a blind boy. If it works, he will see again. But someone wants to stop her triumph. No sooner has she begun to operate than the hospital pagers crackle with the chilling announcement, "CODE WHITE." A bomb has been found in the medical center.

Britz-Cunningam works as a staff radiologist at the Brigham and Womens Hospital, Boston, and is an assistant professor of radiology at Harvard Medical School, and lives in Quincy.

The event is free and open to the public.

Quincy Choral Society Show Tunes Concert March 9

Free Performance At Quincy Catholic Academy

The Guys and Dolls of the Quincy Choral Society will paint the town in Chicago, where the jazz is cool and the piano is hot.

Hear a West Side Story about Tony and Maria while The Sound of Music echoes in the distance. Ride the Carousel at this free concert held at Quincy Catholic Academy Auditorium (formerly known as The Sacred Heart School) on Sunday, March 9. The afternoon includes a silent auction and bake sale to benefit the chorus.

Auction bidding begins at 1:15 p.m.

The program, "Broadway Our Way," begins at 2 p.m. Quincy Catholic Academy is located at 370 Hancock St., North Quincy. This popular event will be standing room only, so come early to bid and to secure a seat.

The Quincy Choral Society was founded in 1981 for the purpose of bringing musical excellence to the South Shore and the world. Members sing with music in their hearts, performing diverse, professional quality programs designed to entertain, enlighten, and enrich the human spirit. Maestro John Nichols has been music director of the Quincy Choral Society since 1988.

Nichols has been involved with the musical life of Greater Boston for more than 35 years as a conductor, composer, arranger, performer, adjudicator, and educator.

Virginia "Gingy" Grimes has been the accompanist for the Quincy Choral Society since 1993. Grimes received her piano accompaniment degree from Duke University and accompanies various ensembles and soloists throughout the Boston area.

St. Patrick's Day Luncheon At Lodge Of Elks March 14

The Quincy St. Patrick's Day Luncheon will be held Friday, March 14 at 11:45 a.m. at the Quincy Lodge of Elks, 254 Quarry St.

Tickets are on sale for advanced purchase for $50 each and tables of ten may be reserved.

Proceeds from the event will benefit the Quincy Park Conservancy, a non-profit organization committed to promoting, preserving and protecting the city's parkland and open spaces through collaboration with local and state agencies. The Conservancy plans to dedicate proceeds toward a number of future projects and events, including an Easter Egg Hunt at Pageant Field on April 12th and the construction of a trail system at Faxon Park as designed in the Master Plan for Faxon Park.

Mayor Thomas Koch, Sheriff Michael Bellotti, City Clerk Joseph Shea and other local, state and county officials headline the entertainment for the afternoon, with live Irish music and a traditional corned beef & cabbage dinner highlighting this festive event.

The Faxon Park Master Plan was approved by the Park & Recreation Board and adopted by the City Council in 2009. The plan outlines approximately $4 million in capital improvements geared toward preserving and enhancing the 90-plus acres of parkland. Elements of the Master Plan, such as the restoration of the historic perimeter field stone wall, have been completed through funding from the Community Preservation Committee.

The Quincy Park Conservancy comprises residents, professionals, and city employees dedicated to enhancing and promoting parkland in the city. Members include: former Cong. William Delahunt, William Geary, Betty Georgaklis, Louise Grabowski, David Mahoney, Lisa McBirney, David Murphy, Grace Murphy-McAuliffe, Celeste McGlone, Kristen Powers and Fran Wright.

Woodward School To Honor Carol Bulman, Michelle Stenberg April 17

The Woodward School in Quincy will honor two local women of achievement at its annual Woodward Women of Distinction Award Celebration to be held Thursday, April 17th at Granite Links Golf Club.

This year's recipients are Carol Bulman and Michelle Stenberg. The women have supported not only Woodward's community but also the city of Quincy and greater Boston through service and volunteer efforts.

CAROL BULMAN

MICHELLE STENBERG

Bulman is the Chief Executive Officer and President of Jack Conway, Inc. She is currently a Government Affairs Committee Member for the Massachusetts Association of Realtors, a Director of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce and a Trustee of South Shore Hospital and Bridgewater State University.

Stenberg has been the General Manager of the Quincy Youth Arena for over 15 years and is well-known for her philanthropic contributions in Quincy. A longtime member of Kiwanis, Stenberg has dedicated great effort serving on numerous reputable boards, including the Quincy Mayor's Commission on Women, Quincy After School Child Care, and Sisters of Good Shepherd Maria Droste Agency.

For 120 years, The Woodward School has provided girls with a college preparatory program that fosters a love of learning while providing serious instruction in academic disciplines, the arts & athletics. Dr. Ebenezer Woodward and Mary Greenleaf, founded the School in 1869 to provide an education for the young women of Quincy.

Today, The Woodward School educates students from over 30 communities in and around Boston, Quincy and the South Shore. The Woodward Women of Distinction serve as influential role models to all of the girls at the School.

To purchase tickets and/or for sponsorship information, call the Woodward School at 617-773-5610 or visit www.thewoodwardschool.org.

Sketching Class At Kennedy Center

The Quincy Council on Aging is offering Sketching classes at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy, beginning April 7th.

The Sketching class is for seniors age 60 and older. Under the guidance of Robert Farrell, a local artist with almost 30 years of experience in drawing, watercolor and oil painting, students are slowly reacquainted with the joy of expressing themselves through the ancient language of art.

Using a Number 2 pencil (found in nearly every home or very inexpensive to purchase) and copy paper which will be supplied, the new artist will relearn to produce line drawings and tonal sketches that provide instant gratification and/or a springboard to learn more serious artistic output in color.

The subjects explored during the course include but are not limited to: the tolls of the trade, the quality of line as a means of expression, sketchbooks and their uses, where to begin and where to go from there, good shapes and bad, the importance of detail, the value of tones and to color or not.

This free six-week course also includes weekly homework, professional critiques and lots of laughs and camaraderie.

Space is limited. For more information and to register, call 617-376-1506.

Strength Training For Seniors Begins March 6

Knowing the importance of strength training for seniors, the Quincy Council on Aging is offering a 10 week Strength Training session with personal trainers, Maggie Faretra and Joanne D'Andrea, beginning Thursday, March 6th from 10:30 – 11:30 a.m. at the Kennedy Center.

The cost for the 10 week session is $50. Payment must be made at time of registration.

Registration will take place at the Kennedy Center located at 440 East Squantum Street in Quincy. The Center is open Monday thru Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

For more information call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1506.

Arnold Pacho On Dean's List

Arnold Pacho of Quincy, a senior at the Loyola University Maryland in Baltimore, is on the Dean's List for the fall semester.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Chicken, Pasta Florentine

I know that through the years, I've had so many recipes on ways to cook chicken, and somehow there is always another.

I found this while I was going through some magazines and I tried it almost immediacy to such good results. And any recipe that includes pasta-I'm there!

CHICKEN FLORENTINE

4 boneless chicken breasts or thighs (cut in pieces)
1 bag fresh spinach
1 pound penne pasta or ziti
1 pound grape tomatoes (cut in halves)
3 cloves garlic (minced)
3 tablespoons olive oil and 1 tablespoon butter
½ cup white wine
2 cups chicken stock

Cut up the chicken and sauté it in olive oil and butter until browned on both sides. Set aside.

In the same pan, sauté the garlic, tomatoes and the wine and the stock. Cook for a couple of minutes, and then add the raw spinach and then add the pasta on top, which wilts the spinach quickly. Mix until well blended and serve with a sprinkle of Parmesan cheese. It is colorful and delicious.

$50,000 OK'd For Pothole Repairs

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council Monday night approved a $50,000 appropriation from the city's free cash reserve to repair potholes on city streets.

Public Works Commissioner Dan Raymondi sought the appropriation because his department has received more requests for pothole repairs than either of the previous two winters he has been in charge of the department. Those requests keep piling up because the city has dealt with 60 inches of snow this winter – compared to the 30 inches it receives on average through the end of February – and DPW crews have had less chances to repair the potholes.

"It's a lot more this year than it was last year and the year before. Part of it is because of the inclement weather we had we're fighting that – obviously you can't plow snow and fix a pothole at the same time," Raymondi said. "We've had snowstorms one after another in some weeks, taking up most of the week. It's been a struggle to keep up."

The appropriation request passed by a 7-0-1 vote, with Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci voting "present" and Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall absent because of a work obligation. Palmucci said chose to vote present because Raymondi could not say how much money had originally been budgeted for pothole and other asphalt repair.

"I'm not going to vote against this tonight commissioner, but I don't think I'm going to vote for it. I'm not going to vote on it at all," Palmucci said. "Hopefully in the future any further requests, if you do end up having to come back, we could have some metrics."

The vote left the city with approximately $1.07 million remaining in free cash for this fiscal year.

In a related vote, the council approved transferring $509,000 from the inclement weather fund to the snow and ice removal budget. That vote, which passed by an 8-0 margin, wiped out the inclement weather fund. This year's budget originally had $1.5 million allocated to snow and ice removal.

Objection Tables Salary Report

and going to committee this evening, if that was the intention, due to the fact that I feel we have not received information that would back up this presentation," Palmucci explained.

"If the administration wants us to consider hundreds of thousands of dollars of pay raises, the very least they could do is provide us with some justification for those raises. Simply submitting a list of jobs and the raise that goes with each job is not enough. I've been requesting this information for three months, it hasn't been forthcoming, and I know some of my colleagues have requested it as well. As such, I object to the matter coming in this evening."

As a result of the objection, the report will be tabled until the next council meeting on March 17.

On Tuesday, mayoral spokesman Chris Walker said the administration only wanted to have the report in committee and was not proposing any pay increases at this time.

"We were just submitting that report to go into committee," Walker explained. "There was no proposal."

Walker said any proposal for salary increases would likely happen during the city's annual budget process. That typically begins in May, when the mayor proposes his budget for the upcoming fiscal year to the council.

The Quincy Salary Commission – David Colton, Easton's town administrator and a former Quincy Public Works commissioner; Edward Flavin, the president of of Flavin & Flavin; QCAP Executive Director Beth Ann Strollo; Dolly Di Pesa of the Di Pesa Company; and Kate Yaeger, a former Quincy human resources director – had unveiled their proposal for new salaries last November.

The panel recommended the mayor receive a $160,000 salary, up from the current pay rate of $122,474. Under the commission's reccomendation, each member of the council would receive a raise of $5,000, bringing their salary to $22,500. Each councillor currently earns $17,500 annually, plus a travel allowance of about $5,000 each.

Gutro Faults Koch For Not Appealing Flood Map Sooner

instead opting to file letters of map revision for affected neighborhoods, which is a separate appeals process.

Gutro, during a remonstrance at the end of Monday's City Council meeting, said Quincy should have appealed the map before last June's deadline and also pursue the letter of map revision process. He noted that communities in Plymouth County – such as Marshfield, Scituate, and Duxbury – opted to use both processes. Those communities were granted a one-year delay in the implementation of the maps, while Quincy's is scheduled to take effect June 9.

"The city could have elected to appeal the entire map like communities to our south and also pursued the letter of map revision process, which is the mayor's preferred choice," Gutro said. "According to FEMA, we could do both. It's not an either or choice. If Marshfield loses their appeal, they still have the luxury of pursuing a letter of map revision."

He also noted that Koch did not consult with either the council or residents before opting not to appeal the proposed map last spring.

"That decision was made without a presentation to the City Council or input from the public, especially the 4,100 property owners who will be footing the tab for the decision," Gutro said. "It should have been proposed during the appeal deadline last year and a case should have been made by the administration. Instead, the administration unilaterally made that choice for us."

Gutro's colleagues agreed the city should have appealed the map last summer instead of waiting to file letters of map revision.

"I wish that we had had the opportunity to take that other avenue," said Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, whose house is among the 1,400 being added to flood zones. "I am frustrated as a homeowner and as someone who is now facing this consequence going down the road."

"I don't understand why we're undergoing the process, whether it's letter of map change or forcing a homeowner to go through a letter of map amendment process, when we had the ability from a bird's eye view," Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest added.

Gutro suggested that the city provide abatements to homeowners impacted by the new maps to offset flood insurance costs incurred during the letter of map revision process.

"I make a motion that our finance committee begin discussions with our assessor about the viability of issuing abatements to impacted property owners until the city's neighborhood appeals run their course," Gutro said.

"By electing not to appeal the full map we placed an undue financial burden on these property owners, who will incur these costs until and unless the neighborhood appeals provide relief."

The council voted 7-0 in favor of endorsing Gutro's motion. Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall was absent from the meeting because of a commitment related to his day job and Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee left the meeting at the start of Gutro's remonstrance and did not return.

The city council has yet to approve the new flood maps; it has until June 9 to do so. If the council doesn't approve the maps, homeowners would lose the ability to participate in the National Flood Insurance Program, which offers subsidized flood insurance rates. It would also mean homeowners might not receive reimbursement from FEMA for costs related to declared disasters.

In response to comments made at Monday night's meeting, mayoral spokesman Christopher Walker reiterated the mayor chose to utilize the letter of map revision process because it would give Quincy a better chance of making changes to the proposed map.

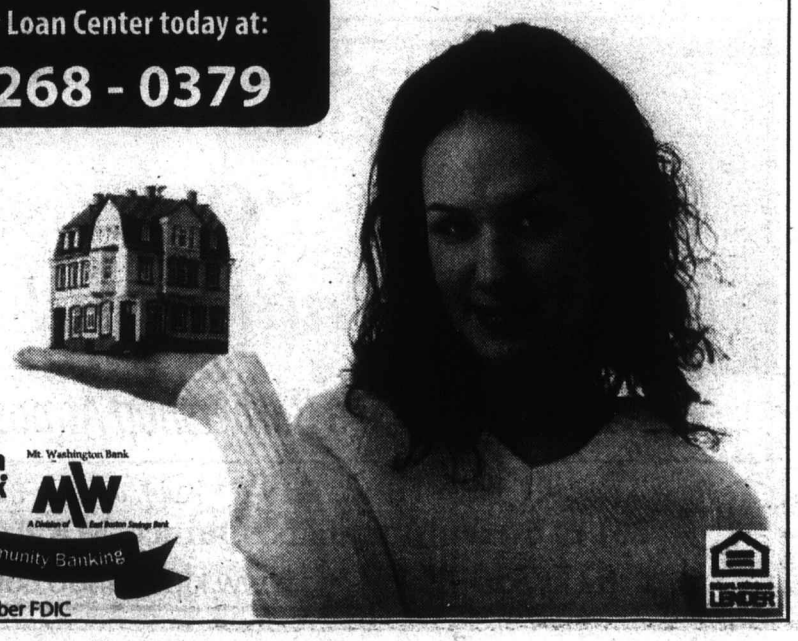

"Councillor Gutro mischaracterized the city's efforts. We are using specific scientific data to go street-by-street in each neighborhood to challenge the assumptions made by the federal government," Walker told The Sun Tuesday. "We think that gives us the best chance."

Beware The Ides Of March (And Every Day)

By KRISTEN ALBERINO
Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

"Beware the Ides of March," said the soothsayer to Caesar in William Shakespeare's play, Julius Caesar. We at Social Security recommend you beware not only the Ides of March, but every day—and every time—you go on the Internet. Identity theft and cyber-crimes are among the fastest-growing crimes in America.

Today's savvy thieves have added identity to the list of things they can rob. Their targets are people who use the Internet, and by the time you realize you've been robbed, Brutus may already have done his damage and escaped.

"Et tu, Brute?" Caesar said as his good friend Brutus betrayed him. Even webpages and online sources that appear friendly and trustworthy could be plotting against you. This is why you should protect your personally identifiable information, such as your Social Security number, date of birth and mother's maiden name. Never give this information out in an email or fill it in on a website asking for it, unless you are absolutely sure that you know and trust the source. And even then, be cautious.

That said, if you conduct business on www.socialsecurity.gov, there's no need to worry. Our online transactions are secure and convenient. You are protected when you are on our website.

If you think you've been the victim of an online Brutus, don't simply tear your toga. You should contact the Federal Trade Commission at www.ftc.gov/identitytheft. Or you can call 1-877-IDTHEFT (1-877-438-4338); TTY 1-866-653-4261.

There will continue to be those who believe it won't happen to them. And there will continue to be victims. "The Ides of March have come," Caesar said, doubting the prophecy that he would become a victim on March 15.

"Aye, Caesar," the soothsayer replied, "but not gone."

Sure, you may have used the Internet for years and may consider yourself savvy. But there's always tomorrow for a Brutus to strike. When it comes to providing personal information on the Internet, treat every day as though it's the Ides of March.

Unless you're in a secure place that you trust, like www.socialsecurity.gov. After all, on the Ides of March and every day of the year, Security is our middle name—literally.

Learn more about identity theft by reading our online publication, Identity Theft And Your Social Security Number, available at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs.

'Quick Pitch Competition' At ENC April 3

The Quincy Center for Innovation (QCI) and Eastern Nazarene College (ENC) announce the first "Quick Pitch Competition" to be held on Thursday, April 3 at the QCI, located at 180 Old Colony Ave. in Quincy.

The Quick Pitch Competition is an opportunity for entrepreneurs to "pitch" their product or idea to a panel with the chance to win up to $5,000 in cash and in-kind prizes which may be used to help further their business idea.

Teams participating in the Quick Pitch will have the opportunity to meet and network with experienced venture capitalist principals, successful entrepreneurs, and business leaders who will serve as judges and witnesses to the competition.

There are two tracks to the Quick Pitch: a student track and community track. The Student Track is open to any team with at least one key member from Eastern Nazarene College, Quincy College, Curry College or University of Massachusetts, Boston. There is a $25 entry fee for the Student Track. The Community Track is open to any person or business entity located within Massachusetts. There is a $50 entry fee for the Community Track.

The registration deadline is March 15. A panel of experts will review all submissions received by this date and will determine the finalists for each track.

The final pitch event will be open to the general public on April 3. Each startup will have 5 minutes to pitch to a panel of judges, followed by 5 minutes of Q & A from the panel.

The judges will convene in private to determine the winners and they will be announced at the end of the competition.

The Quick Pitch Competition is sponsored by Baker, Braverman, and Barbadoro, P.C., Eastern Bank, G.T. Reilly, and O'Connor & Drew. For detailed information about eligibility requirements and to register online, visit www.quincyinno.com/quickpitch

Says Koch Has Spent Taxpayer Money On Downtown

In the Feb. 20, 2014 edition of The Quincy Sun ("Quincy Mutual Lead Downtown Private Partner"), Mayor Koch yet again inaccurately stated that "The City's General Fund has not absorbed any cost relative to the (Quincy Center) development agreement . . . "

In point of unarguable fact, the Koch Administration has spent many hundreds of thousands of dollars on legal work and other expenses in the development and then furthering of this purportedly now-defaulted agreement.

The Administration also appears to have further spent thousands more on food and beverage for meetings with Street-Works.

A key – if not the – source of funding for these expenditures has been the proceeds from a $30 million city bond authorization approved seven years so as to fund some of the costs of redeveloping Quincy Center.

In turn, the annual debt service on this bond has always been covered by City of Quincy's annual budget and thus so financed by local taxpayers.

For those not familiar with the nomenclature, the City's General Fund is another way of referring to the City's annual budget.

Additionally, it would now appear that local taxpayers will be paying off these project-related costs and meals for upwards of the next 30 years.

In short, so much for the mayor's oft-repeated claim that "(t)he City's General Fund has not absorbed any cost relative to the (Quincy Center) development agreement . . . "

Please also note that the debt service for this bond was originally slated to be covered via a property surtax upon essentially Quincy Center redevelopment area properties and some of those adjacent per so-called "District Improvement Fund" municipal bond financing. This has not been duly instituted by the Koch Administration, however, and thus – as well as again – all local taxpayers have long funded all of this bond's debt service.

Please further note that the Koch Administration has never opened up for public review the Public Records that are the books detailing its uses of these funds.

As such, barring a compelling as well as valid explanation from the mayor as to how he has not been untruthful, The Quincy Sun should only properly refuse to uncritically publish any of his claims as regards his all but moribund signature project going forward.

That and also press the mayor to finally as well as fully open up the Public Records that are the City's books so that all can see how he has spent taxpayers' money.

City Failed To Challenge Maps

With regards to the FEMA Meeting story that ran in this week's Sun, I just wanted to point out that once one separated wheat from chafe of the questioners, the most articulate questions/comments came from a citizen that spoke to the City's failing to challenge the new FEMA maps by the agency's deadline where other communities such as Plymouth, Marshfield and I believe Scitiuate had met this requirement.

The citizen made some exceptional points with respect to the fact that the local administration should, at the very least, be looking into homeowner property tax abatements with respect to the properties that will be impacted and most assuredly take a hit with respect to value.

Oddly, the local administration members were silent in responding to this citizen instead opting to have Congressman Lynch and one of the FEMA people answer but in a manner that did not relate to the specific points he made.

The city will now spend monies it thought not prudent to spend in the initial challenge phase now that this matter has gained a lot of negative attention. Appears to me to be a classic case of "slamming the barn door once the horses have already left."

A Response To Mr. Dennehey

If Mr. Dennehey heard any Quincy Police officers requesting the return of the former Chief of Police, it may be time for Mr. Dennehey to have his hearing checked.

As to the Quincy Police cruisers parked at the schools, does the term school resource officer strike a bell?

As to the "SUV" statement, since the "older ones" are not being made any more and I know, since Mr. Dennehey has such intimate knowledge of the Quincy Police Department, he would want only the best for our officers.

Keep throwing the crap against the wall Mr. Dennehey. Sooner or later it may stick, but I doubt it.

QPS Phasing In New Educator Evaluation Process

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Quincy Public Schools will be phasing in the new, more stringent Educator Evaluation Process regulations that also extend to principals and other school administrators by the end of 2014.

Personnel who receive unsatisfactory performance reviews and who fail to improve within 30-days are subject to termination, despite holding a professional teacher status.

On June 28, 2011, the Massachusetts Board of Elementary and Secondary Education adopted new regulations for Massachusetts schools, placing more emphasis on student learning and educator evaluation and growth.

This process began in Quincy Public Schools last June and has resulted in 425 educators beginning the evaluation process. By next September, 100 percent participation of administrators and educators is anticipated.

While the process is focused heavily on educator self-evaluation and the placing of personal goals to promote growth, it also aims to recognize excellence.

All school districts must incorporate any necessary improvements over a two-year period. In year one, half of district educators must be evaluated for performance.

"Obviously this is a new system...it's all brand new," said Senior Director of Student Support Services and Special Education Maura Papile. "We're training a whole district on a process but luckily we have the team organization that's really helpful in setting goals and action steps."

"These folks are dedicated professionals and we've had educators on board as well as administrators and union representatives."

Because this was the first year of implementation, extensive training was necessary for teachers right at the start of the school year.

"If you look at the training schedule, we went above and beyond the required training hours for educators and evaluators... we're continuing to consult and use our teams to help people along that process," she said.

Educators will be graded following a six-step cycle which includes self-evaluation, adherence to statewide standards of effective practice, evidence of student learning which includes MCAS scores, and a final determination of performance level.

Teachers receive two ratings; a summative performance rating and a student impact rating. Student impact ratings will be available October 2016 and will determine which improvement plan an educator falls into. An improvement plan can be between 30 days and one school year long.

Teachers will be rated on their curriculum, planning, and assessment skills as well as their ability to teach diverse groups of students, family and community engagement, and their ability to enhance their professional culture.

A curriculum and planning score is based on an educator's knowledge of his or her subject matter and familiarity with child and adolescent development. Lesson plans must also be solidly structured. A determination of an educator's ability to teach a diverse student population is made based on student engagement, respecting cultural differences, and keeping students motivated.

Proper engagement with the community and parents is graded based on the effective use of two-way communication that must be culturally sensitive and proficient. A professional culture score is based on an educator's ability to collaborate and how well they share responsibility and decision-making.

All data and scores will be tracked and saved using BaselineEdge; an online learning analytics tool.

Educators are ultimately placed in one of four performance levels: exemplary, proficient, needs improvement, and unsatisfactory.

North Quincy High School Principal Robert Shaw suggested the simple act of looking at a grade book could assist in goal setting. "Any teacher could do something they all do every day and that's open up their own grade book and look at how their kids are doing at any random moment in time."

"It's meaningful work. This isn't just to go through a process; this is to embrace a process and enhance what we're already doing," said Papile. "We were very thoughtful in the process and we worked really hard together."

"Evaluators and educators really took it as an opportunity to say what is it that we do and how are our children impacted by the learning and how can we improve our instruction."

She noted the process was a natural fit for the school district, however it was not an easy undertaking.

"In many ways the educator evaluation process has changed the duties and responsibilities for principals, administrators, department heads and educators and it's not without its challenges, that's for sure," she said. "Because this was our first year of implementation we had a lot of training that was hitting the teachers right at the beginning of school."

According to Papile, Quincy schools have been progressive in their collection and use of student data, which is then used to formulate school improvement plans. Furthermore, data collection will extend to teachers who have begun the evaluation process. They will be given a survey consisting of 14 questions and information will be gathered regarding their experience with the new system.

School Board Committee member Paul Bregoli asked Papile what the consequences would be if an improvement plan were not successfully completed by an educator.

"There has to be feedback and corrective action given to the educator so they have the opportunity to make the improvement," she said.

Deputy Superintendent Kevin Mulvey said it was "possible and theoretical" that regardless of the prescriptive, corrective action advised, a person with professional teacher status could be terminated.

Bregoli also asked how data would be analyzed in more subjective areas such as music and art. He expressed reluctance at using MCAS scores as an indicator of educator success because not all disciplines are included on the exam.

"Those areas...are so very unique," said School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, who explained that teachers would have to work together with department heads to determine how such subjects could be objectively analyzed and how MCAS scores would be figured into the equation.

"I'm amazed that we're still attracting teachers into the profession with everything they have to do," said Bregoli. "It's a great profession but it's certainly a lot different from when I was into it and I hope the state realizes the amount of work that school systems are putting into this and also their teachers; above and beyond what they have to do every single day in the classroom."

"This is a daunting task in and of itself," he said.

Committee member Barbara Isola voiced similar concerns and called the evaluations a "huge undertaking."

"I can only imagine the amount of time being spent on this by teachers," she said. Despite this, she said she was confident the process would yield "wonderful benefits."

Sale Of Old Central School Neighborhood Meeting Tonight

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest and Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes will conduct a neighborhood meeting tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. on the sale of the old Central Middle School property.

The meeting will be held in the cafeteria of the new Central Middle School, 875 Hancock St., Quincy.

Mayor Thomas Koch has proposed selling the former school site. City Solicitor Jim Timmins and Planning Director Dennis Harrington will review the sale process and timeline.

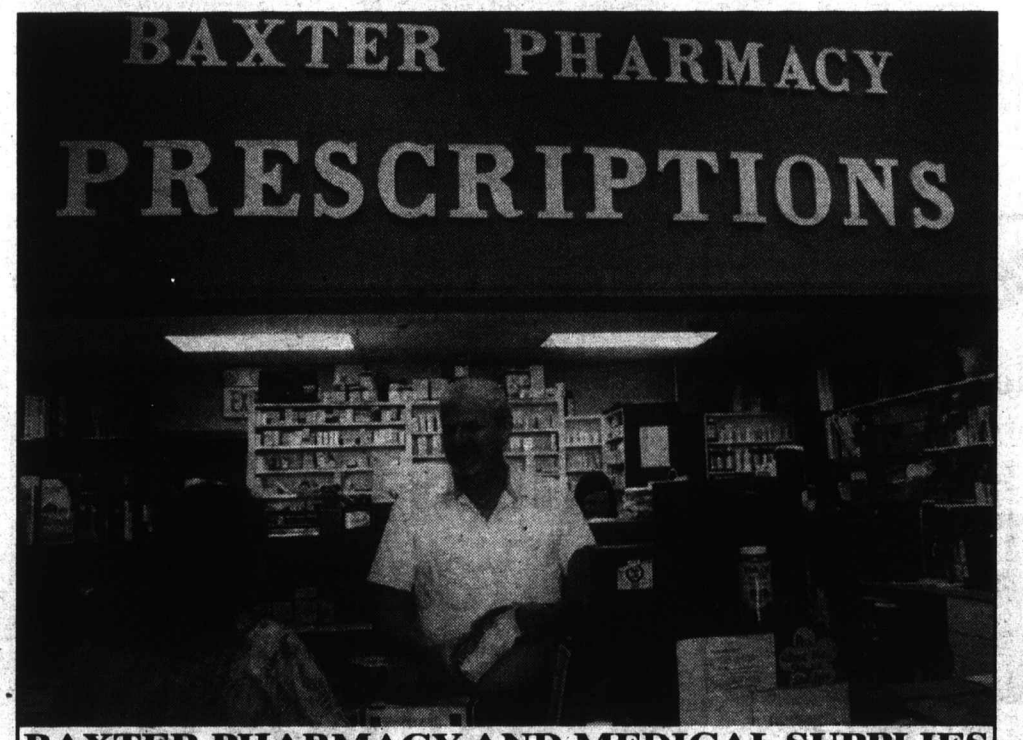

Last October, the School Committee voted and declared it no longer required or suitable to serve as a public school building. Approval by the City Council is required for the sale to take place.

The property is zoned Residence B which allows for multi-family housing. While it's currently zoned residential, the City of Quincy has a process that a developer could opt for if their plan was a business or mixed use project.

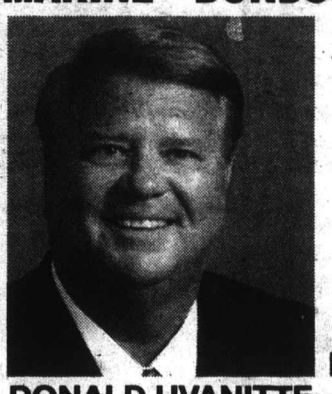

"Once the sale transaction is complete, there will be an extensive public process whether the new owner wants to utilize the current building or develop new construction," Laforest wrote in a letter to neighbors. "First, we will have a neighborhood meeting for residents to review the proposal. Then, the various city boards whose approval are required will have their public meetings.

"We anticipate any proposal will need Planning Board, Zoning Board and Conservation Commission review. Each board has a meeting that anyone can attend or communicate via letter or email, to express their support for or opposition to proposed projects" Laforest added.

The former Central School Building site borders Ward 1 and Ward 5.

Wollaston Garden Club Participating In Flower Show

The Wollaston Garden Club (WGC) has been asked to participate again in the Boston Flower and Garden Show 2014 "Romance in the Garden" at the Seaport Trade Center, Boston, from Wednesday, March 12th through Sunday, March 16th.

Under the direction of the club's horticulture chair, Cynthia Lewis, WGC will participate in the Amateur Horticulture Division: "Structures – Small Bay Window with North Exposure." In 2008 the Wollaston Garden Club won a blue ribbon for an east window entry, and in 2012, WGC received a red ribbon for another east window display.

Club members have volunteered their mature north window houseplants to be included in the club's exhibit. The best plants for north facing windows prefer low light and medium low light, including many varieties of ferns, as well as many well know and grown, common house plants. The goal of the club's exhibit will be to create a romantic shade garden of house plants in a lovely indoor natural setting, and to design a display with an eclectic mix of terra cotta, glass and the unexpected container.

Last September, Tovah Martin presented a club educational program on terrariums and the "unexpected house plant" to inspire club members in preparation for the flower show competition. Two horticulture workshops were held to help members transplant and repot plants, and to get plants "show-ready." Some of the club's members will also enter plants in the Amateur Horticulture competition for individuals.

The WGC North Window Steering Committee consists of Pat Artis, Anne Marie Brady, Rebecca Dinsmore, Anita Fasano, Carol Fischer, Ruth Griffin, Cynthia Lewis, and Leah Shea. More information about the garden club's participation can be found at www.wollastongardenclub.org.

Vernal Pools Subject Of Talk, Walk

The Park Department and the Thomas Crane Library invite the public to welcome spring through a talk about vernal pools at the library on Tuesday, March 11 at 7 p.m. and a walk in the Blue Hills on Sunday, March 23 at 2 p.m.

The talk will feature Jonathan Twining, professor of Environmental Science at Eastern Nazarene College. Vernal pools are at their peak at this time of year. Rare amphibians, like the spotted salamander, are dependent on these pools for survival.

The walk – led by Sally Owen – will begin at the Shea Rink parking lot, 651 Willard St. Participants will search for skunk cabbage, pussy willows, vernal pools and other signs of spring.

For more information and rain date rescheduling of the walk, call 617/472-0799.

Quincy Catholic Academy 'Evening Of Laughs' Saturday

Quincy Catholic Academy will host its second annual "Evening of Laughs" comedy night Saturday, March 8 at The Tirrell Room from 7 to 11 p.m.

The fundraising event will be hosted by Master of Ceremonies Dan Flynn and feature professional comedians Dan Crohn and Dave Russo.

Tickets are on sale at QCA's main office and are $50 per person, which includes comedy show, appetizers, dessert, and coffee (tables can be reserved in advance).

There will also be live and silent auctions along with over 50 raffle items.

Proceeds to benefit the continued Catholic education in Quincy.

For more information, call 617-328-3830.

Tickets can also be purchased by mailing a check to Quincy Catholic Academy, 370 Hancock Street, Quincy, MA 02171.

Dallas Buyers Club Screening Tonight

The Thomas Crane Public Library will host a screening of the film "Dallas Buyers Club" tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m.

The film features Academy-Award winning performances by Matthew McConaughey (Best Actor in a Leading Role) and Jared Leto (Best Actor in a Supporting Role.)

Loosely based on the true-life tale of Ron Woodroof, a drug taking, women loving, homophobic man who, in 1985 was diagnosed with full blown HIV/AIDS and given 30 days to live. He started taking the FDA approved AZT, the only legal drug available in the U.S, which brought him to the brink of death. To survive, he smuggled non-toxic, anti-viral medications from all over the world yet still illegal in the U.S. Other AIDS patients sought out his medications forgoing hospitals, doctors and AZT.

With the help of his doctor, Eve Saks and a fellow patient, Rayon, Ron unintentionally created the Dallas Buyers Club, the first of dozens which would form around the country, providing its paying members with these alternative treatments. The clubs, growing in numbers and clientele, were brought to the attention of the FDA and pharmaceutical companies which waged an all out war on Ron.

Directed by Jean-Marc Vallée, film also stars Griffin Dunne, Jennifer Garner and Steve Zahn. Theatrically released in 2013, the 117-minute film is rated R for pervasive language, some strong sexual content, nudity and drug use.

Future Thursday night feature film screenings are:

- About Time (March 13, 6:30 p.m.)
- All is Lost (March 20, 7 p.m.)
- Hunger Games - Catching Fire (April 3, 6 p.m.)
- Saying Mr. Banks (April 10, 6:30 p.m.)
- Gravity (April 24, 7 p.m.)

SNOWBOARDER'S ANKLE

"Snowboarder's ankle" ranks second in the top five injuries that afflict snowboarders and skiers. Fifteen times more common in snowboarders than in the general population, the injury involves a fracture of the lateral process of the talus bone, which is located on the outer side of the ankle and above the heel bone. Injury occurs when the ankle is "dorsiflexed" (toes are brought toward the shin) and the talus gets locked in place by the surrounding bones. If the rider's foot is in a dorsiflexed position and he or she rolls in on the joint below the ankle, the lateral process of the talus gets compressed and is prone to fracture. Good technique and strong ankles help avoid this injury.

Do you snowboard? We invite you to call us at 617.472.4220 for more helpful information. If you decide to seek professional care for your pain, at FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we're currently accepting new patients. Pain is a common medical problem that afflicts two thirds of American adults during some part of their lives. # Quincy To Test Responsible Alcohol Retailing Program

Quincy's teens may soon find it more difficult to purchase alcohol from local businesses.

Starting this month, the Responsible Retailing Forum will launch and evaluate an innovative, six-month program designed to help Quincy bars, restaurants, liquor stores, and other alcohol outlets insure that staff are not selling alcohol to those under 21 years old.

"Helping licensees to better comply with our alcohol laws is in everyone's best interest," said Lt. Peter Turowski, Quincy Police Department. "Law enforcement has a role, but we know from experience that everyone in the community has an important role in dealing with the problem of illegal sales to minors."

The RRForum will focus on 30 to 40 licensees, all randomly selected. As a first step, the owners and managers will assess their current efforts, after which the RRForum will advise them on a set of "best practices" for encouraging staff to do a better job of checking IDs and refusing sales to minors. A key feature of the program is the use of mystery shoppers—young, legal-age inspectors (ages 21-24) who ask to purchase or be served an alcoholic beverage. Retailers generally ask their staff to check ID for any customer who appears to be under the age of 30.

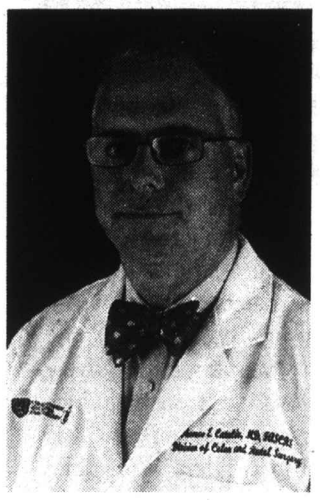

"Whether an individual outlet failed to check ID will be kept confidential," explained Brad Krevor, RRForum's founding director, "but we will be sharing combined mystery shopper results with key stakeholders throughout the community, including retailers whose stores are not being visited by a mystery shopper." This feedback provides a way to monitor the project's success and inform further improvements, Krevor noted.

For the current evaluation study, Quincy is being paired with another Massachusetts community that will serve as a "control community." The research study also includes a second pair of Massachusetts communities as well as two pairs of communities each in California, Texas and Wisconsin.

Dr. Thomas Cataldo Joins BID Hospital-Milton Medical Staff

Beth Israel Deaconess Hospital-Milton announces colon and rectal surgeon, Thomas Cataldo, M.D., has joined its medical staff.

"We are excited to be expanding our surgical offerings with the addition of Dr. Thomas Cataldo to our medical staff," said hospital President and CEO Peter Healy. "Dr. Cataldo is a talented physician, with a broad range of academic and clinical experience, and his services will greatly benefit the local patient community."

DR. THOMAS CATALDO

Dr. Cataldo treats patients with conditions of the colon and rectum. He specializes in the use of minimally invasive techniques to care for patients with colorectal cancers, diverticulitis and Crohn's disease.

Dr. Cataldo received his medical degree from University of Massachusetts Medical School, where he also completed his internship and residency. He completed a fellowship in colon and rectal surgery at Alton Ochsner Medical Foundation in New Orleans.

Prior to joining BID-Milton and BIDMC, Dr. Cataldo was the program director of colon and rectal surgery at Warren Alpert Medical School at Brown University in Providence, RI. He also served as Chief of Colon and Rectal Surgery at Providence Veteran's Affairs Medical Center in Providence, RI. Dr. Cataldo is board certified in colon and rectal surgery.

Honey Dew Café To Open At YMCA

Following approval by the Quincy Licensing Board Feb. 25, the Honey Dew Café located at the South Shore YMCA's new Quincy Branch is anticipated to open as soon as this week.

The new Quincy YMCA Honey Dew location is not actually a doughnut shop. Honey Dew changed the name of this location from Honey Dew Donuts to Honey Dew Café to emphasize this point, and members will not find doughnuts on the menu.

The Honey Dew Café is designed to be a refreshment center which will offer a specially developed menu of healthy and nutritious options. The food and beverage items offered were thoughtfully chosen to cater to the wide variety of members and program participants who frequent the Y.

The Honey Dew Café menu will include salads, sandwiches, fruit cups, yogurt, smoothies, coffee, and reduced fat muffins.

Broadmeadows, Sterling City Volleyball Champs

The Broadmeadows girls' volleyball team won the Middle School Volleyball Championship held recently at North Quincy High School.

Broadmeadows won the Wild Card playoff against Point Middle School to advance to the semi -finals with a 21-7, 22-20 victory. Point's Cassidy Griffin was the backbone of the Point squad hustling all season while Mecca Webb's serving kept Point in the match. Nathalia Demata's defense and net play as well as Jenna Pendleton's hitting helped Point stay stay close in the second game.

Taking the 4th seed, Broadmeadows had to face the previously undefeated Sterling girls' team. Broadmeadows' Kathleen Saverse and Carolyn Schaaf played great at the net while Rachel Beck finished both games with strong serving in the 21-15, 21-15 upset. For Sterling, Gabi Gomes and River Barrett had consistent serving games while Tammy Ma and Mia Sapienza had some key hits. Sommer Davenport and Allahna Brown added to the pass, set, hit offense while Maharah Paul came in off the bench for some clutch serves.

The other semi final matched up Central and Atlantic girls. In a great match, Atlantic defeated Central, 2-0 to advance to the finals. Cora Cluett set well for Atlantic, making outstanding saves while Jasmine Chan served many crucial points. Central had great serving from Jessie Caldwell and Alana Sullivan. Sarah McLoughney, Camryn Burgio and Kelly Phelan were strong net players all season and Gabby Quinn and Jillian Harrington were the key defensive players for the Central Rams.

In the finals, Broadmeadows had tremendous all-around play by Caroline Bloomer, Shannon Foley and strong serving by Courtney Holler to help Meadows take home the title in a 2-1 close match. Atlantic saw Jennifer Butka lead the team with very strong overall play. The Broadmeadows team was coached by Chris McBride, Tricia Wong and Erin Benner.

Sterling boys' volleyball came into the playoffs as the 2nd seed and came to play that morning defeating Central 21-12 and 21-3 to advance to the finals. Tyreek Woodley , Danny Keegan and Matt Pittman had tremendous offensive plays at the net while Brendan Corbett had several assists. Gredi Zyba went on a 10 point service run in the second game. Central boys had great serving from Thomas Kelly, Robert Mercier and Victor Chu while James Robinson and Nolan Walker had great defensive plays. Miles Easerling, David Yang and Steven Chen all had strong net play for Central.

In the Wild Card playoff for boys, Broadmeadows defeated Point 21-12, 21-16 to advance. Point had strong net play from Mario Polanco, Melvin Gonzales and Mario Polanco whose blocking and hitting led the team. Mario Vrapi hustled and played great defense while Ryan Boretti, the team's setter led the offense. Glaysgton Barbosa's serving kept Point in the match and gave Point crucial points down the stretch. In the boys other semi-final, despite phenomenal net play by Stephen Andrews, great all-around play by Christ Pham, Peter Le, Marc Ghosoub and many assists by Ronan Hurley and Patrick Deery, the Meadows team lost a tough, competitive game to top seeded Atlantic 2-1. Atlantic had dominating games from Timmy Chiu and Jimmy Huynh at the net while Kenny Zou contributed with great hits and serves. Atlantic then faced Sterling in the much anticipated final.

The final was a match with great ball control, defensive plays and super competition. In game one, Sterling edged out Atlantic to win 23-21. Matt Pittman and Shorn Hawthorne anchored the team with great passing. Game two brought Atlantic storming back to win 21-11 to set up the deciding game 3. Dan Sherwin and Kevin Finn propped up the Atlantic team with their excellent defense and serving. Alex Pham was a strong setter for the previously undefeated Atlantic squad and was the team's leader. Sterling had a total team effort but Anthony McFarlane and Nasir Cardoso really helped the offense take the game 15-7 to win the championship. The Sterling team was coached by Chris Prendiville.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

IS THERE MORE TO TEETH CLENCHING?

If you've ever heard a sleeping individual clenching his or her teeth at night, you probably already know something about "bruxism." Aside from making a horrible sound, this excessive clenching of the jaws and grinding of the teeth poses the potential to wear away tooth enamel, disrupt jaw position, and even crack teeth. For these reasons, the dentist highly recommends that bruxers be outfitted with custom-made tooth guards that are worn at night to prevent tooth grinding and its deleterious effects. I n addition, research has recently revealed that bruxism seems to be related to restless leg syndrome and migraines. Because these conditions may have something in common, people with one condition may want to consider diagnosis of the other two.

We provide complete, quality dental care for all your oral health needs. You can feel confident that a professional and dedicated staff performs all services, and you'll find our staff to be both friendly and knowledgeable as well. Dental exams are the best way to screen against bruxism, especially if you live alone or don't have a sleep partner who can observe bruxism at night. We examine the oral cavity, the mouth. We invite you to call 617 479-6220 to schedule your next appointment. We are dedicated to your oral health and offer a variety of procedures to help achieve a beautiful smile. Disappointing End After Thrilling Run To Make Div. 2 South Tournament

Quincy Hockey Falls To #3 Seed Medfield

By JOE REARDON

Quincy's entire roster knew it would take a flawless game and a lot of luck to beat No. 3 seed Medfield in the first round of the Div. 2 South Sectionals last Thursday, but the Presidents didn't dwell on their underdog status against the Warriors. Instead, Quincy threw everything it had at the powerful Tri-Valley League team.

Ted Walsh's crew outshot Medfield 38-32 and did wind up on the short end of a 6-2 score with Brian O'Callaghan scoring both goals and the Warriors getting their final tally on an open-net shot. That result, however, doesn't give justice to how amazing Quincy's 11-10-2 season really was.

The Presidents had a rough patch that forced them to be close to perfect the final week of the season if they wanted to see postseason action. Quincy came alive and finished up at 4-0-1, the last game being an improbable 6-6 tie that saw the Presidents score four times in the final 10 minutes.

Walsh, of course, knew long before the tie against Abington that his club's mental toughness willed them to wins and the game against the Green Wave was just another example. "You couldn't write a better script," said Walsh. "It was just magical how it happened."

Even though they were underdogs, the loss to the Warriors was tough to take. "We feel we outplayed them for large portions of the game," said Walsh. "We had a good game plan and we executed it well. We hemmed them in, but we couldn't sustain it. The breaks we did give them they capitalized. Even when they allowed the empty net goal, there was no quit. They just kept going and going. They didn't have any quit in them."

There was nothing easy about Walsh's final postgame talk in the locker room.

"I've been there before and I've been there with both of my own boys and I know how disappointing it is," said Walsh. "There were tears shed. We just knew it was over, but to be honest, I don't think anyone wanted this year to end. It was that much fun.

"The first meeting I had with them I said this program is done losing. I said we were going to win some games the right way, through hard work. And everybody was on board with it from day one. What more could a coach ask for?"

NQ Hockey Falls To #1 Seed Plymouth S., 2-1

Defeated Bishop Feehan To Advance To Second Round

By JOE REARDON

Sometimes in life the puck just doesn't bounce your way.

What else could North Quincy head coach Matt Gibbons tell his team after Saturday's heartbreaking 2-1 loss to No. 1 seed Plymouth South in the Div. 1 South Sectional quarterfinal matchup?

The 10-8-4 Red Raiders had their chances early and did get second-period tally from Kevin Mock to tie it 1-1. The teams were staring at overtime until Plymouth South scored on its fourth shot on Ryan Higgins in a scramble in front of the net with 50 seconds left.

Forget the seeds - North Quincy was every bit the Eagles' equal in this tilt.

"Sometimes you'd almost wish you'd lose 6-0," said Gibbons. "Then you know they were better than you. I don't think anyone left there thinking they were better than us. It makes it devastating. They lost on two crappy bounces of the puck. Both of the goals were in the crease - that was a tough one.

"You work the whole year to get here and then it just ends."

The Red Raiders advanced to the second round after defeating No. 8 Bishop Feehan 3-2 last Thursday night at Aleixo Skating Arena in Taunton. It marked the second time the Red Raiders played the 12-8-1 Shamrocks this season after skating to a 2-0 win in January.

North Quincy found Bishop Feehan to be far more physical and aggressive in all three zones this go around.

"We really tried to focus on getting the play in the middle," said Gibbons following the win. "I thought they (Bishop Feehan) were much more physical. They were jacked up and ready to go. They were on pucks and were up on the play a little more. Having seen them on film we tried to work it low. They were much better than they were a month ago."

Bishop Feehan goaltender Mike Capprini was at the very top of his game, making 30 saves – many of them of the spectacular variety.

"That was probably the best goalie we've seen all year," said Gibbons. "He's a hell of a goalie."

The Shamrocks were in the Red Raiders' end for much of the first five minutes and went up 1-0 on their fourth shot on North Quincy goaltender Nolan Greene (26 saves). Cam Wilkins took a quick pass from Mike Geraghty and deposited it top shelf 2:28 into the period.

The lead didn't last 30 seconds as the Red Raiders came right back to tie it on the very next shift when Michael Finn stuffed a shot under Capprini to make it 1-1. Gibbons believed Finn's tally was the turning point in the game for the Red Raiders.

"I thought for us to come back and score on the next shift was the biggest swing for us," he said.

Finn and McEvilly continued to put shots on Capprini through the period with McEvilly very nearly giving North Quincy the lead with 8:47 left on a blistering wrist shot that the Shamrocks' goalie pulled out of the air with his glove. Andrew Currie was also robbed of a goal when Capprini smothered a shot from just outside the crease.

Both teams piled up opportunities in the second period and until North Quincy took the lead for the first time when Sean Farnham beat Capprini to the short side with a wrist shot to make it 2-1 with 6:42 left.

The Shamrocks proceeded to take advantage of a power play – after the Red Raiders killed off two in the first period - and tied it 2-2 when Jack Hanson popped in a rebound with just 41.7 seconds left.

Capprini continued to come up with huge saves in the third, turning away Robbie Cameron's wrist shot 21 seconds in and taking a goal away from Andrew Kiley. Cameron scored the game-winner on a wrist shot coming down the right wing that beat Capprini with 7:27 left for the 3-2 edge.

The Shamrocks were relentless over the final five minutes, peppering Greene with four shots on a power play with 4:18 left. Capprini headed to the bench for another skater with 1:30 left. Bishop Feehan very nearly tied it with three seconds left, but Greene was able to clear the puck from the crease to preserve the victory.

Resiliency Pays Off For QYH PW B2

In South Shore Conference hockey action Sunday, the QYH PWB2 hockey team out-dueled the much bigger Hingham Harbormen in a thrilling 8-5 victory.

With some stellar cross-ice passing, QYH defenseman John Bell ignited the first period rally, combining with Sean O'Brien and Tahla Qasim (2 goals) to give QYH an early first period 3-0 lead.

QYH goalie Ryan Graf made several spectacular saves throughout the game, however the Harbormen were finally able to convert for two early goals in the second period to close the gap.

Amidst an unrelenting Hingham power-play midway through the second period and with help from defensive tandem Neasa O'Donnell and Colman Gillis, Graf again denied several opportunities. During a Harbormen hooking penalty and courtesy of textbook passing from linemates Joey Murphy and Robbie McClelland, QYH took a 5-3 lead at the end of two periods as Caiden Valleli found the back of the Hingham net.

After Hingham cut the QYH lead to one goal early in the third period, the relentless forechecking of QYH winger Eoin Varden sparked a three goal QYH rally by Nick Brink, Chris Hussey, and a second goal by O'Brien, whom, also had a couple assists, to cement the hard fought victory.

QYH plays Walpole next Sunday at 5:20 p.m. in Randolph.

Hoop History: Red Raiders 65, Presidents 56

Estimated 1,500 Fans Turn Out As North Quincy Defeats Quincy In Sectional Quarterfinals

By BILL GRIFFIN

On their final night at home, before an historic crowd which filled every seat an hour before tapoff, against a grand rival they never thought they would see again, North Quincy played out a basketball jewel which will shine as brightly as any they have displayed in their glorious three-year run of hoop.

Efthim Butka took his rightful place alongside Danny Gould in North's lore of big-game shooters, Anthony Green shook down the thunder under the basket, and Kyle Richardson once again made playing point guard an art form to carry the No. 1 seeded Red Raiders to a richly satisfying, 65-56 decision over No. 8 seed Quincy in the quarterfinals of the South Sectional Division 1 Tournament at the North Quincy gym Friday night.

The win lifted North to 22-1 and its second straight sectional semifinals against Newton North which was played Tuesday. It was a rematch of last year semifinals which was won by North Quincy. Not only have the Red Raiders been to two straight sectional semifinals, they have gone 57-11 over the last three years, established a school record for consecutive wins in the regular season this winter, and were two points from being unbeaten through 23 games.

A THREE-POINTER by Quincy's J.T. Bain (left, #15) brought the Presidents closer in the fourth quarter. But North Quincy's Solomen Umoren (right, #3) nailed a three-pointer with less than three minutes remaining to make it an insurmountable eight-point Red Raider lead. North's Kyle Richardson (#12) shouts after Umoren's shot found the net. Quincy Sun Photos/Robert Bosworth

Butka's 23 Points A Big Moment On A Big Stage

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was Feb. 14, Valentine's Day, but there was little to love for Efthim Butka.

North Quincy's senior forward quietly filed out of the Quincy gym and could only watch the wild celebration after the Presidents had stunned the Red Raiders, 51-49 and ended any hopes of an undefeated year after North had run 19 straight victories to start the season.

"I'll always remember all those blue and white jerseys coming out of the stands," said Butka. "I think their chants of 19-1, 19-1, 19-1 which meant they had ruined our undefeated season stuck in all our minds."

Then the tourney came. North was the top seed. The brackets were released. Quincy was seeded eighth. You didn't need to be an MIT graduate to follow the graph and see if North and Quincy each won its first round game, the two would meet again. Quincy beat Barnstable. North edged Newton South, 67-66 behind 23 from Butka and a terrific all-around game from Kyle Richardson.

"When we saw the brackets, we knew exactly what we had to do, exactly what we wanted," said Butka.

North had another shot at Quincy and took advantage of it with a 65-56 decision before an overflow crowd of 1,500 Friday night. It was a game which could be taken apart and endlessly debated by basketball lovers, but the main reason North won was Butka made the big shots in the biggest game, finishing with 23, including five three-pointers.

"In the last Quincy game, I felt I let my team down. I felt the loss was my fault, It was not only the shots I missed, I just played a poor game," he said.

There are nights when shooters can't miss. Everything goes in. There are nights when shooters can't hit. Nothing goes in. And there are nights like Butka had against Quincy Friday night when a shooter has to find his rhythm and stroke. He missed a couple early, but the shots felt good. He had good looks, good spots behind screens. Shooters keep shooting. They take their shots and hope to find that elusive groove. That's what Butka found against Quincy.

"I missed some early, but my shot felt good," said Butka. "I just kept shooting and praying I would find that consistency, that run of two, three or four shots in a row that go in. Then you shoot without hesitating. That's what I had in the third period."

Butka buried three of his three-pointers in the third.

Much has been rightly written about the excellence of Danny Gould and Kyle Richardson in close games. What about Butka? Against Silver Lake, he tore away a rebound and sank the winning free throws in overtime. Against Wareham with his team trailing by one with six seconds left, he knocked home two free throws to win the game and give North the No.1 seed in the sectional. Against Newton South, he had 23 and five three-pointers in a one-point win. In two tournament games, he has 46 points and 10 three-pointers. In three games against Quincy, he had 61 points. Combine just the first and third Quincy games, and he had 49 points and 11 three-pointers.

SENIOR EFTHIM BUTKA hits for two of his team-high 23 points as the Red Raiders defeated the Quincy Presidents 65-56 in the quarterfinals of the Div. 1 South Sectional Tournament last Friday night at NQHS. The victory avenged a Feb. 14 loss to Quincy that spoiled the Red Raiders' perfect season (22-1). Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

Big shots? Close games? Butka belongs with anyone who has shot the ball for North the past three years and that is a high compliment.

"I saw what Dan's shooting meant last year and I worked on expanding my range in the off-season," he said.

He also played excellent defense on Quincy's James Lam who had seven points. He by no means stopped Lam, but he did control him. Lam is an off-the-charts athlete, but Butka kept Lam in front of him, contested jumpers and limited penetration. It was solid defense against a great player.

"I saw the film of the game we lost to Quincy and I couldn't believe how bad my defense was," said Butka. "I was giving him like 10 feet of space. He is just a great player, a great athlete, but I think I played him a little tighter, at least he could feel I was there on most plays."

Butka is usually a quiet player during games. However against Quincy, he talked. Loudly.

"I think if we talk with each other, we'll make fewer mistakes," he said. "I also thought if I was more vocal, my intensity would be contagious."

Butka has taken this three-year ride of 57 wins with Richardson and Anthony Green. He spoke of each of his fellow seniors after the win over Quincy.

"Anthony will be a Division 1 player in college. His best basketball is only beginning," said Butka. "I've never seen him as emotional as he was tonight. After warmups, before we went out on the floor, he grabbed everybody by the shoulders and yelled: Let's go. He's never done anything close to that before.

"Kyle and I played on a 15-1 freshman team together, so we always talked about how we had a chance to be pretty good," said Butka. "I think he's become the perfect point guard. He can score. He's unstoppable off the drive and he delivers the ball right where you want it."

These good times are just right for Butka. He can be an emotional player who gets down on himself. He judges himself far too harshly. He was not the reason North lost to Quincy. Quincy won because the Presidents played better and deserved it. There was no blame for any one player and, frankly, Butka was not that bad. He scored 12 points and played a decent floor game. However, that was not the way he viewed it which made Friday's shot at redemption so important.

"It's my biggest thrill from the last three years," he said with a smile and a pause. "Until the next one."

"If you think back to December, considering what we lost from last year (Danny and Pat Gould, Marquis McClendon), few people thought we had a chance to go back to the sectional semifinals. People talked about North Quincy in the past tense. Well, here we are. It's quite an accomplishment for these kids to make it back," said coach Kevin Barrett,

Two weeks ago a big part of this story surely seemed impossible. Quincy had stunned North, 51-49 for its only loss of the season. North would not play Quincy again. The schedule was finished. The Red Raiders had lost their final Quincy game, the game they would always remember. There would be the tourney, but there would not be Quincy. That chance would not come their way again.

Then the brackets were released. As if by fate, one more chance rose up. If North and Quincy both won their first-round games, they would play again. It would happen. There would be another Quincy game they would always remember. They had a chance to settle who was the best in the city on the basketball court, not on Facebook. They would have another chance before an overflow crowd of 1,500 witnesses who will not soon forget what they saw.

"We were happy when we saw the brackets, happy we had another chance to play Quincy," said Barrett. "The difference tonight is we were more aggressive. The last time we were passive. We were more aggressive on offense stepping into our shots and going to the basket. We were aggressive on defense, stopping the drive and running off their three-point shooters."

The Red Raiders were narrowly in control for most of the game. They only trailed once for less than 45 seconds in the first period. They took the lead for good at 19-16 early in the second, led by 28-25 at the half, 44-40 after three and opened it up to 56-46 with less than two minutes to go.

Quincy (15-7) was led by its brilliant senior Christian Callahan who had 20 points, 12 rebounds and got to the basket all night against the best defensive team on the South Shore. He stung the Red Raiders with offensive rebounds (Quincy had 15 points off the offensive boards) and spinning, twisting drives. J.T. Bain added 10. However, North's defense did not allow another double-figure scorer and that was one of the telling numbers of the night.

"Callahan is such an excellent athlete. He's just tenacious and we could not keep him off the boards," said Barrett.

Along with the defense which has backboned North's historic season, it was a story of an improbable, game-changing shot and three seniors who made their final game in their gym a memory they will forever cherish.

• The shot. It came with North holding a 51-46 lead and just over three minutes left in the game. North had possession. The shot clock wound down towards zero. Junior Solomon Umoren went up with a three-point jumper from just in front of his bench. It was late in the shot clock, but it was not a desperation shot. The release was perfect, the rotation was good and it settled into the net for a three and an eight-point lead.

"It's probably not a shot that you want early in the shot clock," smiled Barrett. "But I had a good vantage point. It looked good when it left his hand and it looked good all the way to the hoop. Solomon has been our shutdown defender all year. He's worked hard, and he was due to make a big one."

"That was the biggest shot of the night," said Quincy coach Dave Parry. "The shot clock was down, we had somebody right there with a hand up, and he hit it fading back onto the sideline."

• Butka earned the No. 1 star with 23 points. He was a little off with his jumper early, but stayed with it. Even his misses were clean shots off good looks. His mechanics and form were good. He had to keep shooting. If doesn't hit jumpers, North does not win. He shot himself into a groove. He hit the medium-range jumper and knocked home five three-pointers. Three of them came in the third period with North protecting a narrow lead. He also had six rebounds and played strong defense on Quincy's James Lam (seven points).

"The shots he missed early were all good shots. I told him to keep shooting the basketball. I knew they were going to start to drop," said Barrett.

A big-time shooter in a big time game? Games don't get any bigger for kids from North Quincy. This was a win-or-go-home tournament game and a Quincy game rolled into one night. This could have been the final night of Butka's high-school sporting life and elimination against the city rival that had taken away North's undefeated season. It was the game of a lifetime. Think of Danny Gould swishing those jumpers against Braintree and Newton North last year. Put Efthim Butka right there beside him. He deserves to be there.

"I'm speechless," said Butka. "It was unbelievable. To have that amount of fans in our gym against Quincy two weeks after they had beaten us is something I'll never forget it."

• Green had 19 points, 12 rebounds and three blocks. He also showcased his offensive growth with two elbow jumpers. At 6'9", he confidently put the ball on the floor and dribbled through defenders. There were two memorable plays. On one, he broke a full-court trap with a drive up the middle which covered more than half the court. On the second, he started his dribble well past the key and finished with a thunderous dunk which shook the building and drew the Red Raiders even at 14-14 after one. With Butka chasing around Lam, the bulk of the rebounding was left to Green who was strong off the glass and guarded the rim well all night.

"All that offensive progress you see has come from hard work. As good a player as he is, he's a better kid," said Barrett.

• Richardson had nine points, eight assists, seven rebounds, and three steals and he was a lot better than that.. He was absolutely flawless bringing the ball up against five different Quincy defenders and several double-teams. His chased Quincy's outside shooters off their spot all night and denied any penetration into the lane. Quincy was limited to the perimeter for most of the game and Richardson was the main reason. In the fourth period, he switched onto Callahan and, despite giving away six inches, he stopped his drives and kept him away from the basket.

"Kyle just loves to compete," said Barrett. "Did I tell him to move onto Callahan? No. Did he ask me? No. He just switched with someone and moved himself over. That's senior leadership for you."

Two weeks ago, it was a sea of blue and white which swept onto the floor. Friday night, the sea was red and black. Surely, it was a time to rejoice for North. It was also, perhaps, a moment to reflect on all that North has done in the last three winters. Think of the 57 wins, the league titles, the tournament runs, the nights of brilliant basketball in sweaty, packed gym. Think of two rides to UMass Boston. Think of three years of great players who were also great kids. Mostly, think of that final Friday night at home against Quincy. Savor it and enjoy it. It may not soon come this way again.

NQ - Quincy Match-Up First In 34 Years

By JOE REARDON

Last Friday's much-anticipated postseason match-up between No. 8 Quincy (15-6) and top-seeded North Quincy (21-1) in the quarterfinal round of the Div. 1 South Sectional tournament marked just the second time ever that they've met in the playoffs and has all the makings of a classic battle – much like the first time they took the court against each other.

You have to go all the way back to President Jimmy Carter's administration when the rivals faced each other on March 1, 1980. The U.S.A. hockey team had just stunned the Russians 4-3 at the Winter Olympics on the way to a gold medal with a victory over Finland, Queen's single "Crazy Little Thing Called Love" was No. 1 on the Billboard charts and speedskater Eric Heiden was a household name with his five gold medals at Lake Placid.

Ironically, the Red Raiders very nearly missed the tournament, but had Cambridge Rindge & Latin to thank for making it into the postseason. The MIAA ruled Mike Jarvis' squad had to forfeit 11 games because the Falcons had two ineligible players on their roster. Ed Miller's squad picked up a win with the forfeits to put them at 14-7 and in the playoffs.

Quincy, which put up a 16-4 record to capture the Suburban League, was the No. 1 seed, but that mattered little as Bill O'Connell, who finished with 22 points, led a balanced scoring attack by North Quincy. Steve Priscella led the Presidents with 22 points.

O'Connell put the game away with a jumper at the buzzer to give the Red Raiders a huge 50-49 win in the first-round game. O'Connell didn't think he had enough on the shot to drop it.

"I thought the shot was short," said O'Connell. "I didn't think it was going in. I couldn't believe it. The first thing I did after it went in was look up at the clock to see how much time was left."

North Quincy's assistant coach Paul Bregoli likened the Red Raiders' victory to the U.S.A. hockey team's electrifying run. "We talked about going for the gold (medal) all week in practice," said Bregoli. "And now we're on our way. We had nothing to lose in this game. We were the underdogs."

The Red Raiders' tourney run came to a close two days later as Braintree squeaked out a win, 48-44, at Brockton High.

A Season To Remember For Quincy Boys Basketball

By BILL GRIFFIN

The ending should not be long remembered. The sting of the 65-56 loss to North Quincy last Friday in the quarterfinals of the sectionals will fade with time and allow Quincy to remember the wonderful ride and the fine moments the Presidents shared in their season.

"I told the kids after the game that it's the journey not the destination that they should remember," said coach Dave Parry whose team finished 15-7 on the season.

• They should remember how well they played against North Quincy, how close they were with 3:00 left when Solomon Umoren hit a fallaway three from deep along the sideline as the shot clock wound down to push the Red Raiders past Quincy.

• They should remember the emergence of Chris Callahan as a prime-time player over the last month of the season, his two remarkable performances in the tourney, and what could stretch before him as a legitimate college basketball prospect.

• They should remember those comeback wins. They should remember being down by 17 at Hingham late in the third period and winning by eight. They should remember being down by double-digits to Milton in the Moscardelli finals and to Barnstable in the first round of the tourney and rallying for victories.

• They should remember those nights at home. They should start with the unforgettable two-point win over North Quincy which ended the Red Raiders' unbeaten season. There was the double OT victory over Hingham and James Lam's drive which tied the game in the final two seconds. They should remember the defense and the one-point thriller over Scituate.

• They should remember Drew Myers, the cool-handed gunslinger who drained clutch threes in the closing minutes of tight games with Hingham, Scituate, Milton, North, and Silver Lake.

• They should remember those backdoor cuts and bull's-eye passes from center J.T. Bain for picture-perfect baskets.

• They should remember a great stretch run against top teams to clinch a home playoff game. They had to beat an unbeaten North club and a Milton team which is in the Division 2 semifinals of the sectionals. The Presidents won both.

• They should remember winning the Moscardelli and winning the first home boys basketball tournament game in the history of the new high school.

• They should remember the way the ball moved, the way it popped in rapid-fire passes, seldom stopping, to the open man. They should remember how they shared the ball, how unselfish their play was and what a delight it was to watch for any basketball fan.

"I think they will appreciate it after the sting of the North game fades," said Parry. "We are an extremely close team and the loss hurt. I thought the game was everything a tournament game should be. It could have gone either way. Umoren's shot was the key. If he misses and we get possession, we're down five with the ball and 3:00 left. That gives us a great chance."

Callahan returned from an ankle injury, and lit up the basketball floor for the last month. Simply put, he can do everything. He can score on anything from a three to a tap-in. He is an exceptional athlete and a shutdown defender. Against Barnstable, he hit two threes to fire up the home crowd and start Quincy's comeback from a 14-point hole in the third period. Against North, he owned the offensive boards with quickness and daring against a team that rebounds well. He had 35 points in two tourney games.

"There's no question in my mind that he can play Division 3 in college," said Parry. "The 1,500 people who were at the North game saw what he can do. He's the whole package. I thought he was the best player on the floor in both tournament games."

Callahan is part of a senior group with Brendan Cunningham, Johnny Marsinelli, and Kenny Sorensen which will be sorely missed.

"Brendan will play college ball next year as well," said Parry. "They are quality kids who are good citizens. They're well-rounded kids who will lead good lives."

A core of five juniors will return who could do great things for Quincy. Lam, Myers, Bain, Colin Evans and Kevin Williams are back. There is skill and experience here. They played seven games which were decided by less than five points and three thrillers with North. They are well-tested. There is also exceptional chemistry gained from playing about million games together since they were old enough to walk and dribble a basketball.

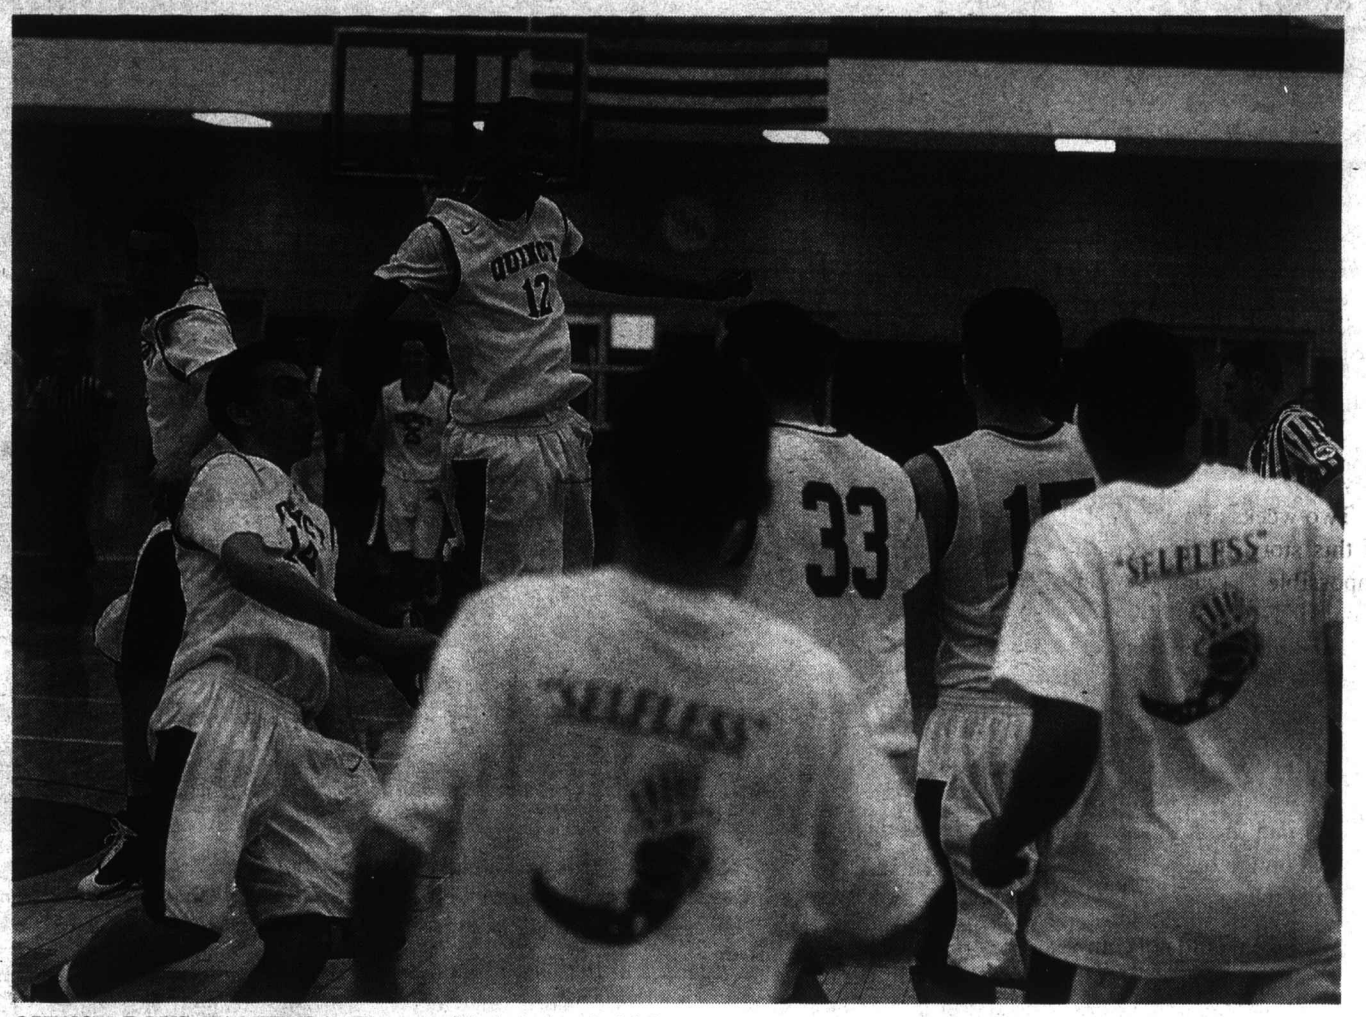

"I want to give them some time off to rest and decompress," said Parry. "Then we'll start the off-season work on things we need to improve. We could be very good, but we can't rest on our laurels. We have to keep getting better. One goal is the league title. That's something we just missed. We'd like to get it next year."

The juniors will remember well the defense which turned around their season. Parry loves to press full-court, but what Quincy did in the second half of the season was avoid taking chances on the traps and giving open looks. They settled back into the halfcourt man-to-man and played terrific defense. In their last 12 games, the Presidents held their opponent under 60 points nine times and under 51 six times.

"I like to press full-court because I don't want the opposing point guard to get comfortable," said Parry. "What happened was opposing teams watched film and saw openings in our traps. That's when we went back into the man-to-man and tightened up the defense."

There is also the issue of trust. Few players trust each other the way the Presidents do. It is the reason why in late-game situations against Milton and Barnstable, Parry didn't call any set plays. He simply let his kids play basketball. The kids called the plays. They shared the ball, they cut, they found the open man. The ball moved. It was a beautiful thing to watch.

"It's trust and it's unselfishness," said Parry. "They are so unselfish that I know nobody is going to hold the ball and fiddle with it. They're going to pass it. It's not only good basketball to watch, it's hard to scout it because we're not running any set plays. We'll keep doing it next year."

Division Title Highlights Successful Season For NQ Girls

By BILL GRIFFIN

There can never be any regrets about a championship season and North's girls basketball team earned a title by sharing the Patriot League Fisher Division crown with Hanover.

However, there is also the sense that if fortune had smiled a bit more brightly on the Red Raiders, they could have had a nice run in the tournament. Injuries are an ugly fact that challenges every team, but by the final week of the season they had mounted and reached the tipping point for North.

"The most satisfying part of the season is the division title," said coach Jess Worden whose team finished at 13-7 on the season. "It was my first title as a coach and the first for all the girls on the team. It's an exciting feeling."

The Red Raiders made their second straight tournament appearance and have complied a 27-14 record over the past two seasons.

"I think we could have gone a little further if not for the injuries, but that's not something we can control," added Worden who had her starting five healthy for only seven of 20 games.

Mansfield stopped North, 53-38 in the first round of the Division 1 South Sectionals. Grace Geary led North with 22 points while Jane Minton chipped in with seven points and six assists.

The Red Raiders jumped out to a 13-2 lead and were only down by three at the half. Mansfield went with a tough zone with a focus on Geary to control the second half.

"I think we just got a little tired," said Worden. "We had six of 16 players injured and that hurt our depth."

The injuries hurt in the final week of the season when North went without all-league center Maya Umoren, who missed the last eight games, and her backup Tristine Thong. North lost road games to Plymouth North (by 3) and Rockland. The losses almost certainly cost North, who was seeded 10th, a home playoff game.

"The homecourt makes a big difference in the tourney," said Worden.

It was a season with a fistful of bright spots. There were two wins over Quincy which gave North four straight victories over the Presidents. There was a sweep of the season's series with Scituate. There was a great home win over Hanover when Haley McKay shut out the Indians' top scorer and Minton went into the post, gave away seven inches, and controlled Hanover's best inside player. Minton playing tough against bigger players would become one of the stories of the season.

There was the home game against Rockland when Geary poured in nine points over the final 1:27 including two three-pointers which she made despite being run over by defenders. Thong added a key bucket. North rallied late and won by two. It was the best game this reporter saw all winter.

There were great efforts on the road. North built a double-digit lead at undefeated Duxbury before losing a close decision. Perhaps the best came in the final week at Hanover in a game which would have given North undisputed possession of the Fisher crown. Playing without Umoren who averaged 13 points and 10 rebounds per game, the Red Raiders fought back from a 12-point hole and had a slim lead in the final minutes before falling by four.

"I was proud of them, especially the seniors," said Worden who will lose four senior starters and Thong off the bench. "They knew our system and they were a good group to coach. The achieved a lot over the past two years."

One of the highlights of the year was the chance to watch Geary play basketball. When Minton (concussion) and Umoren (knee) went out with injuries over the second half of the season, Geary averaged 28 points in her last 12 games. She could score on everything from a three to a spinning drive off her left-hand dribble, to a layup off a steal. She scored her 1000th career point against Hingham in the North gym which was a fitting setting for the granddaughter of legendary coach Bob "Knobby" Nolan.

She was not merely a superior scorer. She was a superior player. She handled the ball, threw college-level passes, defended (six steals per game), and rebounded. She knows the game. It was a pleasure to sit and watch.

"She's a great player. When we needed her to score, she scored," said Worden. "When you only have a player for one year, it can be hard for her to learn the system. Grace knows the game so well, she picked it up quickly. Her all-around game is excellent. She will play in college."

Minton, McKay, Umoren and Thong also graduate. When Umoren was hurt, Minton went inside and gave North a post presence despite giving away half a foot most nights. McKay was an exceptional defender who could hit the open jumper as she did in a big moment in the second Quincy game. Umoren was a reliable double-double contributor. Thong was a force inside off the bench.

"I hope everyone who is coming back works hard in the off-season because there are open spots to fill," said Worden.

Junior Molly Minton and sophomore Marissa McGue will be the leaders. Minton is a good shooter and a solid all-around player. McGue could be special. She is an athlete with speed, a strong defender, and has a an excellent instinct for the game. She can pass and she showed signs over the second half of the season that she can score.

"We'll definitely need Marissa to score next year," said Worden.

Juniors Camille Mullaney and Hannah Donovan have experience up front off the bench. Junior Sydney Chang is a fast athlete in the backcourt. Freshman Remy Aucoin saw varsity time and incoming freshman Jen Butka (5'10") should help as well. Keep an eye on Mullaney. She is strong, can jump and could have a fine year in the middle as a senior.

"We have players with ability. For a lot of them, it will be a case of gaining experience," said Worden.

• 2012-13 team finished 15-5, earned the #5 seed in the MIAA Division I South Sectional and beat Natick, Braintree and Newton North before losing to #1 seed Mansfield in the Divison I South Sectional Final

• The 2012-13 team was led by twin brothers Dan and Pat Gould, who have both moved on to play at Framingham State University

• Patriot League Sportsmanship Award, as voted by his Patriot League coaching peers (4): 2009-10, 2010-11, 2011-12, 2012-13.

Prior to becoming head coach, Barrett served as a junior varsity coach under Jim Rendle for three seasons (2003-2006).

Barrett is a 1988 graduate of Archbishop Williams High School and a 1992 graduate of Saint Anselm College.

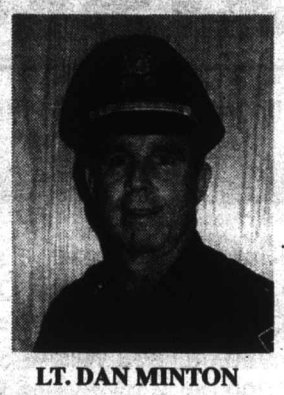

He is Physical education teacher at Quincy's Snug Harbor, Merrymount and Marshall elementary schools.

Barrett's father, Bob Barrett, was head coach of the boy's varsity basketball team at Archbishop Williams High School for 9 seasons (1976-1984).

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Wednesday, February 26, 2014, at approximately 3:00 a.m., Officer Daniel Clark was monitoring traffic on Hancock Street by the North Quincy Fire Station when he observed a red four door vehicle approaching him, traveling southbound on Hancock Street at an estimated speed of 55 mph in a 30 mph zone. Officer Clark was surprised to see that the vehicle sped up as it passed by the cruiser, which was in plain view. Officer Clark activated his blue lights and then notified Communications that he was attempting to stop the vehicle. This vehicle also passed by Officer Joseph Cox, who was also in the area.The suspect vehicle disappeared briefly, but Officers were able to regained sight of it in the area of Billings Road on Hancock Street. The vehicle then increased its speed and distance from the Officers as it continued southbound at a speed estimated to be at 80 plus miles per hour. Due to the danger of the excessive and reckless speed, the Communications Sergeant instructed all Officers to terminate the attempted stop. The Officers shut down their blue lights and reduced their speed to normal operation in the area of Hancock Street at Ferndale Road. The Officers continued southbound on Hancock Street where they came upon Officer Dwayne Goldman at the intersection of Hancock Street and Merrymount Parkway. Officer Goldman broadcasted that the suspect vehicle did not continue on Hancock Street beyond the stadium. Officer Goldman then drove down Merrymount Parkway, where he observed a red four door sedan that appeared to be in an accident.After informing Communications of the accident scene, Officers Clark and Cox pulled up to the accident location and confirmed that this was the same vehicle they were looking for. The vehicle was facing eastbound in the westbound lane, with moderate damage to the front and sides, with two blown out tires and the driver's side door pinned against a pedestrian crossing sign. Next to the vehicle was a female standing there looking bewildered. When asked what happened, the female told the Officers that she was at a party in Randolph and took a ride home from an unknown male she only knew as James. She said that she had been drinking and fell asleep in the passenger seat. She added that the male woke her up after the accident and told her to "run" as he fled in an unknown direction. The female gave a thorough description of the male suspect, which was dispatched to all units. Officer Clark found a cell phone on the front seat of the suspect vehicle and asked the female if it was hers. She said it was not hers and showed the Officers her cell phone. Officer Cox was searching for the suspect in the area of CVS in Wollaston when he spotted a person matching the description given walking in the alley next to Coffee Break Cafe at 12 Old Colony Avenue, which is less than a half mile from the accident scene.

LT. DAN MINTON

As Officer Cox turned down the alley, he illuminated the area with cruiser spotlights and exited the cruiser. As the Officer entered the parking lot of the C.A. Cox company, he spotted the suspect lying on the ground in the corner of the parking lot. The Officer instructed the suspect to show his hands and he complied. The suspect was then handcuffed for Officer safety and then questioned as to what he was doing. The suspect said he was on the ground "because I saw your spotlight." When the suspect asked why he was being stopped, Officer Cox told him, adding that the passenger gave a description of the driver. The suspect blurted out, "The girl gave a description of me?" This was an important statement because Officer Cox did not identify the gender of the passenger – the suspect did. The suspect said he lived in Boston and was walking to his girlfriend's house, but was not able to give an address of his intended destination. This male was run for warrants and it was determined that he had one default warrant from Waltham District Court. Back at the accident scene, the female was advised that Officers had a male detained who they believed was the driver and asked her to confirm that it was him. The female refused to view the suspect because she was fearful of retribution. The suspect was transported to the station. During the booking process, the suspect provided a home phone number to the booking Officer. Officer Clark called that number from the Quincy Police Report Room. The phone that was recovered from the vehicle began to ring and displayed the phone number from the Quincy Police Report Room. This helped establish additional evidence that the suspect being booked was in the suspect vehicle. During the booking process, Officer Kent Yee discovered a small amount of Marijuana in the suspect's pants pocket. The suspect, a 19 year old Mattapan resident, was charged with "Failing to stop for Police while operating a motor vehicle, Speeding, Operating to Endanger, Marked Lanes violation, Leaving scene after property damage, Operating Motor Vehicle after suspension and the default warrant." The vehicle is owned by A Snap Auto Rental Inc. and a follow-up investigation will determine who rented the suspect vehicle. Nice Work!

Quincy's TIF Agreements Called 'Very Successful'

Economic Developmnent Coordinator Tells Council Arrangements Boost Job Creation, Tax Revenue

By SCOTT JACKSON

Agreements the city has reached with local businesses to provide tax incentives for staying in Quincy and hiring new employees have been 'very successful,' according to Quincy's head of economic development.

Maureen Geary, Quincy's economic development coordinator, provided the City Council Monday night with reports on the five Tax Increments Financing Agreements (TIFs) in effect between the city and local businesses, providing the number of jobs created and the investment made by each company. The TIFs provide tax incentives to companies that reach certain hiring and investment benchmarks.

The five TIFs reviewed included Boston Scientific, Fallon Ambulance, P.V. Sullivan, Harbor South Towers (100 Hancock St.), and one for Quincy Shipyard LLC, which also includes facilities leased to the New England Aquarium and Bluefin Robotics. Geary said that the five agreements have all been successful from the city's point of view.

"The city's TIFs have been very successful here in the city as evidenced by the five current TIF agreements that you have before you," she told the council. "These projects in the aggregate have created significant job creation, private investment, and new tax revenue for the city."

In total, the companies have created 2,249 full-time jobs since signing their TIFs with the city, Geary explained, and made a combined investment of more than $165 million in real estate and equipment. Those figures are through the end of the last fiscal year, FY13, which ended June 30, 2013.

Since the TIF agreements were signed, the companies have paid a total of $15.4 million in property, including $1.9 million in 2013. The companies have received a total real estate tax exemption of $1.6 million since the agreements took effect.

"We have a significant amount of real estate investment and equipment in these companies here in the city with very little tax exemptions," Geary said. "The TIF program incentivizes companies to stay and grow within our community – and I think we've had the opportunity to see that – create jobs, and create investment. The companies have been doing a great job and they're all in compliance."

The $1.6 million exemption for real estate taxes doesn't include any exemption received for personal property tax, which is the amount of money a company is taxed on items such as computers and other equipment they own. Geary said she did not have the information on the personal property tax exemptions on hand, in response to a question from Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci.

The council approved a TIF agreement with Boston Scientific in December 1997 and amended that agreement in June 2010. At the time of the initial agreement with the city, the company had 76 full-time employees at its North Quincy location. The TIF required it to add 170 new employees. As of June 30 of last year, the company has 396 full-time employees working on site, including 130 Quincy residents. In total, Boston Scientific has invested $109.7 million in its facility since signing the TIF, paid $10.5 million in property taxes and received $1.2 million in real estate tax exemptions.

The agreement with Fallon Ambulance was approved by the council in March 2004. Since then the company has gone from 375 full-time employees to 416 through the end of FY13. Fallon invested $7.2 million in their Brook Road facility since signing the TIF and leased additional space on Commander Shea Boulevard. Since the TIF came into effect, the company has paid $390,000 in property taxes and received $237,000 in tax exemptions.

The agreement with Harbor South was approved by the council in March 2008. At the time, the office building at 100 Hancock Street was vacant. As of June 30, 2013, there were 1,217 employees working on site. Since signing the TIF, the company has paid $3.2 million in property taxes and received $126,000 in tax exemptions.

The council agreed to the TIF with P.V. Sullivan in March 2009. The company has gone from 33 full-time workers to 34 between the start of the TIF and June 30, 2013. P.V. Sullivan has invested $4.8 million into their facility during that period, paid $360,000 property taxes and received a tax exemption of $26,000.

The agreement with Quincy Shipyard LLC/Jay Cashman was approved by the council in September 2009. The company has gone from 40 full-time employees to 31 as of the end of last June. Over that same time period, the New England Aquarium has gone from two full-time employees to 12, and Bluefin Robotics went from 73 to 143. Both those companies lease space in the shipyard from Cashman.

Over the same time period, Cashman has invested $2 million in the site; the aquarium has invested $6 million, and Bluefin $12.8 million. Cashman has paid $941,000 in property taxes since the agreement was approved, and not received any exemptions according to documents presented to the council.

Last December, the council approved additional TIF agreements for Granite Telecommunication's Newport Avenue Extension facilities. Those will take effect at the beginning of FY15 on July 31 of this year.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although you tend to bore easily and leave others to finish what you start, this is one time when you'd be wise to complete things on your own. Then you can move on to something new.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your indecision about a personal situation might come out of those mixed signals you're getting. Best not to make any commitments until you have a better sense of how things are going.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A dispute appears to be getting out of hand. But you should be able to step in and bring it all under control soon. Be patient. News about a potential career move might be delayed.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Career obligations could interfere with important personal plans. But using a combination of common sense and compromise helps resolve the dilemma to everyone's satisfaction.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) A stressful situation drains some of your energy reserves. But you soon bounce back in time to finish your tasks and enjoy a well-deserved weekend getaway.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a good time to throw a party for friends and colleagues and surprise them with your dazzling domestic skills. You also might want to reconsider that career move you put on hold.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A sudden change of mind by someone you relied on could cause a delay in moving ahead with your plans. But those whom you've helped out before are prepared to return the favor.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You start the week feeling too shy to speak up in front of others. However, your self-assurance soon takes over, giving you the confidence you need to make yourself heard.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) One way to deal with a pesky personal dilemma this week is to meet it head-on. Insist on an explanation of why the situation reached this point and what can be done to change it.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The creative Capricorn finds several outlets for her or his talents this week. Also note that while a romantic connection looks promising, remember to allow it to develop on its own.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You stand out this week as the best friend a friend can have. But be careful that you don't take too many bows, or you might see gratitude replaced with resentment.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) What seems to be an ideal investment should be checked out thoroughly before you snap at the offer and find yourself hooked by an expensive scam.
BORN THIS WEEK: Your wisdom is matched by your generosity. You are a person who people know they can rely on.

He was born in Quincy, graduated from Quincy High School in 1947, and served his country in Korea with the Army from 1951-1953. He later spent a career with the newspaper that he delivered as a teenager, The Quincy Patriot Ledger, retiring after many years as the retail sales director.

He adored his wife, Dot, and they raised four children together. They spent many happy winters in Florida, where he could relax and enjoy his family. Mr. White was the longtime chairman of the Quincy Christmas Festival Committee, which was a job he loved, so much so that he marched in every parade dressed as a character to see the children's smiling faces. He was honored twice as grand marshall of the parade in thanks for his tireless efforts.

He was also The Quincy Sun 2006 Citizen of the Year, a member of the Quin-

Katherine Angell-Mann, 101

A funeral service for Katherine (Brown) Angell-Mann, 101, of Quincy will be held at 11 a.m. today (Thursday) in the Wollaston Church of the Nazarene.

Mrs. Angell-Mann died peacefully Feb. 28 at the Rice Eventide Home in Quincy.

She was born in Lowell on July 12, 1912, the daughter of the Rev. Tom and Amelia (McMartin) Brown. She was a 1934 graduate of Eastern Nazarene College with a major in Latin and the classics. She was the beloved wife for 50 years of Wesley G. Angell, who died in 1987, and later married Dr. Edward S. Mann, to whom she was married for 17 years.

Mrs. Angell-Mann worked for the University of Connecticut Extension Service and as presidential secretary at Eastern Nazarene College. She volunteered until age 98 as a historical interpreter with the college archive, and was a founding member of the ENC Alumni Association. She was a lifelong member of the Nazarene Church, and conveyed Christ's love to all whom she met.

Mrs. Angell-Mann was a 75-year resident of Quincy and was able to manage life in her own home until shortly before her passing because of the kind and loving care she received from her neighbors, family, and friends. She was a summer resident for 96 years of Marion and enjoyed gardening, sailing, sewing and relaxing at the beach. Mrs. Angell-Mann also enjoyed traveling throughout Canada, the United States, and Europe.

She was the consummate hostess, who welcomed all who showed up at her door. She will be fondly remembered for her service, humility, practical jokes, and her love of roses, which grew around the house and graced her table for many years.

Dear sister of the late Tom Brown and Margaret Brown Harding. She is survived by Gary and Susan Angell of CA, Gordon and Bethany Angell of CT, Dr. Katherine Angell of NY, and her former daughter-in-law Liz Angell of Natick. She is also survived by her stepchildren Edward and Carol Mann of Weymouth, Merritt and Judy Mann of Weymouth, Robert and Angie Mann of TX, and Richard and Vonda Mann of Houghs Neck. Cherished grandmother of Joshua and Nathaniel Angell, Heather Angell- Robledo and Jennifer Angell-DeMeis, great-grandmother of Joaquin, Gabriel and Diego Robledo, Noah, Finn and Emmett DeMeis, and Montgomery and Hana Angell. She was known as "Grammy K" to her step grand and great-grandchildren, and "Aunt K" to numerous nieces and nephews.

Visiting hours were 4-8 p.m. yesterday (Wednesday) at Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Interment was at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Katherine Angell Scholarship at Eastern Nazarene College, 23 E. Elm Avenue, Quincy, MA 02170.

James R. Kilborn, Jr.

Funeral services for James Roderick Kilborn, Jr., of Elimsport, Penn., and formerly Quincy will be held tomorrow (Friday) at 1 p.m. in the United Church of Christ of Norwell.

Mr. Kilborn died Feb. 22 at his home.

He was born to James R. and Jewell A. Kilborn in 1928 on the United Fruit Company property in Oriente Province, Cuba. After moving to Quincy in 1933, Mr. Kilborn attended Quincy Public Schools, graduating in 1946. After a two-year stint with the U.S. Navy and some time with the Forestry Service in Idaho, Mr. Kilborn attended Boston University graduating with a business degree. He received a commission as an ensign in the Naval Reserve in 1955 and began a career with General Electric.

In 1960, Mr. Kilborn married Marianne Packard Keever in Cleveland. In 1969 he moved his family to Norwell, where he was very active in town affairs and served on a number of boards culminating in his becoming chairman of the Board of Selectman. He retired from the Naval Reserve in 1988 as a LCDR.

Shortly after Mrs. Kilborn's death in 1991, Mr. Kilborn moved to Elimsport, Penn. He was a master mason in the Massachusetts Blue Lodge, a lifelong member of the NRA, and a private pilot.

He is survived by Mrs. Peri Taylor, James R. Kilborn III, Scott David Kilborn, and four grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements were made by McNamara Sparrell Funeral Home, Norwell.

Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my Mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to succor me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, Mary, conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (three times). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (three times). Say this prayer 3 consecutive days, and then you must publish and it will be granted to you. M.L. 3/6

DPW Offers Beautification Grants

The Department of Public Works is accepting applications from local schools, civic organizations and Quincy residents to participate in the National Public Works Week Public Space Beautification Project.

Chosen projects will receive up to $500 in grant money gift cards redeemable at both Quincy Home Depots to complete their projects. All projects must utilize volunteer labor and only one project will be selected per public space.

The deadline for the grant application is Friday, March 14. Written proposals and photos should be sent to Public Works Commissioner Daniel G. Raymondi, 55 Sea St., Quincy, MA 02169 or e-mailed to recyclequincy@quincyma.gov.

Applications are available at the Engineering Desk at the DPW, 55 Sea St., Monday through Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Applications may also be downloaded from the DPW home page by going to the City's web site at www.quincyma.gov.

The proposed beautification projects will be evaluated and winners will be notified of their award in early April. Projects must be completed by the end of Cleaner Greener Day, Saturday, May 3. In addition, prize money will be awarded to first, second and third places to be used for future beautification projects.

National Public Works week will be celebrated in Quincy the week of May 17 through 23.

"The Department of Public Works provides a host of services that support and enhance the quality of life for Quincy residents and I am very proud that our hard working men and women in the DPW get the recognition they deserve," Raymondi said.

Other events are planned for during National Public Works week including banner/poster contests, an Open House and recognition/award ceremonies.

According to the DPW, some suggestions for proposed beautification sites are public walkways, open space, school grounds, along seawalls and parks.

Applicants are encouraged to plan on maintenance costs when submitting their application to the DPW. Participants are also encouraged to coordinate their sites with Cleaner Greener to take advantage of resources offered by the Park and other City Departments on Saturday, May 5.

For further information call the DPW at 617-376-1959.

Lynch Optimistic On Flood Insurance Compromise

stead of just providing a national average.

"Under the old proposal FEMA has a convoluted formula for increasing rates. You couldn't rely on FEMA for early indications – that was the problem with the last one (Biggert-Waters)," Lynch said. "What we countered with was a policy that would apply per home. It's more meaningful than the national average."

Another change to the original Republican proposal and the new bill expected to come to a vote this week calls for FEMA to provide House and Senate members with a 60-day advance notice of any proposed new maps.

"Republicans agreed to accept language I asked for that would give members of Congress 60-day previews of the changes," Lynch said. That 60-day period, he explained, would allow members of Congress to meet with residents and local officials, giving them more time to contemplate appeals.

The Senate already approved companion legislation to the Grimm-Waters Act. Lynch said he was optimistic that chamber would approve the compromise bill being contemplated in the House.

Clifford Marshall School, Joy Hanlon Scholarships

The Clifford H. Marshall Elementary School is offering scholarships to high school seniors who graduated from the Marshall School and who plan to further their education.

Applications for the Joy Hanlon Scholarship and the Clifford H. Marshall Scholarship are available in the main office of the Clifford Marshall School.

Completed applications should be submitted to:

Principal Nicholas J. Ahearn

Clifford H. Marshall School

200 Moody St.

Last day to submit applications is Tuesday, April 15. Two $500 scholarships will be presented during the Fourth Grade Awards Breakfast in June.

The school also appreciates contributions in support of the scholarships.

Quincy College President Takes The Plunge For Cancer Center

Quincy College President Peter Tsaffaras took the "plunge" again last Saturday for the Jordan Hospital Club Cancer Center Polar Plunge held at Plymouth Beach.

It was his fifth time overall in three years that he braved the elements and took a polar plunge for charity – his third in Plymouth.

Since 2003, the Jordan Hospital Club Cancer Center holds the Jordan's Polar Plunge as a means of raising funds for those in need. The plunge involves intrepid souls diving, or just dipping their feet, into the ocean at Plymouth Beach.

Tsaffaras has participated twice before in the John Hancock Birthday Polar Plunge at Wollaston Beach in Quincy which benefits Interfaith Social Services, and once in the Polar Plunge in Plymouth to benefit the Jordan Hospital Club Cancer Center.

"Not only is the Jordan Hospital Polar Plunge a great cause, it is also a team building event for the faculty and staff at Quincy College," Tsaffaras said. "Having had a campus in Plymouth for over 23 years, we're definitely a part of the greater Plymouth community and our participation in events like this one show that we care for the people who care for us."

Since the first brave plungers jumped into the icy sea ten years ago, Jordan's Polar Plunge has raised over $1,000,000 for the Jordan Hospital Club Cancer Center.

This year's goal was to raise $100,000; more than $68,000 has been raised so far. For more information about the plunge or to make a donation, visit http://www.jordanspolarplunge.com.

Downtown Committee Meeting March 31

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council's downtown committee will hold a series of meetings and hearings covering different aspects of Quincy Center redevelopment over the next several months, beginning with a meeting on Adams Green and the city's land disposition agreement (LDA) with Street-Works on March 31.

Road improvements that will take place before construction of the Adams Green park could begin as early as this spring. The road improvements will impact several major arteries in Quincy Center, including Hancock, Washington, Granite, Coddington, Temple, and Adams Streets. Councillor Doug Gutro, chairman of the downtown committee, said the first part of the March 31 meeting, which will be held at 6:30 p.m. inside the council's temporary chambers, will provide a chance for business owners and residents to identify questions and concerns they may have regarding the Adams Green roadwork.

Gosule Announces Bid For State Senate

Victims' advocate Les Gosule formally announced his candidacy for the Massachusetts State Senate Wednesday on the outside stairs of the State House and at Alba's restaurant in Quincy.

Gosule, a Quincy Republican, is making his first bid for elected office. He is running to unseat Quincy Democrat John Keenan who has represented the Norfolk Plymouth Senate District since 2011. The district includes Quincy.

"For the past several months, I have been meeting with people from Abington, Braintree, Holbrook, Rockland and Quincy to hear their concerns. It is clear to me that they want a new direction at the State House, so today I am proud to formally announce my candidacy," said Gosule. "For 13 years I advocated to pass Melissa's law from the outside of the State House looking in. I saw firsthand how dysfunctional Beacon Hill operates. Melissa's law should not have been bogged down for 13 long years. It is time to put people ahead of politics and fix the Senate from the inside out."

Gosule said he is running to make a positive difference on public safety issues along with fiscal issues. If elected to the State Senate, he said he will demand accountability of tax dollars and work to reduce taxes. Gosule said he supports repealing the gas tax being linked to inflation.

"Most people know me as a victims' advocate, but they don't know that I am also a CPA and small business owner. Every day I see firsthand how tax laws affect savings and household budgets. It is clear to me that Beacon Hill doesn't know how people and small businesses are hurting. One of my top goals will be to use my accounting expertise to find savings and lower our hefty tax burden. Isn't it time that we had more CPAs at the State House than lawyers?" said Gosule.

As the campaign moves forward, Gosule plans on releasing a plan to strengthen public safety and victims' rights.

Gosule is a dad, grandfather, a CPA, and a determined advocate for crime victims and taxpayers. He is best known as the father of Melissa Gosule who was murdered in 1999 by a serial criminal who had been released early from prison. For 13 long years Les lobbied elected leaders on Beacon Hill to pass Melissa's Bill. Recognizing his efforts to make Massachusetts a safer place, Les was appointed to the state CORI board by Governor Mitt Romney and reappointed by Governor Deval Patrick.

Gosule graduated from Boston Technical High School, and earned his Bachelor of Science in Accounting and Finance from Bentley College. Later on Gosule went on to earn a Master's degree in Taxation from Northeastern University.

Gosule is a Certified Public Accountant and a licensed Financial Advisor. His small business employs 14 area residents.

New 3-Year Contract For School Superintendent

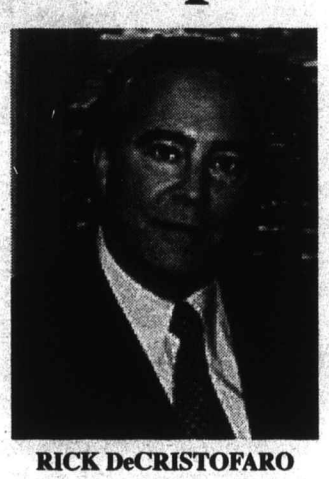

By SCOTT JACKSON

The School Committee has approved a new three-year contract for school Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro that will pay him a total of nearly $700,000 in salary and longevity pay.

DeCristofaro, who turns 62 on April 2, earned $226,000 each year over the course of his previous three-year contract, which was signed in December 2010. After not receiving a raise during the duration of that deal, the superintendent will receive a one percent raise annually under the new pact, which is retroactive to Nov. 1 of last year.

During year one of the new contract – Nov. 1, 2013, to Oct. 31, 2014 – DeCristofaro will earn $228,260. That will increase to $230,543 in year two and $232,848 in year three. In addition to the salary, DeCristofaro will also receive a $2,300 lump sum longevity payment each year on Nov. 1.

The School Committee approved the new three-year deal in a 6-1 vote, with Anne Mahoney casting the lone "no" vote, during its most recent meeting on March 5.

RICK DeCRISTOFARO

After the meeting, committee member David McCarthy said the new contract was fair to both sides.

"He's been good for the city and good for the school system," McCarthy said of DeCristofaro in a phone interview. "The three-year deal he ended up with is very fair."

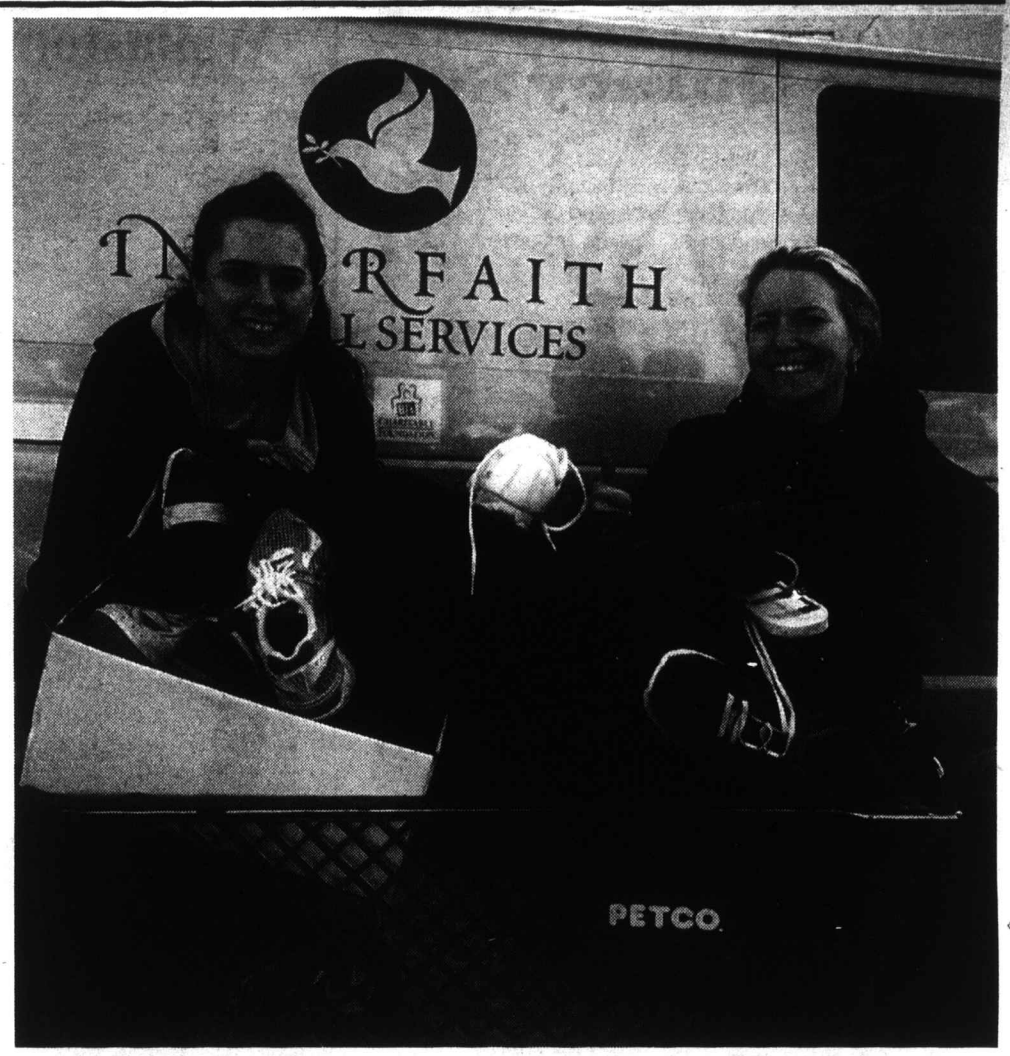

McCarthy cited DeCristofaro's lengthy tenure, noting that he's been superintendent for 12 years and has worked in the School Department since 1974 while other communities have superintendents with less experience. Braintree and Weymouth, for example, have both hired new superintendents since 2012.

"There's not that many superintendents to pick from these days – a lot of new ones are coming up," McCarthy said. "Rick DeCristofaro is a solid superintendent. He knows the city and he's very accessible. He's been a shining star to everyone."

Mayor Thomas Koch, who serves as chairman of the School Committee, also praised the superintendent for his lengthy service record.

"Dr. DeCristofaro is a tireless worker and tremendous leader for our school system. His work and the work of his team have consistently produced remarkable results over the years on behalf of your young people," Koch said in a statement Tuesday. "The stability he has brought to the school system cannot be overstated – school superintendents who commit to

MAKE A STATEMENT

If there is one fine jewelry trend that seems destined to continue unabated, it is dramatic statement earrings. Of course, there is hardly anything new about statement earrings, which have been worn for centuries by queens and princesses intent on putting their royal mark on special occasions. While long earrings and heavy jewelry were the clear choices of royalty of yore, any woman today can wear a pair of statement earrings to spruce up her outfit. Depending on the style, bold earrings can impart a sense of class and femininity, while outsized, edgy styles can be used to introduce more than a bit of spark. Just as important, statement earrings can introduce color to an otherwise monochromatic outfit.

When you wear statement earrings, they should be the only attention grabbing accessory you are wearing. In other words, do not pair statement earrings with long strands of beads, or lots of excessive 'bling'. Depending on what sort of statement earrings you decide to wear, match your outfit accordingly. Gorgeous chandelier earrings are fun, but those are best when worn for a dressy occasion. Shop at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center to discover just the right piece statement earrings and jewelry or other gift or contact us at 617-773-3636.

Moments in time

THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

• On March 30, 1775, hoping to keep the New England colonies dependent on the British, King George III endorses the New England Restraining Act. The Act required New England colonies to trade exclusively with Great Britain. An additional rule would come into effect banning colonists from fishing in the North Atlantic.

• On March 28, 1814, the funeral of Guillotin, namesake of the infamous execution device, takes place outside of Paris. When first used, the crowds seemed to miss the gallows, but the guillotine quickly caught on. The device symbolized equality, as it was used on both commoners and the nobility alike.

• On March 27, 1912, in Washington, D.C., Helen Taft, wife of President William Taft, and the Viscountess Chinda, wife of the Japanese ambassador, plant two Yoshina cherry trees on the northern bank of the Potomac River. The event was held in celebration of a gift by the Japanese government of 3,020 cherry trees to the United States.

• On March 26, 1920, "This Side of Paradise" is published, immediately launching 23-year-old F. Scott Fitzgerald to fame and fortune. While in Europe, Fitzgerald finished his masterpiece "The Great Gatsby" (1925). He also published dozens of short stories in his lifetime.

• On March 24, 1958, Elvis Presley is inducted into the U.S. Army after being granted a two-month deferment to finish his third movie, "King Creole." While stationed in Germany, Presley met his future wife, 14-year-old Priscilla Beaulieu.

• On March 29, 1971, Lt. William L. Calley is found guilty of premeditated murder at My Lai by a U.S. Army court-martial. Calley, an infantry platoon leader, had led his men in a massacre of hundreds of Vietnamese civilians, including women and children, in 1968.

• On March 25, 1983, during filming of the television special "Motown 25: Yesterday, Today, Forever," Diana Ross, formerly of the Supremes, shoved singer Mary Wilson out of the spotlight. It later had to be edited out. Smokey Robinson stepped in onstage to keep between the two warring Supremes.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS 1935 POSTCARD is a view of Quincy banker Delcevare King's famous seaside resort Kampkliff. When it was built in 1920 it was the first and only house on Passonagesset Knoll, now Shore Avenue in Merrymount. Passonagesset was an Algonquin Indian name meaning the place of a little neck of land. The exact location of Passonagesset is unknown but it probably was in what is now known as Broad Meadows. It was the summer home of the great Indian Sachem Chickatabot before disease forced him to move his people north in Quincy Bay to Moswetuset Hummock. Delcevare King, the son of wealthy banker Theophilus King, built Kampkliff to be used as a bachelor's playhouse. Note the flag with the K on the chimney at left. During the first two years he invited thousands of guests to "Come play at my house." He hosted his friends, children and hospital groups and even the whole city when he placed an ad on the front page of The Patriot Ledger for an open house on July 4, 1922. Kampkliff had a Quincy granite seawall protecting fifteen bathhouses along the shore that had searchlights for nighttime swimming on an offshore float. The house was near the end of Narragansett and Chickatabot Roads. After he married, King added living quarters and Kampkliff became his family home until his father Theophilus died in 1935. He then moved to the old King family homestead at 270 Adams Street. He sold Kampkliff in 1938. It has since been replaced with other houses.. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Volunteers Counting Smelt In Town Brook

By PAT ARTIS

So far none of the citizen-scientist volunteers have seen any smelt in the Town Brook.

Each day this past week at six different locations these citizen-scientists have been observing conditions in the brook. Since the water temperatures each day have all been below 40 degrees Fahrenheit, the volunteers have not had really high expectations. Yet they have been logging in meticulously the location/day/time/smelt count/comments and sending their data to info@townbrook.org for tabulation.

If you would like to follow their efforts, or volunteer, go to the QEN, maintained web site at www.townbrook.org, and you will find information about volunteering, locations, and the process itself. You can volunteer to count smelt by sending contact information to info@townbrook.org and register for a day of the week and a few locations to monitor.

As the weather warms and water temperatures in the brook rise; the chances of observing smelt will improve. For centuries the smelt have been returning to the Town Brook in downtown Quincy to spawn and lay their eggs, from March 1st through May 30th.

The goal of the organizers of this project from QEN and Conservation Committee members of the Wollaston Garden Club is to educate its volunteer members and the greater community regarding the life cycle of the smelt and the brook's fragile ecosystem; to develop community advocacy for the smelt and its ecosystem; and to conduct a systematic, methodical fish count for this spring. The Stream Team organizers plan for this to become an annual event with the intention of collecting data for many years to come. If you, or your group, are interested and can donate approximately 15 minutes per week to look for smelt in the brook, then join the fun as a Town Brook Stream Team. volunteer.

Self-Defense Demonstration For MOTHERS Club March 18

The MOTHERS Club (Members Organized To Help, Educate, Reach-out and Socialize) of the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave., Quincy will meet Tuesday, March 18th at 7 p.m. in Fellowship Hall.

Season To Remember For NQHS Hoops

By SCOTT JACKSON

North Quincy High's basketball finished their season with a 20-1 record, losing only in the Div. I South finals, a season coach Bob Nolan would remember for much more than the impressive record.

"I will never forget the wonderful support our fans gave us. The number of adults which accompanied us away from home did much for our morale and we had outstanding crowds at all road games. This couldn't help but give the players a boost," Nolan said.

"Many of those attending the games never had anyone playing on the North teams and others hadn't had anyone playing for a number of years. A couple of girl graduates even drove out to Medford a week before our game there to find the best way to the school. They didn't want to have any trouble finding it and missing any of the game. That is just another example of the great spirit here."

The Red Raiders ran the table in the regular season, going 17-0. They followed that up by knocking off Framingham South, New Bedford, and Dedham in state tournament games held at the Boston Garden. The win over Framingham South was North's first win at the Garden under Nolan, whose squads went one-and-done four times previously in tournament play.

In the Div. I South finals, North bowed out to Catholic Memorial, 73-62. In the finale, Jamie Doherty scored 19 for the Red Raiders, Ken Marsters had 13, and John Stevens added 10.

Nolan was named the Greater Boston League's coach of the year and North captain Dave Nelson received the Munroe MacLean Memorial Trophy for Outstanding Sportsmanship.

"One of the things I'll salvage is that we beat Somerville twice and Quincy twice," said Nelson, one of three seniors on the team. "Playing in Boston Garden is a childhood dream. It is something you can take with you."

Nelson and Doherty were also named to the GBL all-star team, along with Quincy High's Bobby McDermott.

In honor of the team's success, Mayor Walter J. Hannon had declared Red Raider Day in the city. A fundraising drive was underway to send the squad on a trip, possibly to Bermuda.

NQHS PROPOSAL BEFORE COUNCIL

A unanimous reccomendation by the School Committee to consider the WMEX property in the Montclair Marshes as a site for a new North Quincy High was sent to the City Council for review.

The council would be asked to consider the plan at an upcoming meeting. That followed School Committee sessions in which Committeemen Harold Davis and Francis X. McCauley said alternatives to the "State Street South" site should still be considered.

Davis had suggested part of Boston Edison's 450-acre property in Squantum be considered for the school site. Davis said the site would feature extra land that could be used for future additions and would make possible courses such as ecology and oceanology due to its proximity to the water. Davis also mentioned the possibility of community recreation facilities around a Squantum school, including an ice skating facility.

Davis and McCauley said they voted to send the Montclair Marsh plan to the council because they felt it should be considered. Each added that the vote was not to express a preference for the site.

QUINCY-ISMS

The council's finance committee, chaired by Councillor John J. Quinn, trimmed $146,565 from the proposed municipal budget during weekend sessions. The committee was more than halfway to its goal of cutting $250,000 from the budget...Rose Devore of Victoria Road was elected coordinator of the Quincy McGovern for President Committee at its recent organizational meeting...Quincy Hockey Association President Robert P. Hayes said the proposed Quincy Youth Arena could open in October at a cost of $600,000 if the city approved construction...Former North Quincy High catcher Pete Varney, a Chicago White Sox prospect, was expected to start the season with the team's Double-A affiliate in Knoxville, TN...Police Chief Francis X. Finn was named guest speaker at an upcoming meeting of the Young Democratic Club...The Leaning Tower, 541 Southern Artery, was offering green pepper pizza for $1 in honor of St. Patrick's Day.

Sketching Class At Kennedy Center

The Quincy Council on Aging is offering Sketching classes at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy, beginning April 7th.

The six-week sketching class is for seniors age 60 and older. Under the guidance of Robert Farrell, a local artist with almost 30 years of experience in drawing, watercolor and oil painting, students are slowly reacquainted with the joy of expressing themselves through the ancient language of art.

Using a Number 2 pencil (found in nearly every home or very inexpensive to purchase) and copy paper which will be supplied, the new artist will relearn to produce line drawings and tonal sketches that provide instant gratification and/or a springboard to learn more serious artistic output in color.

Space is limited. For more information and to register, call 617-376-1506.

'About Time' Film Screening Tonight

The 2013 film "About Time" will be screened tonight (Thursday) at 6:30 p.m. at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Directed by Richard Curtis and starring Bill Nighy, Domhnall Gleeson, and Rachel McAdams, the 123-minute film is rated R for language and some sexual content.

In the movie, a young man with the ability to time travel discovers that finding true love isn't as easy as he thought it would be in this romantic comedy from writer/director Richard Curtis (Love Actually, Pirate Radio). Tim Lake (Domhnall Gleeson) is 21 and lonely.

In the harsh morning light following a depressing New Year's Eve party, however, he discovers a family secret that will change his life forever. Entrusted by his father (Bill Nighy) with the knowledge that the men in their family can time travel, Tim relocates to London to study law and find a girlfriend. The moment Tim locks eyes with gorgeous Mary (Rachel McAdams) he knows he's found the woman of his dreams. But as soon as they've fallen in love, an unexpected glitch in the time travel renders them complete strangers again.

Traveling back and forth in time Tim discovers that the true key to happiness lies not in his ability to fix the problems of the past, but instead make the absolute most of his life in the present.

Other films featured in the Thursday Night screenings include All is Lost (March 20, 7 p.m.), Hunger Games - Catching Fire (April 3, 6 p.m.), Saving Mr. Banks (April 10, 6:30 p.m.) and Gravity (April 24, 7 p.m.)

The film series is sponsored by Friends of Thomas Crane Public Library.

BIG SISTER Theresa Jasset of Quincy and her Little Sister Aiyana.

Big, Little Sisters Celebrate One Year Anniversary

Quincy resident, Big Sister Theresa Jasset and her Little Sister Aiyana, of Abington, recently celebrated their one year anniversary.

Jasset and Aiyana recently enjoyed a visit to a farm and a prompt brunch afterwards. They enjoy attending various museums around the Boston area together.

Big Sister Association of Greater Boston asks mentors to make a commitment of at least 12 months, though many Big and Little Sister relationships continue for several years, and even develop into lifelong friendships. Research has shown that mentoring relationships lasting at least one year, particularly for girls, result in more positive outcomes in a girl's social-emotional development, academic performance, and ability to make healthy decisions. There are many essential elements for a successful match, including the volunteer's commitment and the professional assessment, training, and support the volunteers receive from the agency's social work staff.

Big Sister congratulates Jasset on making a difference in the life of her Little Sister as a caring, supportive friend and mentor.

Matthew Licari On Dean's List

Tomato Sauce With Tuna Fish

There was a tradition in most families, that on Christmas Eve, there would be seven kinds of fish entrees, and everyone would participate and bring their favorite dish. These days everyone is so busy, we're lucky to cook anything.

Anyway, I recently decided to make a fish dish that would always be included in the mix. And that was tuna fish in the tomato sauce. When I served it to the family, they were surprised and remembered how tasty it was. It's very easy to make, can be made ahead of time, has a distinctive flavor, especially if you like tuna.

The following recipe feeds six people

1 can Italian tuna (with olive oil)
1 can white tuna
1 small onion (sliced)
2 cloves of chopped garlic
2 tablespoons fresh parsley (chopped)
salt and pepper
1 large can tomatoes (crushed or other)
1 pound linguine or spaghetti
3 tablespoons olive oil

In the hot oil, sauté the gārlic and onion and then add the tuna, cook for a couple of minutes until blended together and then add the tomatoes and parsley.

Cook until done -usually takes between 45 minutes to an hour (on low heat).

Cook the pasta according to directions and then sprinkle top with either Parmesan or Romano grated cheese.

Dr. Edward Fitzgerald To Be Honored As 'Irishman Of The Year'

St. Patrick's Day Luncheon At Lodge Of Elks Friday

Dr. Edward Fitzgerald, executive director of the Quincy Historical Society, will receive 'Irishman of the Year' honors at Friday's St. Patrick's Day luncheon hosted by the Quincy Parks Conservancy at the Quincy Lodge of Elks.

Dr. EDWARD FITZGERALD

Fitzgerald, whose Quincy roots go back four generations, holds a PhD in 19th Century American Literature from New York University. He has served as the city's top historian for the past two decades. He has also taught at Quincy College, Stevens Institute of Technology, Rutgers University, Newark College, and Queensborough Community College of the City University of New York. He has worked as a writer and editor and was assistant director of communications for the Lighthouse, a major New York human services agency. Dr. Fitzgerald and his wife, Norma, currently live in North Quincy.

The "Irishman of the Year" award honors an individual who has contributed to the foundation and spirit of the community.

"Dr. Ed Fitzgerald has dedicated the better part of 20 years to preserving our city's rich history and making it accessible to our residents, young and old, and those that visit Quincy," said Mayor Thomas Koch. "His humble demeanor truly complements his wealth of knowledge and we're fortunate to have him as the steward of our heritage."

The Quincy Parks Conservancy, a non-profit organization dedicated to preserving, promoting and enhancing and the city's park land and open space areas, will host the event.

Tickets are available for $50 each and tables of 10 may be reserved. To purchase tickets, contact Grace Murphy-McAuliffe at gmcauliffe1@comcast.net.

Boxer John L. Sullivan Topic At Crane Public Library March 19

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy, will host author Christopher Klein on Wednesday, March 19 at 7 p.m. He will talk about Boxer John L. Sullivan who became the country's first sports superstar and Irish-American hero.

Sullivan, the first modern heavyweight boxing champion of the world, was the gold standard of American sport for more than a decade, and the first athlete to earn more than a million dollars.

The larger-than-life boxer embodied the American Dream for late nineteenth-century immigrants as he rose from Boston's Irish working class to become the most recognizable man in the nation. In the process, the "Boston Strong Boy" transformed boxing from outlawed bare-knuckle fighting into the gloved spectacle we know today.

Klein, a history and travel writer, is the author of the recently published book, Strong Boy, as well as two previous books—Discovering the Boston Harbor Islands and The Die-Hard Sports Fan's Guide to Boston.

A frequent contributor to the Boston Globe and History.com, he has also written for the New York Times, National Geographic Traveler, Harvard Magazine, Red Sox Magazine, ESPN.com, and Smithsonian.com. He lives in Andover, Massachusetts, with his wife and two children.

The program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

$14M In Repairs Approved For Long Island Bridge

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Long Island Bridge is slated for $14 million in repairs, despite a Quincy legislator maintaining that it has "outlived its use" and that ferry service to and from the island would be preferential.

"Given the age and condition of the bridge, there will be a continued need for future costly repairs and environmental concerns to the surrounding waterways, shellfish, and beaches," said Rep. Bruce Ayers in a letter he sent to be read during a recent meeting of the Quincy Conservation Commission. "I therefore strongly believe an alternative transportation plan to the island will be a safer, more environmentally sound and cost-effective method of transportation."

The bridge, which is owned by the city of Boston, is 62-years-old and requires repairs to truss top chord members, truss gusset plates, stringers, floor beams, bracing members, curbs, and bowed-up decks. Long Island can only be accessed through a guarded gate located in the Squantum neighborhood of Quincy. Any alterations to the bridge or its usage must be approved by the Conservation Commission.

Tension between Boston and Quincy officials over the project is due to concerns regarding the environmental impact construction would cause to area wildlife and plant life. There are also concerns that debris due to construction may pollute the water, further disturbing the surrounding ecosystem.

Conservation Committee members postponed approval of the repairs twice in recent months, requesting further environmental studies be done to determine the impact of the project. This delay left Boston officials frustrated, spurring then Boston Mayor Thomas Menino to send a letter to Quincy Mayor Thomas Koch, stating that repairs to the bridge should take place immediately to improve safety.

Ayers has requested that "the environmental peer review be completed and approved by the Conservation Commission," and that "the project is monitored throughout its various stages."

In addition, his letter stated the Quincy Conservation Commission should be "notified of any changes to the original project, that the Quincy Conservation Commission [be] notified should an emergency situation arise during the construction or demolition and that any vehicular traffic associated with this project comply with the city of Quincy ordinances toward traffic control."

According to a representative from TranSystems Boston, there will be no impediment to traffic and construction vehicles will not pass through Marina Bay's privately owned roads.

Currently, the City of Boston Public Health Commission houses the Long Island Shelter and a detoxification center on the island, which is only accessible to employees rendering social services and those enrolled in the programs. These programs have been in place since 1882. Also located on the island is Boston Fire Department's Engine Company 54 and an organic farm that provides produce to area shelters and various farmer's markets located throughout Boston.

Long Island is not accessible to the general public; a fact that doesn't sit well with Ayers.

"I strongly believe that the island is not being used to its full potential," he said. "It should be used for more environmental and recreational purposes such as fishing, hiking, camping, and open to residents of Squantum and Quincy."

Ayers has proposed an act calling for the Massachusetts Department of Transportation (MassDOT) to perform quarterly routine and special member inspections of the safety of the bridge under the stipulation that if something is found to have gone awry, MassDOT must implement water or barge access within 90 days of inspection.

He has also proposed acts calling for quarterly inspections of maritime and environmental safety to be conducted by state police with the assistance of the U. S. Coast Guard, and has established a special commission that publicizes his vision for the projected future use of Long Island.

Per an agreement reached between the cities, Boston must pay $27,500 to Polaris Consultants, who will review contract documents and will be tasked with monitoring the construction.

"I think everybody agrees that the project needs long term observation by a third party on behalf of the commission," said Director of Inspectional Services Jay Duca.

RED CROSS DAY was observed March 4 at the State House. From left are Robert Bowers, Director of Volunteer Services for the American Red Cross of Massachusetts; state Sen. Dozens of legislators, including Sen. Keenan, and their aides stopped by to offer their support and thanks. For more than 70 years, all of our country's presidents, including President Barack Obama, have designated March as Red Cross Month to recognize how the American Red Cross helps people across the country and around the world. RITA M. WELCH (right) was a pioneer in the advancement of the long-term care industry and a tireless advocate for seniors. Here Mrs. Welch is shown with former Massachusetts Gov. John A. Volpe (center) and an unidentified man.

Welch Group Founder Remembered As Long-Term Care Pioneer

The Welch Family honors the memory and legacy of Rita M. (St. John) Welch, who passed away Feb. 6 at the age of 93.

Mrs. Welch, who founded the Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group with her late husband, Thomas "Frank" Welch, will be remembered as a trailblazer and a tireless advocate for older adults, and as a generous and loving mother, grandmother and great-grandmother.

With her strong work ethic and charming personality, she was a pioneer in the evolution of senior care and living options as we know them today. Her legacy will be remembered by the thousands she has touched and the many lives she has changed.

Early in their marriage, childhood sweethearts Frank and Rita, with four young children, made a decision to open their two-story home to care for frail older adults. This event in 1949 marked the founding of the John Scott House in Braintree, and set the Welch Group's family oriented approach to caring for older people in motion.

Now over six decades later what began as a modest 11-bed nursing home has grown into an organization that provides a continuum of care services to over 2,500 seniors who require housing or care options, including independent living, assisted living, short-term rehabilitation and long-term care, Alzheimer's care, adult day health and home care services on a daily basis.

Mrs. Welch brought her vision of compassionate care to the state and national levels as a legislative advocacy. She was a founding member and three-term president of the Massachusetts Federation of Nursing Homes, secretary of the national American Nursing Home Association and mother of seven.

A REMARKABLE LIFE – Rita M. Welch, founder of Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group.

Photos Courtesy Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group

In the late 1960s, shortly after the advent of Medicare and Medicaid legislation, Mrs. Welch became a familiar figure at the State House and in Washington. Known for always speaking her mind, she was never shy talking about raising industry standards and challenging public policies. Mrs. Welch was appointed first Licensing Commissioner for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and proudly held the first nursing home administrator license issued in the state.

Stonehill College honored her in 2010 with an honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters. At the time when asked about her years of work, Mrs. Welch stated, "My primary concern throughout my career was to advocate for the elderly and to ensure the credibility of the nursing home industry."

That same year at the age of 89, Mrs. Welch wrote and published her memoir, Hand in Hand: My Family and My Business, which recalls the origins of an industry in its infancy, building a business and raising a family. In her fifties, she and Frank passed leadership and the day-to-day operation of the company to their children, having nurtured in each a strong level of confidence and commitment to the business.

In her memoir, Mrs. Welch reflected on her legacy and family business saying, "My life is like a tapestry, where the story of motherhood is tightly woven with the work I did as a businesswoman."

Three Quincy Stonehill Students Volunteering For H.O.P.E. Program

Three residents of Quincy are among Stonehill College students who will be spending their spring break week helping those in need as part of the school's H.O.P.E. Alternative Spring Break Program.

Marisa Adams and Kathryn Wegener, both of Quincy, will be traveling the week of March 9th to the Dominican Republic where they will be volunteering at Hogar del Nino, a center that seeks to offer necessary services to children in need. Adams is a member of the Class of 2016; Wegener is a member of the Class of 2014.

Another student from Quincy, Julia Murphy, will be traveling to New Orleans the week of March 9th to take part in Stonehill College's annual H.O.P.E. Alternative Spring Break Program.

Students who participate in the H.O.P.E. program form community with one another during the five months leading up to their trip. They learn about the culture, history and issues of social injustice in the communities they are destined to visit and serve.

The trips themselves are truly immersive experiences, challenging students to engage the four tenets of H.O.P.E.:

- Honoring our neighbor
- Organizing for justice
- Practicing peace
- Encountering God

Upon their return, students are encouraged to reflect on their experiences and to integrate the pursuit of social justice into their day-to-day lives.

New 3-Year Contract For School Superintendent

staying in one system for 12 years are rare, and the city has greatly benefited from Dr. DeCristofaro's lifetime of commitment to our community and its children."

Mahoney, in a phone interview, said she respects the work DeCristofaro has done as superintendent, but voted against the new contract in part because no negotiating team was established. A bigger issue though was the lack of a formal review of his work.

"The biggest hiccup I had was that the superintendent did not have a formal review. We asked the teachers to have a review in their contract," Mahoney said, adding that superintendents in other districts have gone through a formal review process. "I felt as though it was a missed opportunity. I don't know where else you can get a contract without a review."

McCarthy though said that School Committee members have a chance to review the superintendent's during its meetings every two weeks, if not more frequently.

"I don't think there is a formal review process," McCarthy said. "A lot of us see the results and understand Quincy schools have gotten better and better with him at the helm."

Mahoney, however, said a formal review process took place in both 2010 and 2007.

"The first time we did a review in the same year. The second time it was the same thing. There was no review this time," said Mahoney, who was first elected to the committee in 2005. She later added that the superintendent would have received good marks on a formal review, had one taken place.

DeCristofaro said Tuesday that he appreciates the School Committee's continued confidence in his leadership of the city's schools.

"I appreciate the confidence the School Committee has put in me to continue to guide and lead a great school system," he told The Sun. "This incredible school system is comprised first and foremost of wonderful Quincy students, dedicated and passionate academic classroom teachers as well as parents that are dedicated to their families and the most important value of education."

According to Deputy Supt. Kevin Mulvey, other terms in DeCristofaro's contract such as those regarding health and dental insurance will remain the same as the December 2010 contract.

"All terms and conditions of the previous contract still apply," Mulvey said.

The superintendent will receive 28 vacation days, 18 sick days, and two personal days annually. Mulvey said DeCristofaro has accrued a number of unused sick days over the years. When he retires, the superintendent is limited to cashing out 73 sick days, which is equal to 16 percent of the sick days he has accrued, per terms of the contract.

DeCristofaro will also be eligible for a pension through the Massachusetts Teacher Retirement System. That system is funded by employee contributions and the state, and is the same retirement system Quincy's teachers participate in. When DeCristofaro retires, the School Committee would be in charge of hiring his replacement.

"They would go through our HR (human resources) office and post it," the superintendent explained. "The School Committee would facilitate that search process."

DeCristofaro was named acting school superintendent on July 1, 2001, and was appointed full-time superintendent on Nov. 1 of that year. He began working for the School Department in 1974 as a fifth grade teacher at the former Pollard and Willard Schools, and rose through the ranks until he was named principal of the Snug Harbor Community School in 1987. DeCristofaro held that post until January 1993, when he was named assistant superintendent.

A 1970 graduate of Quincy High School, DeCristofaro earned a bachelors degree from North Adams State College (now the Massachusetts College of Liberal Arts) in 1974; a masters in elementary education from Boston's Suffolk University in 1976; a certificate of advanced graduate study from Boston State College (which was later incorporated into UMass Boston) in 1980; a masters in special education from Suffolk in 1983; and a doctorate of education from UMass Amherst in 1991.

The Quincy Public School system includes two high schools, five middle schools, 11 elementary schools, and an early childcare center with a total enrollment of 9,320 students, according to the state Department of Elementary and Secondary Education's website. Quincy's per capita income is approximately $32,780, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. The city is the eighth largest in the state.

In Brockton, the state's seventh largest city, Supt. Kathleen A. Smith is being paid $190,000 this year, which is her first as superintendent. The Brockton school system includes a total of 17,011 students who attend one high school, four alternative schools, six middle schools, two K-8 schools, 10 elementary schools, one adult learning center, and one early childhood center. Brockton's per capita income is approximately $17,160.

Dr. Catherine Latham is also earning $190,000 this school year as the school superintendent in Lynn, the ninth largest community in Massachusetts. She has been superintendent there since 2009. The school district in that city includes 16 elementary schools, three middle schools, three high schools, an alternative junior/senior high school, and an early childcare center. Some 14,378 students are enrolled in Lynn Public Schools. Lynn's per capita income is approximately $22,900.

In Newton, Massachusetts's 11th largest city, school Supt. Dr. David Fleishman is earning $276,000 this school year. He has been superintendent since 2010. The district includes 15 elementary schools, four middle schools, two high schools, and one alternative high school.

While Newton has approximately 7,000 fewer residents than Quincy, 12,061 students are enrolled in the city's public schools. Newton's per capita income is $45,700.

Matthew McLellan Nominated To U.S. Service Academies

Cong. Stephen F. Lynch announces he has nominated Matthew McLellan of Quincy to the United States Military Academy and the United States Naval Academy.

Matthew, the son of Scott and Mary Anne McLellan, is a senior at Quincy High School.

"Matthew was highly recommended by his teachers and coaches at Quincy High School," Lynch said. "He is a remarkable young man, and we are fortunate that young people like Matthew are willing to serve our nation."

Cong. Lynch and his Congressional Liaison to the U.S. Service Academies, Bob Fowkes, examined each candidate's record of academic, athletic, and service achievements, as well as letters of recommendation. After an extensive review process and a personal interview, Matthew was selected as someone whose scholastic record and community contributions elevated him to the top of a list of well-qualified candidates.

"There were many impressive candidates this year for the United States Military Academy and the United States Naval Academy. Matthew stood out as a young man of keen intelligence and strong character. He is a wonderful reflection of his parents, Scott and Mary Anne. The McLellan family, Quincy and the entire state should be proud of Matthew in this achievement," Lynch said.

Adams Green, LDA Update March 31

area business owners and folks to come before the committee and share anything they wish to share," Gutro said. "It will be similar to the School Committee's open forum."

Gutro said he has invited officials from the city Planning Department and the office of Mayor Thomas Koch to attend the meeting to review the Adams Green traffic work. After the public forum, Gutro plans to seek an update on the construction timeline.

"I intend to ask for an update on construction for Adams Green so business owners know what is planned," Gutro said. "Hopefully the comments in the beginning will inform the presenters for the second part of the meeting."

Also on the agenda for the March 31 meeting will be a discussion of the city's LDA with Street-Works, the developer behind the $1.6 billion Quincy Center project. Koch placed the company on notice last month after it missed key benchmarks; they have until March 21 to cure that. Gutro wants an update from the city's legal team on issues related to the LDA and Street-Works during the March 31 meeting.

The March meeting, Gutro said, is just one of several he plans to hold this spring. In future meetings, Gutro said he plans to seek updates on Quincy Mutual's vision for Merchants Row; another forum for residents and business owners to raise their questions and concerns; and an update on any city funds used to finance any aspect of downtown work to date. The latter meeting, he said, would be held in cooperation with the finance committee and Council President Joseph Finn.

"The downtown committee will have a series of meetings and hearings this spring," Gutro said. "Other downtown related topics that should be covered are plans for Merchants Row; a forum for business owners and residents to address any and all concerns they have; and, in cooperation with the finance committee and council president, a meeting on any and all funds invested in the downtown to date."

Quincy Center Station Redevelopment Added To Transportation Bill

The State Senate last Thursday passed a bill authorizing $13 billion in capital spending over the next five years, to fund improvements to the Commonwealth's transportation system, Senator John Keenan announced. Within the bond bill was an authorization of $10-million for the redevelopment of the Quincy Center "T" Station and garage.

"Redeveloping the Quincy Center T Station and garage, a critical transportation asset, has been a priority for Quincy for a number of years, especially since the State closed the garage nearly two years ago due to concerns about its structural integrity," Keenan said after the bill was passed. Another provision in the bill designates the City of Quincy as the lead planning agency for the redevelopment project.

"I am very pleased that we have taken this first step, ensuring that the State recognizes this priority as well. A renovated station, combined with a revitalized downtown area, will fuel economic development for the entire region for many years to come."

Keenan also announced that the Senate bond bill included $1.2 million for the redesign and reconstruction of the Sea Street/Quincy Shore Drive intersection, and $800,000 for road improvements and the extension of Commander Shea Boulevard for better access to Squantum Point Park.

According to Keenan, the next step in the process is for a joint committee of members of the House of Representatives and the Senate to agree on a final version of the transportation bill to be sent to the Governor. Once the Governor signs the bill, each project will still be subject to further review and approval by the Massachusetts Department of Transportation and the Governor.

"All three Quincy projects have now been prioritized by both the House and the Senate," said Keenan, "so they should be included in the final bill that will go to the Governor's desk."

Keenan cited the work of Quincy's legislative delegation, Majority Leader Ron Mariano, and Representatives Bruce Ayers and Tackey Chan, as well as efforts by the Mayor Koch, the City Council, the State Department of Transportation and the MBTA, as being critical to the three Quincy projects being included in both the House and Senate bills.

"Our work in the Senate, and the work of the Quincy delegation in the House, along with our City and State partners, has resulted in this important first step being accomplished," said Keenan. "We'll continue working to move these projects forward."

Sheriff's Summer Youth Leadership Academy

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti announces that registration for his popular summer Youth Leadership Academy will begin on March 31.

The academy, which uses an aerial ropes course as a teaching tool, is held at the Norfolk County Public Safety Complex, 2015 Washington St., Braintree, and is open to children, ages 10 to 14, who reside in Norfolk County.

Specially trained instructors lead team-building and confidence-boosting activities on and off the ropes course. Attendees learn to meet team challenges and support each other when accomplishing personal goals.

The registration process will take place online, and interested families can visit www.norfolksheriff.com at 9 p.m. on March 31 to fill out the application form. The applications are accepted on a first-come-first-serve basis. Last year, the academy's slots filled very quickly.

There is a $75-per-child fee to defray the cost of the program. The fee can be reduced to $25 for children who qualify for their school lunch assistance programs.

"Each year, the Youth Leadership Academy attracts more and more participants due to positive feedback from parents and their children." Sheriff Bellotti said. "Last year, just short of 1,000 boys and girls attended the academy and graduated with a strong set of leadership skills and great knowledge of public safety education; all while having fun learning."

This year's academy will be held in eight Monday—through-Friday sessions, beginning on June 23 and ending on Aug. 15. (The week of July 4 will be a four-day session.) Each session closes with an awards and graduation ceremony, where families can witness their child conquer the high ropes.

Parents with questions about the program can visit the academy's Facebook page, "Norfolk County Sheriff's Office Youth Leadership Academy," Sheriff Bellotti's official website, www.norfolksheriff.com, or call the Norfolk County Sheriff's Office at 781-751-3501.

"As always, we look forward to another terrific year filled with fun, educational and character-building activities for the kids to enjoy this summer." Sheriff Bellotti said.

Broad Meadows Salt Restoration Moving Forward

Path Project Expected To Begin Late Summer Or Early Fall

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Executive Director of the Park and Forestry Department Christopher Cassani predicts path restoration will begin in the late summer or early fall of this year as part of the Broad Meadows Salt Marsh Restoration Project.

*The project began Febru*ary 2010 after a construction contract was awarded to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers in November 2009 and has a projected estimated cost of $6 million; $1.5 million contributed by Quincy and the rest paid for by the Army Corps.

*Additional funds total*ing $150,000 came from the Neponset River Watershed Association; mitigation money for filling Quincy Quarry Hills with dredged materials contributed roughly $350,000 to cover costs while hotel and motel bonds added another $1 million.

The roughly 60 acres of marshland have been overrun by an invasive species of reed called Phragmites australis, prohibiting the proliferation of native wildlife.

"Phragmites are a problem down there, without a doubt. Anyone who has been down there knows that," said Cassani. To combat the problem, the Army Corps will enact a five-year herbicide treatment plan in hopes of snuffing out the overwhelming reed growth.

Additionally, dredged material resulting from the Town River Federal Navigation Project was dumped in the area in 1938 and 1956, altering the elevation of the land and disrupting the established ecosystem.

"If you go down to the site, you'll notice there's been no activity for quite some time now," he said. "The large component here is path reconstruction. The Army Corps constructed paths on site that were all but unusable for any sort of legitimate passage or recreational use. They weren't wide enough and they're not made of appropriate material…you really couldn't ride a bicycle on them, you couldn't walk on them unless they're frozen."

The plan calls for the widening of paths, allowing for two people to comfortably walk side by side, and the laying down of gravel to make the area more walkable.

Cassani said the Army Corps' efforts at placing paths throughout the site were misguided and that a more suitable trail would equal 1.5 miles in length and loop throughout the entirety of the area.

"One of the things that was really frustrating for us was that the trail came down to the southwest portion of the project…and came back the other way. It didn't make much sense."

"We had nothing to do with the placement of these paths and construction of these paths and they screwed it up frankly," he said. "They're going to come back and make this right."

He added that there are trails in the northern area of the project that don't lead anywhere and are not easily accessible.

Following completion the Army Corps will "push away from the table" and walk away from the project,

Residential Use Seen For Old Central School

meeting on the potential sale of the school March 6 inside the new Central's library.

During that meeting, City Solicitor Jim Timmins told the three-dozen residents and officials on hand that the council would be able to set a minimum price for the property before it makes the former school available for disposition. But the council is limited in regards to the conditions it could attach to any such sale.

"Generally when a property is free standing like Central Middle School is, there is not a lot of conditions that can be imposed by the council," Timmins explained. "If you're thinking you could lobby the councillors to limit or restrict what goes on at the site, they're really not in the position for that because at this point the obligation for the city to try to get the maximum return on the building they can.

"You have to keep in mind taxpayers paid for that building, for the construction of it, maintenance of it, and now we're paying for another building."

The Central site, located at 1022 Hancock St., includes 85,378 square feet of land, just under two acres. The building, which first opened in 1894 as Quincy High School before becoming a junior high school and then a middle school, includes a gross area of 84,617 square feet and a livable area of 59,490 square feet. According to city assessor's website, the property has an assessed value of $6.047 million – $5.098 million for the building, $886,700 for the land, and $62,500 for outbuildings (pavement and an underground tank).

The site has been appraised, Timmins said Monday following the meeting, and that information has been shared with members of the council. Timmins said that information could be disclosed to the public at a later date as the sale process moves forward.

The Central site is in a Residential B zoning district. At the meeting, Planning Director Dennis Harrington explained that a developer could convert the school into a 40-unit residential building by-right.

"There's a lot of wide staircases, wide hallways in this building. It's probably suitable as it's laid out in Residence B for, as-of-right, 40 units tops," he said. "Those units are going to be on the order of 800 or 900 square feet unless the hallways are changed."

Because so-called 'spot-zoning' isn't allowed, the council would only be able to rezone the site into Business C because neighboring properties on Hancock Street are all zoned as Business C. Allowed uses in a Business C district include retail operations of less than 5,000 square feet; the outdoor sale of flowers and garden supplies; restaurants, bars, and dance halls; banks; nursing homes; and TV or radio studios. Timmins, however, said at the meeting he doesn't see there being much interest in the site for Business C uses.

"The only thing would really could do is change it to a Business C zone without running into some real strong challenges. I don't know that there's going to be a high interest in allowing the types of uses that are in a Business C," Timmins said. "That's a discussion that's still to be had."

If the property is sold, a developer would have to go through the site-plan review process with the Planning Board. Conservation Commission approval would also be necessary because of the land's proximity to Butler Pond.

Mayor Thomas Koch has stated that he intends to use any proceeds from the sale of Central to pay for the acquisition of nine North Quincy residences – eight on Hunt Street and one on Newbury Avenue. Those homes would be torn down to make way for a new parking lot and retaining ponds on Teel Field, which the mayors hope to upgrade. Timmins said the city is beginning with the appraisal process for those properties.

"We're just getting started with that. We're starting with the appraisals – that's the first step," Timmins said Monday. "And we've been meeting with neighbors."

The entire project is expected to cost $12 million and is planned to take place in two phases. The first phase of the project – renovation of O'Neil Field at Atlantic Middle School – will be reviewed by the finance committee at Monday's meeting.

A $1.56 million appropriation request to pay for the first phase is currently pending in committee. Of that appropriation, $425,000 would go towards the improvement of O'Neil Field at Atlantic Middle School, $685,000 would go towards drainage repairs at Atlantic, and $450,000 would be for preliminary legal and engineering work related to the proposed improvements to North Quincy High's campus and Teel Field.

The proposed $1.56 million appropriation would be charged to the city's sewer and drain rehabilitation fund ($1.085 million) and hotel/motel tax fund ($475,000).

halfway down the page on the right hand side. Then, once the property viewer loads, select "2014 Proposed FEMA Flood Zones" from the thematic dropdown menu. You can then zoom to any property by searching for it in the search properties box. Properties highlighted in blue are in a flood zone.

Physical copies of the map, for those without Internet access, are viewable during business hours at the city engineering office, located in DPW headquarters at 55 Sea St.

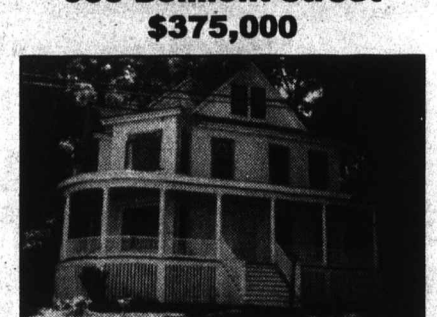

The proposed maps would add 1,400 properties to high-risk flood zones; property owners with federally insured mortgages are required to purchase flood insurance if they are in a high-risk zone. An additional 2,700 properties already in high-risk zones will be reclassified into higher risk areas, which could drive up the cost of flood insurance premiums.

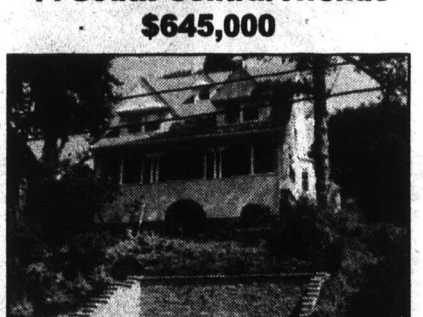

The city is working with engineering firm Woodard & Curran to appeal the proposed maps, and is in the process of submitting letters of map revision for affected neighborhoods. Individual property owners can file a letter of map appeal.

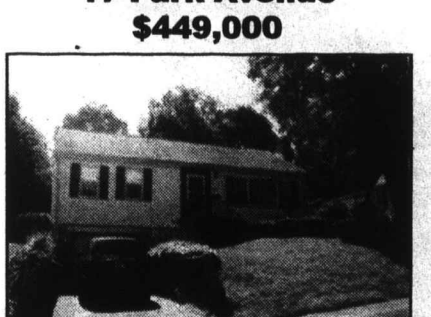

The flood zone map currently in place was adopted in 2012. It can also be found through the GIS property viewer, as can the previous flood map adopted in 2006.

Red Raiders Rewrite NQHS Hoop History

By BILL GRIFFIN

The great author Roger Kahn wrote in his iconic baseball book "The Boys of Summer" that: You glory with a team in victory, you fall in love with it in defeat.

North Quincy's basketball fans understand well Kahn's words. For three extraordinary years, North has walked with kings, shattered records, and rewrote the history of the sport at its school, a history which stretches back to the days just after World War II.

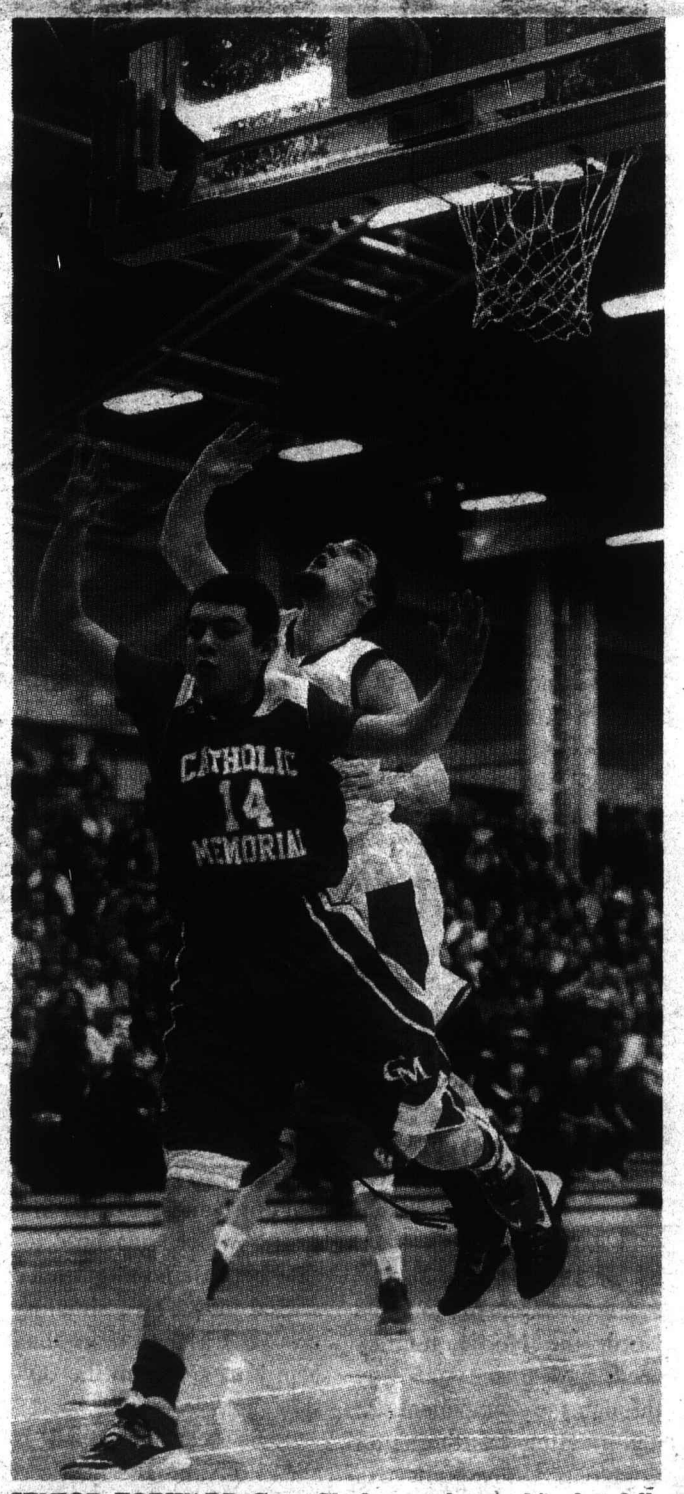

At the core of each season, each team, each game, and each play was a defense which gave nothing. It is true and noble that the best defense came not in victory, but in defeat. It came in the final game of this remarkable run, an effort when blessed with the healing of time, North will view with pride and honor.

Second-seeded Catholic Memorial, a high-scoring machine, finally shook free for a 16-3 run late in the third period and rallied past top-seeded North Quincy, 65-58 in the Division 1 South Sectional finals before another sellout crowd which shook the building with noise at UMass Boston Saturday night.

"We talked about the last three years in the locker room," said North coach Kevin Barrett. "This stings right now. We wanted to practice Sunday and keep playing in the Garden Monday. However, in a week or two when the hurt begins to fade, they will realize that they did something nobody has ever done at North. Go back to the 1940s when they started playing this game at North and you won't find anything to match the last three years."

North finished the season at 23-2. The Red Raiders went 58-11 over the past three years, the best era of basketball in the history of the school. After missing the sectional finals for 40 straight seasons, the Red Raiders made them twice in two years. Future teams will look back at this period with respect and awe, and they will use this team as a measuring stick and a source of inspiration.

Red Raiders Rewrite NQHS Hoop History

"Absolutely, this is something to build on in the future," said Barrett.

There was always the defense. Catholic Memorial entered with the most powerful offense in the state, averaging 81 points per game. They scored 106 points in a game. They were in the 90s eight times and over 100 twice. They score baskets faster than a speeding bullet. In the first period against North, the Knights scored seven points. Seven.

Flash back to the fourth period of the semifinals against Newton North when the Red Raiders gave five points. In two successive periods, one half of a basketball game, against two of the best teams in EMass, North gave 12 points. Amazing stuff.

"It was the best defense we saw this year," said CM coach Denis Tobin. "65 is the lowest total we've scored in a game, 24 is the lowest we've scored in a half, and seven is the lowest we've scored in a period. All three came against North Quincy. They are a terrific defensive club."

North went straight-up, man-to-man against the explosive Knights. Once again Anthony Green (13 points, 12 rebounds, 11 blocks, a thousand altered shots) made layups more rare than snow in July. Solomon Umoren (eight rebounds, five steals) drew sweat and work and effort from CM's gifted Guilen Smith for each of Smith's 17 points. Kyle Richardson, Jackie Chen, Efthim Butka, Matt Gerakis and Greg Clarke stepped into passing lanes, shut down penetration, ran off shooters, and hit the floor endlessly in search of 50-50 balls.

"I'm not sure you can play defense better than we did in the first half," said Barrett.

Clarke came off the bench late in the first period and broke free for three layups. Richardson (10 points, six assists) kissed home a floater and North was up, 14-7 after one. The lead stood solidly at 22-15 with 2:17 left in the second when Richardson sat with his third foul. In 14 minutes of basketball, Catholic Memorial had scored 15 points. With Richardson out, CM closed to 25-24 at the half.

"Not only do they have the rim protector," said Tobin. "They were tough against our penetration, and ran off our shooters. They also slowed us down in transition which against us is very hard to do. They got back on defense all night."

The Red Raiders never trailed until late in the third period. Their lead was 33-29 with 3:20 left in the third. However, stopping CM is like stopping the wind and the waves. They just keep coming. The Knights' 16-3 run put CM up 45-36 after three, but North never goes away quietly. Efthim Butka (game-high 19 points and six rebounds) buried a three and a medium-range jumper in an 8-0 spurt early in the fourth, and North was within 49-44 with 5:33 left.

"We never quit, but they are relentless. They are very quick and they keep coming at you," said Barrett.

With North on the threshold of a great rally, Smith made the play of the game for CM, coming out of the great unknown to block a Umoren breakaway which would have cut the lead to three. From here CM turned steals into points and knocked home the three-ball to put away the victory and its trip to the Garden.

It is only fitting to close with the story of the three seniors who guided North on its wonderful ride.

• Butka. He scored 81 points in four tournament games. Start with his free throws which beat Silver Lake, continue with his two foul shots with North down by one and six seconds left against Wareham to give North the No. 1 tourney seed; and trace your way through the tournament. 23 and riveting fourth-quarter drama in a one-point win over Newton South. 23 in the game of a lifetime against Quincy. 11 in the first half against Newton North to keep the Red Raiders in the game. That sweet jump shot against CM which gave North an early lead and had the Red Raiders within five with a chance to win deep into the fourth period.

When anyone ever talks of a list of big-game shooters, put Efthim Butka right at the top of it.

"We couldn't break away because every time we got close, Butka hit a three," said Tobin.

"As the games went on, as the level of competition got better and better, Efthim elevated his game and his shooting. That is very difficult to do," said Barrett.

• Green. He was never fond of giving layups, now anything within 10 feet is sent back. On at least half of his rejections, he not only blocked the shot, he controlled the ball and sent North away in transition. He ruled both backboards. His athleticism for a player 6'9" was stunning. On several blocks and intimidations, he jumped over falling bodies. He had two elbow jumpers rim down and out in the first period which was unfortunate because he might have settled into a nice shooting groove. CM was more than happy to give him the outside shot.

"His best basketball is ahead of him. His hustle is amazing. The sky is the limit for him as a player," said Barrett.

"We scrimmaged North early in the year and his improvement in one year was immense," added Tobin.

• Richardson. He was the heart and soul. He was the best player on the floor for 25 games. He was the emotional leader, the one indispensable player for his team from December to March, from the first jump shot taken against Brockton until the final seconds against CM. His worth may be best measured by his absence. When he sat with his third foul late in the first half, CM trimmed six points off North's lead in two minutes to draw within 25-24 at intermission. He was the one player North had to have on the floor.

"He's so tough, such a competitor. He left everything on the floor," said Barrett.

"Every time he touched the ball, every time he brought it up the floor, we ran three men at him. And he still gave us trouble," said Tobin.

When it was over and the gym had grown silent, there were smiles, handshakes and hugs for both teams as they walked out of their locker rooms. Catholic Memorial was going to the Garden. You glory with a team in victory. North had made noble its historic three years with a full measure of effort. You fall in love with a team in defeat.

Another Remarkable Season For North Quincy Boys Hoop

By BILL GRIFFIN

For the second straight year, let your mind wander 25 years into the future. You are a North Quincy fan, and your robot brings you another cup of coffee. You have a story to tell once more about a magical mystery tour you took with your basketball team.

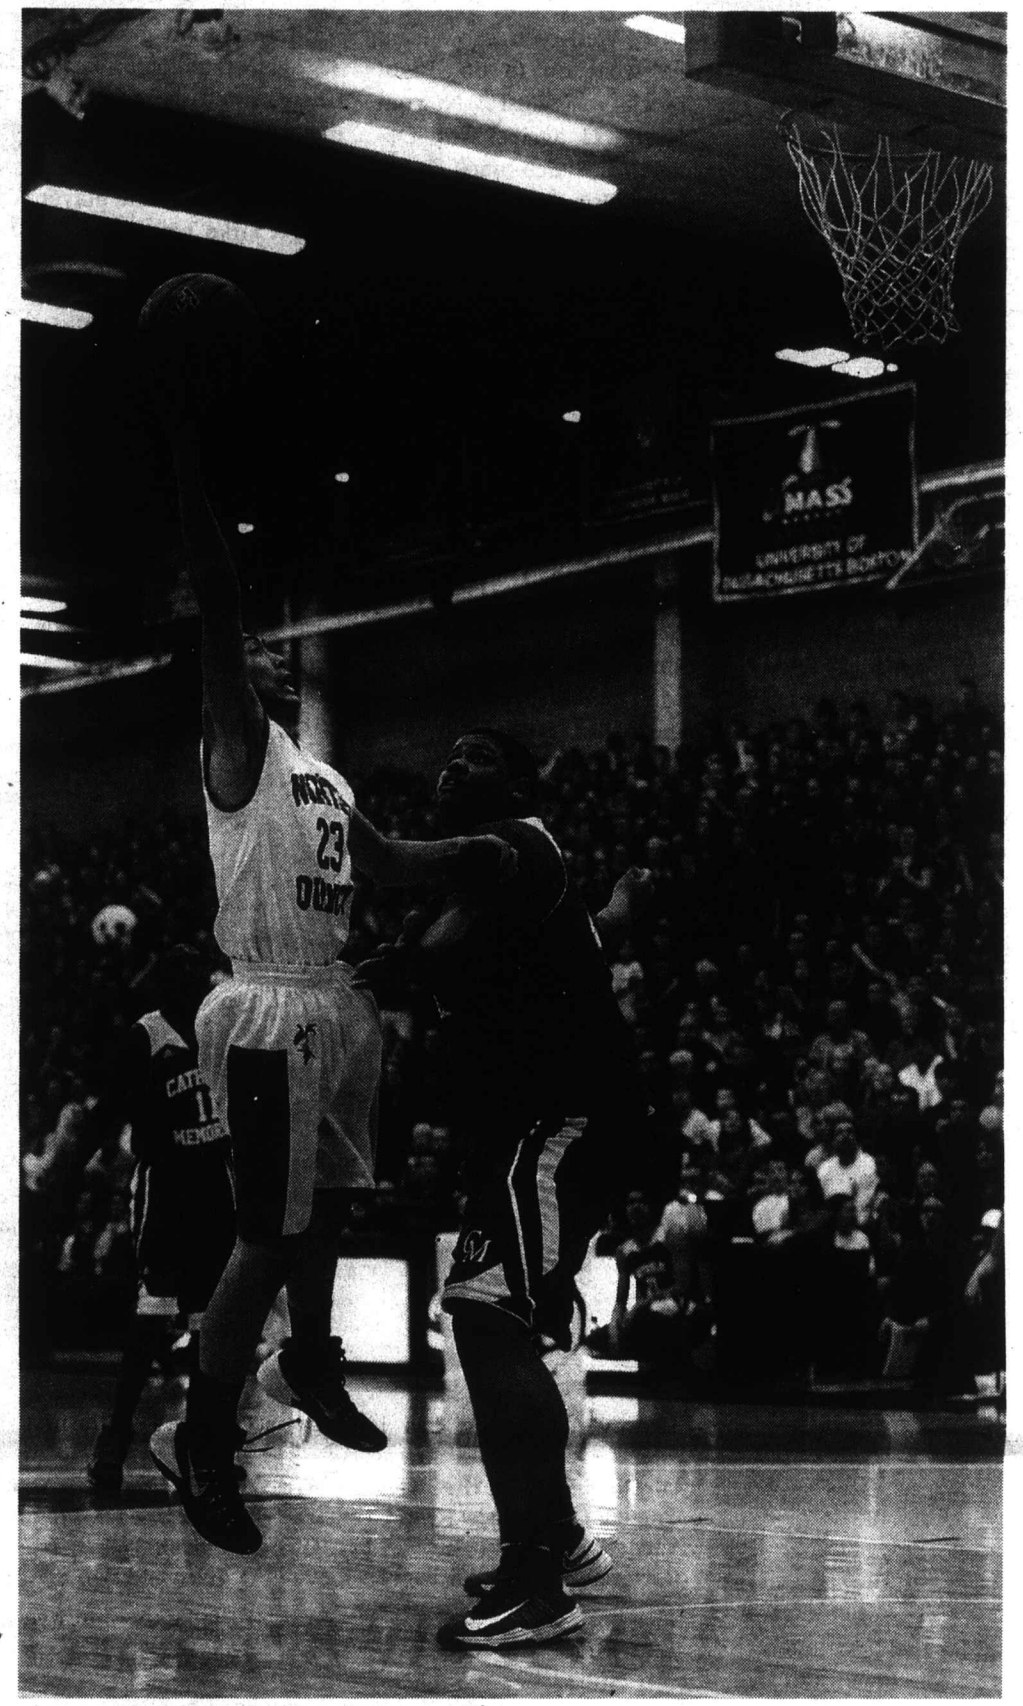

Fan: I want to tell you about the North Quincy team that made the sectional finals. Great players, better kids. Over 1,500 people showed up for a tourney game at North. They played twice before a packed house – some 3,000 fans – at UMass Boston. Unbelievable basketball. It was something I'll always remember.

Robot: Are you starting to forget things? I already heard it. Danny and Pat Gould, Marquis McClendon. Jump shots, passing defense. People out on Hunt Street for the Braintree game. Give it a rest. I've heard all the stories. Over and over again. I think I'll go play with my spaceship.

F: Wait. It's a different team. They did it again. They made the sectional finals again. Didn't make them for 40 years and then they were there two straight years.

R: Again? They lost the Goulds and McClendon. Right? No way.

F: Yep, and they might have been even better. They started by blowing out Brockton and it took off from there. They won 19 straight games, a school record. They lost by two to Quincy and finished at 20-1. Two points away from being perfect.

R: But they split with Quincy? Not good.

F: Hold on, I'm getting to that. What defense! They held teams to 45 points a game. They played the toughest schedule they could find. They beat good teams in the league by 30. They beat Braintree, Weymouth, Wareham, Brockton, Dorchester and East Boston in non-leaguers. They looked for the best teams they could find and beat them all.

R: Did anybody come close?

F: Sure. They beat Braintree by two and won in overtime at Silver Lake. And of course, the three Quincy games were great.

R: Three?

F: I was getting to that. They got another chance with Quincy. In the opening round of the tourney, they beat Newton South by one and they drew Quincy next. Destiny, or what?

R: A tournament game with Quincy? That must have been incredible.

F: More than that. It only had happened once before in 1980. There were more fans there than for the Braintree game the year before. All the seats were taken a hour before the game. They cut off sales at 1500. Great game. North led all the way. Kid named Umoren made an unbelievable three in the fourth quarter. North won by nine. They beat Quincy two of three.

R: Then, who did they play?

F: Same time, next year. They played Newton North again in the sectionals semis. Same team they played the year before. Same result. I've never seen better defense. They were down nine after three, down six with 4:00 left and never had a lead in the game until the final 14 seconds. They gave up five points in the fourth period, none in the last four minutes. They gave nothing. No good shots, not a thing. This was no cupcake. Newton North was loaded. They had a kid named Mobley who could shoot from the street. Scored over 30 in a few games. North held him to 13. Jackie Chen won the game with two free throws. Picture this. Tie game. 14 seconds left. The gym is just shaking, it's so loud. What pressure. The two shots were perfect. Just perfect. Barely touched the strings as they went through. North won by four.

R: What happened in the finals?

F: Defense, defense, defense. They played Catholic Memorial. CM was averaging 81 points a game, had broken 90 ten times, 100 twice. This is high school, not the NBA. North held them to seven in the first period. Seven. North led until late in the third, but CM had too many guns. Can't play better defense than North did.

R: Tell me about the players. No more Danny Gould swishing jump shots in big games, right?

F: Efthim Butka. Just as good. Remember when he was a junior and he had that great game against Canton in the tourney? He worked on his shot, especially the three, all summer and he was clutch. Want a list? Beat

Basketball Tournament Notebook

By BILL GRIFFIN

North Quincy was both fairly and unfairly doubted during its 23-2 season which ended with a 65-58 loss to Catholic Memorial in the Red Raiders' second straight trip to the Division 1 South Sectional finals Saturday night at UMass Boston.

At the beginning of the year, few thought North would return to the sectional finals. This was legitimate. The Red Raiders had lost Danny and Pat Gould and Marquis McClendon. A second consecutive run through the league and tourney seemed unlikely except to the players and coaches at North Quincy.

As the wins piled up and North flirted within two points of an unbeaten season, the criticism continued. It claimed the league was too weak. When North ran three wins in the tourney, their bracket was too weak. It was implied strongly that the Red Raiders were not as good as their record.

It was, of course, nonsense. North is a member of the Fisher Division of the Patriot League. That is the schedule the Red Raiders play. Teams do not draw up league schedules. It is not something they can control. As a wise man once said, all you can do is play whoever shows up.

In addition, North scheduled the toughest non-league schedule possible. The Red Raiders play Brockton, Weymouth, Braintree and Wareham every year. All are traditional tourney powers. North also went into the city to play Dorchester and East Boston. The Red Raiders did everything possible to test themselves for the tournament. What they could control, they did control by playing the toughest opposition they could find.

In the tourney, they had a favorable bracket because they earned it. They earned the No. 1 seed with a 20-1 record. They earned the top seed when Efthim Butka sank two free throws with his team down by one with six seconds left to beat Wareham in the regular-season finale.

North earned it. Mansfield and Catholic Memorial were on the same side of the bracket because North earned the No. 1 seed. This is what happens in all sports to all teams in all tournaments that have brackets. The No. 1 seed has a favorable draw.

One more thing. When North did play Catholic Memorial of the prestigious Catholic Conference, they led for the first 20 minutes of the game and played what Knights' coach Denis Tobin called "the best defense his team saw all year."

Enough said.

It was ironic that in a sport frequently dominated by height that two of the smallest players on the floor lifted North past Newton North in a 50-46 thriller in the semifinals.

Kyle Richardson (5'7) and Jackie Chen (5'9") combined for 15 of North's 18 points in the final period as the Red Raiders rallied for the win.

Chen, who had seven points and drew a big charge in the fourth period, is an interesting story. He began the season has this year's Aaron Anderson, a three-point sniper who would come off the bench bust up zones and keep the middle open for Butka, Richardson, and Anthony Green.

"All summer, every time I went by the park, I saw Jackie out there shooting jump shots," said Richardson.

Chen shot well in early games against Brockton and Weymouth, but he developed into much more than a shooter. He is quick and strong. He became an excel-

Silver Lake in OT. Two free throws with six seconds left beat Wareham to give North the No. 1 seed. 61 points in the three Quincy games, 23 in the tourney game. In two of the Quincy games, he combined for 49 points and 11 three-pointers.

He was at his best against the best. 23 against Newton South and made jumper after jumper in the fourth period when the lead went back and forth in the tourney. 11 in the first half against Newton North to keep North close or they might have been out of the game. CM couldn't stop him either. 19 more in the finals.

Terrific kid. Great student. Hit everything from drives to elbow jumpers to threes. He could rebound and played good defense. On that team, if you didn't play defense, you didn't play.

R: They didn't replace Pat Gould at the point, did they?

F: Kyle Richardson. Different type of player, but just as good. He was as strong as Pat with the ball. Nobody pressed North. Hardly anybody tried for two straight years with two different point guards. Kyle was 5'7", didn't have a jump shot, and was the best player in the Patriot League.

R: Are you making things up?.

F: He was. He was a beast on defense. Kids had to work themselves silly to bring the ball up the floor against him. Had a step-back set shot he made from three and a sweet floater. Second leading rebounder on the team at 5'7". He could penetrate and dish and whip the ball around the perimeter for the open shot. Threw fast-break passes 60 feet on a dime. Always got you the ball at your favorite spot on the floor, just where you wanted it.

Toughest, smartest kid I ever saw. Played in his own world in fourth period of close games. Two straight tourney games, he took the opposing team's best scorer and handled him in the fourth period. Chris Callahan from Quincy and Mobley. Fourth periods belonged to him. Scituate his junior year. Braintree, Quincy, and Newton North his senior year. Made the steal in the final seconds to save the one-point win over Newton South. Never enjoyed watching a player more than Kyle Richardson.

R: What about Anthony Green? He was a senior, right?

F: Well, you know what he went on to do. Eight blocks against Newton North, 11 against CM. Developed a nice touch on his jump shot. Hit seven three-pointers in league all-star game. He became a stronger, tougher rebounder and even put the ball on the floor. His dunks shook the building. Learned to block shots and control the ball a little like Bill Russell used to do.

R: Who was Bill Russell?

F: Be quiet. They had good supporting players. Solomon Umoren was a shutdown defender and Matt Gerakis was steady on the wing. Good jump shot, solid all-around game, had 32 against Scituate. Jackie Chen started the season as the three-point shooter off the bench and became a consistent all-around player. Greg Clarke was strong up front off the bench. He had three straight buckets in the finals against CM. Vinny Tran gave rebounding and defense. Andy He, Dhaaky Drake, Pat Janeiro, Tyshawn Moore and Joijuan Phoenix helped as well.

R: What about the coach?

F: Kevin Barrett. The best. He won and he won the right way. He was Division 1 Coach of the Year. for 2013. Won his 100th against Wareham. 59-11 over three years. Two points away from an undefeated season. A one-point loss to Scituate away from having the best record in the Patriot League for three straight years. Nobody knew defense better. Two out of three years, his team was No 1 seed in the sectional. His team won sportsmanship awards from the officials and league coaches. Nothing but class. It was the best of times.

R: Anything else?

F: Well, let me tell you about the 1972 team and when they....

R: I think I'm going to play with my spaceship now.

lent on-the-ball defender, a decent rebounder and a steady passer and dribbler.

"Jackie played volleyball and I think it helped him with his defense. He came back with quicker feet this year," said Richardson.

Chen, a junior, sank the two free throws against the Tigers which gave North its first lead of the game with 14 seconds left and proved to be the margin of victory. Chen was fouled after he grabbed an offensive rebound to set up the winning free throws.

Richardson is an expert at reading the bounce off the rim which is why he was the second leading rebounder on the team at 5'7". He had talked with Chen about learning the angle of the rebound.

"We talked a lot about how to read a rebound," said Richardson. "So what happens on that play? I'm in front of Jackie, I misread the rebound and it goes over my head. But there was Jackie behind me in perfect position with the perfect read to grab it. The free throws? I was confident in him. Very confident"

Richardson had eight points, two steals, an assist, and shut down Newton North's star Tommy Mobley to further add to his reputation as a fourth-quarter player. A good question is why some players flourish under pressure and other shrink from it. Many claim a player either has the clutch gene or he does not. It's a talent like quickness or coordination. Others say it is focus, the ability to keep your head when all about you are losing theirs.

"The game does seem to slow down a little for me in the fourth period. I see things more clearly. If someone doubles me or Anthony or Efthim, I just seem to know where the ball should go," said Richardson.

North Quincy Athletic Director Michael Joyce said sales to the Quincy tournament game were cut off at 1500. He also said that despite the size of the crowd and the high emotions of the night, there was not a single report of trouble. All three North vs. Quincy were played hard and clean. The behavior of the fans in all three was exemplary. This is a tribute to the players, coaches, fans, teachers, and staff at both schools...

This was a year of history repeating itself. North Quincy and Newton North met in the semifinals for the second straight year. Catholic Memorial ousted the Red Raiders this year just as CM did to the great 1972 North team...

Many observers of the four tourney games came away impressed with North junior Solomon Umoren. He's already a terrific defensive player and rebounder. He can penetrate. If he works on his jumper and improves his finish at the rim, he could be a special player...He only played two tourney games, but nobody this reporter saw in the tourney was better than Quincy's Chris Callahan... It was hard not to notice the large contingent from the Quincy High hoop team at both games at UMass Boston. Perhaps the Presidents are thinking about what could happen next year.

QYH PW B2 Effort Falls Short

Spectators at the aging Zapustas Arena in Randolph were treated to an epic PW B2 hockey battle between the Walpole Express and QYH PW B2 in South Shore Conference hockey action this past Sunday evening.

Falling behind 2-0 after the first period and once again facing a very physical and much bigger team, the QYH lads stormed back in the second period. Blocking several shots and leading several breakouts, Defenseman John Bell and Neasa O'Donnell were instrumental in sparking the QYH comeback.

In the third period, both opposing goalies kept fans on the edge of their seats, and QYH Tahla Qasim repeatedly denied several Walpole chances. Amidst multiple scrums around the Walpole crease, both QYH forwards Eoin Varden and Nick Brink just missed on QYH scoring bids.

As the game approached the final minutes, the Express were able to convert on a loose puck in the QYH crease for the for the hard fought 3-2 victory.

QYH hopes to rebound in its final regular season game against Norwood next Saturday 6:30 p.m. at Asiaf Arena in Brocton.

Chiropractor

JOINT EFFORT

Even though exercise may be the last thing arthritis sufferers want to think about, research shows that one of the better ways to relieve joint pain is to engage in regular activity. With this in mind, anyone afflicted with arthritis is strongly encouraged to plan on getting at least two-and-a-half hours of moderate-intensity aerobic exercise as well as perform muscle-strengthening exercises twice weekly. Last, but far from least, flexibility exercises should be included (such as stretching, modified yoga, or tai chi) for up to 15 minutes daily. If limited mobility or reduced strength stands in the way of following these recommendations, the chiropractor can help put arthritis sufferers on the right track by increasing joint flexibility and range of motion.

One of the most valuable resources you have in managing your arthritis pain is your doctor. He or she can help find the right medication for you and also recommend the additional treatments such as visiting your chiropractor. There are some ways you can work with us to make the most out of your visit and treatment plan. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we urge everyone to have regular spinal checkups to prevent the spine from establishing any abnormal conditions. Please call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we promote disease prevention through proper diet, exercise, and lifestyle. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health!. If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Those who suffer with osteoarthritis should enlist the help of the chiropractor in getting their joints to flex through a complete range of motion.

Adriana Moosick Taking Aim At N.E. Free Throw Title

By JOE REARDON

Adriana Moosick has been in a free throw zone since November and that could very well spell trouble for the rest of New England.

The pretty 9-year-old blond will be representing Massachusetts at the Elks National Hoop Shoot New England Championships March 21 and 22 in Portland, ME. And if her competitors think the pressure will get to the Bernazzani Elementary School fourth grader, they're sorely mistaken.

Adriana has torn through the various competitions on the way to New England's. After capturing the local championships she went on to win the city title and districts at the Marshfield Boys and Girls Club. Four-foot-four Adriana was just as tough from the line at the states in Maynard where she calmly dropped in an impressive 16-of-25 shots to punch her ticket to the New England championships.

The contest at all levels consists of shooting 25 free throws and breaking ties with 5 shot tie breakers. There are six divisions of play in the event age 8/9, 10/11 and 12/13 for both boys and girls. Over 1.5 million boys and girls participate in this free program each year in all 50 states.

A win in Portland would make Adriana the first Quincy resident to qualify for the nationals since Erin Croke, who is now a second-grade teacher at the Atherton Houghton Elementary School. The nationals are slated for April 12 at the Basketball Hall of Fame in Springfield, MA.

Much like her basketball idol, Michael Jordan, Adriana, who has been playing since the age of 5, doesn't let nerves get the better of her when she stands behind the charity stripe. "I'd take shots to warm up," she said. "I just tell myself to stay calm. I practice two times a week at my house or the Atlantic Middle School. I spin the ball and dribble once before I shoot. Then I do it all over again. I don't get really nervous."

Basketball is just one of the sports Adriana is involved in. She's played little league baseball for the last three years and plans to switch over to softball this spring and continue pitching, catching and playing second base. During the winter she's a consistent double-digit scorer for her team, The Quincy Sun, in the city's youth basketball league and she also plays for Quincy Point Congregation in the South Shore Church League.

"She's very modest," said Adriana's mother Valerie. "Basketball has opened up a door for her. She's passionate about it and very focused.'

Probably the most impressive aspect of her game is her ferocious outside shooting. As tough as she is from the free throw line, Adriana is also extremely consistent from 3-point land where she puts down long-distant bombs with amazing consistency.

Basketball is just one of the sports Adriana partakes in. Her summers are filled with lazy days swimming, playing touch football with her brother Nicholas and his friends and kayaking, a sport she picked up last summer and enjoys immensely.

Adriana kayaks with her dad, Mark, starting at the Mount Street Beach and traveling as far as Wessagusset Beach in Weymouth and beyond to Hingham.

Recreation Director Barry J. Welch said the Quincy Lodge of Elks has sponsored boys and girls in the hoop shoot for over 30 years in cooperation with the Recreation Department. The Elks pick up the costs of trophies and award jackets locally and will pick up the cost for Adriana and her family to travel and stay in Portland. Should she advance to the Nationals those costs would be covered as well.

"The children of Quincy have benefitted by the generous investment the Quincy Lodge provides to our community year in and year out in both time and funding. We once again extend heartfelt thanks to local hoop shoot lodge director Ed Miller and Jim Quigg the Exalted Ruler of Lodge 943 as well full lodge membership. This is the experience of a lifetime for the participants and their families." Welch said.

Pat Foley: Marathon Monday Will Be A Great Day For Boston

By JOE REARDON

The stage is set for a dramatic Patriots' Day for Quincy's Pat Foley and he fully believes it will be a great day for all of Boston.

Foley was running a strong race and was less than a half mile from the finish and pushing hard at last year's Boston Marathon when two homemade terrorist bombs exploded on Boylston St., and the race was shut down so first responders and other emergency personnel could get to those injured in the blast.

Initially Foley heard there was a manhole explosion, but when he learned that it was the work of terrorists, a sinking feeling overtook him, leaving a pit in his stomach. He immediately thought of his relatives, who were awaiting his arrival in the bleachers at the finish line. Thankfully, none of them were injured in the blast, but they did see much of the gruesome aftermath.

"The worst part was my nieces saw so many injured people – people who had lost limbs," said Foley.

Foley has a number for this year's Hopkinton-to-Boston classic and is hoping to finally get the 4-hour monkey off his back. More importantly though, he has a goal of raising $25,000 for the Fisher House after raising $134,000 over the five previous years for military personnel.

The Fisher House is a non-profit organization, located on the grounds of the VA Hospital in West Roxbury that is devoted in providing a wide array of services for veterans and their families.

The Fisher House's mission statement reads: "To ease the burden of our veterans and their families during difficult times. To serve those who have served. Fisher House Boston's mission is to be responsive to the needs of our guests and go above and beyond what the VA can provide. We strive to meet the basic comfort needs of our guests, as well as enhance the healing and supportive environment of the house, during some of the most difficult times in our guests' lives."

Foley has been a huge proponent of the veterans over the years. "They helped us for years, now it's our turn to help them," he said. "The unfortunate reality is that far too many of our troops are coming home in need of services that are not being provided. The Fisher House strives to provide programs and services to help address the specific needs of these veterans. Even more laudable is the fact that the services and programs run by the Fisher House extends to also include the families of veterans. This is critical because many of the stressors facing veterans and their families upon their return are interconnected. The Fisher House recognizes that through helping all parties involved they can ensure that stressors and problems are alleviated in order to improve the quality of life for everyone now and in the future."

Foley was on pace to run around 4:05 in last year's race and had just made the turn onto Hereford St., when the race was shut down. He's been bucking the cold and snow and logging 35-40 mile weeks to prepare for the April 21 race.

"The training has been going really good," said Foley. "I don't train on the course because there are plenty of hills around here. It would be great breaking four hours this year. To be able to accomplish that this year would be the ultimate. I can't wait for next month."

Foley fully expects Marathon Monday to be a benchmark day in the city's history – Boston Strong at its very best.

"I think it's going to be one of the best days in the city ever. So many people are running this year. There are so many positives things that came out of such a negative."

The outpouring of good will especially moved Foley in the aftermath of the bombings. Foley spoke of a family on Gloucester St., who invited him into its house after the course was closed off and gave him soup while his cell phone was charging.

"People reached out and wanted to help," said Foley. "As far as I'm concerned the terrorists lost because people are coming back to run and many people are running for the first time. They're doing everything the terrorists are against – they're helping their fellow man."

Olympians Take Part In Fitter, Faster Swim Clinics

The Lincoln-Hancock Pool in Quincy recently hosted two Fitter and Faster swim clinics featuring two U.S. Oympians.

The Essentials Clinic taught swimmers aged 11-and-under the important fundamentals in the pool and also tips to mentally and physically prepare for practice and race day.

The Performance Clinic designed for swimmers aged 12 and older who compete at the championship level built on existing skills by fine-tuning the key components of fast swimming.

Tim Mulvihill, director of Competitive Swimming for the South Shore YMCAs - Quincy and Hanover branches - and Bob McGillicuddy, head coach for Quincy and North Quincy High School Swimming and Diving programs, are committed to fostering a partnership between Quincy Public Schools and the YMCA. This is the second time Lincoln Hancock pool in Quincy has provided a venue for local swim clubs to host a Fitter and Faster Swim Tour Clinic.

"The Fitter and Faster Swim Tour is a tremendous opportunity for New England swimmers to meet and greet the best swimmers on the USA Olympic Swim Team. I was amazed by the dedicated swim families that traveled great distances to meet the Olympians.... families came from Ogunquit, ME; Palmer, MA; Providence, R.I.; and New Hampshire," McGillicuddy said.

Both clinics were led by U.S. Olympians Jimmy Feigen and Lauren Perdue. Feigen, fresh off a silver medal in the 100-meter freestyle at the 2013 World Championships, had already earned a silver medal for the 4x100 meter freestyle relay at the 2012 Olympics adding to his impressive resume as a three-time NCAA Champion and 24-time All-American.

Perdue won gold in the women's 4x200 meter relay at the 2012 Olympics; she was also a 2011 NCAA silver medalist.

Armagan Sezer Completes Research Project Abroad

Armagan Sezer of Quincy, a junior majoring in biotechnical engineering at Worcester Polytechnic Institute (WPI), recently completed an intense, hands-on research project in Venice.

The project was titled Demographics & Tourism: Stores, Accommodations and Plateatici.

At WPI, all undergraduates are required to complete a research-driven, professional-level project that applies science and technology to addresses an important societal need or issue. About two-thirds of students complete a project at one of the university's 35 off-campus project centers, which are located around the world.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Sunday, March 2, 2014, at approximately 3:45 p.m., Community Police Officers Sean Glennon and Dave Coletti responded to a Beach Street address to serve an arrest warrant (Larceny over $250) on a male tenant.

A citizen called the Police stating that the suspect was on the front porch and would run upon seeing the Officers. The Officers split up with Officer Coletti covering the rear as Officer Glennon approached the front. As soon as the suspect saw Officer Glennon, he ran inside the house, slamming the door. Seconds later, the suspect came out the cellar door, where Officer Coletti apprehended him.

After talking to other residents, Officer Glennon learned that the suspect's girlfriend was squatting (living illegally in a residence) in the basement of an apartment building somewhere on Kemper Street. At 4:25 p.m., Communications dispatched Officer Glennon and Officer Mark Smith to a Kemper Street address because a caller said, "There are sketchy people in the basement." The Officers responded to the address and met with the caller, who directed them to the basement.

Officer Matt Miller and Sergeant James McNeil assisted as the Officers opened the basement door which led to a common storage area. The Officers could hear a male and female voice coming from a dark area in the basement, so they cautiously and quietly approached the suspects.

LT. DAN MINTON

After illuminating the area where the suspects were, the Officers found a male suspect lying on a mattress and a female suspect standing near him. The Officers ordered the male to show his hands and after numerous commands, he eventually complied.

Officer Glennon obtained the names of both suspects and confirmed that the female had a warrant. She also gave her address as Beach Street, where Officer Glennon made a warrant arrest earlier. She was placed under arrest and the male suspect was handcuffed pending further investigation.

On the mattress and floor, the Officers located several syringes. One syringe had heroin in it. The male suspect was known to all the Officers there as a heroin addict with a lengthy criminal history.

There were numerous bags of male and female clothing along with hundreds of needles. Some had fluids in them.

An inspection of the cellar also showed that numerous locks were torn from individual storage units owned by residents of the building. The female suspect, a 24 year old homeless resident, but living at the Beach Street address and the Kemper Street address, and the male, a 47 year old Quincy resident, were both arrested and charged with "Breaking and Entering into a Building with the Intent to Commit a Felony." Nice Work!

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You'll want to discourage well-meaning but potentially ill-advised interference in what you intend to accomplish. Your work has a better chance to succeed if it reflects you.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) The Bovine's well-deserved reputation for loyalty could be tested if you learn that it might be misplaced. But don't rely on rumors. Check the stories out before you decided to act.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) You've been going on adrenaline for a long time, and this unexpected lull in a recent spate of excitement could be just what you need to restore your energy levels. Enjoy it.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Friends can be counted on to help you deal with a perplexing personal situation. But remember to keep your circle of advisers limited only to those you're sure you can trust.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Security-loving Lions do not appreciate uncertainty in any form. But sometimes changing situations can reveal hidden stresses in time to repair a relationship before it's too late.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a good time for single Virgos to make a love connection. Be careful not to be too judgmental about your new "prospect" -- at least until you know more about her or him.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your sense of justice helps you resolve a problem that might have been unfairly attributed to the wrong person. Spend the weekend doing some long-neglected chores.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might feel justified in your anger toward someone you suspect betrayed your trust. But it could help if you take the time to check if your suspicions have substance.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Ignore distractions if you hope to accomplish your goal by the deadline you agreed to. Keep the finish line in sight, and you should be able to cross it with time to spare.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your creative self continues to dominate through much of the week. Also, despite a few problems that have cropped up, that recent romantic connection seems to be thriving.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) As curious as you might be, it's best to avoid trying to learn a colleague's secret. That sort of knowledge could drag you into a difficult workplace situation at some point down the line.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Instead of spending too much time floundering around wondering if you can meet your deadline, you need to spend more time actually working toward reaching it.
BORN THIS WEEK: You have a natural gift for attracting new friends, who are drawn to your unabashed love of what life should be all about.

Purim Events At Beth Shalom Of The Blue Hills

The festive Jewish holiday of Purim will be celebrated at Congregation Beth Shalom of the Blue Hills (formerly Temple Shalom of Milton and Temple Beth El of Quincy) this year with two special events in mid-March.

On Saturday, March 15th, at 7:15 p.m. the congregation will enjoy some Persian desserts and have a brief Havdalah service, before participating in the traditionally raucous Purim service and Megillah reading.

The service will be led by Rabbi Fred Benjamin in the Great Hall of the First Congregational Church, 495 Canton Ave., Milton, followed by a Passover wine tasting.

The public is invited and costumes are encouraged.

On Sunday morning, March 16, the Rabbi Weistrop Religious School will sponsor its Annual Purim Carnival and activities from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at Temple Beth El, 1001 Hancock St. in Quincy.

Mask decorating and the retelling of the Purim story will precede the Carnival, which will feature games, booths, prizes, raffles, food and fun for all ages, and prizes for costumes.

It is open to the entire community with free admission, and tickets for food and booths will be available for purchase.

For further information about Purim or other temple activities, call 617-698-3394, email: office@TempleShalomOnline.org, or visit www.BethShalomBlueHills.org.

Christian Science Service

First Church of Christ, Scientist, Quincy, will hold worship services this Sunday at 10:30 a.m. at their new temporary location at 1460 Hancock St.

Cara Cusack-Theodule and David Godfrey will be conducting the service as First and Second Readers.

The title of the sermon will be "Substance."

Sunday School is also available for young people up to age 20.

Religion

Union Congregational

The annual Celtic Worship Service and Irish Tea will be held Sunday at 10 a.m. during the regular Worship Service at Union Congregational Church, 136 Rawson Rd. in Wollaston

The public is invited to attend the event. For further information, call the Church Office at 617-479-6661.

First Church Of Squantum

In celebration of its 100 years of service to the Squantum and Quincy communities, First Church of Squantum will host a Roaring Twenties Party Saturday, March 29th starting at 7 p.m.

Fellowship Hall, connected to the Church, will be transported in time and decorated like a Speakeasy complete with live Roaring Twenties music. Admission is $25; Twenties Attire or Business Casual Attire greatly encouraged.

Food and soft drinks will be complementary, but you may bring your own alcoholic beverage if you like.

First Church is located at 164 Bellevue Road in Squantum. More information is available at www.firstchurchsquantum.org

Bethany Church

Bethany Congregational Church, Quincy Center will have Sunday Worship Service and Sunday School at 10 a.m.

The Rev. William C. Harding will conduct the service and preach a sermon entitled "Be Alert: Pay Attention!" Fellowship with light refreshments will follow the worship service.

All are welcome to attend Bethany Church Worship Services and its group activities. Bethany has a Youth Group, a Men's Group, an Outreach Mission Group doing various charity works and a Friday morning Bible Study Class.

Childcare will be available for infants and toddlers during worship service on Sundays. The church is wheelchair accessible.

Guest Preacher Sunday At Quincy Point Congregational

John Robie will be the guest preacher Sunday, March 16th at the 10 a.m. worship service at Quincy Point Congregational Church, 444 Washington St.

The church sanctuary is handicap accessible from the Abbey Road side of the building.

Fellowship hour will follow the service in the social hall. Light refreshments and coffee will be served.

The Lenten Mission for the church is collecting socks, showers shoes (flip-flops or slides) and travel size toiletries for Father Bill's. The collection box will be in the Social Hall on Sundays and can also be dropped in the office weekdays from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. The final day for donations will be on Easter Sunday.

Save the date and bring your hats to a High Tea and Spring Concert Sunday, March 23 at 4 p.m. in the QPCC Social Hall. The high tea will have a Downton Abbey Flair, complete with scones, savories and sweets.

Cost is $15 per person and all proceeds with go to the Elevator/Access Fund. For tickets call the church office at 617-773-6424.

Houghs Neck Congregational

The Second Sunday in Lent service will be at 10 a.m. at the Houghs Neck Congregational Church, 310 Manet Ave.

Pastor Felix Carrion will lead the service and preach the sermon "Reunited."

Helen Miller and Robert Gordon will serve for the Diaconate. Minister of Music, Steve Reed, will lead the choir and play the organ and piano.

Sunday School starts after the Children's Message. The nursery opens then also.

Light refreshments will be served in the Coffee Room after the service.

On Tuesday, March 18 the MOTHERS Club meets at 7 p.m. in Fellowship Hall. The program is a presentation by the Quincy Police Department on RAD, defense tactics for women.

Laurence E. Babb, Jr.

A funeral for Laurence Eugene Babb, Jr., of Norwood and formerly Quincy was held Tuesday at Hamel, Wickens & Troupe Funeral Home, 26 Adams St., Quincy.

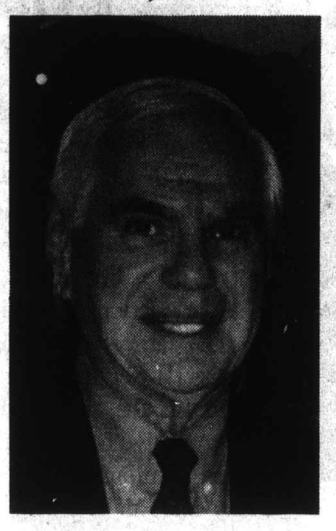

Mr. Babb died Feb. 5 at his home.

He was born in Dorchester in 1935 to Laurence Babb and Josephine Iannello. He attended Boston English High School before graduating from Thayer Academy in Braintree in 1953. While attending Dean College he began working for the publicity departments of MGM, Columbia Pictures and United Artists, and later as a social features writer in New York for Dell Publications, Modern Screen and Screen Stories Magazine. He created and produced two syndicated radio programs, "Better Than Broadway" (hosted by the once iconic Hugo's Lighthouse restaurant in Cohasset) and "Biographies In Music," and later went on to produce and host several television specials on both coasts.

He was politically active, working with individuals from both parties including President John Kennedy, Vice President Richard Nixon, and Sens. Barry Goldwater and George Murphy. He and Sen. Murphy went form partnership, working with some of the entertainment industry's biggest stars, including Lucille Ball, Bob Hope, and Gene Kelly. On the local level, he helped start the Lou Gehrig baseball league, coached Pop Warner football and worked on 'Casino Night' legislation that has been a financial lifeline for countless non-profit organizations.

In the 70s, Mr. Babb began his career as an independent filmmaker, working with stars like Faye Dunaway, Steve McQueen, Sidney Poitier, E.G. Marshall and many others. His feature film, "Night School," starring Rachel Ward, won the AVORIAZ Film Festival Gold Award. Mr. Babb went on to establish the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Film and Television Bureau, and at the request of Gov. Michael Dukakis served as its first director.

Working with his sons, he began a quest to promote healthy life choices and educate children to the dangers of substance abuse, and in the 80s, they filmed and produced behind-the-scenes sports video yearbooks for elite collegiate and professional teams, including Boston College, the Universities of Texas and Southern California and the Boston Celtics and Bruins.

In the 90s and into the 00s, Mr. Babb worked with his brother Charlie to create a unique product ideation, development and marketing consulting firm, working with multi-national corporations like Coca-Cola, Home Depot and Westin Hotels. In retirement, he continued to share his creative skills, helping to promote the non-profit Disabled American Veterans and serving on the board of directors of the Neighborhood Club in Quincy.

Mr. Babb loved Native American culture, travelling the American southwest, reading, watching movies, going for drives, photography and telling stories. He was an entrepreneur and idealist, seeing opportunities where others only saw barriers, but his legacy is that of a decent and compassionate man who truly enjoyed the company of friends and strangers alike, always willing to share his broad smile and his immutable sense of humor. For his family, he will be remembered above all else as the patriarch who loved us all, completely and with a never-ending devotion that his sons promise will be passed from generation to generation.

Beloved husband of 55 years of Darlene Houston Babb. Loving father of Lee and Stuart and their wives, Aileen and Trish. Cherished grandfather of Luke, Grace, Kyle, and Lilly. Dear brother of the late Charles.

Interment was at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Memorial donations may be made to the Disabled American Veterans, State House room 546, Boston, MA 02203.

Rita M. Hoyt, 75

RITA M. HOYT

A funeral Mass for Rita Marie (Barry) Hoyt, 75, of Rockland and formerly Quincy was celebrated yesterday (Wednesday) at Holy Family Church, Rockland.

Mrs. Hoyt died March 4 surrounded by her loving family.

She was born in Quincy in 1938 to Thomas F. and Eleanor F. (Kaes) Barry. Mrs. Hoyt graduated from Quincy High School in 1956. Notable for her trademark smiley face signature, she was a warm, caring and giving person.

A Rockland resident for 52 years, she enjoyed everything Irish, the color orange, reading, playing cards, trips to Foxwoods, bad sci-fi and horror movies, and gabbing with friends. Mostly, however, Mrs. Hoyt's passion was her family and spending time with those she loved.

Beloved wife of 36 years of George H. Hoyt of Rockland. Cherished mother of Dianne Stewart and her husband Scott of Taunton, Deborah Hodgdon and her husband Scott of NH, the late Michael Todd formerly of Quincy, the late twins, Robert Todd and Robin Todd formerly of Quincy, Stephen Todd and his wife Linda of North Andover, and Kelley Doucette and her husband Tim of NH. Dear sister of the late Thomas F. Barry and his wife Joan of Whitman, Robert Barry and his wife Fran of FL, Eleanor Nardone and her husband Tom of Plymouth, and Barbara Barry of Middleboro. Beloved "Mama" to 14 grandchildren, two great-grandchildren and "Auntie" to many nieces and nephews.

1st Anniversary

March 13, 2013-March 13, 2014

Each morning when we awake
We know that you are gone
And no one knows the heartache
As we try to carry on.
Our hearts still ache with sadness
And many tears still flow.
What it meant to lose you,
No one will ever know.
Our thoughts are always with you
Your place no one can fill
In life we loved you dearly,
In death we love you still.
There will always be a heartache,
And often a silent tear,
But always a precious memory
Of the days when you were here.
We hold you close within our hearts,
And there you will remain,
To walk with us throughout our lives
Until we meet again.

Preparing For Retirement

By KRISTEN ALBERINO

Social Security Public Affairs Specialist

The Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race, held each March in Alaska, is one of the harshest, most challenging races known to man (or dog). Mushers embark on a race from Anchorage to Nome that takes between nine and 15 days. Contestants bear sub-zero temperatures with gale-force winds that can cause wind chills as low as negative 100 degrees Fahrenheit! It takes endurance, preparation, and careful planning to make it from start to finish.

The same can be said for your race toward retirement and Social Security. No one would hit the trail without being ready for the challenges. Similarly, no worker today should be navigating toward retirement without a little bit of preparing, planning, and stick-to-itiveness.

Choosing your steps is as important as selecting the right sled dogs. Your first step in planning for a comfortable retirement is to look at your Social Security Statement, which you can do online easily with a my Social Security account. The online Statement is easy to use and provides estimates you should consider in planning for your retirement. It provides estimates for disability and survivors benefits, making the Statement an important financial planning tool. Your Statement allows you to review and ensure your earnings are accurately posted to your Social Security record. This feature is important because Social Security benefits are based on average earnings over your lifetime. If the information is incorrect, or you have earnings missing from your record, you may not receive all of the benefits to which you are entitled in the future. Visit www.socialsecurity.gov/myaccount to set up a my Social Security account and get started.

Before heading into the snowy terrain, you want to make sure you have prepared for a number of different possible obstacles on the trail. For retirement planning, you'll want to test out the Retirement Estimator to see how changes in your income, retirement age, and other variables may change your overall plan. Use our Retirement Estimator, where you can get a personalized, instant estimate of your future retirement benefits using different retirement ages and scenarios. Visit the Retirement Estimator at www.socialsecurity.gov/estimator.

Out in the cold, you'll be thankful for the provisions you've brought along. In retirement, you'll understand why it was so important for you to save early on. The sooner you begin your financial planning, the better off you will be. Social Security replaces about 40 percent of the average worker's pre-retirement earnings, but most financial advisors say that you will need 70 percent or more of pre-retirement earnings to live comfortably. You also will need other savings, investments, pensions or retirement accounts to make sure you have financial security to live comfortably when you retire. Visit the Ballpark Estimator for tips to help you save. You'll find it at www.choosetosave.org/ballpark.

Use our online library of publications as your trail map or guidebook to help you when it comes to planning for retirement. Check out When To Start Receiving Retirement Benefits. It and many other useful publications can be found at www.socialsecurity.gov/pubs.

As you mush, mush, mush toward retirement, remember that it's not about the destination, but all about the journey. Spending a little time to prepare along the way will make all the difference when you cross the finish line into retirement.

DeMolay Devotional Day Observances Sunday

The First Baptist Church of Wollaston will host DeMolay Devotional Day Observances Sunday, March 16 at the 10:30 a.m. service.

Joining First Baptist will be members of Old Colony Chapter of DeMolay Chapter (which has been meeting at First Baptist Church since a fire gutted the Quincy Masonic Building last September) and South Shore Chapter of DeMolay in Weymouth.

Members of DeMolay will assist in the worship service. Guest preacher will be the Rev. John R. Odams, an advisor to Old Colony Chapter and the pastor of Pilgrim Church in Dorchester.

Overuse Injuries In Youth Sports

By ERIC EDELMAN

Slushy snow and bitter cold may tell another story, and March 20th may seem a season away; but spring is ever so stealthily making its way to the South Shore.

In less than a month, kids of all ages will be suiting up for spring training. I can almost hear the crack of a bat and the hollow pop of a soccer ball. Participation in organized sports is growing in numbers, with more than 35 million players each year. And with good reason; playing a sport not only helps develop muscle, but it shapes other skills as well.

Experiencing a personal best or coming together with others as a team can be a memorable life lesson, and parents are becoming more and more supportive as children and teens clamor to take their place on a team. It is a great way for kids to spend time with friends having fun, and it also sets them up to a lifelong habit of exercise.

Today's young athletes, even as young as 8 or 10, are focused and many compete on an expert skill level. In many cases, a young athlete may devote him or herself to one sport and train year round. While it is great to reach for the stars and commit to excellence on the soccer field, the baseball field, or whatever sport they may choose; overuse injuries become a risk when training at this level.

As a physical therapist, I treat a growing number of kids for trauma to bone, muscle, and tendons. According to Safe Kids USA, overuse injuries account for nearly half of all middle school and high school injuries. Many of these injuries can be prevented by proper training; as well as paying attention to warm-ups, cool-downs, nutrition and hydration.

Children and teens are more vulnerable than adults to overuse injuries because they grow so rapidly. Muscle, bone, and tendon growth takes place in fits and starts in a young body—and many times that uneven growth can create an imbalance. Training intensely for a singular sport engages the same muscle group and year-round training can short-change rest and recovery time. Overuse injuries such as soft tissue strains and sprains, shin splints, shoulder, elbow, hip and thigh injuries, and ACL and Achilles tendon are common under these circumstances. Although these injuries are treatable and can have a fast recovery time, they can cause discomfort and result in time spent on the bench.

How to Tell if Your Child has an Overuse Injury

To help keep your kid in the game and reduce risk of injury, it pays to be aware of the potential so that you can recognize it when you see it. Sometimes, we have to look for indicators of injury because children can't always communicate feelings of pain or fatigue when they feel it, and they may be under pressure to compete.

Telltale signs of overtraining:

- Child shows less interest in practice.
- Pain that increases with the activity.
- Swelling.
- Change of technique.

Treatment

Physical therapy for an overuse injury centers on healing the pain at the specific site and then working to correct the imbalance within the body. Inflammation and swelling are addressed first to relieve pain and increase mobility. At Peak we use a combination of electrical stimulation, cold laser therapy, ultrasound, massage, and hot/cold therapy. The therapist will then work to stretch and mobilize joints, tendons, and muscle to increase range of motion and flexibility. Once pain and swelling has been reduced and mobility has been restored, the patient is ready to train the muscle(s) for strength, coordination and power. The good news is that after going through physical therapy for an injury, many young athletes actually get back in the game stronger and with an enhanced skills set.

PREVENTION

Cross Training

The best way to protect your child from the risk of overuse injuries is to encourage cross-training. A strong core is the base of strength in the human body, and not all exercise and sports activities engage the core. Pilates-based exercise and the use of certain specialized equipment i.e. the Bosu ball, medicine balls, and Swiss balls can be used to address core weakness.

Nutrition and Hydration

Nutrition and hydration are also key elements in keeping your child safe from injury. Our bodies are 2/3 water, so it is important to replace fluids during activity. Even mild dehydration can physically or mentally affect a young athlete, increasing risk of injury. It is also important for your child or teen to keep up with his or her growing body with proper nutrition, especially before practice and on game day. Lack of nutrients can lead to fatigue, elevating the risk of injury during play.

Warm up and cool down

Make sure your son or daughter is participating in proper warm-up exercises before a work out. These exercises make the tissue warm and flexible; reducing the chance of injury. Cool downs are equally important—vigorous exercise can cause dizziness, so your youngster needs to walk it off to ensure safety.

Spring training will be here soon. Having a child participate in organized sports can be exciting and fun for the whole family. By following a few guidelines; such as ensuring proper training and conditioning, paying attention to nutrition and hydration, and teaching your child the importance of warm-ups and cool-downs, you can protect your child from many common injuries.

Eric Edelman is a Physical Therapist and the owner of Peak Physical Therapy in Quincy.

Hunt Wins Nomination In 13th Suffolk Seat Race

By SCOTT JACKSON

Boston attorney Daniel J. Hunt won the March 4 Democratic primary to fill the seat in the state House of Representatives left vacant following the resignation of Martin J. Walsh and is all but certain to win next month's special election, as he has no opponent.

DANIEL HUNT

Hunt, a former State House aide and Department of Conservation and Recreation staffer, easily won the nomination taking 2,337 of the 4,702 votes cast in Boston and Quincy. Community activist John L. O'Toole of Boston's Savin Hill neighborhood finished a distant second with 1,082 total votes. Liam Curran finished in third with 892 votes, Paul L. McCann, Jr., garnered 233 votes, and Gene I. Gorman was last in the five-candidate field with 141 votes. There were 12 write-ins cast.

The 13th Suffolk District encompasses several neighborhoods in Boston's Dorchester section – including Savin Hill and Neponset – as well as Ward 3, Precinct 3 in North Quincy. All the candidates in Democratic primary were Boston residents.

A total of 142 votes were cast for the Democratic primary in Quincy. The results in that precinct mirrored the overall results; Hunt collected 88 votes followed by O'Toole with 30, Curran with 12, Gorman and four, and McCann with three. There are a total of 1,676 registered voters in the precinct, including 631 Democrats, 158 Republicans, and 878 unenrolled. Democrats and unenrolled voters were eligible to vote in the Democratic primary.

There were no Republicans on the ballot in Tuesday's election. In Boston, 165 write-in ballots were cast for the GOP nomination. Three write-ins were cast in Quincy – one for Hunt and two for John Adams – as well as two blank ballots.

The special election for the 13th Suffolk seat will be held April 1. The seat will be up for election again in November.

The seat was left vacant when Walsh resigned earlier this year after being elected Boston's mayor last November. Walsh, a Democrat, had held that seat since winning a special election in 1997.

Quincy City Clerk Joseph Shea said the primary and next month's special election would cost the city approximately $24,000 combined. The state pays for the printing of ballots, and Shea is hopeful the state will also pay the tab for other expenses such as police details, election workers, and advertisements because it is a special election.

Broad Meadows Salt Restoration Moving Forward

leaving Quincy to complete land improvements.

Entrances will be placed by the Broad Meadows Middle School and the neighboring skating rink. All walkable and recreation areas will be located at least 200 feet from people's homes, ensuring privacy is maintained.

The site's southwest corner grade will be raised 4 feet with on-site dredged material according to Cassani. "The goal there would be to raise the level to such a height so that you could see over existing vegetation and get those beautiful views of the marshland that will be created once we are completed with that portion of the project."

Constructing two wooden bridges—one being 50 feet and the other 600 feet long—is a possibility once more funds become available. "It will give the park, once completed, a wow factor that it really doesn't have at this current time," he said.

Currently, ground pH is too low to sustain plant growth. An ideal pH will be reached using chemicals, and the DPW's leaf collection program will contribute compost to cover the dredged material already on-site, creating a more park-like feel.

Working with the Army Corps hasn't turned out to be a completely fruitless endeavor. "This work, if not done by the city of Quincy [and the Army Corps] would cost at least double we're thinking so it's a really good bang for the buck," said Cassani.

On Dec. 21, 2011 the marsh was flooded by tidal water; an event that hadn't occurred since it was buried under dredged material for over 80 years. It was a sign that the land was slowly being restored to its previous, healthy state.

Ward 1 City Councillor Margaret Laforest inquired about the possibility of kiosks and benches being placed throughout the area.

"At the lower southwest portion, the idea of putting in a pavilion of some sort is there; there's no funding in place right now to accomplish that. I think that this site could certainly use multiple ones…certainly two of them or three of them," he said.

Cassani hopes to mimic the aesthetic of Pope John Paul II Park located in Dorchester.

"I'm happy to see that the city is actually actively involved in this phase where the Army Corps has taken a little bit of a bad rap," said Robert Ross, who lives in the area. "The city wasn't involved in the previous phase and I think the Army Corps would have welcomed that involvement."

"I must applaud everything that's gone on so far," said neighborhood resident Paul Kodad, who went on to ask if the city was planning on restoring adjacent land.

Laforest said it was a worthy endeavor but that there were no plans in place today nor was there funding available for such an undertaking. She also said she hopes to have the marsh opened to the public by 2015.

Council Approves Three Square Dedications

By SCOTT JACKSON

Three intersections will be dedicated to Quincy residents killed during the Vietnam War during ceremonies next month.

During its most recent meeting, the City Council approved dedicating the intersection of Billings Road and Calumet Street to L/CPL Martin Keefe, U.S. Marine Corps; the intersection of Ellis and Robertson Streets to PFC James P. Hickey, USMC; and the intersection of Vassall Street and Rawson Road to CPL Lawrence E. Sirois, USMC.

The intersections will be dedicated on April 24. The dedication at the intersection of Ellis and Robertson Streets will take place at 11 a.m., followed by a dedication at 11:45 a.m. at the intersection of Vassall Street and Rawson Road in Wollaston, and the dedication at Billings Road and Calumet Street at 12:30 p.m.

The dedications are being organized by Lawrence Norton, president of the Vietnam Combat Veterans Combined Armed Forces Quincy Chapter; Veterans Services Director Tom Stansbury; Quincy Veterans' Council Commander Charles L. Hurd; and Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes, who chairs the council's veterans committee.

Flood Abatements Vote 'Misleading'

Solicitor Defends Mayor's Handling Of Proposed Flood Maps

By SCOTT JACKSON

City Solicitor Jim Timmins on Monday night criticized Councillor Doug Gutro's critique of the mayor's handling of a proposed FEMA flood map during a remonstrance two weeks ago, saying a vote on abatements that night was 'misleading' and 'concerning.'

Two weeks ago, Gutro criticized Mayor Thomas Koch for not appealing the proposed FEMA flood map last summer. At that meeting, Gutro made a motion asking the council's finance committee to discuss with the city assessor the viability of giving abatements to property owners affected by the new map. That motion passed in a 7-0 vote.

At Monday's meeting, Timmins responded to Gutro's remonstrance. He said the vote on abatements was misleading to the public and concerning, noting that abatements are a state issue, not a local one, and can't be given based on flood insurance concerns.

"The particular vote on the abatements was terribly misleading to the public and very, very concerning," Timmons said, later adding, "We cannot abate based on flood insurance issues. If flood insurance issues are going to impact property values it's not going to happen until Jan. 1, 2015, which means Fiscal Year 2016 a property owner could file for an abatement locally but then they'd have to show that somehow the flood insurance change impacted their value.

"They'd have to go out and get appraisals. They'd have to bring someone in. It's an adversarial proceeding at that point."

Timmins also said a more productive path the council

Bond Firm Upgrades City Credit Rating

Wall Street has upgraded the City's credit rating by three full grades in its latest report detailing the City's financial stability and future outlook, Mayor Thomas Koch announced Tuesday.

According to a statement released by the mayor's office, Standard & Poors, one of two major bond rating firms, upgraded the City's credit to AA+ from A+, just one step below the highest rating possible. The rating improves the City's rating by three grades with the agency highlighting the City's "strong management, strong budgetary flexibility and strong budget performance," among a series of factors.

"We have been working incredibly hard to earn an improved rating over the last several years by stabilizing the City's finances, eliminating structural deficits, and making sound, conservative investments based on real revenue," said Mayor Koch.

The report highlighted the City's improved reserves, conservative budget practices and the Koch administration's creation of a nearly $20 million pool of potential property tax increases that have been left uncollected, called excess levy capacity.

Nicole Crispo Confirmed As Assistant City Clerk

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council confirmed the appointment of Nicole Crispo as assistant city clerk in a unanimous vote Monday night.

A 42-year-old lifelong Quincy resident, Crispo started in the Election Department in 1999 as a clerk typist after working in the telephone office at Quincy Hospital. She has worked her way up the ranks of the Election Department and in 2008 was promoted to administrative assistant, making her the top official in the election office.

On March 3, following the retirement of the previous assistant city clerk, Maureen Hallsen, City Clerk Joseph Shea named Crispo acting assistant city clerk. Prior to Monday's vote, Crispo said she has enjoyed her first two weeks in her new role.

NICOLE CRISPO, a lifelong Quincy resident who began working in Quincy's Election Department 15 years ago, is the city's new assistant city clerk. She succeeds Maureen Hallsen who retired earlier this year. Quincy Sun Photo/Robert Bosworth

"It's good," she said. "Everyone's been very helpful."

Hallsen, Crispo added, volunteered her assistance when needed. Crispo said she hoped to follow the example her predecessor set.

"She's been great," Crispo said of Hallsen. "She said she's only up the street and I could call her at any time. I've seen the way she works and I know how hard she's worked."

In her new position, Crispo will be working closely with Shea – himself a former assistant city clerk – and with Jeanne Reardon, the council's clerk of committee. Crispo said both have helped her transition into her new position.

"He's been great," she said of Shea. "Him and the girls in the council office – Jeanne – she's been great. The transition I think is going well."

At Monday's meeting, Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest nominated Crispo for the full-time position. She praised Crispo for her work assisting members of the council as head of the Election Department.

"It's my honor to nominate Nikki Crispo to the position of assistant city clerk. Mr. Clerk I think she is a terrific nominee. She's been great to work with," Laforest said. "I'm pleased to see her being given this leadership position here this evening. Many of us deal with her, whether it's election days, our campaign finance reports, any of the records. She is always there for us and I appreciate working with her."

Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes seconded the nomination, saying it was a pleasure to recognize Crispo's work in the Election Department.

"It's always a pleasure to recognize the achievements of a competent, pleasant, and knowledgeable woman and to promote women to positions of authority is important to, I'm sure, Councillor Laforest and myself and to all the members of the body," Hughes said. "Nikki was the first person that steered me through the waters in the election office and helped me out when I first ran for City Council. For that, I was forever grateful. She answers every question, gets back in a prompt manner, with always the right answers."

Wall Street Bond Firm Upgrades City Credit Rating

S & P also noted that the City debt position was strong, noting that its Fiscal Year 2012 total debt service was about 4.3 percent of all City's expenditures. That is among the lowest debt ratios of any community in Massachusetts. That number is expected to stay well below the state average of 8 percent even as the City moves forward with a number of major capital projects, many of which are funded through revenue sources outside of the City's general property tax revenue.

"Our stable outlook reflects our view of the City's stable economy and good management," the report stated.

Cinder McNerney, the City's independent bond advisor from First Southwest, added that the rating was a strong indicator of the City's financial position.

"S&P sees the strength of the City's tax base, its economy and its socio economics as very strong, and a big driver of the increased rating. That along with good management and good reserves, and low debt, all factored into the new AA+ rating," she said.

In recent years, the Koch administration has more than doubled its stabilization and dramatically increased its annual snow and ice removal budget, which was underfunded for many years and created yearly deficits. The administration also created a new "Inclement Weather Fund" to plan for unforeseen natural events like flooding and is setting aside money every year for projected cost increases for the health care of the City's retirees.

Raymondi: 'I Take Full Responsibility'

By SCOTT JACKSON

Public Works Commissioner Dan Raymondi took full responsibility at Monday night's City Council meeting for the burning of dozens of boxes containing old public records in recent weeks before receiving permission from the state to do so.

In all, the Department of Public Works burned 49 boxes containing records dating back as far as 1985. The department didn't receive permission to destroy the documents from the secretary of the commonwealth's office until March 12 – two days after the last of the 49 boxes were burned. As of Tuesday, the state's environmental agency is investigating how the documents were disposed of. At the meeting Monday night, Raymondi apologized to the council for what happened.

"I take full responsibility. I'm serious about that – I'm not one to shirk from the responsibility," Raymondi said. "The mayor put me in charge of this department. I love this job, I love this city, and I felt badly that I did not serve him better. I felt badly I did not serve you folks, your constituents, and my constituents better. These things happen. It was not intentional. We will learn from it and move forward. Corrective action will occur."

Raymondi also said the department will continue to dispose of old documents, though they will now work with City Clerk Joseph Shea and will stop burning the records. The DPW's basement, he explained, is full of old records, which creates a fire hazard and takes up needed space.

"This was and is and remains to be an important initiative by the Department of Public Works," Raymondi said. "The importance of the project is there. It's a fire hazard. It's useable space that is much needed by the department and it's just loaded with unnecessary

Arthur Keough Honored For Community Service

By SCOTT JACKSON

Arthur Keough, a longtime community activist, received a commendation Monday night from the City Council recognize his extensive work in the community.

Keough worked from 1967 to 2000 at Quincy College, including time as a professor, dean of the faculty, and dean of liberal arts. He also helped found Impact Quincy in 1990; co-founded the Committee for Immigrants and Refuges with the Rev. Dr. Adolph Wismar; assists with food drives at the Germantown Neighborhood Center; served as president of Quincy Afterschool Care board for 12 years; and helped organize Kids Vote.

"His experience and his gifts to the community really span across a wide demographic," said Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, who presented the commendation to Keough.

"When I first came into Quincy, I came as the director of Father Bill's Place," added Council President Joseph Finn. "One of the first persons who showed up at my door to welcome me, to advise me, to help me adjust to this setting – [Keough] was the first person to who came in there."

Keough thanked the council for the commendation, and recognized the many fellow volunteers he worked with over the years.

FANCY THAT!

If you have not yet familiarized yourself with fancy colored diamonds, you should know that some of them rank among the most valuable gemstones ever known. In fact, some vivid colored diamonds have been known to sell for more than $1 million per carat. The latest of these to come to the public's attention is the largest vivid orange diamond ever sold at auction. This beauty sold for $35 million ($2.4 million per carat), which, at the time, was a world record price for any colored diamond sold at auction. In November 2013, the huge 59.6-carat "Pink Star," a flawless pink diamond, sold for $83.02 million, which is now the world's record price for any gemstone sold at auction.

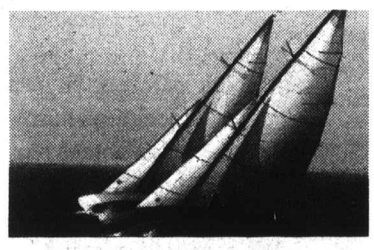

The best way to learn more about natural color diamonds is to see them in person. This way you can learn the unique characteristics and subtle differences of each stone and ultimately choose the diamond fits your taste and budget. Come into our store located at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center where you will find an amazing selection of unique diamond jewelry. Contact us at 617-773-3636 and get ready to do some shopping!

THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

• On March 31, 1776, future first lady Abigail Adams writes to her husband urging him to "remember the ladies" when drafting a new code of laws for the fledgling nation. Abigail pondered if and how the rights of women would be addressed in an American constitution.

• On April 4, 1841, only 31 days after assuming office, William Henry Harrison, the ninth president of the United States, dies at the White House. At his inauguration, Harrison declined to wear a jacket or hat and made a two-hour speech. Soon afterward, he developed pneumonia.

• On April 5, 1859, naturalist Charles Darwin sends his publishers the first three chapters of "Origin of Species," which will become one of the most influential books ever published. Knowing the fates of scientists who had published radical theories and been ostracized or worse, Darwin had held off publishing his theory of natural selection for years.

• On April 1, 1924, Adolf Hitler is sentenced for his role in the Beer Hall Putsch of Nov. 8, 1923. He had been charged with high treason. Despite his conviction, he was out of jail before the end of the year, with his political position stronger than ever.

• On April 3, 1936, Richard Bruno Hauptmann, convicted in the kidnapping and murder of the 20-month-old son of famed aviator Charles Lindbergh, is executed by electrocution. In 1932, Charles Jr. was kidnapped from the nursery of the Lindbergh home.

• On April 2, 1979, the world's first anthrax epidemic begins in Ekaterinburg, Russia (now Sverdlosk). Thirteen years later the epidemic was finally explained: Workers at a weapons plant had failed to replace a filter, causing a release of anthrax spores into the outside air.

• On April 6, 1950, a train plunges off a bridge into a rain-swollen river in Tangua, Brazil, killing 110 people. Days of torrential rains had undermined the bridge's foundation, but there was no warning system to stop the train. The locomotive and five cars fell into the river. The remaining 17 cars somehow stayed on the tracks.

Taking Some Hits For A Good Cause

Three current events – the stalled downtown project, medical marijuana and document burning by the DPW – were strung out like Piñatas at the city's St. Patrick's Day Luncheon last Friday at the Tirrell Room (Lodge of Elks.)

Speakers – from the mayor and ward councillors to the city clerk and county sheriff - whacked those headlines over and over again. While some were direct hits, others were just glancing blows at the event that always entertains and raises money for a good cause.

This was the first year the luncheon was sponsored by the Quincy Parks Conservancy, a foundation established by Mayor Thomas Koch to promote and preserve the city's green spaces. The mayor opened his remarks with a thank you to the Quincy Partnership – the event's longtime sponsor. The Partnership – group of civic leaders that helped raise money for such projects as the Adams Statues in Quincy Center, exterior lighting at historic sites and new Welcome to Quincy signs scattered throughout the city – dissolved last fall.

A portion of this year's proceeds will be used to help establish a walking trail in Faxon Park. Related story on Page 15.

Dave Murphy, president of the Quincy Parks Conservancy, got the affair off to a quick start.

He credited Tom Koch as the one person who has done more for the city's parks than any other individual.

"In fact, the mayor created a new park where buildings used to stand in Quincy Center," Murphy mused, alluding Block Four near 1400 Hancock Street – the site of the planned Merchants Row that now sits idle.

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall also took a crack at the underdeveloped property. Croall, who is engaged to be married later this year, suggested the site to his fiancee' as a setting for an engagement photo.

"I said 'why don't we put on hard hats and take a photo at the Quincy Center crater?'"

Croall also found humor in the DPW record burning incident earlier in the week.

"What the press didn't report was that after she saw the smoke, (Ward 1 Councillor) Margaret Laforest bought a 12-pack of Bud Light and took it to the DPW. She thought the fire was a Quincy High School reunion."

The document burning incident was too tempting for even Mayor Thomas Koch. He took a jab at DPW Commissioner Dan Raymondi whom he appointed to the post in the summer of 2013. The hiring was among the issues of that fall's spirited mayoral contest.

"I took a lot of crap when I appointed Dan Raymondi as the DPW commissioner," Koch said with Raymondi seated a few feet away smiling. "You were right. I got burned," the mayor said to a chorus of laughs.

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti – the star attraction year in and year out – did not disappoint. On the issue of medical marijuana, he noted several interesting brands of pot are being produced in Quincy. A dispensary is slated to open in West Quincy later this year.

"The Street Works brand – They sell you a pound and you get half a joint."

"The Mike Bellotti brand. "You make it and then you forget how to get to Dedham (site of the Norfolk County House of Corrections."

Bellotti took a shot at former Congressman and Dist. Atty. Bill Delahunt who recently received approval to open three medical marijuana dispensaries in the state.

"Bill Delahunt wiped out many drug dealers on the South Shore and I truly believed he was doing it all for the right reasons . . . Now I realize he was just wiping out the competition."

Bellotti also poked fun at StreetWorks, the city's erstwhile developer of the first parcel in the ambitious $1.6 billion redevelopment of Quincy Center. He noted StreetWorks took out a full page advertisement in another newspaper thanking the mayor for his leadership on the project.

"You (StreetWorks) said you're at a crossroads with the Downtown Project. Don't you mean dead end? No wonder you had a hard time with the concept.

"Thank you for not fleeing to Greece without a word like the last guy," Bellotti continued, alluding to Sotirios Emmanuel who promised to revitalize the Fore River Shipyard only to skip town without landing a contract.

"We are looking forward to Dan Quirk buying the downtown at a fire sale and parking cars there. . . . You say that you look forward in possibly playing a part in any future opportunities downtown.

"Can't we just be friends?" Bellotti cracked.

Bellotti borrowed the "Thank You" note bit from Late Night Host Jimmy Fallon. As light music played in the background, the sheriff pretended to write other notes,including to two Democratic candidates for governor this year:

SHERIFF MICHEAL BELLOTTI holds a prop at the St. Patrick's Day Luncheon: a bag of spices intended to be pot. Lisa Aimola Photo

• "Thank you, (state Attorney General) Martha Coakley for having the courage to indict half of Quincy and the competence to convict no one."

• "Thank you, (state Treasurer) Steve Grossman, for giving all of us the hope that we too may be Governor someday. But be careful, Martha may indict you like she did Timmy (Cahill). Bad news: she won't be around to lose the case."

• "Thank you, (Ward 4) Councillor Brian Palmucci for making all finally miss (former councillors) Jay Davis and Mike D'Amico. If only Tom Fabrizio had returned a few phone calls . . . he'd still be here."

City Clerk Joseph Shea reprised his "Great Sheazak" routine. With Council on Aging Director Tom Clasby as his straight man, he got some laughs spoofing Johnny Carson's "Carnac the Magnificent."

• The three answers: The Chicago Fire, The Coconut Grove and Dan Raymondi's incineration of city records. The question: "Name the three biggest fires in the last century.

• Sen. Ed Markey, Santa Claus and Rep. Bruce Ayers. "Name three people who use present the most."

• Sec. of State Bill Galvin, City Clerk Joe Shea and DPW Commissioner Dan Raymondi. "Two keepers of the records, one destroyer of the records."

• (New Assistant City Clerk) Nicole Crispo, singer Miley Cyrus and Mayoral Spokesperson Chris Walker. "Clerking, twerking and seldom working."

Other one-liners and zingers at the luncheon:

Ward 1 Councillor Brian Palmucci raised two oversized photos: one of former Ward 1 Councillor and current Plymouth County Commissioner Greg Hanley and the other of embattled Toronto Mayor Rob Ford.

"Thank you for coming, Mr. Mayor," Palmucci said glancing towards Hanley. "Seriously, have you ever seen Have you ever seen the two of them in the same room?"

Koch noted that the surname Coakley is Gaelic for blind warrior. "That explains some of her campaigns and her conviction rate," the mayor said.

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest said residents don't need a map to determine if they are located in a flood zone.

"If you have clam beds growing in your vegetable garden, you are in a flood zone.

"If you gave a campaign contribution to Mayor Koch, you are definitely NOT in a flood zone," she said.

Dr. Edward Fitzgerald was honored at the "Irishman of the Year" at the luncheon.

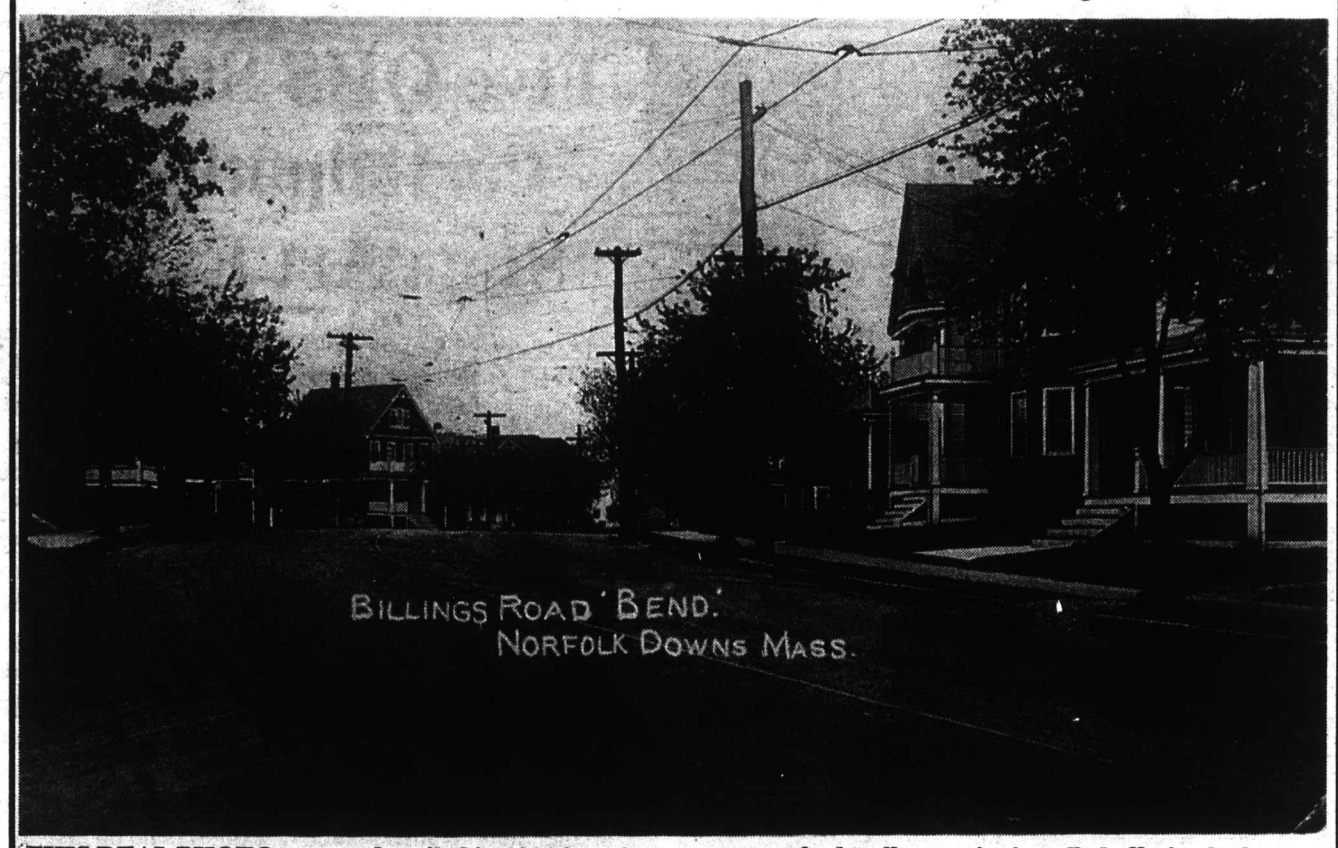

"Ed Fitzgerald is so helpful in so many ways. Anytime there is a question about Quincy history, the first phone call is to Ed Fitzgerald," the mayor said before presenting him with a plaque and a shillelagh.

Among the guests attending the function were several candidates for state-wide office this year. Offering remarks were Joe Avellone, Democratic candidate for governor; Warren Tolman, Democratic candidate for Attorney General, Steve Kerrigan, Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor, Karen Polito, Republican Candidate for Lieutenant Governor; and Deb Goldberg, Democratic candidate for state treasurer.

Koch introduced Kerrigan and also announced his endorsement of the former Lancaster selectman's bid for lieutenant governor. Kerrigan also served as an aide for the late U.S. Sen. Ted Kennedy.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS REAL PHOTO postcard mailed in 1921 is a view of Billings Road at what was called the "Bend" in Norfolk Downs. Billings Road starts at the railroad tracks in Norfolk Downs and heads straight to the northeast, at Gordon Street it begins to bend to the right, avoiding the ancient slate quarries, and then at Apthrop Street it heads straight to the southeast to its end at West Elm Avenue. That is probably why this section of the road was called "The Bend." This was farmland until 1892 when it was subdivided into house lots. The land development company had trolley service installed offering lot buyers discounted fares. The trolleys ran through plots of grass down the center of the road; the trracks are visible in the right foreground. Calumet Street is on the right just beyond the second utility pole. The slate quarries which were still open at the time were behind the houses on the immediate left. The corner of Apthorp Street is just beyond the car parked on the left in front of what was then Edith Donahue's grocery store. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Quincy's Desirability Destined To Grow Further

I'll admit to being a bit surprised at some of the letters that have been written over the past few weeks in response to the news that Street-Works will likely be relinquishing its role as development partner for Quincy Center.

While I certainly share others' concern that, in the wake of the uncertainty surrounding Street-Work's exit, the Koch administration should focus its efforts on clearly communicating its revised vision for the project, I can't understand how anyone who has been paying attention can say with a straight face that Quincy is in a worse position than it would've been in had it never entered into the land-disposition agreement with Street-Works.

Of course, with hindsight being 20/20, it might have been better if Street-Works' role had been limited to designing the master plan (leaving the role of lead developer to someone else), but, unfortunately, Quincy had to play the cards that were dealt, and Street-Works was the only private entity willing to invest millions of dollars on the idea (a novel one at that time) that Quincy was a city brimming with potential. Now that the Street-Works chapter of the redevelopment is coming to an end, some are sounding the alarm that all the efforts expended by Quincy have been for naught.

In the humble opinion of this author, nothing could be further from the truth. Volunteering my time over the past five years as a member of Quincy's Planning Board, I've noticed a substantial amount of projects, both residential and retail, that never would've been undertaken had private developers not concluded that Quincy's commitment to redeveloping its downtown is but a harbinger of a city ready to take control of its future.

It appears word is officially out that the City of Presidents is more than just the final resting place for two of our country's Founding Fathers, especially now that people are focusing on the fact that Quincy truly is a geographical goldmine, what with its proximity to Boston, 20-some-odd miles of ocean frontage and adjacency to the Blue Hills reservation. Couple those physical attributes with a mayor like Koch, who clearly cares about progress more than politics, and it starts to make sense why Quincy is being viewed as the "next big thing" in regard to its potential for redevelopment.

And make no mistake, this realization isn't limited to just our surrounding communities, as evidenced most recently by Quincy being named the #2 "most exciting suburb in America" by a national real estate blog (ahead of such distinguished locales as Berkeley, CA and Miami Beach, FL). Recognitions such as that are proof-positive that word of Quincy's renaissance has gone viral, and I know that such buzz isn't lost on those businesses looking for a suburb close to Boston, in which they can not only achieve lower costs, but can also aggressively recruit employees who demand an area with a high quality of life.

In fact, Quincy's desirability seems destined to only grow further, now that more and more young professionals, who just a few years ago would've only considered living in Cambridge, Somerville, Charlestown or South Boston, are deciding that Quincy gives them much more bang for their buck. In one of the all-time great movies about taking control of one's destiny, the Shawshank Redemption, Andy told Red that "It comes down to a simple choice: get busy living or get busy dying."

Over the past six years, Quincy has obviously been focused on following the former over the latter, and I, for one, am excited to see what's going to happen next.

Revaluation, Master Plan, Trash Major Issues

The City Council has a number of major issues to deal with over the next few months. Among them:

Revaluation – Several orders are now pending in the council's finance committee, including: an appropriation order of $70,000 to hire an outside firm to start work on the revaluation of all real and personal property in the city. A second order would put this issue on the November ballot. A third would require the council to take a position on the issue.

Master Plan – Within a month, members of the city council should receive copies of the city's Master Plan and zoning studies.

Rubbish Disposal – Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa is considering that the city take and prepare an incinerator site in the Cashman's Quarry area of West Quincy.

COUNCIL TABLES CONFLICT OF INTEREST ISSUE

The City Council ordinance committee tabled action on a proposal to classify members of the unpaid city boards as "special employees" under the conflict of interest law. The proposal was made by Ward 6 Councillor Richard W. Barry. At present, all city employees, including unpaid ones, are classified "regular" employees, prohibiting them from doing any business with the city. As "special" employees, unpaid board members would be restricted from doing business with the city only in areas over which they have jurisdiction.

MARSHLAND REZONING DRAWS OPPOSING VIEWS

Conservation of marshlands or retention of a valuable industrial site were the alternatives placed before the planning board as it considered a proposed zoning change for the Montclair marshes. Ten people spoke in favor of the proposal while 17 recorded their opposition. The Planning Board took the matter under advisement.

Arc Of The South Shore To Honor Norman Racicot, Fallon Ambulance Service

The Arc of the South Shore will honor Norman Racicot and Fallon Ambulance Service at its second annual Person of the Year Gala Thursday, May 8 at Lombardo's, 6 Billings St., Randolph.

The Racicot family and Fallon Ambulance Service are being honored for their long-standing generous spirit and consistent support.

The event will help raise critical funds to ensure that individuals with intellectural and developmental disabilities have the services and support needed to grow, develop and live within their communities.

The Racicot family utilized the support of the Arc's Early Intervention Program and also served on the Early Intervention Parent Advisory Committee. Norm Racicot has sat on the Arc Board of Directors for more than 12 years and is currently serving as the president.

In addition to chairing the annual Louis Baily Golf Tournament, Norm has been instrumental in growing the Annual Dinner Dance from 200 to more than 500 attendees. Additionally, Fallon Ambulance Service not only supplies First Aid and CPR training to Arc employees, but also employs four individuals and a job coach, through the Arc's employment program, where they help maintain one of the ambulance bays in Weymouth.

The gala on May 8 features a cocktail reception and silent auction beginning at 7 p.m. following by a program, dinner and entertainment at 8 p.m.

Beer, Wine Tasting March 28 To Benefit Quincy Animal Shelter

The Quincy Animal Shelter, Inc. will hold its eigth annual Beer & Wine Tasting fundraiser Friday, March 28, from 6 to 10 p.m. at the Quincy Historical Society, 8 Adams St. in Quincy.

This annual event offers the sampling some fine beverages paired with various cheeses, chocolates, and hors d'oeuvres sponsored by Commercial Construction Consulting, Inc.

"This is one of our most popular events." says QAS Event Coordinator Bre Harris. "We are going to have great raffle prizes and many silent auctions. Some items include a 12 bottle fully stocked wine fridge, Bruins' playoff tickets, autographed football, puck and baseball, Red Sox tickets, a beautiful scarf from Hermes and much more. This is a wonderful girl's night out, or great date night."

Shelter Director Kit Burke said all proceeds will be used for the care of shelter cats and dogs, including the cost of food, medications, medical examinations and training. Burke pointed out, with the influx of kittens and stray dogs, the spring is challenging time for the shelter, every dollar that comes in is needed.

Those interested in attending can purchase virtual tickets from the QAS website www.QuincyAnimalShelter.org for $50 each, at the shelter during adoption hours on Tuesdays and Thursdays 6 to 8 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. located at 56 Broad St. Quincy or for $60 at the door.

Mushroom & Broccoli Casserole

Whenever I am asked to bring something when I am invited to dinner, I try to bring something a little different.

And so it was last weekend when we were all going to be part of a buffet brunch. Today's recipe is for a casserole, which got raves. It took a while to prepare it, but it was worth it in the end.

MUSHROOM & BROCCOLI CASSEROLE

1 package broccoli florets
1 pound fresh mushrooms (cut)
1 medium onion (sliced)
¼ cup white wine
2 cups ricotta cheese
½ pound elbows (or small shells)
1 cup sour cream
2 eggs
2 tablespoons fresh parsley (chopped)
½ cup shredded cheddar cheese..
Olive oil and butter for sautéing
Seasoned breadcrumbs for topping

In the hot oil and butter, sauté the broccoli, onion and mushrooms and wine until veggies are tender. Set aside. Mix the ricotta cheese, sour cream, eggs, parsley, and add it to the broccoli mix. Add the pasta and blend well.

In a slightly greased casserole dish or 9 x 13 baking pan, spread everything evenly and top it with seasoned breadcrumbs and the cheddar cheese.

Bake in a 350- degree oven for 30 minutes covered and then 15 minutes uncovered.

Pork Chops, Rice & Veggies

It seems that sometimes when I make pork chops, they are not as tender as I'd like. I found a wonderful way of preparing them which solves that problem, and is today's recipe.

It's almost a one dish only entrée, which is always a good thing.

PORK CHOPS WITH RICE & VEGGIES

4 thick cut pork chops
½ cup rice (uncooked)
1 green pepper (or vinegar peppers from a jar)
1 medium onion (sliced)
½ pound fresh mushrooms (cut)
1-2 cups tomato sauce
¼ cup shredded mozzarella cheese
Oil for sautéing

In the hot oil, sauté the pork chops until browned on both sides. Set aside.

In the same pan, sauté the onion, pepper and mushrooms until tender.

In a slightly greased baking pan, place the chops. On top of that, place the rice and the green pepper mixture. Pour the tomato sauce over the top.

Bake in a 350- degree oven for one hour covered. Remove cover and sprinkle the mozzarella cheese and cook for another 10 minutes until the cheese is melted.

South Quincy Bocce Club 80th Anniversary Celebration Saturday

The South Quincy Bocce Club will celebrate its 80th anniversary Saturday, March 22.

The club – established in 1934 – s located at Malnarti's Block on Liberty Street in South Quincy. The club was founded as a place where men of Italian Heritage could gather and play the game of Bocce and enjoy their leisure.

The City of Quincy acknowledge the anniversary with a Citation at the City Council Meeting night. The club donates to many worthy causes and charities. In addition to its Bocce League, the club sponsors dart teams and golf tournaments.

The club has 175 regular and honorary members. The 2014 officers are:

President Steve Maze, Vice President Robert Arnold III, Treasurer Robert Arnold Jr., Secretary Jim Costa, Buyer Rich Speranzo, Sergeant of Arms Bob Malvesti and serving on the Board of Directors are Harry Bertoni, Mike Flagg, Steve Salvatore, Charles Seviour and Domenic Venturelli.

Amy Smith Earns National Teaching Award

The Northeastern Association of Graduate Schools (NAGS) has chosen UMass Boston's Professor Amy E. Smith of Quincy for its Graduate Faculty Teaching Award which recognizes excellence and creativity in the teaching of graduate students with an emphasis on pedagogy, including classroom-based and/or distance learning instruction.

Christine Brenner, chairperson of the Department of Public Policy and Public Affairs at the McCormack Graduate School of Policy and Global Studies, prepared the nomination with four pages of accolades from students and department peers.

"Professor Smith approaches all of the courses she teaches with an attention to detail and theoretical rigor that speaks to her deep commitment to pedagogy," Brenner noted. "In her courses, Amy is like a conductor, orchestrating all the instructional materials and activities into a symphony of learning. She deftly interweaves readings from a text, with classroom handouts, class assignments, case studies of real life situations, and guided open discussion. With a passion for the subject matter that is motivating and engaging, Professor Smith creates an atmosphere of efficacy and accomplishment in her courses."

The nomination letter also noted Professor Smith embraces the challenge of meeting the needs of visually impaired students. She and her teaching assistant created a series of tactile teaching aids that facilitated the acquisition of statistics knowledge for masters' students who are blind. Through her own research and creativity, a series of teaching aids were developed such as pipe cleaners bent to demonstrate a Bell curve and one or two tailed T tests, using different grades of sand paper to build histograms.

Smith says she holds herself to a very high standard in her teaching. Her goal is to develop "a classroom dynamic that encourages vigorous, critical and collaborative discussion; investment in the subject matter; and self-confidence in students." Class ratings and student comments from end of semester course evaluations unequivocally show that she is successful in meeting this goal.

Dean Ira A. Jackson lauded Professor Amy Smith and her contributions to McCormack Graduate School.

"Amy is a highly effective teacher in some of the most challenging classes offered at the graduate level. Students and colleagues both value her commitment to her teaching responsibilities and recognize the positive impact she makes on strengthening the rigor and quality of the programs in which she teaches. In short, Amy Smith is a model teacher representing the best that the McCormack Graduate School can offer its students."

The Northeastern Association of Graduate Schools has invited Smith to its April conference in Toronto, Canada where she will receive a certificate and a $1,000 award check at the annual meeting's award luncheon.

Raymondi Takes 'Full Responsibility' For DPW Document Burning

and unusable material."

Raymondi's comments came after Ward 5 Councillor Kirsten Hughes asked for an update on the situation. Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest, who chairs the council's public works committee, and Councillor Doug Gutro also submitted a related resolution.

"I have several folks who are concerned and we have a responsibility to get an accurate accounting of what happened," Hughes said. "This body deserves an accounting of what the events were."

Laforest and Gutro introduced their resolution, which asks the administration to provide an update on how the city handle's the disposal of old records.

"For me the resolution coming out of it is what are the current standard practices we're operating under now? What does state records law allow? What is the opportunity to optimize use of technology?" Laforest said. "What is the best practice coming forward for the city and how do we optimize technology so we can reduce the volume of paper? That's the discussion I'm looking to get out of this."

Gutro added that he was embarrassed to learn the DPW had been burning documents without receiving permission.

"In short I was embarrassed. I think many of us that served the city were embarrassed. I appreciate you explaining how it transpired," Gutro said. "I think many of us that have been around a while know the good work that Joe Shea does around record management and how he has brought in many of the department heads in terms of training and education and so forth.

"I think if you look at the resolution introduced by Councillor Laforest and I it's a constructive one to educate us on records management so we can work together with the executive branch."

The resolution was referred to the council's oversight and municipal technology committees. Council President Joseph Finn said the discussion of the public records law and technology would be a good one for the municipal technology committee, which was formed this year at his request.

"This is one the areas I think where there is some mutual need for education as well because there are requirements under Mass. law in terms of preservation of hard copies. Very cumbersome ones, quite honestly," Finn said. "I think this would be a perfect component – in terms of the public records law and its impact – for this committee, the technology committee, as well as oversight."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci suggested that the city clerk organize annual or biennial document shredding days for all city departments going forward. Shea said his office has done that for several years working with every city department except the police, because their evidentiary requirements differ from other municipal departments. The city has received permission from the state to shred documents prior to those shredding days.

Among the documents already disposed of were purchase orders dating from 2001-2007; BFI receipts from 1998 and 1999; BFI invoices from 1996-1999; utility bills from 2007; parking ticket duplicates from 1999-2003; memos and files from the commissioner's office from 1997-1999; and payroll and payroll duplicates from 1999-2002. Brian McNiff, a spokesman for Secretary of the Commonwealth William Galvin, said the city would not face any disciplinary action for those destroying those documents from that office.

"Not at this point," McNiff responded in a phone interview March 12 when asked if the city would face any penalties from his office. "Everything was in the regulations to be destroyed."

State regulations require municipalities to retain important documents for a set period of time, which varies for each document. Once that period of time has passed, communities can seek permission to destroy them. McNiff said that it's not unusual for municipalities to destroy documents once the retention period expires.

"Communities do this all the time," he said.

While Galvin's office okayed the destruction of the documents, the state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) continues to investigate how the documents were disposed of.

Joseph Ferson, a spokesman for the agency, said it received a complaint about the open burning of documents. He declined to say what consequences the city might face.

"We have received a complaint and we're looking to it," Ferson said.

Quincy is a community where open burning is allowed, Ferson explained. But open burning is only permissible for brush, cane, driftwood and forestry debris - not including grass, hay, leaves or stumps – and not solid waste like paper.

"Its purpose is to allow for the disposal of winter storm debris," Ferson said. "It's not for the burning of solid waste."

Prior to Monday's meeting, mayoral spokesman Chris Walker said no DPW employees would face any disciplinary action related to the burning of documents. He said the mayor would remind department heads that documents are to be shredded and not burned.

"It's always been the policy that we shred documents," Walker said. "That's going to be made clear again."

He also noted that it had been the administration's policy that Shea oversee the disposal of records.

"We want to reiterate the policy that Joe Shea, as the City Clerk, is in charge of the process," Walker said.

Late Night T Service Begins March 28

By SCOTT JACKSON

Late night service on the MBTA's rapid transit lines, including the Red Line in Quincy, will begin on March 28, state officials announced last week.

Late night service will operate as it does during the day, serving customers at the same stations and stops. All new trips will be scheduled and will appear on Google, phone apps and the MBTA website. The last Red, Orange, Blue and Green Line trains will depart downtown stations at approximately 2:30 a.m. on Friday and Saturday nights and approximately 1:00 a.m. on Sunday through Thursday nights.

Extended late night service will operate approximately every 15-20 minutes in most cases, with more frequent service in the core of the system. Individual schedules for each station and route can vary, and customers are strongly encouraged to look at schedules before traveling. Regular rapid transit and bus fares will be charged on late night services.

The late night service is projected to cost $16 million. The program is being partially paid for by corporate sponsors, who have contributed a total of $1.5 million.

Joseph O'Connor, the superintendent of the MBTA Transit Police, said his department will be able to handle any problems that arise because of the extended service hours, explaining that no uptick an issues was noticed when the T's 'Night Owl' service ran from 2001 to 2005. That service featured buses substituting for subway service during early morning hours.

"We have some experience with it in years past. We didn't notice an increase in problems then," O'Connor told The Sun. "This time it is different because it involves the subways, but we believe we'll have an adequate number of officers working."

Women's History Month:
Local Historical Figure Mary Baker Eddy as a Pioneer in Health

March is Women's History month. This year's theme, according to the National Women's History Project site is: Celebrating Women's Character, Courage, and Commitment. The following honors an extraordinary local woman from the 19th century who made significant contributions to spiritual and religious education as a teacher, writer, and leader. Her courage and commitment are clearly evident in the body of work she accomplished.

Mary Baker Eddy was no ordinary woman. Behind her Victorian-era velvet and lace dress was a 21st century power suit. At a time when women could not vote, rarely preached from a pulpit or took part in medical professions, Eddy's work in the healthcare arena broke through the glass ceiling that had yet to become a metaphor. Her ideas as an author, pastor, teacher, and healer charted the path for current thought on consciousness and health today. And in more ways than one, they still lead the way.

After a series of disappointments, including the passing of her first husband and the eventual desertion of her second, Eddy was mid-life and suffering from her own chronic ill-health. This prompted her to investigate alternative healthcare methods, rather than resorting to the harsh treatments and side-effects of conventional 19th-century medicine. She tried diets, hydropathy, homeopathy and what are now known as placebo treatments–and she found some relief. But her most important conclusion from all of her investigations was that what a patient believes is directly related to the healing results they see.

It was a nearly fatal experience in February of 1866 that pushed her one step further in her investigations. A fall on the ice that resulted in internal injuries left her lying in her home with her doctor, family, and friends counting the hours. Deeply religious, and with nowhere else to turn, Eddy opened her Bible to one of Jesus' healings. Instead of dying, she recovered almost immediately, much to her doctor's disbelief. And she was left wondering just what exactly had happened.

She spent the next nine years looking for answers.

Her findings led her to test her conclusions. Often she took patients who had been given up by their doctors. She healed a man, Mr. Clark, who had suffered from a hip disease since he was a child. The doctor even showed her the evidence of the diseased hip and declared his patient was dying. But after Eddy's treatment, he recovered completely and was back at work within two weeks. (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures, p. 192.)

Another time she was called to the bedside of Mrs. Gale, who was dying of pneumonia. Eddy healed her on the spot with her physicians standing by. One of them, Dr. Davis, asked her how she healed and encouraged her to write her findings in a book. (Mary Baker Eddy, Christian Healer, Amplified Edition, pp. 77-78).

She named her discovery Christian Science and began teaching others how to heal as well. And she followed through on Dr. Davis' advice to write a book. Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures became an international best-seller and a leading source on the subject of consciousness, spirituality, and health. Eddy founded The First Church of Christ, Scientist in Boston in 1879.

QHS Students Attend Harvard's Model Congress

Twenty-nine Quincy High School students attended the 29th Havard Model Congress (HMC) at the Boston Sheraton Hotel held during February School vacation week.

The QHS scholarship delegates were among the 1,300 high school students from throughout the U.S. as well as other countries who participated at the conference.

Harvard Model Congress delegates from Quincy included Evan Bausemer, Yversen Boutin, Connor Dane, James Deamicis, Owen Doherty, Brian Maloney, Colin Maloney, Steven Martsjepovic, Suhail Purkar, Liam Rogers, Carly Brilliant, Marina Chafa, Isabella Cobble, Lydia Culp, Madison Davis, Katy Deng, Emma Kimmell, Colleen Madden, Erin McMillen, Teresa McMillen, Minhthu Nguyen, Imane Oubtrou, Noreen Plabutong, Joelle Robinson, Nicole Salvatore, Lindsay Schrier, Emma Smyth, Alissa Tam and Lily Vo.

In the opening conference remarks, students were reminded that Congress's approval rating is at its lowest ever, so they were charged with finding ways to break the constant gridlock in our nation's capital and to restore the image of public service.

For four days and three nights students participated in House, Senate or Special Programs committees to pass bills or elect candidates by debating, negotiating, and compromising. Delegates also experienced "midnight crises" where they were woken by Harvard staff after midnight and led to special crisis rooms. Here, as examples, members of Homeland Security had to contend with a tuberculosis outbreak in the Midwest that was created by a lab in Syria, and members of both the Republican and Democratic National Committees had to respond to the news that George Clooney entered the Ohio gubernatorial race with a blank check for funding by Bill Gates!

HMC's mission of making the American government fun and accessible to high school students, as well as cultivating valuable skills that will serve delegates the rest of their lives, was certainly achieved. Ultimately Harvard Model Congress hopes students' newfound understanding of how government works will instill in them a passion for getting involved in our communities.

Brian Fahey Nominated To U.S. Naval Academy

Cong. Stephen Lynch has nominated Brian Fahey of Quincy for appointment to the United States Naval Academy.

Fahey, the son of Brian and AnneMarie Fahey, is a senior at Boston College High School.

"Brian was highly recommended by his teachers and coaches at Boston College High School. He is a remarkable young man, and we are fortunate that young people like Brian are willing to serve our nation," Lynch said.

After an extensive review process and a personal interview, Fahey was selected as someone whose scholastic record and community contributions elevated him to the top of a list of well-qualified candidates.

"Brian stood out as a young man of keen intelligence and strong character. He is a wonderful reflection of his parents, Brian and AnneMarie. The Fahey family, Quincy and the entire state should be proud of Brian in this achievement."

Students interested in attending one of the United States Service Academies should contact Robert Fowkes in Congressman Lynch's Boston office at 617-428-2000.

SARAH MOLLOY of Quincy and another local resident, Nick McNeil, are are among the cast in Riverside Theatre Works annual reunion show "That's Entertainment: A Night with Oscar and Tony" Saturday, March 22 at 8 p.m. For ticket information, 1-866-811-4111. Riverside Theatre Works is located at 45 Fairmount Ave., Hyde Park.

Quincy High School Academic Team Participates In State Competition

The Quincy High School Academic Decathlon Team recently participated in the State Competition at Westwood High School.

One hundred and fifty students from 15 schools took part, with the Presidents finishing ninth.

The theme for the 2013-2014 school year was World War I. Gold, silver and bronze medals were awarded to the top scorers in seven subjects: Economics, Social Science, Math, Language/Literature, Music, Art and Science.

Senior Vanessa Anjurthe and Junior Marissa Mei won bronze medals in Science and Language/Literature respectively.

After saying goodbye to 12 seniors this spring, the Team is looking forward to working hard over the summer.

Students on the Academic Decathlon Team are:

Vanessa Anjurthe, Fatima Amin, Amira Abdelaziz, Kalima Bukenya, Yuling Chen, Vasil Duka, Li Ping He, Jennifer Hong, Carmen Huang, Thomas Khuu, Emily Lo, Lauren Lo, Lindsey Lo, Marissa Mei, Stiv Mucolari, Suhail Purkar, Scarlett Stanhope, Leonard Strauss, Nicole Strauss, Joanne Tsang, Selina Tsang, Jia Xin Wang, Jinyu Xie, Joyce Zhang, Jennifer Zheng (Yu Juan), Yu Ping Zheng, Iris Zheng (Yu Yao), Diana Zhou, Linda Zhou and Vivian Zou.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

SEALING TEETH WITH PROTECTIVE BARRIERS

Because the occlusal (chewing) surfaces of molar and premolar teeth have grooves, called "fissures," that trap food and accumulate bacteria-laden plaque, they are particularly susceptible to decay. These fissures can be deep and difficult to clean, which is why dentists often recommend that they be treated with "sealants." These plastic coatings, which are brushed on the biting surfaces of the back teeth, quickly harden into protective barriers that seal out food, plaque, and bacteria. Because this treatment is so effective at preventing tooth decay, it is generally recommended for young children. However, the use of sealants is not limited to youngsters since adults can also benefit from their application. If sealants prevent one cavity, they are worth the cost.

We will be happy to discuss any dental concerns, such as the benefit of having sealants. Any time you have a question, please don't hesitate to ask. Good dentistry is more than excellent clinical skills and state-of-the-art equipment. We feel that mutual trust is also a factor in the success of your treatment. Our entire staff believes that open communication can help build this trust. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com

More Central Appraisals Sought

property appraised in October of last year. In that appraisal, RSD Realty Advisors valued the site at $4.6 million, under the assumption the former school would be rezoned out of a Residence B zoning district and into something more lucrative financially. Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee noted that at Monday's meeting, adding that additional appraisals would be needed to before the council could consider setting a minimum price for the lot.

"The $4.6 million that was discussed was based on the assumption of the rezoning," McNamee said. "That's not realistic. It's not zoned that way. We're going to get substantially less than that. The final thought I have is we've got one appraiser here. I would find it attractive to set a minimum price. But I would like to do it based on at least two or three appraisals."

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci raised that issue again later in the meeting, asking City Solicitor Jim Timmins if there would be any downside to having additional appraisals available when the council considers setting a minimum price.

"It seems like a very reasonable suggestion that Councillor McNamee made," Palmucci said.

Timmins said additional appraisers, though working independently from each other, would likely wind up using the comparable sales to determine Central's market value.

"I don't know where another appraiser is going to go to get comps. It's very hard in the current market to find comparable sales," Timmins said. "That's the only negative. We may end up paying someone to do an appraisal...and they're going to generally find the same marketplace."

McNamee made a motion to delay a vote and asked for at least two new appraisals, as well as a revised appraisal by RSD based on Residence B zoning, so the council could set a minimum price. That motion was approved by a voice vote.

Flood Abatements Vote 'Misleading'

could have taken was sending a resolution to the state attorney general seeking statewide action instead criticizing the mayor in a remonstrance.

"This body has worked very well with the mayor," Timmins said. "We need to work together on this."

In response, Gutro explained that his vote was only about discussing the viability of abatements with the assessor. No residents, he added, were misled by the remonstrance.

"It was not a vote that we could, or should, or can issue abatements. The motion was that the finance committee begin discussions with the city assessor about the viability of abatements," Gutro said. "I have not heard where folks were misled by my remonstrance."

Gutro added that his job as a councillor requires him to speak his mind, as he did with his remonstrance two weeks ago.

"I try not to grandstand. When I disagree I try to do so in an agreeable fashion," he said. "We speak our mind – that's our job. We work together, we try to be a team as often as possible, but if we disagree we need to make our voices clear. And that's what I've done."

Fore River Bridge Project Meeting March 27

The Massachusetts Department of Transportation will hold a public information meeting for the Fore River Bride Replacement Project Thursday, March 27 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Fore River Clubhouse, 16 Nevada Rd., Quincy.

The purpose of this meeting is to provide an overview the project's progress over the past several months and provide a preview of coming operations during the spring of 2014 particularly with regard to traffic impacts related to upcoming construction operations. The meeting will also provide residents and other stakeholders within the project area with an opportunity to ask questions of MassDOT's design/build team for the project's construction phase. Following the presentation, MassDOT staff will facilitate a question-and-answer session.

The Fore River Bridge project includes the complete replacement and eventual removal of the existing temporary span. The project, already underway, will run through 2016.

$1.56M For NQHS Expansion

tax and Sewer and Drainage Rehab Fund would be distributed and used for the plan originally unveiled by Mayor Thomas Koch at a community meeting last November.

As part of the NQHS expansion and improvement, the two-acre Teel Field will undergo a complete overhaul including the laying of synthetic turf over a shock pad, the addition of 600-seat grand stand bleachers, a new scoreboard, sound system, lighting, concession stands, bathrooms, and fencing around the perimeter of the field. Once finished, it will accommodate football, soccer, and boys and girls lacrosse.

New walkways will lead to the school building and to an expanded, 157-space parking lot. In addition to the lot, designated bus drop-off lanes will help to alleviate traffic congestion that burdens the area.

The building's main entrance facade will also undergo improvements.

Prior to Teel Field renovations beginning, Atlantic Middle School's O'Neil Field will be outfitted to host NQHS sporting events during the 12 months of construction. The addition of extra parking spaces at the school will accommodate the increase in attendance. O'Neil Field improvements will cost $425,000 and Atlantic Middle School drainage repairs will total $685,000.

NQHS building improvements include total window and door replacements to take place starting in summer 2014. The state will reimburse the city 70% of the cost of the replacements, which will improve appearance and energy efficiency. A new computer lab, gym improvements, an HVAC overhaul including a new chiller and controls, and a new roof are also planned.

Woodard & Curran project the probable cost of the NQHS and Teel Field construction to be $450,000.

From that, $50,000 will be spent on legal fees for deed research, appraisal services, and paying relocation specialists to aid in the acquisition of properties on Hunt Street and Newbury Avenue where the parking lot will extend. Two retaining ponds—one on Hunt Street and the other on Newbury Avenue—will aid in surface drainage.

"We see this next component as being driven by drainage in the area," said Shea. "At this point we are looking for funding for the drainage and storm water components of the work on Hunt Street, Newbury, on Price, on Kendall for retention basins plus all the associated landscaping, contractors' work, surveying, and layout."

Money earned from the eventual sale of the old Central Middle School building will pay for the home acquisitions.

Ward 6 City Councillor Brian McNamee was pleased with the proposed drainage plans. "This is an important project for my ward," he said. "It's an issue that's been generational over there and it's caused a lot of heart break over a number of significant storm events that have happened to people and I commend the mayor for finally tackling it and I'm sure that the neighbors over there will be very appreciative of the results and benefits of this project."

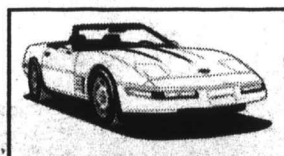

Work at Teel Field and the associated parking lot will begin September 2014 with an anticipated completion date of April 2015.

Quincy Chamber Of Commerce Taste Quincy Restaurant Weeks

Special Lunch, Dinner Menus Discounted Pricing Offered March 23-27; March 30-April 3

The Quincy Chamber of Commerce is again sponsoring Taste Quincy Restaurant Week but this year the promotion runs for two weeks.

The Weeks are scheduled for Sunday, March 23 through Thursday, March 27 and again Sunday, March 20 through Thursday, April 3.

Throughout these two weeks, restaurants and specialty food establishments are offering special lunch and dinner menus and other promotions with discounted pricing.

"From Asian to Indian to Mediterranean, from clam shacks to fine dining, Quincy is the dining capital of the South Shore," said Margaret Laforest, the Quincy Chamber's director of Tourism.

"Restaurant Week provides a wonderful opportunity for diners to visit a restaurant that perhaps they haven't tried before and to sample Quincy's wide array of eating establishments at a great savings.

"We are always encouraging people to shop locally whenever they have the option, and programs like Taste Quincy Restaurant Week are a great way to help the local economy while offering value to the consumer as well," Laforsest added.

Similar to Boston's new reformatted event Dine Out Boston, Quincy's Restaurant week changed from a fixed price menu giving the participating restaurants the choice to offer a special menu or to showcase specials they offer regularly.

During a tough winter, Taste Quincy Restaurant Week is beneficial to the restaurant owners who are seeking to fill seats. A full list of all participating restaurants can be found at the newly updated website TasteQuincy.com.

There are over 30 participating food establishments in Taste Quincy Restaurant Week, including:

Abby Park, Adams Pub, Alba, Babycakes, Burke's Seafood, Cagney's, Captain Fishbones, Coffee Break Café, Common Market Restaurant, Commonwealth Restaurant & Lounge, Craig's Café, Gennaro's Eatery, Ginger Betty's Bakery, Gunther Tooties, Hancock's at the Marriott, Hancock Tavern, La Paloma, O'Brien's Bakery, Port 305, Punjab Café, Siros, Super Chef Pizza, The China Restaurant, The Early American Restaurant, The Lobster Stop, Time Out Pizza, Tony's Clam Shop, Villa Rosa Restaurant, Wheelhouse Diner and more.

For a list of participating restaurants and their specific category offerings visit www.TasteQuincy.com or call the Quincy Chamber at (617) 471-1700.

OBITUARIES

Edith L. Gallagher

A funeral service for Edith L. (Williams) Gallagher of Quincy will be held tomorrow (Friday) at 11 a.m. in Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Mrs. Gallagher died March 16.

Her life revolved around her loving family. She was involved in all her children and grandchildren's activities. Mrs. Gallagher served her country during WWII in the U.S. Navy and was a very patriotic woman and was fortunate to see her name engraved on the WWII Memorial in Washington, D.C.

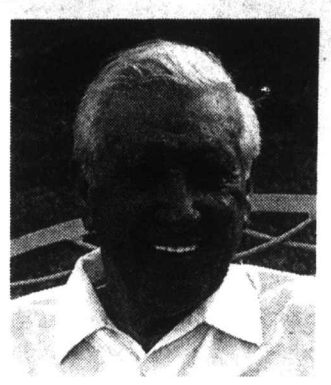

A social woman, she participated in many of the senior groups at St. Mary's Church, St. John's Church and the Hancock House in Quincy. She enjoyed swimming, bingo and loved her outings to Nantasket Beach. She was a beautiful lady, an impeccable dresser, and will be remembered for her kind and gentle manner.

Beloved wife of the late Robert J. Gallagher. Loving mother of Carol Franke and her husband Donald of ME, Patricia Sullivan and her husband Brian of Quincy, Lynn Flood and her husband Robert of Hanover, Janice Gullicksen of Quincy, and Robert J. Gallagher and his wife Sharon of Quincy. Sister of the late Barbara Nelson. Cherished Nana to eight grandchildren and six great grandchildren.

Visiting hours are 4-8 p.m. today (Thursday) at the funeral home.

Private interment.

Daniel K. Silva

DANIEL K. SILVA

A funeral Mass for Daniel K. Silva of Quincy will be celebrated Saturday at 10 a.m. in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Silva died March 16.

He was a lifelong Quincy resident and a proud U.S. Army Korean War veteran. Following his military service, Mr. Silva worked as an electrician for the Gillette Company for more than 30 years, retiring in 1990.

He enjoyed traveling, gardening and the serenity of the ocean, but the foundation of his life was truly his family. He was devoted to them all. They were the cornerstone of all that was important to him. His family remembers him as a passionate, kind hearted, loving and caring gentleman who they adored. Although they are broken hearted, they feel blessed to have had such an amazing man. His family will treasure all the wonderful memories they created through the years. He will be sadly missed.

Beloved husband of 56 years to Dolores M. (Tabak) Silva of Quincy. Devoted father of Carolyn S. Devine and her husband James of Hanover and Stephen Silva and his wife Linda of Pembroke. Brother of Roberta Silva and Jim Silva, both of Quincy. Cherished grandfather of Lauren, Kerin and Gregory Devine and Katelyn, Daniel and Michael Silva.

Visiting hours are 4-8 p.m. tomorrow (Friday) at Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy. A celebration of life will be held there at 9:15 a.m. Saturday, prior to the Mass.

Interment at New Calvary Cemetery, Boston.

Quincy College Awarded $500,000 Grant For Biotech Program

Quincy College has been awarded a $500,000 Capital Grant from the Massachusetts Life Sciences Center.

The grant will allow Quincy College's Biotechnology and Compliance program to continue training its students on the single-use biomanufacturing equipment that is used by today's biotechnology industry. The College currently offers associate degree and certificate programs in Biotechnology and Compliance. The funds are slated to purchase laboratory supplies and equipment and to assist in furthering curriculum development.

The grant award follows a previous $100,000 grant from the Massachusetts Life Sciences Center and a $3 million federal grant from the Trade Adjustment Assistance Community College and Career Training Grant Program. These grants provided Quincy College the opportunity to offer state-of-the-art upgrades to its Biotechnology and Compliance laboratories and curriculum and helped support the City of Quincy's initiative to bring more biotechnology and life science companies into a city that is well-placed to be a hub of biotechnology for the Commonwealth.

Following industry trends, the College's Biotechnology and Compliance Program prepares students with the skills required to enter the biomanufacturing industry in areas of the biotech sector where there is a pressing need for workers. Quincy College is the first college to integrate a virtual lab into its biomanufacturing program and its renovated laboratories on-site have been updated with new equipment that accommodates training on emerging single-use biomanufacturing technology as well as traditional technology.

Danielle Vollmar Visits QHS Meteorology Class

On March 5th 2014, WCVB Storm Team 5 meteorologist Danielle Vollmar was a guest speaker at Quincy High School and visited with over 40 students from Ron Boudreau's science/meteorology classes in the QHS Adams Lecture Hall.

Vollmar spoke about becoming a meteorologist and took time to answer student questions regarding her profession and experiences.

Vollmar discussed the preparations needed to create a forecast seen on television. She also recounted her perennial interest in meteorology when a local broadcast meteorologist was a guest speaker in her middle school and hoped that students at the presentation would take interest in science beyond high school.

"She made me realize there's more to meteorology than standing in front of a camera and talking," said Micayla Bresnahan, a 12th grade student enrolled in the meteorology course at Quincy High.

Vollmar is a Certified Broadcast Meteorologist (CBM) and has been with WCVB since April of 2013. She is a graduate of Cornell University with a degree in Atmospheric Science and a minor in Communications.

When she is not on the air, Vollmar is an indefatigable supporter of numerous charities and devotes much of her time to the community.

QHS senior Jonathan Ng said "The presentation was a great learning experience. Hearing about Ms. Vollmar's career in meteorology and the opportunities we have in this field after high school is exciting."

Students at the presentation were featured in a recent "shout-out video" on NewsCenter 5's EyeOpener.

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL senior Jonathan Ng with Danielle Vollmar after her presentation at Quincy High School.

Quincy High School's science department is extremely grateful for the presentation and would like to thank Vollmar for taking time to talk to students about meteorology.

Personal Finances Program For High School Students

Quincy School Community Partnership's Credit For Life Fair March 27 At Tirrell Room

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Local high school students will learn about managing their personal finances in a hands-on way at this year's 6th Annual Credit for Life fair which will take place March 27 at the Tirrell Room in Quincy from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Before hitting one of 15 booths manned by over 75 business partner volunteers, students will be asked to choose a career path and determine how to invest their estimated monthly income wisely on necessities such as rent, clothing, food, insurance, transportation, education, and retirement.

The fair is hosted by the Quincy School Community Partnership (QSCP), an organization that attracts businesses large and small to donate time and money to Quincy Public Schools.

Starting in September, North Quincy and Quincy High School seniors can enroll in classes focused on financial literacy including personal finance and accounting. A total of 200 students—100 from each school—are invited to participate at the fair.

"As long as they're in good standing they're able to attend this event," said Executive Director of Career Technical Education and Instructional Technology for Quincy Public Schools Keith Segalla. "We're very excited to have another opportunity to promote this wonderful event for kids."

"They're going through a [school] curriculum that supports the event so they are ready for it."

Students are asked to arrive in business attire to simulate a professional work environment and are handed a clipboard and folder once they walk into the venue.

Segalla said kids have to move from booth to booth and make lifestyle decisions that will affect their monthly balance. Each of the booths have options, some of which are more appealing but risky economically. "We have three or four scenarios. For example, transportation... maybe you're taking the MBTA so there's an option for an MBTA pass over the luxury car to the economic car or a taxi."

He admitted that students don't always make the wisest decisions in terms of staying financially afloat. "of course kids are kids. They'll choose that luxury car knowing that they can't afford it," he said.

Following each theoretical transaction, students are directed to the credit counseling booth to have their credit and debt income ratios reviewed by volunteer counselors. "It's like a checkpoint to make sure they did their math correct," he said. The checkpoint also gives them the opportunity to rethink their decisions and tailor their expenditures accordingly. He went on that the event allowed for students to undergo "that real life experience" prior to graduating in June and beginning a new chapter in their lives, whether it be by going to college or immediately entering the workforce.

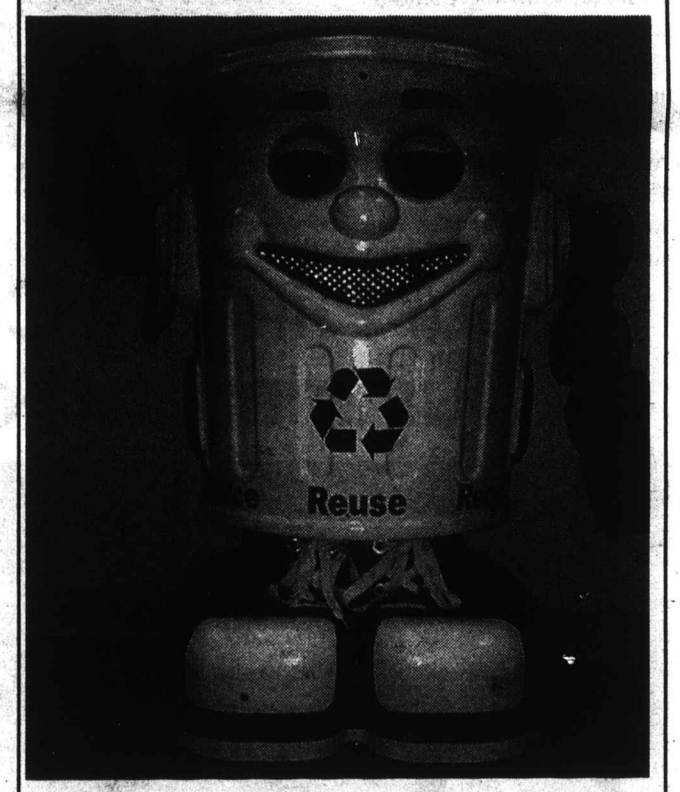

Students, once they've depleted their funds, leave with a newfound respect for their parents, realizing that maintaining a budget is not easy. "They have more of an appreciation for their parents [following the fair]," said Segalla.

Many of the partners volunteering are returning for a sixth year simply because they enjoy the connections made with the kids. Partner of the QSCP the Tirrell Room is donating not only their time, but also their ballroom and a catered lunch for all participants.

The program has been so successful that cities throughout Massachusetts are hosting their own Credit for Life fairs. "I don't want to say that we initiated it but we did champion it," said Segalla. "It's grown immensely within the South Shore and so people are using our model."

State Treasurer Steven Grossman and Mayor Thomas Koch will attend, as will Superintendent Richard DeCristofaro, teachers from the business and technology programs, and high school department chairs.

Name That Robot Contest

The Department of Public Works invites third grade students in Quincy to help name the department's new state of the art recycling robot donated by the city's curbside waste collector, Sunrise Scavenger.

To participate in the naming contest, go to https://www.quicksurveys.com/s/b8ZLk7 and complete a two-minute survey.

The new robot is slated to visit schools this spring to talk about the benefits of recycling. During the visit, third graders will be asked to choose from the list of the names from the survey.

The remote controlled robot can dance, singe and answer questions from the audience.

Croall's Running For 'Footsteps For Faxon'

Marathon Effort, Fundraiser March 27 To Benefit New Loop Trail At Faxon Park

By ROBERT BOSWORTH

Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall is running in next month's Boston Marathon.

And he hopes that his efforts will lead to a different kind of course – a new walking/running loop at Faxon Park.

Croall is organizing an initiative called "Footsteps for Faxon" which he calls a progressive step forward in implementing a loop trail at Faxon Park. The loop was decided by residents through the Faxon Park Master Plan.

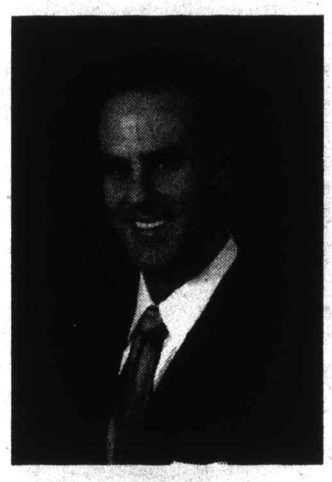

Croall is hoping to raise $60,000 for the ¾-mile loop trail by pounding the pavement from Hopinkton to Boston on Patriots Day April 21. He's looking for sponsors to help support his Marathon run as well as partners from the business community.

The Quincy Parks Conservancy – established last year by Mayor Thomas Koch – has signed on as a supporter. Proceeds from last Friday's Quincy St. Patrick's Day Celebration Luncheon at the Quincy Lodge of Elks Tirrell Room were earmarked for the cause.

"The reception has been pretty good," Croall says. He's been busy promoting the initiative and raising awareness by encouraging neighbors to join the effort.

A fundraiser to help support "Footsteps for Faxon" will be held Thursday, March 27 from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. at the Commonwealth Restaurant, Parkingway, Quincy Center. Donation is $20 per person and all proceeds will support the new loop.

Croall said the Faxon Park Master Plan ideally calls for a mile and a half loop. The estimate to establish a loop that distance was several hundred thousand dollars in part because that length would require new trail construction.

"I had a conversation with the Park Planner – Pete Jackson – and said 'basically can you give us something that is attainable? Because several hundred thousand dollars is a pretty big spread. And he came up with a three-quarter mile loop that is 100 percent scalable so in the event down the road we want to branch out and do a mile and a half, that will be the purview of what's there."

So, the first $60,000 that Croall is trying to raise will go towards creating the first three-quarter mile loop. He said the trail will be marked with a stone dust type gravel and be suitable for both runners and walkers.

Before being elected to the City Council in 2011, Croall served on the Quincy Park and Recreation Board. As Ward 2 councillor, he chairs the council's Park and Recreation Committee.

"My goal is to support recreation and get people back to the parks," Croall says. "When you think about Penns Hill in particular – and I know this loop will be a city-wide attraction or I hope it will be – but Penns Hill there is a good mix of folks so you have those young families who may want to go there with a baby stroller or go for run. You have seniors who probably want to utilize the walking component.

"Faxon Park is a nice piece of open space," Croall said. "We're trying to take that further step to get people up there utilizing the park."

Croall is using the Footsteps for Faxon initiative as a motivational tool as his training for the Boston Marathon heads down the home stretch.

"This is something to keep me motivated. When I'm out running on a cold morning I have something in the back of my head – 'this is why I'm out.'"

He runs 25 to 30 miles a week, including a long run of about 20 miles with some other marathoners training with the South Shore YMCA.

"It's a very organized and professional long run. There are water stops. Everything is pre-set. The rest of the week you are on your own to get the mileage in," he says.

Next month will be Croall's third marathon. He completed Boston in 2008 and last November ran New York City when he got engaged to his fiancée Lori. They will tie the knot in October.

Croall says this may be his last marathon.

"It's a big commitment. I work full-time and I also have a commitment to the city as the Ward 2 councillor and getting thinks done in the ward. I'm newly engaged."

He called this year's Boston Marathon very symbolic considering tragic twin-bombings that marred last year's event.

"I didn't run (Boston) last year. This event this year will be very symbolic – just from an American stand-point. I'm looking forward to being a very small part of it. I think it will be a very special and meaningful time."

Dependable Cleaners 'Unzips' New Headquarters

After Devasting Fire, New 8,400 Square-Foot Flagship Store Opens On Quincy Ave.

By SCOTT JACKSON

Twenty months after a four-alarm fire devastated the company's flagship store, Dependable Cleaners opened its new 8,400 square-foot store at 320 Quincy Ave. with a ceremonial 'unzipping.'

The original store, which was left a total loss by the July 2012 fire, had served as Dependable Cleaners' headquarters since the company acquired the building in the early 1980s. Dependable President and CEO Christa Hagearty, whose grandparents Don Sr. and Marion Fawcett founded the company in 1944, remembers well how she felt the day of the fire.

FAMILY BUSINESS - Dependable Cleaners is a third generation family business and is marking its 70th anniversary this year. The company was founded in 1944 by Don, Sr. and Marion Fawcett. "My first reaction was one of disbelief – I don't know if I really want to accept what was about to happen," Hagearty recalled in an interview one day after the March 12 opening of the new store, which is located where the old one once stood. "The next step was what do I need to take care of? Going into management mode, who do I need to talk to? What do I need to find out? What plans do I need to start making?

"I have a style of during a crisis I am able to say to myself 'you can't cry, you can't get emotional, just deal with what you have to deal with.' The important thing to focus on was what did the Fire Department need from us? What did my team need? Asses, try to grasp how bad this is.

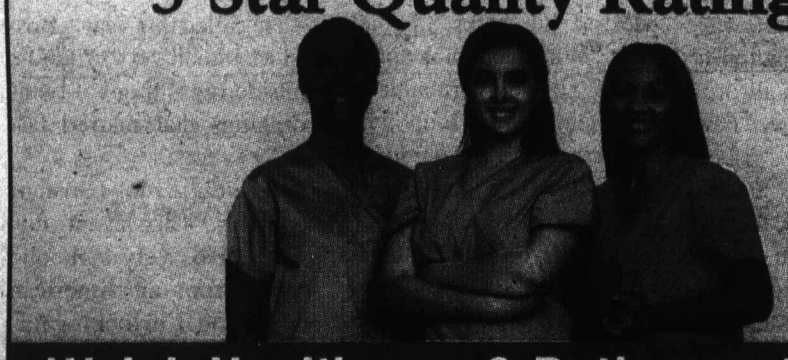

"It was a terrible and tragic day. It was a really tough day."

Even as firefighters from Quincy and Boston raced to put of the four-alarm fire that afternoon, Hagearty knew she would rebuild. She never considered any other option.

"It was an instantaneous decision. It seemed really important to make that commitment that day that we would be there and we would take care of our team and we would do our best to take care of our customers," Hagearty said.

"I believe in Quincy – that belief has actually become stronger over the last year-and-a-half. I feel really good about the future of Quincy and of the South Shore. But that day it was a gut decision. My gut said this is what we need to do. It was probably the most important decision and by making that decision quickly we didn't spend time thinking of alternatives."

About 50 employees will work in the new building, which houses Dependable's main offices, a dry-cleaning plant that services seven other Dependable locations, and a 2,000 square-foot laundromat.

The new facility takes advantage of modern technology. It will be lit by energy efficient LED lighting. Clothes will be washed using GreenEarth cleaning machines and an environmentally friendly solvent. The dry-cleaning plant incorporates more automation. Customers washing and drying their clothes have access to free Wi-Fi.

The building was also built in compliance to current building codes. The facility has a sprinkler system, unlike the previous building that lacked sprinklers because it was built before they were mandatory. It also includes a fire alarm system.

Some 100 residents, local officials, and business leaders were on hand last Wednesday when Dependable opened the new store. For Hagearty, the opening marked the end of a lengthy process to permit, construct, and open the facility.

"Amazing, incredible, happy – those are the words I think about. I was extremely happy. It feels really good that we're finally at this point. There were so many roadblocks, challenges that we faced along the way. Every week seemed to bring a new challenge, so to get to yesterday and be able to celebrate where we are is a huge milestone for us," Hagearty said.

"My family came from all over. I have friends who also traveled a far distance to be there. I had so many people from Quincy, the Quincy leadership, people from my industry. Ten years from now I remember more of those positives than I do of the challenges."

Among those who joined Hagearty at last week's unzipping was Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall, who represents the neighborhood adjacent to the Quincy Avenue store. Following the ceremony, he said the company has a long track record of helping out in the community.

"Dependable Cleaners has been a noticeable business in the city for quite some time," Croall said. "They've been good corporate citizens."

Hagearty, Croall added, was also highly cooperative while the store was being built and worked to minimize the impact construction had on residents living nearby.

"That was a big project," Croall said. "She was awesome."

Boston Athletic Basketball Club Season Opener Here

By BILL GRIFFIN

It should be a basketball lover's delight.

The Boston Athletic Basketball Club will open its season by holding the 12th annual Fitzy-Nolan Games at Quincy High School Friday night with games at 6:15 and 7:30 p.m.

The games are named after former Quincy High star Paul Fitzpatrick and legendary North Quincy coach Bob "Knobby" Nolan.

Fitzpatrick is a member of the Hall of Fame at Quincy High and also the New England Basketball Hall of Fame. He graduated from Quincy High in 1966 and played on the team which defeated North Quincy after North had won 15 straight games.

Fitzpatrick went on to play and coach at Boston State College. As a coach, he led Boston State to the NCAA Division 3 nationals in 1977.

Nolan was the coach at North Quincy from 1961-1976, compiling a record of 153-63, leading his team to four Greater Boston League titles, and coaching the 1971-72 team which won 20 straight games before losing to Catholic Memorial in the Boston Garden.

This is the first year the tourney will be held in Quincy. It was previously held at Mt. Ida College in Newton. The tourney was founded by former Mt. Ida coach Rico Cabral in 2002 shortly after Fitzpatrick's death. Nolan's name was added to the tournament after he passed away in 2005.

Both men were pioneers in the summer camp basketball circuit in the Greater Boston Area. Proceeds from the event will go to help local basketball players to attend summer camps across new England each summer.

In the first game at 6:15, the BABC freshmen will play a select team of freshmen and sophomores from the MIAA South Region. The team will be coached by Quincy's Dave Parry and Braintree's Bob Crook.

Jack Loughnane of Quincy, who was a standout point guard for BC High as a sophomore, will play for the BABC squad.

"It's an honor to coach in a game like this," said Parry. "You'll probably see the 10 best players in the state. There will be a lot of college coaches there watching. It will be excellent basketball. It should be a fun night."

In the feature game at 7:30 p.m., the BABC Junior Team will play a select team of juniors and seniors from the MIAA South Region. The team will be coached by North Quincy's Kevin Barrett and Cohasset's George Ruggerio. Ruggerio is a 1960 graduate of North Quincy High..

Players from Quincy who will participate for the South Region team are North Quincy's Anthony Green, Kyle Richardson and Efthim Butka. James Lam from Quincy High is also on the South team.

"It's a tribute to two great coaches and it's good to be a part of it," said Barrett. "I got a chance to meet coach Nolan. He came to some of our practices and games when I first started coaching at North. He was a gentleman. It was great to talk basketball with him. I never met coach Fitzpatrick, but I've heard great things from everyone about him."

The BABC Junior team enters the 2014 season with hopes of winning the club's 18th national championship since its founding in 1977. The BABC Juniors have been in the national finals 28 times and the final four 37 times since the founding of the club in 1977.

This year's club features 10 players from prestigious prep schools in New England. All are considered Division 1 prospects.

The BABC Juniors also feature three excellent players in MIAA basketball: juniors Tommy Mobley, a 6-2 guard from Newton North, Aamahnie Santos, a 5-10 point guard from Catholic Memorial, and Tyree Robinson, a 6-4 power forward from Durfee.

North Quincy played against Mobley and Santos in the sectional playoffs earlier this month.

BABC Junior coach Leo Papile is a 1971 graduate of North Quincy and a member of the North Quincy Hall of Fame. He founded the BABC in 1977 and the program has produced countless Division 1 players over the last 37 years.

Papile has also enjoyed an illustrious basketball career. At age 23, he became the youngest professional basketball coach in history when he coached the Quincy Chiefs of the CBA . He later coached the Maine Lumberjacks in the CBA from 1980-1982.

He was an assistant coach at Suffolk and BU. He was an associate head coach at Cleveland State from 1984-1988. He led Cleveland State to a spot in the final 16, "The Sweet 16", of the NCAA Division 1 basketball tourney.

He worked as a talent evaluator for the Boston Celtics for 14 years from 1997-2011.

Papile also worked on the coaching staff for the USA National Development Team in 2012.

The Host Committee for this event includes Quincy natives who have succeeded in the athletic, civic and business world, including George"Trigger" Burke former Norfolk County District Attorney who graduated from UMass in1956 and is a member of the Quincy High Hall of Fame.

Also on the committee are: Attorney Dave "Chub" Mahoney, NQHS'72 (Football Hall of Fame); Brian Donahue of J. Donahue Architects-Quincy, NQHS '71 who played NCAA Division 1 basketball at Vermont; Rich Mahoney, NQHS '77 and NQHS Basketball Hall of Fame, and a member of NCAA Division 3 National Champion at Clark University.

The committee also includes Paul Bregoli NQHS'66, current member of Quincy School Committee and longtime coach at NQHS; former Quincy teacher and NQHS'66 alumni Jerry Mulvey owner of Granite Rail in Quincy, 1510 AM Radio personality Roger Homan, and Quincy High freshman basketball coach Matt Ramponi.

All have worked to make this an outstanding event in the first year it will be held in Quincy, the home of Fitzpatrick and Nolan, the basketball giants for whom the event is named.

Any further information can be found at www.thebabc.com. Tickets can be purchased in advance by contacting BABC via email at babc@me.com.

Dan Gould Wins 4th Hoop Rookie Honor

Framingham State freshman Dan Gould, a former North Quincy High star, recently won his fourth Rookie of the Week award in the Massachusetts State Collegiate Athletic Conference.

Gould, a guard for the Rams, averaged 14.5 points, four rebounds and three assists in games against Salem State and Massachusetts College of Liberal Arts. He shot 9-17 on three-pointers for the week.

Against Salem, Gould had 15 points, shot 5-9 on threes, grabbed six rebounds and handed out two assists.

Against MCLA, he had 14 points and shot 4-8 from three-point territory.

Gould is a strong contender to win the Rookie of the Year Award in the conference.

STRONG STOMACH, LESS BACK PAIN

The spine is supported by back muscles and abdominal muscles, which play a very important role in holding the lower spine in its proper position. As the back muscles, hip muscles, and abdominal muscles play against one another to keep the spine erect, it is important that these muscles be reasonably strong and balanced. If stronger back muscles are allowed to overpower weaker abdominal muscles, an exaggerated pelvic tilt or "swayback" condition may result, which frequently brings on periodic low back pain and disability. Moreover, an unstable spine invites vertebral subluxations, painful muscle spasms, pinched nerves, disc degeneration, and other serious back problems. Thus, keeping the strength of the abdominal and back muscles in proper balance is essential.

This column on the benefits of having strong and balanced muscles has been brought to you as a public service. Let us help you improve your lifestyle with professional chiropractic care. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we believe that pain is a very good messenger. It tells us that something is wrong. The worse the pain, the longer it has gone on. The more mysterious it is, the more likely it is to be significant, either by itself, or as an indicator of some other condition. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we are currently accepting new patients. Please call 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Excess belly fat can cause low-back pain by shifting the body's center of gravity forward and forcing the back muscles to compensate.

Sacred Heart Basketball Celebrating 25 Years

City Council Commends Founder Dr. Mark Jaehnig For Longtime Volunteer Work With Local Youth Sports

By SCOTT JACKSON and JOE REARDON

Dr. Mark Jaehnig was recognized Monday night by the City Council for his decades of work in youth sports, including his 25-year tenure running Sacred Heart Basketball.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee presented the commendation to Jaehnig at the meeting. He said Jaehnig has made a remarkable commitment to Quincy's youth over the past 40 years.

"Mark Jaehnig has spent the last 40 years of his life volunteering all his free time to the kids of Quincy. It's been a remarkable commitment Mark – baseball, basketball, football. He's a tireless volunteer and with the exception of Christmas Day can be found on the basketball courts and baseball fields of Quincy, either coaching, refereeing, scoring, planning or scheduling events for the kids of Quincy," McNamee said.

"On the weekends Mark's days start way before 7 a.m. and end around 11 p.m. Mark's been known to more than regularly be found watering the fields, sweeping the courts, setting up gyms, cutting grass, or rebuilding pitching mounds and batter's boxes. All these efforts are in an effort to support our youth of Quincy."

Norfolk County Sheriff Michael Bellotti was also on hand to recognize Jaehnig's work, and praised him for teaching life values that extend far beyond basketball courts and baseball fields.

"This guy is a virtual Boys and Girls Club. He basically is running a Boys and Girls Club out of three gyms in North Quincy on a weekly and daily basis," Bellotti said. "He's never really treated kids differently based on athletic ability. Every kid gets the same speech – stay committed, work hard. He knows he's teaching life values beyond basketball and baseball."

Jaehnig thanked the council for the commendation, and also recognized a number of other volunteers who have assisted him over the past 25 years with Sacred Heart Basketball. He added that he couldn't be happier with how the league has gone since it started.

"It's just been great. I really enjoy the pleasuring of meeting all these kids. So many friendships have been established and it's great. I couldn't be happier," Jaehnig said. "It's been a great run. Sacred Heart Basketball has become a family."

The program was founded by Jaehnig who is still the standing director. Financially, the program has been self sufficient without outside sponsorship.

Since its inception, more than 20,000 kids have participated in the program, including over 800 boys and girls this year. Financial aid is offered to those in need.

Scholarships have been awarded to some kids entering high school and college. The program includes an in-house league as well as travel teams for those with a more advanced skill set.

Torre Dei Passeri Club Defeats Rep. Bruce Ayers

Third seed Torre Dei Passeri Social Club defeated number one seed, Rep. Bruce Ayers, 34 - 18 to win the Quincy Youth Basketball Girls Grades 6-8 Championship.

Torre Dei Passeri jelled over the last several practices and playoffs to defeat the very tough and well coached (Coaches John Lyons and Steve Brown) Hughes Ward 5 Warriors in the first round of playoffs.

Torre Dei Passeri had a well-balanced scoring attack in the Championship Game with starters Ashley Totten (eight points), Mary Kate McAleavey (five points), Lindsay Sheridan (five points), Joanna Rafti (four points), and Olivia Palazzi (two points) all working together, executing game plan and playing excellent team defense. The front court of Totten, Palazzi and Rafti dominated the boards while Sheridan and McAleavey provided offensive punch while applying constant defensive pressure on Team Ayers' scoring machine, Emily Butruccio (scoring a game high 14 points).

Rep. Bruce Ayers players Salma Shaban, Emily Butruccio, Jennifer Segale, Rachel Higgins, Laura Butruccio, Jillian Harrington, Julianne Gazzola and Mariam Hassan, coached by Harry Olson, played hard and worked as a team throughout, with Emily Butruccio always a threat to erupt on a scoring tear.

Coming off the bench for Torre Dei Passeri was Madelyn Gill (two points) who played great all season displaying an excellent shooting touch. River Barrett, sidelined for the semi-final game, overcame a serious injury to play and scored six points to ignite the bench. Kayla Larkin-Goldman (two points), Megan Piquette and Journey Strouble all provided tenacious defense and were all over the court forcing turnovers and causing havoc.

This win represented back-to-back championships for Coach Dan Totten and most of the Torre Dei Passeri team.

United HVAC Conquers George 'Trigger' Burke

Number 3 seed United HVAC defeated number 1 seed George Trigger Burke for the Quincy Youth Basketball Boys Grades 3-5 Championship recently at Quincy High School.

After falling behind early in the first half, United HVAC regrouped and pulled ahead after the first eight minutes. At the half, United HVAC was ahead 21-14 and they never looked back, winning 38-25.

The great defensive efforts from all United HVAC players on every play successfully held off the talented George Trigger Burke offense lead by Gent Haviari and Benny Nguyen (eight points each). Others scoring for GTB included Ben Blow (3 points) and Emmett Bandzak, Dylan Green and Sam Wong (two points apiece). Reán Beqo, Quangvinh Tran and Clayton Corley rounded out the defense for GTB, coached by Chris Blow and Mark Bandzak.

Players for United HVAC included Daniel Scolaro (scoring a game high 21 points), Jack Nelson (12 points) Ben Akkara (three points, Kevin Matteo-Diggs (two points), Anthony Holmes, Billy MacDonald, Oliver Smith and Matt Whooley. The team is coached by John Scolaro and Conor Smith.

Quincy Sun Shines Against Coughlin Club

In the Quincy Youth Basketball Girls 3rd-5th Grade Championship, the Quincy Sun team brought their regular-season undefeated streak up against the highly motivated girls of Coughlin Club on the big court at Quincy High School and came away with a 20-8 win. Both teams showed some early jitters, but the Quincy Sun, coached by Dave O'Neil and Jay Medeiros, took a quick lead in a low scoring first half despite baskets by Coughlin Club's Helena Middleton and Victoria Mariano. Quincy Sun's fifth grade team captains, Lauren Medeiros (six points) and Emma O'Neil couldn't find their touch early on despite some skilled dribbling and full-court runs for the Sun.

Coughlin Club's defense, led by Victoria Mariano and Noor Hassan, sprung a half-court press in the second half that forced the Quincy Sun team into some turnovers, but the Sun's third-grade point guard Mollie Nelson figured out how to break the trap with a patient approach. Soon the Sun girls got their running game going, with scoring leader Adriana Moosick (10 points) driving to the hoop again and again after mid-court steals; and tenacious defender Jamie McAleavey showing her cross-over dribbling skills on a breath-taking drive past Coughlin Club defender Sasha Coronado. The Sun girls slowly pulled away from Coughlin Club, and the Sun's Emma Kinsley, Jessica Lustig and Katie Conroy gave their all on both ends of the court. Coughlin Club, coached by Andy Mariano, played great defense and prevented good shooters, Victoria Berry and Kathleen Higgins, from getting their shots off.

The victory was a great achievement for the Quincy Sun girls. The undefeated championship brought veterans O'Neil and Medeiros full-circle from their first year in the league three years ago when they were a winless 0-10 in the regular season before shocking a 10-0 team for a first round playoff win. Sun's coaches Medeiros and O'Neil pointed out the improvement each of the girls made over the course of the year - from Emma Kinsley's rebounding, Victoria Berry's shooting, and Adriana Moosick's team leadership - and attributed it to the extras that Quincy Youth Basketball provides for these girls. "The clinics with the U-Mass and Boston University women's teams that QYB Director of Clinics and Tournaments, Dan Totten, coordinated really energized these girls. We also played Sunday morning pickup games that let the girls build their confidence and creativity. Quincy Youth Basketball fosters a learning approach to the game. Everyone from the referees to the coaches to the parents understands that we've got to make it "Fun First" if we want these girls to love basketball," said proud coach O'Neil.

Flavin & Flavin Topples Everett Square Sporting Goods

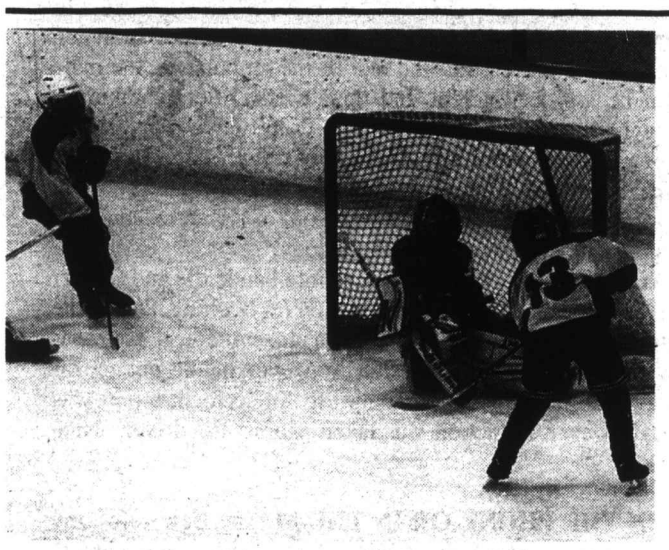

Quincy Youth Basketball's 6th to 8th Grade inaugural Ron Smith Memorial Championship Game took place March 9 on the hardwood at Quincy High School.

Regular season leader Everett Square Sporting Goods (11-0), coached by Bill Andrews, faced off against the underdog Flavin & Flavin (9-2), coached by Ed Cole and Tom Mayo in a closely contested battle.

The first half saw back and forth action with dynamic plays by Flavin & Flavin's guards Kyle Cabezas (11 points), Dominic Lapiste (10 points) and Matt Klier. Dominic and Kyle both dominated the scoring in the first half with a strong contribution from Adam Higgins. Flavin & Flavin missed the presence of their starting center Brendan Cole who sustained an injury in an earlier playoff game as Everett Square Sporting Goods was doing some damage in the paint. Flavin & Flavin was up by eight at the half and never lost their lead despite the 12 points ESSG's Stephen Andrews poured in during the first half. Stephen scored a total of 28 game high points.

The second half started with a tight defense by both teams as F&F's Erik Mayo and Ben Fehan brought the crowd to its feet with their fearless efforts against ESSG. The superior play in the second half by Flavin & Flavin forwards began to take its toll. Led by Jayo Darosa (eight points), Ramy Chebbo (seven points), Melvin Gonzales (six points) and Robbie Hill (four points), the offensive rebounding and defensive play was too much for Everett Square Sporting Goods as Flavin & Flavin stifled any comeback hopes as Flavin & Flavin prevailed 46-38.

The final score reflected the intensity and desire of both teams and it was a fitting tribute to the passion Ron Smith, former Quincy Youth Basketball IAABO referee, had for the game.

QYH PW B2 Steams Into SSC Playoffs

Playing in front of a standing-room-only crowd, the QYH PW B2 won a hard fought road victory over the host Norwood Mustangs.

With an at-large playoff berth at stake, there was a heightened sense of urgency for both clubs last Saturday evening, and the Mustangs struck first for an early 1-0 lead. QYH regained its composure, as defenseman John Bell out-maneuvered two Mustang defenders and fed Sean O'Brien, whose wrist shot from the Norwood slot tied the game. With the relentless back checking of wingers Nick Brink and Eoin Varden, QYH goalie Ryan Graf settled in and was sensational as the Mustangs controlled the early play at Asiaf Arena.

During a skirmish for a loose puck in the QYH crease, which also dislodged the net, it appeared that the Mustangs had converted for the tying goal. Following a booth review huddle, the referees disallowed the Norwood "Gino", sending the spectators into frenzy. As play resumed and with the Mustangs caught in the middle of a line change, Chris Hussey chipped the puck up the boards to teammate Caiden Valleli, who scored a top-shelf goal giving QYH a 2-1 lead and quieting the spirited fans at the end of the first period.

Back on their heels during a Mustang power play at the beginning of the 2nd period, Graf and the QYH defensive tandem of Robbie McClelland and Neasa O'Donnell disrupted several Mustang scoring chances in the QYH zone. At equal strength and with a faceoff deep in the Norwood end, centerman O'Brien delivered a puck draw back to point man Bell, whose blast found the back of the Norwood goal for a pivotal 3-1 lead. As the 2nd period wound down, an errant Mustang pass produced a QYH three on one exchange for line-mates Caiden Valleli, Tahla Qasim and Joey Murphy, who roofed a sizzling wrist shot past the Mustang goalie for a commanding 4-1 QYH lead.

Though both teams traded goals in the third period, the QYH kids wore the Mustangs down and controlled much of the period. O'Brien notched his second goal of the game on a nice pass from Eric Sanders. With its inaugural season complete, the QYH PW B2 begins the first round of the South Shore Conference "RE" division playoffs next Sunday.

Quincy Runner Posts Personal Bests As Bentley Sophomore

Banner Year For Sarah Brennan

By JOE REARDON

Sarah Brennan wasn't unhappy with her freshman cross country and track seasons at Bentley College, but she hadn't seen the improvements she was hoping for in her rookie year at the collegiate level.

The 20-year-old sophomore knew she had to shake up her training and get physically and mentally stronger if she wanted to drop her times, especially on the track where she competed in the 5,000- and 3,000-meter run.

The Quincy resident was convinced the real work to prepare for her sophomore year would have to be done in the heat of the summer. Starting at 35-miles per week in late June, Brennan gradually increased her work load, running mile after mile along Wollaston Beach, through the quiet neighborhoods of Squantum and the winding roads in and around Marina Bay. Sundays were reserved for a 10-mile long run. By the end of the summer, Brennan had several 50-plus mile weeks under her belt and she felt stronger than she ever had.

The workouts were nothing like anything she had ever done during her running days at Notre Dame Academy in Hingham, where she competed in the mile and 2 mile off far less training.

"I had a really good summer and I stuck to my training plan," she said. "It was a lot compared to high school. I really focused on my mileage. I never had done that before. Increasing my mileage and sticking to that really helped me a lot. It really paid off."

Brennan headed to Bentley in the best shape of her life and determined to run better than her freshman year. The results were immediate.

Brennan was running more than a minute faster over courses she had raced her freshman year and finished a solid 45th in the NCAA Div. 2 East Regional Cross Country Championships at Stonehill College in November. Brennan also picked up All-Academic honors in the fall to cap off a stellar autumn.

As good as Brennan was in the fall, she was even better when the competition moved indoors for the winter

Racing in the 3,000 meters at the Tufts Cupid Challenge, Brennan pressed hard from the gun and obliterated her personal best by over a minute in 10:44.81. The time was not only her fastest ever, it moved her to No. 15 on Bentley' all-time list.

Brennan had only run the event once before. "I didn't run well in it last year so I feel like this is the first time I ran it and did pretty well," she said.

Tufts' meet proved to be a warm up for the best race of her collegiate career to date. Racing the 5,000 meters in the New England Indoor Track & Field Championships at Boston University, Brennan tucked herself in the middle of a huge pack and kicked hard to the finish for 16th in 18:32.53. The mark was a new best for Brennan by 28.5 seconds and made her the fifth fastest in school history. All told, Brennan took a whopping 90 seconds off her time during the winter season. She also sliced 11 seconds off her best in the mile with a 5:29. "I'm not really a miler, but I was happy with that," Brennan said.

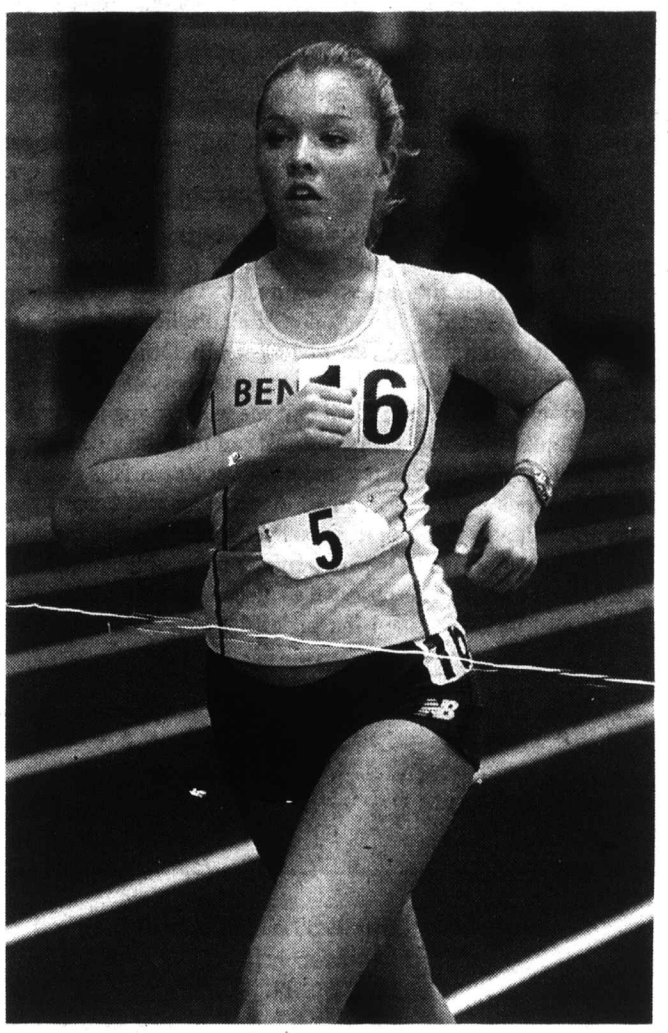

The 5,000 race played out perfectly for Brennan to run a fast time. "I had a lot of people I could run with in the beginning," she said. "They kept me on pace and at the end I still had a lot of energy and I was passing people. I don't have a really good kick so I try to run hard at the beginning and middle of the race and trying to make the best of what I have left at the end."

Brennan continued maintaining the 50-mile weeks through the winter and added tempo and interval workouts to her regiment to make sure she was race-ready when she stepped on the track.

On Tuesday nights the team would hit the speedy Reggie Lewis Center oval for the intense sessions of 800- and 1,000-meter repeats. "It was really helpful to be in that setting, not out on the roads," Brennan said. "And the tempo runs really help simulate a race. They really show you where you're at."

Brennan admitted the snow and cold made running outside tougher than it's been and she turned to the treadmill frequently. "It (weather) was pretty bad over winter break and I wound up running a lot on the treadmill," Brennan said. "I didn't want to have to deal with the ice and it was so cold out and none of the roads were clear. It wasn't worth it. I spent a lot of time on the treadmill, which actually wasn't too bad. It was boring, but it wasn't terrible."

Brennan is hoping to build on the momentum of the indoor season this spring, where she'll be running the 5,000 and the occasional 1,500. "It's nice to do something different, I won't be running the 5,000 in every meet," Brennan said. "I just want to stay healthy and have another good season. I really want to qualify for New Englands again."

QUINCY'S SARAH BRENNAN posted some personal bests running cross country and track for Bentley College during her sophomore year, including 10:44.81 in the 3,000-meter run and a time of 5:29 in the mile.

Like Olympian Jordan Hassay, the runner Brennan most admires, she has every intention of competing after college on the roads and track. "I could never see myself not running on a team," she said. "I love to compete."

And being a distance runner in Boston, it's hard not to have marathon aspirations. "After college I definitely want to do it," Brennan said. "I want to train for it and run it competitively."

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

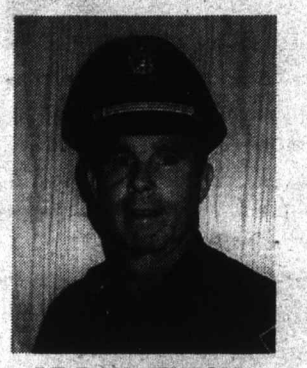

On Friday, March 7, 2014, at approximately 5:57 p.m., Officers David Zupkofska and Melanie Reeves were dispatched to Elm and Washington Streets regarding a motor vehicle accident. The female caller told the Dispatcher that she was the operator of the car and that she may have driven over a man's foot.

As the units responded along with Fallon ambulance, the Dispatcher informed the Officers that the pedestrian told the operator not to call the Police and that the pedestrian could be intoxicated. As the Officers arrived on scene, they found a male lying on the sidewalk yelling and cursing. When asked by Officer Zupkofska if he was okay, the male replied, "F%^& you – I'm going home." The Officer then asked the male if he had been hit by a car and the male said with slurred speech, "I ran into the side of a car and the tire ran over my foot." He then continued with his tirade of swearing.

The Officers detected a strong odor of alcoholic beverage and peppermint mouth wash on the male's breath. Officer Zupkofska interviewed the female who identified herself as the caller and driver of the car. She said that she was driving north on Washington Street "when this guy just ran into the side of my car." While EMT's treated the male, Officer Zupkofska examined the caller's vehicle and noted that the car was coated with dirt and salt and that on the passenger side rear door began a smudge that ran along the rear quarter panel. There was no damage to the area. The physical evidence confirmed that the accounts of the driver and the pedestrian were accurate, that the male pedestrian walked into the car.

The male continued to be belligerent and refused to cooperate.

Officer Reeves found a Charlie Card (bus pass) on the male, which identified him. Ambulance EMT's tried to persuade the male to go to the hospital so his foot could be checked and at first he agreed.

LT. DAN MINTON

As the EMT's prepared the stretcher, the male grew hostile again and refused to go to the hospital, screaming at everyone that he was going home and to leave "me the f%^& alone –I'm just going to walk to Weymouth." Officer Reeves asked him where he lived and he said he lived in a tent in the woods. The male kept refusing requests to get on the stretcher, so left without any viable options, the intoxicated male was placed in handcuffs for protective custody.

Once the handcuffs were on, the male then agreed to go to the hospital to have his foot checked. (Better food – better bed) He was un-cuffed and buckled onto an ambulance stretcher. Once he was placed into the rear of the ambulance, the male again became belligerent and threatened Officer Zupkofska by saying he would fight him if he didn't have a badge and gun on. The male then unbuckled the safety buckles that were keeping him secure on the stretcher and attempted to get out of the ambulance. The male was taken out of the ambulance and then placed back into protective custody.

At that time he was again placed into handcuffs and Officer Reeves transported him into the station for booking. Due to the male's hostile and violent behavior, a closer medical examination of the male was not possible, however, he did not appear to have suffered any serious injuries. An accident report was filed, however, no action was taken against the driver. Nice Work!

ON THE PHONE OR IN THE MAIL: Beware of any contact with a company called, "Nationwide Debt Direct" from Frisco, Texas. This company has been mass mailing out perforated envelopes with "RE: CREDIT CARD SETTLEMENT" on the front. This is misleading because it implies that the recipient is going to make money from a court decision and there may be a check inside. This particular company, rated an "F" by the Better Business Bureau for complaints, is not accredited by them. The company attempts to help you reduce your credit card debt but it will be at a significant cost to you and a profit for them.

Interior Decorating Tips

Email Your Question To Barbara Graceffa

What is the best height to hang art on a wall? Should I place the nail in line with the top molding of the window or door jam? Rose

BARBARA GRACEFFA

Dear Rose,

You're not the only one who struggles with this question. Most people typically choose one of two options when hanging art – and both of them are incorrect! Many people hang pictures, wall hangings, mirrors, wreathes, and other types of wall art too high; given your question about the window or door molding, I'm guessing you fall into that category. Others do not give it any thought and might use an existing nail in the wall.

You should hang art at eye level. But because not everyone in the family is the same height, here's a tried and true formula. Hang the picture so that the center of it is 60 inches from the floor. For example, say you have a painting that is 24"H x 36"W. Get a metal tape measure and measure 60 inches from the floor and place a piece of painter's tape or make a small pencil or chalk mark on the wall. Because the painting is 24 inches high, the top of the painting will be 12 inches (half of 24) above that mark on the wall.

If you are hanging artwork above a mantle or fireplace, you may need to adjust the measurements. You would typically hang the bottom of the piece 2-6 inches above the top of the mantle or fireplace.

Here's one final tip. Rub some chalk on the back of the sawtooth hanger(s) [or other picture hardware] or at the very top of the wire you use to hang the piece of artwork. Then hold the artwork up (following the guidelines above) and gently rub the chalk against the wall so it leaves a mark. Now you'll know exactly where to place your nail.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Putting yourself in someone else's shoes isn't easy for you. But if you do it, you'll gain a better perspective of what you need to do to achieve your goals. Be open to new ideas.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) There are still some problems you might have to deal with before moving on to your next project. It's a good idea to accept help from those who share your objectives.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It's time to recognize the difference between those who are truly concerned for you and those who simply plan to use your good nature to their advantage. New ideas become increasingly attractive.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Depending on a promise made becoming a promise kept could be more than a mite unwise at this time. It's best to proceed on your own rather than wait for aid that might never arrive.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) A recently revitalized relationship might not be quite what the Big Cat expected. But give yourself more time to deal with the changes. A little flexibility can go a long way. Good luck.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A major change could prompt more adjustments. Some of them might be difficult to deal with at first. But hang in there, and before you know it, you'll be coasting to your next goal.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your sense of justice prompts you to speak out against an unfair situation, even if you seem to be the only one who feels that way. But you soon learn that many others agree with you.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Creating a fuss is not usually your style. But that doesn't mean you should tolerate an ill-mannered attitude. Speak up for yourself, and you'll earn the respect of others.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) You might have a few loose ends to tie up before you can stamp your project as complete. But once that's done, you might want to celebrate with someone special in your life.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Disappointment darkens the Goat's mood. But close friends rally to pull you through with words of encouragement. Use their confidence in you to rebuild your own self-esteem.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An upcoming decision might be more difficult with inaccurate information. Best to recheck the data you have at hand right now to be sure it won't mislead you later.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) An offer you previously turned down might no longer be available. But if you do some checking around, you could find something else that would suit you just fine.
BORN THIS WEEK: You believe in helping those who cannot help themselves. Although it embarrasses you, the fact is, people like you and tell you so.

OBITUARIES

Elizabeth J. Grady, 95

A memorial service for Elizabeth "Betty" Jean (McDermott) Grady, 95, of Quincy and formerly Boston will be held Saturday at 10 a.m. in Most Blessed Sacrament Church of Holy Trinity Parish, Quincy.

Mrs. Grady died March 4 at Kindred Tower Hill in Canton after a long illness.

ELIZABETH J. GRADY

A longtime resident of Quincy, she formerly lived at River Bay and 125 Granite St. Mrs. Grady graduated from Boston school system. She was an avid reader and also enjoyed her vacations to Dennis on Cape Cod every year. She worked for the City of Quincy for over 20 years, both in the Quincy Planning Dept. and the Quincy School Athletic Dept., retiring in 1983.

Loving mother of John E. Grady of Milton, Thomas A. Grady and his wife Yvette (Shaw) of Houghs Neck, and the late Robert Grady. Loving grandmother of Kristin Grady of Quincy and Michael Andrade of Rockland.

Funeral arrangements were made by Deware Funeral Home, 576 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to DOVE, Inc., P.O. Box 690267, Quincy, MA 02269.

Charles J. Kennedy

A funeral Mass for Charles J. "Charlie" Kennedy of Quincy and formerly South Boston was celebrated March 14 at St. Vincent de Paul Church, South Boston.

Mr. Kennedy died March 11.

He was born and raised in South Boston, where he lived most of his life until moving to Quincy seven years ago. He was a mechanic at Greyhound Bus lines for 25 years before retiring in 1990. Mr. Kennedy and his late wife Barbara were inseparable before her death in October 2013; he was absolutely lost without her over these past months.

He loved spending time with family and friends, who were the cornerstone of his life. He enjoyed playing cards, fishing and traveling. He will be missed by all who had the pleasure to have known him.

Beloved husband of the late Barbara A. (Carlson) Kennedy. Loving father of Maureen Lynch and her late husband Robert, John Kennedy and his partner Colin Jackson, all of Quincy, and the late Charles "Chucky" Kennedy. Good friend of Cathy Willey and her late husband Francis Willey. Also survived by his buddy "Jack."

CHARLES J. KENNEDY

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Interment was at Cedar Grove Cemetery, Dorchester.

Memorial donations may be made to Boston Medical Center, 840 Harrison Ave., Boston, MA 02118.

Frederick W. Young, 48

Visiting hours for Frederick W. "Fred" Young, 48, a lifelong Quincy resident were held March 13 at Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, 1 Independence Ave., Quincy.

Mr. Young died peacefully March 7 at Tufts Medical Center, Boston.

He was born, raised and educated in Quincy. Mr. Young was employed in the construction industry for the Robert S. Young Company and had also worked as a former union laborer. He was a late member of Local #4 Heavy Equipment Operators.

Mr. Young enjoyed fishing and spending time with his grandson, Damien.

Devoted father of Alicia N. Young of Quincy and Daniel R. Young of Raynham. Loving grandfather of Damien. Beloved son of Robert S. Young of Quincy and the late Helen M. (Smith) Mackiewicz. Brother of Robert S. Young, Jr. of Quincy, Laureen S. Corey and her husband George of Braintree, and Kelly A. Young of Braintree. Grandson of Laura M. Smith of Quincy. Also survived by many aunts, uncles, nieces, nephews, and cousins.

Sacred Heart Basketball Marking 25 Years

Among the rules put in place by Jaehnig is equal playing time for all those playing in the in-house league.

Sacred Heart Basketball also sponsors and runs its own "March Madness Tournament" with teams from all over the state and as far away as New York for a three-day tournament. It has become a favorite for both adults and youngsters.

At the beginning of each season, Jaehnig runs a "coaching clinic" to ensure that volunteer coaches are in tune with the proper drills and fundamentals. There are also skill sessions throughout the year put on by Jaehnig and graduated program participants who starred in high school or college.

Other features of the Sacred Heart Basketball Program:

• All-Star Weekend and Championship Saturday for the kids in the program.

• Every boy and girl is offered the opportunity to come back and coach and/or mentor a younger group of kids.

• Every boy and girl is offered refereeing and score-keeping opportunities.

• Fundamentals and good sportsmanship are taught and focused on throughout the program at every age group.

• Almost every Quincy, North Quincy team member on all levels played in the Sacred Heart Program.

• Many others from other area high schools have participated including B.C. High, Catholic Memorial, Archbishop Williams, Thayer Academy, Fontbonne and Notre Dame Academy.

• Hundreds of program alumni have gone on to successful college careers. One former player – Jake O'Brien – later played professional ball in the Ukraine.

"One of Mark's principals has always been to give the youth a fun, safe, challenging environment to play and grow," said Mike Healy. "Get them off the streets and keep them off of them. . . Regardless of what level a child is at, fundamentals and respect are always taught and stressed. It is this insistence of structure and fundamentals that Mark drives into all his players and coaches that truly makes the program so exceptional."

'The House I Live In' Free Screening Friday

Antique Appraisal Show At Faith Lutheran Church

An Antique Appraisal Show by Kelley Auctions will be held Saturday, May 3 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. at Faith Lutheran Church, 201 Granite St., Quincy.

Professional appraisers will be available to determine the value of coins, stamps, dolls, collectibles, art, lamps, attic "treasures" and more. Bring photographs of larger items, not the actual piece.

Appraisal fees are $10 for one item; $15 for two items and $25 for three items.

Appraisals done by USPAP Certified Appraisals; verbal quotes only.

First come, first served; no firearms.

Food and drinks available for purchase during the event.

All proceeds will help defray the cost of the Church's 125th Anniversary Celebration, including the removal of the Church Cornerstone and unveiling of the Time Capsule.

United Methodist Church Collecting Shoes For Marathon Memorial

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St. will honor the Boston Marathon Monday, April 21 with a memorial of used running shoes.

"Part of the memorial will consist of running shoes, honoring all Marathon runners past and present," said Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, church pastor. With that goal in mind, the church has been collecting running shoes ever since last year's Marathon.

"If people would like to actively participate in the Memorial by contributing shoes, that would be wonderful," Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden said. "After the Memorial closes, the running shoes will be donated to Re-Run Shoes, a charity based in Amherst, which sends shoes to persons in need throughout the world."

Weather permitting, the running shoes will be placed on the Church's Beale Street front lawn. If it rains, the memorial will be held inside.

The memorial will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. At 2:49 p.m., the time of last year's Marathon bombings, Memorial Bells will be tolled.

Those interested in donating new or gently used running shoes should call t617-773-3319 before dropping of the shoes.

Lydon Funeral Home Renews Lofty Oaks Affiliation

Lydon Funeral Home of Quincy has renewed its affiliation with Lofty Oaks Association, a New Hampshire organization dedicated to reforestation and conservation efforts in Quincy.

The firm arranges to have a tree planted for each service that they perform to provide a living memorial in honor of the deceased and to renew the forest life of Massachusetts.

Memorial trees are planted in the spring and fall.

After each service, close family members and friends are informed that the memorial tree has been arranged for by Michelle Lydon of the Lydon Funeral Home.

When the tree has been planted, the designated people will receive a certificate of planting suitable for framing and keeping in the family's history.

City Cuts Ties With Street-Works, Mayor Envisions Smaller Projects

Multiple Downtown Developers Seen

By SCOTT JACKSON

After cutting ties with Street-Works, the city expects to move forward on downtown redevelopment with the project broken out into smaller pieces.

Enrollment Up In K-Elementary Grades

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Quincy Public Schools have experienced an increase in enrollment in the kindergarten and elementary grade levels over the past six years, resulting in overcrowding according to a presentation given by School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro.

As of 2013, roughly 9,500 students are enrolled in all schools with 212 attending as out-of-district students.

For a student to be considered out-of-district they must attend a school not in their designated neighborhood or must be a special education student transferring from a private school.

Last year, roughly 140 applications were submitted on behalf of students wishing to attend schools not within their districts. Half of those applications were approved.

Tilted Kilt Appeal Denied

By SCOTT JACKSON

A Superior Court judge has denied the appeal filed by business owners attempting to open a Tilted Kilt restaurant in Quincy Center, City Clerk Joseph Shea said Thursday.

The city's Board of License Commissioners originally granted a liquor license to Waxy's Quincy LLC in July 2012, which would have allowed them to open the Scottish-themed sports bar at 227 Parkingway, formerly home to an Outback Steakhouse. But a second hearing was called after Shea became aware that St. John the Baptist Church was not properly notified.

At that second hearing, held in August 2012, 17 residents spoke against the proposed restaurant. Another 400 signed a petition urging the board to reject the license, citing the attire worn by waitresses in the chain's restaurants. The board voted 3-2 against the proposal that night. Police Chief Paul Keenan, Inspectional Services Director Jay Duca, and Shea, the board's commissioner, all voted against the license while Fire Chief Joseph Barron and Health Commissioner Drew Scheele voted for it.

Waxy's Quincy LLC appealed that decision to the state's Alcoholic Beverage Control Commission (ABCC). The ABCC ruled in favor of the city last April and that decision was subsequently appealed to Superior Court.

Shea said Judge Kenneth Fishman ruled in favor of the ABCC and Quincy's licensing board, finding that the city was within its rights to reject the liquor license and acted prudently.

"You like to be upheld," Shea said. "I felt our decision was fair in the first place."

Residents Question Plans For Marijuana Dispensary

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy residents had the opportunity to meet the company planning to open a medical marijuana dispensary in West Quincy for the first time during a public meeting.

Nearly 40 residents and city officials attended the meeting, held at the Sterling Middle School on March 19 and organized by Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci. At the two-hour long meeting, John "Jack" Hudson, CEO of Ermont, Inc., said the non-profit was committed to being a good citizen and neighbor.

"Ermont is committed to being a responsible citizen and a good corporate citizen. We'll also be responsible for being a great neighbor," Hudson told the crowd. "Ermont will be accountable, accessible and always open and available for people in Quincy…you guys will need to be comfortable with the fact that this business might be in Quincy."

Earlier this year, Ermont received provisional approval from the state Department of Public Health (DPH) to open a dispensary at 216 Ricciuti Drive, a 35,000 square foot building currently leased to Clifford's Flowers, Smith & Nephew, and KPR, Inc. Ermont still needs to receive approval from Quincy's Zoning Board of Appeals and Planning Board before the DPH grants final approval for the company to open the dispensary.

"Right now as we stand, this is not a done deal," Palmucci said. "What we have here is the beginning – this is the very first step any dispensary has to take in any municipality across the commonwealth to permitting locally."

Residents attending the meeting had a chance to question Ermont about its plans. Several inquired about Diane J. and John J. Czarkowski, who were named in Ermont's application as the dispensary general manager and site manager, respectively, though neither was on the organization's board of directors. According to a report published earlier this month, the couple – who were also associated with another applicant that received a provisional license from the Mass. DPH – had operated a dispensary in Boulder, Colo., between 2009 and 2012 when their license was revoked by local officials for several violations.

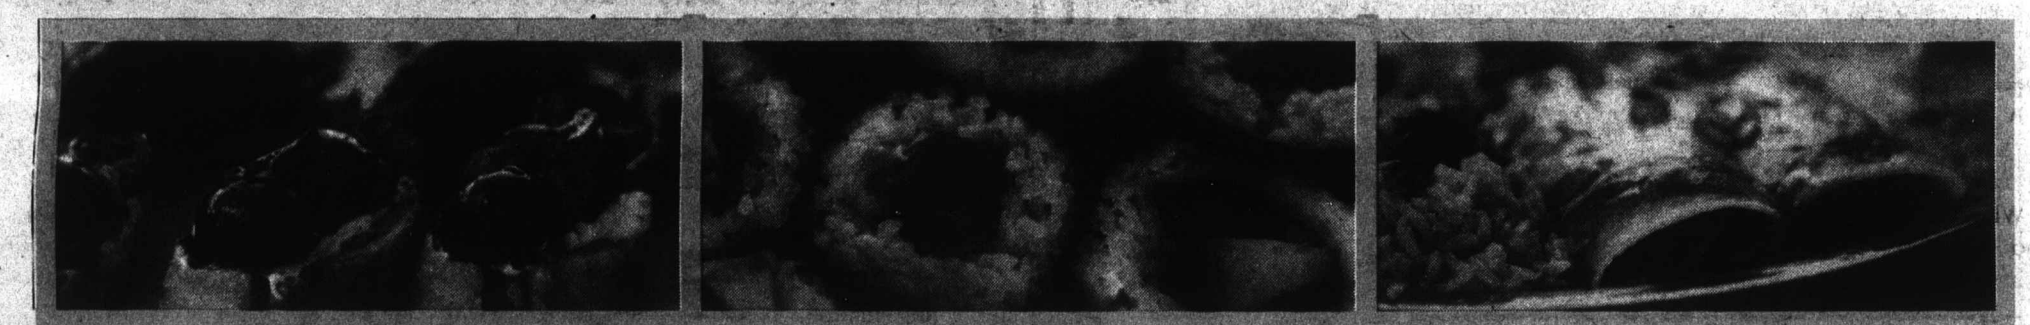

Valerio Romano, an attorney representing the company, explained that Ermont hired a consulting firm to check all possible employees, including the Czarkowskis. The couple was also screened by the Mass. DPH and the state of Connecticut, where they were awarded a license to cultivate. Hudson said he severed ties with the Czarkowskis upon learning their license in Boulder was revoked.

"Once we became aware that there were things questionable about this couple we immediately severed ties. One thing I pride my work on is anyone who is going to be on the team needs to have an untarnished background," Hudson said.

"They were very qualified individuals from the backgrounds and discus-

Lynch Finds Situation In Crimea 'Tense'

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Cong. Stephen F. Lynch has returned from Ukraine following a congressional delegation mission that took him to Kiev and Israel to discuss political, economic, and security issues affecting both regions.

In a phone interview with The Quincy Sun from his Washington, D.C. office Tuesday, Lynch described the current political situation in Crimea as "tense," due to its annexation by Russia.

An increase in troops on Russia's border has prompted Ukrainian officials to send mobilization notices to all young men warning of a possible draft.

"It's a sign that things are becoming serious," Lynch said after noting that no military support was requested of the U.S.

The bipartisan delegation is led by Senator Kelly Ayotte and Senator Joe Donnelly; both members of the Senate Armed Services Committee. Lynch joins the delegation as a senior member of the House Subcommittee on National Security.

A proposal to offer Ukraine a $1 billion loan is still before Congress.

While in Kiev, Lynch, who co-chairs the House Task Force on Terrorism and Proliferation Financing, met with officials to assess international efforts to recover funds that were misappropriated by Ukrainian government officials prior to the ousting of former leader Viktor Yanukovych. As of now, 30 Ukrainian officials have been charged with absconding with the funds following an investigation by the U.S. Treasury.

He plans on returning shortly after elections are conducted on May 25th.

Prior to his visit to Ukraine, he met with Israeli President Shimon Peres and Israeli Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu to discuss negotiations for a possible peace deal between Israel and Palestine. Lynch said Secretary of State John Kerry's efforts to draw up a peace agreement between both countries was recognized as a "huge effort" by both nations although no official progress was made.

"They gave him a great amount of credit," he said.

Meetings and visits with Palestinian leaders in Ramallah in the West Bank focused on recent rocket strikes on the Gaza border most likely perpetrated by Hamas.

SOUTH QUINCY BOCCE CLUB received a City Council commendation March 17th in recognition of the club's 80 years in the community. The club has 175 regular and honorary members and sponsors a darts team and golf tournaments in addition to a bocce league. Quincy Sun Photo/Scott Jackson

South Quincy Bocce Club Marks 80th Year

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council presented a commendation to the South Quincy Bocce Club in recognition of the organization's 80th anniversary.

Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci presented the commendation to club members during the council's most recent meeting on March 17. Palmucci said it was appropriate to recognize them on that day – St. Patrick's Day – because the 175-member strong club is about celebrating Italian heritage, just as St. Patrick's Day is about celebrating Irish heritage.

"I do think it's fitting that we recognize the South Quincy Bocce Club this evening on St. Patrick's Day – a day in which we celebrate foreign heritage. That's what these folks do. That's what the South Quincy Bocce Club has been for 80 years. That's quite impressive and it speaks volumes about this city and what we are," Palmucci said.

"We are a city of immigrants, from Irish and Italians, who built this city to the current immigrants we welcome from China and other parts of the world. We continue to welcome these immigrants. We continue to embrace the idea of an immigrant community.

"It's fitting we recognize these gentlemen in the bocce club as they have taken great pride in continuing these Italian traditions in the instilment of new members over the course of 80 years of their existence."

Steve Maze, the bocce club's president and a 34-year member, accepted the award on behalf of the organization, which sponsors a darts team and golf tournaments, in addition to a bocce league.

"I just want to thank Brian and the council for the commendation. I've been a member for 34 years. When I joined, the guys who were the old timers were my age now, so I'm one of the old timers," Maze said.

"I'd just like to say thank you for the commendation and we'd like to be around for 80 more years," Maze added.

Ask the GEMOLOGIST
BY JEFFREY M. BERTMAN
GRADUATE GEMOLOGIST

IT ALL DEPENDS ON HOW YOU LOOK AT IT

Anyone desiring to get the most value out of a gemstone purchase should look into those gemstones that display the optical phenomenon known as "pleochroism." This term refers to the gemstone's ability to appear to have different colors (or depth of color), contingent on the angle at which it is viewed. This property owes its presence to doubly refractive crystals in the gemstone's structure that cause differing absorption of light rays. The optical effect can vary from strong to weak, depending on the gemstone. A good example of a strongly pleochroic gemstone is andalusite, which displays shades of yellow, olive, and reddish brown, based upon on the orientation of the crystal. As for kyanite, it displays different depths of blue.

Pleochroism is absent in gems with no crystal structure, opaque stones, colorless stones and most gems that are translucent rather than transparent. Tanzanite is a strongly pleochroic gem but because tanzanite is always heated to produce the familiar violet blue color, you will rarely see its pleochroism. Diamonds are not pleochric, because they are a singly refractive gemstone. # Maralin Manning Honored With Henry Bosworth Award named in honor of the newspaper's late founder, Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. in 2010 – recognizes outstanding community service.

Quincy Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth presented the award on behalf of the Quincy Sun and the Bosworth family to Manning, the former director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association and recently retired director of business development for the Quincy Chamber of Commerce. Manning's contributions to the city extend far beyond the business community, Bosworth said, in presenting the handsome plaque with a clock to the guest of honor.

"Maralin Manning arrived on the Quincy scene some 22 years ago and quickly became involved in all facets of the community. She has flown under the radar while helping numerous groups serve Quincy and all of its citizens. This award is so appropriate because Maralin and my dad were very close friends," Bosworth said.

"Maralin embodies community involvement, community activism and community spirit."

The inscription on the plaque reads:

"The Henry W. Bosworth, Jr. Memorial Citizenship Award presented by The Quincy Sun to Maralin A. Manning: Dedicated Business Advocate, Selfless Community Volunteer, Devoted Friend to All."

Manning also received a gold sun-shaped lapel pin from Paul Moody, immediate past recipient of the Henry award.

"The pin is shaped like a sun – as in Quincy Sun. With this pin, you will always shine in Quincy," Bosworth added.

Manning called the award recognition very special because "Henry Bosworth was my best buddy and my strongest mentor . . . I never, ever thought I would be a recipient of this particular award."

A longtime resident of Milton, she has savored the time that she has spent in Quincy including her service as the director of the Quincy Center Business and Professional Association. She also recalled quite fondly all of the activities that she got involved in as the director, including the annual sidewalk sale and the Christmas Parade.

"When I look back at all the years I've spent in Quincy, for so many of them I slept in Milton and lived in Quincy. I didn't ever think I would be a citizen, nor did I think I would be running up and down Hancock Street in 100-degree temperatures plugging in electricity to cars and anchoring down tents.

"But I then I didn't think I'd be riding down Hancock Street in 10-degree temperatures, either, dressed up as the Hunchback of Notre Dame, an Oompa Loompa, or last year as a gigantic chipmunk," she said, alluding to the costumes she wore for the city's holiday activities.

But most importantly, Manning is most proud of her family. Her children and grandchildren were among the guests attending the reception.

"What I really have to say is of all of my accomplishments, my children and grandchildren are my greatest accomplishment. And thank you all for coming."

Besides The Quincy Sun's Henry Bosworth Award, Manning also received a number of other honors and tributes. They included citations and commendations from elected officials from the federal, state, county and city government as well as warm words of praise and recognition from those she has worked closely with over the years in a myriad of non-profit organizations.

Christine Koch, representing her husband, Mayor Thomas Koch, presented a Mayoral Proclamation to Manning. The mayor was unable to attend the reception due to a prior commitment.

The proclamation described Manning as a strong, consistent advocate on behalf of the Quincy business community. It also proclaimed Thursday, March 20, 2014 as Maralin Manning Day in Quincy.

It also stated:

"Whereas Maralin has successfully managed and operated hundreds of community events for the betterment of the residents and businesses in the city of Quincy. Whereas Maralin has dedicated countless hours of service to Maria Droste, the Salvation Army, and many other organizations.

"Whereas Maralin – proud mother of six children, 17 grandchildren. Whereas Maralin has mentored hundreds of individuals in their quest to open small businesses in and further their entrepreneurial ideas.

"Whereas all those who've come to know Maralin have benefited from her business acumen, tenacious spirit, and kind and keen fashion sense.

"Now therefore, I, Thomas Koch, Mayor of Quincy, do hereby extend my sincerest congratulations to you on the occasion of receiving this award, proclaimed Thursday, March 20, 2014, to be Maralin Manning Day in the city of Quincy on behalf of the citizens of Quincy. Congratulations and best wishes on your future endeavors."

Bob Fowkes, district director for Cong. Stephen Lynch, presented a framed Congressional Record detailing Manning's community service. Lynch, who is traveling overseas to the Ukraine and Israel with other members of the state's Congressional delegation, was unable to attend the reception.

"I don't know Maralin well, but it just struck me, having been involved in so many areas of service and seeing all your children and your grandchildren, the power of your example will resonate for generations.

"I think most people who are in this business hope to live their lives in such a way your good work will endure long after we're gone. You certainly have hit that mark, Maralin," Fowkes added.

State Auditor Suzanne Bump gave Manning, a longtime friend, a citation in recognition of her award selection.

"I am very much an admirer of Maralin, having known her for many, many years through her support and advocacy for the business community, but also through her support and advocacy of social services program, particularly Maria Droste."

Bump also quoted Margaret Thatcher, the former British prime minister, who once said: "If you want something said, give it to a man; if you want something done, give it to a woman."

"That seems particularly apt for Maralin. She personally got me involved in supporting the Maria Droste

THE HISTORY CHANNEL.

• On April 8, 563 B.C., Buddhists celebrate the commemoration of the birth of Gautama Buddha, the founder of Buddhism. Gautama Buddha was born as Prince Siddhartha, son of the king of the Sakya kingdom, located on the borders of present-day Nepal and India.

• On April 7, 1776, Navy Capt. John Barry, commander of the American warship Lexington, makes the first American naval capture of a British vessel when he takes command of the British warship HMS Edward off the coast of Virginia.

• On April 12, 1914, the Mark Strand Theater opens to the public in New York City. The Strand was the first of the "dream palaces." It seated 3,000 people and boasted a second-floor balcony.

• On April 9, 1939, Easter Sunday, more than 75,000 people come to the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C., to hear black contralto Marian Anderson give a free concert. Anderson had been scheduled to sing at Washington's Constitution Hall, but the Daughters of the American Revolution denied her the right to perform because of her race.

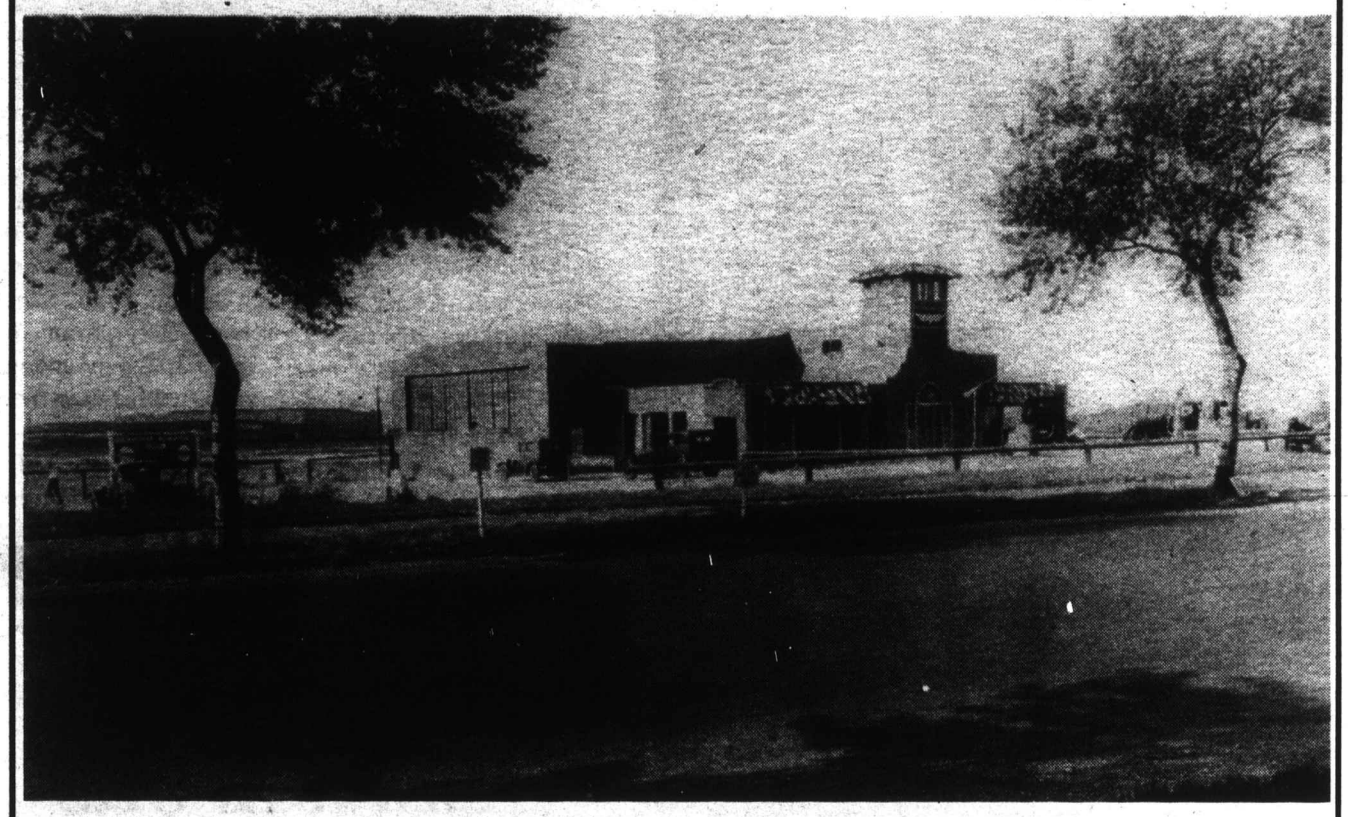

• On April 11, 1951, President Harry Truman relieves Gen. Douglas MacArthur of command of the U.S. forces in Korea. The firing set off an uproar among the American public, but Truman remained committed to keeping the conflict in Korea limited. Eventually the American people understood that MacArthur's policies might have led to a massively expanded war in Asia.

• On April 10, 1963, the USS Thresher, an atomic submarine, sinks in the Atlantic Ocean, killing the entire crew when it unexpectedly plunged to the sea floor 300 miles off the coast of New England. A subsequent investigation revealed that a leak in a silver-brazed joint in the engine room had caused a short circuit.

• On April 13, 1970, disaster strikes 200,000 miles from Earth when oxygen tank No. 2 blows up on Apollo 13, the third manned lunar landing mission. The crippled spacecraft continued to the moon, circled it, and began a long journey back to Earth, parachuting safely into the Pacific Ocean on April 17.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1930's postcard view of the Dennison Airport that was on the corner of East Squantum Street and Quincy Shore Drive in Atlantic. The corner is now the home of a Dunkin' Donuts shop. Harold Dennison, a Quincy architect and builder, built these buildings and a few dirt runways on filled marshland leased from the U.S. government in 1927. One of his financial partners was Amelia Earhart who reportedly learned to fly here. In its heyday, the airport hosted a variety of activities including weekly air shows, private flying clubs, and scene passenger flights for the public. In 1941, the government took back the property to expand the adjacent Squantum Naval Air Station. Housing was later built here to serve Squantum and South Weymouth naval personnel. Today, most of the land behind the donut shop is home to The Moorings at Squantum Gardens, a 223-unit rental community for seniors. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Sale of Historic Site Proposed

Historic Moswetusset Hummock in Squantum from where Massachusetts got its name, would be transferred to the North Quincy Knights of Columbus Council under a bill now pending in the State Legislature.

The K of C Council is seeking a site for a new home, which would have recreation and meeting facilities for outside groups.

The bill sponsored by Representatives Amelio Della Chiesa, Joseph E. Brett, James R. McIntyre and Charles L. Shea, is now before the Ways and Means committee.

The proposal met strong opposition from the Quincy Board of Managers of Historic Places and City Historian William Churchill Edwards who feel that a historic shrine should not be transferred by the MDC to any private organization. (Editors Note: It didn't happen.)

Honor William Tynge With Adams Green Plaque

Quincy is the gateway to the South Shore and a gateway needs a beautiful front door. The Adams Green is that front door. I am grateful to the Koch Administration who has the fortitude to complete where others have only speculated.

There have been numerous conversations and suggestions as to what the park will look like and what will be placed on the site. All have been positive ideas in my opinion.

However, there needs to be an explanation concerning how this gem of property became to be the seat of City Government. I would like to suggest a plaque inscribed with the name of the generous gentlemen who bequeathed this property to the town of "Old Braintree" now known as Quincy.

The settlement of "Old Braintree" started in 1634. Typically early Massachusetts towns consisted of a meeting house, school house, burial grounds and a training field for the local militia.

In 1640, a prominent citizen and large land owner acquired a large tract of land from William Coddington. His name was William Tynge - he was the second commander of the local militia company. He gave this land to the citizens for the purpose of drilling and training in the art of military exercise.

In conclusion, I recommend to the planning board and city officials a plaque honoring his generous gift to the city to be placed in the park.

Suggests New Committee To Address Flood Map Isssue

Editor's note: A copy of the following letter was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication.

Mayor Koch:

Thank you for stepping up and taking the lead on the issues with the new flood plain map. As a resident of Houghs Neck, I am deeply concerned as to the financial impact it will have on myself and my neighbors as well as others who live near Quincy's coast, particularly those on a fixed income and families that already struggle and may stand to lose their homes as a result of the high cost of flood insurance.

In that light, I would like to offer my opinion and ask that you consider forming a committee that would involve all stakeholders such as city engineers, public safety officials as well as emergency management. I would ask that you also include citizens of areas affected. The cost per year for this insurance as you know is prohibitive for a lot of people and the effect on property values would be painful.

In closing, as a citizen I would like to volunteer for any such committee that may be formed to address these concerns.

Wants Traffic Safety Camera At Wollaston Intersection

A couple of weeks ago, I was at the intersection of Beach and Hancock Streets in Wollaston Center.

When the light turned red, I started to cross. Just at that time, a car turned right out of Beach Street in front of me. Although there were "No Turn on Right" signs at three adjoining corners, there was no such sign prohibiting that turn at the opposite corner.

I so informed Constituent Services. A few hours later a no turn sign was placed. A few days ago, I was at that same corner of the intersection. When the light turned red, I again prepared to cross the intersection.

Then, despite a new sign, a vehicle turned right in front of me followed by another vehicle. If an intersection requires a traffic safety camera, this is the one.

The Olde Kids Swing Band At Kennedy Center May 9

The Olde Kids Swing Band will be at the Kennedy Center (Quincy Council on Aging) on Friday, May 9 from 1 to 3 p.m.

The Olde Kids, always popular at the Kennedy Center, is a dance band in the style of the big bands of the 30's and 40's. The Olde Kids performed at the Kennedy Center several times last year to a standing-room only crowd.

The big band recreates the glamour and romance of an era that lasted ten years. Retired and semi-retired musicians are part of a resurgence of interests in live, glamorous and romantic music. The band was formed in 1991 and consists of six saxes, four trombones, four trumpets, four on rhythm and a vocalist.

The Olde Kids have been called a living museum. Their library of music of another era will have you dancing, humming or tapping your feet.

Tickets are required for this event and can be purchased at the Kennedy Center (Quincy Council on Aging.) Suggested donation is $6. For more information, call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1506.

Ruth Harcovitz To Sing At Ward 4 Center April 16

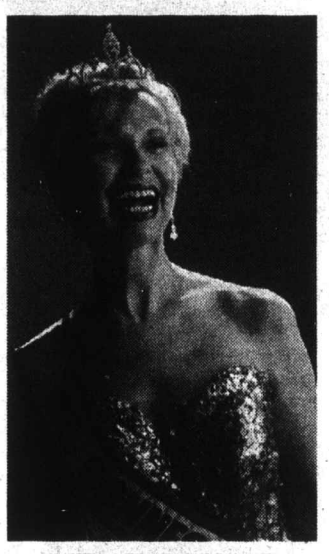

The Ward 4 Senior Club and the Quincy Arts Council announce the appearance of singing star Ruth Harcovitz on Wednesday, April 16 at 1:30 p.m. at the Community Center, 100 Brooks Ave.

Harcovitz, who is Ms. Connecticut 2013 and Ms. Vermont 2014, will present her program, "Songs of the Roaring Twenties, The Gatsby Era."

Last April, this classically-trained soprano became Ms. Connecticut at a ceremony in Enfield, CT. In October she competed in the Ms. Senior America Pageant in Atlantic City. She sang the Strauss waltz, "The Voices of Spring" and was voted a Top Ten Finalist.

Harcovitz will return to compete in the National Pageant in October of this year as Ms. Vermont.

A New England Conservatory alumna, her credentials include graduate study at the Vienna Academy of Music. Upon her return to the States, Harcovitz has sung with the Santa Fe Opera, Artists Internationale, and Opera New England. She has also been featured as soloist with choral societies and orchestras.

RUTH HARCOVITZ

The program is supported in part by a grant from the Quincy Arts Council, a local agency of the Massachusetts Cultural Council, a state agency.

SAL Hosts Annual St. Patrick's Day Dinner

The Sons of the American Legion Squadron 294 of the Cyril P. Morrisette Post recently held their annual St. Patrick's Day corned beef dinner at the Post.

About 100 people attended the dinner. Proceeds from the event benefit the Flags for Veterans Island located in Fort Square, corner of School and Pleasant Streets.

"The dinner was a huge success," said SAL Commander Paul Moody. "We had food, there was music by Q with Paul Quintiliani, and a visit by Irish Step Dancers from the Forbes School of Dance.

"I would like to thank all those who helped this event. Chief Cook Sal Eltoury, Senior Vice Commander Jim Gill, Chaplain Joe McDonald, Junior Vice Noel DiBona, Historian Guy Ferris, Post Commander Bob Lewis, and 2nd Vice Kathy Lewis, and Tracey for putting the centerpieces together."

Moody also expressed special thanks to his wife, Karen, for all her support.

"I would also like to thank the post for the suppor they have given the Squadron and the veterans," he added.

ISS Volunteers Assembling Over 350 Easter Baskets

For Children Of Food Pantry Clients

The Easter holiday is still a month away but a food pantry in Quincy is already knee-deep in colorful eggs and plastic grass. Volunteers at Interfaith Social Services are working hard to make sure that all of the young children served by their food pantry receive Easter Baskets in time for the holiday.

Since January volunteers have been gathering candy, toys and other donated goods to be assembled in Easter Baskets for local children whose families rely on food assistance from the pantry. Volunteers assembled over 350 baskets on a recent Saturday.

"The response from the community was incredible," said Interfaith's executive director Rick Doane. "Financial donations and hundreds of pounds of candy were donated. We try to focus on serving healthful food and produce to the community through our food pantry, but we make an exception to that healthy food rule at this time of year. These Baskets are just one of the ways that we have found to brighten the lives of children living in some very difficult situations. It is so gratifying to serve a small portion of joy alongside the food we serve to our clients every day."

Interfaith's food pantry is one of the largest emergency food programs in Greater Boston. In addition to their counseling center, homelessness prevention program, thrift shop, and other programs, they operate various other seasonal initiatives to brighten the lives of their clients. Interfaith distributes gently used costumes at Halloween time, Christmas gifts each December, backpacks full of school supplies in August as well as turkeys and trimmings for a meal every Thanksgiving.

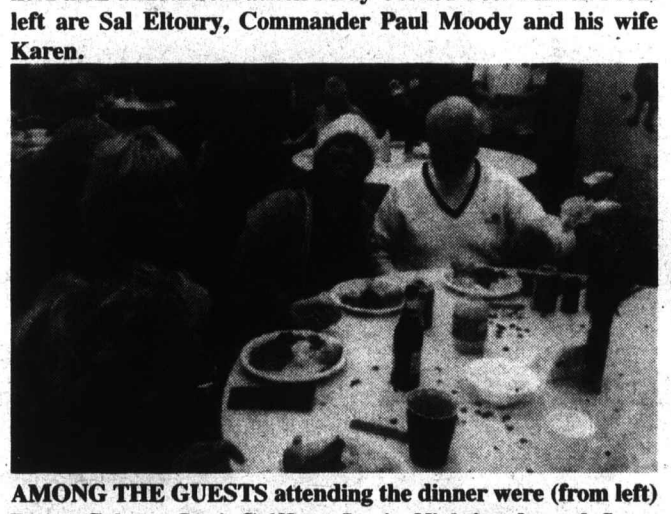

"The best part of the Easter Baskets and other seasonal initiatives is seeing how involved all of the kids are," said Doane whose own children were helping to assemble baskets. "To have seven year-olds and four year-olds doing something charitable for other kids is very heart warming. We are grateful for all of our Easter Bunny helpers."

One of the largest donors to this year's Easter Basket assembly was National Amusements Theaters at Legacy Place in Dedham. They donated over 900 boxes of candy.

With hundreds of individuals volunteering alongside civic, religious and corporate groups Interfaith Social Services has become one of the South Shore's most popular centers for volunteerism and community engagement. Anyone interested in volunteering at Interfaith Social Services is encouraged to contact volunteer coordinator Paula Daniels at 617-773-6203 ext. 28 or via email pdaniels@interfaith-socialservices.org.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Rita's Apple, Cranberry Crisp

Today's recipe is for a delicious apple, cranberry crisp –a dessert we had at my daughter Rita's house after a scrumptious dinner of roast chicken with all the trimmings.

She prepared it while the chicken was cooking, and it was a great cooking lesson.

APPLE, CRANBERRY CRISP

3 Granny Smith apples
2 Fuji or Gala apples
2 pears (any kind)
½ cup fresh cranberries
¾ cup sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon nutmeg
¼ cup flour

TOPPING

1 cup of flour
1 ½ cups oats
½ cup granulated sugar
¾ cup brown sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1 ½ sticks unsalted butter

Cut the apples in slices. In a large bowl place the apples, and sprinkle one tablespoon lemon juice over the apples. Add the cranberries, sugar, spices and the flour and mix until well blended.

For the topping, add the sugar and the butter and mix. Ad all other ingredients and beat with for one minute.

Place the apples in a baking pan, and then sprinkle the topping over the apples. Bake in a 350 –degree oven for 1 hour and 15 minutes. We had it with vanilla ice cream – so delicious.

Clam-Walnut Dip & Tortellini Greek Salad

If you are ever looking for a different appetizer to serve guests before dinner, here are two of the tastiest and easy to make.

One is for a clam dip, and the other a Greek salad.

CLAM - NUT DIP

1 pound ricotta cheese
6 ounces of chopped walnuts
1 can minced clams (or fresh equivalent)

Mix the ricotta cheese gently with a fork. Add the nuts and clams (without juice). Mix together until well blended, and refrigerate until ready to serve. Any kind of chips or crackers will do.

SPINACH TORTELLINI SALAD

1 ½ bags fresh spinach (I used baby spinach)
1 pound spinach tortellini
1 jar red roasted peppers (cut in strips)
1 can sliced black olives
½ pound Feta cheese
Greek salad dressing

Cook the tortellini according to directions. In a large bowl, place the spinach, the cooled tortellini, peppers and olives. When ready to serve add the dressing and the Feta cheese. The colors are so pretty and the salad delicious.

President's Cafe At Quincy High School Earns Rave Review From Diners

By BONNE A. PETIT

It was a cold blustery day, the week of Valentine's day, the landscape blanketed by a fresh falling of snow when we dined out at The President's Cafe at Quincy High School.

The crowd was light for a Wednesday and we were seated by an attentive and friendly host immediately. There were festive holiday decorations to brighten our table while our server introduced himself and described the specials that day while presenting us with a bread basket and butter. The rolls had a soft texture and tasted fresh from that day, although not warmed, but with extra butter pats for those who like to indulge, again, the butter would have been nice served in a softer texture, but was nice to nibble as we perused the menu.

As a starter, I ordered the soup of the day, creamy tomato basil with a swirl of creme freche while my companion ordered the cobb salad. The soup had a smooth texture, was tangy and the right amount of sweetness which contrasted nicely with the tartness of the creme freche. The cobb salad was a wonderful blend of fresh baby spinach leaves, an egg - boiled to perfection and sliced, topped with bacon and almond slivers and punctuated with pickled onions that offered a beautiful contrasting presentation of dark red/purple.

For an entree, I ordered the Italian cold cut panini with pesto. It arrived still warm, the bread crispy, the meat melted into thick slices of provolone cheese with a hearty helping of ham, mortadella, and salami with crispy iceburg lettuce and a thick fresh tomato round. My companion ordered the crispy chicken breast with rice pilaf. It arrived with the rice served in a mold surrounded by generous portions of chicken which was rolled in a nicely seasoned panko mixture and baked to perfection, the crispy coating revealed tender and juicy chicken meat. The rice was firm and not sticky, with bits of carrots and celery adding a nice color presentation.

For dessert the ricotta cheese filled cannoli was topped with sweet sprinkles in valentine red and pink, a dollop of fresh whipped cream on a chocolate drizzled plate. The cannoli shell was crisp and flaky, the mixture creamy and just the right amount of sweetness. The tea was served in an attractive miniature teapot but the water was tepid, which made it difficult to steep a good strong brew.

This was our second visit to The Cafe and it did not disappoint. For all of our indulgence, we left after paying a bill totalling less than $20 plus a generous tip for our enthusiastic server. On a scale of 1-10, we gave The Presidents' Cafe a solid 9+, and extra points for it's cleanliness, light and airy decor, and friendly service.

War Of 1812, Ocean Heritage Programs At Historical Society

Quincy Historical Society is collaborating with two of its longest-standing partners to present events in the next two weeks.

Adams National Historic Park and the Historical Society are working together to present a series of events that will commemorate the bicentennial of the culminating year of the War of 1812. 1814 was the year in which New England most felt the brunt of the war, the year of the burning of Washington, D.C. and the siege of Fort McHenry, and of course, the year of the peace negotiations led by John Quincy Adams. The initial presentation - set for tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. at the Adams Academy, is an overview of the war, by Robert Allison, chairperson of the history department at Suffolk University and a perennial favorite with Quincy audiences.

The Historical Society is also collaborating with the Quincy Park Department's Environmental Treasures Program as the program focuses in April on our ocean heritage. On Thursday, April 3, at 7 p.m., the Society will host Matthew Lawrence, maritime archeologist at Stellwagen Bank, for a program on the Bank's shipwrecks

TV Studio Production Workshop Starts April 7

Quincy Access Television will be offering a Studio Production Workshop beginning with "Orientation to Community Television" on Monday, April 7th.

Orientation starts at 6 p.m.

Classes will be held at the studio located at 88 Washington St. adjacent to the Thomas Crane Library.

Studio Production workshop begins on Thursday April 10th and each consecutive Thursday through June 12th. Classes begin at 6:30 p.m.

Those who have taken classes previously and would like to refreshen their skills are welcome to join the class.

Derrick Stone, a senior from Quincy, has recently been named to the Honor Roll for the winter term at The Loomis Chaffee School, a college preparatory school for grades 9-12 located in Windsor, CT.

Rwandan Genocide Lecture Topic April 1

Eastern Nazarene College will mark the 20th anniversary of the Rwandan genocide by presenting a free lecture on the topic Tuesday, April 1 at 7 p.m. in the Shrader Hall auditorium located on the college's main campus in Quincy.

The public is invited to attend.

Presented by Dr. Timothy Longman – author of the book Christianity and Genocide in Rwanda (Cambridge University Press) – the lecture will examine the place of the Christian churches in Rwanda before, during, and after the genocide, a state-sponsored massacre that claimed the lives of some 800,000 Rwandans while the international community failed to intervene.

The director of the Boston University African Studies Center, Longman served as director of the field office of Human Rights Watch in Rwanda from 1995 to 1996. He subsequently served as a consultant for HRW, the International Center for Transitional Justice, USAID and the State Department in Rwanda, Burundi and Congo.

Prior to joining Boston University, he taught at the National University of Rwanda, the University of Witwatersrand in South Africa and for 12 years at Vassar College.

Hunt Only Name On Ballot Tuesday

Voters In One Quincy Precinct To Help Elect New State Rep.

By SCOTT JACKSON

Voters in one North Quincy precinct will elect a new state representative next Tuesday, April 1.

The special election in Ward 3, Precinct 3 will fill the vacant 13th Suffolk District seat. The district includes the one Quincy precinct in the Montclair neighborhood of North Quincy and neighborhoods in Boston's Dorchester section, including Neponset and Savin Hill.

The lone candidate on the ballot is Democrat Daniel J. Hunt of 31 Pierce Ave., Boston. Hunt topped a five-man field in last month's Democratic primary.

An attorney, Hunt attended Boston College and Suffolk University Law School. He has spent the last three years working for the state Department of Conservation and Recreation and previously worked as a project analyst for the Massachusetts School Building Authority and as a staffer on the Legislature's committee on economic development and emerging technologies.

Before beginning his career in government, Hunt worked as a summer laborer on the Central Artery/Tunnel Project, commonly known as the Big Dig.

Polls open Tuesday at 7 a.m. and will remain open to 8 p.m. Voting will take place at the Montclair School, 8 Belmont St.

In the March 4 primary, Hunt garnered 2,337 of the 4,702 votes cast in Boston and Quincy. Community activist John L. O'Toole of Boston's Savin Hill neighborhood finished a distant second with 1,082 total votes. Liam Curran finished in third with 892 votes, Paul L. McCann, Jr., garnered 233 votes, and Gene I. Gorman was last in the five-candidate field with 141 votes. There were 12 write-ins cast. All candidates were Boston residents.

Hunt also prevailed in Quincy, taking 88 of 142 votes. O'Toole was second 30 followed by Curran with 12, Gorman with four, and McCann with three. There were a total of 1,676 registered voters in the precinct, including 631 Democrats, 158 Republicans, and 878 unenrolled. Democrats and unenrolled voters were eligible to vote in the Democratic primary.

No Republicans ran in the special election. In Boston, 165 write-in ballots were cast for the GOP nomination. Three write-ins were cast in Quincy – one for Hunt and two for John Adams – as well as two blank ballots.

The winner of Tuesday's special election will be up for re-election to a full term in November.

The seat was left vacant when Martin J. Walsh resigned earlier this year after being elected Boston's mayor last November. Walsh, a Democrat, had held that seat since winning a special election in 1997. Hunt's brother, James Hunt III, ran against Walsh in that special election and finished runner-up. Hunt's father, James Hunt, Jr., made an unsuccessful bid for the same seat in 1981.

The special election – including the primary and Tuesday's special election – is expected to cost Quincy a combined $24,000, according to City Clerk Joseph Shea. He noted the state will pay the cost of printing ballots, and was hopeful it would pay the tab for other costs incurred by the city such as police details, election workers, and advertising.

Senior Driving Topic April 11

Michele Ellicks, Community Outreach Coordinator for the Registry of Motor Vehicles will be at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy on Friday, April 11th at 10 a.m. for a presentation on issues that face senior drivers, the Commonwealths rules of the road, recent changes that have taken place at the RMV, as well as the warning signs of unsafe driving.

She will also share the requirements to apply for a handicap placard or plate as well as a Massachusetts identification card; the most recent research concerning mature drivers and alternative forms of transportation.

Registration is required for this event as space is limited.

To register, call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1506.

April Events, Programs For Children At Crane Public Library

By JULIE RINES

The following events and programs for children are scheduled during April at the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Spring Storytimes

Weekday storytimes for children ages 4 months through 5 years old begin on Friday, March 28th. The library offers several programs by age. Stop by the library or check our website thomascranelibrary.org for details.

Children's Video Game Afternoon

Join us on Friday, April 4th any time between 2:30 and 4:30 p.m. in the large meeting room at the Main Library to get a sneak peek at our new children's video games. We'll have an XBox 360 and a Wii set up for playing some of the new games. Recommended for ages 4-12. The collection also includes games for the Playstation 3, WiiU and DS/3DS. Drop by for just a few minutes or the full two hours and take a turn then take a look at the full list of games we'll have available.

All of the games in the children's collection are rated E and E10+. Games will be available to borrow after the program, you may have to place holds for the most popular games.

Saturday Fun for Little Ones with Madeleine Hall

On Saturday, April 5th at 10 a.m. join Madeleine Hall for a very special program for infants, toddlers and preschoolers. Combining original and well known favorites this musical performance will have everyone up and moving to the music. This program is for children ages 0-4 accompanied by an adult. No registration is required. This program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Storytime with Cheryl

Join storyteller Cheryl Dunford for a family storytime full of stories, songs, rhymes and more for children ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult on Saturday, April 12th at 10 a.m. at the Main Library. No registration required. Sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

through hands-on activities and will understand why we continue our voyages of discovery to the Moon and beyond. In the workshop, participants will use simple materials to quickly learn their way around the skies. The children will also get the opportunity to see what happens when asteroids strike the earth or other planets, and will uncover how stars can actually produce raw material that is the basis of life on earth. Space...The Final Frontier is an exciting way to explore why, for centuries, people have been fascinated by the stars and planets.

This one-hour workshop for ages 6-10 will be held on Saturday, April 19th at 10:30 a.m. at the Main Library. Registration is required. Beginning Monday, April 7th, register online, in person or by calling 617-376-2411.

Due to space limitations, this program is limited to Quincy residents.

Book Clubs for Kids

Do you like to read? Would you like to talk to others about books? Then you will like our book discussion groups. Join us each month to discuss all kinds of books.

The Night Owls Book Club for children in grades 3 and 4 will meet on Monday, April 14th at 7 p.m.

We will be discussing Doll Bones by Holly Black one of this year's Newbery Honor books. Please stop by the Main Library children's room to pick up a copy of the book to read before the meeting.

The Phoenix Book Club for children in grades 5-8 meets on the second Tuesday of each month to discuss a variety of books. The Club will meet on Tuesday, April 8th at 7 p.m. at the Main Library.

Poetry comes in many forms, from short rhyming sonnets to epic page-long stories with not a rhyme to be found. What makes a poem a poem? Why might an author choose to tell a story in verse instead of prose? What is the difference between a villanelle and a sestina (and what are they in the first place)?

We'll be reading a variety of poetry for this month, choosing from books of shorter poems and full novels written in verse, then talking about what we've read and looking at some poetic forms you might not have heard of, like the yadu and pantoum. Stop by the library to pick up a book of poetry we have many to choose from.

Don't worry if you're new to the group. We're always happy to meet new readers.

Childrens' Movie: Frozen

Wednesday, April 23rd at 10 a.m. join us for a showing of the newest Disney movie, Frozen.

After the kingdom of Arendelle is cast into eternal winter by the powerful Snow Queen, Elsa, her sister fearless optimist Anna teams up with rough-hewn mountaineer Kristoff in an epic journey, encountering Everest-like conditions, and a hilarious snowman named Olaf in a race to find Anna's sister Elsa, and break the icy spell.

Rated: PG Runtime 108 minutes

Whales in Your Backyard

On Thursday, April 24th from 10 a.m. to noon discover "Whales in your Backyard" hosted by Anne-Marie Runfola, volunteer program coordinator at Stellwagen Bank National Marine Sanctuary and the sanctuary ambassador team.

- Tour a life size North Atlantic right whale calf
- Eat like a whale
- Try on a blubber glove
- Fish for Sanctuary facts
- Make whale origami and more

Geared for children ages 4-12 and their families. Come for the full event or stop by for just a few minutes to try an activity or listen to a story.

QPS Students Taking New Standardized Test

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Quincy students are test-driving a new standardized test, leaving school committee members worried that the additional burden could place more stress on kids already taking the MCAS or preparing for the SAT.

The Partnership for Assessment of Readiness for College and Careers exam (PARCC) is still in its infancy and is being administered in 18 states. This "next generation" of standardized test is largely computer-based and assesses students' analytical writing and thinking skills. The math portion of the exam will focus less on solving equations and more on applying number skills to real-world problems.

The state Board of Elementary and Secondary Education (BESE) voted to administer PARCC on a preliminary basis to randomly selected classrooms and students in grades 3-11 in November of 2013. Based on this year's results and analysis of operational data, the BESE will determine whether PARCC is a better assessment tool than MCAS for the 2016 school year.

Students will be required to take the PARCC twice yearly if the BESE decides to phase out MCAS testing; once mid-year and once at the end of the school year.

Testing has begun this spring in Quincy and other randomly selected Massachusetts schools. Tenth grade students are still required to take the MCAS in order to meet graduation requirements at this time, raising concerns that doubling up on such time consuming exams could drain creativity from the classroom.

"It seems like we're doing a lot more testing than we are teaching," said school committee member Paul Bregoli. "We're having a generation of kids who are learning to be good test takers and I'm afraid of the creativity that leaves the classroom; that teachable moment is there but we're so driven to make sure our kids are prepared for these tests that those are going out the window."

"It's a trend I'm not real pleased about. As a former educator I hope the pendulum swings back at some point," he said.

While Executive Director of Career and Technical Education and Instructional Technology Keith Segalla was confident that enough computers were available for all students taking the preliminary exam this year, he couldn't say with certainty that would be the case if PARCC testing were to eventually take place in all classrooms.

Nine schools will be participating in the computer-based exam while three will take the pencil and paper version.

"Why does Massachusetts need a new assessment? Well, we have new standards. In 2010 the Board of Education here in Massachusetts adopted the Common Core state standards and then we took those Common Core standards and we incorporated them into the 2011 [English language arts] and math curriculum frameworks," said Senior Curriculum Coordinator for Grades K-8 Madeline Roy. "These frameworks are currently in our district, in our classrooms, in our teachers' bags. They're online... this is our first full year of implementation."

The results of the test will not be made known to the school district or students this year.

"This is more testing and parents may not really be thrilled with the idea that they're taking the PARCC as well as the MCAS," said Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro. "It can be cumbersome and very stressful not only to our kids but to our parents and I'll also say stressful to our teachers." He said scheduling the school day around both tests would be challenging for principals.

While the district was given the opportunity to opt-out of administering the test, DeCristofaro didn't want to risk clashing with the Department of Education. "There certainly may be ramifications in regards to funding and eventually that gets down to our students...I didn't think we had a choice," he said.

As with the MCAS, students on an Individualized Education Program (IEP) can take additional time to complete the exam. IEP students may be granted an extra hour to finish each two-hour block of the test. The same consideration can be extended to English language learners (ELL). These accommodations are being called "accessibility features." Other accessibility features include a spell-checker, access to a calculator and a word-to-word bilingual dictionary, and the clarification of directions in their native language for ELL students.

Parents were notified of the exam by letter, however DeCristofaro said only one phone call had been placed to his office by a concerned parent.

"Our teachers and principals are dealing with this unknown and most importantly our students will be," DeCristofaro said.

Hancock Park Nursing Center Awarded 5-Star Quality Rating

Hancock Park Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Quincy recently received a 5-Star Quality Rating from the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS).

Nursing homes receiving five stars, the highest quality rating, were evaluated in each of the following three areas: health inspections, staffing and quality measures.

Hancock Park, a Welch Healthcare & Retirement Group nursing center was listed in the 2014 edition of Best Nursing Homes, published by U.S. News & World Report. The rating system was created to help consumers, their families, and caregivers compare nursing homes more easily.

For the fourth year in a row, Hancock Park, a 142-bed rehabilitation and skilled nursing center, scored a 5-star rating.

"For more than 65 years the Welch Family has focused on providing the highest standard of care to seniors," says Richard M. Welch, president, Welch Healthcare and Retirement Group.

Several significant milestones are being celebrated this year, including the opening of the company's first nursing centers, John Scott House in Braintree and Colonial in Weymouth. They will, respectively celebrate 65 and 50 years of nursing excellence. Additionally the company's first assisted living community Allerton House at Central Park in Weymouth will celebrate its 15th Anniversary.

"We credit the 5-Star Award to the Welch Group's experienced and compassionate staff – many of whom are 20 and 30-year employees,"Welch added.

Other Welch Group nursing centers receiving a 5-Star rating include: Bay Path Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Duxbury, Colonial Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Weymouth, Duxbury House Alzheimer's Care Center in Duxbury, Harbor House Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Hingham and John Scott House Rehabilitation & Nursing Center in Braintree. # Residents Question Plans For Marijuana Dispensary

sions we had with them. But once we found that out – it was not disclosed, if it had been disclosed they would have never been on the application – once we became aware of it we severed ties."

Residents also raised concerns about security of the new building. Romano said the approach from Ricciuti Drive and the perimeter of the building will be monitored by security cameras. Ermont, he added, is willing to have those cameras feed directly into Quincy Police Department headquarters so the department could monitor them around the clock. The company is also working to bring Norwood-based Lan-Tel Communications onboard as a security contractor. As part of that agreement, Lan-Tel would have a security guard posted to the building during business hours.

Concern was also raised about the proximity of the proposed dispensary to soccer and baseball fields on Ricciuti Drive. Dr. Denise Valenti, a neighborhood resident, noted that Ermont's application to the DPH doesn't mention those fields in the application.

"At first glance I felt the location was appropriate. I still feel that but I have major reservations," Valenti said. "I didn't see anywhere where it talked about there is a soccer field or there is a baseball park that is right across the street."

Quincy's zoning ordinance mandates that dispensaries be at least 1,500 feet from any school, childcare establishment, business with an alcohol license, or other dispensaries. But it doesn't mention parks. Romano said that state regulations require dispensaries to be 500 feet from a park, as the crow flies, and the proposed location is 643 feet from the field.

Another Ricciuti drive resident asked about the impact the new dispensary will have on traffic and how many customers they plan to serve.

Hudson said the company expects to serve 2,000 customers during Ermont's first year of operation and a traffic study will need to be undertaken as part of the site plan review process with the Planning Board. The company will also provide a shuttle to and from MBTA stops to make it so pedestrians won't have to walk up Ricciuti Drive.

Present at last week's meeting was former Mayor William Phelan. He said Quincy would not have had to deal with a dispensary if city officials hadn't supported it – Ermont's application included letters of support from both Koch and Health Commissioner Drew Scheele.

"A good part of the question is would this be here but for elected officials supporting it?" Phelan said. "I know the first phase of the process was to seek community support."

Koch, in an interview Tuesday, said officials knew Quincy would be viewed as a potential location for a dispensary because of its size. His administration, he explained, worked with Palmucci and the council on regulations restricting where dispensaries could be located.

"We knew we had to stay ahead of the curve on this," Koch said. "We're trying to make the best of the situation."

He also noted that residents in the city could receive permission from the DPH to grow their own medical marijuana if a dispensary doesn't open in Quincy.

"That's problematic from an enforcement standpoint," the mayor said.

Street-Works Out; Koch Envisions Redevelopment In Smaller Pieces

plan what's next for Quincy Center now that Street-Works' $1.6 billion project is no more, and the mayor expects several smaller projects to take place instead of one large project.

"We sent the letter yesterday to Street-Works, which essentially severs ties with them. We are now working internally with our downtown team on the next step," Koch said Tuesday in a phone interview. "I don't think we'll see one big project. We're looking to break this out into parts."

Prior to terminating the agreement with Street-Works, the mayor placed them on notice on Feb. 18, giving them 30 days to come into compliance. The developer was placed in default after missing a November deadline to file a certificate of consistency (COC) and other construction documents detailing plans for the area of Quincy Center near Parkingway and Ross Way.

Koch said developers began reaching out to the city after he placed Street-Works on notice in February. He didn't speak to those developers during the 30-day cure period, but will begin those discussions now that the agreement with Street-Works has been terminated.

"Over the last two, three, four weeks we'd been hearing from folks I couldn't talk to because we were in the cure period," Koch said. "We're looking to set up meetings with a number of folks now."

The mayor said he couldn't publicly identify the developers at this point in the process, but explained that there were six or seven who contacted the city, all with ties to Greater Boston.

While the land disposition agreement with Street-Works has ended, the mayor said new ones could be needed for future Quincy Center projects if developers plan to build on the city-owned Hancock Parking Area or Ross Garage. The latter, Koch added, may be divided into two separate parcels for development meaning up to three new LDAs could be necessary. Terms that were included in the 2011 LDA may not be included in any future ones, but that has yet to be decided.

"Some of what was in the LDA might not be in a new one," Koch said.

The termination of the LDA also means the city will be responsible for paying a $30 million district improvement financing (DIF) bond authorized by the City Council in 2007 prior to Koch taking office when William Phelan was mayor. That bond was used to finance the purchase of land needed for construction of the Walter J. Hannon Parkway and other downtown expenses.

As part of the LDA, Street-Works agreed to take on that debt. With the agreement terminated, the bond will now be paid by new tax revenue generated in the Quincy Center DIF district, just as it would have before the developer agreed to pay it off.

The termination of the LDA also means the city will no longer be obligated to pay for $289 million worth or public improvements in the downtown. Under the LDA, those improvements would have been paid for using new tax revenue generated by Street-Works' project.

Under terms of the LDA, the mayor said the city will be able to keep $850,000 in deposits Street-Works made when they paid for earlier extensions of deadlines. The city will also be able to retain funds in an escrow account the city used to pay downtown consultants, though Koch said that fund has been nearly exhausted. Street-Works is also obligated to turn over any plans or design documents they drafted to the city.

The termination of the LDA comes less than a year after Street-Works broke ground on the Merchants Row project in the 1400 block of Hancock Street. Construction on site halted in the fall, and the Quincy Mutual Group and Twining Properties are now taking the lead on that project. The 2011 LDA does not apply to that development because it's being done on privately owned property.

Despite the end of the agreement, Koch said work on the Adams Green project will begin this spring. The first phase of work includes roadway improvements along a number of major arteries in Quincy Center. That work is scheduled to last into next year, with utility work following. Construction of the Adams Green park itself, which will link City Hall and the United First Parish Church, should take place in 2016, according to the mayor.

Following the mayor's voiding of the LDA, Councillor Doug Gutro said it is important to understand what went wrong with Street-Works before moving forward on future development.

"We need to know precisely what went wrong before we enter any agreement moving forward – those who don't know history are bound to repeat it," said Gutro, who chairs the City Council's downtown committee.

"It was a landmark agreement with extraordinary vision that no longer exists. The council and the people of Quincy need to get to the bottom of why all of this does not exist anymore."

Gutro is planning to host several downtown committee meetings this spring, the first of which is scheduled for Monday, March 31, at 6:30 p.m. That meeting will cover both Adams Green and legal and financial aspects related to the agreement with Street-Works.

"We've got to start the discussion by understanding where things stand. Next Monday will be the beginning of the discussion on the next chapter of in the redevelopment of the downtown," Gutro said. "Part of that will be making sure we have no legal vulnerability and understanding the financial commitment made by the city."

Enrollment Up In Kindergarten, Elementary Classes

School Committee Considers Tightening Open Enrollment

Special education out-of-district enrollment this year totals 138 students.

"Lincoln Hancock and Marshall were the two that had big numbers and we're keeping an eye on those two," said DeCristofaro. "They're pretty full schools and you can see that they have also a good amount that are going to jump to the next level at Quincy Point and at Sterling."

He attributed the increase to the implementation of the full-day kindergarten program which was launched eight years ago and slightly lax open enrollment policies. "Open enrollment…needs to be a little bit tighter," he said. "As you look at some of the enrollments you'll see some of the schools where folks go out of district and they're getting a little full so we're going to keep an eye on open enrollment and requirements for open enrollment."

An estimated 80 to 100 additional students will enroll in Quincy schools during the 2014 to 2015 school year. Estimates were determined using statistics compiled between 2006 and 2013.

Additionally, the Beechwood Knoll, Lincoln Hancock, Merrymount, and Wollaston elementary schools are "pretty full' according to school committee member and head of the facilities and security subcommittee David McCarthy.

"The other schools are very healthy also but these [schools] kind of stood out," he said. "Historically, the class size has been very good but we think we can do a little bit better but it's been very good."

The Broad Meadows, Sterling, and Point Webster middle schools have not reached maximum enrollment, however Atlantic is full despite a 30-student drop this year.

Both North Quincy and Quincy High numbers remain steady following a bump that took place several years ago. "There was the big fluctuation in probably 2009 and 2010 as Quincy came online where 300 or so students came back to Quincy High from North Quincy High," said McCarthy. "Class size between the 9th and the 12th grades is okay but the Superintendent indicated that he really wants to take a hard look at that in regards to the budget coming up."

DeCristofaro is hoping that a new Sterling Middle School building will help alleviate crowding issues at Lincoln Hancock.

"I think that when we look at Lincoln Hancock in particular, we have a school that's rapidly approaching overcrowding and we also have on the other side an opportunity when we look at Sterling Middle School and decide, in a configuration sense and a grade-span sense, what we should do there in regards to alleviate the overcrowding at Lincoln Hancock," he said.

The idea of using pods, which are freestanding, detached structures containing several classrooms located on school property, was touched upon by committee member Noel DiBona as a way to resolve overcrowding issues but he called the idea "premature."

Committee member Anne Mahoney said many of the elementary schools were "bulging" and that evenly distributing the student population throughout the entire school district was necessary. "We're looking at six schools that are bulging and we have to look at these schools and determine how are we going to move forward."

She called the approach "holistic."

"I think what we have to do going forward a little bit better is maybe project future enrollment so that we can be prepared for changes like this, because we're talking about a new school… and that's a big change we're talking about."

A school building committee has been put together to discuss not only plans for a new Sterling Middle School but strategies for alleviating classroom overcrowding; an issue DeCristofaro called "a challenge."

"If you looked at the [kindergarten through first grade] numbers in particular at Lincoln Hancock you'll find that there's a tremendous bump…and I think that's going to continue and that's what really this is based upon," he said. "I think we're not remiss in any way and we're ahead of the game and we're doing what we need to do."

"We have different sites different enrollments, different neighborhoods; everything isn't as cookie cutter as we'd like."

Quincy's Aimee Tinney Heading To Ghana In June

Helping Poor In Africa Teen's Trip Of A Lifetime

By JOE REARDON

Aimee Tinney first learned of the depressing, poverty-stricken plight of the Ghanaian people in the seventh grade. A library was being built in the African country and students were encouraged to bring used books into school so they could be sent to the ravaged land, half a world away.

The desire to help the people of Ghana, particularly the children, has been with the 16-year-old Quincy High junior for years and this summer she'll be traveling to the dark continent for two weeks through the Global Leadership Adventures (GLA) Program. From June 17-30, Tinney will be building toilets, making bricks to be used for the construction of homes, teaching at a primary school as well as immersing herself in the country's culture.

Tinney, who is president of the junior class at Quincy High, originally looked at several programs that involved traveling to Africa and found GLA to be the "most secure and the safest." Before she was accepted, Tinney had to write an essay explaining her motivation for spending two weeks of her summer in Africa. Once she started writing the thoughts came flowing out.

"When I want something, I chase it," Tinney wrote in her essay. "My dream since seventh grade has been to travel to Africa. It may seem random and I agree it really is random, however, for some reason it speaks to me. Sitting here writing this I have this happiness bursting inside because I have finally convinced my parents I am ready for this trip and and it is almost in my future. I hope to help others gain something like a new friend or a new person they can have can have trust in. I hope I can help a child gain happiness just by helping to put a smile on their face. This is a chance of a lifetime that I cannot pass up."

Tinney, an honor roll student, has been granted permission to take her finals early so she can be on the 12-hour flight out of John F. Kennedy International Airport on June 17.

Tinney has been flipping through the booklet that describes just what she'll be doing during her trip as well as some of the Do's and Dont's when it comes to Ghanaian culture and daily living. Tinney's wardrobe will include skirts, which the women wear reguarly and she'll learn traditional dances of the West Africa country.

The fact that she is a lefty could present problems in the early going for Tinney with one of the cultural norms. "One of the big things is we can't use our left hand to wave or eat - and I'm a lefty," she said with a laugh. "It's considered disrespectful. And we can't sit with our legs crossed either. That's disrespectful too.

"I think the dancing is going to be interesting. It seems so hard and technical. I've watched videos of it and it looks very fast."

Tinney will be staying with a host family close to the village and her diet will be made up mainly of rice and beans. To drink, there is bottled water and she'll be discouraged from taking water from anyone else to avoid getting sick. Cameras are allowed, but Tinney must first ask someone for permission if she wants to take a picture of them and photographing military and government buildings is not allowed.

Tinney is hoping to meet a girl close to her age who she can keep in contact with when she returns home. She expects seeing children living in such harsh conditions will at times be overwhelming, but bringing their life a little happiness, if only for a short time, is important to her. "I'm an understanding and calm person," Tinney said. "What I really want to do is put a smile on their faces if I can. I adore kids so it may be a little hard seeing what they go through. I've always loved kids.

"I already want to go again. I'm thinking next summer I'll go again."

Tinney is hoping to put together some type of fundraiser at Quincy High for the people of Ghana. She expects to get the project underway soon after she returns home. Tinney's sister, 18-year-old Cristina, is proud of her younger sibling and her desire to help those in need. "I'm excited for her, but I'll miss her," said Cristina. "It's a great experience and I know she'll enjoy it. I'd like to go sometime. I think it would be really exciting."

Aimee still needs to raise $2,000 by April 11 for the trip and is looking for donations to help reach her goal. Checks can be made out to Global Leadership Adventures. "This is a big cost for a big dream I am about to achieve," said Aimee.

Eastern Bank Donates $1,200 To Quincy After School Child Care

Quincy After School Child Care, Inc (QCARE) administrators recently visited Eastern Bank's Hancock Street Branch to express gratitude for a recent $1,200 donation to the QCARE Scholarship Fund.

QCARE presented a Certificate of Appreciation from the non-profit agency to Eastern Bank Branch Manager, Terry Bellotti-Palmieri.

"Eastern Bank's commitment to the community is something I am proud to be a part of. I am always thrilled when we can help to support great work and hard-working people," Bellotti-Palmieri said.

The Eastern Bank Charitable Foundation has supported the QCARE Scholarship Fund for three consecutive school years through the Community Grant program. "We are extremely grateful for the continued support provided by Eastern Bank for this important program", said QCARE Executive Director, Sarah Morrison. "These funds are used to help low-income families afford the cost of quality child care."

House Passes Flood Insurance Bill

House Majority Leader Ron Mariano (D-Quincy) joined his colleagues Representative Tackey Chan (D-Quincy) and Representative Bruce Ayers (D-Quincy) in the House of Representatives last week to unanimously pass legislation designed to alleviate the impact of new federal flood insurance rules on many of the state's coastal homeowners.

The legislation, which was filed in response to recent federally-mandated flood insurance increases, enacts various measures to protect homeowners and defend against potential economic consequences. The bill prohibits creditors from requiring individuals to purchase flood insurance that exceed their outstanding mortgage balance. Tying the amount of coverage to the outstanding balance rather than the replacement value of the home will lower premiums for those impacted by the change. Creditors are also banned from including a deductible of less than $5,000 and requiring coverage for contents of the home.

"This legislation helps protect Quincy and Weymouth homeowners and business owners who were unfairly facing unexpected, dramatic increases in their flood insurance rates. This bill will help Massachusetts residents stay in their homes," Mariano said.

The bill also requires banks to provide a notice to homeowners explaining that coverage tied to the current mortgage will only protect that amount. They must do this before the individual pays for federally-mandated flood insurance. Homeowners still have the option of purchasing a greater amount of insurance.

"Homeowners now have a choice on how much flood insurance to carry. They can choose to have complete coverage of the value of their home or just the amount of the mortgage remaining. Homeowners know best what the risk levels are based on their own real experiences living in their neighborhood," Chan said.

The passage of An Act Relative to Flood Insurance aims to repair the problems associated with FEMA changes. In 2012 Congress approved a law that included a redrawing of the FEMA's flood zone maps, in an attempt to keep the National Flood Insurance Program funded after high rates of claims from Hurricane Katrina in 2005.

The program is $24 billion in debt, officials said, mostly due to huge losses from Katrina and 2012's Hurricane Sandy.

The bill now goes to the Senate.

Email Your Question To Barbara Graceffa

We live in a converted cottage and recently took down the wall between the kitchen and living room. When choosing paint colors for the unified space, do I paint all the walls the same or choose two different colors? Candyce

P.S. My kitchen cabinets are painted a bright blue.

BARBARA GRACEFFA

Dear Candyce,

Allow me to share some tips on continuity and color that would apply to any room in any home.

First, the trim and ceiling colors should be the same throughout. Ideally, the flooring should be the same, too, to unify the new combined space.

Decorators use the 60-30-10 rule—a formula for choosing three colors and dispersing them through the room. The dominant color should be about 60% of your overall room. The second color should occupy 30% and the final 10% is often referred to as the "pop of color."

I would propose that the blue cabinets serve as the 30%. Therefore, the 60% could cover your walls, furniture and curtain fabrics, and rug.

Now, back to your original question. Because our eyes notice where colors stop and start, I would propose one wall color throughout your small space. Try a lighter blue or a neutral like a grey or beige.

Now for the 10% color. Choose something that coordinates or compliments the blue. Choose one of the other primary colors— red or yellow—and they should be the same intensity as your blue cabinets. And it could be any member of the red family, like a bright raspberry. Or choose the complimentary and trendy color of orange for pillows, lamps, and other accessories.

One final tip, use some of the same blue color in the living room. Ideally, use it on the far wall opposite your cabinets for a balance look. To achieve this, the blue can be the main color in your wall art or paint some wooden tables or a rocking chair.

Maralin Manning Honored With Henry Bosworth Award

services program in a very particular way. She actually got me to agree to appear in their annual fashion show and walk down the cat walk and I took close instruction from her as to how I should stand and how I should walk heel first and turn, pivot, smile, and wave. I look forward to doing it every year under her direction.

"I always appreciated the fact that while you were supporting the community as a whole you really did have a special place in your heart for women. As you were moving up you were always making sure you were pulling other women behind you. I particularly admire you for doing that," Bump said.

Manning also received citations from the state Senate, House of Representatives, Norfolk County District Attorney and Sheriff offices and the City Council.

Sen. John Keenan said, "I've known her for many years and she has this unique ability to pull you aside, bring you close, whisper in your ear, and tell you what she thinks. And you walk away and say, 'you know what, she's right.' She does it in a way you appreciate. She does it with a warm smile and I know the other elected officials have the very same sentiments. We always appreciate your advice and counsel, especially the way you deliver it."

Rep. Bruce Ayers, who is also a small business owner and member of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, said Manning has helped many businesses over the years.

"I've seen how she's helped many business over the years, whether they were starting a business, whether they were revising their business plan, or if they were expanding their business, she would use all her skills and abilities, her network contacts, to just help businesses nurture. You've done an awful lot to help the economy in the city of Quincy, always promoting business; always promoting the city."

Ayers then recalled attending a Chamber breakfast in West Quincy some time ago.

"(Maralin) pulled me aside and whispered in my ear about a park at the corner of Pleasant and Water Street with the Abigail Adams stone and she wanted me to look into it. After the meeting we went right down to the park to look at the condition and Maralin was taking me around, pointing out how it could be enhanced. Everyone who works with Maralin knows she uses an awful lot of friendly persuasion. She was even pointing out history quotes, the quote from Abigail Adams to John Adams, 'remember the women.'

"With the help of Mayor Koch, [Ward 3 Councillor] Kevin Coughlin, and the Park Department we were able to enhance that park.

"I want to thank you as one of the legislators for making the city of Quincy a better place to live, a better place to do business and prosper," Ayers said.

State Rep. Tackey Chan thanked Manning for her service to the community as well as her encouragement after he was elected several years ago.

"When I got elected Maralin was enormously encouraging. She always wants you to get ahead, to make the next step forward, to take the next challenge, and be a better person everyday."

City councillors Doug Gutro and Michael McFarland presented a council commendation on behalf of their colleagues.

"Most of you know that Quincy Center is the heart of our city, like any city. For 20 odd years, Maralin Manning has been not only the heart but the soul of Quincy Center. She's made it a better place," Gutro said.

"If you go into the senior buildings across the city of Quincy and you talk to some of the folks who've been around, they remember Shopper's Town USA. Shopper's Town USA is a distant memory but a fond memory in the city of Quincy.

"Today we aspire for a rebirth in the downtown. Many of us still believe there is hope in the downtown. Maralin Manning was that bridge that brought us from Shopper's Town into the place where we can aspire for the rebirth," Gutro added.

McFarland praised Manning for her positiveness, enthusiasm and inspiration for new businesse in Quincy to take an active role in this community.

"She did nothing but spread positiveness and enthusiasm and inspired any new businesses in Quincy to get onboard, to join. Whatever services, whatever advice she could offer, she did. She didn't have all the answers, but if she didn't knew where to get them.

"Later, as I got involved with Maralin in the Quincy Chamber of Commerce on the board of directors, she started a program for new entrepreneurs and aspiring entrepreneurs in the city of Quincy and businesses people running courses to teach them about city government, the local history, about culture, about other businesses.

"She's one of those people whose personality is infectious. As she was out there promoting the business community, she was also helping out her fellow citizens who are less fortunate than her by raising money. She is truly a Quincy gem," McFarland added.

Gutro also thanked the Bosworth family for continuing the award tradition and honoring Henry Bosworth's memory.

"We'd like to thank Bob and his family tonight, first off, for honoring the legacy of Henry by honoring the legacy of the people here in the city of Quincy that have left an indelible mark over their lifetimes. I'd like to give a shout-out to the 29 (previously) award winners, many are out here tonight, and say thank you on behalf of the City Council for the contributions you have made over the years.

The program also featured kind words from an array of speakers including community activists and two of her grandchildren.

Tony Agnitti has worked with Manning on a host of community boards and organizations, including Quincy Medical Center, the Mayor's Boy Scout Breakfast and the Kiwanis Club of Quincy.

He said Manning is more than a volunteer worker – she is a trouble-shooter who gets things done.

"Anytime there was a situation, anytime there was a problem, if we had an issue not only with business but especially with the organizations we worked with, I knew I could call Maralin. She'd come in, we'd work out a plan, no BS. We'd have standup meetings, no more than 10 minutes. This is where we want to go, this is what we want to do. We'd outline it. I'd have an email or phone call. It would be outlined, plan of action, move.

"In a small business environment and as a military guy through Norwich I appreciated that very much. I would use her as an example, not only to my own sons, but to some young men who would come through Norwich University," Agnitti said.

Christine Cedrone, a former Quincy school committeewoman and chairman of the Quincy City Republican Committee, lauded Manning as an inspiration to women everywhere.

"Maralin is without a doubt someone I can always turn to ask who you assist with whatever we have to do. If there is an event we need to attend to or something that needs to get done, I always know that I can count on Maralin. As you know there aren't a lot of Republicans in Quincy, so it's nice to know we have a group that I can always, always depend on."

Cedrone is also the president of Quincy After School Child Care.

"I'm also the president of the Quincy Afterschool Childcare. On that board, Maralin sits with us and she always makes sure she's on time. She's always ready and willing to discuss whatever topics there are to discuss. She does not come to a meeting to sit there and sit back and do nothing. She has not one problem letting you know how she feels. And she does it in a way that doesn't upset anyone but also makes sure she gets her point across. Not many people do that. They fluff around issues. But not Maralin.

"As a young elected official, Maralin was such an inspiration to me. To see a woman stand up in a political and business world, which is very, very male-dominated – it still is but at that time it was even more male-dominated – to speak up, let her voice be heard, and let people know she had a mission and wasn't going to stop until it was done. This woman is amazing and I say to people all the time, and I've said to her often, that there are so many women who look up to you. You're an inspiration to so many women."

Sister Elish McPartland of Maria Droste Counseling Services praised Manning for her work and dedication since she became involved as a charter member of its first advisory board.

"I first met Maralin over 20 years ago just around the time the Maria Droste Counseling Agency was beginning. She was a charter member of our first advisory board and she has been there consistently for us through all the growing pains of the agency. Any new agency has some struggles and she was there to help us with her advice and her consistent presence and steady hand.

"Always loyal to our mission of serving those persons most in need, Maralin extended enormous efforts, time, and talent to assist the agency in whatever was needed, and our needs varied in different times. When our first board of directors was established, Maralin again served and shared her wisdom and expertise and guidance to the newer members.

"She has been a steady force for good in all of the ways that she has assisted us," Sister Elish said. "Currently Maralin continues to serve on the board and is co-chair of our fundraising agency, which involves a commitment and dedication beyond what can be imagined as we prepare for our annual fundraiser. It is an enormous task that she has taken on and we will be forever grateful.

"I very much doubt that Maria Droste would be the excellent agency it is today without Maralin's guidance," she added.

Don Uvanitte, who has worked with Manning on a host of organizations including the South Coastal Workforce Board and the Quincy Salvation Army Advisory Board, called her "Miss Quincy" and a city gem.

"Maralin is probably the most ubiquitous person I know, probably with the exception of Mayor Koch. She is at every event – anything that has to do with Quincy, she is at. Maralin is a wonderful talent and a gem and treasure in Quincy. If there is an event going on in Quincy or a fundraiser for any Quincy organization, she is there. She is Miss Quincy.

"Maralin is very passionate about the city of Quincy. She is always working towards the betterment of Quincy and its businesses. We've all heard that this evening repeated many, many times.

"If Maralin was asked to serve on a committee you can be assured she would be a work horse and not a show horse. She does the work. She's always provided the expertise in retailing, merchandizing, marketing, and organizational skills for both non-profits and many businesspeople."

Tony Ricci of the Quincy Historic Commission thanked Manning for her years of dedication and service.

"Maralin has detailed knowledge of the downtown – every nook and cranny, good and bad – and knew all the merchants that came into the downtown. And there were many that came in over the years and many who left. Her design background and common sense in business and humanity have been a constant contribution since her appointment.

CITY CLERK Joe Shea (left), Recreation Director Barry Welch (center) and Rep. Bruce Ayers at The Quncy Sun reception for Henry Bosworth award recipient Maralin Manning.

"Never one to mince words, her clear insights into proposals by downtown merchants and property owners have helped us maintain a character and deterred threats to deterioration. Along with Maralin's continued vigilance, all the current commission members will support a new downtown that capitalizes on Quincy's historic past and its hopeful future.

"For all past commission members and all present commission members, we thank you Maralin."

Two of Manning's granddaughters also stepped to the podium to express their love for their "Yaya."

"It is my turn to say I have followed your progress with pride and have never been more proud to call you my Yaya," said granddaughter Taylor Flavin. "You live each and everyday selflessly, whether it be for your family, friends, or the city of Quincy. There is no doubt that you are the perfect recipient for this award.

"Thank you for sharing this day with us, and to quote you, 'you know today and forever we're with ya and love ya.'

Granddaughter Casey Flavin added:

"To some of you here, the woman we are celebrating tonight is known as Maralin. To others, Mrs. Manning. To a few, she may even be known as the woman knocking on the Planet Fitness doors at five in the morning. As my family has previously stated to us, her family, since I was a little girl she has always been Yaya.

"Yaya's accomplishments throughout her life have been numerous, whether it be organizing fashion shows, participating on every committee known to man, or accepting teaching positions at different colleges. However, with the greatest of apologies to the city of Quincy, Yaya's true passion in life has always been her family.

"She has always taken an active role in each of her grandchildren's lives, which all of us here can attest to. Yaya has been present at every one of our sporting events, ceremonies, and school plays. To this day, she brings an imaginative dinner to my house every Sunday night. I cannot truly express to you how much I value that tradition and time I get to spend with you and Papa.

"My Yaya has achieved so much success in her professional life, while simultaneously taking on the lead role in each and every one of her family member's lives. Better yet she made each and every one of us the center of her attention."

The reception was a community celebration of Manning's many accomplishments and good deeds. Also attending were business leaders and owners, city department heads, members of various service and civic organizations, past Henry Award recipients, members of Mr. Bosworth's family and judges who selected Manning for the honor as well as other invited guests.

The function was hosted by the Quincy Sons of Italy and coordinated with the help of Marie Lumaghini.

The reception was filmed by Mark Crosby of Quincy Access TV and is scheduled to air Friday, March 28 at 7 p.m., Saturday, March 29 at noon and Sunday, March 30 at 7:30 p.m. on Quincy Access TV Channel 8.

Adriana Moosick Wins Silver At N.E. Hoop Shoot Contest

WELL DONE! - Adriana Moosick was a runner-up in the New England competition of the Elks National Hoop Shoot Free Throw Contest last Saturday in Portland, ME. The Quincy 9-year-old is a city and state champion in the competition. Here she holds her silver place trophy and medal. Adriana and a youngster from Rhode Island each sank 19 out of 25 free throws but Adriana bowed by one free-throw in a shoot-out to take home second place. Locally the Hoop Shoot Contest is sponsored by the Quincy Lodge of Elks and Quincy Recreation Department. She is the first local youngster to advance to the regional competition in many years.

Fitzy-Nolan Games Draw Large Crowd

A Night Of Watching The Best Players And Reminiscing

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was a night of fun, a night to watch the best and brightest basketball players in the state. It was also a night when the bond between past and present grew more strong and firm.

For Leo Papile and Paul Beston, it was a night to remember an old coach and a best friend. It was a time to tell the tales of the golden age of basketball in Quincy, the days of the 1960s and 1970s, the days of playground legends, the fine wars of the Greater Boston League, and trips to the old Garden to play in the Tech Tourney before crowds of 13,909 who came at noon and watched hoop until midnight.

For James Lam, Efthim Butka, Anthony Green, and Kyle Richardson, these are the good, old days. For them, it was a chance to measure themselves against players they will soon watch on television, the best of the Boston Amateur Basketball Club who are bound for Division 1, and just maybe, the NBA. It was a chance to show that the players from Quincy in 2014, just like the players from 40 and 50 years past, can play with anyone.

Fitzy-Nolan Games Draw Large Crowd, Fond Memories

The 12th annual Fitzy-Nolan Games were held before a large crowd at Quincy High Friday night. The game honors the memories of former Quincy High star Paul Fitzpatrick and North Quincy coach Bob "Knobby" Nolan. There was a freshman and a junior game played. The BABC won the freshman game, 98-92 and the junior game, 81-60 against select teams from the MIAA South Region.

However, it was a night that will be remembered long after the final scores have faded. It was the first year the games were held in Quincy. The games were started by Mt. Ida College coach Rico Cabral after Fitzpatrick died in 2002. Fitzpatrick had been an assistant to Cabral for two years. Nolan's name was added when he passed away in 2005. For 11 years, the games were held at Mt. Ida.

Friday night, the games came home.

"It's a great thing for the city and it comes at a time when basketball has come alive again," said Papile who graduated from North in 1971 and played for Nolan. Papile founded the BABC in1977 and has led the junior team to 17 national AAU titles.

"This is absolutely where the games belong. I couldn't be happier to see them come to Quincy," said Cabral.

"This is a great night to see the games played in the new Quincy High gym. It would have meant a lot to Fitzy," said Beston who played with Fitzpatrick on the the 1966 team which went 18-3 and played in two tourney games in the Garden.

One of the big reasons Papile worked hard to bring the games to Quincy is the quality of the basketball in the city. The excitement is back. The gyms are full. Past and present. Joined together. Seems like old times.

"Both Quincy and North are playing great, and the big crowds are back," said Papile. "More importantly, you also have two coaches (Dave Parry and Kevin Barrett) who not only care about what their players do on the court, but who watch out for them 365 days a year. It's not just the winning. It's caring about the kids. Both coaches personify that."

Coaches who win and care. The names Nolan, Fitzpatrick, Parry, and Barrett blend together. Parry coached the freshman select team Friday night. Barrett coached the junior team. The night honored Fitzpatrick and Nolan. This is not a one-year stop. The games are here to stay. There is a history. There is a past and present.

"They'll be in Quincy as long as I'm alive and after I'm gone, my daughter Britney will keep them here," said Papile.

Lam, Green, Butka, and Richardson played on the junior select team. Each played about 20 minutes. Lam's quickness and athleticism served him well in the game which was played on a far higher level and at a far faster pace than high school. Lam finished with eight points, three rebounds, two assists and two steals. He enjoyed and he learned.

"It was fun to compete against future NBA stars," he smiled. The BABC has four alumni currently playing in the NBA, including Celtics' guard Phil Pressey. Since its founding by Papile in 1977, the BABC has sent 17 players to the NBA.

"It's good to test yourself and to play with this intensity and physicality," continued Lam who will be a senior at Quincy High next fall. "It makes you use use all your abilities and with this level of competition, you have to improve."

It also helps pinpoint areas that need work.

"I want to improve my ball-handling, shooting and work at moving quicker to the ball," said Lam.

Green had six points, four rebounds, three blocks, an assist and altered several shots with his presence at the rim. For the first time, he went against taller and stronger players, but for long stretches, he showed that he belonged. He will play a year at Tilton Prep. If he improves as much as he did in his senior year at North, he could well be back next spring wearing the BABC uniform and dreaming big dreams.

"The game was good for me because these are a lot of the players I'll be playing against when I play at prep school," said Green. "It's a level above and so much faster than high school ball. You don't have time to set up. This is the level I want to play at and it showed me what I need to work on.

"I need a better post move. I want to improve my jump shot and get up and down the floor better. It seemed like the whole game was played in transition."

Butka had eight points, including a pair of threes in the first half on that sweet outside jumper. Richardson had a pair of assists, a steal and handled the ball well against the big-time press from the BABC.

Fitzpatrick and Beston were best friends who formed the starting backcourt on Quincy's 1966 team. The Presidents handed North its only regular-season loss (sound familiar?) and defeated Lynn English in the Garden before losing to eventual champion Catholic Memorial.

"We were the first two guards to make the Quincy Hall of Fame. We went in together," said Beston. "Leo Papile has seen a lot of basketball. We both agree nobody had a better basketball mind than Fitzy."

Fitzpatrick played and coached at Boston State. He is a member of the New England College Basketball Hall of fame In 1977, he took over for former Celtics' player Jim Loscutoff on an interim basis and coached Boston State to the NCAA Nationals in Division 3.

"Loscy was supposed to come back at mid-season," said Cabral. "He took a look at what Fitzy was doing and told him to just keep the team."

"I think at one point Fitzy was 53-5 at Boston State," said Beston.

Cabral and Beston talked about a player and a coach. They also talked about a friend.

"You couldn't ask for a better friend. I lost track of the number of people who asked him to be a godfather to their kids," said Beston.

"He was a great friend, loyal to a fault,. You could call him at 2:00 in the morning and he'd do anything for you," said Cabral.

Papile has been the face of basketball in Boston for over 30 years. He has coached in the CBA. He was an associate coach on a Cleveland State team which made the Sweet 16, and he evaluated talent for the Celtics. He worked on the USA National Development team. He has coached the BABC for 37 years and won 17 national titles.

It is an impressive resume. His proudest achievement?. The 250 kids who have moved through the BABC and won scholarships to Division 1 schools. He learned well from his high school coach.

"Knobby got more kids into college that he didn't know than kids that he did know," smiled Papile. "If you played for him, he do anything to help you with college. He'd also get calls from coaches all over the state. One spring he got a call from a coach in Bridgewater who had a baseball and a football player who were having trouble getting into school. Knobby helped them out. He was from that World War II generation, the greatest generation, who thought giving was more important than receiving."

Nolan had 153-63 record at North and won four GBL titles. Nolan and Papile stayed close. Nolan worked as an assistant to Papile in 1985 and 1986 at the BABC.

"He had no ego. Nobody was too big or small for Knobby," said Papile. "You meet people, especially on the pro level, who think they are elite, or something special. Knobby would use his wit and humor when he dealt with them. He would sit down, have dinner, and pick up the tab whether you were a billionaire or a poor person from the Pine Street Inn. That was just Knobby."

The place to play basketball in the glory days was the Elm Street playground. Fitzpatrick and Beston played at Elm Street in the summer. Papile played there. Eddie Scanlan and Jim Rendle from Quincy played there. Dave Zink from North played there. The best players from Archbishop Williams and BC High came there for games on warm, lazy summer evenings.

It became known as Elm Street University. Crowds would come and watch the games. Its reputation spread beyond the neighborhood and the city. One unforgettable summer night, a car stopped at Elm Street. Inside the car was Jimmy Walker. Walker was the leading scorer in the nation from Providence College. He was a two-time, first-team All American. He was the first player selected in the NBA draft. He was the best college player in America. And he came to play at Elm Street against two guards from Quincy named Beston and Fitzpatrick.

"The car pulls up and five basketball players came out," said Beston. "Then a tall guy nicknamed Helicopter steps out. They call him Helicopter because he can pick pennies off the top of the backboard. Then out comes Jimmy Walker, the collegiate player of the year. At Elm Street playground.

"This story is typical Fitzy. I said: Fitzy, these guys are going to kills us. Fitzy is psyched to play them. He tells me: Don't worry, we'll beat them. Well, we didn't beat them, but we stayed with them and they knew they were in a game."

It is a great story among many great stories which should always be told. The players will play and old men will talk of their tales. The past and the present. The games are back in Quincy. It is the way it should be.

South Shore YMCA To Host Healthy Kids Day April 26

The South Shore YMCA - Emilson and Quincy Branches – will host a free community Healthy Kids Day April 26.

The Y's Healthy Kids Day will feature games, face painting, active healthy living demonstrations, arts and crafts and more to motivate and teach families how to develop a healthy routine at home.

YMCA's Healthy Kids Day, celebrated at nearly 1,600 Ys across the country, aims to get more kids moving and learning, so they can keep up the habit all summer long – a critical out-of-school time for kids' health. Research shows that without access to out-of-school physical and learning activities, kids fall behind academically. Kids also gain weight twice as fast during summer than the school year.

In celebration of YMCA's Healthy Kids Day, the Y offers the following tips to help families develop healthy habits:

- Make sure kids get at least five servings a day, the minimum number nutritionists recommend to maintain healthy childhood development.
- Read to and with your kids. Help children read at every age and every stage of their development.
- Set a family goal of great health by teaming up for community or charity events like races, walks, fun runs. Bike rides, etc.
- Find a cause that matters to the kids and volunteer together.
- Be a good role model – kids can be influenced by seeing how hard their parents work at home or on the job, and how rewarding that experience is.

The South Shore YMCA's Quincy branch is located at 79 Coddington St. There will be local vendors and sponsors in attendance at the Healthy Kids Day.

Pee Wee B2 Bows To Norwood

Massachusetts hockey's version of "March Madness" got underway for most youth hockey teams this weekend across the Commonwealth. For the QYH PW B2 team that meant another battle with the Norwood Mustangs, whom Quincy beat in the final regular season game.

At the aging Zapustas Arena last Sunday, both PW B2 teams battled to a scoreless tie after a thrilling first period, in which QYH goalie Ryan Graf repeatedly made several great saves.

A few minutes into the second period, QYH defenseman Robbie McClelland fed center Caiden Valleli, who broke through a couple of Norwood players at midice for a two-on-one. As the Mustang defender closed on him, Valleli dished to wing mate Eoin Varden, who went "5-hole" to give Quincy a 1-0 lead. In a span of five minutes and unlike the previous week, the QYH kids could not stop the Mustang stampede, as Norwood answered for three quick goals to end the period with a 3-1 lead.

Though Quincy responded with goals by John Bell and Joey Murphy in the third period, Norwood also countered and will advance to the next playoff round with a 7-3 victory.

Sean O'Brien, Valleli, and Colman Gillis also contributed a couple of assists each and finished up a great season, as the latter two will be moving up to the bantam division next season. With many of the first year Quincy Pee Wees returning next season, the QYH kids played with great resiliency and wrapped up a very successful first season in the renowned South Shore Conference.

Caity Lowry Regional Hoop Champion

Quincy resident Caity Lowry is a member of the Endicott College Girls Basketball team that was recently crowned ECAC Division III New England Regional Champions.

The Endicott College girls team bested Smith College 79-76 to win their first ever ECAC Championship in school history.

Caity, who is a former hoop standout for Quincy High School, is in her sophomore year up at Endicott and in her second season with the team. Lowry, a 2012 Quincy High School graduate and two-time league all-star is no stranger to winning. She helped the Quincy High School Girls basketball team to their best season in school history as 2011-2012 MIAA Division 1 East Sectional Semi-Finalist finishing with a record of 19-5.

Caity plays the forward position and is poised to be a strong impact player for Endicott next year. She is the daughter of Joe and Doreen Lowry of Quincy.

Sacred Heart NQ 6th Grade Boys Win South Shore Title

Down Undefeated Marshfield

The 6th grade Sacred Heart travel basketball team recently won the coveted South Shore League tournament. They defeated Marshfield, 49-33, in the Championship game held at Quincy High School.

Marshfield had an undefeated record of 19-0 entering the Championship game.

North Quincy's team is coached by Kyle Costa, a former North Quincy High basketball star and 1,000-point scorer.

Does preparation matter? You bet it does.

Coach Costa scouted the undefeated Marshfield team on Friday night, called a last-minute practice on Saturday, and implemented a Box and One defense to try to contain Marshfield's high scoring offense. The result: Marshfield was held to a season-low 33 points.

"These kids are very coachable. I gave them a specific game plan, and they executed it perfectly 24 hours later," Costa said. The result: the coveted South Shore League title is back in North Quincy.

"I think our kids really rose to the challenge today. We can play with anybody. And today we proved it," Costa said.

This is Costa's third year coaching the 6th grade travel team.

How did it happen?

"Teamwork, it is that simple. We have great, fast athletes, but if you don't play as one and are focused on individual stats, we lose this game by 20 points. Marshfield is that good," Costa said.

In addition to the great game plan, North Quincy High basketball stars Efhim Butka and Anthony Green gave pre-game and halftime speeches to help motivate the 6th grade team. Former Red Raider hoop standouts Dan and Pat Gould were also in attendance supporting the team.

"It meant the world to the kids to have their high school basketball heroes speak to them before the championship game. They came down on their own time. No fanfare. No cameras. I truly feel it made a differencem," Costa said.

What is next for the Champions of the South Shore? Defend the title and be the hardest working team in the offseason. Players on the team are Franco Calabro, Johnny Cristiani, Brenden Donovan, Eoin Gormley, CJ Jaehnig, Michael Levine, Ethan McDevitt, Aaron O'Toole, Landon Pierron, David Ryan, and Frank Yhombi.

Nneoma Aguguo On Intercollegiate Conference Executive Board

Nneoma Aguguo of Quincy is a member of the executive board organizing the intercollegiate Pamoja60: Neo-Pan African Conference at Colby-Sawyer College on April 4 and 5.

The conference name, Pamoja60, combines the Swahili word pamoja, meaning united or together, with 60, representing the year 1960 when Pan-African ideals emerged. The conference theme, Neo Pan-Africanism: The Youthful Voice in African Development, takes a multidisciplinary approach to development over the past 50 years while considering ways to move forward. The goal of the event is to bring people together, especially college students from the Northeast, to discuss issues related to African unity and African development in the 21st century.

AN UNFORTUNATE SLIP

It is unfortunate that herniation of the cartilage between the vertebrae is commonly referred to as a "slipped disc." This popular phrase gives the incorrect impression that the concentric rings of fibrous tissue with the gelatinous centers have simply moved out of place. The fact is, however, that these discs, which act as shock absorbers, do not slip. Instead, they herniate, bulge, or rupture, which may cause them to press against an adjacent nerve, leading to pain, loss of sensation, and/or muscle weakness. As debilitating as the symptoms of a herniated disc may be, there is no immediate need for surgery. In many cases, herniated discs will get better in a few days and resolve within months with non-invasive treatment.

Chiropractic adjustments have long been used to treat pain, stiffness and soreness. At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we believe most everyone at one time or another develops pain in the back. Usually, it is an activity that brings on the pain, and usually the pain improves with rest. If you suffer from back problems, you probably want your treatment to be as gentle and effective as possible. If you have questions or concerns about the benefits of chiropractic, call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy, where we can provide the personalized care you deserve. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. As a conservative first-line treatment, the chiropractor treats herniated discs with a gentle program of low-force techniques designed to alleviate pressure on affected nerves.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On Thursday, March 13, 2014, Officers Paul Foley and William O'Neill were dispatched to a West Quincy address on a report of a domestic disturbance in progress. As Officer Foley pulled up to the house, two young boys came frantically running out of the home toward him dressed in only t-shirts and pants (no shoes). They appeared frightened and upset. The temperature at the time was about 10 degrees. Seconds later, an adult female came running down the stairs after them screaming, "You're a f@#$%^& a@@#$%^ (name of son), you just wait."

Officer Foley, concerned for the safety of the children, immediately ordered the female to go back inside. As Officer Foley awaited back-up, he determined that the boys were brothers age 13 and 12. One of the brothers is autistic and has limited verbal skills. Upon arrival, Officer O'Neill escorted the children to their second floor bedroom, where they could be safe and warm up.

Officer Foley then interviewed the woman who was chasing the boys. She said in a slurred statement that she was the mother of the two boys. It was clear that the mother was very intoxicated based on speech difficulty, unsteadiness on her feet, tired looking blood shot eyes and a moderate odor of an alcoholic beverage on her breath. Officer Foley asked the mother a series of questions to determine what happened. The mother could not respond other than to repeatedly ramble, "The Judge said I was going to jail for 60 days if I screwed up again."

Officer O'Neill then stood by with the mother in the living room while Officer Foley interviewed the son without autism in the bedroom. He said that his mother has been getting drunk more often recently. He said he and his brother attend middle school and he walks home but his autistic brother is transported home by bus (due to his disability). He stated that his mother is supposed to meet the bus outside and take care and custody of his brother each afternoon on school days. He said when he arrived home on foot this afternoon, he observed his brother's bus parked outside with the driver repeatedly beeping the horn for their mother to come out. He stated that he took his brother off the bus and attempted to get into his home but both the front and back doors were locked. He pounded on the doors but there was no response. He then forced his way into the back door by breaking the lock. He found his mother passed out in his bed with a "large alcohol drink next to her."

He said that the next few hours were calm but then his mother became agitated and an argument started up about her drinking. He became frightened and grabbed the home telephone. His mother began "flipping out," swearing and calling him names as she chased him around the house. He was so frightened that he ran into the bathroom and locked himself in as he dialed "911." He said that his brother locked himself in his bedroom. As he was talking to the Police Dispatcher, his mother began kicking at the door trying to get in, telling him to hang up the phone, which he did. She actually put a hole in the bottom of the door.

LT. DAN MINTON

Officer Foley asked him if he believed that his mother intended to physically assault him and wanted to interfere with his phone call to 911. He said his mother would have hurt him if she could get to him. The mother stopped and walked away from the door and this was when he made a second call to make sure help was coming. He then cautiously exited the bathroom, got his autistic brother and they both fled out the front door where they met Officer Foley.

The Officer asked the brothers if they were injured or harmed in any way and they said they were not but only because she couldn't catch them. When asked if he thought his mother what she would have done if she was able to get to him through the bathroom door, he replied, "She would have definitely hit me."

Officer Foley asked the brother if his mother had hit him or his autistic brother in the past and he said that he did not know if his brother had been hit but he had, adding that it was "A long time ago." He could not describe when it was or the circumstances surrounding the incident.

At this time, their father arrived home. He was aware of the incident because his son had called him too. Officer Foley asked the brothers if they felt safe staying in the home tonight with their father and they said they did. When asked if they felt safe staying in the home with his mother, the brother said, "Absolutely not" and then said, "Can you take her?"

Officer Foley looked around the home and saw fresh damage to the bathroom door. There was a large hole in the middle of the door with a splintered piece of wood lying on the bathroom sink. He also located the "large alcohol drink," with an almost empty 2 liter bottle of wine next to it. Officer Foley then interviewed the father, who said that he and his wife have had their problems, which led to separations in the past. He recently moved back home to help take care of the boys, despite the fact that his wife's boyfriend was living there too. He said the boyfriend has since moved out but his wife's drinking has been getting worse. He pleaded with Officer Foley to get her help for her alcoholism.

The Officer provided information on the court procedure to get his wife help and then advised him of his rights regarding restraining orders against his wife for the safety of their children. He declined a restraining order saying that his wife is a "Great person and Mother when she is not drinking."

As a result of this incident, Officer Foley placed the mother, a 48 year old Quincy resident, under arrest for "Domestic Assault, Reckless Endangerment of a Child and Intimidation of a Witness." Once at the station, Officer Foley contacted the Department of Children and Families and the Disabled Persons Protection Commission, due to the son being autistic. Officer Foley, in his report, urged the court to consider a mental health and/or substance abuse evaluation for the mother before she is released. Nice Work!

INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE SCAM: this is occurring across the country. Citizens are receiving calls from a scammer, stating he is from the IRS and that you owe money. The threats of shutting off your utilities have resulted in many people wiring money to the scammers. Remember: the IRS does not make telephone calls to collect taxes and they do not make threats. If you owe money to the IRS, you will be notified by mail.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A suggestion from a colleague on how to work out a problem might not sit too well with you. But before you suspect his or her motives, why not just accept it as a friendly gesture?
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) An associate might seek your counsel on a workplace dispute with another coworker. Listen to what she or he has to say, but withhold advice until you've heard the other side of the story.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Use your Twin gifts for creativity and practicality to score points in landing an opportunity that could open doors to a new career. Someone returns after a long absence.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Although things are pretty hectic through much of the week, some quiet time with loved ones helps restore balance. An unexpected visitor brings welcome news about a mutual friend.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Getting used to change isn't always easy for the Big Cat. But make the adjustments gradually, and soon you'll hardly remember when things were any different from how they are now.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Continue to stay the course you've chosen, and avoid distractions that could throw you off track. Some knowledgeable folks are happy to provide guidance if you need it.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Although you earned plaudits from most coworkers for your recent stand on a workplace situation, you also raised the envy quotient among others. Tread carefully for now.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You feel more positive about that delayed project, and you're ready to pick it up on a moment's notice. However, you might need to re-motivate those who have since lost interest.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Some welcome news should be coming your way. In the meantime, use that Sagittarius charm to persuade some still-reluctant colleagues that your ideas have merit.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Don't wait for a misunderstanding to work itself out. Instead, ask for a chance to explain the circumstances before those bruised feelings lead to an irreversible break.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A physical problem should be checked out in order to avoid it going from just being a nuisance to something more serious. Your social life takes an unexpected but not unwelcome turn.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Yours might be the wisest sign in the Zodiac. But you still could benefit from the wisdom of a close friend who has suggestions on how to handle a perplexing personal problem.
BORN THIS WEEK: Your passion for doing the right thing inspires others to follow your well-trodden path toward justice.

God Saw You Getting Tired

God saw you getting tired
And a cure was not to be,
So He put His arms around you
And whispered "come to Me".
A golden heart stopped beating,
Hard working hands at rest,
God broke our hearts
To prove to us
He only takes the best.

180 Students Take Part In QHS Science, Technology Fair

12 Projects Go To Regional Competition; Six Move To State Level At MIT May 2-3

Over 180 students presented to approximately 300 spectators at the seventh annual Quincy High School STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics) Fair.

The recent event featured 164 projects from grades 9-12 and spanned fields of biology, chemistry, environmental science, physics, and engineering. Students worked individually or as a team to investigate topics such as heart rates, pharmaceutical solutions, solar cells, wind turbines, and innovative building materials.

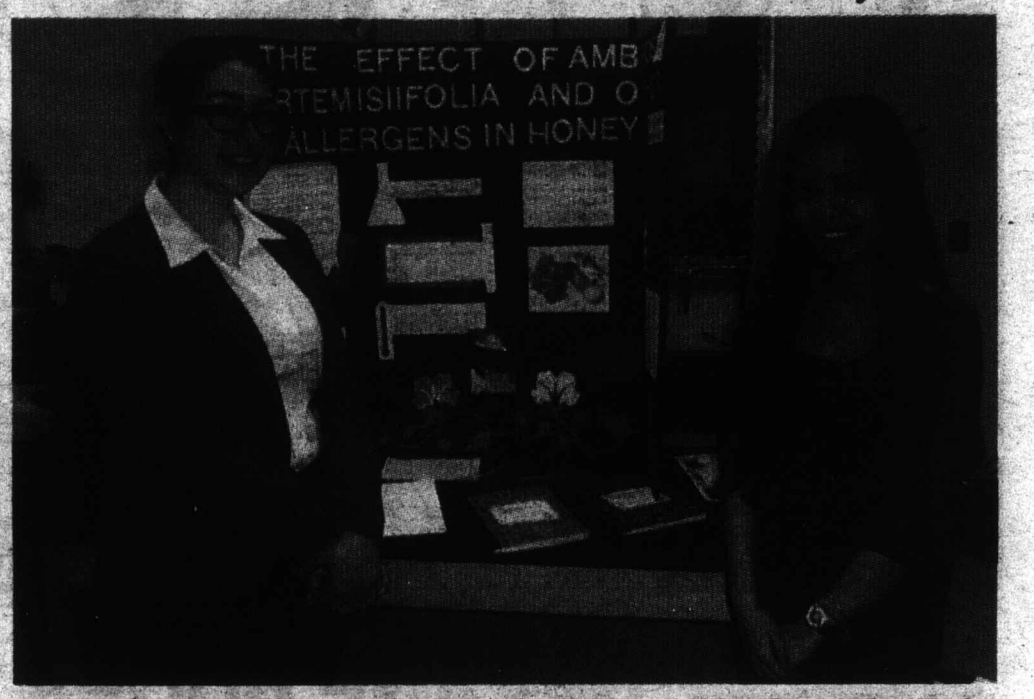

The in depth project work has helped build career and life skills for success in 21st century careers, such as critical and creative thinking, communication, teamwork, and ethical decision-making. Quincy High School students work one-on-one with teachers and professionals year round to follow their natural curiosity and explore "real world" science and engineering problems.

This year sponsors of the event included the Myriant Corporation and Clean Harbors who provided funding for student awards and grants. Much of the science fair's success is due to over eighty community volunteers from science and technology fields donating their time to mentor and judge projects. Each project was assessed at least three times by academic judges and one student judge. Project scores were then tallied and weighting based on scientific approach, creativity, understanding, and presentation.

Each year Quincy High School shows a great diversity of projects and the student's enthusiasm carries the evening as they get to celebrate their accomplishments with the community.

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL students Lindsay Shrier (left) and Xylena Desquitado with their project: "The Effect of Ambrosia Artemisiifolia and Other Allergens in Honey." They were among 180 students who took part in the seventh annual Quincy High School STEM (Science, Technology, Engineering, and Mathematics) fair.

QUINCY HIGH SCHOOL students receive awards at the 2014 South Shore Regional Science Fair ceremony. In the crowd are: Amira Abdelaziz, Ursula Biba, Leanne Gough, Marisa Abundis, KunYi Li and Alicia Walker.

2014 Quincy High School STEM Fair Winners:

- 1st Prize: Ursula Biba: Plasticizer Toxicity: The Effect of Bisphenol-A and Diethyl Phthalate on Fresh and Salt Water Organisms

- Li Ping He, Diana Zhou, & Jennifer Hong: The Effect of Toxins from Pharmaceutical drugs and Metals on Lumbriculus Variegatus

2014 Honorable Mention

- Suhail Purkar: Using portable bio-reactors to clean up oil spills.
- Vivian Tran-Vo: Comparing the Vitamin C Content in Dark Green Vegetables Versus Light Green Vegetables
- My Huynh & Linda Zhou: Testing Arsenic in Rice
- Ridha Khawar: The effectiveness of Oyster mushrooms in the removal of soil pollutants
- Noreen Plabutong: Efficient Ways to Clean and Purify Water
- Iqrah Tauhid: Are Herbals the Cure?
- Xylena Gabrielle Desquitado & Lindsay Shrier: The effect of Ambrosia artemisiifolia and other allergens in honey
- Abdul Nasir: RC Car Hand Glove Controller
- Allan Wong & Kevin Truong: Improving Safety Glasses

On March 15th, the top Quincy High School projects competed at the South Shore Regional Science Fair held at Bridgewater State University and once again impressed the judges. The following students will represent Quincy High School at the Massachusetts State Science & Engineering Fair held at Massachusetts Institute of Technology Campus, Cambridge on May 2nd – 3rd.

South Shore Regional Science and Engineering Fair Winners

Amira Abdelaziz: 1st Prize and the Northeast Institute of Food Technology Award

Ursula Biba: 1st Prize and Sea Education Scholarship Award

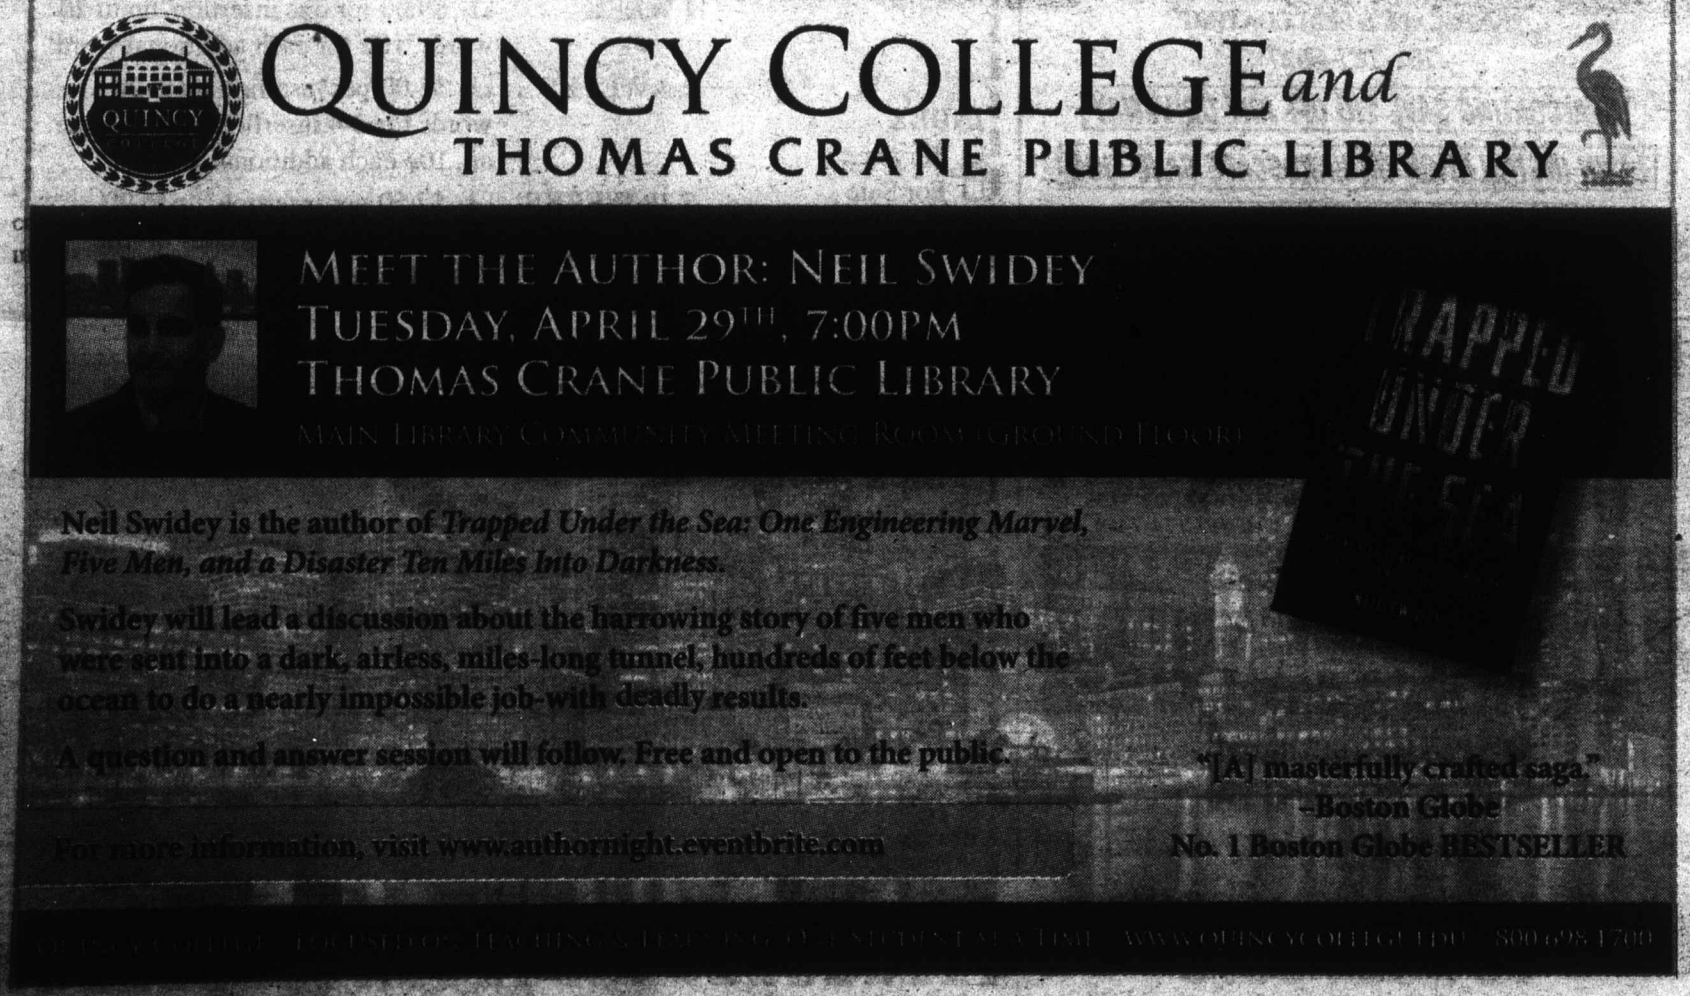

Leanne Gough: 2nd Prize and the South Sore Natural Science Center Elizabeth Lawrence Award

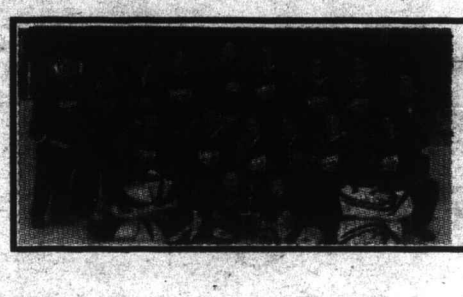

Marisa Abundis: 3rd Prize

Road, Sidewalk Work

By SCOTT JACKSON

Road and sidewalk work necessary for the creation of Adams Green may begin as early as the end of this month and will continue on through October of next year.

The Adams Green project will result in the creation of a new park between City Hall and the United First Parish Church (the Church of the Presidents), which requires closing the stretch of Hancock Street between those two buildings.

Before the park itself is built, road and sidewalk construction related to the project will take place along a corridor running south along Hancock Street from

New Academic Standards For Athletes

School Committee Expected To Adopt New Policy

By SCOTT JACKSON

The School Committee is set to approve stricter academic requirements for high school athletes during the board's meeting next week.

Under the school system's current standards, high school students are allowed to participate in sports if they have passing grades in 20 credits worth of classes – each full-year course is worth five credits, meaning students could fail two classes and still play. The new proposal would increase that minimum to 25 credits, with a maximum of one failing grade.

The school board drafted the new requirments at the urging of committee member Paul Bregoli, a longtime coach at North Quincy High who currently coaches the girls soccer team. He has been pressing for increased academic standards for student-athletes since he first joined the committee in 2012. Bregoli remembers parents being surprised when he raised the issue while he was campaigning in 2011.

"Parents were taken aback," he recalled, "they didn't know a kid could fail two subjects and still play."

The proposed new stan-

City Will Seek Financial Info From Developers

By SCOTT JACKSON

Companies hoping to develop parts of Quincy Center will be asked to open up their books for review by the city.

The City Council's downtown committee met Monday night to review what went wrong with Quincy now-terminated land disposition agreement (LDA) with Street-Works, and discuss the steps the city will take next.

At Monday's meeting, city officials reiterated that downtown development would likely be undertaken by multiple developers each responsible for a specific parcel. Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall suggested

New FEMA Flood Insurance Maps Effective June 8

Flood Insurance Workshops Monday, Tuesday

The City of Quincy is receiving updated flood hazard maps as part of the Federal Emergency Management Agency's nationwide program to modernize Flood Insurance Rate Maps. The City of Quincy's maps, currently in preliminary form, are scheduled to become effective on June 8, 2014.

Flood hazard maps, also known as Digital Flood Insurance Rate Maps (DFIRMs), indicate whether properties are in areas of high, moderate or low flood risk. In reviewing the new maps, many property owners may find that their risk is higher or lower than they thought. If the risk level for a property changes, so may the requirement to carry flood insurance.

There will be flood insurance workshops for Quincy residents to learn more about these changes:

WORKING TOGETHER – Quincy College President Peter H. Tsaffaras, J.D., (left), and David J. Holway, National President of NAGE, announce the college and NAGE will work collaboratively to provide NAGE's members with pathways to educational opportunities at Quincy College.

Quincy College, NAGE In New Agreement

Quincy College and the National Association of Government Employees (NAGE) announce they will work collaboratively to provide NAGE's members with pathways to educational opportunities focused on professional development.

Quincy College will offer NAGE members for-credit courses leading to the award of collegiate level certificates and degrees. NAGE members will also receive scholarships through Quincy College.

"I am tremendously excited that we are able to partner with the National Association of Government Employees (NAGE) to help meet the academic needs and aspirations of their members," said Quincy College President Peter H. Tsaffaras, J.D. "This collaboration provides a pathway to educational and professional growth which exemplifies the mission of both the College and NAGE and benefits the rank and file members of the union, who, after all, are our neighbors and friends. We view this as a win-win for all."

David J. Holway, National President of NAGE, said:

"Our mission statement says we are dedicated to improving the lives of workers and their families and creating a more just and humane society. Giving our members a way to pursue professional development and grow their careers is exactly that. With Quincy College as our partner, we can offer members a tangible benefit with lifelong returns."

Quincy College's focus on teaching and learning one student at a time has led the College to deliver its academic coursework through a variety of delivery methodologies – including on-line, hybrid and on-site – in both traditional and "flex" scheduling formats. In addition to courses offered at its campuses in Plymouth and Quincy, the College will offer courses for NAGE members at other locations in the Commonwealth in order to meet student demand.

Quincy College develops its academic programs in a "scaffolding" model. With this design, students can apply credits they earn in certificate programs towards a degree, instead of having to start from the beginning in a degree program after completing a certificate. Quincy College has articulation agreements that allow graduates of some associate degree programs to transfer with advanced standing in specific baccalaureate programs.

Quincy College introduces its program for NAGE members in time for the flex semester beginning in April, and the summer sessions beginning in May and June. The college is working with the union to finalize additional offerings later this spring and summer.

100 Quincy Firefighters Expected At Boston Firefighters' Funerals

By SCOTT JACKSON

A large contigent of Quincy firefighters are expected to attend funeral Masses this week for two Boston firefighters killed in the line of duty last week.

On Monday, Quincy firefighters union President Paul Moody said more than 100 Quincy firefighters may attend the services for the two fallen Boston firefighters. The funeral Mass for Lt. Edward J. Walsh, Jr., was scheduled for 10:30 a.m. yesterday (Wednesday) at St. Patrick's Church in Watertown. The Mass for Firefighter Michael R. Kennedy is planned for 11 a.m. today (Thursday) at Holy Name Church in West Roxbury.

The two firefighters were killed March 26 while fighting a nine-alarm fire at 298 Beacon St. in Boston's Back Bay neighborhood. Both were in the brownstone's basement, Boston fire officials said at a press conference that night.

Kennedy, a 33-year old Marine Corps combat veteran, was found in the alive in basement and rushed to Massachusetts General Hospital, where he was pronounced dead. Walsh, a married 43-year old father of three, was found hours later and pronounced dead on the scene.

Both were Boston residents and had been assigned to Engine 33 and Ladder 15, stationed on Boylston Street in the Back Bay.

"It's a tragedy what happened over there," Moody said. "Our hearts go out to Boston."

Firefighters from across the United States are expected to attend the funeral services. Moody said Quincy firefighters will help bus the firefighters from the Bayside Exposition Center in Dorchester to the churches the morning of each Mass.

"We're helping Boston to get everyone on buses and get them to the funerals Wednesday and Thursday," he said.

Moody noted that Boston firefighters helped plan the funeral of Quincy Firefighter John T. Austin. Austin, 37, collapsed last July in the West Quincy firehouse while responding to an emergency call.

"They were very good to us," Moody said. "We're looking to return the favor."

The Quincy firefighters union – International Association of Fire Fighters Local 792 – may hold a fundraiser to benefit the families of the two fallen Boston firefighters.

Moody said he will meet with Boston firefighters union President Rich Paris after the funeral services to discuss the possibility of a fundraiser. He also noted that he's been approached by Quincy business owners offering free food for a fundraiser if one is held.

More than 150 firefighters were reportedly on scene March 26 to combat the fire. Moody said two Quincy companies were called in to provide coverage at Boston firehouses, but no Quincy fire personnel were at the scene of the fire.

The cause of last week's fire remains under investigation, though officials said it did not appear suspicious during the press conference that night. It spread rapidly, they explained, because of the day's high winds. The building was a total loss.

Another 13 firefighters were injured. Those injuries, according to Deputy Boston Fire Chief Joseph Finn, were not life-threatening and primarily consisted of burns and musculoskeletal injuries.

This was the first death of an on duty Boston firefighter since Lt. Kevin M. Kelley was killed in January 2009 when the brakes of the ladder truck he was in failed and the truck struck a building. Kelley was a Quincy resident.

Caddy Day Memorial Ceremony Sunday

Caddy Detachment Commandant Marc Connolly invites the public to attend the annual Caddy Day Memorial Ceremony Sunday, April 6 at noon at Caddy Memorial Park on Quincy Shore Drive, Wollaston Beach.

The ceremony honors the men of Quincy who fought in one of the U.S. Marine Corps' most epic battles, Iwo Jima, during World War II. Tragically, four Quincy Marines were killed in action in what was the war's most costly battle for the Marine Corps. One those Marines, PFC William R. Caddy, made the ultimate sacrifice for his comrades and was presented the Medal of Honor (posthumously) for his unselfish actions.

A collation at the William R. Caddy Detachment #124 will be held immediately following the memorial ceremony. The Caddy Detachment is located at 111 Newbury Ave., North Quincy.

Mayor Finalizes Large-Scale $6M Solar Project

Mayor Thomas Koch has finalized a contract that will bring approximately 2 megawatts of solar power to the rooftops of nearly 30 school buildings and other public facilities in a major green energy project that will be built at no cost to the City.

Solar City, one of the largest solar energy providers in the country, was awarded the contract after a months-long review and selection process that saw a number of firms compete to install solar panels on City buildings. Final engineering will determine the exact of amount of energy that will be produced by the solar arrays, but officials believe it will be close to -- or surpass -- 2 megawatts.

That is in the same range of electricity produced by the larger of the two wind turbines in Hull, which produces 1.8 megawatts of power.

"This is a tremendous step forward in our work to make our public facilities more energy efficient and friendly to the environment," said Mayor Koch. "These are the kinds of projects that are vital for us to pursue as a community as they make sense from a financial standpoint as well as from a efficiency and environmental one."

Under the agreement, Solar City is allowed to build solar arrays on City-owned rooftops. In return, the City will pay for the power at a substantially reduced rate from what it would traditionally pay for electricity. The agreement sets a 9.6 cent rate per kilowatt-hour for the electricity over the full term of the 20-year agreement, a substantial savings because it does not include the delivery charges that accompany traditional power-purchasing agreements that can push electric costs to 13 cents or higher per kilowatt hour.

The power generated by the solar arrays will provide the electricity directly to the buildings where they are installed, and the City is also eligible for further credits if the electricity production outpaces usage in any particular building.

Officials estimated the value of the construction work, which will be performed by local electrical contractors, at about $6 million. The arrays are made in a way that they do not penetrate the lining of any roof and are easily removed if necessary. Under the agreement, Solar City is responsible for the operation and maintenance of the arrays.

The agreement also includes outreach and educational programming in which students and the public will be able to track the electricity produced by the solar arrays via the Internet and other educational programming.

The solar initiative started in 2013, with the City sending out a request for qualifications and then a subsequent request for more detailed proposals. Engineers with a number of firms visited a total of 47 city facilities, and the final plan calls for rooftop array on 27 buildings, primarily school buildings.

Volunteer members of the mayor's climate change committee were on the selection committee that picked from five final proposals.

Parks Conservancy Family Event, Easter Egg Hunt At Pageant Field

The Quincy Parks Conservancy will host a free, family event at Pageant Field on Saturday April 12th from 9 a.m. to noon that will include an Easter egg hunt, egg decorating, bouncy houses, a visit from the Easter Bunny as well as light refreshments catered by the Quincy High School Culinary Arts Program.

The egg hunt is geared for children ages 10 and under. Families are encouraged to bring their cameras to take pictures with the Easter Bunny.

To promote the event, the Conservancy conducted a poster design contest by partnering with the art department at both North Quincy and Quincy High Schools. Students were challenged to electronically design a graphic that was visually appealing and conveyed the event information. In addition to being on display at local businesses throughout the city, the two first place designs will appear in next week's edition of The Quincy Sun.

One winner from each high school was chosen and received a $100 prize. Two additional students received a $50 prize as a runner-up.

The winners:

1st place – North Quincy High School: Kamila Klincewicz

1st place – Quincy High School: Julie Nguyen

Runner-up – North Quincy High School: Doris Hui

Runner-up – Quincy High School: Nick Warner

The Quincy Parks Conservancy is a not-for-profit organization whose mission is to protect and promote parkland, beaches, parkways, and other open space areas within the City of Quincy for the use and enjoyment of Quincy residents, visitors, and tourists. Visit us at www.quincyparkconservancy.org

One current initiative of the Conservancy is assisting in the realization of a trail system at Faxon Park that coincides with the city's adopted Master Plan for Faxon Park. The Conservancy has partnered with the Quincy Park Department as well as Ward Two Councillor Brad Croall to further this project.

In the event of inclement weather, activities will move indoors to the gymnasium at Quincy High School. For more information, contact info@quincyparkconservancy.org

THE COLLAR OF GOLD

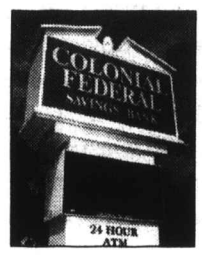

One of the sexier fashion statements that women are making in the world of fine jewelry comes in the form of a choker. Just as there is no taking your eyes off a pair of form-fitting, black leather pants, there is no way to avert the eyes from a solid gold choker encrusted with precious gemstones on either end. These beautiful pieces can be either thick and bold or tapered and relatively delicate. Either way, they wrap around the neck and trace the outline of a neckline in a most sensual manner. Whether worn with a low-cut top and tuxedo jacket or with a cocktail dress, a gold choker is sure to be the piece that makes the biggest flash.

With the diamond being the birthstone for April, you can select a lavish gold choker embellished with diamonds. Shop from our large selection of quality gold and brilliant diamond jewelry at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center or contact us at 617-773-3636. Our professional and knowledgeable staff is anxious to work with your to make sure that you have the best buying experience possible.

A better way to get money from your house

A good idea ... from Colonial Federal Savings Bank

You have a house with lots of equity. Good cash flow. Investments you don't want to touch right now. And you have something you want money for. What's the best way to get it? How about a 15-Year refinance from Colonial Federal? With fixed monthly payments, it's more predictable than an adjustable-rate home equity line. Way less expensive than credit cards. And you'll have it all paid off in 15 short years ... quicker if you make extra payments along the way. Would a 15-Year refinance be good for you? Call Angela Blanchard, VP/Retail Lending, at 617-471-0750 or apply online at colonialfed.com.

• On April 14, 1912, the RMS Titanic fails to divert its course from an iceberg, ruptures its hull and begins to sink. The Titanic was divided into 16 compartments that were presumed to be watertight. Because four of these compartments could be flooded without loss of buoyancy, the Titanic was considered unsinkable.

• On April 20, 1923, Tito Puente, the bandleader and percussionist who helped popularize Latin dance music in America, is born in New York City. During a career that spanned six decades, "El Rey" (The King), recorded more than 100 albums and won five Grammy Awards.

• On April 16, 1947, multimillionaire and financier Bernard Baruch first coins the term "Cold War" to describe relations between the United States and the Soviet Union, a war without fighting or bloodshed, but a battle nonetheless.

• On April 15, 1959, Fidel Castro visits the United States. The trip got off to an inauspicious start when it became clear that President Dwight Eisenhower had no intention of meeting with Castro. Instead, Eisenhower went to the golf course to avoid any chance meeting.

• On April 17, 1960, Eddie Cochran, the musician behind "Summertime Blues" and other rockabilly hits, is killed when the taxi carrying him from a show in Bristol, England, crashes en route to the airport in London, where he was to catch a flight home to the U.S. He was 21.

On April 19, 1971, as a prelude to a massive antiwar protest that would include 200,000 demonstrators, Vietnam Veterans Against the War begin a five-day demonstration in Washington, D.C. The generally peaceful protest ended on April 23 with about 1,000 veterans throwing their combat ribbons, helmets and uniforms on the Capitol steps, along with toy weapons.

• On April 18, 1989, thousands of Chinese students continue to take to the streets in Beijing to protest government policies. The protests grew until the Chinese government ruthlessly suppressed them in June, killing thousands, during what came to be known as the Tiananmen Square Massacre.

Kudos To Kiwanis Junior Heroes

This week's column space is dedicated to some very deserving young folks in our community.

As we've done in the past, we'd like to spotlight the Quincy Kiwanis Club and their selections for the club's Junior Heroes Awards. The awards are named in memory of Patrick Toland White, who was a hero himself.

Patrick, who was afflicted with a rare form of cancer, touched many lives, especially other children with cancer. He passed away at the much-too-young age of 15 in 2005.

Every spring, the Quincy Kiwanis Club remembers Patrick's courageous life and all-too-brief-but-shining legacy of helping others by presenting its Junior Hero Awards. The recipients – like Patrick – are making a positive difference in the city and other corners of the world.

This year, Quincy Kiwanis honored 14 recipients with the Patrick Toland White Junior Award. Their selections are inspiring, heart-warming and uplifting.

The recipients and a description of their outstanding community service (as printed in the Junior Heroes program booklet) are:

• Julie Bloomer, 12th grade, Archbishop Williams High School. "Julie gives all of herself to everything she does. She says doing things for others has taught her more about herself and more about life than she ever could have thought.

"This past summer, Julie spent a week in Dunbar, PA. Here she served a community in need. She helped fixed up, clean, and paint a trailer of a family who was struggling. In a small trailer lived the family of eight. She embraced them as people, made them smile, and helped improve their situation. While in Dunbar, she also helped at a local food bank supply food to the less fortunate."

Julie also spends her time with people who need help or a listening ear. "Every Monday she goes to a group called Friendship Club. The club links people to adults with special needs. She is a friend and a support. She also works with youngster students with special needs at St. Coletta School."

• Caitlyn Caggiano, 8th grade, Broad Meadows Middle School.

"Caitlyn comes to school early, stays late and gives up her student support block to tutor 4 sixth and eighth grade students who are struggling with math. She is a leader and member of Operation Day's Work and is highly involved in all of their activities. She demonstrates on a daily basis kindness toward a special needs student who is in a wheelchair helping him in gym, at drama, during school and at ODW. She also conducts the afternoon announcements.

"Caitlyn epitomizes all of the characteristics of a role model and leader at Broad Meadows."

• Meleah Chase, 7th grade, Sterling Middle School.

"Meleah has been instrumental in everyday life at Sterling Middle School. Since the fifth grade, she has been a member of the Student Council. She has helped organize the food drive, fundraisers for the Quincy Animal Shelter and Operation Smile Train. Meleah has helped with the 21st Century after school programs by taking attendance, giving out snacks, and tutoring younger students.

"This year, Meleah became president of the Student council and was the driving force behind the PowerPoint and video presentations at Sterling's Veterans Day ceremonies. She was also a major part of last year's Veterans Day as a 7th grader due to her tech skills. Using her skills, Meleah was able to put together a history and "virtual tour" of the Korean and Vietnam wars and their memorials for the audience.

"She is a member of the school band and has run cross country and is currently on the volleyball team. This is a well-rounded student that Quincy Public Schools should be very proud of."

• Erin Fallon, 8th grade, Broad Meadows Middle School.

"On her own, Erin raised $2,500 this year for the Sydney and Celeste Coreoran Fund. In 2012, she raised $1,000 for Quincy Police Department K-9 Unit for a dog vest.

"Erin is also a member of Operation Day's Work Program and she assists a special needs student during ODW and other school events by pushing his wheelchair, putting him on the bus, and danced with him at the ODW Dance.

"Erin is a wonderful student and one that is often overlooked because of her humility and lack of desire to be recognized. She is driven by a moral compass which allows her to make decisions that are right. Many of the "acts of kindness" she initiates are started by her and are outside of Broad Meadows."

• Devereux Fuller, 2nd grade, Montclair Elementary School.

"Devereux has been an active member of her community. She goes on 'trash hunts' with her family to help make her neighborhood a better place to live. She is also an active member of her church and choir and a Girl Scout. In her Girl Scout Troop she collects toys and food for the animals at the Quincy Animal Shelter. All of these contributions that she continues to make have made the 'Montclair Community' and neighborhood a better place to live.

"Devereux is also a positive role model for her peers. She is always welcoming to new students and is compassionate and caring. She has presented stories about our veterans and heroes that have served our country. She also takes an active role in classroom recycling by encouraging other students to save and collect plastic containers and cups to use for classroom projects and math lessons."

• Sarah Gorham, 4th grade, Merrymount Elementary.

"When Sarah had heard about Hurricane Haiyan in the Philippines, and the suffering that was experienced by both the people and the animals in the devastated area, she decided to hold a fundraiser in the park where she often brought her own dog for walks. So on a cold Saturday in early November, Sarah set up a cocoa and dog treat stand in Webb Park in Weymouth. Her endeavors raised $515, a donation that Sarah split between two worthy organizations helping the victims of the typhoon: The American Red Cross and Doctors without Borders.

"Her philanthropy doesn't stop here. Sarah and her best friend are already planning to have a bake sale to benefit the Quincy Animal Shelter. She hopes to some day be a veterinarian."

• Danny Kelly, 7th grade, Broad Meadows Middle School.

"Danny volunteers at the Quincy Youth Arena on Saturday mornings for two hours, teaching autistic students to skate and play hockey. Danny assists with drills, games and many other activities. Danny says he loves the opportunity to help students and he feels good that he can have a positive impact on the lives of the participants.

"Danny is a great kid and one that both his teachers and classmates adore. He is incredibly kind, compassionate, and is always smiling. He thinks of others before himself and is a student that his teachers can always rely on. He is the kind of kid that we would look toward being more alike."

• Shane McLaughlin, third grade, Montclair Elementary School.

"Every day during the year 2013, Shane completed an "ARK" (Act of Random Kindness) throughout the city, giving back and brightening people's days.

"It all began when the devastation of Hurricane Sandy hit in 2012. Shane was inspired to collect food and supplies and held a drive, Operation Give Back, on his front lawn during Veterans Day.

"A lot of Shane's larger ARKs are inspired by events happening in the news, such as Sandy Hook when he lit 26 candles in remembrance of those who died; Puppy Doe in Quincy where he raised money and brought a couple of hundred dollars worth of items off the wish list for Quincy Animal Shelter; the Boston Marathon Bombings where he held a Boston Strong Bake Sale raising almost $200 for The One Fund and passing out American flags to passersby in Faneuil Hall.

"Most recently, Shane heard a story on the news about a NY gentleman who got pulled over on his way from NY enroute to MGH in Boston. He had received a second chance at life and had minimal time getting to Boston. Shane read how he was unable to spend time with his children and enlisted some elves and brought Mr. Fritz two large bags of Christmas presents to celebrate when he got back to New York.

• Steven Marstjepovic, 11th grade, Quincy High School.

"A National Honor Society nominee and student council representative at QHS, Steven consistently strives for academic and community excellence. Over the past four and a half semesters, Steven has amassed an impressive 4.46 G.P.A. and is a perennial distinction and high honor roll achiever.

"Steven is also a person of high moral character and is heavily involved in community service activities. This

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1918 real photo postcard view of one of the two ancient slate quarries that were surrounded by Billings Road, Apthorp, Warwick and Marshall Streets in Norfolk Downs. First opened in early colonial days the quarries were a source of slate for gravestones, roofing tiles and stepping-stones for over 200 years. Several generations of the Billings family worked these quarries and were dealers of the stone. The slate found here, known as Braintree Blue Slate, was formed over 500 million years ago and is the underlying rock beneath most of greater Boston. Small outcroppings of the slate can also be found here in Quincy on Newport Avenue, East Howard and Adams Streets. Our more famous Quincy granite didn't come here until 250 million years after the slate had formed. Until they were filled with dirt in the late 1940s, these old water-filled quarries were a great place to fish for carp in the summer and to ice skate in the winter. They were always too murky for swimming; besides, it was only a few hundred yards to Wollaston Beach. Today this area is city-owned and zoned open space with few remaining signs of its quarrying past. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Ward 1 Special Election Called

By SCOTT JACKSON

Gov. Michael Dukakis cleared the way for Ward 1 voters to cast ballots in a special election to fill a vacant City Council seat when he signed a home rule petition changing Quincy's charter to take the responsibility for filling vacancies away from the council and giving it to voters.

Within hours of Dukakis approving the home rule petition, the council called for a special preliminary election on May 15 with the final election on June 12.

Less than 24 hours after the election was called, three residents took out nomination papers from City Hall – Mary Crowley Gregoire of Lennox Street, Michael T. Cheney of Rock Island Road, and Bernard Reisberg of Quincy Shore Drive.

Two other candidates – Kevin B. Davis of Rock Island Road and Robert L. Johnson of Bay View Avenue – also announced their intention to run for the vacant seat.

The election was called to fill the seat left vacant following the resignation of Leo J. Kelly. Kelly resigned his seat in January to become the manager of two federal housing projects in West Quincy and Germantown. He had served on the council for 10 years prior to his resignation.

TAX RATES AWAITING STATE APPROVAL

Mayor Francis X. McCauley and a retinue of city officials planned to meet with the state Department of Revenue to set the city's first tax rate under 100 percent revaluation.

If all went according to plan, the city's tax rate would be $21.95 per thousand for residential property and $32.50 for commercial. The City Council cleared the way for the fiscal 1984 tax rate by approving McCauley's classification plan and cleaning up a few loose ends of financial orders in committee.

Under McCauley's plan, residential would be taxed at a rate of 87.8 percent of full value and commercial at 130 percent.

Councillor Stephen J. McGrath proposed to shift those rates to 83.7 percent for residential and 140 percent for commercial to lesson the effect on homeowners. His plan would've created a tax rate of $20.93 for residential and $35 for commercial.

"It is our responsibility to balance the tax burden between residential and commercial property," McGrath said.

McGrath's proposal failed after no other councillor would second his motion to amend McCauley's plan.

The mayor was optimistic the state would give approval to the new rates, though he said it might not happen immediately.

"They don't usually make a decision right on the spot," McCauley said, "although last year I recall we got approval the next day by telephone."

CITY STUDYING VOTING MACHINES

Mayor Francis X. McCauley planned to review the feasibility of using voting machines for city elections, including possibly purchasing them one ward at a time over a period of six years.

The City Council had passed a resolution requesting such a study take place. Quincy was one of the few cities in the state still using paper ballots that were counted by hand, resulting in long and expensive hours of labor by election workers.

City Clerk John Gillis told the council that voting machines had been quite expensive in the past, but new punch card techniques could be instituted for $100,000 for the entire city.

QUINCY-ISMS

Quincy resident Joe Shea made recent trips to Iowa and Louisiana organizing Democrats for Walter Mondale…The City Council confirmed the appointment of James F. Eddy to a five-year term on the Industrial Development Finance Authority. He previously served as the director of downtown and economic development under then-Mayor Joseph J. LaRaia…The Montclair Men's Club planned to honor Brockton-raised boxer Marvelous Marvin Hagler, the undisputed world middleweight champion, at an awards night later in the month. Joe Gildea was dinner chairman…Sen. Paul D. Harold said state statistics showed crime in Quincy fell 17.2 percent in 1983 compared to previous years. There were 63 fewer car thefts, 448 less larcenies, 233 fewer burglaries, and 24 less robberies…Bridgewater State freshman guard JoAnn Runge of North Quincy was named the ECAC Div. III Rookie of the Year…Granite Cooperative Bank was offering plush Easter bunnies for a $250 savings deposit.

We Must Change Our View Of Addiction

Massachusetts is facing a serious health care epidemic spurred on from the rapid rise of addiction to easily obtainable and highly addictive powerful narcotics. Hundreds have died from heroin overdose deaths in Massachusetts since November, but we are only just at the beginning. Massachusetts has often been a leader in treating addiction problems in the past, but we are currently overwhelmed with the rapid rise and huge scale of this epidemic.

We have seen this before. Heroin itself was legally sold in the early 1900's as a cough suppressant before being outlawed because of its addiction becoming widespread.

We are facing this tragedy 100 years later with oral narcotics. And, with the release of an even more powerful narcotic, Zohydro, it may get even worse.

Opiate and heroin addiction among young people in Massachusetts has skyrocketed since 1999 and the numbers are staggering: 9.6% of our citizens age 12 and older were either dependent on or abused drugs or alcohol. That figure rises to 23.4% among 18-to-25 year olds.

Like many in our Commonwealth, this is personal. Some of our loved ones have struggled with the addiction of their children.

We are failing to treat this crisis with the resources it needs. Worse, we are still not seeing this tragic epidemic for what it truly is. Addiction is a public health issue, but it still carries the stigma of many of our outdated prejudices.

We need to stop viewing addiction as a character flaw, moral failing, or a failure that stems from poor parenting or poor values. These are attitudes that exist in subtle but obstructive ways. Addiction is a health issue and should be treated no differently than diabetes, heart disease or cancer.

We are prevented from radically changing our approach because of our "old way" of thinking. The ripple effect is clear when families struggle to find treatment centers for their loved ones or when youths with minor non-violent drug offenses fill county jails. We do not have enough beds in our treatment facilities of all types across the Commonwealth.

Current medical practice is inconsistent regarding replacement drug therapy versus full rehabilitation, which often leads to confusion and ineffective treatment. Insurance coverage presents too many barriers to proper rehabilitation and often interferes with the much needed continuity of treatment, which sends our young ones back into a cycle of using and addiction.

We need to re-educate our physicians on pain control and the proper use of narcotics.

Our students need to be better educated and we need to encourage more discussion in our communities on the dangers of prescription drugs and heroin. Our political leaders need to aggressively push the FDA and the pharmaceutical industry to develop and approve safer, less addictive drugs. As a Commonwealth, we need to say no to the FDA on Zohydro.

We will pay for this treatment, just by changing our approach. Most importantly, we will save the lives of so many of our fellow citizens.

A call to arms from our political leaders is necessary to lead us to this new understanding. This will lead us away from the old attitudes that are holding us back. This tragic disease is a preventable health problem, and the sooner we begin to recognize that, the sooner we will put the pieces together to change the lives of tens of thousands of families in our Commonwealth.

Quincy Bus Driver Actions Save Woman, Dog

Just a letter to let the paper know about a Quincy School Bus driver by the name of Jody Crowell. Back in December while returning to the bus yard traveling north on Quincy Shore Drive Jody came upon a woman and her German Shepard lying in the street after being hit by a car. Jody blocked Quincy Shore Drive with her empty bus and got off her bus to help the woman who was badly injured as was the dog.

Jody got down on the ground between the two and talked to the woman to assure her that they were both going to be ok. The woman was taken to a Boston hospital and was badly injured the dog was taken to Southshore VCA.

Jody searched the area vets and found the dog and gave VCA her personal credit card and told them to do what ever they had to for the dog – she didn't care what the cost. She then found the owners to let them know the dog was going to be ok. This kind of compassion shouldn't go unrecognized.

'Morocco - In Living Color' Exhibit At Crane Library

A photo exhibit entitled "Morocco - In Living Color" can be viewed during the month of April at the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy.

The exhibit featuring impressions of people, culture, landscape and architecture of Morocco leads the viewer on a diverse journey from the exotic markets of Marrakesh, to the narrow alleys of the ancient scholarly city of Fez, to native Berber villages, and to a camel safari in the Sahara desert.

A special reception with the artist, Maureen Fahey, will be held in the gallery on Sunday, April 6 from 2 to 4 p.m.

Culturally and linguistically, Morocco has been impacted over the centuries by both European (especially Spain and France) and Arabic cultures: Although influenced by the spice of these distinct flavors and of modern civilization on the traditional ways of life, Morocco maintains its own unique identity. Fahey's images of the Moroccan people capture the cultural diversity of this fascinating country. The photographs have been printed using a pressurized heat process on pearlescent metallic medium which intensifies the beauty of the colors. The presentation on high quality canvas allows the images to be displayed without a layer of glass separating the viewer from the image, thereby heightening the sensation of being present in the picture.

A native of Washington, D.C. now residing in Milton, Fahey began her photographic explorations with black-and-white film during high school in Heidelberg, Germany. After graduating from Harvard University she pursued a career in government-assisted and commercial real estate before becoming a full time travel photographer in 2011.

She is a member of the Milton Art Center, South Shore Camera Club (where her work has received several first place awards),Griffin Museum of Photography, and is a juried member of the Russell Gallery at the Plymouth Center for the Arts. Her work can be seen on her website, http://www.maureen-fahey.artistwebsites.com/.

Walk, Films, Beach Cleanup To Celebrate Earth Day

The Park Department and the Thomas Crane Library are honoring Earth Day with a month long "Celebration of Our Ocean."

On Saturday, April 5 at 9:30 a.m. Peter Fifield will lead a low tide walk to Raccoon Island for the Park Department's Environmental Treasures program. Participants should meet at the intersection of Edgewater Drive and Rock Island Road.

On Wednesday, April 16 at 7 p.m. the Thomas Crane Library, 40 Washington St., will screen "Ocean Frontiers: The Dawn of a New Era in Ocean Stewardship." The film will be introduced by Ben Haskell, Dep. Supt. of Stellwagen Bank National Marine Sanctuary.

On Wednesday, April 23 at 7 p.m. the Library will screen "Ocean Frontiers II: A New England Story for Sustaining the Sea." Following the screening local environmental groups will discuss their work.

On Thursday, April 24 families with children preK through 6th grade are invited to drop by the Library between 10 a.m. and noon for "Whales in Your Backyard!" activities. The celebration concludes with a beach clean up on May 3rd as part of Cleaner/Greener Quincy. For more information and rain date rescheduling, call 617-472-0799 or consult the events calendar at thomascranelibrary.org.

Meet The Authors Night April 8

The Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy, will host a "Meet the Authors" night Tuesday, April 8 at 7 p.m. featuring local authors who will discuss their work.

The following authors have confirmed they will attend:

Rich Feitelberg is a longtime writer of fantasy novels for adults who enjoy the thrill of world-changing adventures. The first of these epic novels is complete and Feitelberg is working on the second. He also has several short stories to his credit, which are available on Smashwords. Several of his poems have also been published. After a brief stay in Boulder, Colorado, Feitelberg settled in Quincy with his wife.

Uzuri Wilkerson was born in Atlanta, Georgia. Her family moved to Boston when she was nine years old. She is the second oldest of five. Wilkerson studied screenwriting at Wellesley College, where she learned to craft short scripts and videos. After graduating, she eventually moved back to fiction. She completed Sweet in 2009—the first volume of the "Bitten" series about a turf war in Boston between vampires and hunters. She signed on with Aziza Publishing during the summer of 2011.

Vlad Vaslyn is the author of Brachman's Underworld and Yorick, and he has appeared on sites such as Open Book Society, Yahoo! Shine, Indie Author News, Strange Amusements, and Digital Journal. His latest title, The Button, was published in 2013. His background as a newspaper correspondent and freelance writer has earned him dozens of publishing credits for local news articles as well. Vaslyn was raised in Groton and now lives in Lowell with his wife, Jordana.

Randy Staples: After 24 years of volunteer counseling, mentoring, and coaching children, ages seven to sixteen, Staples combined their experiences with his own and gave birth to the Sabrina Hunter series. Together, they address problematic social issues in a fantasy world environment, to reach children with the troubles they face in today's society. After raising six children, alone, since '96, he now lives north of Boston with his son, Jordan.

RJ Jeffreys is a published poet, the associate editor of the Tiferet Journal, essayist, produced playwright, radio show host, writing coach/mentor and a featured, guest writer and interviewee for numerous sites, media and publication outlets. His latest fiction anthology book, "Stories from a Holiday Heart" was self-published in Oct. 2012.

Maria Droste Benefit Fashion Show April 24

Maria Droste Services will host its annual spring fashion show "Bringing Hope to Life" Thursday, April 24 at the Lantana, Randolph, Honorary chairpersons for this year's event are Steve DesRoches and Ann Freeman.

The fundraiser will feature a cocktail hour followed by dinner, music, life and silent auctions and a spring fashion show.

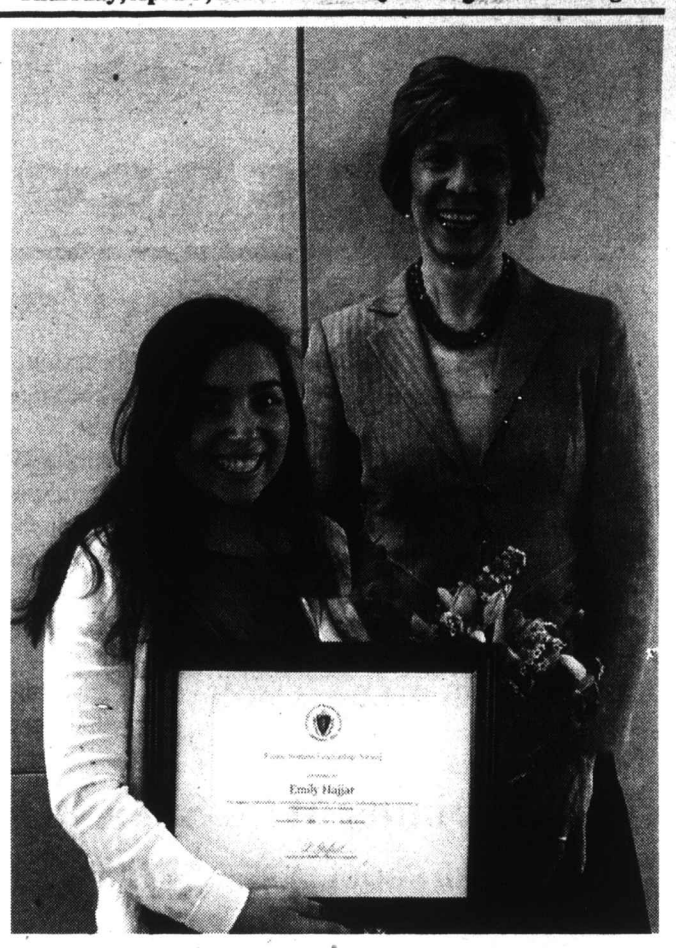

The show is dedicated to the memory of Darlene Sheehan. Several of Darelene friends, as well as other volunteers, will model both men's and women's fashions including spring looks from Caryn's Corner of Quincy and a special collection from Denise Hajjar's Couture.

There will also be a host of volunteers from the Quincy Fire and Quincy Police Departments who will wear collections from Hajjar's men's store of Quincy.

Hair styles will be under the direction of Susan Canavan, Aura of Quincy and make-up provided by Brittany Fasano.

Since the Agency's opening in 1992, the staff and volunteer professionals at Maria Droste have provivded critical support to individuals, couples, family groups with clients from seven to seventy, on an adjustable fee scale based on each client's ability to pay. The sliding fee scale is made possible by the generosity of supporting people in the community not unlike those organizing this special evening, as well as those taking to the runway and those attending that evening.

Advanced ticket purchase is required. For tickets and reservation call 617-471-5686 or visit www.mariadrostecounceling.com.

Rainbow Girls Participate In Walk For Hospice

The Wollaston Assembly of The International Order of Rainbow for Girls recently participated in the 2014 Walk for Hospice.

The Walk is a one-mile family-friendly event that supports Hospice of the South Shore. Hospice provides end-of-life care and bereavement services to 500 South Shore families each year. No patient is turned away, regardless of his or her ability to pay.

International Order of Rainbow for Girls is for girls ages 11-20. Originally created for young women whose fathers were members of a Masonic Lodge. Today's Rainbow Girls can still be Masonic daughters but they can also be friends, neighbors, and sisters or someone who wishes to join.

The basic teachings of Faith, Hope, and Charity remain the cornerstone of this Masonic Youth Group, with respect for each other's beliefs. Rainbow welcomes girls between the ages of 11 and 20, regardless of their race or religious background.

While Rainbow "Gets Girls Ready for Life" Rainbow is a non-profit organization that strives to give girls the tools, training, and encouragement to let their individual spirits shine. By providing members with a safe, fun, caring environment where responsible, older girls can interact and mentor younger girls through family involvement.

Rainbow Girls do community service projects like this with various organizations each year. Wollaston Rainbow is teaching girls responsibility, self-esteem, confidence, public speaking, and other life skills. Rainbow Girls build life-long, real friendships in their Assembly and across the country. Wollaston Rainbow's current members are from Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree, Abington, Marshfield, and surrounding towns.

Erin McMillen Cast In 'Les Miserables'

Quincy High School student Erin McMillen has been cast as Cosette in the musical "Les Miserables" April 25 and 26 in Lowell.

"Les Miserables" is being presented by ACTORS, inc. The mission of ACTORS, inc is to provide high quality theatrical productions to the region while benefiting a non-profit partner committed to the betterment of our community at-large. For this production, Destination Imagination Regions 4 & 5 will be the benefactor of a majority of the proceeds.

McMillen was selected for the cast after regional auditions were held in December of 2013. She was among hundreds of individuals who turned out for the casting call.

The Destination Imagination program encourages teams of learners to have fun, take risks, focus and frame challenges while incorporating STEM (science, technology, engineering, and mathematics), the arts and service learning. Their participants learn patience, flexibility, persistence, ethics, respect for others and their ideas, and the collaborative problem solving process. Teams may showcase their solutions at a tournament where everyone is brought together to compete and collaborate.

Tickets are available a by calling 978-984-3151.

Tai Chi Introduction At Kennedy Center

Vince Jornales will be at the Kennedy Center Tuesday April 22 at 10 a.m. to talk about the health benefits of Tai Chi. Jornales will give a demonstration of Tai Chi.

Tai Chi Chuan is an ancient system of martial arts and exercise that helps prevent and cure disease by loosening the joints and spine to relax points of tension in the body.

Tai Chi is often described as a "moving meditation" because the slow, turning motions relieve stress, improve concentration and create a sense of calm. The complexity and challenge of physical training keep the mind and body sharp.

Registration is required for this demonstration as space is limited. To register, call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1506.

Back Safety Topic April 8

Dr. David Smith of Milton Chiropractic & Rehabilitation, Inc. will be at the Kennedy Center Tuesday April 8 at noon to discuss back safety.

Dr. Smith will demonstrate proper lifting techniques and the basics of back safety.

To attend this presentation, call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1506.

Mindfulness Presentation May 14

The Quincy Council on Aging will hold a presentation on Mindfulness Wednesday, May 14th at 11 a.m. This presentation sponsored by Compass on the Bay in South Boston and Standish Village in Lower Mills, Dorchester will be held at the Kennedy Center, 440 East Squantum St., Quincy.

Mindfulness is a popular stress reduction program to help with overall health, relaxation, energy, enthusiasm, and self esteem. It will teach stress control and reduce anxiety, fatigue, blood pressure, headaches, chronic pain and sleep deprivation.

Registration is required for this presentation as space is limited. To register call the Kennedy Center at (617) 376-1506.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Ann Marie's Pecan Crusted Salmon

Almost every time I go out do dinner with my daughter Ann Marie and David, she will order her favorite: a salmon entrée.

So it didn't come to much of a surprise recently when I had dinner there and she served salmon – and it was so different, because she had found a great recipe for pecan crusted salmon.

It's only a few ingredients, but that's all it took for this wonderful dinner.

PECAN CRUSTED SALMON

4 slices salmon
¼ cup maple syrup
1 tablespoon dry mustard (other can be used)
1- tablespoon honey
1- tablespoon butter
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
6 ounces pecans (chopped)

Mix the syrup, mustard, honey, butter, Worcestershire sauce heat for about five minutes.

Place the fish in this sauce and then coat with the pecans. Bake in a 350- degree oven until crust is light brown.

Boiled Dinner With Smoked Shoulder & Beef

SMOKED SHOULDER, BEEF DINNER

3-4 pounds of beef (either bottom, top of the round or chuck)
5-6 pounds smoked shoulder
1 large head of cabbage (cut)
4 medium sized potatoes (peeled and kept whole)
1 large onion (cut in half)
4 carrots (cut in pieces)
1 small turnip (cut in pieces)

In a large pan, cover the smoked shoulder and beef with water. (You can use vegetable stock if you wish). Cover and begin cooking. That will take at least 2-3 hours depending on the size.

While that is cooking, prepare the vegetables. Remove the meats and add all the vegetables. Sometimes I place the meats in a warming oven and then when the vegetables are tender, and ready to serve I slice the meats.

I like the broth that the two meats make and like to serve it along with the vegetables and the meats on top.

In Sync Center Of Arts Offering Summer Programs

In Sync Center of the Arts, 550 Adams St., Quincy, is offering dozens of programs this summer.

Each week runs Monday – Friday from 9 a.m. to noon. Full descriptions are available on the In Sync website www.insyncarts.com. In Sync is also offering weekly classes for dancers and musicians to build and maintain their skills over the summer.

Budding singers, musicians and dancers can try Pop Star, Musical Theater, Dance Skillz, Boys' Hip Hop, ROCK!!! and Teen Beach Party. For little ballerinas, In Sync offers Tiaras and Tutus where 3-5 year olds can dance and live out their princess dreams. Dancers ages 5-8 can graduate to Ballerina Dreams, and ages 8+ who are ready for a challenge can join Building Ballerinas.

Adventurous children can sign up for Jedi Training or Pirates and Princesses. These camps feature imaginative movement games, obstacle courses, crafts and more! Little acrobats and clowns can explore all aspects of the circus in Under the Big Top. Yoga Kids explore the beach, the jungle and other exotic locales through yoga, while Yoga Adventures offers older children a journey to self-awareness and relaxation. Future Picassos can let their creativity soar in Imagine That! Art and Smart Art. Lego enthusiasts can stretch themselves with Lego Green engineering.

For older children and young adults, the skill of "pretend" becomes a very useful tool. Role-playing can help your grade school child get through a difficult time at school. Embodying a role model's confidence can boost a child at a weak moment. Walking into a school or job interview "pretending" to be a successful, confident, deserving young person can really make a difference. Having an active imagination helps young people think out-of-the-box when solving problems in school and work. Creative children become creative adults and find success as inventors, entrepreneurs, and leaders.

"Summer is the perfect time to allow your child the opportunity to let their imagination soar," said In Sync owner Teri Mangiaratti. "In our typical school day, our children are asked to perform in very measurable ways – multiple choice questions, standardized testing, and right or wrong answers are what fill their young brains all day long! When that final bell rings in June, it is truly beneficial for our children to explore different environments where there are so many different approaches to problems and there really is no wrong answer."

Improving Traffic Flow, Better Access Targeted At So. Artery Fuel Facility

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The flow of traffic around the Stop & Shop Fuel Facility at 450 Southern Artery is congested due to poorly timed red lights and improperly placed access points according to testimony heard at last Tuesday's meeting of the Board of License Commissioners. Ward 1 City Councillor Margaret Laforest brought the issue to the attention of Stop & Shop officials after hearing complaints that road rage and accident incidences around the station increase during peak business hours.

There are currently two access options for the fuel facility; one on Southern Artery that prohibits left turns and one on Broad Street. Road rage incidences have been reported as a result of turning into the station using the Southern Artery entrance.

"The accident data does support the need for some improvement in the area," said Laforest, who requested conducting further traffic studies in an effort to identify any other possible peak traffic times.

She suggested another possible solution would be to have a gas station attendant on hand on Fridays, Saturdays, and Sundays; times when people go grocery shopping and fill their gas tanks the most. Attendants would also be needed before and during snowstorms to assist in controlling the flow of traffic.

"We have been hearing pretty consistently that traffic has been backing up onto Broad Street and it has been inhibiting access for the local businesses," she said. "I appreciate Stop & Shop's willingness to look at the different issues."

Southern Artery between Coddington Street and McGrath Highway has consistent heavy traffic and increased accident data according to Quincy Police Chief Paul Keenan.

Laforest believes doing away with Southern Artery access altogether will help resolve the issue. "It's been pretty consistent that there's no flow there," she said. "They don't allow a left coming out of the gas station which I think is important; the police driveway is right there. You don't want to be blocking that. People do need to be able to take a left turn to exit that neighborhood."

The abutting property, which is considered blighted, may be converted into an off-street holding area for cars as they wait to fill their tanks.

Co-Chairman Andrew Scheele reiterated that red lights in the area are poorly timed and that adding an additional five seconds to their cycle would assist in alleviating road rage incidences.

Scheele also spoke to neighboring representatives of the Sun Factory Tanning Studio, Pearle Vision, and Fratelli's Pastry Shop who all voiced concerns that their businesses were being impacted by traffic back ups.

"When that light turns red and you can't take that left anymore where D'Angelos is, the other light turns green right away so there is no real opportunity for cars to pull up and take a left," he said.

LaForest credited the Quirk Ford Dealership with "eliminating some of the traffic coming in and out" by renovating their sales and service lot and moving their repair shop entrance from Broad Street to Field Street.

Stop & Shop officials will consult with the Department of Public Works and city traffic engineers to discuss red light timing and traffic flow.

A motion was passed to place the issue on file for further discussion.

License Board Briefs

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Board of License Commissioners took the following action at their March 25 meeting:

• The request of Friends of Troop 6, Houghs Neck for a one-day Wine & Malt License at Houghs Neck Congregational Church for Saturday, May 3 from 6 to10 p.m. was granted. For a $30 admittance fee, adults are able to construct and race pinewood derby cars. All proceeds will go to Troop 6. Food will be served at the event.

• A Special Use Permit for the Beechwood Knoll School for their Annual Diabetes Walk for Saturday, May 31 was granted. All proceeds will go to Juvenile Diabetes research. Additionally, a permit was granted for the Beechwood Knoll Annual Fall Festival for Saturday, October 5. Money raised goes directly to supporting school activities.

• The South Shore YMCA's request for a Special Use Permit for their Annual Quincy YMCA Y5K was granted.

The fund-raising event will take place Saturday, Aug. 23 and will begin at 9 a.m and end at 10:30 a.m. or once the last runner completes the race. The racecourse begins in front of the YMCA and ends at Faxon Field where awards are presented. Roughly 100 to 200 runners are anticipated to participate, rain or shine. The permit was unanimously granted.

• John P. Elfbaum – doing business as Q.A.T. Auto – was granted a Garage Repair License for 10 Independence Ave. Basic automotive repairs and oil changes will take place on-site in the already existing garage.

Before exterior building repairs can be done, Elfbaum must go before the Historical Commission to obtain a license as the facility is in a historical district. He has already completed interior repairs.

A total of eight cars can be kept on the lot overnight. Operating hours will be 7:30 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday. Closing time will be 4 p.m. Saturday and the business will remain closed on Sundays.

• Manager of State Street Sushi Ling Chai Zheng was granted a Common Victualer License for 10 Brook St. Operating hours are scheduled for Monday through Sunday, 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Breakfast, lunch, and dinner will be served. Zheng has roughly 15 years of experience in the restaurant industry and owns and operates several establishments in Boston and Cambridge.

• A Common Victualer License was granted to Play-Age, LLC, doing business as 86' Tway for1259b Hancock St. Manager Di Xiao intends to run the business as a bubble tea shop that serves light breakfast items.

Hours of operation will be Monday through Friday, 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. Prior to opening, fire prevention officials must perform a walk-through to determine if a fire suppression system is necessary for the kitchen area.

The board was notified that the Atlantic Market located at 243-247 Atlantic St. would be applying for a Keno License. No vote was necessary as a motion was not actively before the board.

Jake Louzan Honored By Easter Seals

Easter Seals presented Jake Louzan of Quincy with its 2014 Pioneer in Technology Award at a recent reception in Boston. Easter Seals provides services for people with disabilities.

Because of his disability, this bright and articulate 14-year-old has difficulty reading and using a computer keyboard. With assistive technology and training from Easter Seals, Jake is now able to keep up with his homework assignments by dictating to his computer, which also reads text back to him.

"This award is a tribute to Jake for his hard work and positive attitude," Easter Seals President Kirk Joslin said. "With Easter Seals assistive technology and training, and the support of his teachers and family, Jake is envisioning a bright future for himself."

The Easter Seals Assistive Technology program marked its 25th anniversary last year. One of the oldest programs of its kind in the nation, it is now one of the largest and best-known. Assistive technology includes a wide range of technology and devices that empower people with disabilities to reach their full potential.

Manet Community Health Center To Honor Curry Family May 1

Manet Community Health Center will award its most prestigious honor, the Manet Medallion, to the Curry Family for their longstanding commitment to cancer awareness and screening during Manet's 2014 Dinner and Auction May 1 at the Boston Quincy Marriott.

The public is invited to the annual event, Manet's biggest fundraiser of the year. Quincy Medical Center, a Steward Family Hospital returns as Manet's Dinner and Auction Event Sponsor. Quincy Medical Center provides essential emergency, medical and surgical services to patients in Quincy and surrounding South Shore communities.

The evening will mark the first time the Manet Medallion – given to an individual or organization who has demonstrated leadership and goodwill in community health – has been bestowed on an entire family. "Speaking for my family," said Sean Curry, "we are honored to accept this award, on behalf of the memory of my mother, Marie Curry, whose legacy lives on in improved cancer screenings and services for the citizens of Quincy and the South Shore."

Marie Curry, a local business owner, died in 1995 after a two-year battle with breast cancer. In 1998, the family created the Marie A. Curry Fund, which eventually raised more than $1 million for free mammograms and cancer education at Quincy Medical Center, primarily through the Quincy Medical Center Cancer Walk and other events.

"The Curry Family is the most logical recipient of our highest honor because of their deep and personal commitment to the health of our community," said Henry (Hank) Rittal, President of the Manet Community Health Board of Directors. "As fellow community members, we are grateful to the Currys for putting into action their belief that everyone deserves access to much-needed preventive care and wellness services."

Sean Curry, his sister, Julie (Curry) Johnson, and their father, Bob Curry, are expected to attend the May 1 Dinner and Auction to accept the award.

The evening will also feature entertainment by author and humor consultant Loretta LaRoche.

Manet recently opened its sixth practice site in Taunton. In addition, Manet is completing major expansions at its North Quincy and Hull practice sites, has introduced expanded diabetes prevention and wellness programs, and recently partnered with the Town of Weymouth and Mayor Sue Kay on increased cancer screening and education.

Manet also is coordinating an innovative health and wellness initiative with eight partners, via the Prevention and Wellness Trust Fund, signed into being by Governor Deval L. Patrick to help fight chronic illness and improve health outcomes while reducing costs. Manet will be expanding services in 2014/2015 to include on-site pharmacy, vision services and the integration of behavioral health and specialty care.

A wide range of other sponsorship opportunities are available, along with individual tickets at $125 each. All tickets are tax-deductible.

Support from the community, philanthropy, private and public grants helped Manet provide 14,300 patients with 52,000 medical visits in 2013. Those totals are expected to grow by another 5,000 patients over 16,000 visits with the addition of its new Taunton location. The 2013 Dinner & Auction alone helped to raise close to $100,000 in a single evening for patient services.

The 6 to 10 p.m. event at the Boston Quincy Marriott, 1000 Marriott Dr., Quincy, will include a cocktail hour and plated dinner in the Grand Ballroom, along with stories from grateful patients, an update on Manet's facility expansions, and a silent auction and raffle.

For sponsorship opportunities or individual tickets, contact Manet's Development Office at 617-690-6352 or events@manetchc.org.

Ginger Betty's Helps Family Of Young Bombing Victim

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Beth Veneto of Ginger Betty's Bakery is spreading a positive message with gingerbread and her fundraising efforts for the family of 8-year-old Martin Richard of Dorchester, the youngest victim of last year's Boston Marathon twin bombings.

So far, she's raised over $10,000 for the Martin Richard Foundation by selling her "Martin Richard gingerbread peace cookies," which honor his memory and echo his well-known sentiment; "no more hurting people." All proceeds from the sale of the cookies go directly to the Richard family.

The cookies, which are generously sized and decorated with a peace sign, are also being sold to raise funds for others injured in the bombing and are being included in care packages being sent to soldiers worldwide through the G. I. Ginger Betty Foundation.

Perhaps her crowning achievement has been winning Best in Show at last year's Gingerbread House Competition at the World Trade Center in Boston. Her creation entitled "Team Up for Peace" is an 8-foot-long game board entirely made of gingerbread, cookies and heaps of frosting and candy. The entry was the only one referencing the marathon tragedy. "I really thought it was so important to do that," she said. "but I wanted to do it in such a subtle way which I think we did by just incorporating the [marathon] finish line."

The idea came to her suddenly at 2:30 a.m. as the deadline for entries was looming. "I woke up... and said 'oh my gosh, time is ticking and I [haven't] thought of a theme yet!'" She quickly scribbled her ideas down and got to work the following day.

Neighborhood kids helped paint the base of the board and created light posts made of lollipops. Gingerbread men and women placed on top wearing Red Sox and Patriots uniforms pay homage to Martin's love of local sports teams. With the help of her employees she was able to complete the task in just a few weeks.

The prizewinning entry was donated to Housing Families, a non-profit organization that assists at-risk families with finding stable housing. Veneto, along with several of her friends and customers, raised $500 to buy back the piece at auction. It is now proudly displayed in the bakery.

Veneto's Sign Up for Peace Campaign encourages customers, young and old, to sign their name and pledge to do good deeds and act kindly in remembrance of Martin. She said the idea has taken off and that it gets kids thinking about helping others.

"We started doing that right when we started doing the cookies and I thought it would be cool, not only to share his message through the gingerbread competition and charity event that we did but to take it a step further and have some of the kids talk about it," she said.

Simple word of mouth is spreading the message about her cookies and she's noticed an outpouring of support from Quincy residents. "The people in this city and from Dorchester are just kind of rallying to do something nice."

Her self-published book "A Magical Ginger Betty Christmas" which was dedicated in memory of Martin and illustrated by Tim McLaughlin, is available for purchase at the bakery at 215 Samoset Ave. and online at gingerbettys.com for $20.

"In light of everything that's happened, I find that people are very positive," she said.

United Methodist Church Collecting Shoes For Marathon Memorial

Quincy Community United Methodist Church, 40 Beale St. will honor the Boston Marathon Monday, April 21 with a memorial of used running shoes.

"Part of the memorial will consist of running shoes, honoring all Marathon runners past and present," said Rev. Dr. Susan F. Jarek-Glidden, church pastor. With that goal in mind, the church has been collecting running shoes ever since last year's Marathon.

"If people would like to actively participate in the Memorial by contributing shoes, that would be wonderful," Rev. Dr. Jarek-Glidden said. "After the Memorial closes, the running shoes will be donated to Re-Run Shoes, a charity based in Amherst, which sends shoes to persons in need throughout the world."

Weather permitting, the running shoes will be placed on the Church's Beale Street front lawn. If it rains, the memorial will be held inside.

The memorial will be held from 2 to 5 p.m. At 2:49 p.m., the time of last year's Marathon bombings, Memorial Bells will be tolled.

Those interested in donating new or gently used running shoes should call t617-773-3319 before dropping of the shoes.

City Will Seek Financial Info From Developers

the city should review the developers' finances before making any commitments.

"If we're eating the elephant in small chunks going forward, wouldn't it make sense to have that 'show me the money' conversation up front?" Croall asked.

Planning Director Dennis Harrington replied that the city would likely do so in the wake of Street-Works' failure to finance their $1.6 billion project, $1.3 billion of which needed to be funded by the developer and its equity investors.

"You're saying it out loud councillor – I think that that's probably exactly what's going to happen," Harrington said. "After this experience I think that probably will be what happens."

The first step in the redevelopment will be sending out a request for qualifications (RFQ) for an experienced consultant, according to mayoral chief of staff Jim Fatseas. That consultant will assist the city on all aspects of development.

"This consultant will assist the city to navigate the redevelopment process going forward," Fatseas said, noting the consultant would be paid from the nearly $950,000 in consultant's fees and deposits forfeited by Street-Works.

After hiring a consultant, Fatseas explained, the city may then send out a request for development and begin working on new land disposition agreements for the city-owned Ross Garage and Hancock Parking Areas. Developments on privately-owned property wouldn't require such an agreement.

As reported previously, multiple developers contacted the city since Feb. 18 when the Mayor Thomas Koch put Street-Works on notice. Fatseas said Monday the National Realty & Development Corporation (NRDC) was one of the developers who contacted the city. NRDC had been involved in the Street-Works' project, serving as the master retail developer, and had been responsible for finding large retail tenants for the first phase of the project.

Downtown committee chairman Doug Gutro and Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci both asked city officials if other options, such as asking another developer to take over for Street-Works using the same LDA, could have been taken instead of terminating the agreement outright. Fatseas said administration officials and the legal team brought on as consultants all felt no other developer would be willing to step into Street-Works' shoes.

"No one would take on the additional responsibility or liability that they themselves did not negotiate. That was the opinion of the mayor's office. That was the opinion of the legal team," Fatseas said. "No one was going to step up and give us the same deal that was in the LDA, especially having not negotiated it."

James Shea, the attorney who represented the council when the LDA was negotiated in 2010, concurred that the city made the right decision in terminating the agreement.

"I think if you do these deals you have to be able to exercise your remedies," Shea said. "It's easy to say the developer put a lot of money into it, a lot of effort into it, and I think it's easy for a lot of governments to sympathize with that but you've got your job to do as well."

When asked by Gutro, both Shea and Robert Fishman, one of the attorneys advising the city on downtown issues, said Quincy faces no legal liabilities arising from Koch's termination of the LDA.

At Monday's meeting, Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee criticized the agreement with Street-Works, saying it was a bane to Quincy Center development.

"The LDA was a boon to lawyers but maybe a bane to the downtown redevelopment. I don't believe the LDA worked in hindsight. It was a very well crafted risk-balancing document; it was a document to control risk and exposure to the taxpayers of Quincy," McNamee said.

"It was way too exotic. Too many moving pieces. Very difficult to measure progress, although I thought it was a good document in that it had milestones and there was at least a way to assess progress. But I also think it hit partners, didn't allow you to financially stress partners. You never at any time never really knew whether those that were in had the financial wherewithal to complete the transaction."

McNamee voted in favor of the LDA when the council approved it in December 2010. The council supported it in an 8-0 vote, with then-Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi recused. The agreement was formally signed one month later in January 2011.

McNamee also noted that Street-Works was supposed to start construction with Step 1, located near the Ross Garage, instead of at Block 4 where they commenced with Merchants Row construction. Harrington said Street-Works' decision to start with Merchants Row ultimately caused them to stop any planning for Step 1; the LDA was terminated because the developer failed to submit plans for that part of the project.

"Street-Works took their eyes off the prize, which was downtown redevelopment, and settled on this 15-story building," Harrington said, referencing the developer's original plan to construct a 15-story residential building at the Merchants Row site. "When they diverted their attention and their funding to Block 4, they literally stopped work on Step 1… as their difficulties in Block 4 became insurmountable, it became too late to turn the jets back on in [Step 1]."

Work on Merchants Row began last summer before ceasing in the fall after investors become weary of the project's rising costs. The Quincy Mutual Group, an early investor in the downtown project, is now taking the lead on Merchants Row, working with Twining Properties. Fatseas said Quincy Mutual is negotiating with Street-Works for control of that block, which would allow them to go forward with construction.

Flood Insurance Maps Effective June 8

• Tuesday, April 8th from 5 to 8 p.m. at the Central Middle School, 875 Hancock St.

Those who have a federally backed mortgage, or plan to refinance with a federally backed lender, will be required to purchase flood insurance if they find that their home is shown in a high-risk flood area known as a Special Flood Hazard Area on the updated maps. Purchasing flood insurance before the flood maps become effective will lock in the lower-risk zone and could lead to significant savings. Residents are urged to contact their insurance agent or visit www.floodsmart.gov to learn more about how and where to get a policy.

These one-on-one workshops will allow residents to view the new maps one-on-one with subject matter experts, who can answer individual questions. Property owners will be able to understand how their properties may be affected and learn more about financial steps that they may need to take in order to protect their investment. Staff from FEMA and the Massachusetts Department of Conservation and Recreation will be on hand to provide one-on-one discussion and to answer questions.

Due to the ongoing development of procedures and implementing instructions, officials at this meeting will not be able to comment on the Homeowner Flood Insurance Affordability Act of 2014, signed into law by the President on March 21, 2014.

Residents should look at the new preliminary flood maps to become familiar with the flood risks in their community and to see whether their flood zone has changed. The maps can be viewed at each community's municipal office. Each community received both a paper copy and a digital copy of the new maps to share with their residents for review before they become finalized.

FEMA's mission is to support our citizens and first responders and to ensure that as a nation we work together to build, sustain, and improve our capability to prepare for, protect against, respond to, recover from, and mitigate all hazards.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century
by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
AS CLOSE TO ENAMEL AS HUMANLY POSSIBLE
Porcelain veneers are the aesthetic standard against which all other restorative procedures are compared when it comes to treating discolored or damaged teeth. The dentist can permanently bond these thin, semi-translucent shells of porcelain to teeth when the front surface of the tooth and the biting edge are in need of restoration. They may be used to correct broken or chipped teeth, permanently stained teeth, spaces between teeth, or misshapen or crooked teeth. While composite resin bonding may be a quicker and less expensive restorative procedure, porcelain veneers are exceedingly strong and natural-looking. They have a translucent appearance that lends a look of depth to tooth surfaces and closely resembles natural teeth.
Could you benefit from the cosmetic dentistry of having veneers? Early visits to your dentist can help ensure healthy and beautiful teeth. We provide a full range of dental treatments, including preventive, restorative, and cosmetic dentistry. Except in rare cases, gum disease can be prevented through daily plaque removal by brushing, cleaning between teeth with floss or interdental cleaners, eating a balanced diet, and regularly visiting us for professional cleanings. Call 617 479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com

Adams Green Road, Sidewalk Work May Start This Month

its intersection with Dimmock Street to the Granite Trust Building and from the intersection of Granite Street and Burgin Parkway east to Coddington Street in front of Bethany Congregational Church. Maple Street, the portion of Chestnut Street closest to the Granite Trust Building, and part of Washington Street near the U.S. Post Office building are also in the project zone.

A $7 million federal earmark is funding the road and sidewalk improvements, which among other things will include wider sidewalks, better handicapped access, resignalized intersection, and elevated crosswalks. The city will also spend $1 million items on new, ornamental streetlights and trees. Because federal funds are paying for the bulk of the project, the state Department of Transportation (MassDOT) is overseeing the construction.

Officials with Quincy's Planning Department and Robbie Burgess, an engineer with design firm Howard/Stein-Hudson Associates, provided the City Council's downtown committee with an update on the project Monday night. Kristina Johnson, Quincy's director of transportation planning, said MassDOT's final construction schedule for the project could be unveiled as soon as this week.

"The word on the street is the finalized construction sequencing, which is really going to illuminate what's really going to happen, is forthcoming over the next week," Johnson said.

When asked later by committee chairman Doug Gutro when the project would start, Johnson said it could start by the end of this month or in May.

The project, Burgess explained, will be done in phases. The first step will be installation of signage in the area and demolition of the three traffic islands in the affected corridor – the two islands on Hancock Street north and south of the church and the island at the intersection of Coddington and Washington Streets. Pedestrian crossings will be maintained, with jersey barriers used to create a safe zone in the middle of the road where the islands are now.

From there, sidewalk and road construction will take place in sequences, beginning near the Quincy Center MBTA station this summer and ending at the Granite Trust Building next summer; work on Granite Street would also take place this summer. The final finishing work, Burgess said, would conclude by mid-October 2015.

During the project the contractor will be limited to small work zones to minimize the impact on local businesses. The contractor also is responsible for ensuring people can access those businesses during construction of new sidewalks.

"We've got measures in the contract to ensure the contractor maintains access to the businesses while they're performing construction," Burgess said while presenting a slide showing a wooden ramp leading to an entranceway.

When Gutro asked how many businesses would require temporary access over the entire construction period, Burgess said between 50 and 75 businesses in the area would need temporary access at some point during construction, equal to between 80 and 90 percent of the shops in the corridor.

Burgess also said any lane closures would take place during off-peak hours.

As the construction of the roadway progresses, Johnson promised to provide timely updates to affected businesses and residents. MassDOT has already agreed to provide the city with weekly construction updates specifying what work will take place.

"They're going to give us the schedule a week ahead so we can push it out to all you folks," Johnson said. "It's going to be a lot of work but it's really important – I'm very passionate about public outreach and ensuring that folks have a really good understanding of what the impacts are going to be because there are going to be impacts and folks have the right to know."

The Planning Department also plans to host a preconstruction meeting for business owners and residents once MassDOT releases the final construction schedule.

Residents who attended Monday's meeting were given the opportunity to voice their concerns on the traffic work being undertaken as part of the Adams Green project.

Mark Bertman, the owner of Rogers Jewelers at 1402 Hancock St., said traffic changes being made as part of the Adams Green project could adversely affect not only his business and other ones currently in Quincy Center, but also any future development at the Merchants Row site adjacent to his store.

"It's a great plan except you're not doing business downtown and I am and I'm trying to protect my business. It's just that simple to me and I'm trying to protect the lot that we have half cleared and get that developed and get further down [Hancock] developed as all these plans have shown," Bertman said. "I think we're squelching it with this development."

Edgewood Circle resident William Zamzow also expressed concern over the new traffic plan, particularly having only one lane of traffic in each direction on Temple Street. He said situations like an accident or double-parked vehicles could lead to traffic delays throughout the area.

"The Temple Street section of what I'm calling the Hancock Street bypass is squeezed down to single lanes at a number of points, where it isn't necessarily necessary, so to allow really nice, wide sidewalks. I lived in San Francisco for years and they use trolley buses throughout the city. They're narrow streets and when a trolley bus goes off the line, traffic backs up all over town," Zamzow said.

"The model works as long as the roadways are open. If there are any impediments, it just shuts down."

New Academic Standards For High School Athletes

dards were drafted after the School Committee looked into policies used in neighboring community. Bregoli said the compromise reached requiring students to pass classes worth 25 credits is a positive step.

"It's a step in the right direction," he said. "Right now we're sending the wrong message to kids."

The current requirments, Bregoli added, are the minimum standard set by the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association (MIAA), the organizations that oversees high school athletics statewide. His proposal, he explained, means students could only fail one class in the core subject areas – English, math, science, history, and foreign language.

The new rule would take effect in September. For the fall semester next year, final grades for the 2013-2014 school year would be used to determine eligibility for students in grades 10-12; all ninth graders would be eligible for the fall semester. In subsequent semesters, grades from the preceding semester would be used to determine eligibility for all high schoolers.

Bregoli's proposal has the backing of at least half of the seven-member School Committee.

Committee member Noel DiBona, who is the coach of the Quincy Point Panthers youth football team, said he is pleased with new standards.

"Being a coach myself I was happy and delighted to see another coach – Paul Bregoli – come up with this plan," he said.

DiBona noted that some people believe coaches would do anything to get a player on the field, including lessening academic standards. He feels, however, that academics should come first.

"Academics are more important than getting kids on the field," DiBona explained. "Overall I'm delighted to see this."

Committee member Barbara Isola supported the new proposal in subcommittee. She believes each high schools' athletic director will be able to work with teachers to help student-athletes succeed in the classroom and on the playing field.

"As School Committee members wet set the policy and leave it up to the superintendent's leadership team, principals, teachers, and athletic directors to administer it," Isola said. "I'm very confident our athletic directors will be able to work with teachers. We want to see athletes succeed."

Committee member David McCarthy said some student-athletes familiar with the current academic requirements have been able to take advantage of them by passing only the minimum amount of courses required. The proposed policy, he explained, isn't onerous enough to put athletes at a disadvantage.

"I don't think it's putting anybody at a disadvantage," McCarthy said. "It's asking kids to pay attention and it's asking coaches to step up."

"Both schools have flourished over the last several years academically," he added. "It's an achievable goal we probably should have attacked a few years earlier. I applaud Mr. Bregoli."

The School Committee will vote on the matter at its Wednesday, April 9, meeting, which will start at 7 p.m. inside the temporary City Council chambers on the second floor of the City Hall annex. Bregoli said he hopes parents will use the open forum at the beginning of the meeting to voice their opinions on the proposal.

High School Students Attend Leadership Conference

Quincy Public School's sophomore and junior girls from both Quincy High and North Quincy High Schools recently attended the annual Leadership in Action Conference at Curry College. This event was offered by the Women's Business Connection of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce. Twenty-five Career and Technical Education students from Quincy High School and 15 from North Quincy High School attended the conference, along with teachers Marcia Forrester and Joan Walsh.

The daylong event, led by professional women, provided a host of workshops covering topics such as creating a positive profile and controlling one's social media footprint; developing a professional presence and first impression; how to stay organized to improve productivity, effectiveness, and focus; and mindfulness skills to help reduce stress and anxiety.

A panel discussion with successful women business leaders followed the workshops. Moderated by Colette Phillips (President & CEO, Colette Phillips Communications); the panel members included Maria Harris (Vice President, Director of Employment and Colleague Relations for Rockland Trust), Lindsey Kennedy (Pediatric Hematology/Oncology/Bone Marrow transplant nurse at Children's National Health Systems in Washington, DC), and Sargent Donna McNamara (Stoughton Police Department).

The highlight of the day was Keynote Speaker, Olympian Gold Medalist, Aly Raisman, The 19 year-old medal-winning gymnast and Needham native shared her inspirational story of her success and how hard work, commitment, and dedication are key factors in making ones dreams come true. She answered many questions from the students of her experience at the Olympics, winning a gold medal, being on Dancing with the Stars, and how she deals with the normalness of teenage life while staying committed to her dreams.

It was a professional, inspirational, and exciting event for our students as they realized the power of opportunity for women.

year, as the leader of both our SADD and Friends of Rachel groups, Steven has been the catalyst behind numerous acts of kindness designed to produce positive changes to the QHS community. He has spearheaded the Hero Campaign and Hero walk to raise money and increase awareness about the dangers of drinking and driving; and he has literally started a chain reaction of students helping other students and looking for the best in each other by constructing our 185-foot chain of kids being 'caught in the act of kindness' that was presented to the student body at our fall pep rally."

• Julia Mayo, 8th grade, Central Middle School.

"Inspired by an assignment in English class, Julia implemented a fundraiser for the Dianne DeVanna Center for the Prevention of Child Abuse and Neglect to bring the assignment to fruition. The program raises awareness of the issue of child abuse and provides services to families. The assignment was a community service project intended to think about helping the community and Julia was a student who decided to go forth with her idea.

"Community service is important to Julia and she demonstrates it by volunteering her time to prepare meals and deliver them to those in need. She is also part of helping out at the holidays and assembling and making gifts for those in need.

"Julia has a demanding caseload of classes and participates in Senate where she actively contributes. She understands the importance of being kind and a good citizen in school."

• Julianne Sheehan, 5th grade, Merrymount Elementary School.

"Julianne is caring and kind to everyone that she comes in contact with. After Typhoon Haiyan struck the Philippines, Julianne immediately started working on fundraising ideas. She decided to organize a whole-school initiative called "Pennies for Plumpy Nut," which supports Edisia, a non-profit organization in Rhode Island, which in turn provides food for the people of the Philippines.

"Julianne spoke with her teachers and administrators, created an informational flyer, and announced her initiative to all classes in the school. Though her project is still ongoing, she has been able to raise a significant amount of money through her penny drive.

"She is also very involved in the school community. She works with her peers to support various causes such as the Germantown Neighborhood Center Food Pantry and Project Bread. She's also involved in after school activities, such as participating in the production of Shakespeare's 'Romeo and Juliet.'"

• Paige Tompkins, 4th grade, Atherton Hough School.

"This is the second year that Paige has made a generous donation to our school holiday toy drive. This year she decided to forfeit her weekly chore allowance of $5 to raise money for the toy drive. For the past four months she made all of the beds, took out the trash and walked the dog as usual at home. She recently brought this money to Target and purchased four $25 gift cards. These gift cards will be sent with our school donations to Children's Hospital.

"Paige's generous spirit is consistently evident at school. She is mindful of the feelings of others and what she can do to offer help or support. She believes in "paying it forward" and her selfless, thoughtful acts make her stand out above the rest. Paige lives for fashion and is always impeccably dressed. She is a beautiful girl, inside and out. She works hard in school and her smile lights up the school."

• Amy Trillcott, 8th grade, Sterling Middle School.

"Amy is a quiet young lady who often goes unnoticed, but she is quietly learning to better not only her school but also her community. She is a Girl Scout who recently had the honor of carrying the American Flag for the troop in Quincy's Veterans' Day Parade.

"Amy is the Vice President of Student Council and has been a member of the council since 5th grade. She has helped with the Food Drive, the school store, fundraisers for the school, Pennies for Patients, Operation Smile Train and the Quincy Animal Shelter. Amy doesn't look for accolades; she just does what's needed because it's the right thing to do. She has a kindness about her that is so approachable by younger students who she is often befriending and tutoring.

"Amy is also a member of the volleyball team and the school band as well as being a high honor roll student."

• Gabriel Vilarino, 4th grade, Lincoln-Hancock Elementary School.

"Gabe demonstrates acts of kindness daily. This year, Gabriel took it upon himself to walk home a boy in the second grade who was afraid to walk home alone. A second act of kindness Gabriel displayed was helping translate in Portuguese for a boy who spoke zero English. When told he would earn tickets for translating, he said 'You don't need to give me tickets. I just want to help.'

"Gabriel demonstrates kindness, thoughtfulness; he is a good role model, patient, caring, a hard worker, a great friend and compliments many people."

Well done, Kiwanis Junior Heroes - and well deserved, too.

Quincy School Community Partnership Breakfast April 8

Boston Scientific, Dependable Cleaners, Public School Principals To Be Recognized

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Quincy School Community Partnership (QSCP) will be honoring Boston Scientific Corporation and Dependable Cleaners, as well as all Quincy Public School principals for their contributions at this year's 13th annual Recognition Breakfast, to take place April 8 from 8 to 10 a.m. at the Tirrell Room in Quincy.

"It's an opportunity for us to thank our business partners and recognize all of the great work that they do," said Executive Director of Career Technical Education and Instructional Technology Keith Segalla.

"Each year we choose three business partners to spotlight; to recognize them and to thank them," he said. "We thank all our business partners, of course, but we do recognize three a year and present them with a plaque and we highlight the ways they contribute to the school system and most of all our students."

The Partnership will be mixing things up this year by honoring all QPS principals as business partners at the breakfast.

"We're going to have a little spin this year. We're going to recognize our principals as part of the Partnership. We have all of these events and we're always asking them to be a part of the events and they make connections with the partners too because once we make the initial contact, the partners now work with the principal."

He said Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro thought it was "very important...that we should recognize the principals as partners in this collaboration."

"We're going to honor them this year for the first time and thank them for their support and their collaboration because it is a collaborative initiative. It's not just the partners. It's the principals; it's teachers."

Partners are placed into one of four categories called Partnership Pathways based on their work with the QSCP. Platinum Partner status is reached once $5,000 in contributions have been made. Gold Partners reach status once they contribute $3,500. Silver Partner status is reached at $1,500 and Bronze Partner status at $600.

"Boston Scientific Corporation...they were a strong partner years ago when I first came on board," said Segalla. "They're back and they're back full force which is fantastic."

The company is being recognized for its generous donation which has placed them in the Platinum Partner category.

"They didn't want to donate strictly to the Partnership funding...they said 'we want you to be creative with the $10,000 so what we did was we came up with an initiative and it's called the Boston Scientific Classroom Technology Integration Initiative," said Segalla.

With that money they purchased sixteen Surface II tablets and plan on implementing the new technology into the classroom in May.

"So 16 teachers...received these tablets and the whole idea is to take the tablets and integrate them into the classroom into a science and or STEM (Science Technology Engineering Mathematics) initiative."

The tablets will go to grade 3 and 4 classrooms.

Segalla attributed the return of Dependable Cleaners as a partner to Coordinator of the QPSC John Fagerlund. "He is bringing in new business partners," he said. In the two years Fagerlund has worked for the Partnership, more and more businesses have reached out to contribute.

The business, which is a bronze level organization, has provided students the opportunity to conduct mock interviews and strengthen job skills through internships. They are also currently in the process of adopting the Clifford H. Marshall Elementary School and may soon begin improving the exterior of the building as well as performing landscaping maintenance.

Partners, in exchange, receive advertising in QPS publications. Also, prominently displayed logos, a press release detailing the level of commitment a company has made, advertisements on the QPS website and the monthly school newsletter, prominent advertisement in a newsletter sent strictly to other partners, mini-grants awarded to teachers for classroom enhancement in the company's name, and complimentary tickets to many QPS events.

"We do have a featured benefit so as you give more, you get more," Segalla said.

Donations are used for site support, student support, and career connections. Site support is partners donating equipment such as furniture or computers. Student support is where partners work directly with children in the classroom "They could be mentors, they could be the job shadowing opportunities piece as well where they do come to Quincy High School in the spring and interview every senior in a career and tech program," said Segalla.

Career connections enable job shadowing, internships, job opportunities, and teach interviewing skills.

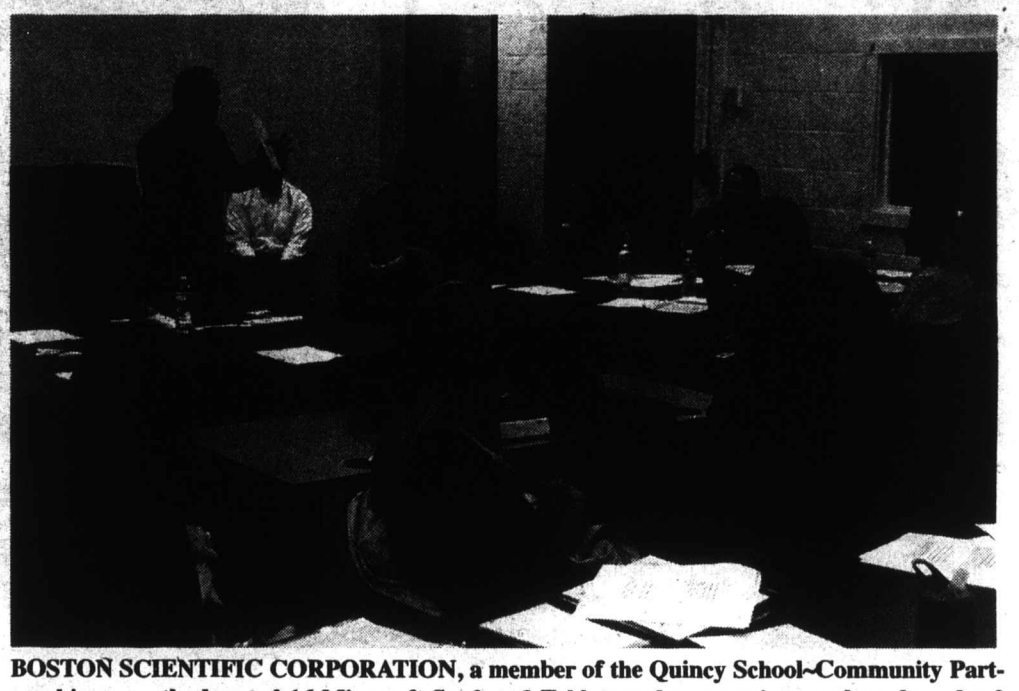

Currently there are 82 active partners "Those funds go to three areas; they go to the arts and music, they go to technology, and they go to funding all of the events we have each year," Segalla said.

Events include the Tis' the Season Symphony and Song concert, the Credit for Life event which teaches seniors how to properly manage their funds upon graduation, and the Read Across America Dr. Seuss Birthday Celebration which encourages retired QPS staff and high school students to read Seuss' books to elementary school children.

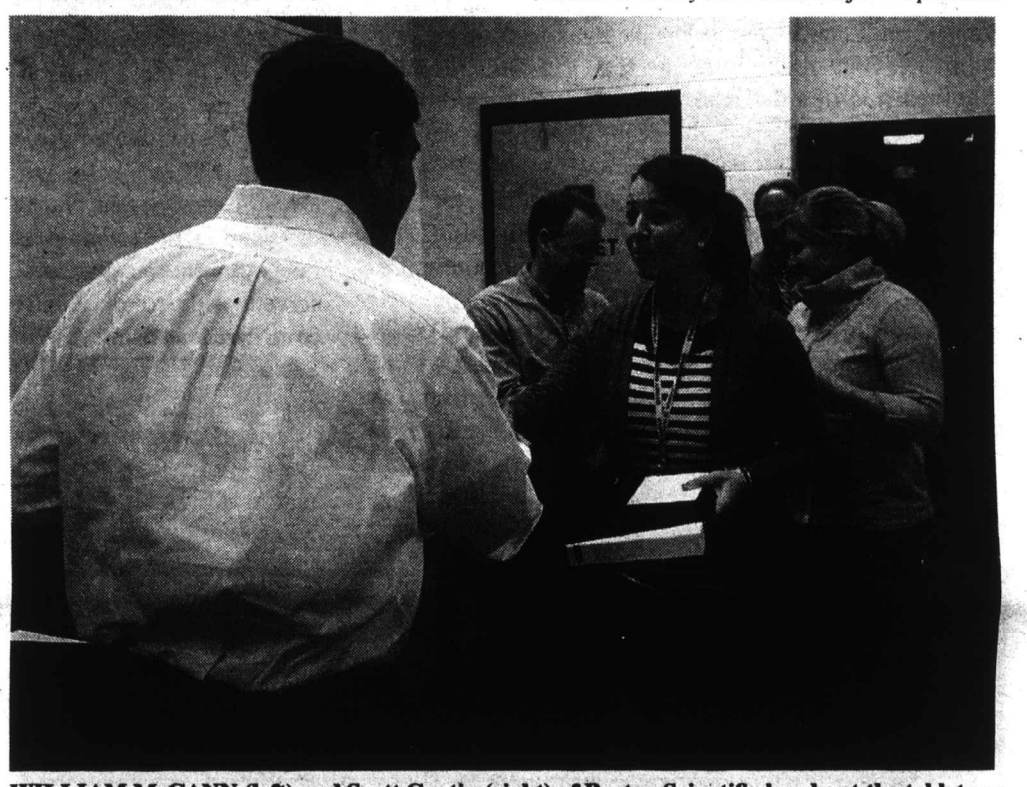

Their donations fund not only equipment but stipends for extended day programs such as after school, tuition based music programs, making them accessible to all students. "Donations from our partners helps support the music and the arts," said Segalla.

The decision to honor specific partners is not based solely on financial contributions, but also on the time and effort invested in interacting with QPS kids. "Its not always about the financial; we want the partners really to work with our kids, with student and site support, which is just as important as the financial, but it's the connection that they're making with our kids that is the most important."

"Funding is tight at times and to use these extra funds is a great thing to support programs, support kids, support our teachers," he said.

BOSTON SCIENTIFIC CORPORATION, a member of the Quincy School~Community Partnership, recently donated 16 Microsoft Surface 2 Tablets and accessories to selected grades 3 and 4 Quincy Public Schools classrooms. Here School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro addresses the 16 recipients of the donated tablets. The tablets will assist school staff in integrating the most up-to-date STEM (science, technology, engineering, and mathematics) content into their classroom instruction. Photos Courtesy Boston Scientific Corporation

Peewee A Team Wins Cape Cod Tournament

Defeats Arlington In Shoot-Out For Crown After Wins Over Danvers, New Jersey, Tri-Boro

On the weekend of March 7th, the Quincy Youth Hockey Peewee A team arrived on Cape Cod to compete in The Cape Cod Classic Hockey Tournament at the Charles Moore Arena in Orleans.

The first game was against the Danvers hockey team. Quincy quickly went up 2-0 after the 1st period. A balanced attack on offense, with contributions from Stephen Flynn and Jake DeFranco, and solid defense from Griff Batson and John Riley resulted in a 4-1 lead after 2 periods.

Danvers tried to get back in the game, but Quincy was too strong at both ends of the ice. With solid goaltending from Nolan Walker, the team completed the 1st game with a 5-2 win.

On Saturday morning, in their 2nd game, Quincy faced the New Jersey Devils. Both teams played solid two-way hockey. New Jersey scored first in the 1st period. Quincy came back with Nick Murray scoring assisted by Jack O'Brien and Danny Kelly.

Quincy struck again, when Matty Keohane scored on a pass from Ronan Hurley. Just more than a minute later, Tommy MacPherson scored on a rebound shot from Jake Lamonica. In the 2nd period, Daniel O'Leary took a pass from Matty Keohane and beat the goalie to take a 4-1 lead.

The Devils responded with 2 goals toward the end of the period to make it 4-3, Quincy. In the 3rd period, the Devils tied the game with 3:14 remaining. With 58 seconds remaining, Daniel O'Leary took a pass from Ronan Hurley and scored the game winner. Goalie Thomas Richardson was outstanding in net.

In the late game on Saturday, Quincy faced off against Tri-Boro. Quincy led by a goal after 2 periods of play. In the 3rd period, Quincy picked up the pace, scoring 2 unanswered goals that resulted in a solid victory. A victory that placed the team in the tournament finals. A shutout was preserved with solid defense from Brendan Bailey, Will Scola, and Peyton McGaffigan.

The championship game was played Sunday morning against Arlington. Quincy opened the scoring in the 1st period when Matty Keohane scored on a pass from Daniel O'Leary. At the end of the 2nd period, Arlington tied the game at 1-1.

The game remained tied after 3 periods, resulting in a shootout. In the shootout, Quincy outscored Arlington with 3 goals, securing the win and the tournament championship.

Quincycles Group Bicycle Ride April 12

Quincycles welcomes riders for its first bicycle ride of the year to take place Saturday, April 12 beginning at 7:30 a.m. at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St.

The ride is part of the "Second Saturday" schedule of rides which will feature 15-20 mile routes through Quincy and surrounding communities.

Besides April 12, other rides are scheduled for May 10, June 14, July 12, Aug. 9, Sept. 13, Oct. 11, and Nov. 8.

Beginning in May, Quincycles will host "Third Saturday Easy Rider Rides" for cyclists who desire a shorter and slower pace or are new or returning cyclists. These rides will begin at 9 a.m. and will feature local rides within Quincy.

Easy Rider Rides are scheduled for May 17, June 21, July 19, Aug. 16, and Sept. 20. Additional information about the 2014 Ride Schedule, and more information about Quincycles, is available on their website at www.Quincycles.org, by emailing info@quincycles.org or by calling 617-471-0258.

Quincycles is a group of Quincy residents advocating for bicycle infrastructure on Quincy's city streets and promoting responsible bicycling as a means of transportation, recreation, and exercise.

Its next public meeting will be held on Thursday, April 24 at 7 p.m. at Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, 308 West Squantum St., North Quincy.

12-Year-Old Nathan Sleiman Already A Track All-American

Garners Honors At National Track, Field Championships

By JOE REARDON

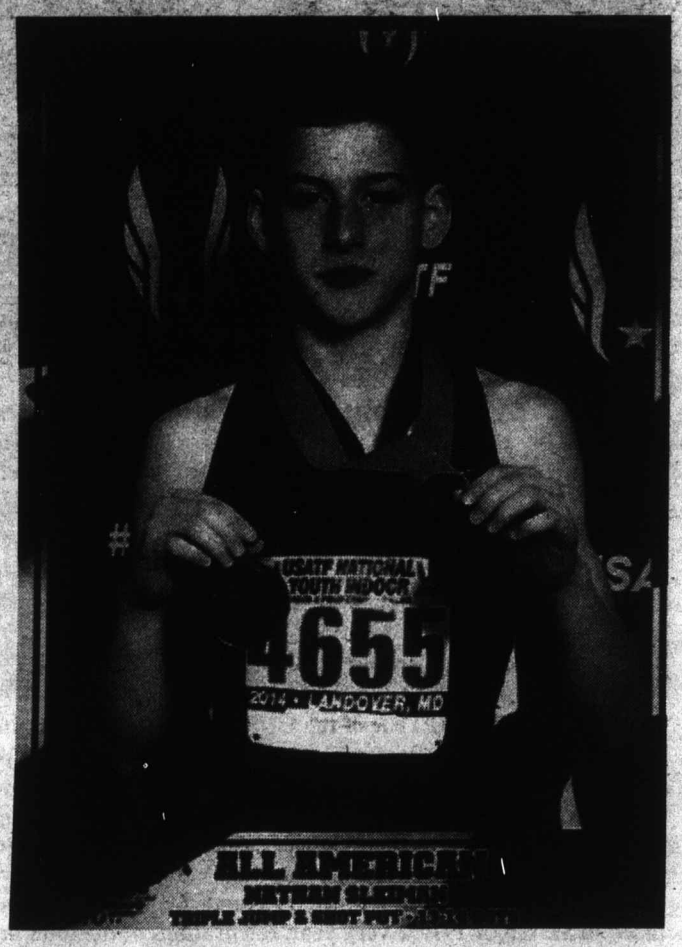

Twelve-year-old Nathan Sleiman of Quincy has only scratched the surface of his true potential on the track.

And to think just what the talented Atlantic Middle School seventh-grader could achieve with a little more seasoning is nothing short of sensational.

Nathan capped off a huge winter on the indoor circuit by garnering All-American honors in the triple jump and shot put at the USA Track & Field Indoor National Championships March 7-9 at the Prince George's County Sports Complex in Landover, MD.

Possessing a distance runner's build at 5-feet-4, 105 pounds didn't hinder Nathan in the shot put. He punched out a personal-best heave by over 5 feet at 31-7-1/4 inches to place a solid fifth in the weight event. He then proceeded to pick up his second medal, this time in the triple jump, where he stretched to a 29-2-1/2 effort for sixth overall - another best-ever effort. Logistics were somewhat of a problem for Nathan because they were being run at the same time and it was rare to have an athlete to compete in those two events at that level.

Nathan wasn't intimidated by the field in the shot put, despite going up against some competitors who were over 200 pounds. He relied on his near-flawless technique to clinch a medal with a staggering new personal best.

NATHAN SLEIMAN, age 12, of Quincy, with his medals after winning All American honors in the triple jump and shot put at the USA Track and Field Indoor Championships in Maryland.

"I wasn't that good at the shot put going into nationals," said Nathan. "I'm small. I used the glide technique. I was comfortable with that."

Nathan's dad, Ally Sleiman, has been training him and enjoys the time they spend together. "He's very hard working and has a great work ethic," Ally said. "He's very dedicated and disciplined too. He never did either of them (shot put and triple jump) before six to eight weeks ago. He's a quick learner."

Ally was a heralded athlete in his own right. A member of the Class of 1992, he was the captain of the Quincy High track team, where he ran the 200 and 400 and threw the shot put. Ally also played football and wrestled. His biggest claim to fame was being a two-time alternate for the Olympics in Greco-Roman wrestling in 2000 and 2004.

As good as Nathan has been in the field events his real strength just may be on the track. It could turn out that he makes the most noise in the 800 meters and mile.

Racing in the 800 at the Reggie Lewis Center at the USA Track & Field New England Youth Indoor Championships in February, Nathan took nearly five seconds off his personal best with a last-lap kick for the 2:32.78 win and New England title. Previously, he checked in with a 2:36.14 fourth-place finish at the Northeast AAU Indoor Championships at Harvard University on February 16.

Nathan was pleased with his strategically sound win in the 800 on the notoriously fast Reggie Lewis Center track. "The 800 went pretty well," he said. "I stayed behind. My 400 split wasn't fast so I really picked it up."

Nathan clocked a 5:40 split in the mile during a 3,000-meter race and is geared up to bring his 800 time down to the 2:20-2:25 range – hopefully faster. He has clocked a 2:29 in practice.

"I think I could run a good mile – somewhere under 5:30," Nathan said.

Ally believes it's too early to tell what his best event will be given the versatility he's shown so far at such a young age. "It's hard to say," said Ally. "He's well put together. I'm thinking he's going to get too big (to be a distance runner). It's hard to tell. He's 12 years old. Right now I'd say his best events are the 800 and the triple jump."

Q/NQ Rugby Opens April 10

The rugby programs from Quincy and North Quincy high schools have joined forces for the upcoming spring season.

The combined rugby team has began its preparations for the spring 2014 season March 17 on O'Neil Field with its first official training session of the year.

This marks the first year that the respective programs from Quincy and North Quincy will unite to form one city-wide team. It will be the sixth year of high school rugby in the city.

Quincy High School began play in 2012 while North Quincy's program was formed in 2009. The club has been placed in Division 2 by the state's governing body for rugby, the Massachusetts Youth Rugby Organization (MYRO).

The major highlight this season may not be who the club is playing, but where. With the help of the athletic departments from both high schools, the club was able to secure Veteran's Memorial Stadium as its venue for home games for the season. This marks the first time high school rugby will have the opportunity to play at the City of Quincy's premier outdoor athletic facility.

This season's schedule features five regular season games with the possibility of post-season play. If the club does not qualify for the state finals they will be invited to play in a statewide jamboree during the Memorial Day weekend.

The rugby season opens Thursday, April 10 at 5:30 p.m. vs. Algonquin at Veterans' Memorial Stadium.

Other home games are:

- Thursday, April 17 at 5:30 vs. Marshfield
- Wednesday, May 7 at 5:30 p.m. vs. Milton

Scheduled road games are Thursday, May 1 at Scituate (time and place TBA) and Thursday, May 15 at Wilbraham & Monson Academy (time TBA).

The state semi finals are May 20 at 4:30 p.m. (place TBA) and state finals/jamboree May 24 (time and place TBA).

Captaining the side is senior back Usama Masood (North Quincy), a fourth year player. Having played in nearly every match during his career, he adds a wealth of experience that should help steady the team throughout the season. In addition, the side returns two players who were named to the Massachusetts Under-17 state side that defeated Connecticut 55-7 last summer to win the New England Challenge Cup: sophomores Derek Huynh (North Quincy) and Mac Deegan (North Quincy). Huynh, a starting varsity offensive lineman for the North Quincy football team last fall, brings a physical presence that opposing teams will have difficulties matching. Deegan, also a football player, has a high work rate that perfectly complements his speed and agility.

The Quincy/North Quincy rugby club is led by head coach and faculty advisor Brian Casey, his sixth season running the program. He is assisted by Oscar Colman (fourth season), Alexander Deegan (first season), Martin Dunham (fouth season), and Denis Kariuki (first season), with added support from the high school athletic directors Michael Joyce and Pat Lane, and the Boston Irish Wolfhounds Rugby Football Club.

IS YOUR CHILD FALLING FLAT?

While flatfootedness is a common condition among young children, the vast majority of flatfooted children develop normal arches without treatment by age 10. As for the rest, it is important to differentiate between a congenital, rigid flatfoot and a normal, flexible flatfoot. The chiropractor can do this by observing the child's foot as he or she performs a toe-raise. If the arch remains flat and rigid during this exercise, it is likely indicative of a rigid flatfoot that may require treatment by a specialist. If, however, an arch is visible as the child stands up on his or her toes, it is indicative of a flexible flatfoot, which will respond to chiropractic treatment to ensure normal development of the arch.

At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we can help you and your children with foot and ankle problems, as well as any other of your chiropractic needs. The structure and function of your joints, muscles, nervous system, and other systems of your body must be balanced and working together properly. You will get the most updated care in a safe and comfortable environment. You will be listened to and respected. Your questions will be answered, and your concerns will be addressed. We look forward to seeing you at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. Call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Ankle inflexibility in a child can be a sign of a tightened/ shortened Achilles tendon and a flexible flatfoot condition.

Fallon Ambulance Scholarship Program

Fallon Ambulance Service announces its Scholarship Program for students attending Quincy, North Quincy, Milton, Braintree and Weymouth High Schools.

Two scholarships will be awarded at each school. Selected recipients will receive full sponsorship of EMT training at an Accredited EMT training institution that is designated by Fallon Ambulance Service.

Recipients will also have an opportunity for employment with Fallon Ambulance Service, upon completion of the sponsored EMT course, state examination and receipt of the Massachusetts EMT Certification.

Applications are available at the designated school's Guidance Offices.

Interested candidates are asked to submit all documentation along with the application for the Fallon Ambulance Scholarship to the appropriate Guidance Department or School Representative no later than April 11. All applications will be subject to review and final decisions will be released by May 9.

Award certificates will be given directly to the recipient and notification will be sent to the High School's Guidance Department or School Representative.

For more information, students are urged to contact their individual guidance departments or Tina King at 617-745-2177.

Quincy Defeats Cardinal Spellman, 17-9

BOYS' LACROSSE

By JOE REARDON

One of the Quincy High lacrosse coaches made an observation last week during practice that the Presidents' capacity to learn the nuances of the game was very high and the team was already picking up what was being taught them.

Quincy High had a fast start out of the blocks last Friday after two weeks of practice, pulling away from Cardinal Spellman during a dominating third quarter for a decisive 17-9 nonleague win at Veterans Memorial Stadium.

The Presidents were holding onto a 7-4 lead at halftime and struck with six tallies in the third to put the game out of reach. Quincy had plenty of fire power around the net the entire game with Steve Ross leading the way with five tallies. Tom Pugsley added three tallies, Mitchell McGowan fired how four goals and Brian O'Callaghan chipped in with a pair in the runaway victory.

The game marked the first in Cardinal Spellman history with lacrosse becoming a varsity sport this spring. Quincy head coach Matt Bowes was happy with the win and effort in the team's opener. "For it being the first game I was satisfied, I'd say," said Bowes. "It's one of those things where we don't want to get overly satisfied. We knew coming in that this was a newer team, a newer program. We'll just keep it in perspective and move forward from here."

Quincy spent the majority of the first quarter in the Cardinals' end, but had trouble putting shots on net. The Presidents worked through the tightness and the offense began to flow with some crisp passing, particularly for a March game in the rain. Pugsley put the Presidents on the board 4:13 in when he took a McGowan pass and fired it past Cardinal Spellman goaltender Darren Woolf for the 1-0 lead. Jake Hallisey fed McGowan for his first goal for the 2-0 advantage with 6:28 remaining in the first. The Cardinals cut the lead to 2-1 with 5:20 left before Ross, O'Callaghan, Pat Burke all scored for the 5-1 lead and the Presidents led 5-2 at the end of the first quarter.

Bowes has concentrated on the fundamentals at practice and the Presidents kept it simple on the field, working to get close to the Cardinal Spellman crease. The Cardinals cut the lead to 5-3 53 seconds into the third, but Hallisey made it a three-goal contest with a hard tally just outside the crease with 5:38 left in the half. The teams traded goals in the final three minutes with Ross scoring the final tally with 1:03 left for the 7-4 lead.

"The game plan was just to focus on our game. I know it's going to be a theme all season - not to worry what the other team is doing," said Bowes. "We're doing our own job. There are certain scenarios I have them ready for. I actually don't have any set plays yet. In certain situations I have them in certain spots. I wouldn't say we have any plans as of now. I told them at halftime that they needed to loosen up. We were starting to drop passes left and right. I told them to loosen up and have fun."

The Cardinals didn't expect the scenario of Quincy scoring six goals in the third period to pull away to a 13-6 lead after striking first to make it 7-5. Ross went top corner with 9:06 left for the 8-5 lead and Woolf made three impressive saves before Pugsley took McGowan's pass and fired it home to make it 9-5. McGowan closed out the scoring in the third with 3:21 left on a shot from 15 yards out. O'Callaghan, Ross, Sean Brennan and McGowan all scored in a productive fourth quarter.

"They came out and really responded well in the second half," said Bowes. "That third quarter was unbelievable. They kept it on right through the fourth. I think I got every single guy on my roster on the field today. It's great for the first game."

The team still has plenty of work to do to get better, but Bowes knows the potential, smarts and athleticism is there for a run at the tournament. "Right now one of our biggest weaknesses is our transition defense," Bowes said. "When they're pushing the ball up the field I think we're a little quick to come upfield and play the ball and we're leaving players open. But I think that's going to come with time. We just need a little more game experience. Coming in I didn't know what to expect. We do have a lot of hockey guys and the hockey team did very well. As a coach, I knew we were going to have some athletes. It's kind of my job to just teach them the game.

"The nature of the high school game, for lack of a better word, sloppy at times. I think right now what we're trying to get really good at is the transition game and broken-play situations because you don't see the slow down offense you see in the college game. And we want to work on the fundamentals of catching and throwing. There's some times out there where they can't catch the ball. It's not that they're not capable. They just need to loosen up a little bit. I'm just going to keep with the fundamentals and focusing on the little details - picking up ground balls and making the easy plays. It can be a simple sport if you do the little things very well."

Michael Francis AWHS Hall Of Famer

MICHAEL FRANCIS (second from left) of Quincy was recently inducted into the Archbishop Williams High School Athletic Hall of Fame. Francis, a 1987 graduate of the school, was a standout hockey player for the Bishops. He was among eight new inductees who were enshrined at a ceremony held at The Lantana in Randolph. "Our inductees represent the very best that AWHS had to offer and their season and career accomplishments have stood the test of time," said Dennis M. Duggan Jr., Esq., AWHS president (far left). "They were leaders, role models, captains, and league all-stars, and their feats were recognized by our local and area newspapers. Together our athlete inductees answered every challenge, exceeded every expectation and motto, lived up to the legacy they inherited and set the standard for those who have followed." With Duggan and Francis are Nick Menzel, Class of 2014 and AWHS Athletic Director Gordie McClay.

North Quincy Bows To Plymouth South, 10-5

BOYS' LACROSSE

By JOE REARDON

It's no surprise the North Quincy lacrosse team was tight in its season-opener last Thursday against nonleague opponent Plymouth South. That's a given and fully expected with a young team looking to find its identity over the course of 20 games.

Head coach Mark Nutley only wants the young Red Raider crew to take a deep breath and concentrate on not forcing the pace of the game, but set up the offense and work on getting high-percentage shots.

Plymouth South benefitted from five North Quincy penalties to pull away to a 10-5 win at Veterans Memorial Stadium. The Red Raiders showed definite flashes of offense that should be prevalent all spring. Nolan Greene had a hat trick and Mike Finn scored North Quincy's first two goals to account for the Red Raiders' offense against a Plymouth South team that won four games a year ago and, like North Quincy, is looking for a turn around from 2013.

"I said it in the locker room," said Nutley. "It's the first time playing someone different. They get the ball and they go crazy. They don't know what to do – they run it in right at people. I want to work on slowing things down and just relaxing and moving the ball offensively. We have too many guys doing one-on-one stuff. We don't have depth so we have to keep moving the ball around."

North Quincy had problems the entire game taking possession of ground balls and putting together a consistent offensive attack. The Red Raiders' best exchange came with 50 seconds left in the third quarter when three passes led to Cornelius Koch feeding Greene, who fired in a shot from 10 yards out to cut the Panthers' advantage to 6-4. Brendon Johnson beat North Quincy goalkeeper Benson Chau (six saves) in the opening minute of the fourth period, but the Red Raiders made it a two-goal game again, 7-5, with Greene scoring his third goal on an assist from Finn.

That's as close as North Quincy would get as Finn McKee, Rick Barnhardt and Max DiBella all scored for the Panthers in the fourth to pull out the win.

Chau was brilliant the entire game with his best save coming with 5:23 left in the third when he got in front of a wicked shot by McKee from 20-yards out.

Finn gave North Quincy the early lead with 3:22 left in the first on a shot from the top of the crease that beat Plymouth South goalkeeper William Freeland (six saves). Brendon Johnson tied it 1-1 with 1:01 remaining when he got off a hard shot on a strong surge to the net. North Quincy retook the lead with 40 second left on Finn's second tally on a pass from Greene to make it 2-1. Plymouth South scored four more times in the half to take a 6-2 bulge into halftime.

"Defensively we played ok, but the ground balls were terrible," said Nutley. "Benson Chau played a great game in net, but we didn't help him out front. When the ball's on the ground we have to do a better job helping him. That's what we've been working on the last two weeks – ground balls. We don't have a lot of depth. We do a lot of running to get our guys in shape. When I see guys not hustling or picking up ground balls it kind of bothers me."

Despite the team's youth, Nutley is confident it will improve with every game, cut down on its mistakes and gel into a tourney squad.

"We have a lot of young guys which is definitely good for the future, but unfortunately we want that right now. Another thing I stressed is that we're not good enough to get penalties. We gave them five man-down goals today. Take that away and it's different. It's a 5-5 game. We have to work on that, staying out of the box. We definitely want to go .500 and make the playoffs. That's one of our big goals that we talk about all the time. We've got some talent and we can put the ball in the net. We have a good goalie and we have a good defense so there's no reason we shouldn't be .500. That's our number one goal right now, to make the playoffs."

North Quincy Boys' Volleyball Sweeps Quincy

By BILL GRIFFIN

In the early matches, experience is priceless. Improvement will come with practices, games, and varsity seasoning, but in the first weeks, a core group of proven players frequently decides who wins and who loses.

North Quincy's talented, veteran net trio of Efthim Butka, Jackie Chen, and Oresti Bega played the big points with confidence and touch in a terrific first game and then controlled the pace and flow of the match to lead the Red Raiders to a 3-0 volleyball win over Quincy Monday afternoon at the Quincy High gym.

North (1-1) rallied from a down a set point for a 27-25 win in the opening game and then posted decisions of 25-8 and 25-15 in the final two games to down the Presidents (0-2).

"Oresti has played four years, Efthim has played three and Jackie has played two," said North coach Jason Cai whose team went 17-4 last year before losing in the opening round of the tournament to New Bedford. "They are my go-to guys, the heart of the team. We have some inexperience at other positions."

Early in the season as the younger players develop, their experience is important."

"I liked our aggressiveness and the way we competed in the first and third games," said Quincy coach Jacqui Niosi. "I thought we hit with power and played with good effort. But we had three players out there who hadn't played volleyball before this season. North is a very good team. It's a case of gaining the experience we need."

The first game was a treat. There were 10 ties and nine lead changes. The largest lead was five points – Quincy was up 22-17, just three points away from winning the game. Javier Smith swung away from the net and Henry Yip and Jerod Lin did a fine job keeping points alive, returning hard smashes and forcing mistakes by the Red Raiders.

"The first game was rough. The big thing was our serving. We made too many mistakes on our serve. We cut down on the serving mistakes in the final two games and that made a big difference," said Cai.

The Presidents drew ahead 25-24 on a Lin winner and were one point from the game, but skill and experience took over for North. Chen (nine kills, two aces) drilled a kill, Bega (28 assists) won off his serve and Butka (10 kills, three blocks) made a perfectly-placed touch volley at the net for three straight points and the game.

"Jackie is a hard hitter," said Cai. "I talked with Efthim about placing the ball more. He doesn't have to crush it every time. He has good touch. Oresti has played a lot of big points for us and it shows."

Butka, Bega, and Chen turned the match to North, but the most interesting contribution came from 6'9" Anthony Green, who backboned the basketball team's 23-2 season and is making his varsity volleyball debut in the spring of his senior year. He has much to learn about the game, but you can't teach height and athleticism. He plays the middle of the net on the front line, and when he gets on top of a slam, the ball is not coming back.

"I thought his improvement from the first match was phenomenal," said Cai. "Timing is what he needs to learn and he will because he's a hard worker. He's great on balls he can get on top. Nobody is going to block those. He needs to work on the quick-hitting plays when the ball gets on him before he has time to set up."

Green played about half the match and had 12 kills and one block. He was especially effective in the first game when he had seven winners (four slams, two touch volleys and a block). He was in the middle of a 9-3 run for North which brought the Red Raiders back from a 7-3 hole early in the game.

"I can make contact with the ball. I need to work on jumping and hitting straight down on it with power. I also have to work on when to hit hard and when to place a shot. I'm enjoying it," said Green.

Vinny Tran (two kills, four digs) served with power and played a solid net game for the Red Raiders. Junior Calvin Ma and sophomore Zheng Hao Zhang (five digs) each played an excellent all-around match.

Brian Sullivan had nine assists, Jia-Cheng Zhou added four kills and Yip had four digs in solid efforts for the Presidents.

"I think we have some good offensive power, it's matter of getting the basics and the fundamentals down," said Niosi. "Henry (Yip) and Jerod (Lin) played well on defense. Phu Tang had a good match on the outside."

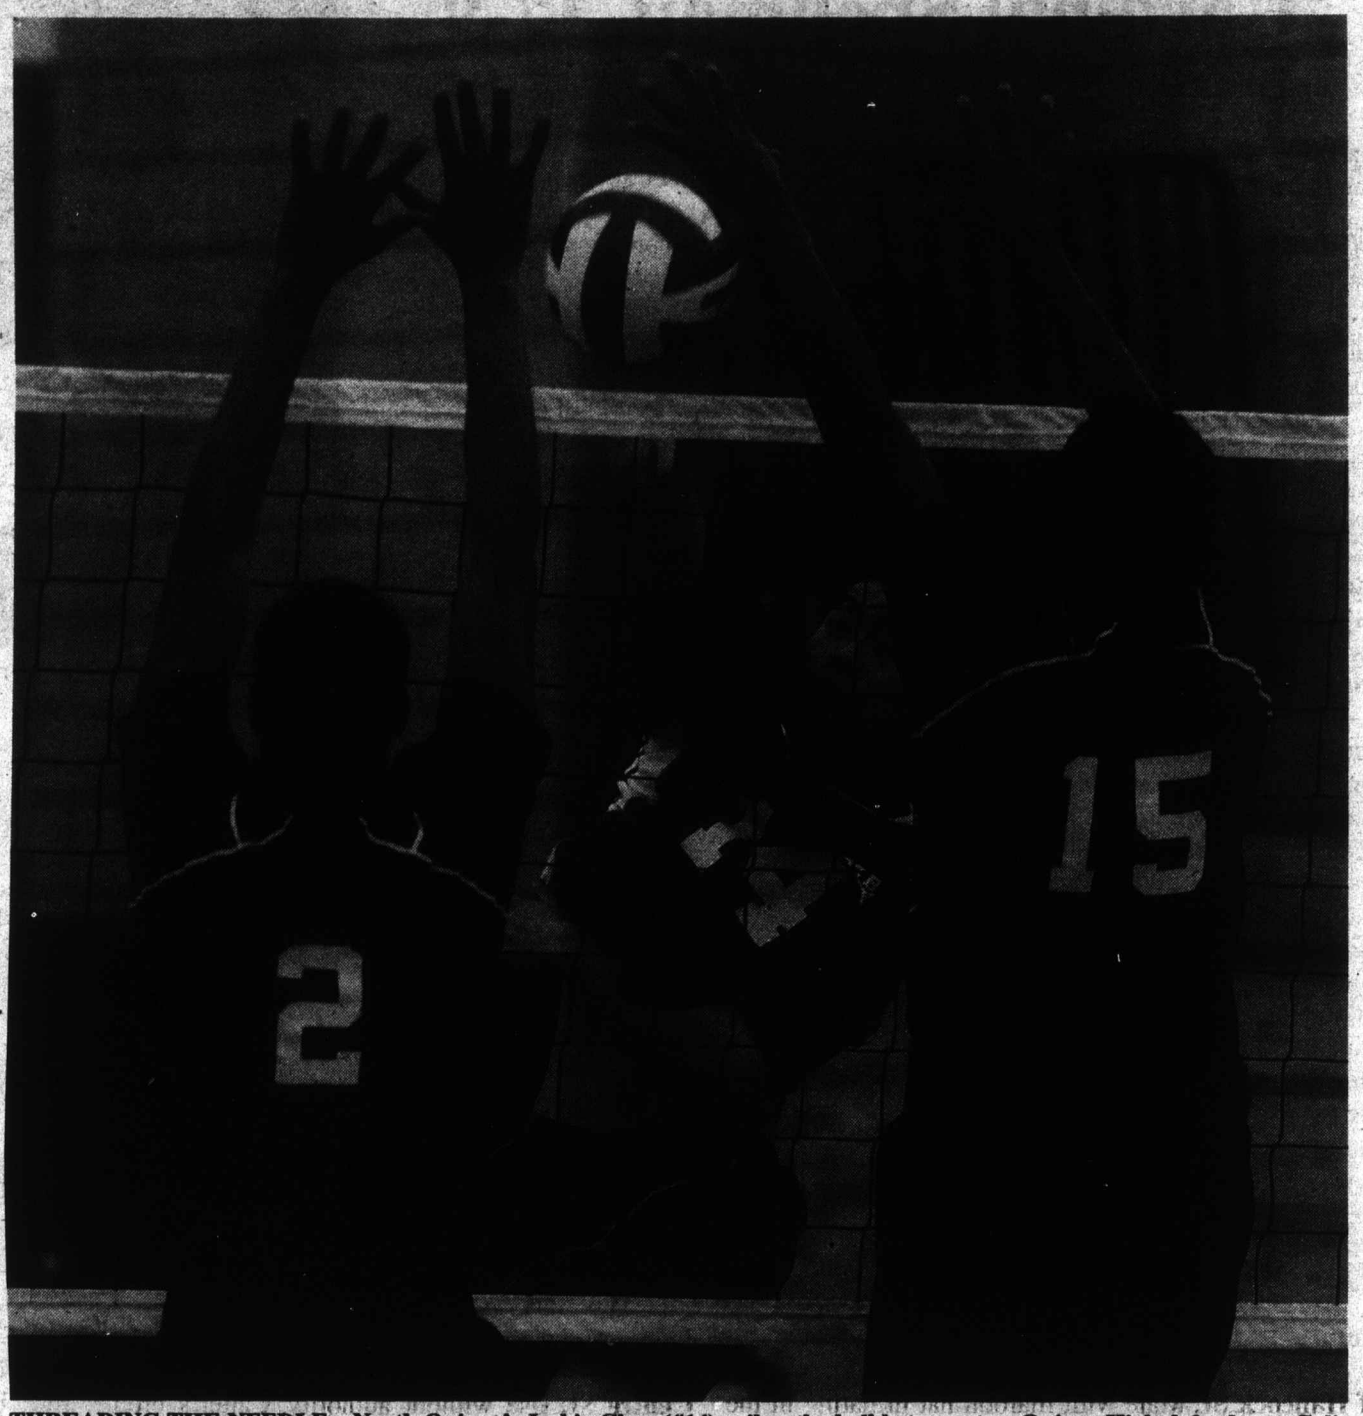

Niosi is in her first year as head coach for the boys team. She has been a successful coach for the girls team in the fall, consistently leading her club to runs at the league title and berths in the tournament.

"I coached boys JV a long time ago, so it's not something completely new," she said. "You might work on offense and hitting a little more with the boys, but it's basically the same thing. It's fun working with athletes who want to improve and get better. The players need a little time to get used to my style and expectations, but we'll improve as the season goes on."

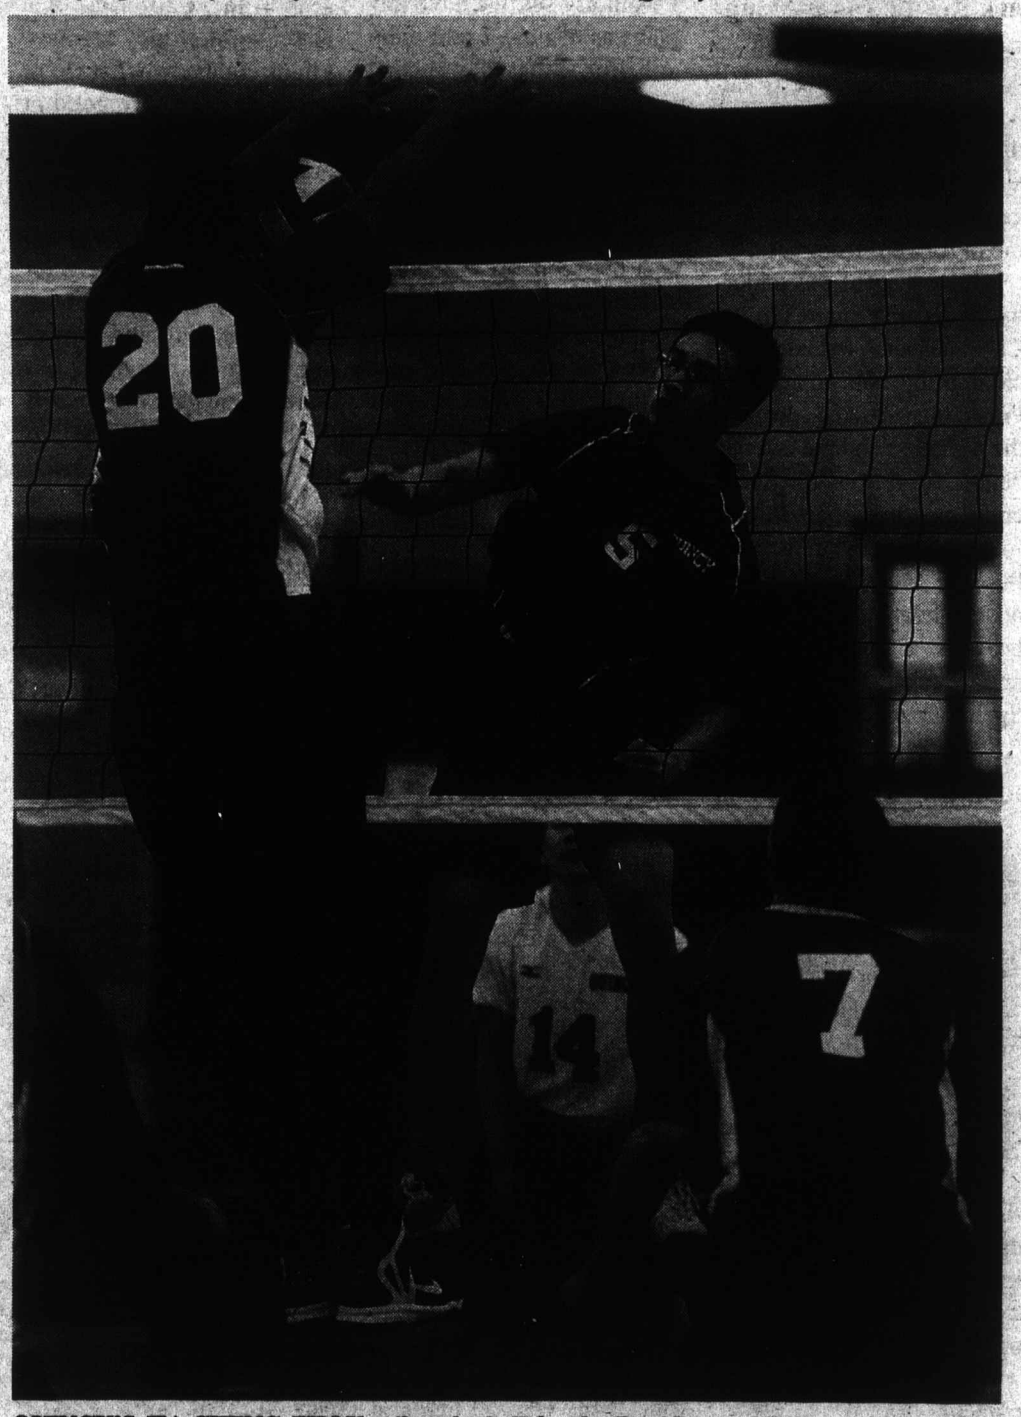

For North, there is more than a little carryover of the good feeling from the basketball team. Tran, Green, Chen and and Butka were all key members of North's hoop team which went to the sectional finals. Solomon Umoren is on the JV team. Kyle Richardson, like Green, is making his first varsity volleyball showing as a senior and chipped in with a kill late in the third game. Six of North's top eight basketball players are on the volleyball team

"I hope it carries over," smiled Cai. "They are used to the pressure. Our goal in to make the playoffs and if we do, they should play with ice water in their veins because they have all played in big games."

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

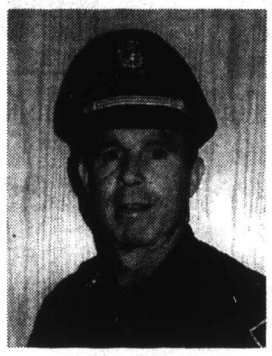

On Sunday, March 23, 2014, at approximately 9:20 a.m., Officer Chris Klier was dispatched to the Putnam Street area regarding a suspicious male breaking into cars. Officer Steve Cleary responded to assist.

The caller from Putnam Street stated that a male wearing a dark blue hoodie was checking car doors and fled after the caller yelled at him. He ran towards Furnace Brook Parkway. Two minutes later, Officer Cleary located a male matching this description in front of 261 Southern Artery, which is close to the crime scene.

Officer Klier responded and noted that the suspect had some minor scratches on his head and face, with a small amount of blood on his pants. Officer Cleary advised the suspect why they stopped him and that he (the suspect) matched the description given by the caller. After receiving Miranda rights, the suspect stated he was recently "kicked out of a substance abuse treatment center in Boston" and had been out all night. He added that he was just coming from the main library in Quincy Square and walked around Quincy High School to his current location.

When asked about trying doors to cars, the suspect blurted out, "I'm not an idiot - I break into cars at night - not during the daytime. Yeah, some guy just accused me of breaking into his car." The suspect said he was in the area of Putnam Street and accidentally brushed up against the driver's side door of a parked vehicle as he was walking. When asked what his most recent arrest was for, the suspect said it was for, "B&E to a motor vehicle in the nighttime."

Based on this information, Officer Cleary conducted a search of the suspect's outer garments for any weapons. In the right pocket of suspect's sweatshirt, Officer Cleary located a small plastic bag that contained several pieces of jewelry. The suspect immediately offered an explanation, stating that his girlfriend gave it to him and he planned to sell it. He gave his girlfriend's name and telephone number to confirm his story. Officer Cleary called the girlfriend and she said that she was unaware that he had the jewelry and that the suspect was her ex-boyfriend. She said she not give him any of her jewelry and was coming to the Officer's location to identify the jewelry.

LT. DAN MINTON

While Officer Cleary detained the suspect, Officer Klier met with the caller on Putnam Street, who said that he looked out his second floor window to see a male suspect walking down the street. As the suspect approached the caller's home, the suspect walked up to the driver's side door of his vehicle, turn his body so his back was towards the vehicle, and then reach his hand behind him and pull on the door handle. The caller said he opened the window and yelled at the suspect, who immediately fled on foot.

At this time, the ex-girlfriend arrived and confirmed that the jewelry was her personal property. She stated she ended her dating relationship with the suspect because of his substance abuse problems. She said that she lives in Wollaston and was in the process of moving, which is why she did not notice her missing jewelry. She added that the suspect came to her residence a few days ago and briefly on this morning around 7:00 a.m. but she told him to leave. She believed it could have been on one of these occasions when the suspect stole the jewelry from her apartment. The jewelry consisted of several pieces of white gold and silver with an estimated value of over $400. The suspect, 31 years old and homeless, was placed under arrest and charged with "Receiving Stolen Property over $250 and Attempt to Commit a Crime (B&E Motor Vehicle in the Daytime). Nice Work!

Interior Decorating Tips

Email Your Question To Barbara Graceffa

I just received a beautiful cut crystal bowl from my grandmother. Rather than leaving it in my china cabinet, can you please give me some ideas on how to use it? Marie

Dear Marie,

Kudos to you for wanting to use this beautiful object in your everyday décor. Here are a few ideas. In the bedroom, use it on your bureau top or vanity table to hold make up, nail polishes, or bracelets. On your dining room table, use it as a seasonal centerpiece to hold floating flowers or candles, pinecones, mini pumpkins and gourds, even Christmas ornaments or Easter eggs, if you celebrate these holidays. In any room, you could fill it with potpourri. In your bathroom, use it to hold unwrapped soaps. Finally, place it on the foyer table to hold your keys and sunglasses.

Dear Secretary of the Interior,

I like a monochromatic color scheme. How to I make it stylish without being boring? Annie

Dear Annie,

By definition, a monochromatic color scheme uses tints and shades of one hue. The key is to use textures in your room. People typically understand how to use color, pattern, and different sizes and shapes to add interest to a room, but many forget to add texture to the mix. Try some of these ideas: tufted fabric and/or nailheads on furniture, fringe on the area rug, a clay vase, baskets, quilted throw, nubby fabric or lace window treatments, a straw or grapevine wreath, and any glass, crystal, mirrored or metal objects. Have fun pulling it all together—a well pointed monochromatic room can be very stylish when you add textures.

Fair Housing Forum At City Hall Wednesday

The Metropolitan Area Planning Council (MAPC) in partnership with the City of Quincy and the towns of Braintree, Holbrook, Milton, and Weymouth will kick off the creation of a new Fair Housing Action Plan for the South Shore this spring.

Quincy will hold the first in a series of three Fair Housing Forums for area residents to learn about fair housing issues in the area and to share ideas about actions municipalities and their community partners can take to address them.

The first forum was set for Wednesday (April 2) from 6:30 to 9 p.m. at Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock St.

The next upcoming forums will be held in Weymouth on Wednesday, April 16, 6:30 to 9 p.m. and in Braintree on Wednesday, May 14, 6:30-9 p.m.

The final plan will incorporate input on fair housing issues and actions to remove impediments to fair housing choice from stakeholders in local and regional organizations and government agencies.

Dinner will be provided at all forums. All events will be conducted in Chinese and English. MAPC will be working closely with partners and established community organizations in the area to ensure that all residents have an opportunity to participate. All residents are welcome to attend any of the meetings.

The Fair Housing Action Plan is being funded through a Sustainable Communities Grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) via MAPC.

For more information, contact MAPC Assistant Director of Land Use Planning Jennifer Raitt at (617) 933-0754 and jraitt@mapc.org. For more information about the project and to register for upcoming forums, visitmapc.org/sc-funded-fair-housing#southshoreai.

'Quick Pitch Competition' For Entrepreneurs Tonight

The Quincy Center for Innovation (QCI) and Eastern Nazarene College (ENC) announce the first "Quick Pitch Competition" will take place Thursday, April 3 at the QCI, located at 180 Old Colony Ave. in Quincy.

The free event will begin at 6 p.m. and is open to the public.

The Quick Pitch Competition is an opportunity for entrepreneurs to "pitch" their product or idea to a panel with the chance to win cash and in-kind prizes which may be used to help further their business idea.

The Quick Pitch Competition consists of two "tracks": a community track for which anyone from the general public could apply, and a student track, for which any student from Eastern Nazarene College, Quincy College, Curry College, or UMass Boston could apply. The application deadline was March 22.

Of the applications received, five entrepreneur finalists have been selected to pitch for the "community track" and two from the "student track."

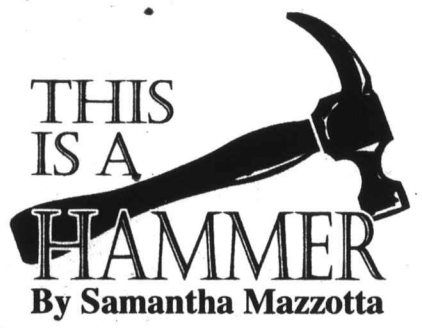

The 2014 finalists are:

- Youfouria LLC
- BagTags, LLC
- BidSource
- Canary
- Tablet Pistol Grip 360
- Mora Communications (ENC student team)
- Visio Marketing (ENC student team)

The prizes awarded will include:

- First place: $2,500, plus 3 months of free space at the QCI
- Second Place: $1,000, plus 3 months of free space at the QCI
- Student Track: $1,000, plus 3 months free space at the QCI
- Plus, the crowd will vote for their "Fan Favorite" winner of $500.

Drafty Windows A Costly Nuisance

Q: Our front room windows have never been very good at keeping out drafts on windy nights, and in the summer, it's the hottest room in the house. Do we need to replace these windows? -- Charlene T., via email

A: Drafty, leaky windows have a number of causes -- from warped or old frames to single-pane windows and more -- but completely replacing the windows and frames can be quite costly.

Your electric company may offer an energy audit kit -- or you can even send a professional to perform an energy audit -- at low or no cost. A basic kit can determine that hot or cool air is escaping the house, while more detailed audits can determine where that air is escaping.

Another way is to simply bring in a window replacement contractor to inspect the front-room windows, determine what's wrong and present an estimate for the cost of repair or replacement. This is the costliest option, so be certain the problem is severe enough to warrant window and/or frame replacement. Consider getting two or three estimates from different contractors to compare prices.

In the long term, investing in new, higher-quality windows can save a lot in heating and air conditioning costs, and help make the front room more comfortable year-round.

In the short term, you'll want to take some inexpensive measures to prevent drafts and, in the summer, cool air from escaping.

If you've performed an energy audit or have been able to figure out just where outside air is blowing through, you can lessen the problem. Air entering under the sash can be blocked by placing a length of foam weatherstripping along the underside, where the sash meets the frame. Thinner weatherstripping can be installed vertically along the frame to prevent drafts from entering between the window and the frame.

Install double-paneled curtains on all the windows of the room. In the winter, these provide an extra buffer between drafts and you. In the summer, these solid curtains can be pulled shut when the sun is shining into the room, to help keep the room cool.

These short-term measures can save some energy, but to really make that room comfortable, take a serious look at replacing the windows, particularly if they're old or the frame or sash are visibly warped.

HOME TIP: Take a tour of your home and make note of as many improvement or maintenance tasks that you can find. Then create a schedule to tackle a few of them at a time.

Deed Scam Targets New Home Buyers

Solicitation From 'Registered Property Services'

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell is warning Norfolk County residents about a different version of a deed scam solicitation being made to consumers.

This increasingly reported version of the deed scam seems to be targeting new home buyers, as well as others involved in real estate transactions around Norfolk County.

Norfolk County residents who recently purchased property should be cautious about a solicitation being sent from an outfit called Registered Property Services located in Sioux Falls, South Dakota. This official looking correspondence appears to be a bill and even includes specific property information.

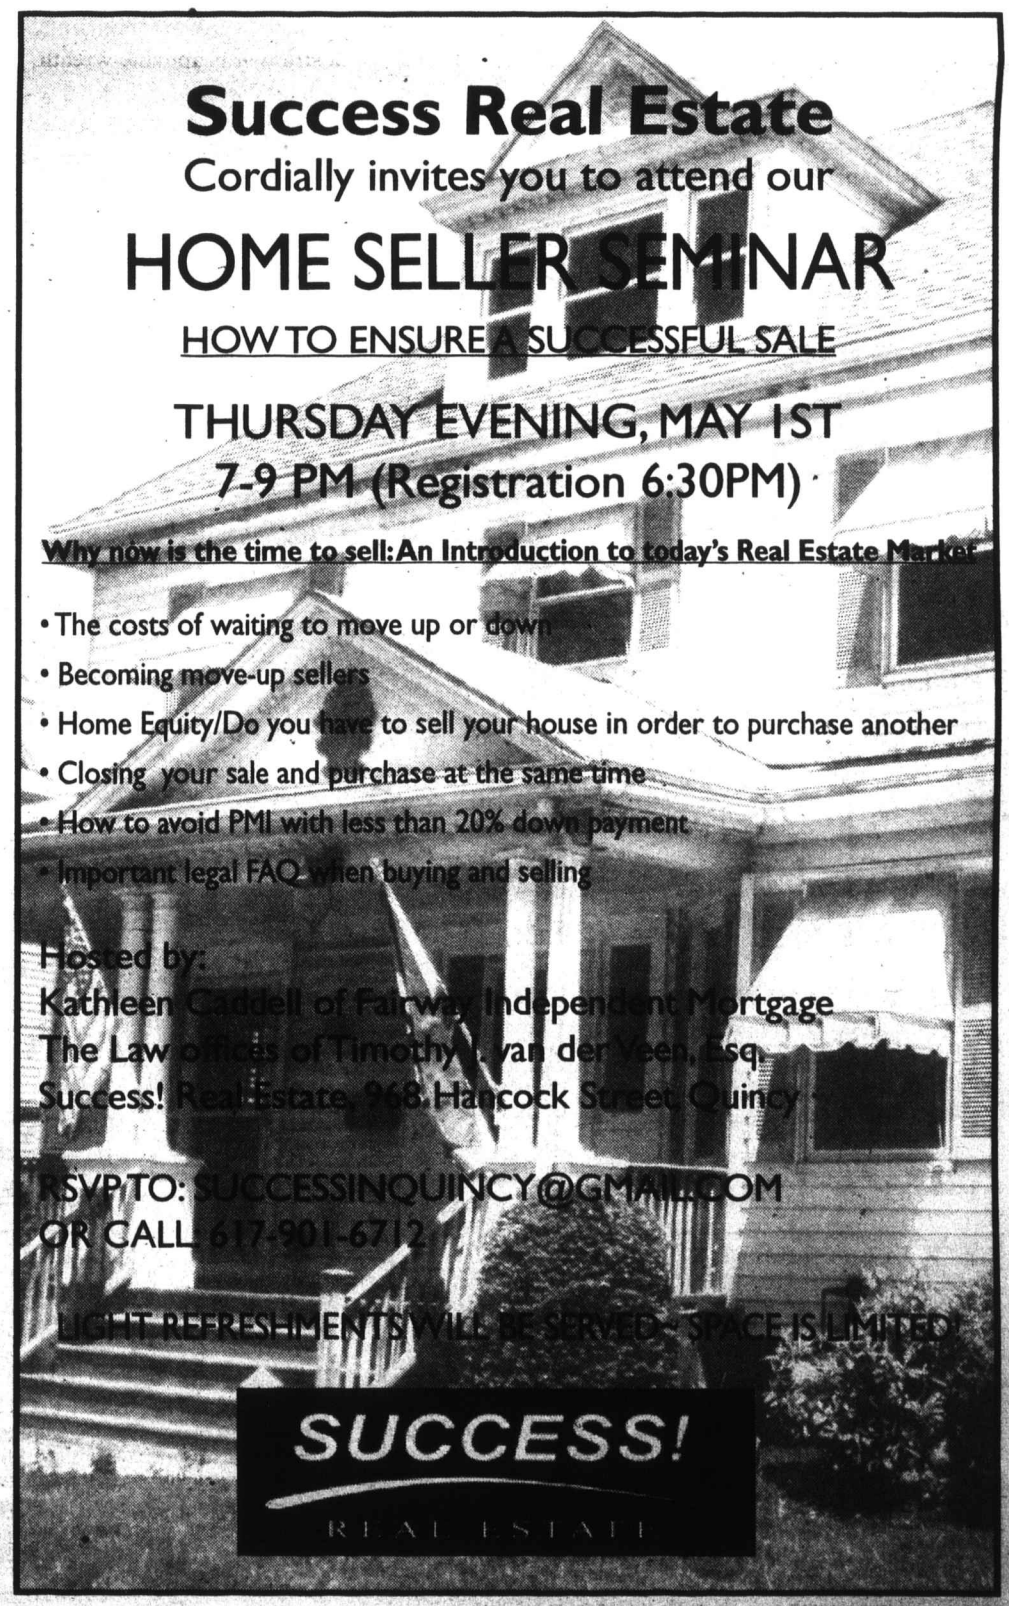

"It is important that new home buyers realize that this is not a bill, that it is not correspondence from the Registry of Deeds and that in fact they owe nothing," O'Donnell said.

The solicitation from Record Transfer Services goes so far as to claim that their $83 fee provides evidence that the property was transferred and includes a requested response date which effectively appears to be a due date.

"I am deeply concerned that these solicitations appear to be a bill or an invoice relating to local real estate transactions. Unfortunately consumers are interpreting this as a bill due and not the questionable solicitation that it actually is. It may be legal, but I still think it's outrageous that these businesses are contacting consumers with the intention to deceive and mislead." said Register O'Donnell

To report suspicious third party solicitations regarding your property or any real estate transaction contact the Registry's Customer Service Center by phone at (781)461-6101, or by email at registerodonnell@norfolkdeeds.org.

The Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, located at 649 High St., Dedham, is the principal office for real property in Norfolk County. The Registry is the basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate, accessible land record information.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Professional relationships grow stronger. But you might still need to ease some problems with someone in your personal life. One way could be to try to be less rigid in your views.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You might be too close to that perplexing personal situation to even attempt to make a rational decision about it right now. Stepping back could help you gain a wider perspective.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Being asked to choose between the positions of two friends is an unfair imposition on you. It's best to reject the "demands" and insist they try harder to work things out on their own.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A change of mind about a workplace decision might be called for once you hear more arguments, pro and con. A personal event suddenly takes an unexpected (but pleasant!) turn.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Romance once again looms large for single Leos and Leonas, with Cupid favoring Taurus and Libra to inspire those warm and fuzzy Leonine feelings. Expect another workplace change.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A surprise gift -- and, happily, with no strings attached -- could come just when you need it to avoid a delay in getting your project done. Expect education to dominate the week.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Someone close to you might ask for your support as she or he faces a demanding personal challenge. Offer it, by all means. But be careful you don't neglect your own needs at this time.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) An unexpected development could put your relationship with a partner or spouse to an emotionally demanding test. But your determination to get to the truth should save the day.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A recent agreement appears to be coming apart over the surfacing of unexpected complications. You might need to have expert advice on how to resolve the situation.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your keen business sense helps you get to the truth about a suspicious business deal. Expect to have many colleagues rally to support your efforts in this important matter.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Someone who once moved in and out of your life through the years might now want to come back in on a more permanent basis. Give yourself a lot of time to weigh your decision.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Showing frustration over a delayed workplace decision might get someone's attention, but not necessarily make him or her move any sooner. Best advice would be to be patient and wait it out.
BORN THIS WEEK: You are drawn to excitement and enjoy fast-tempo music, with the more brass, the better.

Karen A. Guivens

A memorial service for Karen A. Guivens of Quincy, Provincetown, and Stuart, FL, formerly of Andover, was held March 28 at Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Ms. Guivens died March 24 at home.

She was born in Cambridge to the late Francis Glavin and Vivian Tarentino. She had a successful career for more than 35 years in financial services, most recently employed by PNC Global Investment Services before retiring in 2006.

Family, friends and her dog were Ms. Guivens' passion and joy. She had an ability to connect with people that was amazing with an incredible knack for making those around her laugh and smile. She was always there to give of herself and help others. She will be missed by all who had the pleasure to have known her.

She is survived by her spouse of 30 years, Nina E. Nicolosi. She also leaves behind many, many friends.

Private interment at a later date.

Memorial donations may be made to Habitat to Humanity – Greater Boston, 240 Commercial St., Boston, MA 02109.

Rena J. Pizzi

A funeral service for Rena J. (Leone) Pizzi of Quincy was held March 28 at McDonald Keohane Funeral Home, South Weymouth.

Mrs. Pizzi died March 25.

She was an avid Red Sox fan and enjoyed going to Foxwoods, playing bingo, movies and reading. Her main passion was cooking and spending time with her family. She will be sadly missed by all those who had the pleasure of knowing her.

Daughter of the late Franco and Giovannia (Sacchetti) Leone. Devoted mother of Linda Deacon and her husband Walter "Terry" of Weymouth, Patty Pizzi of Randolph, and Mark Pizzi and his wife Linda of Abington. Cherished grandmother of Capt. Matthew Deacon, USAF, Stephanie Deacon, and Samantha, Mark, Jennifer and Stephen Pizzi. Caring sister of Elia Mansani, Edith Leone, Vera Leone, all of Quincy, and the late Melba Dilillo, Elvira Leone and Frank "Bebee" Leone. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

Interment was at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Memorial donations may be made to St. Jude Children's Research Hospital, 501 St. Jude Place, Memphis, TN 38105.

Robert F. Farrell, 65

A graveside ceremony for Robert Francis Farrell, 65, lance corporal, USMC, of Quincy and formerly of Hull, was held Monday at Massachusetts National Cemetery, Bourne.

Mr. Farrell died March 14.

He was a lance corporal in the U.S. Marine Corp., in the tradition of his father. He proudly served his country for four years during the Vietnam Era. He was a very smart man and he could learn to do anything he set his mind to, making him very versatile. He worked at a few top-notch hospitals as a respiratory therapist, specializing in the neonatal units. He also spent some years running his own tree removal service.

Mr. Farrell enjoyed life to the fullest. His travels were numerous and took him far, often in the company of his daughter, Christine, and youngest brother, John, creating memories they will never forget. He will be greatly missed.

Loving son of the late Raymond Joseph Farrell, Jr., master sergeant, USMC, and Eleanor Rosetta (Bryant) Farrell. Devoted father of Christine M. Farrell and her fiancé Ronald J. Penn of SC. Cherished grandfather of Samantha R. Shockey of Rockland. Dear brother of Raymond Farrell of Sandwich, John Scott Farrell of Quincy, and the late Richard Bryant Farrell. Beloved uncle of Jason, Jeremy, and Daniel. Special friend of the MacKenzie family.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Patricia M. Rosenthal, 72

A funeral Mass for Patricia M. Rosenthal, 72, of Braintree and formerly Quincy and South Boston was celebrated March 28 at St. Mary's Church, Quincy.

Ms. Rosenthal died peacefully March 24 at Quincy Medical Center, surrounded by her loving family.

She was born in Boston, raised and educated in South Boston schools and was a graduate of the former Cardinal Cushing High School, Class of 1959. She was also a graduate of the University of Massachusetts Boston. She lived in Braintree for 16 years, previously in Quincy for many years.

She was employed as an auditor in the financial services industry and retired in 2003. Ms. Rosenthal was devoted to her family and friends and especially to her nine cherished grandchildren.

Devoted mother of Gregg T. Rennie of Quincy, Jill M. Condon of Hanover, Eric J. Rennie of Braintree, and the late Paul C. Rennie. Loving grandmother of Megan E. Rennie, John C. Rennie, Hannah, Delanie, Erin and Allie Condon, and Lilly, Wesley and Nolan Rennie. Dear sister of Cathy Connolly of South Boston and Beverly Fenore of Dedham. Also survived by many nieces and nephews.

A funeral Mass for Lena A. (Cambria) Gullins of Quincy was celebrated March 28 at St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Gullins died March 25, surrounded by her loving family.

Mrs. Gullins was a stitcher most of her life and loved bowling and painting. She was a member of the Quincy Art Association for many years and volunteered to feed the homeless on Long Island in her later years. She retired from the job she loved as a Quincy Crossing Guard at the age of 82 after 21 years of service.

She will be sorely missed by all those who had the pleasure of knowing her.

Daughter of the late Anthony and Angelina (Basile) Cambria. Loving mother of Linda Jablonski and her husband William of Braintree, John Gullins of Quincy, Maryann Tulimieri- Bump and her husband Ted of FL and the late Patricia Molloy Gauthier, Joseph Gullins, and Patrick Gullins. Also survived by 16 grandchildren, and 12 great-grandchildren. Sister of Angelica Ventola of Reading, and the late Paul, Frank, and Mary Cambria.

LENA A. GULLINS

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Interment was at Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

Michael A. Craig

A funeral Mass for Michael A. Craig of South Weymouth and formerly Quincy was celebrated Monday at St. Francis Xavier Church, Weymouth.

Mr. Craig died March 26.

He was born and raised in Quincy and lived in South Weymouth for 39 years. He was the plumbing inspector for the town of Weymouth, a position he held for over 10 years after working in the plumbing industry for many years.

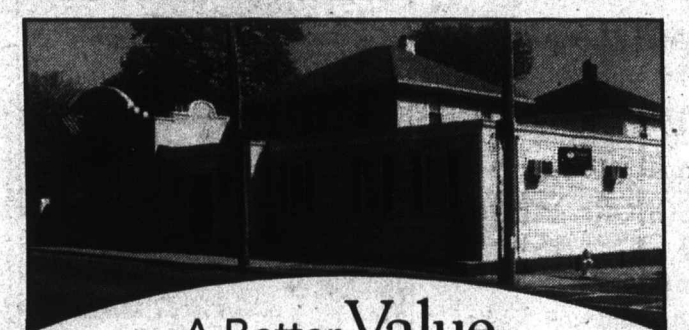

Mr. Craig was an avid football fan, cherishing the Sunday football games watched at his shed with family and friends. He also enjoyed kayaking and cooking. He was blessed with a close-knit family and great friends, all of whom he was very proud. He will be sadly missed.

Beloved husband of 39 years to Denise R. (Sawtelle) Craig of South Weymouth. Devoted father of Christian Craig and his wife Lizzy of VT and Jeff Craig and his wife Caitlin of South Weymouth. Cherished "Papa" of Olivia, Charlotte and Addison. Loving son of Irene (DeGust) Craig of Carver and the late Victor Craig. # Margaret M. Cronin

A funeral Mass for Margaret M. "Peggy" Cronin of Quincy was celebrated Monday at St. Agatha Church, Milton.

Ms. Cronin died March 26 at home after a 10-year battle with breast cancer.

A real estate attorney for 40 years, she was respected by her colleagues and valued by her clients. Ms. Cronin was a member of the Real Estate Bar Association for many years; she loved to practice law and it was with great difficulty that she was forced to stop practicing last year due to her disease. Throughout her battle she never gave up and remained positive and upbeat. Her outlook was exceptional and her faith, strength and courage unmatched.

Ms. Cronin was devoted to her family and took exceptional care of her mother. She loved spending time with her sister, brother, niece and nephews. Her favorite getaway was her home on Nantucket. She spent every summer there for over 30 years, sharing her love of the island with her late father, Albert E. Cronin, her mother, sister, niece and nephews. She enjoyed gardening there, walking in the conservation areas and spending days on Dionis Beach.

She will be missed by all

who were blessed to have known her.

Loving daughter of Margaret D. Cronin of Quincy and the late Albert E. Cronin. Survived by her brother Albert E. Cronin of Norton, sister Mary Ellen Cunniff and her brother-in-law William of Squantum. Devoted aunt of Lucas and Alexandria Cronin of Norton and William Cunniff of Squantum, to whom she was like a second mother. Great aunt to Mason Cronin of Norton.

Funeral arrangements were made by Alfred D. Thomas Funeral Home, Milton.

Interment was at Pine Hill Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center Breast Care Center, Shapiro Bld., 330 Brookline Ave., Boston 02115.

Dorothy A. Gramazio, 78

A funeral Mass for Dorothy A. (Cormier) Gramazio, 78, of Rockland and formerly Quincy was celebrated March 28 at Holy Family Church, Rockland.

Mrs. Gramazio died March 23 at South Shore Hospital, Weymouth, surrounded with love.

She was born, raised and educated in Quincy, daughter of the late Peter and Alice Cormier. She had been a Rockland resident for over 57 years.

Mrs. Gramazio had worked at the Rockland Public Library for 10 years, but her greatest accomplishment was as a homemaker, housewife and mother. Devoted to her large family she reveled in their company and cared for them through her final days.

She loved the Red Sox, especially David Ortiz who she met while touring Fenway Park. She loved to crochet, garden and spend time at the beach. She was a white chocolate lover and enjoyed when her family would bring her that treat. She greatly enjoyed family gatherings and shared a deep devotion to Jesus and the Blessed Mother Mary.

She was widowed at an early age with three young children when her first husband, Frederick Gramazio, died. Several years later she married his brother, Americo Gramazio, and their family, filled with love, continued to grow until his death.

Loving mother of Susan Johnson of MT, Dot Doherty and Frederick Gramazio of Carver, Teresa Ledwell of CO, Rico Gramazio of FL, Nancy Lindstrom of Raynham, David Gramazio of GA, Robert Gramazio of Rockland, and Peter Gramazio of NJ. Mother in law of Robert Johnson, John Doherty, Brian Ledwell, Karen Gramazio, and the late David Lindstrom. Also surviving are 23 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren. She was predeceased by 2 great-grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements were made by Magoun-Biggins Funeral Home, Rockland.

Interment was at Mount Wollaston Cemetery, Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Rockland Veteran's Memorial, c/o Anton Materna, Town Hall, 242 Union St., Rockland, MA 02370.

John J. Scanlan, Jr.

A funeral Mass for John J. "Jack" Scanlan, Jr., of Marshfield and formerly Quincy was celebrated March 28 at St. Christine's Church, Marshfield.

Mr. Scanlan died March 24, surrounded by his loved ones.

He was a beacon of light, love, and laughter for his large extended family and many friends. Raised in Quincy, Mr. Scanlan was one of five children of Mary (Russo) Scanlan of Quincy and the late John J. Scanlan, Sr. He will long be remembered for his ability to bring out the best in everyone. His boundless enthusiasm and generosity invited those around him to share his joyful optimistic view of the world.

Mr. Scanlan was a teacher in Quincy Public Schools for 34 years and held many positions in Marshfield Schools and his church.

Beloved husband of Kathleen (McSweeney) Scanlan of Marshfield. Loving father of Stephanie F. Scanlan, Caitlin M. Scanlan, and the late Elise Scanlan. Former husband of Janet (Chilenski) Scanlan. Dear brother of Elizabeth Storlazzi and her husband

JOHN J. SCANLAN, JR.

Michael of Braintree, Kathleen Barkas of Quincy, Eileen Kelliher and her husband Bryan of Norwell, James and his wife Suzanne Scanlan of RI, and Huguette Trainor and her husband Frank of Braintree. He is also survived by many nieces and nephews, grandnieces and grandnephews.

Funeral arrangements were made by MacDonald Funeral Home, Marshfield.

Interment was at Couch Cemetery, Marshfield.

Mary C. Fahey, 77

A Mass of Christian Burial for Mary Catherine Fahey, 77, of Scituate and formerly Squantum will be celebrated Saturday at 10 a.m. in St. Ann's Church, Hyde Park.

Ms. Fahey died March 24.

She was a former Sister of Charity-Convent Station, NJ. She taught high school in Connecticut and New Jersey. Her lifelong desire was to educate the inner city student and following her heart, she left the convent and took a teaching position at Dorchester High School and then later at English High School. She enjoyed traveling, reading and was always up to the challenge of a crossword puzzle.

Ms. Fahey will be remembered as an intelligent woman with a strong work ethic. She was a devout Catholic and devoted to her family, especially her many nieces and nephews. She will be sadly missed.

Devoted daughter of the late Simon and Evelyn Fahey. Cherished sister of Sr. Madeline Fahey, SC, of NJ, Millie Kerrigan and her husband Richard of Scituate, Margaret T. Hunt and her husband Eugene of Millis, and the late Joseph V. Fahey, Vincent Fahey, Simon Fahey, Jr., Robert Fahey, and Maureen Lapsley. Sister-in-law of Janet Fahey of Pembroke and the late Phyllis Fahey. Also survived by many loving nieces and nephews.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Interment at St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Una May Doucette

A funeral Mass for Una May "Eunice" (Kooleshevich) Doucette of Squantum will be celebrated today (Thursday) at 10 a.m. in St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Doucette died March 29.

She was born in Rockhampton, Australia. She was a war bride and met her husband Russell during WWII as he flew with the U.S. Army Air Corp. They later settled in the Squantum section of Quincy where they raised their family.

Family was the focal point of her life and she truly enjoyed taking care of them, whether at celebrations, family activities or keeping everyone well fed with her delicious meals. Her neighbors gave her great comfort and a sense of community. They looked out for one another and supported each other throughout their lives. An intelligent woman, Mrs. Doucette was ahead of her time in the workplace and excelled for over 30 years as a loan officer with Boston Five Cent Savings Bank.

She enjoyed traveling and was nourished by the sounds and smells of the ocean and her garden. Mrs. Doucette was a unique character who enjoyed telling stories. Her strength came from her upbringing in Australia as well as the difficulties they overcame during the war years.

Adored wife of the late Russell J. Doucette. Adoring mother of Jan S. Doucette of Weymouth and Niki Cocio and her husband Danny of Squantum. Sister of Rose Guinan of Australia, Tim Kooleshevich and his wife Judy of MD, and the late Lula, Zanka, and Ellie. Interment at New Calvary Cemetery, Boston.

Memorial donations may be made to the Helen DeVos Children's Hospital – ATTN: NB Fund, c/o Peg McCobb, 75 Rinaldo Road, Weymouth, MA 02191.

$50,000 in Funds Available To Support Community Grant Program

Thanks to donors at South Shore Hospital and Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, Blue Hills Community Health Alliance (CHNA 20) is again seeking applications for Community Grants.

The focus of this year's Community Grant Program is on projects that foster collaborations that lead to positive, enduring and replicable outcomes in one or more of CHNA 20 priority areas - Substance Abuse, Mental Health, Chronic Disease & Wellness and Access to Care & Services.

Grants up to $5,000 each are available to support projects in the Blue Hills Community Health Alliance (CHNA 20) catchment area including Braintree, Canton, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Norwood, Quincy, Randolph, Scituate, Sharon and Weymouth.

Applicants must attend one of three Mandatory Information Sessions offered:

- Thursday, April 10, (1:30-3:30 p.m.) Quincy Medical Center, 114 Whitwell St., Quincy, Conference Room B/C
- Wednesday, April 16 (4 to 6 p.m.) Scituate Harbor Community Building, 44 Jericho Rd., Scituate
- Thursday, April 17, (3 to 5 p.m.) Norwood Council on Aging, 275 Prospect St., Norwood

The deadline for submission of applications is May 12 at 5 p.m.

For further information contact Kym Williams at kwilliams@baystatecs.org or 617-471-8400 x225.

ENC Theatre Dept. To Present Euripides' Medea April 10-12

The Eastern Nazarene College Theatre Department will present its production of Euripides' Medea at 7:30 p.m. April 10-12 at the Cove Fine Arts Center on the college's main Quincy campus.

The Greek tragedy tells the story of Medea, who according to mythology fell in love with Jason and helped him steal the legendary Golden Fleece from her father. When the play begins, however, Jason has abandoned Medea and their two sons in order to advance his social standing by marrying the daughter of the king of Corinth.

Consumed by bitterness and jealousy, Medea embarks on a plan to exact revenge upon Jason – a plan that will end tragically for all involved.

Eastern Nazarene College's Cove Fine Arts Center is located on Wendell Ave. in Wollaston.

Tickets for Medea are $10 for adults, $8 students and seniors. Due to the play's thematic content, Medea is recommended for adult audiences.

For tickets or more information, call the ENC box office at 617-745-3715 or visit www.brownpapertickets.com.

Council Clears Central For Sale

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council voted Monday night to make the former Central Middle School site available for disposition, rescinding a vote made in committee three weeks ago seeking additional appraisals before moving forward.

The city had hired one company – RSD Realty Advisors – to appraise the Hancock Street property in October of last year. RSD valued the site at $4.6 million, basing that number in part of rezoning the parcel from a Residential B to a Residential C zoning district.

On March 17, the council's finance committee asked for two more appraisals before making the school available for sale in hopes of setting a minimum price. Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee introduced that motion.

At Monday's meeting, as the council considered rescinding the vote taken in March, McNamee asked City Assessor Peter Moran how residents could be assured Quincy received the highest possible return for the property.

"Absent two more appraisals," McNamee asked Moran, "how will the residents of the city of Quincy be confident that they got fair market value for that property?"

In response, Moran said

Local Legislators Back Minimum Wage Bump

By SCOTT JACKSON

Members of Quincy's State House delegation support increasing Massachusetts' minimum wage and are optimistic both houses of the Legislature will be able to work out a compromise after passing separate bills in recent months.

The Senate bill, approved in November, would increase the state's current minimum wage – $8 an hour for most employees – incrementally to $11 over the next three years. After 2016, future minimum wage increases would be automatically tied to the rate of inflation. Tipped employees would see their minimum wage increase from $2.63 per hour to $5.50 over the same three-year period.

The House passed its bill last week. It would increase the minimum wage to $10.50 over two years, and future increases wouldn't be automatically linked to inflation. Under the House's bill, tipped employees would see their minimum wage increase to $3.75 over the next three years.

Either bill would give the Bay State the highest minimum wage in the country. The state of Washington currently has the highest minimum wage in the country at $9.32 an hour; the minimum wage there is calculated annually based on inflation. In Connecticut, legislation signed into effect

$450K Renovation For Faxon Park Playground

$250,000 From Community Preservation Fund, $200,000 Financed By State Grant Program

By SCOTT JACKSON

The playground at Faxon Park is ready to undergo a $450,000 renovation that could transform it into the city's finest playground.

The City Council unanimously approved a $250,000 appropriation from Quincy's Community Preservation Act fund to pay for part of the project. The remaining $200,000 is financed by the Massachusetts' "Our Common Backyard" grant program, which was established to expand outdoor recreational opportunities statewide. At Monday's meeting, Park Department Director Chris Cassani said the project would make the playground the best in Quincy.

"Once this is done this is going to be the finest play-

Quincy Medical Center and Manet Community Health Center have launched a new shuttle service for Manet patients who have appointments for testing and follow-up care at QMC. The shuttle service runs between QMC and Manet's North Quincy, Houghs Neck, Snug Harbor and Hull offices.

"Transportation can be a barrier to accessing a continuum of care for our patients. This shuttle service, provided by Quincy Medical Center's community benefit program, will help our patients by promoting health equity and ensuring the timely and convenient delivery to needed appointments and services," says Henry Tuttle, chief executive officer of Manet Community Health Center.

The free shuttle service is provided by Quincy Medical Center as part of its community benefits program and its ongoing relationship with Manet. "Patients at Manet's office here at the hospital already have convenient access to hospital services when they need them," explains Donna Rubinate, president of Quincy Medical Center. "By providing shuttle service to patients at Manet's other locations, we can eliminate transportation as a barrier to patients accessing important screening, diagnostic and treatment services. It's all part of providing a seamless continuum to keep patients in our community healthy."

Quincy Medical Center also provides free shuttle service between the hospital and the Quincy Center MBTA station seven days a week. To find out shuttle times, call 617-773-6100 or visit www.quincymc.org.

New FEMA Flood Map Takes Effect June 9

May 9th Deadline For 'Grandfathered' Flood Insurance Rates

By SCOTT JACKSON

Residents who will be forced to purchase flood insurance for the first time because of the pending FEMA flood map, or those who will be mapped into a higher risk zone, have until May 9 to purchase new flood insurance policies at lower rates.

The new FEMA map goes into effect June 9 and would add 1,400 new properties in Quincy to special hazard flood zones. Homes with federally backed mortgages inside the special hazard zones are required to purchase the insurance. In addition to the 1,400 properties being added, 2,600 already in flood zones will be mapped into higher risk zones, which could lead to increased premiums. Another 500 houses currently in flood zones, primarily in South and West Quincy, won't see any changes as a result of the new map.

The city is preparing to appeal the new map through a letter of map revision (LOMR) process, and individual residents have the option of filing a letter of map amendment (LOMA). At Monday night's City Council meeting, however, Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin noted there is no guarantee those appeals would succeed, and said residents shouldn't wait before getting in touch with insurance agents.

"There's no pixie dust – there are no magic wands with any of this. We don't know what the outcome will be in terms of the LOMA or the LOMR, the map amendments or revision, going forward," Coughlin said.

"I don't want folks out there thinking they can rely upon the success of an appeal or a map amendment and then find themselves paying insurance at a higher rate because they're not going to be able to get out, understanding that there is 30-day delay before this insurance becomes effective."

Home Composting Bins Available At DPW

The City of Quincy Department of Public Works has The Earth Machine home composting bins available for purchase at the DPW Yard behind the Police Station at 55 Sea St.

The bins are available Monday through Friday in the white shack at the entrance to the back yard for the discounted price of $50. Manufactured by Norseman Plastics, composting bins are a simple way of converting organic waste into rich humus called compost.

Start with available organic material; leaves, grass and table scraps. Moisten the dry parts lightly and mix whatever you have together with some old compost, manure, leaf mould, compost starter, or rich loam soil if the others are not available. Add your daily kitchen scraps and garden trimming. Sprinkle each layer with old compost and work it in.

The Earth Machine works best when pieces are small. Weeds and trimmings should be shredded.

Do not add thick layers of any one kind of waste. Grass should not be more than 2-1/2 inches deep, leaves up to 6 inches deep. (Mulch or dry and crumble them). Mix grass with coarse material to prevent compacting.

The lid of the Earth Machine is specially designed to control moisture. If the contents are too dry, it will take overly long to compost: and if too wet, the contents may rot and smell. On high humidity days turn the lid to expose all the vents. On cool day, keep the vents closed to maintain the optimum composting temperature.

For more information and tips on composting, visit http://www.composter.com/composting/norseman/index.html.

Quincy Set To Purchase 6,300 Streetlights For $1

Move Seen Saving City $350,000 Annually

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy is nearing an agreement to purchase nearly every streetlight in the city from National Grid for a total of $1.

With the exception of decorative light poles on Washington Street near the Fore River Bridge and along main streets in Quincy Center, Wollaston and North Quincy, the utility company owns and operates all streetlights within the city. While National Grid owns those streetlights, Quincy pays for their maintenance, except for poles maintained by the state Department of Conservation and Recreation (DCR) including ones on Quincy Shore Drive and Furnace Brook Parkway.

Under the agreement with the utility, the city would purchase 6,000 streetlight fixtures throughout the city and another 365 light poles – poles with lights and no other utility lines on them, such as those on Burgin Parkway. The poles maintained by DCR would not be purchased by the city.

Clint Schuckel, an engineer for Siemens, told the City Council's oversight committee last week that most other large cities in Massachusetts have already purchased streetlights. Since 1998 when state law began to allow municipalities to purchase the lights from utility companies nine of the 11 largest cities in Massachusetts have done so; Quincy and Springfield are the only outliers.

Schuckel said communities are motivated to purchase streetlights because it reduces the amount paid in maintenance costs. According to mayoral spokesman Chris Walker, Quincy currently pays $950,000 annually to National Grid for streetlights, including costs for both electricity and maintenance. If the city moves forward with purchasing the lights, it would pay approximately $125,000 in maintenance costs and $475,000 in electrical costs, saving about $350,000 per year. Walker said the city has already contracted with Coviello Electric of Woburn to maintain Quincy's streetlights if the purchase moves ahead.

Schuckel also noted cities that purchase streetlights are able to provide a quicker response when residents report an out of service light. Currently in Quincy, once an out of service light is reported by a resident, the city contacts National Grid and waits for the utility to repair the light because only the utility can maintain the lights it owns. Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest said that process can be frustrating.

"This is something the city has been working on and talking about for a while," Laforest said. "It's very frustrating for us from the constituent side of this to say 'we're waiting for National Grid, we've called, we've followed up, and we can't get the light turned on.' It seems like a simple task."

In addition to reducing maintenance costs and improving response time, purchasing the streetlights would allow the city to install new LED lights. Schuckel said LEDs are expected to last up to 20 years, with most manufactures providing a 10-year warranty. The city's current sodium lamps have lifespans of six years. The increased lifespan of LEDs means less maintenance costs associated with replacing the lights.

Schuckel also highlighted other benefits provided by LEDs. The quality of light is considered better, he noted, saying car commercials are shot using LED lighting and police departments can better distinguish vehicle colors with LED streetlights. They can also be dimmed to potentially save money, something Cambridge is currently experimenting with.

With all the benefits LEDs provide, Councillor Doug Gutro asked why National Grid wouldn't install them on its own. Schuckel said the utility company hasn't done so because it would be forced to charge less for maintaining and powering the lights.

"There is not a lot of financial benefit to National Grid for that to happen. What they charge you for maintenance would have to be reduced and the energy use would be reduced," Schuckel said. "They have no program for converting lights they own."

Walker said there is no estimate for how much converting the 6,300 streetlights to LEDs would cost. Council approval would be needed before the LED conversion project began.

At last week's meeting Laforest also inquired about the possibility of installing sensors to automatically notify the Department of Public Works when a streetlight fails, noting the DPW has similar technology that tracks water usage in real time. Schuckel said such technology for streetlights does exist, but costs between $100 and $150 per light to install.

Ask the GEMOLOGIST

BY JEFFREY M. BERTMAN
GRADUATE GEMOLOGIST

THE DIAMOND DOPPELGANGER

Many people with the means to purchase very expensive diamond jewelry will tell you that they only wear it on special occasions. Other times, they may rely on a diamond substitute that so closely resembles the real thing that no one other than themselves knows the difference. Moissanite, which was first discovered in the Canyon Diablo meteor crater in Arizona in 1893, is such a gemstone. This near-colorless material is nearly as hard as diamond. In addition, while diamond is singly refractive, moissanite is doubly refractive, which means that it possesses more than twice the fire of its more famous counterpart. What is more, moissanite so closely resembles diamond that even skilled jewelers may have difficulty telling the two apart.

Naturally occurring Moissanite is extremely rare with a handful discovered in extreme environments. Large gem quality crystals are grown in a high-tech North Carolina lab. It is one of the hardest gemstones and is more durable than sapphire, ruby or emerald. Shop at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center to select the gemstones, natural or man-made that is right for you as well as any other jewelry or gift or contact us at 617-773-3636.

Moments in time

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On April 27, 1667, blind poet John Milton sells the copyright to his masterpiece "Paradise Lost" for a mere 10 pounds. Once printed, the poem was immediately hailed as a masterpiece of the English language. In 1671, he wrote "Paradise Regained," followed by "Samson Agonistes." He died in 1674.

• On April 25, 1859, at Port Said, Egypt, ground is broken for the Suez Canal, an artificial waterway intended to stretch 101 miles across the isthmus of Suez and connect the Mediterranean and the Red seas. When it opened, the Suez Canal was only 25 feet deep, 72 feet wide at the bottom, and 200 feet to 300 feet wide at the surface. Fewer than 500 ships navigated it in its first year of operation.

• On April 24, 1863, the Union army issues General Order No. 100, which provided a code of conduct for Federal soldiers and officers when dealing with Confederate prisoners and civilians. It became the standard for international military law.

• On April 22, 1915, German forces shock Allied soldiers along the Western front by firing more than 150 tons of lethal chlorine gas against two French colonial divisions. The Germans, perhaps as shocked as the Allies by the devastating effects of the poison gas, failed to take full advantage, and the Allies held most of their positions.

• On April 23, 1961, Judy Garland plays Carnegie Hall in what has been called "the greatest night in showbiz history." The concert took place on the one night a week that Broadway performers have off -- Sunday night -- and the audience was therefore a friendly one.

• On April 26, 1977, Studio 54, the most famous nightclub in the world, opens its doors. The venue became famous for openly and shamelessly excluding all but the most chic, famous or beautiful patrons. Studio 54's golden era lasted less than three years.

• On April 21, 1980, Rosie Ruiz, age 26, finishes first in the women's division of the Boston Marathon. Eight days later Ruiz was stripped of her victory after race officials learned she jumped into the race about a mile before the finish line.

Pfc. William Caddy - Not Forgotten

William R. Caddy is not forgotten.

Not by the city he grew up in.

Not by the Marine Corps that he bravely served in.

And not by his family that has carried on his name – and his spirit – for nearly seven decades.

PFC. CADDY

It has been 69 years since Marine Corps Private First Class William Caddy made the ultimate sacrifice on Iwo Jima during World War II. The events of that tragic but supremely heroic day read like Hollywood movie magic.

But this is not fiction dreamed up by film screen writers and producers.

The Quincy kid who grew up loving baseball and the Red Sox was – and will always be – an authentic American hero.

William Caddy gallantly gave his life for his country on March 3, 1945 at the age of 19. He was awarded the Medal of Honor posthumously by President Harry S. Truman.

The Medal of Honor citation describes Caddy's heroism:

"Consistently aggressive, Private First Class Caddy boldly defied shattering Japanese machine-gun and small-arms fire to move forward with his platoon leader and another Marine during a determined advance of his company through an isolated sector and, gaining the comparative safety of a shell hole, took temporary cover with his comrades.

"Immediately pinned down by deadly sniper fire from a well-concealed position, he made several unsuccessful attempts to move forward and then, joined by his platoon leader, engaged the enemy in a fierce exchange of hand grenades until a Japanese grenade fell in the shell hole. Fearlessly disregarding all personal danger, Private First Class Caddy instantly threw himself upon the deadly missile, absorbing the exploding charge in his own body and protecting the others from serious injury. Stouthearted and indomitable, he unhesitatingly yielded his own life that his fellow Marines might carry on the relentless battle against a fanatic enemy.

"His dauntless courage and valiant spirit of self-sacrifice in the face of certain death reflects the highest credit upon Private First Class Caddy and the United States Naval Service."

William Caddy's life lives on within his family. Sherri Holleran, his niece, has attended the Caddy Memorial Service for as long as she can remember.

"The memorial service has always been a part of our lives. We've been coming here since were we little," Sherri says. "This day is very important to my family. My mom passed away a few years ago and she was so proud of William (her only brother). She would tell everyone about him. She'd be at the doctors and she'd want to tell them about his story."

It's not only the memory that Caddy's family holds dearly. Several family members have the Caddy name as middle names, including Sherri's daughter, Kaitlin, who also attended Sunday's service with her mother.

The Caddy name is also the middle name of a cousin – Jackson Caddy Morris. The young boy's father is a Captain in the Marines.

Caddy's Medal of Honor – the nation's highest military honor – is a family heirloom and is shared among the family – especially by those who serve in the military.

At Sunday's service, Sherri Holleran helped place a memorial wreath at a granite monument at the park that is dedicated to her uncle. Caddy Park is located on Quincy Shore Drive across from Wollaston Beach.

Another wreath was placed on Caddy's grave at the U.S. National Cemetery in Honolulu, Hawaii.

Sherri's mother was able to visit his grave some years ago. "She had never been there until she was older when my sister moved there. Her husband is a Marine and to go there for the first time was very moving," Sherri says, wiping away a tear.

"It's just so wonderful to see everyone show up today and to carry on this ceremony year after year," she adds.

Sunday's ceremony was attended by many Marines and other veterans as well as color guards from Quincy Police, Quincy Fire, Morrisette Legion Post, Massachusetts State Police, Leatherneck Honors Society and the North Quincy High School Air Force Jr. ROTC Cadets.

Dan Clark - "The Singing Trooper – offered stirring renditions of the Star Spangled Banner and "The Marines Hymn" to a captive audience.

Mary Crowley of the Caddy Detachment read Caddy's moving Medal of Honor citation. As American and color guard flags fluttered against a deep blue sky, taps was performed in a solemn salute to Caddy and other veterans who gave their lives to keep America free.

Also remembered were other Marines who had passed since last year's ceremony, including Quincy firefighter and Marine veteran John Austin who died while on duty last July.

Speakers offered tributes to a man they never met but whose bravery has left an indelible mark on so many lives.

"We honor today a young many of our beloved city who gave the last full measure of his devotion to his flag and to his friends," said Rev. John Swanson, pastor of Union Congregational Church. "Remember that we are blessed with a heritage of legions of William Caddys who have paid the ultimate sacrifice.

"Lord keep us mindful that our freedom is not free."

Coleman Nee, secretary of the state Department of Veterans' Services, paraphrased President John F. Kennedy.

"Poor is a nation that has no heroes but shameful is a nation that has them but forgets them.

"It is so heart-warming to be able to come here year after year and see that Quincy does not forget its heroes. Not just this Marine but all those who have died in service to this nation."

Caddy was one four Quincy Marines who were killed in action fighting on Iwo Jima. The others: PVT Malcolm McPherson, PVT John W. Jackson and PVT John R. Koski. A total of 6,821 U.S. servicemen were killed on Iwo Jima, another 19,217 were wounded fighting the Japanese Imperial Army. The Japanese lost more than 19,000 personnel.

"With the passage of time, our country's memory of Iwo Jima has become a diminishing footnote in history," said Marc Connolly, commandant of the Caddy Detachment. "But the fact remains that Iwo Jima was a landmark example of devotion to duty, personal courage, individual valor and self sacrifice.

"While victory for the Marines was never in doubt, its cost in American lives was. But there are no words that can properly express the gratitude due to those fighting men who made the ultimate sacrifice in service to their country. It is only right that we should stand together and attempt the proper tribute to our fallen warriors."

Among the Marines attending Sunday's ceremony was James Laskey, past National Commandant for the Marine Corps League and past commandant of the Caddy Detachment. Laskey lived in Quincy for many years before moving to Rhode Island.

He said the William Caddy story continues to inspires today's Marines.

"We have nothing but the utmost admiration for those who went before us and I say to the young folks (Marines) who are coming in today, 'we really appreciate the job that you are doing for the Marine Corps and our country and they always respond with 'you guys paved the way.'

"And I have to look at Private First Class Caddy. He paved the way for the next generation of Marines. It's like passing of the baton to the next group. William Caddy has certainly been an inspiration to a lot of folks and somebody that we really want to identify with. He was just a great person."

Laskey enlisted in the Marines out of Quincy in 1960 and served until 1980. He did a tour in Vietnam with the First Marine Division.

"I had a chance to visit Iwo Jima on three separate occasions and Caddy does have an American flag that I raised on Mount Suribachi in his honor. It was one of the last times we were allowed to put a flag on top of the mount. I did it for Caddy."

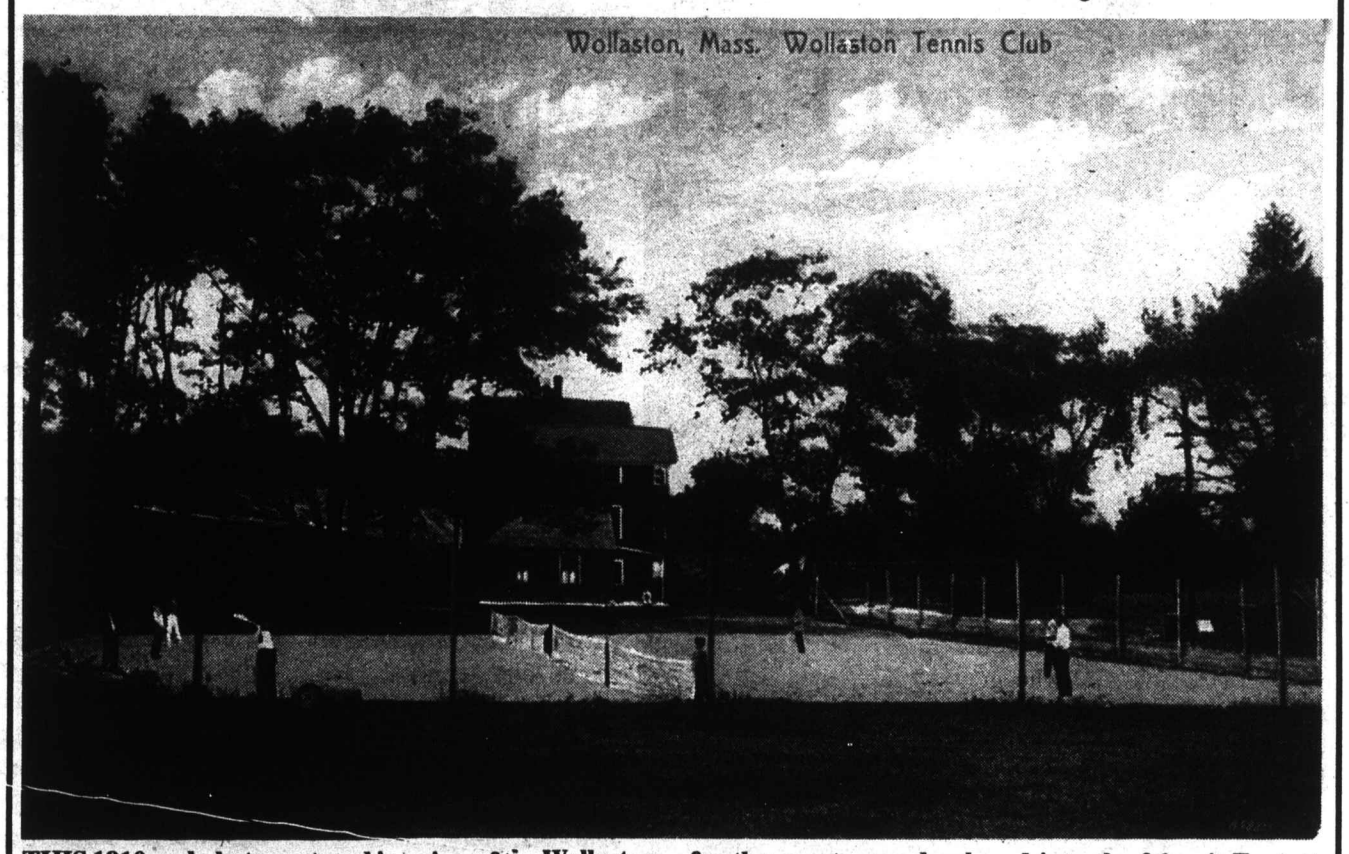

Laskey – who served as a Marine recruiter for many years – says William R. Caddy set the standard for what a Marine is today.

"They went to war, they were happy to serve and to serve their country. You can't express the gratitude that one has for these people – not just William Caddy but for every Medal of Honor recipient and everybody who has fought in a war.

"We have a lot of great Marines from Quincy and as a recruiter during Vietnam this was a very, very patriotic and certainly a great area and I was very proud to represent Quincy as a recruiter.

"We're all getting older but we need to think about those folks who have gone before us."

THIS 1910 real photo postcard is a view of the Wollaston Tennis Club that was located on Everett Street between Beale and Granger Streets in Wollaston. This view is to the north – Everett Street is on the right. The small building in the center was the clubhouse and is no longer there, but the houses behind it on the corner of Granger and Everett Streets are still standing. The flat land used for the courts was developed into the 26-unit Everett Court Apartments and the four-story brick Marion Apartments that are here today. The tennis club had used this land for over 10 years before the apartments were built. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Thoughts On The Opiate Addiction Epidemic

I am writing this in hopes of turning up the volume regarding the opiate addiction epidemic.

Deval Patrick has decided to throw several million toward the problem but the plan itself appears weak. Treatment for most addicts needs to be done on a long-term basis or the chances of success are slim. Narcan, which has proven to save lives is a good first step but not a solution. Panels of experts have come up pretty much empty and the epidemic persists.

Isn't it time to enlist the aid of those who have lived with addiction and are willing to help develop a plan? There are a lot of very reputable people in recovery that have a lot to offer. It is also time to point the finger toward the source of the opiates. It's not always a drug dealer.

Commends DPW For A Great Job

So much has been written about the documents that were destroyed by fire, with the permission of our director of the Department of Public Works, Dan Raymondi. Although permission was not granted by the state at the time of the event, oversights such as these do happen; and subsequently permission was given (although it came at a later time.)

I would bring your attention to the terrible winter we experienced here in our City of Quincy. The removal of snow within the city was above and beyond what I expected it to be. Immediately after each storm, we were able to use the roads, experiencing no problems or hazards whatsoever.

Yes, it was a mistake not to acquire proper removal from the state prior to burning these (ancient) records, as compared to shredding them at a cost to the city. However, do we ever think of the many hours Mr. Raymondi spent during this terrible winter? While we were in our homes noticing the snow falling, Mr. Raymondi spent endless hours coordinating the removal of the snow. I have not heard of one single complaint about this removal, and I believe Director Raymondi went above and beyond to ensure the safety of the citizens of Quincy.

Just imagine, if you will, the strain the commissioner and his employees experienced. The removal of snow is so critical as to avoid serious accidents. Let's give credit where it is due.

Thank you, Commissioner Raymondi and your employees, for doing a great job.

Thank You Cong. Lynch And Cong. Keating

Recently, US Rep. Stephen Lynch came back from a fact-finding trip to Ukraine and believes that with what just happened in the Crimea, now is not the time to cut back on military spending or on the size of our troop strength as the Obama Administration seems hellbent on doing. Kudos to Lynch for saying what must be said.

Also, I appreciate Quincy's former US Rep. Bill Keating for not letting partisan bickering downplay the importance of the report recently released by the House Homeland Security Committee highlighting the critical role played by law enforcement communication gaps preceding last year's Boston Marathon bombings.

There were 14 Democrats on this House Committee and Keating was the only Democrat to sign off on this report. Keating bemoaned the partisan bickering saying that the focus of all should be on the families affected by those bombings.

Political posturing is so needless. The House Committee will be holding a hearing on the report on April 9, I hope all the Democrats on the committee show up and join Keating in support of affected families and to prevent a future replay of last year. Thank you, Congressman Bill Keating for putting the needs of the victims and their families front and center.

Council Looking At Housing Authority Appointment Power

A special committee of the city council will meet to discuss a recommendation that would, in effect, make the council the appointing authority for the members of the Quincy Housing Authority.

One recommended appointment by Mayor Joseph LaRaia was rejected while a second recommendation was virtually ignored.

The recommendation sprang from the investigations of a council sub-committee chaired by Councillor Daniel G. Raymondi, along with Councillors Dennis Harrington and John J. Lydon, Jr.

A screening committee of nine members would be set up to examine qualifications of applicants and make recommendations to the mayor.

SHIPYARD EYES DESTROYER CONTRACTS

The Quincy Shipbuilding Division of General Dynamics will bid on a Navy contract to build new DDG-47 guided missile destroyers after plans for the design and an analysis of the first destroyer awarded in a $1 million naval contract are completed in 10 or 11 months.

"We are hoping for five or six the ships," said Alex Piranian, public relations director.

BROWNELL BILL TO PREVENT QUINCY BAY FILLING APPROVED

The Massachusetts House of Representatives has approved a bill sponsored by Rep. Thomas F. Brownell (D-Quincy) that would prevent the filling of 28 acres of Quincy Bay in order to make the Nut Island Sewerage Treatment Plant a secondary treatment facility.

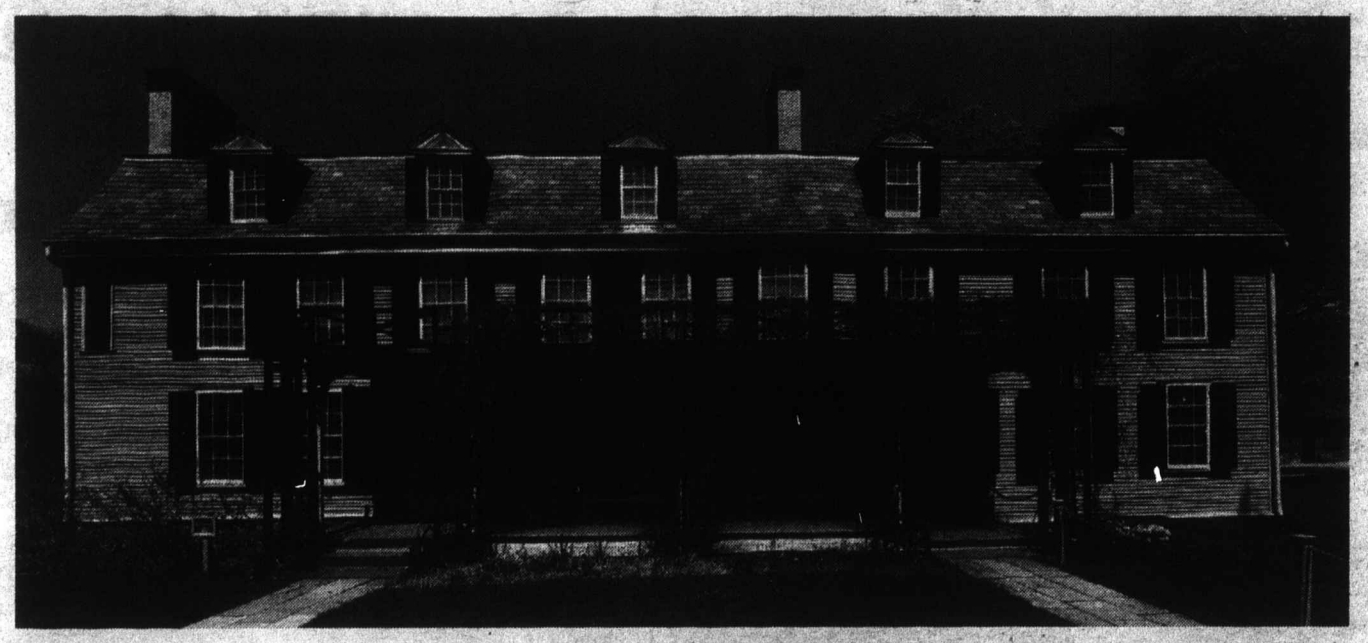

Brownell said the intent of the bill was to force the Environmental Protection Agency to focus on Deer Island as the site for the secondary treatment facility.

Congressional Art Competition Open To Students

Cong. Stephen F. Lynch announces the opening of "An Artistic Discovery," the 2014 Annual Congressional Art Competition.

This competition is open to all high school students who reside in the 8th Congressional District - including Quincy. The winner will have his or her work displayed in the U.S. Capitol for a full year. Additionally, there will be a reception in Washington, D.C., for all art competition winners and their families to celebrate the opening of the exhibit.

To highlight the talent of art students in the 8th Congressional District, the artwork of all students who enter the competition will be displayed in the Congressman's Boston Office.

The Annual Congressional Art Competition is now open for submissions, and all entries must be received by Thursday, April 24, 2014. Entries should be sent to Congressman Lynch's Boston District Office and put to the attention of Araba Adjei-Koranteng. For more inforation, contact Congressman Lynch's office at 617-428-2000 or refer to his website, http://lynch.house.gov/.

"I hope that every high school student with a passion for art takes part in this exciting competition," said Congressman Lynch. "Last year, we had dozens of outstanding entries, and I am proud to have the artwork of last year's winner, Isabelle Xu of Westwood, representing our District in Washington. I look forward to viewing all of this year's submissions and displaying one of them in the U.S. Capitol this summer."

Street Magic Acapella At Kennedy Center

Admission is $25 at the door and $20 if you get a ticket from either Noreen at QTMP 617-984-8704 or Kathy McCluskey 617-471-7695.

Tai Chi Introduction April 22

Vince Jornales will be at the Kennedy Center Tuesday April 22 at 10 a.m. to talk about the health benefits of Tai Chi. Jornales will give a demonstration of Tai Chi.

Tai Chi Chuan is an ancient system of martial arts and exercise that helps prevent and cure disease by loosening the joints and spine to relax points of tension in the body.

Tai Chi is often described as a "moving meditation" because the slow, turning motions relieve stress, improve concentration and create a sense of calm. The complexity and challenge of physical training keep the mind and body sharp.

Registration is required for this demonstration as space is limited. To register, call the Quincy Council on Aging at (617) 376-1506.

Parks Conservancy Family Event, Easter Egg Hunt Saturday

The Quincy Parks Conservancy will host a free, family event at Pageant Field on Saturday, April 12th from 9 a.m. to noon that will include an Easter egg hunt, egg decorating, bouncy houses, a visit from the Easter Bunny as well as light refreshments catered by the Quincy High School Culinary Arts Program.

The egg hunt is geared for children ages 10 and under. Families are encouraged to bring their cameras to take pictures with the Easter Bunny.

To promote the event, the Conservancy conducted a poster design contest by partnering with the art department at both North Quincy and Quincy High Schools. Students were challenged to electronically design a graphic that was visually appealing and conveyed the event information. In addition to being on display at local businesses throughout the city, the two first place designs appear in this week's edition of The Quincy Sun. (See Page 36).

One winner from each high school was chosen and received a $100 prize. Two additional students received a $50 prize as a runner-up.

The winners:

1st place – North Quincy High School: Kamila Klincewicz

1st place – Quincy High School: Julie Nguyen

Runner-up – North Quincy High School: Doris Hui

Runner-up – Quincy High School: Nick Warner

The Quincy Parks Conservancy is a not-for-profit organization whose mission is to protect and promote parkland, beaches, parkways, and other open space areas within the City of Quincy for the use and enjoyment of Quincy residents, visitors, and tourists. Visit us at www.quincyparkconservancy.org

One current initiative of the Conservancy is assisting in the realization of a trail system at Faxon Park that coincides with the city's adopted Master Plan for Faxon Park. The Conservancy has partnered with the Quincy Park Department as well as Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall to further this project.

In the event of inclement weather, activities will move indoors to the gymnasium at Quincy High School. For more information, contact info@quincyparkconservancy.org

Walk To Cure Diabetes May 31

The Quincy Public Schools, along with students, family and friends, in partnership with the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation (JDRF), will be participating in the third annual "JDRF Kids' Walk to Cure Diabetes" on Saturday May 31 (rain or shine) at 10 a.m.

Walkers will begin gathering at 9:30 a.m. at the Beechwood Knoll Elementary School. The 2.5-mile walk will proceed down Fenno Street (towards Hancock), a right on Wollaston, a right onto Elm Avenue, straight up Elm to East Elm towards the Beach, right on Quincy Shore Drive, right onto Rice Road and ending at Beechwood Knoll School.

This is the third year Quincy Public Schools has worked with JDRF to raise funds to help find a cure for a disease that affects millions of children and their families who struggle with this disease. Walk participants have raised more than $97,000.

JDRF is the largest organization that funds Type 1 diabetes research in the world and 80 percent of the funds they raise go directly to research.

More than 18 million Americans are affected by Type 1 diabetes and there are 15,000 children who are diagnosed with Type 1 (insulin dependent) and that number continues to grow. Children who have this disease must check their blood sugar several times per day by pricking their finger and take painful injections of insulin in order to keep their blood sugar level. It is one of the most costly chronic disease among children and there is no cure.

With this walk, "Kids Helping Kids," kids and their families will be learning about diabetes, nutrition education and good physical fitness activities. At the same time, they will learn what it means to help fellow classmates with diabetes by becoming an advocate for a cure.

Marie's Kitchen

BY MARIE D'OLIMPIO

Easy Almond Cake

Just one simple ingredient can change the flavor of what is cooking. And so it was last week when I was baking a cake that called for the usual vanilla extract.

Instead, I decided to use almond extract and what a wonderful change. I have also used lemon extract for this particular cake recipe, which is also delicious. The choice is yours.

EASY ALMOND CAKE

1 stick butter
1 ¼ cups sugar
1 teaspoon almond extract
2 ¼ cups cake flour
2 ½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
cup milk plus 2 more tablespoons
2 or 3 tablespoons crushed almonds (optional)

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Melt the butter and add the sugar. Mix until fluffy. Add the eggs, almond extract and mix for a minute or so. Add the baking powder, salt, almonds and the flour alternately with the milk and beat for two minutes.

Place in a cake pan and bake for 30 minutes or until a toothpick comes out clean from the center.

With this cake, I made a quick icing by using a cup of powdered sugar, a smidgen of water or milk, and a teaspoon of the almond extract – easy and delicious.

Cereal, Peanut Butter, Chocolate Bar

As I was looking through some of my cookbooks, I found yet another great no bake bar, just in time for summer (when it ever comes).

They contain peanut butter, cereal and chocolate, some of my favorite things and I'll bet most other people.

They can be made ahead of time and kept fresh in the refrigerator for days.

CEREAL, PEANUT BUTTER, CHOCOLATE BAR

½ cup syrup
¼ cup brown sugar
1 cup peanut butter
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup corn flakes (slightly ground)
2 cups rice krispies
1 cup semi-sweet chocolate pieces
Dash of salt

Combine the syrup, brown sugar, salt in a sauce pan. Bring to a full boil. Stir in the peanut butter, and then remove from heat. Add the vanilla, the rice krispies, the corn flakes and the chocolate. Mix until well blended.

Press into a 9 x 10 x 12 pan. Chill for one hour and then cut into bars. Makes about 2 dozen depending on the size of the bar.

Wollaston Garden Club Members Participating In 'Boston Art In Bloom'

Two talented Wollaston Garden Club members – Cynthia Lewis, head floral arranger, and Ruth Griffin, assistant floral arranger – are participating in the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston Art in Bloom 2014.

This annual celebration of art and floral design draws a crowd of approximately 20,000 visitors from around the region. It will run from Saturday, April 26 to Monday, April 28.

Art in Bloom has become a rite of spring in Boston. Garden clubs and professional designers from across New England create colorful floral arrangements inspired by the MFA's encyclopedic collection.

WOLLASTON GARDEN CLUB members – Cynthia Lewis (left), head floral arranger, and Ruth Griffin, assistant floral arranger – are participating in the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston Art in Bloom 2014.

This year at Art in Bloom, 51 arrangements take inspiration from across the Museum's collections and galleries, including the vibrant palette of Quilts and Color: The Pilgrim/Roy Collection, a new exhibit on view in the MFA's Ann and Graham Gund Gallery, the new Benin Kingdom Gallery of ancient African bronzes and Impressionist favorites on view in the Boston Loves Impressionism exhibit.

Kicking off with an exclusive 'Tinis and Tulips preview party on Friday, April 25, the weekend continues with special events including lectures and demonstrations; flower arranging classes presented by Emily Thompson, a widely acclaimed New York floral designer; and a Family Day of art making. Art in Bloom, which marks its 38th anniversary this year, is included in Museum admission and presented by MFA Associates, a group of dedicated volunteers who throughout the year lead tours in the galleries and provide all the flower arrangements at the Museum.

To celebrate the Museum's Season of Color—a series of color-themed courses, activities and events at the MFA—all Art in Bloom activities will be imbued with a rainbow of color-inspired themes and motifs. Unique professional floral events will take place in the Alfond Auditorium each day

A ticketed Elegant Tea will take place Saturday through Monday in the recently renovated William I. Koch Gallery, with a premium selection of fine teas, tea sandwiches, hors d'oeuvres and petit fours served among Old Master paintings and a royal silver display.

Art in Bloom is free with Museum admission. Tickets may be purchased at mfa.org/artinbloom, by calling 1-800-440-6975 or in person at MFA ticket desks.

Saddened By Death Of Two Firefighters

It is with sadness that I learn of the death of two firefighters. And with a sense of frustration from knowledge gained in a position I held as a State Civil Service Examiner.

One of my duties was to write examinations for the position of Firefighter Officer. The standard procedure was to use a huge chemistry book as a reference as a source of questions. To answer the questions, the officer candidate had to answer questions based on rote memorization of chemical formulas.

After awhile of writing these types of examinations, I felt that it would be more relevant to the position to have questions based on firefighting tactics. So, using a book of tactics, I wrote the exam. What a hullabaloo!

After the exam was given, a meeting of Fire Chiefs was held. The contention was that there is no right way to fight a fire. I felt that if we used a book as a reference for chemistry questions, why not make a given book the standard for firefighting tactics. No dice. The exam was thrown out. Back to memorizing chemical formulas.

I must admit there was a political element to this method. No one can argue about a chemical formula. I visited firehouses and gathered information from working firefighters. In a conversation with the Natick Fire Chief, he said that he would never allow his firefighters to enter a particular downtown office building in the event of a fire. It is a warren of offices. I had been in that building and had been confused in finding the right office. That building is of the same age and type as the Adams building in downtown Quincy.

It haunts me that these and other firefighter deaths could have been avoided if the supervisory personnel had recognized which buildings are death traps. I can only hope that the officer selection process will concentrate more on firefighting tactics rather than memorization of chemical formulas.

Says NQHS Plan Lacks Common Sense

I see that our re-elected councillors did it again. Our councillors voted to give more of our hard earned money to the mayor, so the mayor could tear down more tax revenue producing property.

This time the mayor is not taking away businesses, no, he is taking away nine homes that people live in right now.

Why is the mayor tearing down nine homes, you ask? So he can give the North Quincy High students a parking lot. Make sense to you? No sense to me at all.

There is not a bit of logic in Koch's plan with the loss of more revenue in this city. I am sick and tired of watching my hard-earned money wasted on projects with not common sense behind them.

May 9th Deadline For Flood Insurance Rates

Residents who have a flood insurance policy in effect prior to June 9 may be eligible for grandfathering at lower rates. They would be locked in to a lower rate, which would increase at a maximum of 15-18 percent per year until it reaches what FEMA determines the true rate should be. The 30-day waiting period before a policy comes into effect means the insurance would need to be purchased by May 9 to possibly be eligible for grandfathering.

Coughlin's comments after Woodard & Curran Senior Vice President Joseph D. Shea provided an update on the city's appeal efforts.

Woodard & Curran is basing the appeal on a number of factors. In some instances, they are working with the Woods Hole Group to provide different modeling than FEMA used. Specifically, the appeal will use a Simulating Waves Nearshore (SWAN) Model, which is considered more appropriate for the East Coast than FEMA's modeling.

The company is also using contouring and edgematching corrections in its appeal.

A contour correction, according to Shea, means FEMA has incorrect topographical information entered for certain areas. He highlighted a neighborhood in Wollaston where the new map shows a flood reaching 12 feet above sea level overtaking houses 13 or 14 feet above sea level.

Edgematching, he explained, means FEMA may have incorrectly placed the edge of the flood zone over residential areas. To illustrate this, Shea showed one area of Ward 1 where the flood zone ends in a flat line 10 feet past a sea wall.

Woodard & Curran has hired a number of surveyors to gather topographical information for the city's LOMR. Residents can have their property included in the survey information by contacting the city engineer's office at 617-376-1937.

That survey information will then be given to residents who had their property surveyed, along with a reccomendation of whether or not to go ahead with an individual appeal or wait for the city's LOMR. The surveyor will complete the elevation certificate needed by residents for an appeal if they deem it appropriate.

Ward 6 Councillor Brian McNamee, however, said residents shouldn't necessarily wait for the city, noting letters of map amendment can be successfully filed without its assistance.

"The homeowners need to know that," he said. "I love government but government has failed us miserably here. I guess I want to be a little bit of a frontiersman here advise homeowners to proceed with extreme skepticism and self preservation on this. Don't rely on the government to cure the problem they created. You may have to go in on your own."

Councillor Michael McFarland asked Shea if homeowners who've already paid their mortgage in full should opt to purchase flood insurance if they live in a hazard zone. Shea said they should contact insurance agents to determine that.

Monday's meeting followed a public forum on the topic at Quincy High School, and another meeting was scheduled for Tuesday at Central. Neighborhood meetings will also take place in late April or early May.

$450K Renovation For Faxon Park Playground

ground in the city," Cassani said. "This playground will have poured in place rubber. It will have ADA compliance. It will have additional parking. It will make improvements to the overall entryway to the park."

The renovation project will also include new playground equipment and drainage improvements, officials said Tuesday.

Prior to the council's vote, Quincy Community Preservation Community had to approve the $250,000 appropriation. Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, who is the vice chairman of the CPC, said the Faxon Park project is one of many worthy projects the committee reviewed this year. Approving funding for the playground project made sense, he explained, because of the ability to utilize money from the state.

"This one in particular, given the bang for the buck so to speak that could be realized from a state matching grant, made tremendous sense in terms of what we could leverage for the benefit of the city," Coughlin said.

The city was eligible for the state grant as a result of design studies completed in 2012. In a statement Tuesday, Mayor Thomas Koch said he was excited to be able to take advantage of the grant.

"I am delighted that we will be able to take advantage of this unique opportunity," the mayor said. "This grant was not something we had anticipated but we were positioned well to apply for it because we had committed resources to planning and design. Had we not taken those steps a few years back we would not have been able to execute this major upgrade to this spectacular open space."

The playground renovation project, which could go out to bid later this month, coincides with the "Footsteps for Faxon" initiative. The initiative calls for creating ¾-mile running and walking track in the park that could one day be doubled in length to 1.5 miles. Ward 2 Councillor Brad Croall is running in this month's Boston Marathon in hopes of raising $60,000 for the project, which is also backed by the non-profit Quincy Park Conservancy.

"Faxon Park is undoubtedly a major bright spot in the city's park system. With the addition of a revamped playground, I believe this beautiful open space will now become a citywide attraction," Croall said in a statement.

"Receiving matching funding is really going to make this project meaningful and it is important to point out that nothing gets done without people working together. I'd like to thank the park director for his work on this project and the Community Preservation Committee for their approval, which really put us in the best position possible to secure additional funding and move Faxon Park forward."

New City Leadership Needed?

The StreetWorks mess with the Quincy Center development is very troubling. To me, it's a blow to the Quincy psyche and reputation. I can't get over that such a big development is no more.

What happened? As one city councillor stated, the approvel of the project was seen through "rose-colored glasses."

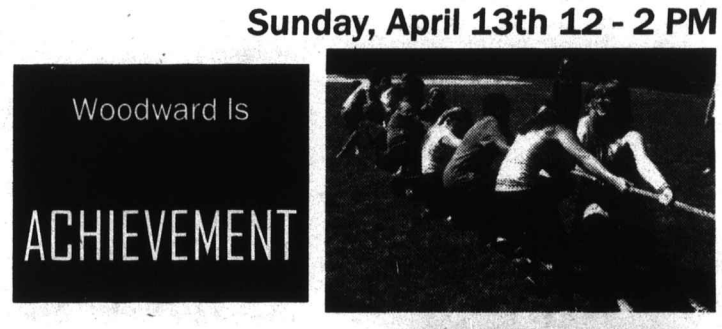

I see the results in a different perspective. I see the Quincy City Council rubber stamping this project. I see conflicts of interest between the mayor and the city council. I see our elected officials really not looking out for the Quincy residents' and businesses' best interests. I see a city counci and mayor not asking the tough questions, and being too "buddy buddy" with each other.

What do we have left from this building project? A "Filenes-like crater-size hole". Lost businesses and lost business taxes to the city, and probably higher taxes tacked on the residents to make up for these lost business taxes.

You think a new Quincy leadership is needed? You decide. I've decided already.

House Majority Leader Mariano Sponsors Dept. Mental Health Citizens Legislative Breakfast

House Majority Leader Ronald Mariano (D-Quincy) sponsored and offered remarks at the annual Massachusetts Department of Mental Health Suburban Area Citizens Legislative Breakfast held recently in the Great Hall at the State House.

The event provides an opportunity every year for people with mental illness, family members, providers and advocates to communicate with their state legislators concerning mental health issues.

Rep. Mariano said the breakfast is a great chance for legislators to connect faces and names with real stories of struggle and recovery.

"Advocacy visits and calls from those on the front lines in the community, whether consumers or providers of services, is so important to us as representatives on issues like this. DMH does a great job of bringing people together to spread the message and I am happy to help," said Rep. Mariano.

DMH Commissioner Marcia Fowler said the event was, "an opportunity for the mental health community—consumers, families, providers and advocates—to meet with their legislators, thank them for their support and discuss with them the many services DMH provides to individuals with serious mental illness."

The theme of this year's DMH breakfast series was "Recovery: It all starts with a conversation." The event's centerpiece is the personal stories shared by DMH consumers and their families. Their experiences put a face on mental illness, demonstrate that treatment works, and reminds us that people with mental illness can recover and lead satisfying and productive lives.

Rep. Mariano said that mental health issues should not be overlooked, "We all must work together to continue to erase the stigma associated with mental health and any hesitancy people may have about seeking treatment."

He specifically praised the Atlantic Clubhouse in Quincy for their work to help individuals coping with the effects of mental illnesses, "The Clubhouse is a very important part of our community. The services they provide help to support those with mental illness to thrive in the face of their challenges, and go on to live happy and healthy lives," said Rep. Mariano.

More than 250 people braved the snow to attend the breakfast, including legislators, consumers, family members, advocates and providers.

QCAP To Honor 'Extra Mile' Award Recipients May 8

Quincy Community Action Board Members, Officers Will Also Be Inducted At Annual Meeting

The Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) Board of Directors will honor its award winners and induct board members and officers at its Annual Meeting and Awards Ceremony. The meeting is open to the community, and will be held at 5:30 p.m. on Thursday, May 8 at The Tirrell Room, Quincy Lodge of Elks, 254 Quarry St., Quincy.

At the meeting, The Board of Directors will recognize several community members with Extra Mile Community Awards for their dedicated support of QCAP, our clients, and the community. This year's award recipients include Attorney George Burke, Marc Karibian, All Purpose Moving Company, Michael Marshall and the Clifford Marshall Foundation and the QMC Foundation Committee, Attorney Richard Barry, Sean Curry, Phyllis Godwin and Grace Murphy-McAuliffe.

In addition, Angela Goosen, Head Start Education Specialist, will be presented the Lois Craig Employee Award, for her outstanding leadership and exemplary service. Twenty-year Service Awards will also be presented.

"QCAP is especially honored to recognize significant contributions of our Extra Mile award recipients and employees this year," said Beth Ann Strollo, QCAP's Executive Director. "We will be celebrating the extraordinary efforts of our staff, Board, and community partners."

As one of Massachusetts' 24 Community Action Agencies (CAAs), one-third of QCAP's board is comprised of representatives of low-income residents. These representatives are elected to serve on QCAP's board by low-income residents of the North Quincy/Atlantic, Germantown, Quincy Point and Southwest neighborhoods of the City of Quincy, Head Start Policy Council, and Lakeview Manor Tenants Association. Residents of these neighborhoods, who are at or below 175% of the poverty level, are encouraged to vote in the QCAP board election. Voting will take place in Germantown, the Fore River Clubhouse, the Southwest Community Center at 1 Copeland Street, and the North Quincy Community Center. Eligible residents may vote by walking-in and completing a ballot at the appropriate location through May 2, 2014.

To attend QCAP's Annual Meeting, or for more information on the board election, contact Elizabeth Hannon at 617-657-5356 or ehannon@qcap.org.

Quincy College Hosting Financial Aid Day Saturday

Quincy College will host its inaugural Financial Aid Day on Saturday, April 12th at 10 a.m. on its Quincy campus, 1250 Hancock Street in Room 411.

College applicants will have free access to experienced financial aid advisors for assistance with completing the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) and the opportunity to submit a completed form to up to ten colleges. This event is free and open to the public.

The Free Application for Federal Student Aid, also known as the FAFSA, is a free form that is prepared annually by current and prospective college students (undergraduate and graduate) in the United States to determine eligibility for student financial aid. In order to apply for federal student aid, completing the FAFSA is a mandatory first step. Although the form can be quick and easy for some, most need guidance on where and how to start. At the Quincy College Financial Aid Day, counselors will be on hand to guide applicants on the financial aid process and the next steps after filing the FAFSA. Applicants must be a U.S. citizen or permanent resident to participate.

Students and parents should each bring their: Social Security number, driver's license number, FAFSA pin (can be obtained from www.pin.ed.gov), 2013 federal tax return, 2013 W-2 or year-end pay stub, untaxed income records (if applicable), bank statements (if applicable), business and investment records (if applicable), and alien registration card (if not a U.S. citizen).

Quincy College is located off the MBTA red line and commuter rail line at Quincy Center. Campus tours will also be held during this event.

To RSVP, contact Pat Hansbury at 1-617-984-1623 or phansbury@quincycollege.edu.

Floral Arrangements Program At Kennedy Center April 25

Local Legislators Back Minimum Wage Bump

last month will increase the state's minimum wage to $10.10 an hour by 2017.

The federal minimum wage is $7.25 an hour, and current Massachusetts law mandates the state's minimum be at least 10 cents higher. The House bill would ensure the state's minimum wage be at least 40 cents higher than the federal wage; the Senate would require it to be 50 cents higher.

The House bill also contains language that would make reforms to the state's unemployment insurance program, essentially freezing the rate at which employers are required to pay into the system. The Senate has approved similar legislation, though it did so separately from the minimum wage increase.

The Senate's minimum wage bill passed by a 31-7 margin and the House bill was approved in a 123-24 vote. Both votes were largely along party lines. Quincy's four legislators, all Democrats, voted in favor of the bill in their respective houses.

"If someone is willing to work for a living they should be making more than $16,000 a year," said Sen. John Keenan, referring to the amount of money a full-time employee currently earns on minimum wage.

House Majority Leader Ron Mariano said he supported the House's bill because of the benefit it would provide to working families.

"It was a bill we worked on for a long time," Mariano said. "We put a plan together for working families that will benefit them."

"No one should be working full-time and living in poverty," Rep. Bruce Ayers stated, "and all too often we hear stories of residents struggling to make ends meet."

Members of the delegation also said they didn't share the concerns some in the business community have regarding the proposed increase in minimum wage. Rep. Tackey Chan, the vice chair of the Joint Committee on Community Development and Small Businesses, said concerns about the impact of raising the minimum wage have been raised in the past. Those concerns, however, have not been borne out.

"I do understand the concern but it's not a new argument. If raising the minimum wage led to massive job losses, we would've seen it five years ago," Chan said, referring to the last minimum wage increase in 2008. "We would have seen it 10 years ago and 15 years ago."

Chan also noted the proposed reforms to the state's unemployment insurance program would benefit many companies statewide.

"It will be significantly better than the current statute," he said. "More than 70 percent of businesses should see benefits from this."

Mariano said he knows small business owners are worried about an increase, but the House's increase isn't large enough to be a concern.

"We're in a challenging economy and I know they're afraid of how it will effect them, but my feeling is we're not asking for a huge increase," Mariano said. "I'm not as concerned about that as others are."

Keenan noted increasing minimum wage would help boost the economy in the long run. An employee working in an ice cream shop making minimum wage, for example, would be able to go next door and buy lunch with the extra money.

"In the mid to longer term it will have a positive impact," Keenan said, adding proposed reforms to the unemployment insurance program would help offset the costs to businesses.

Keenan also explained that when larger employers pay a substantial number of their workers minimum wage, taxpayers are forced to pay the cost of social benefits such as health insurance. Increasing the minimum would help address that situation.

"We're all paying for that employer," Keenan said. "We've got to address it. That's not fair and it's not right."

Mariano and Keenan are optimistic that both houses will reach a compromise to send to Gov. Deval Patrick.

"There are significant differences," Mariano said. "It is my hope to get the crux of a minimum wage increase done and look then begin to look at issues related to unemployment."

"It's important for employees that we get the minimum wage corrected and it's important for employees that we make unemployment insurance reforms," Keenan said. "Hopefully we'll get together and work it out."

In addition to the House and Senate bills, a referendum on the raising the minimum wage may appear on November's ballot. The proposed ballot question, backed by Democratic U.S. Sen. Elizabeth Warren and labor groups, would raise the minimum wage to $10.50 an hour over two years and tie future increases to inflation.

the city would follow an open bid process.

"It will be an open bid process and there will be developers vetted that could move forward," Moran said. "We need to vet these developers. We need someone with a background. You're not going to get 50 bidders – there are only so many companies that can accept a job that size."

Moran also explained that nearby 10 Merrymount Road sold recently for $1.6 million. That building has a total size of approximately 20,000 square feet, about one-third the size of the former Central school. Both buildings require asbestos abatement.

Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest, who represents the neighborhood surrounding the school, brought the issue before the council at Monday's meeting and made a motion to reconsider the March 17 vote calling for additional appraisals.

The motion to reconsider passed 8-1, with Ward 4 Councillor Brian Palmucci opposed. A subsequent re-vote on the request for three appraisals failed, with only Palmucci supporting it. The council then passed Laforest's motion to amend the original request by striking a reference to the council's ability to set minimum price, with Palmucci again opposed. Before those procedural votes, Palmucci had asked for the specific wording of the motion passed March 17, which no one at the meeting could recall verbatim.

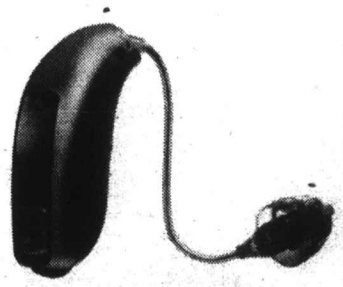

The final vote passed unanimously, with all nine councillors voting in favor.

Micaela Maloof, Maura McDonough Receive Grossman Award

Two members of The Woodward School Class of 2014, Micaela Maloof and Maura McDonough, both of Quincy, are recipients of the Reuben A. and Lizzie Grossman Award, established in 1956 "to recognize high ideals of leadership and service which have been demonstrated through outstanding accomplishments within the community and school, and to promote and encourage youths to place service above self."

This year's recipients were honored at an awards luncheon held recently at the Neighborhood Club in Quincy.

Maloof is the Vice-President of National Honor Society, National Art Honor Society, Student Government Secretary, and has been active in the Anime and Computer Clubs at Woodward. She served as varsity basketball team manager and as a peer tutor.

Micaela has been notably active in service to the greater community during all her years of school, especially at the Boston Rescue Mission. Of volunteering, Micaela says, "It allows me the opportunity to show kindness and courtesy to people who are otherwise ignored by society, and I am able to gain greater humility and respect for the many blessings afforded to me in life."

Micaela plans to study political science and international relations in college. To date, she has been accepted to Simmons College (Presidential Scholarship), Goucher College and the University of Vermont (Presidential Scholarship).

McDonough is the President of Woodward's Senior Class and National Honor Society. She has been active in the School's Classics Club and has served her community as a volunteer at Interfaith Social Services.

Maura is a talented, prize-winning artist. Of the Grossman Award, she says, "I feel honored and grateful, not only because my school nominated me for this award, but also because I was able to attend a school that gave me so many opportunities. I feel I will graduate capable and ready to live up to the ideals of the Grossman Foundation and I credit Woodward with that entirely."

Maura aspires to a career in law and will be attending Georgetown University in the fall.

Woodward School Students Honored

The Woodward School community recently gathered for its annual Founders' Night at the School in Quincy.

The annual event celebrates the vision and generosity of the School's founders, Dr. Ebenezer Woodward and Mary Greenleaf Woodward, as well as the academic achievements of its students, including the National Honor Society Induction Ceremony and awards presentations for the Founders' History Paper Competition, Declamation and Rhetoric.

Students inducted into the National Honor Society in recognition of their scholarship leadership, service and character:

Class of 2014: Rachel Slobodzinski of Boston.

Class of 2015: Marianna Moulis of Hyde Park and Emma Will of Quincy.

Class of 2016: Amelia D'Onofrio of Scituate; Maeve Hegarty, Victoria Hubley, Rachael McIver, Abby Rose Plourde, and Rahel Sirack, all of Quincy; and Emma Pumphret of Weymouth.

Also recognized on Founders' Night were the finalists and winner of the Founders' History Paper Competition and Scholarship Prize. The Founders' Paper is a junior class requirement in which students write a thesis paper on a topic in U.S. History. The Grand Prize Winner is the recipient of the Susan M. Hayes History Award, a tuition scholarship established in memory of a beloved former Woodward history teacher and Dean of Students.

Chandra Allard Presented Jimmy Fund 'Spirit Award'

Chandra Allard, of Quincy was recently presented a "Spirit Award" at the Jimmy Fund and Dana-Farber Cancer Institute's Third Annual Summit on Fundraising.

The Annual Summit on Fundraising is an opportunity for Jimmy Fund's top fundraisers to come together to hear the latest advances in cancer research and treatment from Dana-Farber's doctors and researchers, network with fellow fundraisers, and learn exclusive fundraising tips from the pros at the Jimmy Fund.

Allard is a co-captain of Team Collier that was honored for their efforts by participating in, and raising funds for, the 2013 Boston Marathon® Jimmy Fund Walk presented by Hyundai. Also honored was co-captain Laura Mancuso of of Somerville,

"We are grateful to everyone who participated in the 2013 Jimmy Fund events who are committed to raising awareness and funds to benefit the advancement of cancer research and treatment at Dana-Farber," says Suzanne Fountain, director of the Jimmy Fund. "Chandra and Laura exemplify what the Spirit Award stands for and therefore we were honored to present it to them."

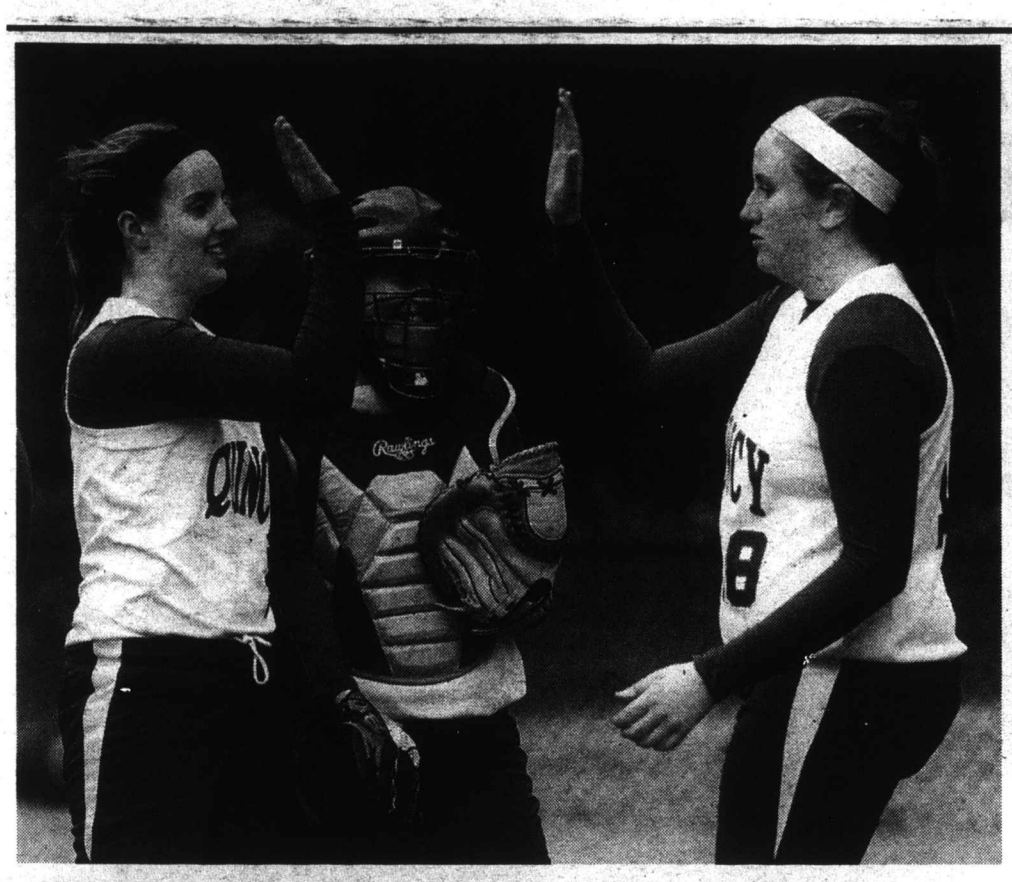

The Boston Marathon® Jimmy Fund Walk is a one-day charity event that raises funds for the Jimmy Fund for lifesaving adult and pediatric patient care and cancer research at Dana-Farber. In 2013, Allard and Mancuso led Team Collier, a new group of 85 walkers formed in honor of fallen MIT police officer Sean Collier.

To honor the life and service of Sean Collier, 27, and his longtime support of the Jimmy Fund, Team Collier was founded by Allard, a friend of Collier's sister, and Mancuso, a member of Collier's kickball team. Initially, the women started two teams in honor of Collier and later merged them to create a larger group who walked up to 26.2 miles in the 2013 Boston Marathon Jimmy Fund Walk.

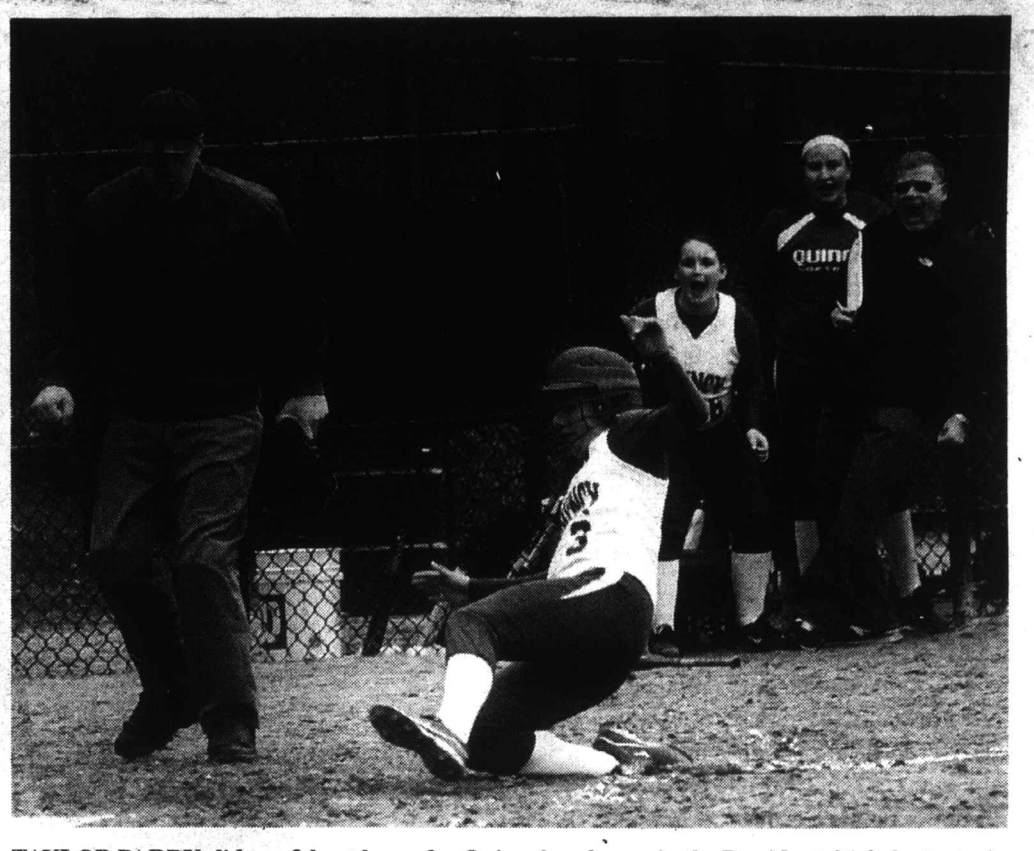

Collier was a dedicated supporter of the Jimmy Fund since high school, making recurring gifts on a monthly basis. As high schoolers, Collier and his sister, Jennifer Lemmerman, heard about the Jimmy Fund while listening to the annual WEEI/NESN Jimmy Fund Radio-Telethon during a summer job they held together at a medical office.

Bresnahan Hurls A Gem, Presidents Down W-H 1-0

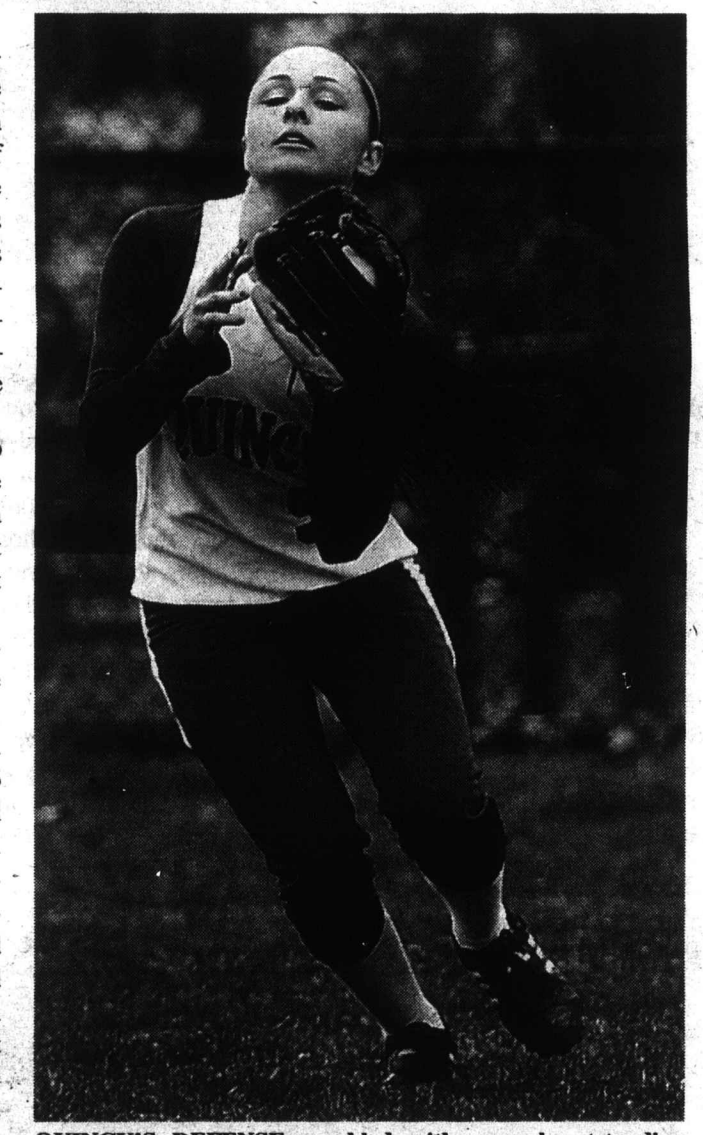

By JOE REARDON

Pitching duels in softball usually don't emerge until temperatures warm and teams are in the flow of the season. So it was a little surprising to see Quincy's Saxon Bresnahan lock horns with Whitman-Hanson's terrific left-hander Gabby DeLeon at chilly Mitchell/McCoy Field on Monday in the Presidents' season opener.

Bresnahan wound up getting the better of the Panthers' standout, firing a two-hitter and striking out 11 batters in the 1-0 Patriot League victory.

Quincy finally got to DeLeon in the bottom of the fifth and the one run was all the Presidents would need. DeLeon retired the first two batters on ground balls and then walked Taylor Parry. Rachel Papile drilled a single to left field to put runners on first and second and Nicole Jorgensen proceeded to go with an outside pitch and slammed a pitch just fair down the right field line to score Parry for the lone run of the game. DeLeon wound up allowing just the two fifth inning hits and struckout five.

The thrilling win was a big way to start the season after weeks of practice without a game due to poor field conditions. The Presidents began their run to what they hope will be a spot in the postseason after finishing 10-10 last year and losing to Oliver Ames 5-2 in the tournament.

QUINCY'S DEFENSE sparkled with several outstanding plays including leftfielder Dana Varmahmoodi who grabs a line-drive for an out in the top of the sixth inning.

"We hadn't played a game yet and have been practicing for three weeks," said head coach Greg Sommers. "We were supposed to have our first game last Wednesday and it got postponed. Not being able to get out there before a league rival game is tough, but the girls did a great job.

"We really didn't get the bats going but you kind of expect that for the first game. We saw their pitcher last year and she threw great against us. She did pretty much what she did today. She changes up on them and gets the girls to ground out."

Bresnahan was sharp from the start, striking out the first two batters and getting the third to groundout in the first two innings. Sarah Saccardo, who had both the hits for the Panthers, reached on a bunt single in the third, but Bresnahan put the brakes on any potential for a big inning by retiring the next two batters. Saccardo lined a hard single to left in the fifth and stole second, but Bresnahan struck out Emily Cook to preserve the shutout. Bresnahan sat down two more batters on strikeouts to end the game.

The chilly breeze didn't bother Bresnahan, who said she just likes to "go with the flow." An outfielder and shortstop her freshman year, she moved to the mound her sophomore year and won 10 games for the Presidents. Bresnahan feels even stronger and more confident this time around after pitching extensively during the offseason heading into the spring. She worked on perfecting her vast array of pitches that include a curveball, screwball, changeup, fastball, drop and rise during the fall and winter.

"We stay motivated and focused through our practices so we were game-ready," said Bresnahan. "I felt really confident.

"I don't think I was as confident last year because I was starting new (as a pitcher). This year I'm ready to go. I think I've gotten stronger pitching. I haven't been focusing on just throwing hard because everyone can adapt to that. I pitched a lot during the offseason. I was a little nervous when there were girls on base, but I knew I had a good defense behind me."

Tony's Clam Shop Celebrating 50 Years

By KRIS KALABOKAS

Wollaston Beach staple Tony's Clam Shop is celebrating its 50th anniversary of serving generations of hungry beachgoers in Quincy.

Operated by Tony and Matilda Kandalaft since 1964, Tony's boasts an impressive, and reasonably priced, menu of seafood, hot dogs, and hamburgers. What began as a humble takeout and pickup stand servicing Quincy residents and tourists alike has since grown to a sit-down restaurant that seats over 160 patrons. On seasonable days, it's not unusual for roughly 800 customers to stop by, particularly for their most popular item; fried clams with the bellies still attached.

Karen Djerf, the Kandalaft's daughter, said her father—who is 95—can still be frequently found there tending to the garden behind the restaurant, growing tomatoes still used in the shop's fresh salads. He also sweeps sand from the front deck on an almost daily basis. Matilda, also in her mid-90s, comes in periodically to sit at her favorite table in the corner to eat and observe customers as they stop in for food after a day on the beach.

Besides seafood, they offer Middleastern specialties such a tabbouleh and hummus; a nod to Tony's Lebanese roots.

After leaving Lebanon and managing a small grocery store in Brazil for ten years, Tony relocated to America where he worked several jobs and relied on the generosity of friends not only to support his family, but to be able to afford the down payment on what was at the time the Wollaston Clam Shop.

"My father had nothing and borrowed all the money to put a down payment," said son Gary Kandalaft. Tony worked hard, taking on hours at the Walter Baker Chocolate company, the third-shift at the Boston Gear Works, and shifts at Roxie's of Quincy during the winter months. Matilda was tasked with working the front of the store.

"He had never owned a restaurant before." Said Djerf. He turned the small, walk-up burger and hotdog joint he originally purchased into the Tony's locals love today. The greenhouse addition, which was built roughly 30 years ago, allowed for more indoor seating. Whatever profits were made went directly back into the business for renovations and upgrades. Those funds also helped in restoring parts of Quincy Shore Drive, beautifying the area and making it more inviting to customers.

The family lived in the apartment above and behind the restaurant for years, and family members were always on call when things got busy. There was a buzzer connected to the living room that would alert them if their services were needed. "My mother, all she wanted to do was watch the nine o'clock movie," said Gary. "[Tony] would always hit the buzzer ten minutes of eleven so she never ended up finishing a movie."

"My bedroom used to be the grill area. When I came home from vacation one day it was transformed into the grill," said Djerf.

Shawn Bulman, a 30-year employee and now manager started working there at nine-years-old taking out trash, cleaning tables, and straightening out chairs. He said that of the roughly 25 to 30 people employed full-time and part-time at the restaurant, many have come back season after season for work. In fact, he said generations of families have worked and still work for Tony's.

Djerf said some cooks have been with Tony's as long as 15 years and that she considers business operations to be "a family affair."

"We plan to be around another 50 years," said Bulman, noting that their 50 years in business would possibly be celebrated with a block or beach party.

Quality and cleanliness is one of the elements that has Tony's successful according to Gary. "I think that's what's kept us going all these years," he said. Aiding in the fresh taste of the food is the special pump system used to drain away used oil and bring clean oil to the frialators created by Gary who has an engineering background. "He developed the system that pumps the oil downstairs...it's all fresh," said Djerf.

Overwhelmingly positive reviews online and by word of mouth have also helped. "We are getting so much tourism," he said. "We have so many people that are not just out of state but...also out of the country."

Another reason he thinks the restaurant is successful is Tony himself. "[The customers] all loved him because he was really, really good to everyone." Customers who grew up eating at Tony's still come in periodically and ask for the family patriarch.

Tony's season begins either on St. Patrick's Day or the first day of spring and ends once October finishes. Peak sales are seen from Memorial Day to Labor Day; times when kids are out of school and at the beach with their parents and friends.

Gary recounted the story of a homeless man who had been found sleeping on the beach in the 70s. "My father fed him and gave him coffee for years," he said "so he came in about ten years ago and he told me that he wanted to thank my father." Despite this kind act, Tony has never bragged. He's only ever acknowledged that it was the right thing to do for someone who had nothing.

One of Matilda's favorite memories is of rolling grape leaves with her cousins, nieces, nephews, brothers, and sisters while sitting at a picnic table on the deck. In fact, Matilda went into labor one August day with Karen while doing this, something mother and daughter still laugh about today.

In recent years, the family began operating an ice cream parlor located just a few feet away from Tony's. The shop, aptly called Matilda's, was opened after alcohol sales began at Tony's. According to son Roy Kandalaft, space was limited and arrangements had to be made to accommodate the liquor sales by stopping the sale of desserts. As for future plans, he said they are considering expanding the shop outwards and upwards and they are toying with the idea of opening a second, albeit smaller, location in Florida.

"The best thing is you see everybody; all of Quincy and the kids that grew up with you or their kids and their families," said Gary. it's amazing."

WHEN IT OPENED in 1964, Tony's Clam Shop was originally the Wollaston Clam Shop. This photo was taken in the late 1960s.

Century 21 Abigail Adams Participates In QPS' 'Credit For Life'

Century 21 Abigail Adams recently participated in the Quincy Public Schools' Annual "Credit for Life" event held at the Tirrell Room at the Elks Hall on Quarry Street.

High school seniors from North Quincy and Quincy High School attended this popular event which provided a chance for the students to speak directly to members of individual business sectors.

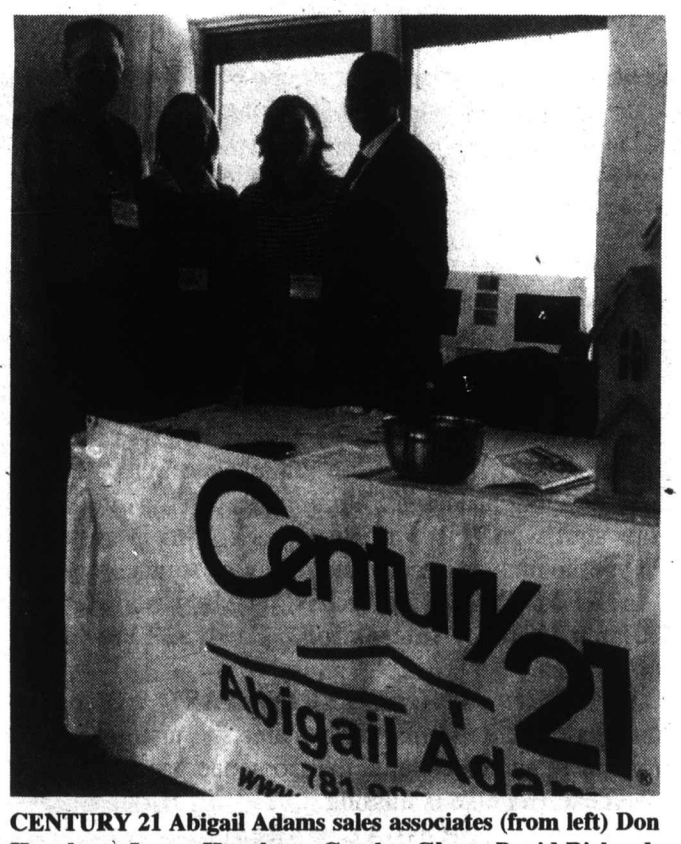

Representatives from the banking and insurance sectors, as well as an auto dealer and retailer were on hand for the students to interact.

The day's exercise involved each student learning personal budget management skills based on a profession's salary. Tasks involved opening mock bank accounts, buying a car and selecting the proper insurance, renting an apartment, and learning to manage an everyday budget.

Participants from Century 21 Abigail Adams included Don and Lynne Houghton, Carolyn Glynn, and David Richardson.

"We are proud to be part of the school community. Students are the future and their success is a source of pride and satisfaction in the City of Quincy," says retired QPS principal, Don Houghton. "Each year the fair grows and students greatly benefit from the support and collaboration of all the volunteers."

Established in Quincy in 1979, Century 21 Abigail Adams has offices in Quincy, Norwell and Marshfield.

A Job Well Done

By QUINCY POLICE LT. DAN MINTON

On April 2, 2014, at approximately 10:20 p.m., Sergeant Mark Foley received a phone call from a Social Worker at Massachusetts General Hospital, who stated that there was a pregnant woman in the emergency room who said that she had been assaulted by her husband in Quincy. Sergeant Foley instructed Officers' David Zupkofska and Siobhan O'Connor to go to the hospital to interview the victim.

Once at MGH, the Officers were led to the victim's hospital room. The victim, a 33 year old woman, said that she is 21 weeks pregnant. She stated that it was last Thursday or Friday that she and her husband got into a volatile argument which led to her husband grabbing her by the back of the neck and shoving her forcefully. As she fell forward, she was able to avoid hitting the floor and her stomach by bracing herself against the kitchen table. The victim stated that she is afraid of her husband and that she is concerned for the safety of their 3 year old daughter as well as for their unborn child. She added that this isn't the first time her husband has assaulted her, referring to a recent incident when he assaulted her, leaving a scar on her leg.

When asked about her hospital visit this evening, the victim said that she was feeling "okay" but she was concerned with the pregnancy because she has not felt the baby move for a few days and wanted to get checked out. She took the train to the hospital and then called her husband. She told the Officers that her husband was aware she is pregnant and that her mother in law witnessed the most recent assault. The mother in law strongly advised her not to call the Police.

In the waiting room was the victim's husband, their 3 year old daughter and the mother in law. As the victim was being examined, the Officers attempted to question the husband, but he would not respond nor did he deny the incident occurred. Based on the available information, the Officers placed the suspect, a 37 year old Quincy resident, under arrest for "Assault and Battery on a Pregnant Person." As Officer O'Connor transported the suspect back to the station for booking, Officer Zupkofska advised the victim of her right to get a restraining order, but she said it was late and she wanted to get her daughter home and into bed. She was advised that she could go to Quincy District Court in the morning to get a restraining order and she said that she would do that. The victim and the mother in law then spoke briefly and agreed to go home together.

LT. DAN MINTON

Prior to leaving, the victim walked over to Officer Zupkofska and told him that the mother in law said that their "family is broken" and she planned on moving out. Since the victim didn't want this, she told the Officer, "Forget what I told you and let my husband go." She was advised that probable cause existed and he would remain under arrest.

Back at the station, Officer Zupkofska requested no bail on the suspect due to the nature of the incident. Nice Work!

JEWELRY: Consider what you keep in your jewelry box. It usually breaks down to jewelry worn regularly, jewelry that is either costume or expensive and jewelry that has nostalgic value, such as a family keepsake piece. These categories often overlap. When burglaries occur, one of the first locations that the thief goes to is the jewelry box in the bedroom. To prevent losing valuable jewelry or a keepsake, it would be wise to be creative as to where to keep these items, such as in a hollowed out book, a boot or hidden deep inside a closet.

PHOTOS: It is important to have up to date photos of those close to you who have dementia or other difficulties finding their way home. A 72 year old citizen with early signs of dementia walked away from her home last week and frantic family members called the Police to report her missing. Our first step is to obtain a recent photo to distribute to all Officers and to the media if needed. The most recent photo the family had of the victim was over 30 years old, which was useless. We were able to get a photo from a local bank that she visited recently and within minutes, Officer Ann Marie Reilly found the victim at Wendy's restaurant on Newport Avenue. Good Work by all!

1-617-855 9939 Citizens are complaining about a call or calls they received from a recorded message, claiming to be from Social Security. The message instructs you to go to www.surveysampling.com to complete an online survey. This is not from Social Security. The ".com" would be ".org" if it was from an official federal site and I have yet to see a survey sent out online by a federal organization. The recorded message states they are an independent research company and that the information is helpful for "service providers and politicians." Although they say that your information will remain confidential, I would not recommend that you participate. There really is nothing in it for you.

Gabby Zorkers Scores Hat Trick For Presidents

Quincy Girls Lacrosse Bows To Plymouth South

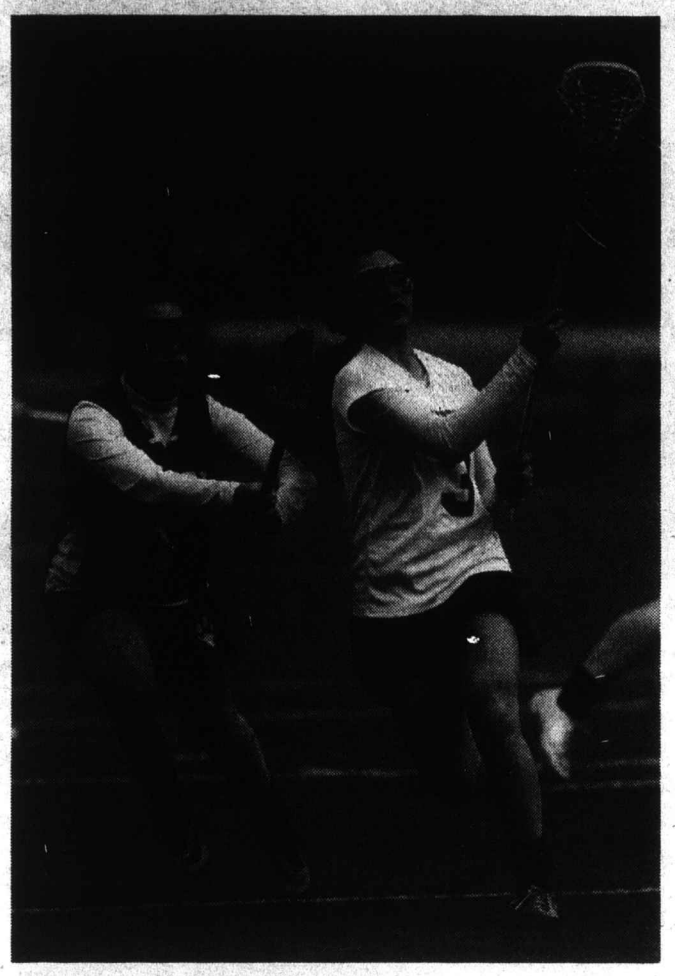

By JOE REARDON

The sideline action was all you need to know about what did Quincy in, Saturday against Plymouth South.

Playing a rare morning game, the Presidents had all but one of their players on the field while the Panthers rotated fresh players onto the Veterans' Memorial Stadium field consistently throughout. Quincy was able to hang tough with Plymouth South for the first half, but couldn't slow the Panthers from pulling away to a decisive 16-7 win.

Gabby Zorkers provided the bulk of the offense for the Presidents to the tune of three goals and Kerry Phelan added a pair of tallies. Olivia Wallace and Gabriela Jerahian both had solo goals in the loss.

Quincy head coach Alisa Arakelian was pleased with the Presidents' effort overall, but admitted there were chunks of time where the girls weren't agressive enough on offense. "I think once South got up a couple of goals, it really knocked us back," said Arakelian." I think for them right now it's a mental thing. It's still fresh for us the way we do things. My hats off to them that they can do that. They kept it so close for so long. We kind of got beat a little bit by ourselves today. We didn't step up a little bit more on offense like we should have."

QUINCY'S GABRIELA JERAHIAN eludes a Plymouth South defender for a Presidents' scoring opportunity against the Panthers Saturday.

Zorkers, who was in the top three in scoring for Quincy last spring, scored the first goal of the game with a strong shot from 20 yards out for the 1-0 advantage just one minute in. Plymouth South tied it then went ahead until Phelan's first tally with 21:30 left in the half to make it 2-2.

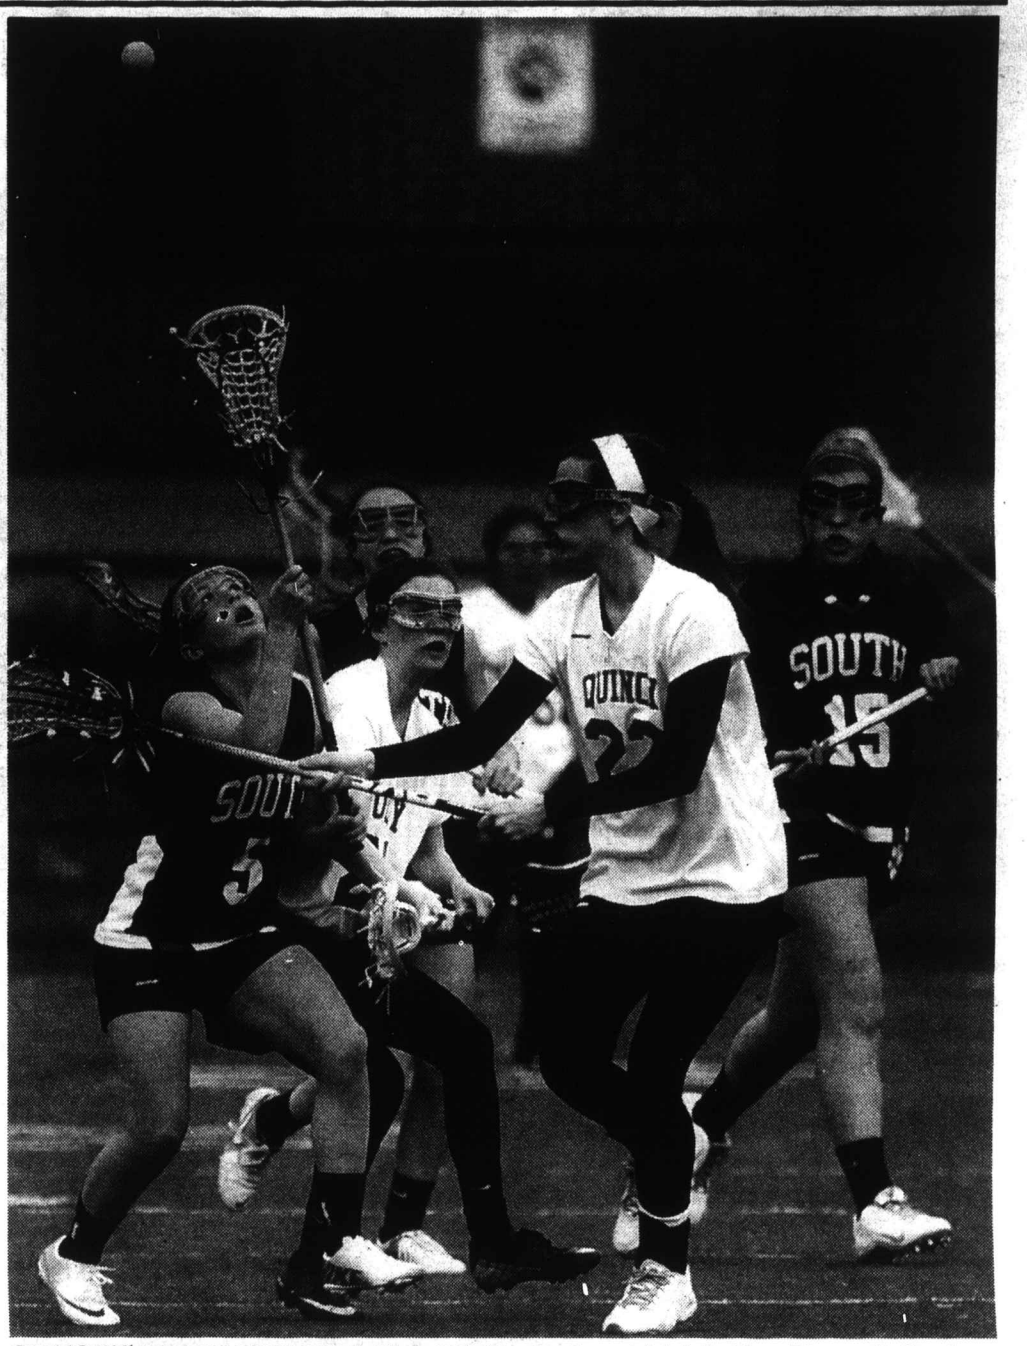

The Panthers moved the ball well on offense and continued to have success scoring, reeling off three straight goals before Zorkers' second tally cut it to 5-3 with 14:04 left in the opening half. The talented Plymouth Sough squad scored the next three goals to go up by five, 8-3, and the teams went to the locker rooms with the score 8-4, courtesy of Wallace's goal after charging the net and whipping home a solid shot with 3:25 remaining in the half.

The Presidents got the jump on the Panthers quickly in the second with Zorkers and Jerahian firing home goals in a 26-second surge to make it 8-6. Quincy's fatigue was starting to take its toll and the players began moving off their opponents rather than closing down their running roome and battling for ground balls. Plymouth South surged ahead wih the next eight goals to put the game away. Phelan put in her second from 10 yards out with 8:43 remaining to put the score at 16-7.

Zorkers believes it's not the time to panic and is confident the senior leadership will set the tone in the coming games. "We have some things to work on as a team, but we're more of a team this year - not just individuals," said Zorkers. "The biggest thing we have to work on is transition. It's early in the season and our team's been up and down. We only have one sub so we get tired. It's a little tougher, but the team has really matured. Most girls have been on it three or four years now so we know what we're doing."

Arakelian has little doubt that Quincy will only get better in its all-around play with every game. "They have a lot of talent," she said. "They just need some confidence. It becomes a tough situation when we have low numbers at this point. We're playing everybody almost like iron man football. Everybody has to kind of switch off and play everywhere. The girls have to dig themselves out a little bit. They just couldn't do it today. I was just too big of a feat today.

"It's really important that the girls have some good decision making skills and close games and tight situations. It's the composure that's going to make them go on."

Quincy Boys Fall To Hanover

By JOE REARDON

Coaches can point to several "defining moments" throughout the season and they can come at the most unexpected times. Martin Bowes saw the first one from his Quincy High lacrosse team Friday against Hanover and he liked the results.

Trailing by a whopping 11-0 after a first half where nothing went right for the Presidents, Bowes calmly addressed his team in the locker room for a few minutes after the disaterous opening half then left them to let his words sink in. "I kind of let them decide for themsleves what they wanted to do," said Bowes. "I think it's a defining moment this season. I told them that, realistically, we're not going to win this game, but we can show what kind of character we have. I said that, I left the locker room and let them talk."

The Presidents obviously took Bowes' words to heart and made the decision they weren't going to just lay down on their home turf at Veterans Memorial Stadium in the second half. Quincy was all over the field in the second in the 13-1 loss. The Presidents' record went to 1-1 after dismantling Cardinal Spellman in the season opener.

The third quarter just may have been the Quincy's best of the spring to date. The Presidents were successful with everything that simply didn't work in the first 24 minutes. Quincy was beating the Indians to ground balls, getting back on the transition to play some tight defense and limited the number of shots on goaltender Max Hurley.

Hanover goaltender Noah Clapp robbed Mitchell McGowan's bullet of a shot 2:13 into the third, but McGowan finally put Quincy on the board with 6:07 left in the third when he stole a pass, got knocked down in front of Clapp, but managed to shuffle a shot in to make it 11-1. McGowan, who had several scoring chances, very nearly had his second tally with 3:10 left in the third on a shot just above the crease that Clapp was able to get his stick on.

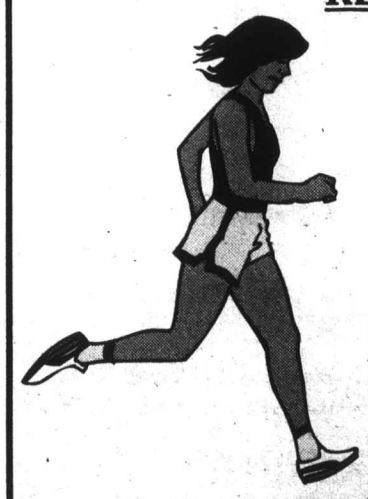

The Indians got the jump on Quincy at the opening whistle and put the game out of reach. Chris Rosinski and Jon Nassif led Hanover with four goals apiece and Landon Hasenfuss notched a hat trick to pace the offense.

Hanover went up 6-0 in the first and added another five tallies in the second half. The Presidents weren't as nearly agressive as they had to be against the fundamentally sound Indians. "The biggest disappointment in the first half was that we were getting outworked and that's tough to watch," said Bowes. "It's ok if a team is better than us and has better skills, but we don't want to get outworked by anyone. That's the thing that really got me in the first half."

The Presidents weren't without their scoring chances. Clapp was sharp in net as he turned away a low Steve Ross shot that was headed for the corner and then grabbed a hard bid from Brian O'Callaghan from 20 yards out. Ross was robbed of a tally in the closing min-

Pugsley Delivers Presidents' Opening Day Win

Single Scores Winning Run In 12th Inning Over Boston Latin; Sorensen Shines In 9 Innings Of Relief

By BILL GRIFFIN

It was a classic of a baseball game that should have been played in the state tournament. It should have been played with the season in full bloom before a large crowd enjoying the good life, sitting in lawn chores and catching a warm breeze.

Instead, it came in the opener. The trees were bare. Fans shivered and wrapped themselves in blankets – jackets zipped to the top, hats pulled down over ears – seeking shelter from the cold, wet wind which whipped across Adams Field.

It was an opener of high quality which offered fine promise for the season. Senior Mike Pugsley decided it by punching a single through the left side of the infield with one out in the 12th inning to score Bobby Salvucci with the winning run and give Quincy a thrilling 9-8 decision over Boston Latin in the non-league opener for the Presidents Friday afternoon.

"We lost four or five games by one run last year. I think the experience we gained should help us in close games this season," said Quincy coach Pat Bryan.

Let's start at the end which was almost four hours from the beginning.. After rallying with two out in the 11th to tie it on a Matt Davis single, Quincy won it in 12th. Salvucci singled to start it, and winning pitcher Kenny Sorensen (one of his many contributions) dropped a perfect sacrifice to move him to second.

Pugsley drilled a shot off third baseman Jack Downey's glove which trickled into short left. Salvucci never stopped churning around third and the Presidents had their sweet victory.

"We have some great senior leadership and Pugsley is one of the ones we'll count on. I think learning to do the little things, like getting down a sacrifice bunt, is something that will make a difference for us this year," said Bryan.

PITCHER KENNY SORENSEN pitched nine innings of near flawless relief helping QHS to an opening game win.

QUINCY'S MATT DAVIS steals second base with two outs in the seventh inning of a 7-7 game against Boston Latin. The Presidents won the game in 12 innings with a 9-8 victory.

Quincy Sun Photos/Larry Carchedi

There were many stories to the day.

• It always starts with pitching and Sorensen was brilliant. He escaped a bases-loaded no-out mess in the fourth, hurled nine innings of two-run, eight-hit, five-strikeout relief to get the win. That's nine innings on a day better suited for ice fishing than pitching. He mixed his arm angles from over-the-top to three-quarter to sidearm. He threw mainly fastballs, and more importantly, he threw mainly strikes. Good fastballs over the plate are seldom a bad thing.

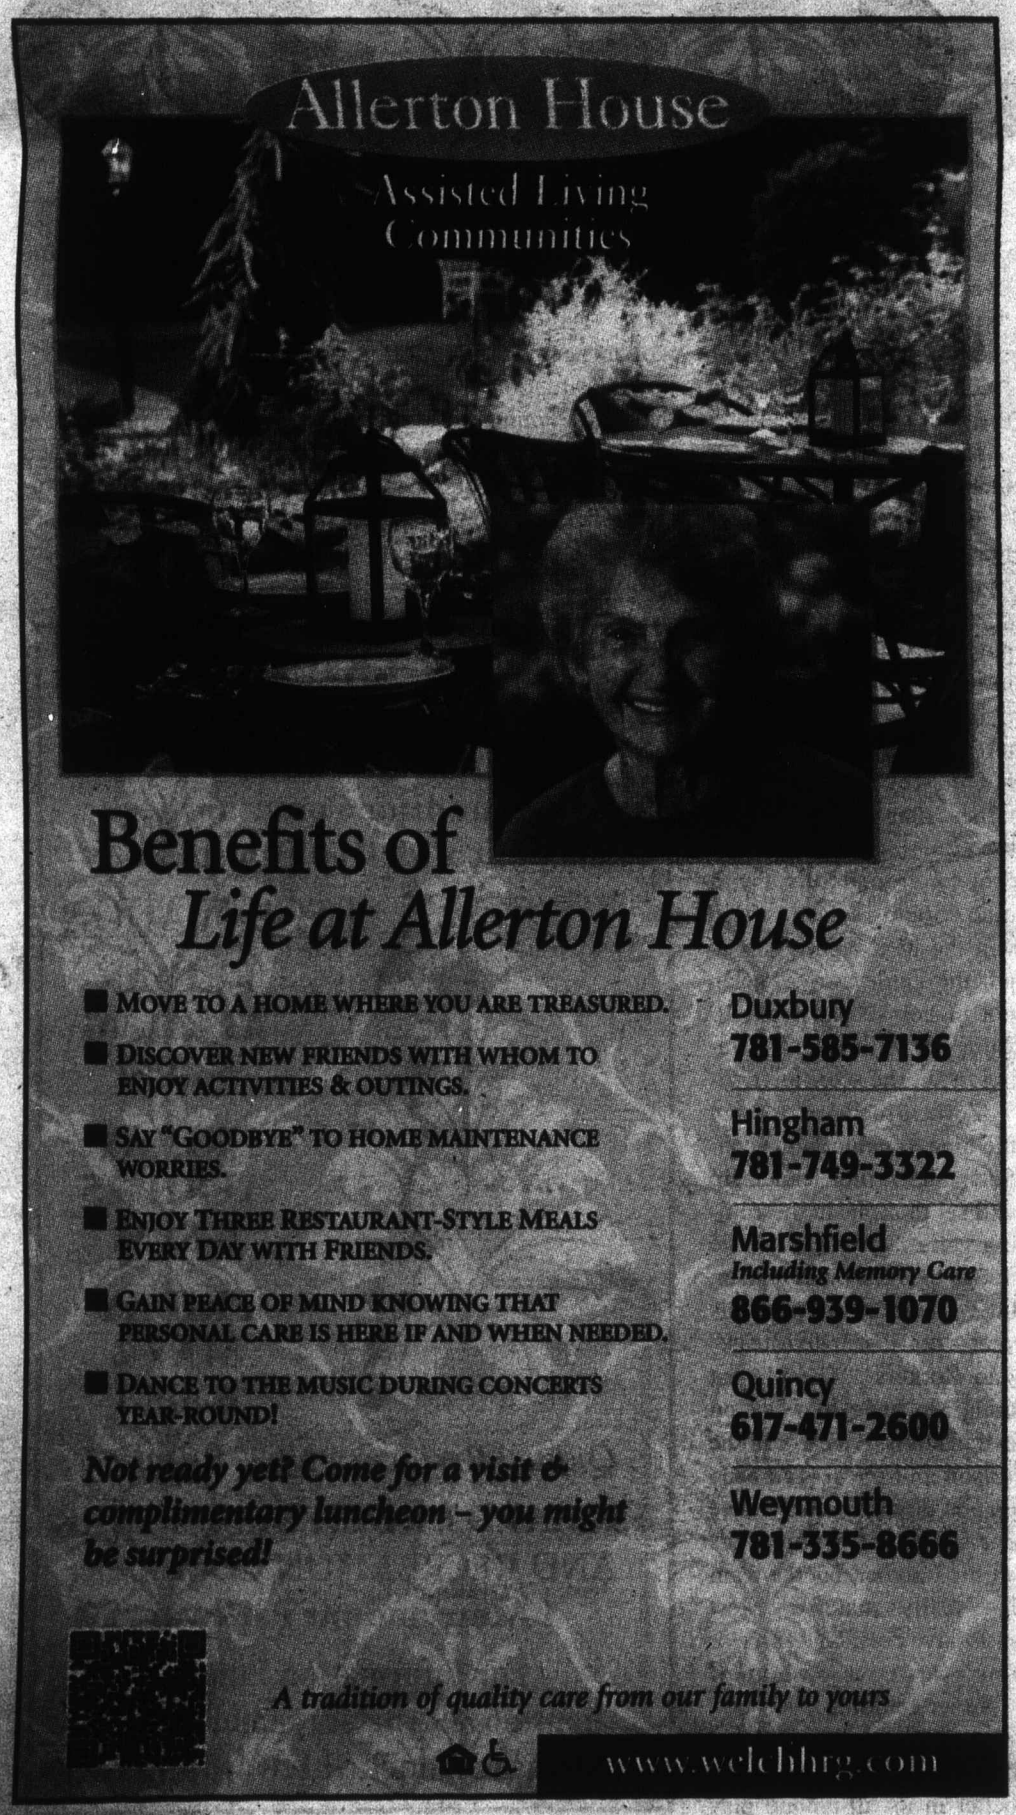

"I think our pitching will be our strength this year," said Bryan. "We should be deep in pitchers who have varsity experience and Sorensen is one of them. He mixes up his stuff well."

• Resiliency. Quincy was down 7-5 in the sixth and tied it in on RBI singles from Robbie Munroe (much more on him in a second) Mike Carnavale. The Presidents were down to their final out and final strike in the 11th when Davis singled home Cody Desmond to tie it at 8-8 and make the dramatic 12th possible.

"I think it gets back to our seniors. They've learned what it takes. Davis and Munroe are two seniors who have played a lot of varsity games," said Bryan.

• Munroe and the hitting.

North Quincy Baseball Bows To Middleboro

By BILL GRIFFIN

There is potential in a talented sophomore class. The challenge will be developing the young talent in one of the toughest baseball leagues in the state.

Defending Division 3 State Champion Middleboro defeated North Quincy, 15-1 in a Patriot League contest Monday afternoon at Adams Field, but first-year coach Matt Edgerly saw promise in his young players which will hopefully grow as the season progresses.

"I think the biggest bright spot I've seen in the first two games is the potential of our sophomore class. There is a lot of talent coming up through the program at North Quincy," said Edgerly whose team dropped its opener to a strong Silver Lake team last week.

The league is always a hard road in baseball. Hingham (Division 2) and Middleboro won state titles last spring. Duxbury, Silver Lake, and Quincy are strong clubs with excellent chances of making the tourney. It is not a league a coach would choose to develop a young team, but it is where Edgerly and his team will face their test.

"It's a tough league, no question. But it's the hand we've been dealt and we'll play it," said Edgerly. "If we stay invested and show up ready to play hard every game, we'll improve. It is 100 percent on me to keep up the enthusiasm. I think we have the players who will improve and get better as the season goes on."

One of North's gifted sophomores, shortstop Matt McDonald, had an excellent game against Middleboro. McDonald stung a single, a double and scored a run. He handled three ground-ball chances cleanly in the sixth, including a hot smash which exploded at his feet. In the fourth, he ranged into short left to grab a popup with a runner in scoring position.

"Matt has the potential to be an All Star in the league," said Edgerly. "He played well today, but like the rest of our young players, he needs to keep getting more consistent with his play, especially on defense."

Sophomore righty Josh Helfrich showed a fine fastball over three good innings of work. He used a good curve for a pair of called-third strikeouts and was effective before tiring in the fourth.

"I thought for three innings, he pitched a strong game against an excellent team," said Edgerly. "His control was good. He showed a good curve and change to go with his fastball. He's a sophomore learning on this level, but I liked what I saw."

Junior Joe Dwyer pitched in relief and had a solid single for North. He threw a good fastball and kept his poise pitching through a difficult fifth inning.

"We didn't make the plays behind him, but he kept his head and kept making good pitches," said Edgerly.

One of North's four seniors, Andrew Currie, made the defensive play of the game in the first inning. With a runner on second, he ranged deep in center and made a running, over-the-shoulder grab of a long drive to save a run.

"Andrew is an excellent outfielder and we'll count on his leadership throughout the season," said Edgerly.

North scored its run in the fourth. McDonald led off with a single. He took second on a wild pitch, moved to third on a Helfrich ground ball, and scored on a sacrifice fly by Sean Egan

Obviously, the most important area to develop is pitching. Helfrich, Dwyer, sophomore Matt Monahan, and junior Joe Cochrane have ability. Edgerly feels he has just the right man to develop their talents in pitching coach Steve Sullivan who pitched for Quincy High and Westfield State.

"I honestly think Steve is one of the best pitching cachs in the state," said Edgerly. "If the pitchers stay invested in his program, they will develop. There's no question in my mind. Steve's put in programs to improve velocity and endurance which are just great. He will be a big help to the kids."

Sophomore Nick Kelly had an RBI in the 16-2 loss to Silver Lake. Currie scored a run for the Red Raiders.

North is at Silver Lake Wednesday and at Hanover Friday. Both games start at 4 p.m.

SHORTSTOP MATT MCDONALD cleanly fielded all three ground balls in the 6th inning against Middleboro. Here Matt fields the second out of the inning.

New Prime-Time Tennis Reservation Platform

The City of Quincy Park and Recreation Departments announce a partnership with reserveagame.com, a first of its kind platform that allows tennis players to reserve courts during peak use hours.

"After extensive research we found that tennis players across the South Shore share a common concern – arriving at a court and being forced to wait upwards of an hour to play", said Chris Barlow, co-founder of Reserve a Game. ""Our platform seeks to solve that problem and create a better experience for the tennis playing community."

The pilot program will be in effect at three locations: Russell Park at Quincy High School, Fenno Street and Bishop playground at Montclair School. Courts 1 and 2 at Russell Park and Bishop, as well as court 1 at Fenno Street, will be available for prime-time hourly reservations for a fee of $10 per court. The agreement with Reserve a Game requires the company to share revenues with the City; all revenues generated will go back to the maintenance of the courts.

"We are excited to offer this option to tennis players in Quincy," said Christopher Cassani, Executive Director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments. "Tennis players, myself included, always have their fingers crossed when they get to the court no one will be there. We take the guessing game out of the equation with Reserve a Game, and we put money back into the courts – it's a win-win situation."

A major advantage of the platform is that it allows players to see when courts are not available due to varsity tennis matches or youth clinics. Currently there is no mechanism in place to alert the public that a varsity tennis match, or youth clinic, will be held. It also creates a community of users, enabling players to meet other players and play more tennis.

"We feel very strongly that this is a worthwhile endeavor for us to pursue,' Cassani said. "Tennis is re-emerging in popularity, and we're excited to give tennis players in Quincy this opportunity."

Reserveagame.com will go live on April 14th. Signs will be posted at each court indicating the courts available for reservation. All credit card information will be stored securely.

NQ Girls Lacrosse Sees Bright Spots In Hingham Loss

By BILL GRIFFIN

North Quincy girls lacrosse coach Meg Therrien sets a goal for her team in each match. Against powerful Hingham, Therrien wanted to see improved play in transition by moving the ball quickly up the center of the field with rushes and passes to create scoring chances.

Hingham defeated North, 21-2 in a Patriot League match last week at Veterans Stadium behind four goals apiece from Makenzie Manning and Ali Burns, but Therrien did see quality work with good speed and ball movement which should lead to increased offense as the season progresses.

"I liked what we did in transition," said Therrien. "I thought we passed well and moved well from offense at defense. The connection was good through the middle of the field. We were just missing in the scoring area, but I think we'll improve on that as we gain experience. Hingham is a very strong team."

Much of the good work in transition came from sophomore Marissa McGue who had five shots on net and scored her sixth goal in three matches. She used her exceptional speed, handled well in traffic and both gave and received passes cleanly to set up a fistful of chances. She had two free shots which Hingham goalie Abbie Lee stopped and several point-blank chances,. She easily could have scored four goals.

"The shots were there. They were good shots, but the Hingham goalie was excellent," said Therrien. "They are the shots that we want Marissa to take. Her speed opens up a lot of things for us and we want to capitalize on our chances."

Senior captain Molly Brown advanced the play well for the Red Raiders. She has excellent vision and a feel for the game. Not only did she rush well through the middle, she caught teammates in full stride with accurate passes.

"She is a very smart player," said Therrien. "Molly is good at changing speeds. She knows when to hit an opening quickly and when to hold the ball and let the play develop. She also makes good decisions on when to shoot and when to pass."

North's best all-around player was junior Molly Minton. She did a good job winning faceoffs and feeding McGue with room to roam. She also played hard from start to finish and gave the Red Raiders a good two-way presence both at center and on the wing.

"She was my best player today," said Therrien. "She plays hard right to the final whistle, no matter what the score is. That's something that means a lot. No matter the opponent or the score, I can always count on her."

Sophomore Sarah Tsan scored North's first goal in the opening half. Charlotte Chretian, who set up several good scoring bids, had a run along the left wing deep into Hingham territory. Brown, Tsan, and Savannah Flynn moved the ball well in front of the Hingham net. Their passing forced a foul and a free kick. Tsan connected on a low, hard drive.

"Sarah has a hard shot and she's been working on her accuracy as well," said Therrien.

McGue scored in the second half. Chretian set up the play with a perfect, looping pass which sent away McGue clearly along the left wing. McGue outran the defense, cut to the middle, and fired a drive into the top corner for the goal.

"Charlotte really made that play. She's been doing a good job creating offense for us along the wing," said Therrien.

Hingham led 15-1 at the half. North's defense, led by Agnes Setow, Evlyn Scuzzarella, Kiera Clifford, and Katie Burke, improved in the second half in front of goalie Marguerite Belcher who stopped two free shots and five point-blank chances.

"I thought our footwork on defense improved in the second half. We moved better," said Therriern.

Earlier in the season North (0-3) dropped a 13-4 decision to Plymouth South and a 15-10 verdict to Silver Lake.

McGue had two against Plymouth while Clifford and Aislinn Collins had one goal apiece,. Ciara Forde added an assist.

McGue had three against Silver Lake while Clifford and Burke added two apiece. Collins, Brown and Chretian added single goals.

"One area we want to improve on is offense and I saw that in our play in the first three matches," said Therrien.

North plays Quincy Wednesday at 5:00 at the stadium and hosts Scituate Thursday at 4 p.m.

Quincy Wins Opener

The senior right fielder, who could have a huge year, had four hits and two intentional walks in seven trips to the plate. About the only way to avoid allowing him a hit is to not pitch to him. He drove in four runs and scored two, showing impressive opposite-field power which was his hallmark as a junior and in legion last summer.

"We're looking for big things from Munroe this season. He's developed into an excellent hitter. He could have a big year and be the key guy for us," said Bryan.

He was not alone. The Presidents rapped out 16 hits, drew eight walks and left 17 runners on base. They easily could have scored 15. Davis had two hits, two runs scored and an RBI while Salvucci had two hits, drew two walks and drove in two runs. Tyler Beach had two hits and two runs scored while Padraig Geaney had a pair of doubles. Pugsley (two hits, an RBI), Carnavale (a hit, a run scored, an RBI) and Desmond (a hit and a runs scored) also contributed to the offense.

• Defense. Considering it was the opener, considering the conditions, considering the limited outdoor practice time due to the endless winter, it was a remarkably well-played game. Each side made just one error. Sorensen fielded his position flawlessly, picking a runner off first and cutting down a sacrifice try with a bullet to second. A perfect 9-3-2 relay from Munroe to Salvucci to Liam Fitzmaurice nailed a runner at the plate.

SECOND BASEMAN Mike Pugsley cleanly fields a ground ball in the fifth inning. In the 12th inning, Pugsley drove in the winning run in a thrilling 9-8 QHS victory over Boston Latin.

Davis made the play of the game with a running back-to-the-plate grab in center to save a run in the sixth. Pugsley sprawled behind second to keep a run from scoring in the fourth, and Carnavale made a fine stop on a short hop at third to end the Latin 9th.

"Playing good defense, making the fundamental play is always a key for us," said Bryan.

Quincy jumped to a 5-0 lead after two innings. Salvucci walked with the bases loaded in the first for a run. In the second Munroe socked a bases-loaded double for three RBI and scored on a Salvucci single.

Latin scored one in the third, five in the fourth and one in the sixth for a 7-5 lead before Quincy rallied to tie and force the closing drama.

The could be the first chapter in an excellent story for Quincy. Bryan has built with youth for two years. The Presidents return seven starters from last year's 7-13 club. Greg Paulo, who had six strikeouts and threw well for three innings against Latin, and Sorensen lead a what should be a deep, quality pitching staff.

Remember well that the Patriot League, which currently boasts two state champions in Hingham and Middleboro, is a brutal baseball test. However, Quincy is a well-balanced club --pitching, defense, hitting, and speed – which could enjoy at a successful spring.

"The goal is the tournament," said Bryan. "Hingham, Middleboro, Duxbury and Silver Lake are all strong. It's a tough league, but I think with the experience we've gained, the tournament is a realistic goal for us."

ute of the first half with a shot from 30 yards in front of Clapp.

Despite the lopsided defeat, Quincy did get its fair share of momentum in the second half and Bowes wants to build on it moving forward.

"They showed character and they showed grit," said Bowes. "That's something I can be proud of."There's a lot of things we have to fix. We'll watch the film to see the Xs and Os stuff. What it really comes down to though is them coming out like they did in the third quarter. Now they know what it feels like to be successful against a good team.

"They won one quarter and to string four of them together is quite a hurdle. We have a lot to do, but a lot of good can come out of it. Guys are stepping into certain roles, but the biggest thing for me is that guys don't know the game as well as some other teams. As we have guys settle into certain roles I can bring guys up. I think we have enough guys that are good players. We'll be fine."

QHS Baseball Defeats W-H, 6-2

Padraig Geaney went 2-3 and drove in three runs, and Tyler Beach chipped in with three hits to lead Quincy baseball to its second straight win of the young season with a 6-2 Patriot League decision over Whitman- Hanson Monday afternoon.

Sophomore lefty Cody Desmond went the first 3 2/3 innings to get the win. Junior righty Greg Paulo escaped a jam in the fourth with a strikeout with runners on second and third. Paulo finished up the game on the mound for the Presidents.

Quincy is 2-0 overall, 1-0 in the league and hosts defending Division 2 State Champion Hingham Friday at 4 p.m.

ARTHRITIS OF THE SPINE

Common wear-and-tear osteoarthritis experienced by many middle-aged and older adults is characterized by worn cartilage that normally cushions the ends of the bones in a joint. In the case of the spine, the cartilage breakdown can occur in the joints of the spine called "facet joints." As these facet joints rub together, wear-and-tear changes can cause any remaining cartilage to become inflamed and painful. These osteoarthritic changes in the vertebrae, along with a narrowing of the spinal canal, sometimes cause decreased space for the spinal cord or compression of the nerve roots that extend from the canal. When a nerve root is irritated, pain extending into the buttocks or down the leg may be experienced when walking or standing.

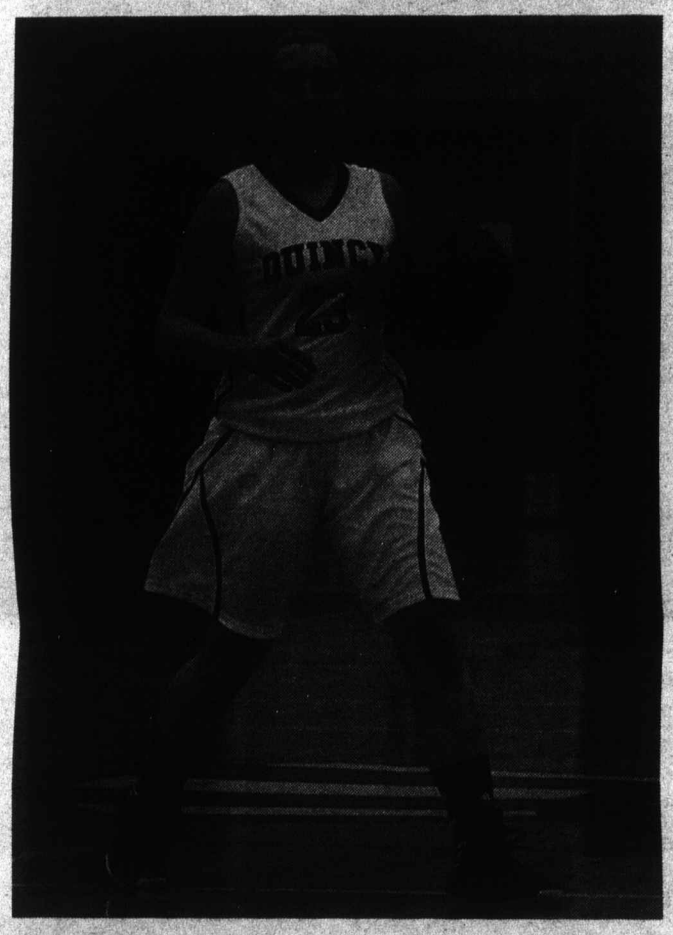

Have your conservative treatment methods failed to bring you pain relief? Are you frustrated that you cannot live a normal, active lifestyle because of the restrictions neck or back pain places on you? At FAMILY PRACTICE OF CHIROPRACTIC, we are uniquely qualified to restore the health of your spine. Along with spinal adjustments and related care, we emphasize healthy everyday living. Chiropractic works! Call us at 617.472.4220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 112 McGrath Hwy., Quincy. We offer computerized spinal scans. With chiropractic care you have nothing to lose and everything to gain, especially your health! If your problem is a chiropractic condition we offer you exceptional service.

P.S. Without chiropractic treatment to realign arthritic facet joints, bone spurs may form on the facet joints, which is a response to joint instability and nature's attempt to help return that stability.

North Quincy Hockey Hall Of Fame Welcomes Third Class

The North Quincy Hockey Hall of Fame welcomed its third class at a ceremony March 7 attended by more than 200 family, friends and inductees at the Neighborhood Club of Quincy.

Master of ceremonies Jim Fatseas acknowledged the committee and former coaches and outlined the nomination process. An historical background of the North Quincy High hockey program was detailed by Fatseas.

Present head hockey coach Matt Gibbons gave a summary of their successful, League championship tournament-qualifying season. Gibbons then introduced his four captains.

The first induction was handled by Tom Benson Jr. and Paul Noonan. The award, as a Friend of North Quincy Hockey was given to Tom Benson, Sr. for his contributions not only to the student-athletes of North Quincy High, but to those across the entire city.

Hall of Famer Bob "Soupy" Campbell introduced the 1960's inductees. The new members from this era are Charlie Anderson 1960 and Charlie Chambers 1962.

Committee member Al Grazioso brought in the new group from the 1970's and spoke a few words about each one. Pat McCormack 1970, Steve Leofanti 1972 and Steve Cronin who accepted on behalf of his late brother Neil Cronin from 1971.

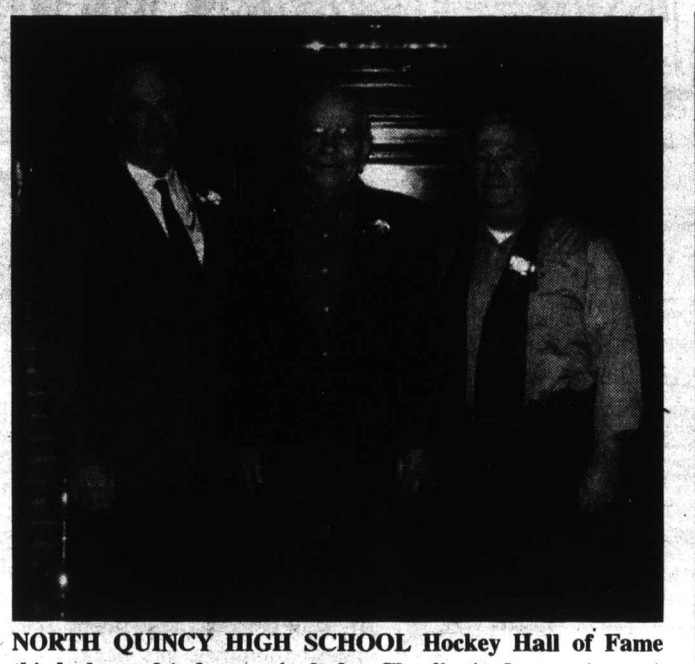

Former Head Coach Kevin Jago introduced his former players from the 1980's. They are Bob Tierney 1980, David Tapper 1986 and Paul McGrath 1989. Each player said a few words about their hockey experience at North. Tapper revisited the excitement of being a part of the first team to qualify for the State Tournament in over 30 years.

Tom Benson, Jr. and Paul Noonan, who coached some of the most successful teams at North, had charge for the 1990's and 2000's. Former Head Coach Bob Doyle who had continued the Tournament success and a Committee member was unable to attend due to illness. These players from the 1990's and 2000's are: Sean Connelly 1993, Dennis Pateras 1994, Chad Fitzpatrick 1999, Ross O'Driscoll 2000 and Matt Holt 2001. O'Driscoll flew in from Ireland, where he now resides, to receive his induction. He was very eloquent in his acceptance remarks about teammates and lifetime friendships from his high school hockey days. Each new member of the HOF that took the opportunity to speak, thanked the people who helped them become great hockey players as well as solid citizens.

The Committee congratulates the new inductees and encourage anyone who feels a player is worthy of being a Hall of Fame member to nominate them via email. The email addresses are Kevin Jago at kevinj.bos@transgroup.com, Sandy Verhault @ sjv122@yahoo.com and Bob Doyle at rdoyle521@gmail.com. Please submit nominations as soon as possible.

The Committee will be meeting in June to formulate the 4th class. In that nomination, include any appropriate statistics, awards, and accomplishments. Most importantly include the year of graduation.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) You're doing better on the flexibility issue, but you still need to loosen up a bit to show you can be less judgmental and more understanding about certain sensitive matters.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your personal aspect continues to dominate this week. But try to make time to deal with important career-linked matters as well. A change of plans might occur by the weekend.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Excuses are not really needed for much of the confusion occurring this week. However, explanations from all parties could help in working things out to everyone's satisfaction.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) That surprising (but pleasant) recent turn of events continues to develop positive aspects. But be prepared for a bit of a jolt on another issue that needs attention.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) Creating a fuss might bring you that attention you want. But are you prepared for all the explaining you'd have to do? Better to use more subtle ways to make your bid.
VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) With education continuing to be a strong factor this week, this could be the time to start learning some new skills that can later be applied to a bid for a potential career move.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You might do well to reconsider some of your current time priorities before you get so deeply involved in one project that you neglect meeting a deadline on another.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) With an important decision looming, you need to be careful about the information you're getting. Half-truths are essentially useless. Get the full story before you act.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Find out what everyone's role is expected to be before accepting that workplace proposal. Getting all the facts now could prevent serious problems later on.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A flexible position on a workplace matter could be the best course to follow during the next several days. A personal issue also benefits from an open-minded approach.
AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Involving too many people in your workplace problem can backfire. Remember: Allegiances can shift. Ask trusted colleagues for advice, but don't ask them to take sides.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Before submitting your suggestions, take more time to sharpen the points you want to make. The clearer the presentation, the more chance it has to get through when submitted.
BORN THIS WEEK: Your clear sense of who you are gives you confidence when you need to tackle difficult situations.

Interfaith Social Services 40th Annual Walk April 26

Interfaith Social Services' 40th Annual South Shore Walk/Run will take place, rain or shine, on Saturday April 26th at The Kennedy Center on East Squantum Street in North Quincy.

All Walkers and Runners must pre-register at: southshorewalkrun2014.eventbrite.com.

The Walk has become an annual tradition for many families on the South Shore. For the past 40 years Interfaith has hosted the fundraiser to benefit thousands of South Shore families in need of food, counseling and emergency assistance. This year they have added a professionally timed 5K run to the festivities which already include: food, music, raffles, kids' games, a photo booth and face painting.

The Walk has grown substantially over the past four decades. Originally called Protestant Social Service Bureau (PSSB), Interfaith was founded in 1947 by Quincy's religious leaders. The organization's mission focused on mental health counseling and serving at-risk children. In 1975 the agency branched out and established programs to alleviate the significant challenges that their clients faced. That year they opened the Pantry Shelf food program, which has grown to become one of the largest emergency food pantries in Greater Boston today; serving over 18,000 South Shore residents every year.

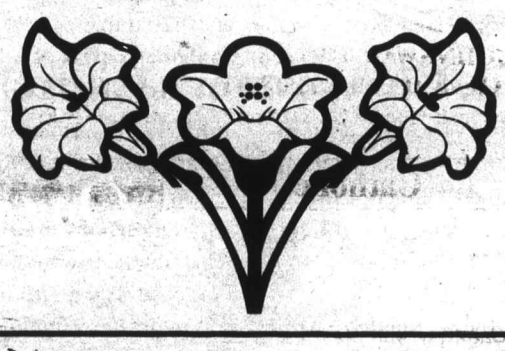

When The Pantry Shelf opened in 1975 local churches offered to host an annual fundraising Walkathon to support the fledgling food pantry. Each year a different church hosted the event. This caused The Walk's route to transition between various communities including: Quincy, Weymouth, Braintree and Hingham. In the 1990's PSSB changed their name to Interfaith Social Services to reflect that the organization was not affiliated with a religion and that its focus was on providing emergency assistance to those in need. In that same time period the Walk found its permanent home in Quincy. For almost two decades the event has been held in Quincy's Wollaston Beach, Squantum and Marina Bay neighborhoods.

What started as a ten mile route is now only three miles. "This change was made a few years ago to make the Walk more accessible to families with children," said Interfaith's executive director Rick Doane. "This is a very family oriented event with activities like kids games and bouncy houses. Those parents who had to push a stroller for ten miles welcomed the change to a three mile route."

"For one day every year our walkers fill up the sidewalks in Quincy," said Doane. "That visual of hundreds of people doing something together is what brings awareness. The walkers and runners who participate help people remember that hunger and suffering exist in our community and they can do something about it. Not everyone is able to volunteer in a food pantry but anyone can participate in this event."

"We know that thousands of people, across various generations, have participated in this event over the past forty years. We hope that many of those previous participants will come out this year to make it our must successful Walk ever." All of the proceeds from The Walk make it possible for Interfaith Social Services to assist thousands of disadvantaged local families every year with programs focused on hunger, mental health and emergency assistance.

In addition to raising the public's awareness Interfaith also likes to bring a level of fun to this fundraiser with food, music, raffles, kids' games, a photo booth, face painting and more. Starson Hingham Harbor, the Atria at Marina Bay and Ocean Spray are this year's featured lunch sponsors; and for the fourth year in a row New England Ice Cream Corporation is donating frozen treats to all participants.

OBITUARIES

Carolann Sapienza

CAROLANN SAPIENZA

A funeral Mass for Carolann (Dumont) Sapienza of Quincy and formerly Columbia Point Dorchester was celebrated April 5 at St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mrs. Sapienza died April 1 surrounded by her loving family.

Her family meant the world to her, especially her cherished grandchildren. She was always present for her family whether at family celebrations or the grandchildren's numerous activities. Mrs. Sapienza was always available for support and encouragement.

She and her husband James enjoyed frequent trips to Las Vegas, where she played games of roulette and bingo. Generous by nature, she supported many of her favorite charities in order to make other people's lives better. She took pleasure in her work as a certified nursing assistant because it allowed her to care for people who really needed her.

Mrs. Sapienza could be silly and enjoyed making people laugh. For those just getting to know her, once she warmed up to a person, you gained a true friend for life.

Beloved wife of James R. Sapienza of Quincy. Loving mother of Nicole Sapienza with Mark Carey of Quincy, and James Sapienza and his wife Susie of Saugus. Nana to Brittany, Mia, Chase, Luca and Nico. Daughter-in-law of Mary L. Sapienza of Dorchester. Also survived by several sisters, brothers, nieces, and nephews.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Interment was at Cedar Grove Cemetery, Dorchester.

Memorial donations may be made to Families of Spinal Muscular Atrophy, 925 Busse Rd., Elk Grove Village, IL 60007.

Timothy Sheehan, 46

TIMOTHY SHEEHAN

A funeral Mass for Timothy "Tadgh" Sheehan, 46, of Quincy was celebrated April 5 at St. Ann's Church, Quincy.

Mr. Sheehan died suddenly March 31.

Born in Cork, Ireland, he came to the United States and began working as a painter but remained proud of his Irish heritage. His great passion in life was the ocean. As such his hobbies included fishing, swimming and boating; he even held a license for lobstering.

Mr. Sheehan also loved to travel and had visited 44 states. Whether traveling or near the ocean, he loved socializing with friends and family, who will remember his great sense of humor and contagious laugh. Devoted to his nieces and nephews, he will be sadly missed by all those who knew him.

Beloved son of Daniel Sheehan of Ireland and the late Helena (O'Keeffe) Sheehan. Dear brother of Siobhan and Michael Regan, of Ireland, Peter Sheehan and his wife Brenda of Foxborough, Claire and Helen Sheehan, both of Ireland, Fionnuala and John Roche, as well as Gene Fitzpatrick and the late Margaret Fitzpatrick. Cherished uncle of Graham, Avril, Daniel, Emily, Owen, Peter, Helena, Ashlyn, Olivia, Domenic, Elliot, Rebecca, and the late Emmett. He leaves behind great-niece Sophie and great-nephew Emmett. He is also survived by many aunts, uncles, cousins and friends.

Funeral arrangements were made by Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Memorial donations may be made to the Wounded Warrior Project, P.O. Box 758517, Topeka, KS 66675.

Francis J. Lynch, 92

FRANCIS J. LYNCH

A funeral Mass for Francis J. "Pop" Lynch, 92, of South Boston was celebrated April 5 at Gate of Heaven Church, South Boston.

Mr. Lynch died peacefully April 1, surrounded by his family.

He was a proud 60-year member of Ironworkers Local #7 where he worked on some of Boston's most notable buildings, including the Prudential Center and the John Hancock Tower. He was a U.S. Army veteran who served in the European, African and Middle East Theater during WWII.

Mr. Lynch was a member of the Old Dorchester Post, the Castle Island Association, the South Boston Bowling League, and an honorary member of the "Pugs." The highlight of his week was always Sunday dinner with his family. Mr. Lynch will be sorely missed but more joyfully remembered. He had a wonderful life.

Beloved husband and best friend of 68 years of Anne M. (Havlin) Lynch. Loving father of Jeanne "Lynda" Lynch and her husband Larry Quigley, Karen O'Leary and her husband Joseph, Congressman Stephen Lynch and his wife Margaret, Shelia Lynch and her friend Kevin Ronan, Nancy Conroy and her husband Kevin, and Donna Bohan and her husband Michael. Cherished grandfather of Krysten Wallace, Nichole Mikshenas, Casey O'Leary, Mark O'Leary, Thomas Bohan, and Victoria Lynch, all of South Boston. Son of the late Cornelius Michael Lynch and Elizabeth (Blout) Lynch. Dear brother of Mary Maddox and the late Eleanor Sherry, Timothy Lynch, Cornelius Lynch, John Lynch, Phillip Lynch, and William Lynch. Also survived by many loving nieces and nephews.

Funeral arrangements were made by O'Brien Funeral Home, South Boston.

Interment was at St. Joseph Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Memorial donations may be made to the Mass. Fallen Heroes Memorial, 100 Hallet St., Boston, MA 02124.

The beloved son of Giuseppe and Anna (Fucetola) Santangelo, he was born in Philadelphia on Nov. 22, 1917. Raised and educated in Boston Schools, he graduated from East Boston High School, Class of 1935.

He worked for many years as an inside salesman for Thompson Electric and worked into his 80s at Union Gear and Sprocket of Quincy. Mr. Santangelo was an avid Boston sports fan.

Beloved husband of the late Madeline (Simonelli) Leofanti. Stepfather of Gary Leofanti, Christine (Leofanti) Spitz, and Stephen Leofanti. Also survived by his sister Florence Gardner, he was the brother of many late siblings including, Donald, Michael and his wife Winifred, Charles and his wife Ida, Ralph and his living wife Nancy, Henry and wife Jackie, sister Santa and husband Edward, and Lucy and her husband Charles. Cherished grandfather of Jason, Sandra, Eric, Gregory, Tonia, and the late Angela. Great-grandfather of 11.

Walter F. Finn, 84

WALTER F. FINN

A funeral Mass for Walter F. Finn, 84, of Norwell and formerly Dorchester and Quincy was celebrated April 4 at St. Helen's Church, Norwell.

Mr. Finn died unexpectedly March 30.

Born in Boston, he was a 1947 graduate of Roxbury Memorial High School. He worked as a route driver for the Boston Globe for 30 years before retiring in 1999. Mr. Finn bowled professionally in candlepin leagues and tournaments for many years, and was the Candlepin Bowling World Champion in 1961.

An avid Boston sports fan, Mr. Finn also enjoyed playing cards, greyhound racing, and most importantly, spending time with his family.

Devoted husband of Joan P. (Egan) Finn. Beloved father of James and his wife Gail of North Andover, Joanne Foley and her husband Bob of NH, Michael and his wife Patti of Norfolk, and Daniel and his wife Deborah of Wollaston. Loving grandfather of Katelyn Setzler and her husband Dean, Andrew Foley and his wife Lindsay, and Brian, Megan, Kevin, Emily, Michaela, Kasey, and Christopher Finn. Great-grandfather of Emma, Brianna, and Aiden Setzler and Rowan Foley. Also survived by several nieces and nephews. He was predeceased by his brothers, Robert Finn of CO and Edward Finn of Avon.

Funeral arrangements were made by Sullivan Funeral Home, Hanover.

Interment was at Washington Street Cemetery, Norwell.

32nd Annual Senior Olympics Applications Available

Faxon Field Track will host the 32nd Annual Quincy Senior Olympics at the place it all began. Applications are now available for the event the senior games which have become the premier athletic activity for men and women age 55 and over will begin on Mon., May 12th and continue until Thurs., May 22nd.

The Olympics sponsored by the City of Quincy Office of the Mayor and administered by the Recreation Department and Department of Elder Services will again have Quincy Medical Center, a Steward Family Hospital, as the primary sponsor.

According to Barry J. Welch, Director of Recreation, the sponsorship of Steward is a natural fit for our games. The goal of our games is to promote active and healthy lifestyles for our senior community. QMC, through Steward Health Care, shares our goals. We thank them for their commitment and welcome their involvement in our games.

A new event has been added with the completion of the new track. There will be men's and women's discus throw in all age groups. And although not a competive event this year, the games will host representatives of the National Pickle-Ball Association for a hands-on demonstration of the fastest growing senior sport, Pickle-Ball.

Applications are now available at the office of Mayor Thomas P. Koch, The Kennedy Center, and the Recreation Department at One Merrymount Parkway.

Applications will be mailed on request by calling 617-376-1394 or 617-376-1244. Participants do not need to live in Quincy. The Olympic events schedule can also be found on www.QuincyRec.com. All events are conducted at sites in Quincy and are also supported by the River Bay Club. The events include: one mile walk, opening ceremony, celebrity exhibition volleyball game, bowling, swimming, darts, billiards, bocce, three mile walk, horseshoe pitching, basketball free throw, sportsmanship luncheon , track and field events, one mile run, half mile walk, rotation events, softball throw, standing long jump, javelin throw, shot put, discus throw, golf putting competition, golf tournament, and an awards night.

Quincy Prayer Breakfast May 1

Breakfast will be served at 7 a.m. followed by a program from 7:30 to 8:30 a.m.

The Quincy Prayer Breakfast brings together representatives from local houses of worship, government officials, business, civic and religious leaders.

Tickets are $35 each and $250 for a table of 10.

Proceeds from the breakfast will benefit three local organizations: Interfaith Social Services, The Esther R. Sanger Center for Compassion – Quincy Crisis Center, and The Quincy Salvation Army.

For ticket information, call 617-847-6967.

Tickets can also be ordered by mailing a check to Sanger Center/Quincy Crisis Center, Attn: Quincy Prayer Breakfast, P.O. Box 31, Quincy, MA 02170.

Quincy Parks Conservancy Easter Egg Hunt Saturday at Pageant Field

The Quincy Parks Conservancy will host a free, family event at Pageant Field this Saturday from 9 a.m. to 12 noon that will include an Easter egg hunt, egg decorating, bouncy houses, a visit from the Easter Bunny as well as light refreshments catered by the QHS Culinary Arts Program. The egg hunt begins at 10 a.m. and is geared for children 10 and under. Families are encouraged to bring cameras to take photos with the Easter Bunny. In the event of inclement weather, select activities will move indoors to the QHS gymnasium. For more event information, contact info@quincyparkconservancy.org

The winning entries from the poster contest for the event appear on the back page of this edition of The Quincy Sun. One winner was chosen from each high school and received a $100 prize. The winners were Kamila Klinecewicz of NQHS and Julie Nguyen of QHS. The Conservancy wishes to thank art teachers Aileen McGinnity (QHS) and Michael Hanson (NQHS) for their guidance and support. All of the entries were first-class and a testament to their commitment to excellence in the classroom.

The Quincy Parks Conservancy is a not-for-profit organization whose mission is to protect and promote parkland, beaches, parkways, and other open space areas within the City for the use and enjoyment of Quincy residents, visitors, and tourists. Visit www.quincyparkconservancy.org

April 17, 2014
10 a.m.-12 p.m. -
Media Room- Kennedy Center: Cost $5.00

Digital Photography:

Introduction to Digital Photography explains how to work a camera, what is a memory card, batteries and all simple basics of digital photography. We will learn how to take a picture, print on a printer with a card reader and how to get your pictures developed or printed. We will also talk about capturing size and settings for your digital camera.

Bring your digital camera to class making sure it is charged.

April 24, 2014 -
10 a.m.-12 p.m. -
Media Room- Kennedy Center: Cost $5.00

Digital Photography with your computer:

This class will review the digital photography class and teach how to upload pictures to your computer. It will demonstrate what to do with the pictures. Emphasis is on printing, saving, photo book, collage making and minor modifications to your photo. (Resizing, reshaping, turning to black/white photography).

You should have a laptop computer and bring it to class with you. We will check your computer and see if you have any software for photo modification. Normally some photo editing software would have come with your digital camera. If you have a disk and did not load it into your computer, bring the disk with you. Those without a laptop are welcome to come to class for the instructional part of the class.

If you have a laptop computer, feel free to bring it to class. We will set you up on the internet if you have a wireless connector so you can follow along during class. You may also just come and watch. There are limited computers at the center which you can use on a first come, first serve basis.

PERSONAL

To unsung heroes of State Legislature, who do what is right, please pass Equal Access Bill. With gratitude, Marcia Garber 4/10

Holy Spirit, you solve all problems, light all roads, so that I can attain my goal. You who give the divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me and that in all instances of my life you are with me. I want in this short prayer to thank you for all things, confirming once again that I never meant to be separated from you even in spite of all material illusions. I wish to be with you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy toward me and mine. The person must say this prayer for three consecutive days. After 3 days the favor will be granted even if it is difficult. This prayer must be published after the favor is granted. N.L. 4/10

Koch Budget Calls For More Police, Teachers

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch's proposed budget for the upcoming fiscal year would allow for the hiring of additional police officers and teachers. The mayor is also ready to seek approval of raises for department heads, non-union appointees, and city councillors, but he doesn't know if he'll ask to boost the mayor's salary.

Koch outlined his plan for the budget during a recent, wide-ranging interview with The Sun. The mayor also touched on a number of other topics, including his priorities for Quincy Center redevelopment; the Adams Green project; a new green space at the Kennedy Center; and his handling of FEMA's new flood maps.

The mayor is working out his proposed budget for FY15 (July 1, 2014, to June 30, 2015), meeting with department heads to review each department's budget obligations and wish lists. From there, Koch will work with his financial team to iron out the proposal, which he will present to the City Council on May 5. Koch said his budget proposal would be crafted to minimize the impact on the city's taxpayers.

"The goal is to keep us [with] a practical and reasonable budget so we're not going up crazy on the taxes," the mayor said.

Koch also noted that he would continue to emphasize public safety and schools. To that end, his proposal will include money to bring on new police officers and teachers.

"There will be additional police and I'm sure there are going to be additional teachers," Koch said.

The proposal will also have increased money in the Fire Department's overtime line.

"Traditionally the Fire Department overtime line has been underfunded and then we try to make it up over the year," Koch said. "But we're going to try to get as close to the real number as we can."

The mayor also plans to ask the council to approve new raises for department heads, non-union staffers, and councillors, though he does not know if he will submit the request through the budget proposal itself or through separate measures introduced concurrently with the budget. The raises were recommended by a special panel tasked with reviewing city salaries.

"They work very hard, the department heads and managers. They're not on the clock. They're not getting overtime. They're in many cases [working] 24-7. So they deserve it and we're going to certainly institute that," Koch said. "And I

Medicine Disposal Day April 26

In conjunction with the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA), Impact Quincy and the Quincy Police Department will host a free medicine disposal day in the parking lot next to Quincy Police headquarters on Saturday, April 26 between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Studies show that youth can begin a lifetime of drug addiction by simply opening the home medicine cabinet. Plus, proper disposal of substances are vital to protect the water supply and the environment.

All residents are invited to bring unused or expired prescription and/or over-the-counter medications to the disposal event. The process is anonymous; you can blacken out your name or put everything into a plastic bag. Community members simply drive up to the event and give their substances to a police officer.

Needles (sharps) and aerosols cannot be disposed of at this event. However, Manet Community Health Center sponsors a sharps disposal kiosk at their 110 West Squantum St. location during regular business hours. In addition, the Quincy Police Department hosts a permanent drug disposal kiosk, available free, 24/7 for anonymous drop-off.

Adams Green Meeting Tonight

The Quincy Planning Department and state Department of Transportation (MassDOT) will provide an update on the Adams Green road and sidewalk improvement project during a public meeting tonight (Thursday) at 7 p.m. inside the City Council chambers on the second floor of the City Hall annex.

The Adams Green project will result in the creation of a new park between City Hall and the United First Parish Church (the Church of the Presidents), which requires closing the stretch of Hancock Street between those two buildings.

Before the park itself is built, road and sidewalk construction related to the project will take place along a corridor running south along Hancock Street from its intersection with Dimmock Street to the Granite Trust Building and from the intersection of Granite Street and Burgin Parkway east to Coddington Street in front of Bethany Congregational Church. Maple Street, the portion of Chestnut Street closest to the Granite Trust Building, and part of Washington Street near the U.S. Post Office building are also in the project zone.

The road and sidewalk work will begin this spring, possibly as early as the end of this month or the beginning of May. Construction will be done in phases to minimize the impact on area businesses and is scheduled to conclude in October 2015.

Koch: Ross Parking Area 'Development Priority'

have no problem putting the councillors in either."

Koch said he would generally follow the recommendations issued by the panel in its report, which was released last November. The panel reviewed salaries of 57 department heads and other non-union workers, recommending raises for 56 of them.

The salary commission's proposal called for each councillor to receive an annual salary of $22,500. Each councillor currently earns $17,500, plus a travel allowance of about $5,000 each.

The panel's report also recommended a $160,000 salary for the mayor, up from $122,474. Koch said he hasn't yet decided if he will seek a raise for himself.

"It's awkward putting my own in, quite honestly. It's just awkward," he explained. "Whatever number I decide to put in, if I do, I will not lobby or talk to any individual councillors about it. I don't think that's appropriate. They frequently remind me that they're the fiscal watchdogs; they're the board of directors, so to speak, so I'm going to let them make that decision."

Quincy Center Redevelopment

Less than one month after severing ties with Street-Works, Koch identified the vicinity of the Ross Parking Garage as the city's top priority for downtown redevelopment. He believes the first private redevelopment, aside from Quincy Mutual's Merchants Row project, should take place at the Ross Garage because the structure needs to be torn down.

"Our priority is the Ross Parking Area, no question about it. We believe we'll be able to put that bit together rather quickly," Koch said. "There is tremendous interest – I met with another developer today. They're calling me; I'm not calling them.

"They recognize the road (Hannon Parkway) is done, the Town Brook has been moved, and the MEPA permitting is in place. That's huge for development and they know it's a huge opportunity."

Because multiple developers may each be responsible for portions of the downtown, the city plans to bring on a consultant to meld the projects together, working out issues such as who would be responsible for paying for parking and other infrastructure needed throughout Quincy Center.

"All of those things need to be figured out again," Koch said. "The plan and the vision will be very similar. The mix will be the same. There will be residential, retail, entertainment, restaurants, eventually office.

"The college (Quincy College) committed clearly to office space down there. As they grow it makes perfect sense for them but the office market right now is soft so that wouldn't be in the first piece."

The mayor also said any agreement with the new developers will be different from the now-terminated land disposition agreement with Street-Works. Going forward, for example, he doesn't expect the work to be undertaken by 100 percent union workers.

"The deal is going to be very different. Expectations were so high with Street-Works, and I'm guilty for part of that because we put a good deal together," the mayor said. "The reality is this project probably won't be 100 percent union."

Koch added that the city will likely not find a developer to pay the $30 million bond the city took out in 2007, prior to his time in office, to pay for land taking needed for the Hannon Parkway and other expenses. Street-Works agreed to pay that $30 million, which will now be paid for by revenue generated in the downtown district.

The mayor said going forward will act quickly and responsible to find new developers for Quincy Center.

"I think by the start of '15 we should have our house in order. We should have announcements on who the developers are, who is coming, and a schedule for construction," Koch said. "We're going to move as quickly as we can, being responsible at the same time and not being hasty and screwing things up."

Adams Green

Koch said Halvorson Design is finalizing plans for the Adams Green, a park that will connect City Hall and the United First Parish Church.

"I meet weekly with different staff members from Halvorson. We met with the sculptors. We have a meeting on materials – paving, walls, granite. We have a meeting on species of trees. We have a meeting on signage," Koch said. "There are so many pieces of it. Each category we're trying to finalize. Conceptually it's not going to change much from what is out there, but the devil is in the details."

Koch confirmed the new park will have a promenade running through it, which will allow emergency vehicles and limousines and hearses to drive up into the park. The promenade, which the mayor said would be smaller than the current road but bigger than a sidewalk, will be separated from Hancock Street by bollards. The bollards, or posts, can be lowered to allow vehicle access.

"We don't want that to happen every day, but there are going to be times when we need to do that," Koch said.

Before the park itself is built, related road and sidewalk work will take place along a stretch of Hancock Street from Dimmock to Granite Streets, as well as on other roads nearby. The roadwork is expected to start this spring and last until October 2015. Storeowners in the affected area have expressed concern that the project will choke off business. The mayor said those business owners now complaining about the project complained for decades about the city not doing enough to the downtown.

"The same people that are squawking now are the same people that have been squawking for 30 years that we should do something with the downtown. You can't have it both ways," Koch said.

"There is going to be disruption. The square will be open; it's not going to close down. We have plenty of signage and we'll work with people to make sure they can navigate the area safely and easily and get to the parking areas.

"There is no magic here. You can't just wave a wand and boom – we have Disney World here. This is the real world. We have real construction. It takes time. There is disruption. We're updating 150-year old infrastructure in the heart of our city. It's going to take some work.

"If a businessman has a good project they're going to find you. If you've got a good product at a good price they're going to find you."

An update on the road and sidewalk project is sched-

259 Gravestones Being Restored At Hancock Cemetery

By SCOTT JACKSON

A $113,000 project to restore 259 gravestones at the historic Hancock Cemetery is now underway.

The site, located next to the old City Hall building, was first used as a burial ground in the 1620s when English settlers first arrived in what is now Quincy. More than 1,000 are buried in the site, including the Rev. John Hancock (father of the signer of Declaration of Independence) and Josiah Quincy. Presidents John and John Quincy Adams and their wives, First Ladies Abigail and Louisa Catherine, were also buried in the cemetery before they were moved to the United First Parish Church (the Church of the Presidents).

The restoration project, which will take place this summer, will see 259 of the gravestones in the cemetery repaired. Officials marked the start of the project Tuesday at a City Hall ceremony.

"For the city of Quincy it's another great day," Mayor Thomas Koch said at the ceremony. "It's another page in the chapter in recent years of the city's recommitting to its historical sites, historical buildings, which are so, so important and vital to our history but also to our future."

The project is being funded by an allocation of $80,000 from Quincy's Community Preservation Committee and a $33,000 Massachusetts Historical Commission grant. Ward 1 Councillor Margaret Laforest said the city's adoption of the state's Community Preservation Act, which established the CPC, has proven beneficial.

"History is very integral to the identity of the City of Presidents. We are privileged to be home to the Adams National Historical Park, the Church of the Presidents, and many other cultural and historic organizations," Laforest said.

"As a city, having the Community Preservation Act allows us to support those organizations and to showcase the depth of our city's history at other sites like the Hancock Cemetery. This first period cemetery is notable for the prominent people buried there and the gravestone art to be shown."

Quincy's Planning Department helped secure the Mass. Historic grant that is partially funding the project.

"It's wonderful thing to be able to restore these historic places," Planning Director Dennis Harrington said. "It's amazing we have wonderful historic sites in the city of Quincy and it's wonderful we have a lot of interest in preserving them and enhancing them."

THE VERDANT GEMSTONE

Emerald (May's birthstone) possesses hues that vary from shamrock to spruce and clarity that ranges from nearly translucent to opaque. The most desirable Colombian emeralds are blue-green, while the best of their African counterparts display a yellow tinge. The brighter the gemstone and the more even its color, the higher its value. As for clarity, nature has imbued emeralds with "inclusions," which are trapped bodies of liquid, gas, or solids within the stone that provide important clues about its genuineness and country of origin. Because the gem grows naturally in a hexagonal crystal, it lends itself to an emerald cut, which is the faceted rectangular or square shape; however, rounded, curved, and even pear shapes are also possible.

A fine emerald must possess not only a pure verdant green hue, but also a high degree of transparency to be considered a top gem. Its lush green color reflects new spring growth, making it the perfect choice for May's birthstone. It's also the gemstone for twentieth and thirty-fifth wedding anniversaries. As a couple, select the perfect emeralds to fit your taste for rings, earrings, or pendants at 1402 Hancock Street, Quincy Center or contact us at 617-773-3636.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On April 30, 1888, a hailstorm devastates the farming town of Moradabad, India, killing 230 people and thousands of farm animals. Most of the victims died instantly when hail the size of oranges rained down from the sky, striking them.

• On April 28, 1897, the Chickasaw and Choctaw, two of the Five Civilized Tribes, become the first to agree to abolish tribal government and communal ownership of land. By 1902, the other three tribes -- the Cherokees, Seminoles and Creeks -- followed suit, finally throwing open all of Indian Territory to white settlement.

• On May 4, 1916, Germany responds to a demand by U.S. President Woodrow Wilson by agreeing to limit its submarine warfare. However, on Feb. 1, 1917, Germany announced the resumption of unrestricted submarine warfare, and the United States formally entered World War I.

• On May 2, 1933, although accounts of an aquatic beast living in Scotland's Loch Ness date back 1,500 years, the modern legend of the Loch Ness Monster is born when a sighting makes local news. The Inverness Courier newspaper related an account of a local couple who claimed to have seen "an enormous animal rolling and plunging on the surface."

• On May 1, 1941, months before its release, Orson Welles' landmark film "Citizen Kane" begins generating such controversy that Radio City Music Hall refuses to show it. "Citizen Kane," now revered as one of the greatest movies in history, made its debut at the smaller RKO Palace Theater and was a failure at the box office.

• On April 29, 1968, "Hair," the now-famous "tribal love-rock musical" that introduced the era-defining song "Aquarius," premieres on Broadway. "Hair" quickly became not just a smash-hit show, but a genuine cultural phenomenon.

• On May 3, 1980, 13-year-old Cari Lightner of Fair Oaks, Calif., is killed by a drunk driver while walking along a quiet road when the car swerves out of control and strikes her. Cari's tragic death compelled her mother, Candy Lightner, to found the organization Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD).

Wollaston School Marks 100 Years

By KRIS KALABOKAS

The Wollaston Elementary School held its 100th anniversary celebration Saturday by opening up its doors to past and current students and faculty.

All were invited to take a literal walk down memory lane by visiting classrooms, each one dedicated to a specific decade between 1910 and 2000. "We hope that as you walk our halls once again you will relive those memories and share your stories with us," said principal James Hennessy. "Wollaston School has been the foundation of our neighborhood…so often we think of our schools as just a building but it is so much more than that. It's a community and people."

Following a performance of "Happy Birthday" sung by the school's choir, Mayor Thomas Koch addressed the crowd. "The mission remains the same; to provide each child the opportunity to succeed in a loving and caring environment," he said.

According to Koch, in 1912 the building had 12 rooms and operated on a yearly budget of $172,000. The superintendent's salary was $2,760 a year. The school was closed between 1982 and 1987 but reopened due to neighborhood efforts.

Also in attendance were state Sen. John Keenan, City Councillor and alumnus Kevin Coughlin, and state Rep. Tacky Chan who said the school was the "heart and soul" of the neighborhood.

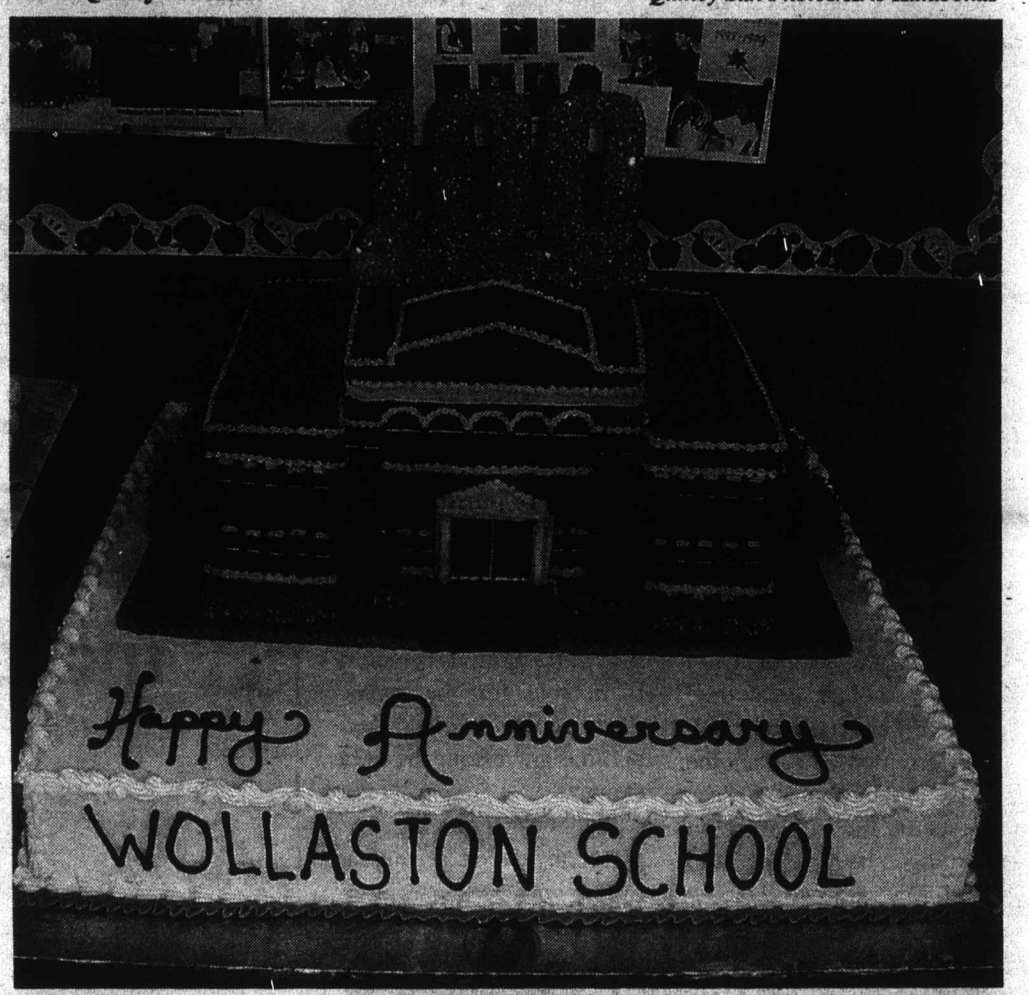

"I find it hard to believe that it was 40 years ago that I was sitting in the same place you are in Wollaston School," said Coughlin.

Diane Smith, a student at Wollaston Elementary between 1961 and 1967, said the celebration brought back fond memories of her childhood growing up in the area. "Just the neighborhood itself, the community itself, it's where I grew up. I lived in the neighborhood and spent many a day on the playgrounds," she said.

She recalled being taught how to dance and even ski in the school gymnasium. "Quincy Recreation used to do a program where you could learn to do things inside," she said.

ANNIVERSARY CAKE baked by Montilio's Baking Co. resembled the 100-year-old Wollaston School.

Teresa Rand, a fifth grade teacher at the school, said students put together their presentations in two weeks and that they "had a blast" doing their research. Each classroom had photo collages depicting a specific era while music characteristic of the decade played in the background. "[The students] read about it and put it in their own words," she said.

George Gardiner who was a student between 1945 and 1951 said he attended as did his three brothers. He even said he remembered all of his teachers, although the memories were fuzzy. "Actually I remember them all, vaguely though," he said while admiring black and white photos in a classroom dedicated to the decade of the 1930s.

Former assistant principal and drama program director Susan Engorn said she couldn't miss the event. "It was a big occasion. I thought it would be interesting to come and see the people and share the day." She pointed out that her handmade banners, which she made in the mid 80s, were still hanging in the school stairwell and laughed that it was a testament to their durability.

"It really was like a family back in the day but then again everything was different. People were more localized and you really got to know the families."

Hennessy said he was happy with the turnout and felt the event was the culmination of the effort of staff, students, and former educators. "I was very impressed. It was a great range of people from different generations and I thought it was great," he said.

One former student approached him anxious to see the assembly hall not knowing it had been converted to five separate classrooms to accommodate the growing neighborhood. "It was in the 50s when the population started to increase," he said.

Plans to host the event took shape roughly a year and a half ago when a Facebook page was created asking for former student and educator experiences. Hennessey said he received a flood of support and emails relaying past experiences.

Capping off the celebration was the cutting of a cake provided by Montilio's Baking Company made to look like the school and the unveiling of a new school sign provided by the Parks Department which proudly displays the year the school building was opened.

Historical Society Programs April 22, April 24

Quincy Historical Society will offer an afternoon and an evening program during Patriots' Day week.

On Tuesday, April 22 at 2 p.m. Wayne Miller will present an illustrated talk on the Fore River ships. Miller, who grew up in Quincy, set out some years ago to assemble a collection of pictures of every named ship built at Fore River. He completed the task in 2011, and the best of his images are collected in a book published by Arcadia Publishing. Miller will present a power-point of images from his collection, discuss the history of the ships, and talk about his experiences in tracking down all the images. A book signing will follow his presentation.

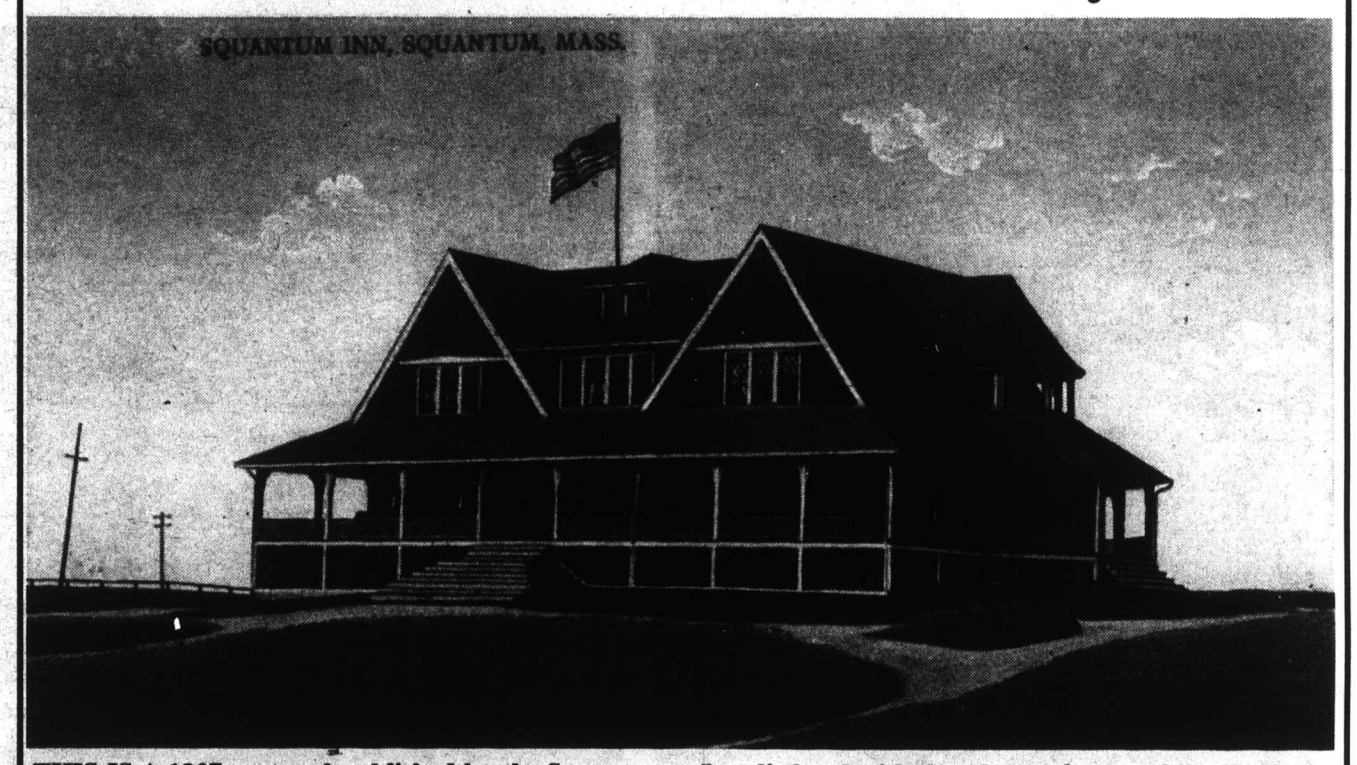

On Thursday, April 24 at 7 p.m., Margherita Desy, historian at the Naval History and Heritage Command Detachment in Boston, will discuss "The Legacies of the War of 1812."

The lecture is part of a collaboration between Adams National Historical Park and the Historical Society to mark the war's bicentennial. Desy will discuss the war's several legacies, including the long-standing undefended border with Canada—the longest such border in the world—the war's effects on Native Americans, and commemorations of the war through memorials and the preservation of the U.S.S. Constitution.

Both programs are at the Adams Academy, 8 Adams St. in Quincy Center.

Admission is free.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1907 postcard published by the Squantum Inn which opened in 1899 near Squantum Park, just off Shoreham Street in Squantum. This view is from Dorchester Street. The Inn was built by Nelson V. Titus whose wife, Lillie, had inherited a large farm and most of the land in this part of Squantum. They hired Joseph Lee, a leading and well-known Boston caterer, as the Inn's manager. Lee soon made the Inn a popular summer dining destination featuring his famous native seafood and fresh game dinners. In addition to its main formal dining room, the Inn also featured private dining rooms and a sweeping veranda for outdoor casual dinning overlooking Dorchester Bay and Boston Harbor. Patrons could easily reach the Inn by steamer from Boston's City Point to a pier nearby. In later years, after Lee died and with the advent of automobiles, business fell off. The Inn's name was changed to the Wan-eta. Then in 1929 Boston's first radio stations, WNAC and WAAB, set up operations in the Inn and built a 430-foot transmitting tower here. It was the first in the world to use a new dual-transmitting technology, but it caused havoc with Quincy residents' ability to receive other radio stations. In 1943 station WAAB was moved to Worcester and the tower was unnecessary. It was then demolished along with the Inn and the five-acre site was divided into house lots. Today, remnants of the tower's base and cable moorings can be seen in the yards of the houses built there. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

$3.5 Million State Aid Boost Seen For City

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Francis X. McCauley said he was 'heartened' by word from the State House that Gov. Michael Dukakis had proposed a state aid formula that would provide Quincy with an additional $3.5 million in fiscal 1984.

"The figure is higher than we expected," McCauley said, "but it will still be a tight squeeze before we finalize the budget numbers."

The mayor said he had been expecting about $2.8 million in additional state aid, a far cry from 1982 when the state showered $7 million in extra aid on the city.

"Last year we did well in both receipts and expenditures on the cherry sheet – we won both ways," McCauley said. "We still don't know what we will be charged for the MDC, MBTA, etc., on the cherry sheet."

The mayor said he planned to meet with City Auditor Robert E. Foy III in the coming days to discuss potential receipts for fiscal 1984, 'and other numbers for the pot.'

HIGH SCHOOLERS RALLY AGAINST DRUNK DRIVING

Students at Quincy's high schools planned to kick off the prom and graduation season in a novel but pragmatic way – with a rally against drunk driving.

The Quincy chapter of SADD (Students Against Driving Drunk) was sponsoring a monster rally at both high schools in May to emphasize safety.

"It will be the first time in history that the two Quincy high schools will together in order to save lives – maybe their own," said John "Butch" Mahoney, the School Department's social health coordinator.

Gov. Michael Dukakis planned speak at the North Quincy High rally and proclaim the week of May 2-6 SADD Week in Massachusetts. Mayor Francis X. McCauley was scheduled to address the crowd at Quincy High.

Some 3,000 students and guests were expected to attend the events. Bands from both schools and cheerleaders were to perform.

LEFTY'S RIGHTS DAY AT LINCOLN-HANCOCK

The Lincoln-Hancock Community School celebrated its third annual Lefty's Rights Day.

The tradition began at the Adams School when there were seven left-handed students in one room. Since then, the children gather data from each class to determine the number of left-handed students and compute and find percentages.

This year, the committee shared its results with a display. Sixty-six students – 33 boys and 33 girls – were found to be left-handed, roughly 14.5 percent of children. Kindergartners weren't surveyed, since many had not developed a dominant hand.

Teachers were also surveyed. Seven of 33 faculty members were left-handed.

The day ended with a Southpaw Kickball game. All runners ran the bases clockwise instead of the traditional counterclockwise.

Bravo Quincy, North Quincy Spring Concert

Quincy and North Quincy High School wonderfully talented students and teachers recently presented a most enjoyable Spring Concert at Quincy High School Auditorium.

The Concert, and the Horizon Choir director Mr. Timothy Carew had appropriately selected a program of spirituals, classical and show tunes. The choirs were accompanied by an accomplished pianist, Ms. Grimes. Selections numbers and composers were Meldelssohn's Nightingale, extremely well performed, then very fittingly followed Steffe's Battle Hymn of the Republic. Their performance gave you the goose bumps, and the audience responded fittingly with their loud applause. The very challenging long medley from the Webber's Fanthom of the Opera again was sang by the Concert Choir with such sensitivity and dynamics.

Horizons Choir is a select group of students who want to expand their music education and furthering their repertoire, and at the same time have fun with their performance, and it showed. They had selected some of their own favorites, such as a spiritual by W. Rogers, In In This Land, Look at the World by Rutter, and Morley's Though Philomela Lost Her Love.

The seniors offered us their Senior Year Song Marvin Hemlisch's What I Did for Love, very well done, thank you senior class for that song.

SQH rock band was one of my favorites. Their drummer, David Cooper, was awesome. It was pleasure to hear and watch him as well as the guitarists: Mark Bambrick, Cameron McHugh, Thomas Oafco, Harris Pitts, Marcus Richardson and solo singer, Nina Robinson.

After a short intermission, the combined concert bands were ready to start under the much loved Band Director's baton, Mr. Richard Kenneally. Their opening number was Fanfare for the Third Planet by R. Saucedo the Third Planet by R. Saucedo and followed by Gershwin's Rhapsody in Blue, accompanied by very talented pianist Larissa Liang. Most enjoyable and well done by Quincy and North Quincy High School Concert bands. One of the gems was when the band, accompanied by talented Larissa Lian on piano the Rapsody in Blue and also when Lily Gu sang with the Concert Band Gershwin's Someone to Watch Over Me. Very lovely and well done.

In conclusion the bands performed their favorite number Casa Grande by H. Gass. It showed that it was one of their favorites, as they played it with gusto and confidence. It was obvious, they loved to have their Director, Mr. Richard Kenneally back, and so were we, very appreciative audience. The entire concert was most enjoyable, thank you students and teachers for bringing the community this evening of music and song.
